

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from University of Toronto

THE REPUBLIC OF PLATO

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE, C. F. CLAY, MANAGER.

London: FETTER LANE, E.C.

Glasgow: 50, WELLINGTON STREET.

Leipzig: F. A. BROCKHAUS.

New York: G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS.

Bombay and Calcutta: MACMILLAN AND CO., LTD.

[All Rights reserved.]

THE REPUBLIC OF PLATO

EDITED

WITH CRITICAL NOTES, COMMENTARY AND APPENDICES

BY

JAMES ADAM, M.A.

HON. LL.D. OF ABERDEEN UNIVERSITY, FELLOW AND SENIOR TUTOR OF EMMANUEL COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

VOLUME II

BOOKS VI—X AND INDEXES

CAMBRIDGE:
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

1907

THE INSTITUTE OF MEDIAEVAL STUDIES 10 ELMSLEY PLACE
TORONTO 5, CANADA

MAR 31 1932

4823

JUN 6 1975

First Edition 1902. Reprinted 1907

CONTENTS OF VOLUME II.

	PAGE
BOOK VI	I
APPENDICES TO BOOK VI	74
BOOK VII	88
APPENDICES TO BOOK VII	156
BOOK VIII	195
APPENDICES TO BOOK VIII	264
BOOK IX	319
APPENDICES TO BOOK IX	372
BOOK X	384
APPENDICES TO BOOK X	464
INDEXES	481

I. Οἱ μὲν δὴ φιλόσοφοι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὃ Γλαύκων, καὶ οἱ μὴ διὰ μακροῦ τινὸς διεξελθόντος λόγου μόγῃς πως ἀνεφάνησαν οἱ εἰσιν ἑκάτεροι. Ἴσως γάρ, ἔφη, διὰ βραχέος οὐ ῥάδιον. Οὐ φαίνεται, εἶπον· ἐμοὶ γοῦν ἔτι δοκεῖ ἂν βελτιόνως φανῆναι, εἰ περὶ τούτου μόνου ἔδει ῥηθῆναι, καὶ μὴ πολλὰ τὰ λοιπὰ διελθεῖν μέλλοντι 5

4. ἐμοὶ γοῦν II: ἐμοιγ' οὖν A.

484 A—485 A We have now to shew that Philosophers, as defined by us, should be entrusted with the government. It is they alone who, by virtue of the Ideal in their souls, are able to guard the laws and institutions of a city. We shall therefore make them our Guardians, if they possess the necessary practical qualifications. A study of their nature will shew that it is possible for them to unite both kinds of requisites.

484 A I διὰ μακροῦ — λόγου: 'through the conclusion of a somewhat lengthy argument.' διεξελθόντος is intransitive, as Schneider saw: cf. Laws 805 B ἀλλὰ γὰρ εἶπον τὸν μὲν λόγον ἔασαι διεξελθεῖν, εὖ διελθόντος δὲ οὕτω τὸ δοκοῦν αἰρεῖσθαι δεῖν. (The reference in εἶπον is to 799 E κἀν ἡ διέξοδος αὕτη ὅλη σχοῦσα τέλος ἱκανῶς ἂν μνηύσειε κτλ.) Cf. also Dem. in Mid. 84. The word διεξελθόντος is not otiose, because it is not till the very end of the argument that the φιλόσοφος is discovered (v 480 A). The mistaken notion (held by Stallbaum) that the word must be transitive induced Herwerden (Mnem. N. S. xix p. 333) to propose διεξελθοῦσι, a conjecture repeated also by Richards. Baiter (after Hermann and Ast) reads διεξελθόντες with three inferior MSS, as if the philosophers had "run the gauntlet of the argument through which their nature is revealed" (J. and C.). τοῦ λόγου (found in a few MSS) is favoured by Stallbaum, and suggested as an alternative also by Herwerden, as if διὰ μακροῦ τινὸς could mean 'at some length.' The first hand in Ξ omits διὰ, but it occurs in all the other MSS. None of these expedients is nearly so good as the reading of the best MSS, if Schneider's explanation be adopted. μακροῦ has also caused difficulty, since the investigation extends over only six pages of Stephanus: see Krohn Pl. St. pp. 105 ff. By Pfeleiderer (Zur Lösung etc. p. 54), who maintains (in partial agreement with Spengel) that v 471 C—VII (inclusive) embodies the dialogue Φιλόσοφος announced in the beginning of the Politicus and Sophist, μακροῦ is hailed as a significant lapsus calami, and referred to the investigations of the Sophist, Euthydemus and Politicus. But μακροῦ is qualified by τινὸς, and surely 474 C—480 A may be described as 'a somewhat lengthy enquiry.' There is no allusion to the proverbial μακρὸς λόγος of which Aristotle speaks in Met. N 3. 1091^a 7 ff. ὁ Σιμωνίδου μακρὸς λόγος· γίγνεται γὰρ ὁ μακρὸς λόγος ὥσπερ ὁ τῶν δούλων, ὅταν μηδὲν ὑγιὲς λέγωσιν.

2 οἷ is found only in A and II¹: all the other MSS have οἶοι. For οἷ cf. (with Schneider) 493 B and VIII 559 A.

5 πολλὰ κτλ. Herwerden conjectures πολλὰ <ἦν>, which would weaken the emphasis on πολλὰ. For the omission of ἦν see Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. p. 33. From the standpoint of Books VI and VII κατόψεσθαι, τί διαφέρει¹ βίος δίκαιος ἀδίκου. Τί οὖν, ἔφη, τὸ Β μετὰ τοῦτο ἡμῖν; Τί δ' ἄλλο, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἢ τὸ ἐξῆς; ἐπειδὴ 1 φιλόσοφοι μὲν οἱ τοῦ αἰὲ κατὰ ταῦτ' ὡσαύτως ἔχοντος δυνάμενοι ἐφάπτεσθαι, οἱ δὲ μὴ, ἀλλ' ἐν πολλοῖς καὶ πάντως ἴσχουσιν 10 πλανώμενοι, οὐ φιλόσοφοι, ποτέρους δὲ δεῖ πόλεως ἡγεμόνας εἶναι; Πῶς οὖν λέγοντες ἂν αὐτό, ἔφη, μετρίως λέγοιμεν; Ὅπότεροι ἂν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, δυνατοὶ φαίνονται φυλάξαι νόμους τε καὶ ἐπιτηδεύματα πόλεων, τούτους¹ καθιστάναι φύλακας. Ὅρθως, ἔφη. Τόδε δέ, C ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἄρα δῆλον, εἴτε τυφλὸν εἴτε ὀξὺ ὁρῶντα χρὴ φύλακα 15 τηρεῖν ὅτιοῦν; Καὶ πῶς, ἔφη, οὐ δῆλον; Ἡ οὖν δοκοῦσί τι τυφλῶν διαφέρειν οἱ τῷ ὄντι τοῦ ὄντος ἐκάστου ἑστερημένοι τῆς γνώσεως, καὶ μὴδὲν ἐναργὲς ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἔχοντες παράδειγμα μὴδὲ δυνάμενοι ὥσπερ γραφῆς εἰς τὸ ἀληθέστατον ἀποβλέποντες κἀκείσε αἰὲ ἀναφέροντές τε καὶ θεώμενοι ὡς οἷόν τε ἀκριβέστατα, οὕτω δὲ 20 καὶ¹ τὰ ἐνθάδε νόμιμα καλῶν τε πέρι καὶ δικαίων καὶ ἀγαθῶν D τίθεσθαι τε, ἐὰν δέη τίθεσθαι, καὶ τὰ κείμενα φυλάττοντες σφίξειν; Οὐ μὰ τὸν Δία, ἦ δ' ὅς, οὐ πολὺ τι διαφέρει. Τούτους οὖν μᾶλλον

9. πάντως A¹Π¹: παντοῖως in mg. A²Π².

it is impossible to say what 'just life' means unless we know the ἰδέα τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ etc. (see 506 A): hence πολλὰ τὰ λοιπὰ διελθεῖν.

484 B 9 πάντως κτλ. παντοῖως was conjectured by Ast and is read by Stallbaum. It occurs as a late correction in Π as well as in A (see cr. n.), and has some insignificant MS authority besides. The difference is like that between ὅς and οἷος: see 484 A n. With πλανώμενοι cf. πλανητόν in V 479 D. It is the fluctuation of the Object which makes the Subject fluctuate.

484 C 13 καθιστάναι: "sc. λέγοντες h.c. κελεύοντες" Schneider.

16 τυφλῶν. They who cannot see the Ideas are blind: cf. Plato's retort to Antisthenes quoted on V 476 D.

17 καὶ μὴδὲν κτλ. A transcendent παράδειγμα of which he knew nothing would be useless to the philosophizing. It does not however follow that the Ideas are not αὐτὰ καθ' αὐτά, but merely that we are concerned with them in so far as they are known by the φιλόσοφος. See on V 476 A. ὡς οἷόν τε ἀκριβέστατα admits that he may not see them in all their fulness and purity.

18 εἰς τὸ ἀληθέστατον κτλ. Cf. 500 C, 500 E—501 C (where the same figure is employed). The political value of the philosopher's knowledge of the Idea is here for the first time explicitly affirmed and explained: see V 479 D n.

ἐκείσε: because truth is 'yonder'—in the Heaven of the Ideas. The philosopher must call it from Heaven to Earth, by assimilating to it 'the earthly canons' (τὰ ἐνθάδε νόμιμα).

19 οὕτω δὲ= 'then and not till then' suggests that it is otherwise in existing States.

484 D 21 ἐὰν δέη τίθεσθαι. If he has the happiness to be born 'in his own country' (IX 592 A), whose institutions are already modelled on the Ideas, he need only guard (φυλάττοντες suggests the φύλακες) and preserve what is already established. Otherwise he must himself become a legislator. Cobet's excision of τίθεσθαι is wholly gratuitous: his omission of τὰ in τὰ κείμενα is even worse, for the laws need not be of the philosopher's own making.

22 διαφέρει. It would be easy to write διαφέρειν (with g etc.), but διαφέρει may be impersonal, or Glauco may be

φύλακας στησόμεθα, ἢ τοὺς ἐγνωκότας μὲν ἕκαστον τὸ ὄν, ἐμπειρία δὲ μηδὲν ἐκείνων ἐλλείποντας μὴδ' ἐν ἄλλῳ μὴδενὶ μέρει ἀρετῆς ὑστεροῦντας; "Ἀποπον μέντ' ἄν, ἔφη, εἴη ἄλλους αἰρεῖσθαι, εἴ γε 25 τᾶλλα μὴ ἐλλείποντο· τούτῳ γὰρ αὐτῷ σχεδόν τι τῷ μεγίστῳ ἄν 85 προέχοιεν. | Οὐκοῦν τοῦτο δὴ λέγωμεν, τίνα τρόπον οἰοί τ' ἔσονται οἱ αὐτοὶ κάκεῖνα καὶ ταῦτα ἔχειν; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν. "Ο τοίνυν ἀρχόμενοι τούτου τοῦ λόγου ἐλέγομεν, τὴν φύσιν αὐτῶν πρῶτον δεῖ καταμαθεῖν. καὶ οἶμαι, ἐὰν ἐκείνην ἱκανῶς ὁμολογήσωμεν, ὁμολογήσειν καὶ ὅτι οἰοί τε ταῦτα ἔχειν οἱ αὐτοί, ὅτι τε οὐκ ἄλλους 5 πόλεων ἡγεμόνας δεῖ εἶναι ἢ τούτους. Πῶς;

II. Τοῦτο μὲν δὴ τῶν φιλοσόφων φύσεων πέρι ὁμολογήσθω B ἡμῖν, ὅτι μαθήματός γε αἰεὶ ἑρῶσιν ὃ ἂν αὐτοῖς δηλοῖ ἐκείνης τῆς οὐσίας τῆς αἰεὶ οὐσης καὶ μὴ πλανωμένης ὑπὸ γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς.

4. δεῖ γ: δεῖν ΑΠΞ.

substituting the singular for the plural: see on I 347 A and V 465 E. Cf. also infra 496 A.

26 ἐλλείποντο. Cf. Xen. Mem. II 6. 5 μὴ ἐλλείπεσθαι εὖ ποιῶν τοὺς ἐυεργετοῦντας εαυτὸν and Soph. 258 B.

485 A 2 κάκεῖνα: viz. τᾶλλα, as defined in ἐμπειρία—ὑστεροῦντας.

ταῦτα: i.e. 'the special attributes of the philosopher' (J. and C.).

3 ἐλέγομεν. V 474 B.

4 -δεῖ. See cr. n. and Introd. § 5.

485 A—487 A The philosophic nature loves eternal and changeless Being in its entirety. It follows that the philosopher naturally loves Truth, despises the pleasures of the body, is temperate, free from avarice, high-minded, courageous, just and gentle. He is also quick to learn, retentive in memory, not given to extravagance in conduct, but modest and well-bred. To such men, when years and education have perfected their natural qualities, we may fairly entrust our city.

485 A ff. This section should be compared on the one hand with II 375 A—376 C, 377 B—III 391 E, and on the other with VII 535 A, B nn. In Book II the natural qualities insisted on were primarily moral; here and in VII they are primarily intellectual. This is in harmony with the difference between the earlier and later schemes of education: for the basis of the first was ὁρθὴ δόξα, whereas that of the second is ἐπιστήμη.

There is little or no indication to shew that even the ἄρχοντες of I—IV knew or aspired to the Ideas (see 497 C n.) and the ἐπικούροι certainly did not. Krohn is, in a certain sense, right when he maintains that in VI—VII we have "einen neuen Archontenstand und eine neue Archontendisziplin" (Pl. St. p. 107), but the distinction of the 'golden' and 'silver' races in III 415 A ff. prepares us for a more thorough-going discrimination between the two higher classes than was attempted in the earlier sketch, and we must of course remember that the new discipline is not intended to supersede, but to supervene upon the old. See also Hirzel Der Dialog I p. 236.

485 B 8 ἐκείνης τῆς οὐσίας. For the genitive cf. IV 445 E n.

9 γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς have not yet been employed in this half-technical sense (Krohn Pl. St. p. 112). The substance of the Ideas always 'is': that of phenomena 'is driven to and fro by generation and destruction'—by generation when it becomes determined in one particular direction (e.g. καλόν, ἵππος, ἄνθρωπος), by destruction when it loses that particular determination and puts on another. Cf. V 479 A, B. Plato's form of expression seems to imply that there is a sort of οὐσία or substratum in phenomena. At a later stage he seems to have identified this with space—the ἐκμαγείον—κινούμενον τε καὶ διασχηματίζομενον ὑπὸ

- 10 Ὁμολογήσθω. Καὶ μὴν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ὅτι πάσης αὐτῆς, καὶ οὔτε μικροῦ οὔτε μείζονος οὔτε τιμιωτέρου οὔτε ἀτιμοτέρου μέρους ἐκόντες ἀφίενται, ὥσπερ ἐν τοῖς πρόσθεν περὶ τε τῶν φιλοτίμων καὶ ἐρωτικῶν διήλθομεν. Ὅρθως, ἔφη, λέγεις. Τόδε τοῖνυν μετὰ 15 τούτο σκόπει εἰ ἀνάγκη ἔχειν πρὸς τούτῳ ἐν τῇ φύσει οὐ ἂν μέλλωσιν¹ ἔσεσθαι οἴους ἐλέγομεν. Τὸ ποῖον; Τὴν ἀψεύδειαν καὶ C τὸ ἐκόντας εἶναι μηδαμῇ προσδέχεσθαι τὸ ψεῦδος, ἀλλὰ μισεῖν, τὴν δ' ἀλήθειαν στέργειν. Εἰκός γ', ἔφη. Οὐ μόνον γε, ὦ φίλε, εἰκός, ἀλλὰ καὶ πᾶσα ἀνάγκη τὸν ἐρωτικῶς του φύσει ἔχοντα πᾶν τὸ ξυγγενές τε καὶ οἰκεῖον τῶν παιδικῶν ἀγαπᾶν. Ὅρθως, ἔφη.
 20 Ἡ οὖν οἰκειότερον σοφία τι ἀληθείας ἂν εὔροις; Καὶ πῶς; ἦ δ'
 ὅς. Ἡ οὖν δυνατὸν εἶναι τὴν αὐτὴν φύσιν φιλοσοφόν τε καὶ ¹ φιλοψευδῆ; Οὐδαμῶς γε. Τὸν ἄρα τῷ ὄντι φιλομαθῇ πάσης D ἀληθείας δεῖ εὐθὺς ἐκ νέου ὅ τι μάλιστα ὀρέγεσθαι. Παντελῶς γε.
 Ἀλλὰ μὴν ὅτῳ γε εἰς ἓν τι αἱ ἐπιθυμίαι σφύδρα ῥέπουσιν, ἴσμεν 25 πού ὅτι εἰς τᾶλλα τούτῳ ἀσθενέστεραι, ὥσπερ ῥεῦμα ἐκείσε ἀπωχετευμένον. Τί μὴν; Ὡς δὴ πρὸς τὰ μαθήματα καὶ πᾶν τὸ τοιοῦτον ἐρρυήκασιν, περὶ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς, οἶμαι, ἡδονὴν αὐτῆς καθ' αὐτὴν εἶεν ἂν, τὰς δὲ διὰ τοῦ σώματος ἐκλείποιεν, εἰ μὴ πεπλασμένως ἀλλ' ἀληθῶς φιλοσοφός¹ τις εἴη. Μεγάλῃ ἀνάγκῃ. E τῶν εἰσιόντων, φαίνεται δὲ δι' ἐκεῖνα ἀλλοτε ἀλλοῖον (Tim. 50C): but of this there is no hint here. Cf. Zeller⁴ II 1. p. 725.

10 πάσης αὐτῆς: i.e. οὐσίας τῆς αἰετοῦσης, not (as Ast) ἐπιστήμης or μαθήσεως.

11 οὔτε τιμιωτέρου κτλ. Cf. Parm. 130C—E.

12 πρόσθεν. V 474 D—475 B.

485C 15 τὴν ἀψεύδειαν κτλ. Cf. III 389 B.

16 ἐκόντας εἶναι is 'voluntarily,' not 'if it can be helped' (D. and V.): cf. I 336 E n.

ψεῦδος should be understood in its strict Platonic sense, as 'ignorance in the soul respecting the truth' (II 382 B m.). The politician who knows not the Ideal is, according to Plato, a liar, not the statesman who employs for example κληροῖ τινες κομφοί to attain his Ideal. There is absolutely no reason to suppose (with Bosanquet) that Plato means to withdraw from the regulations of V 460 A.

18 τὸν ἐρωτικῶς κτλ. Love me, love my friend. The Philosopher loves Wisdom, and Truth is Wisdom's kinswoman and familiar friend.

485 D 25 ὥσπερ ῥεῦμα κτλ. The simile becomes almost an identification, as often in Greek: the desires are as it were a stream diverted eis ἓν τι. Cf. III 401 C (reading tis—ὥσπερ αὐρα), VII 519 A τὰς τῆς γενέσεως ξυγγενεῖς ὥσπερ μολυβδίδας and VII 534 D n. To explain ἀπωχετευμένον as for ἀπωχετευμέναι (with Stallbaum and others) is to obtrude our standpoint upon the Greeks. Schneider formerly agreed with Stallbaum, but afterwards drew back (Addit. p. 45) and translated "wie ein dorthin abgeleiteter Strom."

28 τὰς δέ. τὰς is probably an 'internal accusative' depending on ἐκλείποιεν, though rendered easier by the occurrence of περὶ τὴν ἡδονήν—εἶεν ἂν just before. Schneider carries on περὶ, but the preposition is difficult to supply when the two clauses have different verbs. Cf. IV 428 C n.

Σώφρων μὴν ὃ γε τοιοῦτος καὶ οὐδαμῇ φιλοχρήματος· ὦν γὰρ 30 ἔνεκα χρήματα μετὰ πολλῆς δαπάνης σπουδάζεται, ἄλλω τινὶ μᾶλλον ἢ τούτῳ προσήκει σπουδάζειν. Οὕτω. Καὶ μὴν που καὶ 186 τὸδε δεῖ σκοπεῖν, ὅταν κρίνειν | μέλλης φύσιν φιλόσοφόν τε καὶ μὴ.
 Τὸ ποῖον; Μὴ σε λάθῃ μετέχουσα ἀνελευθερίας· ἐναντιώτατον γὰρ που σμικρολογία ψυχῇ μελλούσῃ τοῦ ὅλου καὶ παντὸς αἰὲ ἐπορέξεσθαι θείου τε καὶ ἀνθρωπίνου. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη. Ἡ οὖν ὑπάρχει διανοία μεγαλοπρέπεια καὶ θεωρία παντὸς μὲν χρόνον, 5 πάσης δὲ οὐσίας, οἷον τε οἶε τούτῳ μέγα τι δοκεῖν εἶναι τὸν B ἀνθρώπινον βίον; Ἀδύνατον, ἢ δ' ὅς. Οὐκοῦν¹ καὶ θάνατον οὐ δεινόν τι ἡγήσεται ὁ τοιοῦτος; Ἕκιστα γε. Δειλῇ δὲ καὶ ἀνελευτέρῳ φύσει φιλοσοφίας ἀληθινῆς, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐκ ἂν μετείη.
 Οὐ μοι δοκεῖ. Τί οὖν; ὁ κόσμος καὶ μὴ φιλοχρήματος μὴδ' 10 ἀνελεύθερος μὴδ' ἀλαζὼν μὴδὲ δειλὸς ἔσθ' ὅπῃ ἂν δυσξύμβολος ἢ ἄδικος γένοιτο; Οὐκ ἔστιν. Καὶ τοῦτο δὲ ψυχὴν σκοπῶν

485 E 30 σῶφρων κτλ. Cf. III 389 D—390 E.

ὦν γὰρ ἔνεκα: i.e. such bodily and other delights as money can buy.

31 χρήματα—δαπάνης: 'wealth with its accompaniment of lavish outlay.' μετὰ πολλῆς δαπάνης should not, I think, be taken with σπουδάζεται (Schneider, D. and V., J. and C., although Jowett's translation takes the correct view), but rather with χρήματα. Herwerden formerly explained δαπάνης as=τῆς τοῦ δαπανᾶν ἐπιθυμίας, but afterwards (Mem. N. S. XIX p. 333) took it to mean "pecunia cuius ope sumptus fieret" comparing inter alia VIII 550 D and Latius 718 A. This view agrees closely with mine, but it is not necessary to suppose that δαπάνη means more than simply 'outlay.'

486 A 2 ἀνελευθερίας. ἀνελευθερία or σμικρολογία is in Plato the antithesis of ὑπερηφανία: cf. II 391 C and Critias 112 C. The virtuous mean is μεγαλοπρέπεια, which is a sort of highmindedness (cf. 503 C): hence μεγαλοπρέπεια just below and μεγαλοπρεπῆς in the summary at 487 A. Plato does not, like Aristotle (Eth. Nic. IV cc. 4—6), restrict μεγαλοπρέπεια and its opposing vices to pecuniary dealings, although φιλοχρηματία, for example, is a symptom of ἀνελευθερία (II 391 C).

3 τοῦ ὅλου καὶ παντός. Cf. Theaet. 173 E ff. This and the following sentence admirably describe the peculiar genius of

Plato himself. See the eloquent words of Longinus περὶ ὕψους 35, and compare them with Goethe's noble characterisation of Plato: "Er dringt in die Tiefen, mehr um sie mit seinem Wesen auszufüllen, als um sie zu erforschen. Er bewegt sich nach der Höhe, mit Sehnsucht seines Ursprungs wieder theilhaft zu werden. Alles, was er äussert, bezieht sich auf ein ewig Ganzes, Gutes, Wahres, Schönes, dessen Forderung er in jedem Busen aufzuregen strebt."

4 ἢ—διανοία. ᾧ—διανοίας (the reading of g and some other MSS, followed by Ast and Stallbaum) is an obvious 'emendation,' to suit τούτῳ below. It is much less elegant, notwithstanding the irregularity involved in τούτῳ, for which Schneider compares Gorg. 523 B, a precise parallel, in spite of Stallbaum's assertion to the contrary. Cf. also x 606 B n. ἢ οὖν is moreover found in the quotation of this passage by Marcus Aurelius, according to the text of Vaticanus A: see Stich's edition p. 87 n.

6 μέγα τι δοκεῖν. Cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. IV 7. 1123^b 32 τίνος γὰρ ἔνεκα πράξει αἰσχρά, ᾧ οὐθέν μέγα (of the μεγαλόψυχος).

486 B 7 θάνατον κτλ. Cf. III 386 A ff.

11 ἀλαζών is a special case of φιλοψενδῆς (485 D). Cf. 489 E.

12 ἄδικος is used of course in the popular sense, not with the meaning assigned to it in Book IV.

φιλόσοφον καὶ μὴ εὐθὺς νέον ὄντος ἐπισκέψῃ, εἰ ἄρα δικάια τε καὶ ἡμερος, ἢ δυσκοινώνητος καὶ ἀγρία. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν. Οὐ μὴν 15 οὐδὲ τόδε παραλείψῃς, ὥς ἐγῶμαι. Τὸ ποῖον; Εὐμαθὴς ἢ C δυσμαθὴς. ἢ προσδοκᾷς ποτέ τινά τι ἱκανῶς ἂν στέρξαι, ὃ πράττων ἂν ἀλγῶν τε πρίττοι καὶ μόγις σμικρὸν ἀνύτων; Οὐκ ἂν γένοιτο. Τί δ'; εἰ μηδὲν ὦν μάθοι σῶζειν δύναίτο, λήθης ὦν πλέως, ἄρ' ἂν οἷός τ' εἴη ἐπιστήμης μὴ κενὸς εἶναι; Καὶ πῶς; 20 Ἀνόνητα δὴ πονῶν οὐκ, οἷε, ἀναγκασθήσεται τελευτῶν αὐτόν τε μισεῖν καὶ τὴν τοιαύτην πράξιν; Πῶς δ' οὐ; Ἐπιλήσμονα ἄρα D ψυχὴν ἐν ταῖς ἱκανῶς φιλοσόφοις μὴ ποτε ἐγκρίνωμεν, ἀλλὰ μνημονικὴν αὐτὴν ζητῶμεν δεῖν εἶναι. Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν. Ἄλλ' οὐ μὴν τό γε τῆς ἀμούσου τε καὶ ἀσχήμονος φύσεως ἄλλοσέ ποι 25 ἂν φαίμεν ἔλκειν ἢ εἰς ἀμετρίαν. Τί μήν; Ἀλήθειαν δὲ ἀμετρία ἡγεί ξυγγενὴ εἶναι ἢ ἔμμετρία; Ἐμμετρία. Ἐμμετρον ἄρα καὶ εὐχαριν ζητῶμεν πρὸς τοῖς ἄλλοις διάνοιαν φύσει, ἣν ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ ὄντος ἰδέαν ἐκάστου τὸ ἑαυτοφνὲς εὐάγων παρέξει. Πῶς δ' οὐ; E Τί οὖν; μὴ πῃ δοκοῦμέν σοι οὐκ ἀναγκαῖα ἕκαστα διεληλυθῆναι 30 καὶ ἐπόμενα ἀλλήλοις τῇ μελλούσῃ τοῦ ὄντος ἱκανῶς τε καὶ τελείως

20. ἀνόνητα II et γρ in mg. A²: ἀνόητα A¹.

14 ἡμερος—ἀγρία. Cf. II 375 B ff.

486 C 15 εὐμαθὴς κτλ. J. and C. wrongly supply εἰ ἄρα. πότερον is often omitted in such sentences: cf. Phaedr. 270 D and other examples in Ast's Lexicon s.v. πότερον.

486 D 23 αὐτὴν—εἶναι. The text is successfully defended by Vahlen (Hermes 1877 p. 196) who compares II 375 E οὐ παρὰ φύσιν ζητοῦμεν τοιοῦτον εἶναι τὸν φύλακα and (for the pleonasm) Phaedr. 101 E ἱκανοὶ γὰρ—δύνασθαι αὐτοὶ αὐτοῖς ἀρέσκειν. Madvig's proposal (adopted by Baiter) αὐτὴν ζητοῦμεν δεῖν εἶναι is neat but unnecessary; still less should we (with Herwerden) bracket δεῖν εἶναι. With the sentiment Krohn (Pl. St. p. 363) compares Xen. Mem. IV 1. 2.

24 ἀσχήμονος. Herwerden should not have conjectured ἀμνήμονος. We are passing to a fresh point. ἀμονσία and ἀσχημοσύνη ('bad form') tend to ἀμετρία 'excess,' 'extravagance' in behaviour (cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. IV 8. 1125^a 12—16); and extravagant behaviour is a form of untruth, because it makes a man appear what he is not. The love of truth will therefore save the philosopher from self-assertion and bad manners.

27 φύσει κτλ. The antecedent of ἣν is διάνοιαν; and φύσει ('by nature,' 'naturally') should be taken with the adjectives ἔμμετρον and εὐχαριν. It might seem possible to translate: 'Let us insist, then, on a modest and agreeable habit of mind for a nature whose innate disposition is to make it easy to lead to the Form of each essential Being,' making φύσει the antecedent to ἣν; but the ordinary view gives a better sense. The preceding note will explain how ἔμμετρία inclines one to the love of Truth or the Ideas. Stallbaum connects ἐκάστου with τὸ αὐτοφνὲς, but cf. V 480 A ad fin. and 484 D (ἐκαστον τὸ ὄν). ἰδέαν is, I think, 'Form,' 'Idea' (so Schneider etc.), rather than 'contemplation' (as Stallbaum translates). The word however suggests ἰδεῖν; see on V 479 A.

486 E 30 ἐπόμενα ἀλλήλοις is fully justified. The love of Truth begets the love of Wisdom (485 C) and the love of Wisdom Temperance (485 D, E). High-mindedness is connected with the contemplation τοῦ ὅλου καὶ παντός (486 A), of which Courage is also a result (486 A, B).

187 ψυχῇ μεταλήψεσθαι; Ἀναγκαιότατα μὲν | οὖν, ἔφη. Ἔστιν οὖν ὅπῃ μέμψει τοιοῦτον ἐπιτήδευμα, ὃ μὴ ποτ' ἂν τις οἷός τε γένοιτο ἰκανῶς ἐπιτηδεῦσαι, εἰ μὴ φύσει εἴη μνήμων, εὐμαθής, μεγαλοπρεπής, εὐχαρις, φίλος τε καὶ ξυγγενὴς ἀληθείας, δικαιοσύνης, ἀνδρείας, σωφροσύνης; Οὐδ' ἂν ὁ Μῶμος, ἔφη, τό γε 5 τοιοῦτον μέμψαιτο. Ἄλλ', ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τελειωθεῖσι τοῖς τοιούτοις παιδείᾳ τε καὶ ἡλικίᾳ ἄρα οὐ μόνοις ἂν τὴν πόλιν ἐπιτρέποις;

B III. Καὶ ὁ Ἀδείμαντος, ὦ Σώκρατες, ἔφη, πρὸς μὲν¹ ταῦτά σοι οὐδεὶς ἂν οἷός τ' εἴη ἀντειπεῖν· ἀλλὰ γὰρ τοιόνδε τι πᾶσχουσιν οἱ ἀκούοντες ἐκάστοτε ἂ νῦν λέγεις· ἡγούνται δι' ἀπειρίαν τοῦ 10 ἐρωτᾶν καὶ ἀποκρίνεσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου παρ' ἑκαστον τὸ ἐρώτημα σμικρὸν παραγόμενοι, ἀθροισθέντων τῶν σμικρῶν ἐπὶ τελευτῆς τῶν λόγων μέγα τὸ σφάλμα καὶ ἐναντίον τοῖς πρώτοις ἀναφαίνεσθαι, καὶ ὥσπερ ὑπὸ τῶν πεττεῦειν δεινῶν οἱ μὴ τελευτῶντες

C¹ ἀποκλείονται καὶ οὐκ ἔχουσιν ὅ τι φέρωσιν, οὕτω καὶ σφεῖς 15 τελευτῶντες ἀποκλείεσθαι καὶ οὐκ ἔχειν ὅ τι λέγωσιν ὑπὸ πεττείας

12. παραγόμενοι Π et in mg. A²: παραγενόμενοι A¹.

13. μέγα Π: μετὰ Α.

Justice and Kindness accompany the other moral virtues (486 B). Aptness to learn, memory, and the virtue of a modest and agreeable disposition also fit one for the study of the Ideas: cf. 486 D n. It will be noticed that all the Virtues receive an intellectual colouring from their connexion—direct or indirect—with ‘amor intellectualis’: see above on 485 A ff.

487 A 3 μνήμων κτλ. The summary is complete, μεγαλοπρεπής being the opposite of ἀνελεύθερος and σμικρόλογος (486 A n.).

487 A—487 E But, in point of fact, urges Adimantus, actual philosophers are regarded as useless, or worse. Socrates admits the correctness of this view, and proceeds to solve the difficulty by a parable.

487 B 10 οἱ ἀκούοντες—λέγεις: ‘those who from time to time hear what you now say.’ The text has been suspected, but is, I think, sound. Adimantus implies that the philosopher-king was one of Socrates’ favourite themes, as—in one form or another—it certainly was: see on V 473 C. The effect produced by Socrates’ usual way of reasoning on the subject is illustrated by a general description of the unsatisfying nature of Socrates’ dialectic; and λέγω δ’ εἰς τὸ παρὸν ἀπολέσας recalls us to the special case. The looseness lies chiefly in the use of ἄ, where οἷα—Steinhart’s conjecture—would be expected; but ἄ need not be taken too strictly. Ficinus omits νῦν.

ἡγούνται κτλ. Cf. Euthyph. 11 B—D, Men. 80 A, B and the description of the elenchus quoted by J. and C. from Soph. 230 B ff.

13 μέγα—ἀναφαίνεσθαι. For the anacoluthon cf. Ar. 21 C καὶ διαλεγόμενος αὐτῷ, ἔδοξε μοι, Laws 686 D and Xen. An. 111 2. 12. In all these cases the verb used is ἔδοξε, and ἀναφαίνεσθαι is a word of the same kind. Other examples of similar anacolutha are cited by Engelhardt Anacol. Pl. Spec. 111 p. 39. Richards would read παραγομένοις, but παραγομένοις could hardly mean παραγομένοις ἑαυτοῖς.

487 C 15 ἀποκλείονται κτλ. The simile is probably taken from the game of πόλεις, on which see IV 422 E n. φέρωσιν is technical of a move at draughts: cf. Laws 739 A. The balance φέρωσιν—λέγωσιν deserves notice: in both words, stress should be laid on the first syllable. Cf. 111 406 B n. and Phaed. 83 D with Geddes ad loc. ἐν is used as in Euthyph. 11 C τὰ ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἔργα ἀποδιδράσκει καὶ οὐκ ἐθέλει μένειν.

αὐ ταύτης τινὸς ἑτέρας, οὐκ ἐν ψήφοις, ἀλλ' ἐν λόγοις· ἐπεὶ τό γε ἀληθές οὐδέν τι μᾶλλον ταύτη ἔχειν. λέγω δ' εἰς τὸ παρὸν ἀποβλέψας. νῦν γὰρ φαίη ἂν τίς σοι λόγῳ μὲν οὐκ ἔχειν καθ' 20 ἑκάστον τὸ ἐρωτώμενον ἐναντιοῦσθαι, ἔργῳ δὲ ὁρᾶν, ὅσοι ἂν ἐπὶ φιλοσοφίαν ὀρμήσαντες μὴ τοῦ πεπαιδευθῆναι ἕνεκα ἀψάμενοι D νέοι ὄντες ἀπαλλάττωνται, ἀλλὰ μακρότερον ἐνδιατρίψωσιν, τοὺς μὲν πλείστους καὶ πάνυ ἀλλοκότους γιγνομένους, ἵνα μὴ παμπονή- ρους εἴπωμεν, τοὺς δ' ἐπιεικεστάτους δοκοῦντας ὅμως τοῦτό γε ὑπὸ 25 τοῦ ἐπιτηδεύματος, οὗ σὺ ἐπαινεῖς, πᾶσχοντας, ἀχρήστους ταῖς πόλεσι γιγνομένους. καὶ ἐγὼ ἀκούσας, Οἶε οὖν, εἶπον, τοὺς ταῦτα λέγοντας ψεύδεσθαι; Οὐκ οἶδα, ἦ δ' ὅς· ἀλλὰ τὸ σοὶ δοκοῦν ἡδέως ἂν ἀκούοιμι. Ἄκούοις ἂν, ὅτι ἔμοιγε φαίνονται τάληθῇ E λέγειν. Πῶς οὖν, ἔφη, εὖ ἔχει λέγειν, ὅτι οὐ πρότερον κακῶν 30 παύσονται αἱ πόλεις, πρὶν ἂν ἐν αὐταῖς οἱ φιλόσοφοι ἄρξωσιν, οὓς ἀχρήστους ὁμολογοῦμεν αὐταῖς εἶναι; Ἐρωτᾶς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐρώτημα δεόμενον ἀποκρίσεως δι' εἰκόνος λεγομένης. Σὺ δέ γε, ἔφη, οἶμαι, οὐκ εἴωθας δι' εἰκόνων λέγειν.

IV. Εἶεν, εἶπον· σκώπτεις ἐμβεβληκῶς με εἰς λόγον οὕτω 35 δυσαπυόδεικτον; ἄκουε δ' οὖν τῆς εἰκόνος, ἵν' | ἔτι μᾶλλον ἴδῃς, 488

18. ταύτη II: ταύτην A.

18 ταύτη = 'isto modo,' 'as you say.' The simile is imitated by the author of the Eryxias (395 B).

20 ἔργῳ δὲ ὁρᾶν κτλ. expresses a widely prevalent view in ancient as well as in modern times. It is enunciated with admirable force and vigour by the Platonic Callicles in Gorg. 484 c—486 c: cf. also Theaet. 173 c ff. and Phaed. 64 b. Although Isocrates called himself a φιλόσοφος, he was in general agreement with the popular verdict on Philosophy in the Platonic sense of the term (τὴν τε γεωμετρίαν καὶ τὴν ἀστρολογίαν καὶ τοὺς διαλόγους τοὺς ἐριστικούς καλουμένους, as he calls it Panath. 26): see adv. Soph. 1—8, 20, Antid. 258—269 (διατρίψαι μὲν οὖν περὶ τὰς παιδείας ταύτας χρόνον τινὰ συμβουλευσάμην ἂν τοῖς νεωτέροις, μὴ μέντοι περυδεῖν τὴν φύσιν τὴν αὐτῶν κατασκελετευθεῖσαν ἐπὶ τούτοις κτλ. 268) and Panath. 26—32 (Spengler Isokr. u. Plato pp. 15 ff., Dümmler Chron. Beitr. pp. 43 ff. and Teichmüller Lit. Fehd. I p. 103. Teichmüller supposes that τὺν γὰρ φαίη ἂν τις κτλ. above is a specific reference to Isocrates, but this is very improbable). The well-known sentiment of Ennius' Neoptolemus "philosophari est mihi necesse, at paucis; nam omnino haut placet. Degustandum ex ea, non in eam ingurgitandum censeo" (ap. Gell. Noct. Att. v 15. 9, 16. 5: cf. Cic. Tusc. Disp. II i. 1 ff. al.) is probably translated from Euripides, but it admirably expresses the ordinary Roman view. See also on v 473 C, D.

487 D 23 ἀλλοκότους. They have, as we should say, 'a twist.'

487 E 32 σὺ δέ γε is of course ironical, as σκώπτεις shews. Müller in his translation (p. 53) strangely misses this point.

487 E—489 C Imagine a ship, in which the sailors struggle with one another to gain possession of the helm, although they have never learnt the art of steering, and actually deny that steering can be taught at all. They overpower the master of the vessel by opiates or strong drink, and sail merrily away to shipwreck. It never occurs to them that in order to steer a ship, it is necessary to learn how. The true pilot is to them a star-gazer, an idle ὡς γλίσχρως εἰκάζω. οὕτω γὰρ χαλεπὸν τὸ πάθος τῶν ἐπιεικεστάτων, ὃ πρὸς τὰς πόλεις πεπόνθασιν, ὥστε οὐδ' ἔστιν ἐν οὐδὲν ἄλλο τοιοῦτον πεπονθός, ἀλλὰ δεῖ ἐκ πολλῶν αὐτὸ ξυναγαγεῖν εἰκάζοντα καὶ ἀπολογούμενον ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν, οἷον οἱ γραφεῖς τραγελά- 5 φους καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα μιγνύντες γράφουσιν. νόησον γὰρ τοιουτοῦν γενόμενον εἴτε πολλῶν νεῶν πέρι εἴτε μίας· ναύκληρον μεγέθει B μὲν καὶ ῥώμῃ ὑπὲρ τοὺς ἐν τῇ νηὶ πάντας, ὁπόκωφον δὲ καὶ ὀρώντα ὡσαύτως βραχύ τι καὶ γινώσκοντα περὶ ναυτικῶν ἕτερα τοιαῦτα, τοὺς δὲ ναύτας στασιάζοντας πρὸς ἀλλήλους περὶ τῆς 10 κυβερνήσεως, ἕκαστον οἰόμενον δεῖν κυβερνᾶν, μήτε μαθόντα πώποτε τὴν τέχνην μήτε ἔχοντα ἀποδεῖξαι διδάσκαλον ἑαυτοῦ μηδὲ χρόνον ἐν ᾧ ἐμάνθανεν, πρὸς δὲ τοῦτοις φάσκοντας μηδὲ babbler, altogether useless. Our simile explains itself. What wonder that the philosopher is useless in a city? But the fault lies with those who make no use of him. It is not his part to sue for employment: those who need his services ought to appeal to him.

2. τὸ II: om. A: γρ τὸ πλῆθος in mg. A².

488 A 2 ὡς γλίσχρως εἰκάζω: 'how greedy I am of parables' (lit. 'how greedily I make parables'), not (as J. and C.) 'what a poor hand I am' at similes, an interpretation which deprives ἐτι μᾶλλον of all its force. γλίσχρος (connected with γλῆα 'glue' and γλίχομαι) is used as in Ar. Ach. 452 γλίσχρος προσαιτῶν λιπαρῶν τε. 'Niggardly,' 'stingy' is a secondary meaning, as for example in VIII 553 C and Crat. 414 C. The idea is that a man must be greedy of similes when he runs all over the world to find one (ἐκ πολλῶν ξυναγαγεῖν). αὐτὸ should be taken with εἰκάζοντα, by an easy hyperbaton.

5 τραγελάφους and similar fantastic creations were of frequent occurrence in Oriental art. The word is fully illustrated by Blaydes on Ar. Frogs 937.

6 μιγνύντες should be taken with γράφουσι: 'as painters paint goat-stags and the like by fusing creatures together.'

τοιοῦτον κτλ. There is no occasion to read τοιοῦτόν τι: see III 388 D n. For γενόμενον Richards would write γιγνόμενον, because of ὀρώντα etc. in B ff. and γιγνόμενων in 488 E. But Plato rightly asks us to conceive of the completed scene, although the scene itself must of course be described by present participles.

7 ναύκληρον κτλ. The ναύκληρος is the Demos, as Aristotle observed (Rhet. III 4. 1406^b 35): cf. also Olympiodorus Proleg. 27 ed. Hermann. Cope on Arist. l.c. erroneously asserts that the ναύκληρος is the 'governor or governors of the unruly mob of citizens'; and Windelband's identification of the ναύκληρος with the younger Dionysius is a strange freak of fancy: see Hirmer Entsteh. u. Komp. etc. p. 620. As the ναύκληρος owned his own ship (II 371 B n.), it is right that the Demos should be ναύκληρος in a democracy. For the frequent comparison of the State to a ship in Greek literature see Smyth's Gk. Melic Poets p. 215. With ὁπόκωφος cf. Ar. Knights 42, 43 Δήμος πυκνίτης, δύσκολον γερόντιον ὁπόκωφον and Blaydes ad loc. Plato's picture of the Δήμος is not unamiable: cf. 499 E ff. Though unwieldy, sluggish, and dull-witted (cf. Ap. 30 E ὑπὸ μεγέθους δὲ νωθεστέρω καὶ δεομένῳ ἐγείρεσθαι ὑπὸ μῶπός τινος), he is placid, and not deliberately vicious. It is the δημαγωγοί (in the widest sense of the term, including demagogues, sophists etc.), and not the δῆμος who are here attacked. With μεγέθει καὶ ῥώμῃ cf. μεγάλου καὶ ἰσχυροῦ 493 A.

488 B II μήτε μαθόντα—ἐμάνθανεν. See V 473 C n. and Xen. Mem. IV 2. 4—7. Politics, according to both Socrates and Plato, is a science: see especially Mem. III 9. 11. The heaviest count in their indictment of Athenian democracy was its practical denial of this fact.

13 φάσκοντας κτλ. The thesis that διδασκὸν εἶναι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν λέγοντα ὡς διδασκὸν ἐτοίμους ¹ κατα- C 15 τέμνειν, αὐτοὺς δὲ αὐτῷ αἰεὶ τῷ ναυκλήρῳ περιεχέσθαι δεομένους καὶ πάντα ποιούντας, ὅπως ἂν σφίσι τὸ πηδάλιον ἐπιτρέψῃ, ἐνίστε δ' ἂν μὴ πείθωσιν, ἀλλὰ ἄλλοι μᾶλλον, τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ἢ ἀποκτείνοντας ἢ ἐκβάλλοντας ἐκ τῆς νεῆς, τὸν δὲ γενναῖον ναυκλήρου 20 μανδραγόρα ἢ μέθη ἢ τινι ἄλλῳ συμποδίσαντας τῆς νεῆς ἄρχειν χρωμένους τοῖς ἐνοῦσι, καὶ πίνοντάς τε καὶ εὐωχουμένους πλεῖν ὡς τὸ εἰκὸς τοὺς τοιούτους, πρὸς δὲ τοῦτοις ἐπαινούντας, ναυτικὸν μὲν καλοῦντας ¹ καὶ κυβερνητικὸν καὶ ἐπιστάμενον τὰ κατὰ ναῦν D

'Politics cannot be taught' was (in Plato's view) the theoretical basis of Athenian political life: see Prot. 319 A—320 D. We are here invited to suppose that it was actually maintained in so many words by sophists, demagogues, and others. Something of the sort is asserted by Isocrates adv. Soph. 14, 21; but it is unlikely that Plato is alluding to Isocrates in particular, as Teichmüller supposes (Lit. Fehd. 1 p. 104).

14 τὸν λέγοντα κτλ. as Socrates and Plato constantly did. ἐτοίμους κατατέμνειν admirably expresses the vindictive fury of the insulted demagogues, but should not be taken as an allusion to Socrates' fate. Plato felt his master's death too deeply to exaggerate on such a subject. See VII 517 A n.

488 C 15 αὐτῷ is ejected by Herwerden "quod omni vi caret." Bywater (J. Phil. x p. 73) proposes αὐ. The translators for the most part ignore the word, except Schneider, who translates 'him, the master of the ship.' Perhaps αὐτῷ is 'by himself,' ipsi in the sense of soli, as in αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἔσμεν, and we should translate 'while they themselves constantly swarm around the solitary master of the ship.' Failing this explanation we must follow Schneider; unless we venture to take αὐτῷ in the sense of 'the Master' (cf. I 327 B n.) and regard τῷ ναυκλήρῳ as an explanatory gloss. On the whole I am inclined to think that Schneider is right.

περιεχέσθαι: an anacoluthon, like ἄρχειν and πλεῖν below: we should expect περιεχόμενους. For a parallel see Laws 686 A. Here, doubtless, the change of construction is in order to avoid too many participles.

17 ἀποκτείνοντας. On the orthography of this word see Intro. § 5. ἀποκτείνοντας (sic) in v and Vind. F may also be a trace of the spelling with ει. The reference in ἀποκτείνοντας ἢ ἐκβάλλοντας is of course to the slaying or banishment of rival candidates for office: cf. Gorg. 466 B.

19 μανδραγόρα κτλ. False rulers dull the senses of the Demos by the opiate of Pleasure, and so escape detection. With μανδραγόρα cf. [Dem.] Phil. 4. 6 ἀλλὰ μανδραγόραν πεπωκόσιν ἢ τι φάρμακον ἄλλο τοιοῦτον σοικαμεν ἀνθρώποις.

20 πίνοντάς τε κτλ. They are the ἐστιάτορας εὐδαίμονας of IV 421 B, where see note. For ὡς τὸ εἰκὸς Cobet writes ὡς εἰκὸς, and so also Herwerden, who suggests as an alternative that we should bracket τοὺς τοιούτους. The expression ὡς εἰκὸς would refer to πίνοντάς τε καὶ εὐωχουμένους ("and pass their time at sea in drinking and feasting, as you might expect with such a crew" D; and V.); but with ὡς τὸ εἰκὸς (sc. πλεῖν) the meaning is "make just such a voyage as might be expected of men like them" (J. and C. with Schneider, comparing Pol. 302 A and Laws 906 D), i.e. make shipwreck.

21 ἐπαινούντας is omitted by Cobet, but (as Richards points out) ψέγοντας supports it. Richards would transpose and read μὲν ναυτικόν. But ναυτικόν μὲν καλοῦντας etc. is only an explanatory reduplication of ἐπαινούντας: hence μὲν is placed where it would have been if ἐπαινούντας had been omitted. In any other position it would have failed to mark the antithesis between ναυτικόν (with its companion epithets) and ἄχρηστον. For the rhetorical asyndeton cf. II 362 B n. An alternative (less good) is to take ἐπαινούντας as logically subordinate to καλοῦντας ('in awarding praise they call' etc.).

ὅς ἂν ξυλλαμβάνειν δεινὸς ᾗ. ὅπως ἄρξουσιν ἢ πείθοντες ἢ βιαζόμενοι τὸν ναύκληρον, τὸν δὲ μὴ τοιοῦτον ψέγοντας ὡς ἄχρηστον, τοῦ δὲ ἀληθινοῦ κυβερνήτου περί μὴδ' ἐπαύοντες, ὅτι ἀνάγκη αὐτῷ 25 τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν ποιεῖσθαι ἐνιαυτοῦ καὶ ὥρων καὶ οὐρανοῦ καὶ ἄστρων καὶ πνευμάτων καὶ πάντων τῶν τῇ τέχνῃ προσηκόντων, εἰ μέλλει τῷ ὄντι νεὼς ἀρχικὸς ἔσεσθαι, ὅπως δὲ κυβερνήσει, εἰν

23 ὅς ἂν ξυλλαμβάνειν κτλ. Jackson suggests that Isocrates is intended (Proceedings of the Camb. Phil. Soc. XI 1882, p. 13). Possibly: but for my own part I do not think the description is sufficiently apposite to justify the identification.

488 D 25 ἐπαύοντες. I should adopt the accusative with Stallbaum and others were it not for οἰόμενοι. Schneider is fully justified in saying "si Plato ἐπαύοντες scripserat et οἰόμενοι, fieri vix poterat, quin prius vitiosum quibusdam et in accusativum mutandum videretur: alterum ipsa distantia tutum erat." This is precisely what has happened, for while q (with some other MSS, but not II or E) has ἐπαύοντας, all the MSS, without exception, have οἰόμενοι. The anacoluthon is not harsher than other instances in which the best MSS have the nominative of the participle instead of the accusative, e.g. Phaedr. 241 D, Soph. 219 E, Lawus 885 D, Phaed. 81 A. See also Classen on Thuc. II 53, 4, where many parallel instances are quoted from Thucydides. A long and unperiodic sentence like the present is peculiarly liable to anacolutha: and one has occurred already in 488 C. For these reasons I now agree with Schneider and others that the text is sound. The nominatives πείθοντες and βιαζόμενοι may have suggested the change to Plato: "ψέγοντας propter ἐπαινοῦντας tenuit, mox velut impatiens tenoris diu servati paullisper de via deflexit" (Schneider). Similar ungrammatical anacolutha are found occasionally also in Inscriptions, when the sentence runs to a considerable length: see Meisterhans³ pp. 203, 205.

28 ὅπως δὲ... κυβερνητικῇν. The sailors, Plato has already told us, have not the smallest idea that the true pilot must study the year and the seasons etc., if he is to be truly qualified to rule a ship (that is to say, from Plato's point of view, if he is to know how to steer), but as for how he shall steer—let people wish him to or no—of that they think it impossible to acquire either art or study and therewith (lit. 'at-once-and') the art of steersmanship. We may translate the sentence thus: 'but art or system of how to steer, let alone whether people wish him to steer or no—that they think it impossible to acquire, and therewithal the art of steering.' The true pilot, according to Plato, is one who knows how to steer. Whether others wish him to steer or no, is wholly irrelevant; see Pol. 293 A ff., where this principle is declared to be of universal application, and illustrated as follows from the case of doctors: ἰατροὺς δὲ οὐχ ἥμισυ νενομικαμεν, ἐάν τε ἐκόντας ἐάν τε ἄκοντας ἡμᾶς ἰῶνται—πάντως οὐδὲν ἦττον ἰατροὺς φαμεν, ἕως περ ἂν ἐπιστατοῦντες τέχνῃ—σφῶσιν οἱ θεραπεύοντες ἕκαστοι τὰ θεραπευόμενα. Cf. ibid. C ἀναγκαῖον δὴ καὶ πολιτείῳ—ταύτην ὁρθὴν διαφερόντως εἶναι καὶ μόνην πολιτείαν, ἐν ᾗ τις ἂν εὐρίσκει τοὺς ἄρχοντας ἀληθῶς ἐπιστήμονας καὶ οὐ δοκοῦντας μόνον, ἐάν τε κατὰ νόμους ἐάν τε ἄνευ νόμων ἄρχωσι, καὶ ἐκόντων καὶ ἄκόντων κτλ. The expressions ἐάν τε ἐκόντας ἐάν τε ἄκοντας, and καὶ ἐκόντων καὶ ἄκόντων in these two passages, the general drift of which is the same as Plato's argument throughout this part of the Republic, exactly correspond to ἐάν τέ τις βούλωνται ἐάν τε μή, and enable us to interpret that clause, as Schneider has already pointed out. Cf. also 296 E—297 B. Plato, indeed, is ready to go farther still, and would maintain that he who knows how to steer is a true pilot, even although he does not touch the helm (cf. ibid. 292 E). If others wish for his services, it is their business to apply to him, not his to sue for the opportunity of doing them a service (infra 489 B, C). A like principle holds good in the government of cities, and the Platonic Socrates, though abstaining from political life, may fairly claim ἐπιχειρεῖν τῇ ὡς ἀληθῶς πολιτικῇ τέχνῃ καὶ πράττειν τὰ πολιτικὰ μόνος τῶν νῦν (Gorg. 521 D). The foolish sailors, on the other hand, desire only to get the τέ τινες¹ βούλονται ἕαν τε μή, μήτε τέχνην τούτου μήτε μελέτην Ε 30 οἴομενοι δυνατὸν εἶναι λαβεῖν ἅμα καὶ τὴν κυβερνητικήν. τοιούτων δὴ περὶ τὰς ναῦς γιγνομένων τὸν ὡς ἀληθῶς κυβερνητικὸν οὐχ ἡγείν ἂν τῷ ὄντι μετεωροσκόπον τε καὶ ἀδολέσχην καὶ ἄχρηστὸν σφισι καλεῖσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν ταῖς οὕτω κατεσκευασμέναις ναυσὶ 489 πλωτῆρων; Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη ὁ Ἀδείμαντος. Οὐ δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οἶμαι δεῖσθαι σε ἐξεταζομένην τὴν εἰκόνα ἰδεῖν, ὅτι ταῖς πόλεσι πρὸς τοὺς ἀλληθινοὺς φιλοσόφους τὴν διάθεσιν ἔοικεν, ἀλλὰ μανθά-5 νειν ὁ λέγω. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Πρῶτον μὲν τοίνυν ἐκείνους τὸν θαυμάζοντα, ὅτι οἱ φιλόσοφοι οὐ τιμῶνται ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι, δίδασκέ τε τὴν εἰκόνα καὶ πειρῶ πείθειν, ὅτι πολλὸν ἂν θαυμαστότερον ἦν, εἰ¹ ἐτιμῶντο. Ἀλλὰ διδάξω, ἔφη. Καὶ ὅτι τοίνυν τάληθ' ἴλέγεις, Β helm into their hands (488 c): how to handle it, they know not, and deny that it is possible to learn (μήτε τέχνην—λαβεῖν). What of ἅμα καὶ τὴν κυβερνητικήν? These words should be taken closely with what goes before. The literal translation is (to acquire) 'at once and the art of steering': cf. Phil. 22 D ὁ βλος οὗτος γέγονεν αἰρετὸς ἅμα καὶ ἀγαθός 'this life is at once choiceworthy and good.' Now 'to acquire at once the art of how to steer (ὅπως κυβερνήσει, τούτου τέχνην) and the art of steering' is merely a way of saying 'to acquire the art of how to steer and therewith the art of steering.' He who learns the art and study of how to steer necessarily learns therewith the art of steering ('quarum qui compos factus sit, simul gubernatoriam artem teneat' Schneider): for κυβερνητική is, according to Plato, simply and solely the art of ἵστω to steer. τὴν κυβερνητικήν, in short, is nothing but the τέχνη and μελέτη τούτου ὅπως κυβερνήσει, expressed from Plato's point of view. Thus in denying that it is possible to learn either τέχνη or μελέτη of ἵστω to steer, the sailors are in effect emphatically denying that it is possible to learn κυβερνητική in Plato's sense of the word at all: cf. 488 B φάσκοντες μηδὲ διδασκτὸν εἶναι. So much for the meaning of this passage as a whole. In regard to details, it should be noted that ὅπως means 'how': ὅπως ad τούτου spectans modum et rationem potius quam finem significat' (after Schneider). With Schneider also I understand κυβερνήσει as 'shall steer' and not 'shall get possession of the helm.' μελέτη is 'study' (in the more concrete sense of the word), rather than actual exercise or practice: cf. 111 402 B ἐστι τῆς αὐτῆς τέχνης τε καὶ μελέτης. With τέχνην λαβεῖν cf. Pol. 300 E.

The above explanation agrees in the main with that of Schneider, and is in my opinion what Plato meant to say. For other views see App. I.

30 οἴομενοι. οἰομένους is read by Stallbaum and others, but see note on line 25.

488 E 32 μετεωροσκόπον κτλ. A frequent taunt: cf. e.g. Pol. 299 B μετεωρολόγον, ἀδολέσχην τινὰ σοφιστήν, Phaedr. 270 A, Parm. 135 D, Ap. 18 B, Isocrates adv. Soph. 8, Antid. 262, and Ar. Clouds 228, 1480 with Blaydes' note. The implication is that ὁ μετεωροσκόπος is blind to τὰ ἐν ποσίν: cf. Theaet. 174 A. Cobet revives Porson's conjecture μετεωροκόπον (after μετεωροσκοπεῖς in Ar. Peace 92), but the text is perfectly good: cf. μετεωρολέσχας in 489 c.

489 A 3 ἐξεταζομένην: 'cross-examined.'

489 B 8 καὶ ὅτι—λέγεις. 'And also that what you say is true' etc. Socrates identifies Adimantus with his hypothetical objector in 487 D; cf. σε λέγειν in D below. Another possibility—less good, I think—is to take ὅτι as introducing a direct address: "and say to him also 'You speak truly, when you say'" etc. λέγειν is found in a few inferior MSS; and λέγει, which Stallbaum and Baier adopt, occurs in Par. D. λέγειν is indefensible, and the corruption of λέγειν or λέγει to λέγεις is exceedingly improbable here. On τοίνυν='also' see I 339 D n.

ὡς ἄχρηστοι τοῖς πολλοῖς οἱ ἐπικεκστάτοι τῶν ἐν φιλοσοφίᾳ· τῆς μέντοι ἀχρηστίας τοὺς μὴ χρωμένους κέλευε αἰτιάσθαι, ἀλλὰ μὴ 10 τοὺς ἐπικεκῆς. οὐ γὰρ ἔχει φύσιν κυβερνήτην ναυτῶν δεῖσθαι ἄρχεσθαι ὑφ' αὐτοῦ, οὐδὲ τοὺς σοφοὺς ἐπὶ τὰς τῶν πλουσίων θύρας ἰέναι, ἀλλ' ὁ τοῦτο κομψευσάμενος ἐψεύσατο, τὸ δὲ ἀληθές πέφυκεν, εἴαν τε πλούσιος εἴαν τε πένης κἀμνη, ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι ἐπὶ C ἱατρῶν θύρας ἰέναι καὶ πάντα τὸν ἄρχεσθαι δεόμενον ἐπὶ τὰς τοῦ 15 ἄρχειν δυναμένου, οὐ τὸν ἄρχοντα δεῖσθαι τῶν ἀρχομένων ἄρχεσθαι, οὐ ἂν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ τι ὄφελος ᾖ. ἀλλὰ τοὺς νῦν πολιτικούς ἄρχοντας ἀπεικάζων οἷς ἄρτι ἐλέγομεν ναύταις οὐχ ἁμαρτήσῃ, καὶ τοὺς ὑπὸ τούτων ἀχρήστους λεγομένους καὶ μετεωρολόσχας τοῖς ὡς ἀληθῶς κυβερνήταις. Ὁρθότατα, ἔφη. Ἐκ τε τοίνυν τούτων καὶ ἐν 20 τούτοις οὐ ῥάδιον εὐδοκιμεῖν τὸ βέλτιστον ἐπιτήδευμα ὑπὸ τῶν D τὰναντία ἐπιτηδυνόντων· πολὺ δὲ μεγίστη καὶ ἰσχυροτάτη διαβολὴ γίγνεται φιλοσοφία διὰ τοὺς τὰ τοιαῦτα φάσκοντας ἐπιτηδεύειν, οὓς δὴ σὺ φῆς τὸν ἐγκαλοῦντα τῇ φιλοσοφίᾳ λέγειν ὡς

10 τοὺς μὴ χρωμένους. Those who will not use them are to blame for their uselessness. The etymological figure is of course intentional.

11 οὐ γὰρ ἔχει φύσιν κτλ. See 488 D n.

12 τοὺς σοφοὺς κτλ. "The learned pate Ducks to the golden fool" (Timon of Athens IV 3). See also VIII 568 A n. The author of the saying was, according to Aristotle (Rhet. II 16. 1391^a 8 ff.), Simonides. Being asked on one occasion by Hiero's queen whether it was better to be a man of genius (σοφός) or rich, he replied "Rich; for men of genius are found at the court of the rich"—a characteristic reply, by which the courtliest of ancient poets contrived to flatter the queen without forgetting himself. (It should be remembered that σοφός often means 'poet'.) There is no reason for supposing (with e.g. Teichmüller Lit. Fehd. I p. 102) that Plato attributed the saying to Aristippus, although a witticism on the subject is ascribed both to him (D. L. II 8. 69) and to Antisthenes (Winckelmann Antisth. Frag. p. 58). Plato liked to get his knife into Simonides: see I 331 E ff.

489 C 16 δεῖσθαι is governed by the idea of obligation carried on from ἀναγκαῖον. The alternative suggested by J.

and C., that the infinitive depends on πέφυκεν, is impossible.

20 ἐν τούτοις. τούτοις is neuter, like τούτων: otherwise ὑπὸ-ἐπιτηδυνόντων is hardly necessary. The balance of clauses — 'in consequence of these circumstances, and amid these circumstances' — is also in favour of this—Schneider's—view.

489 C—491 A. So much for the 'uselessness' of the philosopher. But the most serious prejudice from which Philosophy suffers is owing to those who pretend to be philosophers when they are not. It is they who are meant, when people assert that the majority of philosophers are depraved. Let us endeavour to shew that Philosophy is not responsible for the corruption of the philosophic nature. The true philosopher, in spite of popular misconceptions, is, as we have seen, naturally a lover of Truth, and therefore possesses all the virtues of character already named. We have to enquire (1) how this disposition becomes in many cases depraved and (2) what is the character of the false philosophers who are responsible for the prejudice against Philosophy.

489 D 24 οὓς δὴ—λέγειν: 'of whom it is that you say the accuser of philosophy declares that,' etc. For τὸν ἐγκαλοῦντα see 487 C n.

καὶ ἡμεῖς, γὰρ ἐπεὶ, ἡμεῖς τὴν

ἐκ τῆς

καὶ ἡμεῖς, γὰρ ἐπεὶ, ἡμεῖς τὴν

25 παμπόνηροι οἱ πλείστοι τῶν ἰόντων ἐπ' αὐτήν. οἱ δὲ ἐπιεικέστατοι ἄχρηστοι, καὶ ἐγὼ συνεχώρησα ἀληθῆ σε λέγειν. ἦ γάρ; Ναί.

V. Οὐκοῦν τῆς μὲν τῶν ἐπιεικῶν ἀχρηστίας τὴν αἰτίαν διεληλύθαμεν; Καὶ μάλα. Τῆς δὲ τῶν πολλῶν πονηρίας τὴν ἀνάγκην βούλει τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο διέλθωμεν, καὶ ὅτι οὐδὲ τούτου φιλοσοφία 30 αἰτία,¹ ἂν δυνώμεθα, πειραθῶμεν δεῖξαι; Πάννυ μὲν οὖν. Ἀκούω- E μιν δὴ καὶ λέγωμεν ἐκείθεν ἀναμνησθέντες, ὅθεν διῆμεν τὴν φύσιν, οἷον ἀνάγκη φῦναι τὸν καλὸν τε κάγαθόν ἐσόμενον. | ἡγεῖτο δ' 490 αὐτῷ, εἰ νῶ ἔχεις, πρῶτον μὲν ἀλήθεια, ἣν διώκειν αὐτὸν πάντως καὶ πάντῃ ἔδει, ἣ ἀλαζόνι ὄντι μηδαμῇ μετεῖναι φιλοσοφίας ἀληθινῆς. Ἦν γὰρ οὕτω λεγόμενον. Οὐκοῦν ἐν μὲν τοῦτο σφόδρα 5 οὕτω παρὰ δόξαν τοῖς νῦν δοκουμένοις περὶ αὐτοῦ; Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν δὴ οὐ μετρίως ἀπολογισόμεθα, ὅτι πρὸς τὸ ὄν

25 ἰόντων ἐπὶ almost = 'woo her': cf. 495 C ff., Symp. 210 A. Πλησιάζω is similarly used in 490 B.

28 τὴν ἀνάγκην should be taken strictly. There is no possibility of escape: the majority must inevitably succumb. Cf. 492 E η.

489 E 31 ἐκείθεν—ὅθεν. As ἀναμνησκομαι takes the genitive of a noun, so it can be followed by a genitive—originally ablatival—adverb. ὅθεν is attracted for οὐ: cf. Soph. Tr. 701 and other examples in Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 915.

32 καλὸν τε κάγαθόν. The fashionable Greek phrase καλὸς κάγαθος for an εὐεθέριος, or gentleman, was continually used by Socrates and his followers to express their ideal of what a man should be. An excellent discussion of the Socratic connotation of the word will be found in Döring Die Lehre des Sokrates pp. 398—415: for its usual implications reference may be made to Schmidt Ethik d. alten Griechen I pp. 328—334. In politics, the expression was applied to the wealthy or oligarchical party (cf. VIII 569 A and Thuc. VIII 48. 6). It is therefore probable that Socrates' habitual use of καλὸς κάγαθος fostered the not unwarranted suspicion that he and his friends were out of sympathy with democracy, and so contributed in some measure to his condemnation and death.

490 A 2 νῶ ἔχεις: 'you remember.' ἐν νῶ ἔχεις (as in some inferior MSS) would mean 'you intend.' Compare Euthyphr. 2 B with Ap. 20 B. The reference is to 485 B—487 A.

3 ἦ = 'alioquin.' Cf. v 463 D η.

5 οὕτω κτλ. οὕτω "ex Adimanti verbis repetitum et praecise dictum est pro οὕτω λεγόμενον ἦν." If the word is genuine, it must be taken in this way. J. and C. translate "to say no more," comparing ῥαδίως οὕτω and the like (see on II 377 B). But there appears to be no other instance of this idiomatic οὕτω with the adverb σφόδρα. οὕτωσι σφόδρα in Ar. Frogs 88 is quite different, in spite of Blaydes on Ar. Wasps 461. It is just possible that οὕτω is an interpolation from οὕτω just before.

παρὰ δόξαν. By selecting this form of expression Plato "opinionibus opinionem tribuit" (Schneider), loosely enough, but the words are practically equivalent to ἐναντίον. παράδοξον would be somewhat easier, but the text is probably sound. For a similar pleonasm see my note on Crito 44 C.

δοκουμένοις. With the passive cf. X 612 D.

αὐτῷ is masculine, and means Plato's καλὸς κάγαθος, i.e. the philosopher, whom popular opinion regards as an ἀλαζών, if not as a liar.

6 ἄρ' οὖν δὴ κτλ. 'Shall we not then fairly plead that the true lover of learning was disposed by nature to strive towards Being and tarried not at the many particulars which are opined to be' etc.? Socrates has just said that Truth is the leading attribute of the Philosopher. This proposition is challenged by public opinion (παρὰ δόξαν τοῖς νῦν δοκουμένοις), and in support of it Socrates urges, what πεφυκώς εἶη ἀμιλλᾶσθαι ὃ γε ὄντως φιλομαθῆς καὶ οὐκ ἐπιμένοιο B ἐπὶ τοῖς δοξαζομένοις εἶναι¹ πολλοῖς ἐκάστοις, ἀλλ' ἴοι καὶ οὐκ ἀμβλύνοιτο οὐδ' ἀπολήγοι τοῦ ἔρωτος, πρὶν αὐτοῦ ὃ ἔστιν ἐκάστου τῆς φύσεως ἡψασθαι ὃ προσήκει ψυχῆς ἐφάπτεσθαι τοῦ τοιούτου·¹⁰ προσήκει δὲ ξυγγενεῖ· ὃ πλησιάσας καὶ μιγεῖς τῷ ὄντι ὄντως, γεινήσας οὖν καὶ ἀληθείαν, γνοίη τε καὶ ἀληθῶς ζῶη καὶ τρέφοιτο καὶ οὕτω λήγοι ὠδίνος, πρὶν δ' οὐ; Ὡς οἶόν τ', ἔφη, μετριώτατα.

 Τί οὖν; τούτῳ τι μετέσται ψεύδους ἀγαπᾶν, ἢ πᾶν τούναντίον

he had asserted before (485 A—C) that the philosopher is a lover of τὸ ὄν. εἶη ('was,' i.e. 'is, as we saw') would be the 'philosophic imperfect' in direct speech. For the rare change from ἦν to εἶη after a primary tense cf. Xen. Mem. I 2. 34 δῆλον (sc. ἐστίν) ὅτι ἀφεκτέον εἶη τοῦ ὀρθῶς λέγειν, where εἶη stands for ἦν (the usual 'erat' for 'esset' with words denoting obligation or necessity) of the direct, and Plato Charm. 156 B λέγονσί που ὅτι οὐχ οἶδν τε αὐτοὺς μόνους ἐπιχειρεῖν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἰᾶσθαι, ἀλλ' ἀναγκαῖον εἶη ἅμα καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν θεραπεύειν. (Madvig's insertion of ἄν after ἀναγκαῖον in this passage is without authority.) Cf. also II 361 C n. The sequence is all the more easy with the philosophic imperfect because its very nature involves a reference to the past. Ast's conjecture ἀπελογισάμεθα is incorrect; for the philosopher's zeal for Being has not yet been urged in defence of the statement—now for the first time formally challenged—that Truth is his leading characteristic. Madvig conjectures ἀπελογισάμεθα, which Baiter adopts, although the word is wholly inappropriate here. Cf. x 607 B n.

490 B II ξυγγενεῖ. νοὺς is akin to Being and the Eternal: cf. Phaedr. 79 D, Tim. 90 A—C and infra x 611 E.

ὃ πλησιάσας κτλ.: 'whereby having come nigh unto and married with true Being, begetting Reason and Truth, he attained unto knowledge and enjoyed true life and nourishment, and then but not before ceased from travail of the soul.' The mystic union of the Soul with Being is here described in passionate and glowing language. Cf. Phaedr. 246 E—247 D, Symp. 210 A—212 A, and many parallels in Plotinus, for whom, as for the Neoplatonists generally, the mystic side of Platonism had an extraordinary fascination: see Zeller³ III 2, pp. 611—618.

The imagery should be compared with Theaet. 156 A ff. where the phenomena of Perception are thus analysed. The Subject unites with the Object, and from this union are born two children, one the αἴσθησις e.g. Sight, the other the αἰσθητόν e.g. τὸ μέλαν. The former belongs more peculiarly to the Subject, the latter to the Object. Similarly with the phenomena of Knowledge. The Subject unites with the Idea, and the children of this union are νοὺς (or rather, strictly speaking, νόησις i.e. the action of νοὺς), on the side of the Subject, and the νοητόν, i.e. Truth, on the side of the Object. We miss an essential point if we take νοὺν as the object of Knowledge; it is the faculty of Reason, no longer dormant, but suddenly called into actuality. Plato means that Reason does not really live until it lays hold on the Idea. γνοίη corresponds to νοὺν; it is by the begetting of νοὺς that we come to know. The aorist denotes the instantaneous act; cf. Symp. 210 E πρὸς τέλος ἤδη ἰὼν—ἐξαίφνης κατόψεται τι θαυμαστὸν τὴν φύσιν καλὸν κτλ. See also on 508 D and cf. VII 517 C. In like manner ἀληθῶς ζῶη balances ἀλήθειαν: there is no true life without knowledge of the Truth. ἀληθῶς goes also with τρέφοιτο: cf. Phaedr. 247 D and 248 B, C. With ὠδίνος cf. Phaedr. 251 E (ὠδίνων ἔληξεν) and Symp. 206 E. It is tempting to suppose that in ὠδίνος Plato is thinking not merely of the lover's pangs, but also of the pangs of birth. The knowledge of the Idea is indeed in Plato's view an intellectual and moral regeneration. But ἀπολήγοι τοῦ ἔρωτος shews that ὠδίνος means the throes of love; and the further view introduces a confusion of ideas which is alien to the peculiar character of Plato's 'mysticism.'

14 μετέσται. With μετέσται cf. x 606 B λογίζεσθαι γὰρ—ὀλίγοις τισὶ μέτ-

15 μισεῖν; ¹ Μισεῖν, ἔφη. Ἐγουμένης δὴ ἀληθείας οὐκ ἂν ποτε, C οἶμαι, φαῖμεν αὐτῇ χορὸν κακῶν ἀκολουθήσαι. Πῶς γάρ; Ἄλλ' ὑγίές τε καὶ δίκαιον ἦθος, ὃ καὶ σωφροσύνην ἔπεςθαι. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη. Καὶ δὴ τὸν ἄλλον τῆς φιλοσόφου φύσεως χορὸν τί δεῖ πάλιν 20 προσήκον τούτοις ἀνδρεία, μεγαλοπρέπεια, εὐμάθεια, μνήμη· καὶ σοῦ ἐπιλαβομένου, ὅτι πᾶς μὲν ἀναγκασθήσεται· ὁμολογεῖν οἷς D λέγομεν, εἰσας δὲ τοὺς λόγους, εἰς αὐτοὺς ἀποβλέψας περὶ ὧν ὁ λόγος, φαίη ὁρᾶν αὐτῶν τοὺς μὲν ἰχρήστους, τοὺς δὲ πολλοὺς κακοὺς πᾶσαν κακίαν, τῆς διαβολῆς τὴν αἰτίαν ἐπισκοποῦντες ἐπὶ 25 τούτῳ νῦν γεγόναμεν, τί ποθ' οἱ πολλοὶ κακοί, καὶ τούτου δὴ ἕνεκα

23. μὲν II: om. A.

εστιν and Theaet. 186 E. τι is adverbial and does not go with ψεύδος. There is no occasion for Madvig's conjecture ἐπιμελές ἔσται: nor need we write ψεύδους, as I formerly proposed.

490 C 15 ἡγουμένης κτλ. 'Now where Truth was leader' (as we saw it was with the φιλόσοφος) 'we shall never, I think, allow that a quire of evils joined her train.' ἡγουμένης is not the present, but the imperfect participle (cf. ἡγείτο δ' αὐτῷ—ἀλήθεια 490 A); the 'philosophic' past is carried on from the earlier sentence. The tense is strictly to the point, for our ἀπολογία is not yet finished: see 490 A n. We ought not to regard ἀκολουθήσαι (with Goodwin MT. p. 55) as a gnomic aorist: still less should we read ἀκολουθήσειν with q, or φαμεν for φαῖμεν (Stobaeus Flor. 11. 18 and Vind. F), taking ἂν with ἀκολουθήσαι (as I formerly suggested). The past tense is the only one appropriate to the situation both in Greek and in English. See also on line 17.

17 ἦθος: sc. ἀκολουθήσαι. These 'joined the train' of virtue at 486 B.

18 καὶ δὴ κτλ. καὶ is 'also' and goes with τὸν ἄλλον: cf. καὶ—δὴ in 494 A.

19 ἀναγκάζοντα has been doubted. It is read by all the MSS except Ξ, which has ἀναλαμβάνοντα (cf. 490 D). Stallbaum accepts ἀναλαμβάνοντα, while Baiter adopts Madvig's picturesque conjecture ἀναβιβάζοντα. The text is perfectly sound. ἀναγκάζοντα is ἀναγκάζοντα τῷ λόγῳ, i.e. λέγων ἀναγκαῖα εἶναι, 'insisting on their necessity': see on II 363 D (ἀποτινίσκω) and cf. x 611 B and Theaet. 153 C (where Cobet wrongly brackets ἀναγκάζω). Much the same view is taken by Jackson (J. of Phil. XIII p. 218), who compares 486 E μὴ πῃ δοκοῦμέν σοι οὐκ ἀναγκαῖα ἕκαστα διεληλυθέναι. J. and C.'s translation "compelling your assent" is scarcely accurate here.

490 D 23 φαίη. In 487 C we have φαίη ἂν τις, and Richards would add ἂν here. But the hypothetical critic (with whom Socrates himself agrees 487 E) is now treated as what he really is—the exponent of opinions held by all. We should translate 'after you objected that all men would be compelled to agree with what we say, but when they set words aside, and looked at the actual people of whom the argument spoke, they declared that' etc. For φαίη after ἀναγκασθήσεται (rather than ἀναγκασθήσοιτο) see Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 1061.

24 τῆς διαβολῆς. II and the majority of MSS have τῆς ἤδη διαβολῆς. If ἤδη is right, it must, I think, be taken with τῆς διαβολῆς in the sense of 'ea diabolē quae iam apparebat et in conspectum venerat, cum antea animadversa non fuisset' (so Bernhardy and Schneider Addit. p. 46). Even so, it is harsh, but not so harsh as if we take it with ἐπισκοποῦντες, as Stallbaum—and formerly Schneider—did. So extreme a hyperbaton would be more difficult than that in Soph. O. T. 1245, and scarcely admissible in prose. Perhaps Plato wrote τῆς διαβολῆς ἤδη. Otherwise we must suppose that A and other MSS are right in omitting the word.

πάλιν ἀνείληφμεν τὴν τῶν ἀληθῶς φιλοσόφων φύσιν καὶ ἐξ Ε ἀνάγκης ὠρισάμεθα. Ἔστιν, ἔφη, ταῦτα.

VI. Ταύτης δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τῆς φύσεως δεῖ θεάσασθαι τὰς φθοράς, ὡς διόλλυται ἐν πολλοῖς, σμικρὸν δέ τι ἐκφεύγει, οὓς δὴ καὶ οὐ πονηροὺς, ἀχρήστους δὲ καλοῦσι· καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο αὖ τὰς 30 91 μιμουμένας ταύτην | καὶ εἰς τὸ ἐπιτήδευμα καθισταμένας αὐτῆς, οἶαι οὔσαι φύσεις ψυχῶν εἰς ἀνάξιον καὶ μείζον ἑαυτῶν ἀφικνούμεναι ἐπιτήδευμα πολλαχῇ πλημμελοῦσαι πανταχῇ καὶ ἐπὶ πάντας δόξαν οἷαν λέγεις φιλοσοφία προσῆψαν. Τίνας δέ, ἔφη, τὰς διαφθορὰς λέγεις; Ἐγώ σοι, εἶπον, ἂν οἷός τε γένωμαι, πειράσομαι 5 διελθεῖν. τότε μὲν οὖν, οἶμαι, πᾶς ἡμῖν ὁμολογήσει, τοιαύτην φύσιν καὶ πάντα ἔχουσιν, ὅσα προσετάξαμεν νῦν δὴ, εἰ τελέως Β μέλλοι φιλόσοφος¹ γενέσθαι, ὀλιγάκις ἐν ἀνθρώποις φύεσθαι καὶ ὀλίγας. ἢ οὐκ οἶει; Σφόδρα γε. Τούτων δὴ τῶν ὀλίγων σκόπει ὡς πολλοὶ ὄλεθροι καὶ μεγάλοι. Τίνες δὴ; Ὁ μὲν πάντων θαν- 10

8. μέλλοι Α²Π: μέλλει Α¹.

490 Ε 31 τὰς μιμουμένας κτλ. Plato distinguishes between two kinds of πονηρία, that which results from the corruption of the truly philosophic nature, and the πονηρία of pretenders to philosophy. It is the latter—so we are told—which is responsible for the prejudice under which Philosophy labours (cf. 489 D): but the former is by far the more serious evil (491 Ε, 495 Β), though engendered, not by Philosophy, but by the seductive influence of public opinion.

491 Α—495 Β The philosophic nature is a rare growth, whose very virtues render it peculiarly liable to corruption, when it is placed in unfavourable surroundings. The clamorous voice of public opinion, expressed in assemblies and other gatherings of the people, inevitably corrupts the youth by moulding them into conformity with itself. Where necessary, force is employed, under the name of punishment. Against these influences, no teacher can possibly contend, although the providence of God may save some. As for the Sophists, they do but make into a system and teach the opinions of the Multitude, which they are wholly unable to justify, but accept without reserve, as their profession requires them to do. Remember too that the Ideas are foolishness to the Many, so that they will never love Wisdom or her followers. Socrates concludes with a vivid and lifelike picture of a philosophic nature in process of corruption.

491 Α 2 ἀνάξιον = 'too good for': cf. Prot. 355 D and Soph. Phil. 1009. ἀντάξιον (Benedictus) and ἀνολέειον (Herwerden) are unhappy conjectures.

3 ἐπὶ πάντας: 'all the world over.' Cf. ἐπ' ἀνθρώπους in Tim. 23 B.

7 εἰ—γενέσθαι. Cobet, who formerly proposed γνησέσθαι, afterwards rejected the whole clause. The aorist infinitive with μέλλω is rare, but thoroughly established in Plato, if any reliance is placed on the best MSS: see the examples collected by Schanz Vol. v p. vii.

491 Β 8 ὀλιγάκις—ὀλίγας. ὀλιγάκις καὶ ὀλίγας is half-proverbial. For καὶ ὀλίγας Stephanus conjectured καὶ ὀλίγοις or καὶ ἐν ὀλίγοις, Richards κἀν ὀλίγοις, comparing Arist. Eth. Nic. VII 11. 1151^b 30 διὰ τὸ τὴν ἐτέραν ἐν ὀλίγοις καὶ ὀλιγάκις εἶναι φανεράν. But ἐν ὀλίγοις would be inelegant after ἐν ἀνθρώποις, and Plato could not have written ὀλίγην. A similar but easier change from the generic singular to the plural occurs III 408 B and infra 500 C. Translate, keeping the anacoluthon; 'that such a nature—one possessed of all the qualities' etc.—'such natures are few and far between among mankind.'

10 ὁ—ὅτι. Cf. I 330 B n.

- μαστότατον ἀκούσαι, ὅτι ἐν ἑκαστον ὦν ἐπηρεάσαμεν τῆς φύσεως ἀπόλλυσι τὴν ἔχουσαν ψυχὴν καὶ ἀποσπᾷ φιλοσοφίας. λέγω δὲ ἀνδρείαν, σωφροσύνην, καὶ πάντα ἃ διήλθομεν. "Ατοπον, ἔφη, ἀκούσαι. "Ετι τοίνυν, ¹ ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρὸς τούτοις τὰ λεγόμενα ἀγαθὰ C
- 15 πάντα φθείρει καὶ ἀποσπᾷ, κάλλος καὶ πλοῦτος καὶ ἰσχυρὸς σώματος καὶ ξυγγένεια ἐρρωμένη ἐν πόλει καὶ πάντα τὰ τούτων οἰκεία· ἔχεις γὰρ τὸν τύπον ὦν λέγω. "Εχω, ἔφη· καὶ ἡδέως γ' ἂν ἄκριβέστερον ἂν λέγεις πυθόιμην. Λαβοῦ τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅλον αὐτοῦ ὀρθῶς, καὶ σοι εὐδηλὸν τε φανεῖται, καὶ οὐκ ἄτοπα δόξει τὰ
- 20 προειρημένα περὶ αὐτῶν. Πῶς οὖν, ἔφη, κελεύεις; Παντός, ¹ ἦν D δ' ἐγώ, σπέρματος πέρι ἢ φυτοῦ, εἴτε ἐγγείων εἴτε τῶν ζώων, ἴσμεν, ὅτι τὸ μὴ τυχὸν τροφῆς ἧς προσήκει ἐκάστω, μηδ' ὥρας μηδὲ τόπου, ὅσῳ ἂν ἐρρωμενέστερον ἦ, τοσοῦτω πλείονων ἐνδεῖ τῶν πρεπόντων·

20. παντός A²Π: πάντως A.

12 ἀπόλλυσι κτλ. Krohn (Pl. St. p. 114) asks how courage and temperance can tend to corrupt the character. The answer is given by Plato in 494 B ff. They bring their possessor to the front, and therefore expose him to the solicitations of selfish and unscrupulous men. It should be carefully borne in mind that ἀνδρεία and the other virtues are here regarded, not as the result of education, but as natural qualities, derived from the philosopher's native love of truth. We are in fact dealing with the potentiality of the τελέως φιλόσοφος (491 A). It is this which suffers corruption, not the actualized philosopher. Cf. Krohn l.c. p. 115 and Pfeleiderer Zur Lösung etc. p. 26.

491 C 17 ἔχεις γάρ—λέγω: not "now I have given you an outline of my meaning" (D. and V.), but 'you understand the general type of the things I mean,' that is, the general character of things which φθείρει καὶ ἀποσπᾷ, though in themselves advantages or even virtues. Adimantus assents, but would like to have them specified more precisely. In reply, Socrates bids him grasp the notion of them correctly as a whole (αὐτοῦ is neuter and ὅλον αὐτοῦ is practically equivalent to τύπου), and it will become clear to him, and τὰ προειρημένα περὶ αὐτῶν (viz. that they ἀπόλλυσι καὶ ἀποσπᾷ—φθείρει καὶ ἀποσπᾷ B, C) will not appear ἄτοπα as before (ἀτοπον—ἀκούσαι in B). The passage is somewhat loosely written; but αὐτῶν is certainly neuter and not 'the philosophic natures,' as J. and C. suppose.

491 D 21 ἐγγείων—ζώων. These are possessive genitives. Richards says that "τῶν should probably be omitted before ζώων or added before ἐγγείων." Cf. however IV 438 C n. In this instance I think Plato wrote τῶν ζώων in order to call special attention to ζῶα as opposed to ἐγγεῖα. They are not on the same level of importance, as far as the argument is concerned, for it is the degeneration of ζῶα, not of ἐγγεῖα, which Plato has to explain.

23 πλείονων is much more elegant than Madvig's conjecture πλείον. Plato's position on this matter, in the way in which he states it, is open to objection. It might be argued that the naturally strong nature is the best fitted to resist the corrupting influences of its environment. But the philosophic nature is remarkable for sensibility as well as strength, and the sensitive plant needs careful fostering. The general sentiment of this passage is Socratic, as Hermann (Gesch. u. System p. 330 n. 33) and Krohn (Pl. St. p. 365) have pointed out: cf. Mem. IV 1. 3, 4 τῶν ἀνθρώπων τοὺς εὐφρεστάτους ἐρρωμενεστάτους τε ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὄντας—παίδευθέντας μὲν καὶ μαθόντας ἃ δεῖ πράττειν, ἀρίστους τε καὶ ὠφελιμωτάτους γίγνεσθαι—ἀπαιδεύτους δὲ καὶ ἀμαθεῖς γενομένους κακίστους τε καὶ βλαβερωτάτους γίγνεσθαι.

ἀγαθῷ γάρ πον κακὸν ἐναντιώτερον ἢ τῷ μὴ ἀγαθῷ. Πῶς δ' οὐ;
 Ἔχει δὴ, οἶμαι, λόγον τὴν ἀρίστην φύσιν ἐν ἀλλοτριωτέρα οὖσαν 25 τροφῇ κάκιον ἀπαλλάττειν τῆς φαύλης. Ἔχει. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' Εἰ γὰρ, ὦ Ἀδείμαντε, καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς οὕτω φῶμεν τὰς εὐφροσύνας κακῆς παιδαγωγίας τυχοῦσας διαφερόντως κακὰς γίνεσθαι; ἢ οἶε τὰ μεγάλα ἀδικήματα καὶ τὴν ἄκρατον πονηρίαν ἐκ φαύλης, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐκ νεανικῆς φύσεως τροφῇ διολομένης γίνεσθαι, ἀσθενῇ 30 δὲ φύσιν μεγάλων οὔτε ἀγαθῶν οὔτε κακῶν αἰτίαν ποτὲ ἔσσεσθαι; Οὐκ, ἀλλά, ἦ δ' ὅς, οὕτως. Ἦν τοίνυν ἔθεμεν | τοῦ φιλοσόφου φύσιν, ἂν μὲν, οἶμαι, μαθήσεως προσηκούσης τύχῃ, εἰς πᾶσαν ἀρετὴν ἀνάγκη αὐξανομένην ἀφικνεῖσθαι, ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ἐν προσηκούσῃ σπαρεῖσά τε καὶ φυτευθεῖσα τρέφῃται, εἰς πάντα τὰναντία αὐ, ἐὰν μὴ τις αὐτῇ βοηθήσας θεῶν τύχῃ. ἢ καὶ σὺ ἡγεῖ, ὥσπερ οἱ πολλοί, 5 διαφθειρομένους τινὰς εἶναι ὑπὸ σοφιστῶν νέους, διαφθείροντας δέ

25 τὴν ἀρίστην φύσιν κτλ. The contrast is between the ἀρίστη φύσις and the φαύλη, where both are subjected to (οὖσαν ἐν cf. 495 A) bad τροφή. The former 'comes off worse,' 'suffers more' (κάκιον ἀπαλλάττειν), because the τροφή is more alien to its nature than to that of the others: cf. τοσοῦτω πλείονων ἐνδεί τῶν πρεπόντων. So Schneider correctly explains the passage. Cf. generally Dante Inferno vi 106—108 "Ritorna a tua scienza, Che vuol, quanto la cosa è più perfetta, Più senta 'l bene, e così la doglienza." Van Heusde's ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ τραφείσαν misses the point. Even more unhappy is Boeckh's κακίον ἀπαλλάττειν, which Stallbaum adopts. κάκιον ἀπαλλάττειν is simply the comparative of κακῶς ἀπαλλάττειν: see Cobet in Mnem. xi p. 168, where Stallbaum is severely rebuked.

491 E 30 ἐκ νεανικῆς κτλ.: "out of a fulness of nature ruined by education" Jowett. Plato's attitude on this subject is highly characteristic. The educator's whole efforts are to be directed towards saving and improving strong and gifted natures: cf. vii 519 A, B. Weak natures may be almost neglected, without serious injury to the State. They will never do anything great—whether good or evil: see 495 B. For this and other reasons Plato does not trouble to lay down rules for the education of the lower classes in his city.

492 A 3 μὴ ἐν προσηκούσῃ: i. q. ἐν μὴ προσηκούσῃ (which Stephanus wrongly read), by a common hyperbaton: cf. Crito 47 D and other examples in Braun De Hyperb. Pl. p. 15. With προσηκούσῃ it is usual to supply μαθήσει. I think Plato intentionally selects a vague expression, intending ἐν προσηκούσῃ to be taken with σπαρεῖσα—φυτευθεῖσα as well as with τρέφῃται: for it is just as important that the philosophic nature should be sown and planted in a proper soil (491 D), as that it should receive proper education. Morgenstern, who formerly proposed προσηκούσῃ <γῇ>, afterwards adopted much the same view as this: see Schneider Addit. p. 46.

5 θεῶν. See on θεοῦ μοῖραν 493 A.

ἢ καὶ σὺ ἡγεῖ κτλ. This passage is appealed to by Grote (viii pp. 200 ff.) in his famous defence of the Sophists. Plato certainly implies that the Sophists did not independently corrupt the young 'to any extent worth mentioning' (ὅ τι καὶ ἄξιον λόγου). It is the Demos which is the primary source and fount of corruption; the Sophists are only the mouth-piece of a disgraceful public opinion which it is their profession to flatter and court (493 A—D). But from Plato's point of view this is itself a sufficiently grave indictment to bring against a professional teacher of Morality (see 493 C), so that the present attack on the Athenian people is far from being an apology for the Sophists.

τινας σοφιστὰς ἰδιωτικούς, ὃ τι καὶ ἄξιον λόγου, ἀλλ' οὐκ αὐτοὺς τοὺς ταῦτα λέγοντας μεγίστους μὲν¹ εἶναι σοφιστὰς, παιδεύειν δὲ B τελεώτατα καὶ ἀπεργάζεσθαι οἷους βούλονται εἶναι καὶ νέους καὶ 10 πρεσβυτέρους καὶ ἄνδρας καὶ γυναῖκας; Πότε δὴ; ἢ δ' ὅς. "Ὅταν, εἰπον, ξυγκαθεζόμενοι ἄθροοι πολλοὶ εἰς ἐκκλησίας ἢ εἰς δικαστήρια ἢ θέατρα ἢ στρατόπεδα ἢ τινα ἄλλον κοινὸν πλῆθους ξύλλογον ξὺν πολλῷ θορύβῳ τὰ μὲν ψέγωσι τῶν λεγομένων ἢ πραττομένων, τὰ δὲ ἐπαινῶσιν, ὑπερβαλλόντως ἐκάτερα, καὶ ἐκβοῶντες καὶ κροτοῦν-15 τες,¹ πρὸς δ' αὐτοῖς αἱ τε πέτραι καὶ ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἂν ὦσιν ἐπηχοῦν- C τες διπλίσιον θόρυβον παρέχῃσι τοῦ ψόγου καὶ ἐπαίνου. ἐν δὴ τῷ τοιούτῳ τὸν νέον, τὸ λεγόμενον, τίνα οἶει καρδίαν ἴσχειν; ἢ ποίαν ἂν αὐτῷ παιδεῖαν ἰδιωτικὴν ἀνθέξειν, ἣν οὐ κατακλυσθεῖσαν ὑπὸ τοῦ τοιούτου ψόγου ἢ ἐπαίνου οἰχήσεσθαι φερομένην κατὰ 20 ῥοὴν, ἣ ἂν οὗτος φέρῃ, καὶ φήσιν τε τὰ αὐτὰ τούτοις καλὰ καὶ

492 B 11 ξυγκαθεζόμενοι κτλ. The Athenians sat at an Ecclesia: see Ar. Ach. 24 f. with Blaydes' note. For πολλοὶ I formerly read οἱ πολλοὶ with Hermann; but ἄθροοι πολλοὶ is sound, and means 'in large numbers together,' like πολλοὶ ἄθροοι in Gorg. 490 B. The subject is of course οἱ ταῦτα λέγοντες, i.e. οἱ πολλοὶ (492 A). The mention of numbers is to the point: how can one man stand against so many? Cobet is wrong in deleting πολλοί.

12 ξὺν. See on IV 424 D.

14 ὑπερβαλλόντως. Cf. VIII 561 C ff. Exaggeration and excess are characteristic marks of democracy.

492 C 15 πρὸς δ' αὐτοῖς κτλ. Plato is doubtless thinking of the Acropolis and the Dionysiac theatre. Cobet does ill to bracket τοῦ ψόγου καὶ ἐπαίνου: for Plato characteristically makes the rocks themselves applaud. Cf. VIII 563 C. Translate 'Yea, and besides themselves, the rocks and the place wherein they are resound and give forth a reduplicated uproar of censure and applause.' Cf. Euthyd. 303 B ἐνταῦθα δὲ ὀλίγου καὶ οἱ κλονεῖ οἱ ἐν τῷ Ἀκκείῳ ἐθορύβησαν τ' ἐπὶ τοῖν ἀνδρῶν καὶ ἦσθησαν.

17 τίνα—ἴσχειν. 'Where, think you, is a young man's heart?' For the saying cf. Isocr. Trar. 10 τίς οἰσεσθὲ με γινώμην ἔχειν; and Dem. adv. Arhob. II 21 τίς οἰσεσθε αὐτὴν ψυχὴν ἔχειν; καρδία as the seat of courage is colloquial and rare: cf. Archil. Fr. 58. 4 καρδίης πλέος and Plut.

Reg. et imp. apophthegmata 185 E τοὺς δὲ Ἐρετρίεις—ἔλεγεν ὥσπερ τευθίδας μάχαιραν μὲν ἔχειν, καρδίαν δὲ μὴ ἔχειν. q has τίνα ἂν οἶει, and Bywater and Herwerden propose τίς ἂν οἶει, but the MS reading is better and more picturesque.

18 ποίαν ἂν. I agree with Goodwin (MT. pp. 66, 68, 71) and others that ἂν with the future was occasionally used by the best Attic prose writers. In Plato it occurs Ap. 29 C, 30 B, Symp. 222 A, Rep. X 615 D, Crilo 53 D, Euthyd. 287 D, Phaedr. 227 B, and probably also elsewhere. All these instances have been 'emended,' and it is possible enough that some of them are corrupt. Here ἂν is in all the MSS, and is therefore better retained, although it may of course be an erroneous repetition of the last syllable of ποίαν (as Cobet and others suppose). We may regard the idiom as one of Plato's numerous half-poetical efforts: see X 615 D n. Richards proposes δὴ: but see V 450 C n.

20 καὶ φήσιν κτλ. In oratio recta the whole sentence would have run ποία ἂν αὐτῷ παιδεῖα ἰδιωτικὴ ἀνθέξει, ἢ οὐ κατακλυσθεῖσα—οἰχίσεται φερομένη—καὶ φήσει—καὶ ἐπιτρούσει—καὶ ἔσται τοιοῦτος; i.e. (literally translated) 'what private training of his will stand fast, which will not be swamped by such censure or praise, and carried down the stream wherever the stream leads, and he will say' etc. (The metaphor is from a mole or breakwater swept away by a αἰσχροῦ εἶναι, καὶ ἐπιτηδεύσειν ἅπερ ἂν οὗτοι, καὶ ἔσεσθαι τοιοῦτον; Πολλή, ἣ δ' ὅς, ὦ Σώκρατες, ἀνάγκη.

VII. Καὶ μήν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὐπω τὴν μεγίστην ἀνάγκην εἰρήκαμεν. Ποίαν; ἔφη. Ἦν ἔργῳ προστιθέασι, λόγῳ μὴ πείθοντες, οὗτοι οἱ παιδευταὶ τε καὶ σοφισταί. ἣ οὐκ οἶσθα, ὅτι τὸν μὴ 25 πειθόμενον ἀτιμίαις τε καὶ χρήμασι καὶ θανάτοις κολάζουσι; Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη, σφόδρα. Τίνα οὖν ἄλλον σοφιστὴν οἶε ἢ ποίους ἰδιω-
E τικοὺς λόγους ἐναντία τούτοις ἰσχυρόντας κρατήσιν; Οἶμαι μὲν οὐδένα, ἣ δ' ὅς. Οὐ γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ ἐπιχειρεῖν πολλή ἄνοια. οὔτε γὰρ γίγνεται οὔτε γέγονεν οὐδὲ οὖν μὴ γένηται 30 ἀλλοῖον ἥθος πρὸς ἀρετὴν παρὰ τὴν τούτων παιδείαν πεπαιδευμένον, ἀνθρώπειον, ὥ ἐταίρε· θεῖον μέντοι κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν flood.) In this there is nothing but the common passage of a relative into a main sentence (see II 357 B n. and cf. Ap. 40 A with my note ad loc.), coupled with an easy change of subject, as in Crito 46 A. The sentence assumes the form which it has in the text, because both subordinate and main clauses can take the accusative with infinitive in Greek oratio obliqua: see Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 1056. Stallbaum (followed by J. and C.) understands οὐκ οἶε to account for φήσειν, but the negative cannot be supplied, and if it could, it would give a wrong sense. Schneider's translation is correct, but not his note in the text. With the sentiment cf. Gorg. 510 D ff.

25. τὸν Π: τὸ Α.

492 D 25 σοφισταί. The Demos is the Arch-Sophist: cf. 492 A n. οὗτοι is the contemptuous isti: 'these teachers and sophists of yours.'

26 θανάτοις. The fate of Socrates was the most conspicuous example of this in Plato's time, but it is hardly likely that Plato is specifically alluding to it here (as Steinhart and Sussehl suppose). The description is quite general. Contrast VII 517 A n.

492 E 30 οὔτε γὰρ κτλ. Plato has just declared that it would be the height of folly in a teacher even to attempt to make a young man run counter to public opinion. The present sentence explains why. There is not, never has been, and never will be produced a character different (from the Many) in respect of virtue, by having been educated on principles opposed to the education which the Many provide (the force of public sentiment, expressed in assemblies etc.). Consequently every attempt to produce such a character by means of education in the teeth of public opinion is foredoomed to failure. The statement appears at first sight extraordinary; but from Plato's point of view it is, with the limitations which he makes, strictly correct. Cities are either actual or ideal. In the ideal city, education does not produce a type of character which conflicts with public opinion, because public opinion is itself formed by education. In actual cities, education must conform to the same standard if it is to exist at all: for τὸν μὴ πειθόμενον ἀτιμίαις τε καὶ χρήμασι καὶ θανάτοις κολάζουσι (492 D). How then are we to explain the presence of great and good men in existing cities? They are θεοὶ ἄνδρες, saved from corruption by grace of God: see on 493 A. In these circumstances, what is the political reformer to do? He must break with all existing cities (497 B), and found—as Plato now wishes to do—a new commonwealth in which sound education and public opinion no longer differ, but agree. In other words, his policy must be to make the Philosopher King. For other views of this passage see App. II.

32 ἀνθρώπειον: sc. ἥθος: 'a merely human character.' Plato makes an exception in favour of a θεῖον ἥθος, playing on the proverb τὸ θεῖον ἐξαιρῶ λόγου, for which cf. Symp. 176 C Σωκράτης δ' ἐξαιρῶ ἐξαιρῶμεν λόγου. εὖ γὰρ χρή εἶδέναι, ὅ τί περ ἂν σωθῇ τε καὶ γένηται οἷον δεῖ ἐν τοιαύτῃ καταστάσει πολιτειῶν, θεοῦ μοῖραν 493 αὐτὸ σῶσαι λέγων οὐ κακῶς ἐρεῖς. Οὐδ' ἐμοὶ ἄλλως, ἔφη, δοκεῖ. Ἔτι τοίνυν σοι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρὸς τούτοις καὶ τόδε δοξάτω. Τὸ ποῖον; Ἐκαστος τῶν μισθαρνούντων ἰδιωτῶν, οὓς δὴ οὗτοι σοφισ- 5 τὰς καλοῦσι καὶ ἀντιτέχνους ἡγοῦνται, μὴ ἄλλα παιδεύειν ἢ ταῦτα τὰ τῶν πολλῶν δόγματα, ἃ δοξάζουσιν ὅταν ἀθροισθῶσιν, καὶ σοφίαν ταύτην καλεῖν, οἷόν περ ἂν εἰ θρέμματος μεγάλου καὶ ἰσχυροῦ τρεφομένου τὰς ὀργὰς τις καὶ ἐπιθυμίας κατεμάνθανεν, ὅπη τε προσελθεῖν χρή καὶ ὅπη ἄψασθαι αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὁπότε χαλε- B 10 πώτατον ἢ πραύτατον καὶ ἐκ τίνων γίγνεται, καὶ φωνὰς δὴ ἐφ' οἷς ἐκάστας εἴωθεν φθέγγεσθαι, καὶ οἷας αὐτὸν ἄλλου φθεγγομένου ἡμεροῦνται τε καὶ ἀγριαίνει, καταμαθὼν δὲ ταῦτα πάντα ξυνουσία

33. ἐξαιρῶμεν M: ἐξαίρωμεν AΠ: ἐξαίρω Ξ: ἐξαιρούμεν q. II. ἐκάστας v. Prinsterer: ἕκαστος AΠΞ: ἅς ἐφ' ἐκάστοις pro ἐφ' οἷς ἐκάστας q.

λόγου, Phaedr. 242 B Σιμμίαν Ὀνηβαῖον ἐξαιρῶ λόγου (a delicate way of hinting that Socrates and Simmias are θεῖοι ἄνδρες), and Theaet. 162 D. Any ἡθος which in existing cities conspicuously transcends the public standard of morality (and is thus ἀλλοῖον πρὸς ἀρετήν) is θεῖον, and for that very reason sporadic and exceptional (see next note).

493 A I θεοῦ μοῖραν is best explained by Men. 94 B ff. and 99 C, D. Distinguished statesmen like Pericles, Themistocles etc. are θεῖοι, just as much as the χρησμοδοί, μάντιες, and ποιητικοί: they are ἐπίπνοι—καὶ κατεχόμενοι ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, δταν κατορθῶσι λέγοντες πολλὰ καὶ μεγάλα πράγματα (99 D). Education did not produce them, nor have they any scientific knowledge of statesmanship; for which reason also they cannot teach their sons to be statesmen (Men. 94 B, Prot. 320 A). It was by this theory that Plato accounted for the fact that good men appear from time to time even in corrupt States: εἰσὶ γὰρ ἐν τοῖς πολλοῖς ἄνθρωποι ἀεὶ θεῖοι τινες, οὐ πολλοί—φύομενοι οὐδὲν μᾶλλον ἐν εὐνομονμέναις πόλεσιν ἢ καὶ μὴ (Laus 951 B). There is more than a touch of irony in the epithet θεῖος when Plato applies it to Themistocles, Pericles and other successful politicians with whom he had little sympathy, but θεοῦ μοῖραν is not ironical here (cf. 492 A), nor is Plato ever otherwise than grateful for the birth of statesmen who are truly θεῖοι. But they do not solve the difficulty, for the scientific knowledge of πολιτικὴ is not only better and more stable in itself, but guarantees the permanent prosperity of a State, because it can be transmitted to posterity. Nor can we be sure that our statesmen 'by grace of God' will appear when they are most wanted. For a full discussion of thela moira in Plato see Zeller⁴ II 1, p. 594 n. 4.

4 ἕκαστος: sc. δοξάτω. Cf. I 334 B n. and Phaedr. 80 A, B, where ψυχή, the reading of the best MSS, should be retained. Baiter is certainly wrong in reading ἕκαστον (with Stephanus and v): for with personal subjects δοκεῖ is used personally. Dümmiler (Chr. Beitr. p. 12) and Teichmüller (Lit. Fehd. I p. 104) suppose that Plato means Isocrates in particular. It is possible enough that he had Isocrates in his mind, but the description applies to many besides him: cf. iv 426 C n.

6 δοξάζουσιν = 'opine' is technical: cf. v 479 E. With θρέμματος etc. cf. "The beast with many heads Butts me away" Shakespeare Coriol. iv 1; and a similar figure in Solon ap. Arist. Ath. Pol. 12 ad fin. and Theaet. 174 D.

493 B II ἐκάστας. See cr. n. Van Prinsterer's emendation is now universally accepted.

οἷας αὐτὸν κτλ. The party-cry.

τε καὶ χρόνου τριβῇ σοφίαν τε καλέσειεν καὶ ὡς τέχνην συστησάμενος ἐπὶ διδασκαλίαν τρέποιτο, μηδὲν εἰδὼς τῇ ἀληθείᾳ τούτων τῶν δογμάτων τε καὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν, ὅ τι καλὸν ἢ αἰσχρὸν ἢ ἀγαθὸν ἢ 15

C κακὸν ἢ δίκαιον ἢ ἄδικον, ὁνομάζοι δὲ πάντα ταῦτα ἐπὶ ταῖς τοῦ μεγάλου ζώου δόξαις, οἷς μὲν χαίροι ἐκείνο, ἀγαθὰ καλῶν, οἷς δὲ ἄχθοιτο, κακά, ἄλλον δὲ μηδένα ἔχει λόγον περὶ αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ τὰναγκαῖα δίκαια καλοῖ καὶ καλά, τὴν δὲ τοῦ ἀναγκαίου καὶ ἀγαθοῦ φύσιν, ὅσον διαφέρει τῷ ὄντι, μήτε ἑωρακὼς εἶη μήτε ἄλλῳ 20 δυνατὸς δεῖξαι. τοιοῦτος δὲ ὢν πρὸς Διὸς οὐκ ἄτοπος ἂν σοι δοκεῖ εἶναι παιδευτής; Ἐμοιγ', ἔφη. Ἡ οὖν τι τούτου δοκεῖ

D διαφέρειν ὁ τὴν τῶν πολλῶν καὶ παντοδαπῶν ὁρμήν καὶ ἡδονὰς κατανενοηκέναι σοφίαν ἡγούμενος, εἴτ' ἐν γραφικῇ εἴτ' ἐν μουσικῇ εἴτε δὴ ἐν πολιτικῇ; ὅτι μὲν γάρ, εἰάν τις τούτοις ὁμιλῇ 25 ἐπιδεικνύμενος ἢ ποιήσιν ἢ τινα ἄλλην δημιουργίαν ἢ πόλει διακονίαν, κυρίους αὐτοῦ ποιῶν τοὺς πολλοὺς πέρα τῶν ἀναγκαίων,

25. εἴτε δὴ—ὁμιλῇ Π et in mg. A²: om. A¹.

13 καλέσειεν (though κατεμάνθανεν) is written because of καταμαθὼν δέ, after which ἐκάλει would be less suitable. The situation is now treated as a possible one, after the picture has once been allowed.

ὡς τέχνην συστησάμενος. Cf. the Stoic definition of τέχνη as a σύστημα ἐκ καταλήψεων κτλ. (Zeno Fr. 12 Pearson).

493 C 16 ὁνομάζοι κτλ.: 'employs all these terms in accordance with' (literally 'in dependence on') 'the opinions of the mighty Beast.' This interpretation is better than to suppose with Stallbaum that Plato means 'applies all these names to the opinions' etc., though ὁνομάζειν τι ἐπὶ τινι is idiomatically used in that way.

19 τὰναγκαῖα—καλοῖ. τὰναγκαῖα does not mean "the physical necessities and exigencies of the great beast's nature" (J. and C.), but simply 'the inevitable.' Whatever happens, a public teacher or Sophist must conform to the opinions of the Beast (492 D). In what follows there is a hint of the profound philosophical view that the Works of Necessity are evil (cf. Tim. 29 E, 47 E ff.), and that Moral Freedom consists in following what is good. See on x 617 E.

22 δοκεῖ. Ast would read δοκοῖ, but ἂν of course goes with εἶναι: cf. iv 422 B. See for this idiom my note on Pro. 351 B and Blaydes on Ar. Wasps 1405.

23 ὁ τὴν τῶν πολλῶν κτλ. Jackson thinks of Isocrates again (Proceedings of the Camb. Philol. Soc. II 1882 p. 13). See above on 493 A.

493 D 25 ὅτι μὲν γάρ κτλ. An anacoluthon. The apodosis which requires to be supplied is 'that much is certain' or the like: cf. v 465 A n. I formerly thought the anacoluthon too harsh, and proposed to read ὅ τι μὲν γάρ ἂν—ἐπιδεικνύμενος, ἢ κτλ., taking ὅ τι as the object of ἐπιδεικνύμενος, and ἢ ποιήσιν ('either poetry' etc.) as in apposition to ὅ τι: but the text is better as it stands. Richards' proposal to read ἔστι for ὅτι is very displeasing.

26 ποιήσιν. Compare a striking passage in Laws 659 B, C, where Poetry is said to have deteriorated after she accepted οἱ πολλοὶ as her judge. See also Laws 700 E, 797 B, Gorg. 502 B ff. and infra x 605 A.

27 κυρίους αὐτοῦ. We should certainly (with Schneider and the majority of editors) read αὐτοῦ and not αὐτοῦ (which Stallbaum and others adopt, referring it to ποιήσιν etc.). The MSS (except q) mostly read αὐτοῦ, but their authority in this matter is of no account. Cobet would read αὐτοῦς and eject τοὺς πολλοὺς—on what ground, it is difficult even to conjecture.

πέρα τῶν ἀναγκαίων. By coming forward in a public capacity as a poet or ἡ Διομήδεια λεγομένη ἀνάγκη ποιεῖν αὐτῷ ταῦτα ἢ ἂν οὐτοὶ ἐπαινῶσιν· ὥς δὲ καὶ ἀγαθὰ καὶ καλὰ ταῦτα τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, ἥδη 30 πώποτε τοῦ ἡκουσας αὐτῶν λόγον διδόντος οὐ καταγέλαστον;

 Οἶμαι δέ γε, ἡ δ' ὅς, ἰ οὐδ' ἀκούσομαι.

E

VIII. Ταῦτα τοίνυν πάντα ἐννοήσας ἐκείνο ἀναμνησθητι· αὐτὸ τὸ καλόν, ἀλλὰ μὴ τὰ πολλὰ καλὰ, ἢ αὐτό τι ἕκαστον καὶ μὴ τὰ πολλὰ ἕκαστα, ἔσθ' ὅπως | πλήθος ἀνέξεται ἢ ἡγήσεται εἶναι; 494
 Ἕκιστα γ', ἔφη. Φιλόσοφον μὲν ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πλήθος ἀδύνατον εἶναι. Ἀδύνατον. Καὶ τοὺς φιλοσοφούντας ἄρα ἀνάγκη ψέγεσθαι ὑπ' αὐτῶν. Ἀνάγκη. Καὶ ὑπὸ τούτων δὴ τῶν ἰδιωτῶν, ὅσοι 5 προσομιλοῦντες ὄχλῳ ἀρέσκειν αὐτῷ ἐπιθυμοῦσι. Δῆλον. Ἐκ δὴ τούτων τίνα ὁρᾷς σωτηρίαν φιλοσόφῳ φύσει, ὥστ' ἐν τῷ ἐπιτηδεύματι μέινασαν πρὸς τέλος ἐλθεῖν; ἐννοεῖ δ' ἐκ τῶν ἔμπροσθεν.
 ὁμολόγηται γὰρ δὴ ἡμῖν εὐμάθεια καὶ μνήμη καὶ ἀνδρεία καὶ B μεγαλοπρέπεια ταύτης εἶναι τῆς φύσεως. Ναί. Οὐκοῦν εὐθύς ἐν statesman or the like, he 'makes the Many his masters more than is necessary.' In a private station, he is, comparatively speaking, independent; but even then the Many are (in a certain sense) of necessity his masters: see 496 D. Ast and Stallbaum take the phrase with ἡ Διομήδεια ἀνάγκη. "Iungenda sunt verba sic: ἀνάγκη (ἐστίν) αὐτῷ πέρα τῶν ἀναγκαίων (ultra necessaria quae progrediatur) ἡ Διομήδεια λεγομένη, ut vocabulis ἡ λεγομένη Διομήδεια istud πέρα ἀναγκαίων declaratur" (Stallbaum). If this is what Plato meant, he expresses it in a harsh and dangerously ambiguous way, and it would be preferable to cancel πέρα τῶν ἀναγκαίων (with Cobet and Herwerden). But there is fortunately no occasion for such drastic treatment.

28 ἡ Διομήδεια κτλ. Most of the MSS write Διομηδεῖα (sic), but Διομηδεῖα γε at the end of a line in Ar. Ecll. 1029 makes it clear that the word is proparoxylon, unless, as Schneider supposes (Addit. p. 47), Aristophanes shortens the final syllable by poetic license. The proverb, which is used of an overmastering necessity, is illustrated by Leutsch u. Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. 1 p. 59, II p. 367, and also by Blaydes on Ar. l.c. Two explanations of it were given. According to the first, which is adopted by the Scholiast on this passage, the phrase originated in the treatment meted out by Diomedes to Odysseus, when they were returning from Ilium to the Greek camp after stealing the Palladium. Odysseus attempted to kill Diomedes, but failed, and Diomedes paid him out by tying his arms together and driving him home with blows from the flat of his sword. The Scholiast on Ar. l.c. explains differently. Διομήδεια: ὅτι Διομήδης ὁ Θρᾶξ, πόρνας ἔχων θυγατέρας, τοὺς παριόντας ξένους ἐβιάζετο αὐταῖς συνείναι ἕως οὗ κέρον σχῶσι καὶ ἀναλωθῶσιν οἱ ἄνδρες. ἄς καὶ ὁ μῦθος ἵππους ἀνθρωποφάγους εἶπεν. I agree with Schneider that the proverb is more likely to have originated from the first story than from a euhemeristic explanation of the man-eating mares of Diomedes of Thrace.

30 αὐτῶν. The μισθαρνοῦντες ἰδιῶται, not 'the Many.' Plato is probably thinking of actual eulogies of the Athenians by Isocrates and others like him.

32 ἀναμνησθητι. See V 475 E.

494 A 2 φιλόσοφον—εἶναι. The theory of Ideas is not a democratic philosophy. With Plato's attitude here to οἱ πολλοὶ cf. Gorg. 474 A τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς οὐδὲ διαλέγομαι.

4 καὶ—δῆ. Cf. 490 C n.

494 B 8 ὁμολόγηται. See 486 C, 486 A, B: and cf. also 490 C.

παισὶν ὁ τοιοῦτος πρῶτος ἔσται ἐν ἅπασιν, ἄλλως τε καὶ ἐὰν τὸ 10 σῶμα φυῇ προσφερὴς τῇ ψυχῇ; Τί δ' οὐ μέλλει; ἔφη. Βουλῇσονται δὴ, οἶμαι, αὐτῷ χρῆσθαι, ἐπειδὰν πρεσβύτερος γίγνηται, ἐπὶ τὰ αὐτῶν πράγματα οἳ τε οἰκεῖοι καὶ οἱ πολῖται. Πῶς δ' οὐ;
C Ὑποκείσονται ἄρα δεόμενοι καὶ τιμῶντες, προκαταλαμβάνοντες καὶ προκολακεύοντες τὴν μέλλουσαν αὐτοῦ δύναμιν. Φιλεῖ γοῦν, 15 ἔφη, οὕτω γίγνεσθαι. Τί οὖν οἶει, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸν τοιοῦτον ἐν τοῖς τοιοῦτοις ποιήσῃν, ἄλλως τε καὶ ἐὰν τύχῃ μεγάλης πόλεως ὣν καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ πλούσιός τε καὶ γενναῖος, καὶ ἔτι εὐειδὴς καὶ μέγας; ἄρ' οὐ πληρωθήσεσθαι ἀμηχάνου ἐλπίδος, ἡγούμενον καὶ τὰ τῶν D Ἑλλήνων καὶ τὰ τῶν βαρβάρων ἱκανὸν ἔσεσθαι πράττειν, ἵ καὶ 20 ἐπὶ τούτοις ὑψηλὸν ἔξαρεῖν αὐτόν, σχηματισμοῦ καὶ φρονή-

10. παισὶν de Geer: πᾶσιν codd.

21. ἔξαρεῖν A²v: ἐξαιρεῖν A¹: ἐξάρειν ΠΞq.

10 παισίν. See cr. n. πᾶσιν is retained by Schneider, who takes it as masculine and ἅπασιν as neuter. Herwerden also approves of πᾶσιν: but εὐθὺς ἐν παισίν (which most of the editors adopt) gives the only correct antithesis to ἐπειδὰν πρεσβύτερος γίγνηται ('when he is growing older'). α and αι are easily interchanged in ninth century MSS: see Introd. § 5.

11 φυῇ. Herwerden proposes φύτῃ προσφερής, comparing Soph. Ajax 1077 κἄν σῶμα γεννήσῃ μέγα, but no change is necessary, as Herwerden himself allows. For προσφερής, some inferior MSS have προσφαιρής, an easier, but less elegant and idiomatic reading. Schneider also points out that if Plato had written προσφαιρής, he ought to have added αὐτοῦ with τὸ σῶμα.

14 ὑποκείσονται = 'they will lie prostrate at his feet' is the future perfect of ὑποπίπτω. ὑποπесοῦνται, which Herwerden conjectures, would be less expressive, and denote an act, or series of acts, instead of a never-wearying attitude of supplication and adoration. They so to speak besiege his soul with flatteries and prayers.

494 C 17 ἐὰν τύχῃ κτλ. It has long been admitted that this picture is drawn chiefly from Alcibiades. In antiquity Plutarch seems to have suspected something of the sort, for he describes Alcibiades' degeneration in language adapted from the present passage (Alc. 4. 1). But the personal touches must not blind us to the fact that Plato is portraying the type, although Alcibiades sits for the portrait.

18 πλούσιος—μέγας describe Alcibiades exactly: cf. Alc. I 104 A, B, Thuc. VI 16 1—3, Isocr. περὶ ζεύγους 25 ff., Plut. Alc. I. 4, 4. 1 and elsewhere. The Greeks thought tallness essential to beauty: see e.g. Arist. Eth. Nic. IV 7. 1123^b 7 and Pol. VII 4. 1326^a 33.

19 ἡγούμενον κτλ. Plutarch (Alc. 17. 2, 3) declares that Alcibiades intended the Sicilian expedition to be a step towards an almost universal empire: Sicily was to be merely the ἐφόδια τοῦ πολέμου. Alcibiades says nearly as much himself in Thuc. VI 90. 2, with which compare 15. 2. Grote (VII p. 79) is inclined to deny that even Alcibiades dreamt of anything beyond the conquest of Sicily, but the ancient historians thought differently: cf. also Alc. II 141 B ff. Many of the Athenians, probably not without reason (though Plutarch l.c. 35. 1 leaves the point unsettled), suspected him of aiming at a τυραννίς (Thuc. VI 15. 4 and Isocr. περὶ ζεύγους 38).

494 D 21 ἔξαρεῖν κτλ. See cr. n. ἔξαρεῖν appears also in several MSS besides v. The present, though retained by Schneider, is very difficult after πληρωθήσεσθαι. For the interchange of αι and α cf. Introd. § 5. Alcibiades' φρόνημα was notorious: see for example Alc. I 104 A, Thuc. V 43. 2, VI 16 ff., Plut. Alc. 34. 6 and the highly characteristic anecdote in 23. 8. Plato's words appear to embody ματος κενοῦ ἄνευ νοῦ ἐμπιμπλάμενον; Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Τῷ δὲ οὕτω διατιθεμένῳ ἴαν τις ἡρέμα προσελθὼν τάληθ' ἴαται, ὅτι νοῦς οὐκ ἔνεστιν αὐτῷ, δεῖται δέ, τὸ δὲ οὐ κτητὸν μὴ δουλεύσαντι τῇ 25 κτήσῃ αὐτοῦ, ἃρ' εὐπετέες οἶε εἶναι εἰσακοῦσαι διὰ τοσούτων κακῶν; Πολλοῦ γε δεῖ, ἢ δ' ὅς. 'Εὰν δ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, διὰ τὸ εὖ πεφυκέναι καὶ τὸ ξυγγενὲς τῶν λόγων εἰς αἰσθάνηται τέ¹ πη καὶ Ε κάμπτηται καὶ ἔλκεται πρὸς φιλοσοφίαν, τί οἴομεθα δράσειν ἐκείνους τοὺς ἡγουμένους ἀπολλύναι αὐτοῦ τὴν χρείαν τε καὶ 30 ἑταιρείαν; οὐ πᾶν μὲν ἔργον, πᾶν δ' ἔπος λέγοντάς τε καὶ πράττουτας, καὶ περὶ αὐτόν, ὅπως ἂν μὴ πεισθῇ, καὶ περὶ τὸν πείθοντα, an extract from some tragic poet (probably Euripides), as may be inferred both from the rhythm (σχηματισμοῦ—κενοῦ) and the language. ἄνευ νοῦ is declared by van Prinsterer, Cobet and others to be a gloss on κενοῦ. Possibly they are right; but (as Schneider remarks) ὅτι νοῦς οὐκ ἔνεστιν αὐτῷ is in favour of retaining the words, and they occur in all the MSS.

23 οὕτω διατιθεμένῳ: not "while he is in this frame of mind" (D. and V.), but 'when he is sinking into this condition.' ἴαν τις κτλ. As Socrates often did to Alcibiades: see VIII 560 D n. and Symp. 215 D ff. "The two conversations with Alcibiades are an example of this" (Thomas Gray).

24 τὸ δέ is not here the idiomatic τὸ δέ (as in IV 443 C), but 'hoc autem' i.e. νοῦς (Stallbaum).

27 τὸ ξυγγενὲς κτλ.: i.e. the affinity of what is said (with) his nature, "weil die Reden mit ihm verwandt sind" (Schneider). D. and V.'s translation "an inborn taste for philosophic inquiry" is wrong.

εἰς has often been doubted; but Schneider's explanation is certainly right, that τῷ οὕτω διατιθεμένῳ is the individual typifying a class, and that εἰς denotes one of the class. The idiom is analogous to the plural after a typical or generic singular: see on I 374 A. The emendations proposed (διαισθάνηται for εἰς αἰσθάνηται Stallbaum, εἰσαυθῖς Richter, εἰσω Madvig, εἰσακούων or εἰσακούσας Richards) are not only superfluous, but indefensible in themselves. Plato hardly expects more than one such person to pause at all on his downward career. Here again we naturally think of Alcibiades, whose interviews with Socrates (according to Symp. 215 D) profoundly impressed him for the moment, but failed to effect a permanent reform in the midst of so many temptations (ib. 216 B). Perhaps Socrates once hoped that Alcibiades would be his 'scientific ruler,' and bring back true prosperity to Athens. A tone of sorrow for the 'lost leader' seems to make itself felt in Plato's words.

494 E 29 τοὺς ἡγουμένους: i.e. οἱ ἡγούμενοι, whence the article, which Herwerden wrongly rejects. The voice should pause a little between ἐκείνους (which refers to 494 C) and τοὺς ἡγουμένους.

30 λέγοντάς τε κτλ. We should expect the future indicative, and on this ground the insertion of διατελεῖν has been proposed by Richards (Stephanus had previously desiderated διατελέσειν). So serious an alteration lacks every element of probability. Ast must be wrong in making λέγοντας etc. depend on οἴομεθα. If the text is sound, we should supply πάντα δράσειν or the like after οὐ, and regard the participles as agreeing with the subject of δράσειν. (Schneider and J. and C. take nearly the same view). δράσειν is of course easy to understand, but it is less easy to dispense with πάντα. Could Plato have written οὐ <πᾶν>, πᾶν μὲν ἔργον κτλ.? Cf. IX 575 E and πᾶν ποιεῖν in Ap. 39 A and Gorg. 479 C. I prefer the anacoluthon.

31 τὸν πείθοντα. Such was Socrates, and he was brought to trial. Plato may well have thought of his master when he wrote δημοσίᾳ εἰς ἀγῶνας καθιστάνας. The most fatal count in the charge against Socrates was that he corrupted the youth (Ap. 24 B), and Alcibiades was held to be a case in point (Xen. Mem. I 2. 12). Plato now turns the tables on the Athenian people. He says in effect 'It was you who corrupted Alcibiades: and you impeached Socrates for trying to save him.'

ὅπως ἂν μὴ οἷός τ' ᾖ, καὶ ἰδίᾳ ἐπιβουλευόντας καὶ δημοσίᾳ εἰς 495 ἀγῶνας καθιστάντας; | Πολλή, ἣ δ' ὅς, ἀνάγκη. "Ἔστιν οὖν ὅπως ὁ τοιοῦτος φιλοσοφήσει; Οὐ πάνυ.

IX. 'Ορᾷς οὖν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι οὐ κακῶς ἐλέγομεν, ὥς ἄρα καὶ αὐτὰ τὰ τῆς φιλοσόφου φύσεως μέρη, ὅταν ἐν κακῇ τροφῇ γένηται, αἴτια τρόπον τινὰ τοῦ ἐκπεσεῖν ἐκ τοῦ ἐπιτηδεύματος, καὶ τὰ 5 λεγόμενα ἀγαθία, πλοῦτοί τε καὶ πᾶσα ἡ τοιαύτη παρασκευή; Οὐ γάρ, ἀλλ' ὀρθῶς, ἔφη, ἐλέχθη. Οὗτος δὴ, εἰπον, ὦ θαυμάσιε, B ὄλεθρός τε καὶ διαφθορά τοσαύτη τε καὶ τοιαύτη τῆς βελτίστης φύσεως εἰς τὸ ἄριστον ἐπιτήδευμα, ὀλίγης καὶ ἄλλως γιγνομένης, ὥς ἡμεῖς φαμέν. καὶ ἐκ τούτων δὴ τῶν ἀνδρῶν καὶ οἱ τὰ μέγιστα 10 κακὰ ἐργαζόμενοι τὰς πόλεις γίγνονται καὶ τοὺς ἰδιώτας, καὶ οἱ τὰγαθία, οἳ ἂν ταύτη τύχῃσι ῥυέντες· σμικρὰ δὲ φύσις οὐδὲν μέγα οὐδέποτε οὐδένα οὔτε ἰδιώτην οὔτε πόλιν δρᾷ. Ἀληθέστατα, ἣ δ' C ὅς. Οὗτοι μὲν δὴ οὕτως ἐκπίπτοντες, οἷς μάλιστα προσήκει, ἔρημον καὶ ἀτελῆ φιλοσοφίαν λείποντες αὐτοὶ τε βίον οὐ προσή- 15 κοντα οὐδ' ἀληθῆ ζῶσιν, τὴν δὲ ὥσπερ ὀρφανὴν ξυγγενῶν ἄλλοι ἐπείσελθόντες ἀνάξιοι ἥσυχυνάν τε καὶ ὀνειδῆ περιήψαν, οἷα καὶ σὺ φῆς ὀνειδίζειν τοὺς ὀνειδίζοντας, ὥς οἱ ξυνόντες αὐτῇ οἱ μὲν οὐδενός, οἱ δὲ πολλοὶ πολλῶν κακῶν ἄξιοι εἰσιν. Καὶ γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη, τά γε

3. ὀρᾷς II: ἄρα A.

495 A 3 ἐλέγομεν. 491 B ff.

495 B 9 εἰς should be taken with δέσθρος and διαφθορά, as Schneider points out. They are spoiled 'with reference to' or 'for' the best of all vocations. Jowett wrongly connects εἰς with βελτίστης.

10 φαμέν. 491 A, B.
 ἐκ τούτων κτλ. Corruptio optimi pessima.

οἱ—ἐργαζόμενοι was true of Alcibiades:
 see Grote VIII p. 116 and Lysias In Alc.
 I 16, 30, 35 ff. Isocrates' attempt in his περὶ ζεύγους to make out that Alcibiades was a benefactor to his city is a futile and fantastic performance.

12 ῥυέντες κτλ. With the metaphor cf. 485 D. For σμικρὰ—δρᾷ see 419 E n.

495 B—496 A Abandoned by her rightful lovers, Philosophy, alone and desolate, is forced into a shameful alliance with base pretenders. The offspring of this unhallowed union is a bastard brood of sophisms.

495 C 14 προσήκει: sc. φιλοσοφία:

"nam philosophia cum virgine ἐπικλήρω comparatur, qualem in matrimonium du-cere proximis cognatis aut permissum aut iniunctum fuit" (Stallbaum). See Meier
 u. Schömann Att. Proc. pp. 614—617.

15 ἀτελῆ κτλ. ἀτελῆ is said with reference to the rites of marriage: cf.
 Philostrate. Vit. Apoll. IV 45 ἐπ' ἀτελεῖ γάμῳ and Soph. Ant. 1240 f. τὰ νυμφικὰ | τέλη λαχὼν δέλαιος ἐν γ' "Αἰδον δόμοις.
 With τε followed by δέ cf. x 611 D and other examples quoted by Hoefel de part.
Pl. p. 16.

16 ἀληθῆς is like ἀληθῶς ζῶν in 490 B, a passage where the same kind of imagery is employed.

17 ἥσυχυνάν τε κτλ. Is the aorist gnostic or past? It is usually taken as gnostic, but Plato may be thinking of his own times, in which Philosophy had come to shame, because the unworthy had defiled her.

σὺ φῆς. Cf. 489 D and 487 C, D.

20 λεγόμενα ταῦτα. Εἰκότως γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λεγόμενα. καθορώντες γὰρ ἄλλοι ἀνθρώπισκοι κενὴν τὴν χώραν ταύτην γιγνομένην, καλῶν δὲ ὀνομάτων καὶ προσχημάτων¹ μεστήν, ὥσπερ οἱ ἐκ τῶν εἰργμῶν D εἰς τὰ ἱερὰ ἀποδιδράσκοντες, ἄσμενοι καὶ οὔτοι ἐκ τῶν τεχνῶν ἐκπηδῶσιν εἰς τὴν φιλοσοφίαν, οἱ ἂν κομψότατοι ὄντες τυγχάνωσι 25 περὶ τὸ αὐτῶν τεχνίου. ὅμως γὰρ δὴ πρὸς γε τὰς ἄλλας τέχνας καίπερ οὕτω πραττούσης φιλοσοφίας τὸ ἀξίωμα μεγαλοπρεπέσ| τερον λείπεται, οὐ δὲ ἐφίεμενοι πολλοί, ἀτελεῖς μὲν τὰς φύσεις,
 | ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν τεχνῶν τε καὶ δημιουργιῶν ὥσπερ τὰ σώματα λελώβηνται, οὕτω καὶ τὰς¹ ψυχὰς ξυγκεκλασμένοι τε καὶ ἀποτεθρυμ- E 30 μένοι διὰ τὰς βαναυσίας τυγχάνουσιν· ἢ οὐκ ἀνάγκη; Καὶ

495 D 23 ἐκ τῶν τεχνῶν κτλ. It has been supposed that Plato has in view Antisthenes and the Cynic Diogenes, the latter of whom apparently started life as a moneychanger (D. L. VI 20). But the description which follows applies to sophists and sophistical rhetoricians rather than to the Cynic philosophers. The poet Gray says "this seems to be aimed at Protagoras, who was an ordinary countryman and a woodcutter" (see Gellius Noct. Att. v 3 and other authorities cited by Frei Quaest. Prot. pp. 6 ff.). Hermann (Gesch. u. Syst. p. 628) cites Euthydemus and Dionysodorus as cases in point (cf. 496 A n.). Each of these sophists had formerly taught the art of fighting in full armour (Euthyd. 271 C—272 B, 273 E). As speech-writing and rhetoric generally were counted among the arts, we may think also of Isocrates, who loved above everything to call himself a φιλόσοφος (Antid. 271 ff.). But although these and other examples may be quoted in illustration of what Plato here says, the tone of the whole passage shews that Plato is describing a familiar phenomenon of his own times, when clever and ambitious young men were in the habit of forsaking their handicrafts and devoting themselves to 'culture.' Cf. Prot. 318 E τὰς γὰρ τέχνας αὐτοῖς πεφηνγότας ἄκοντας πάλιν αὖ ἄγοντες ἐμβάλλουσιν εἰς τέχνας (sc. Hippias etc.), λογισμούς τε καὶ ἀστρονομίαν καὶ γεωμετρίαν καὶ μουσικὴν διδάσκοντες, and my article in Cl. Rev. xv p. 220.

27. ἐφίεμενοι κτλ. is an anacoluthon. The natural flow of the sentence is interrupted by the question ἢ οὐκ ἀνάγκη; which is intended to obtain Adeimantus' assent to τὰς ψυχὰς—τυγχάνουσιν. On resuming, Plato interposes a comparison, and to this the general idea which forms the logical predicate to πολλοί is accommodated in ποῖ' ἄττα—φαῦλα. The sentence was thus understood by the editor of g; for τυγχάνουσιν, which seems a difficulty on this theory, is in g τυγχάνοντες. But τυγχάνοντες would be extremely inelegant; and Plato writes τυγχάνουσιν to correspond to λελώβηνται. Even in other cases a finite verb sometimes replaces a participle in the second of two contrasted clauses, e.g. Ap. 21 E. J. and C. explain the passage in nearly the same way, as well as (apparently) Schneider and Stallbaum. It is impossible for many reasons to connect τυγχάνουσιν with ἐφίεμενοι and so escape the anacoluthon. I formerly suspected the text, and proposed <ἀπο>τυγχάνουσιν ('miss the mark,' i.e. fail to win the distinction which they covet). Another solution might be to place the troublesome τυγχάνουσιν after πολλοί. But neither change is in any degree probable; and it is better to acquiesce in the reading of the MSS. Plato's anacolutha are a device for imparting life and reality to his dialogues. A careful translation should preserve them all.

495 E 29 ἀποτεθρυμμένοι: lit. 'broken off' i.e. 'truncated,' 'maimed.' The word is rare, and apparently used only here by Plato. Schneider thus explains the preposition: "quorum animis quasi arboribus cacumina defracta et vires ad entendum necessariae debilitatae sunt." A comparison of Theaet. 173 A πολλά κάμπτονται καὶ συγκλῶνται and Prot. 325 D ὥσπερ ξύλον διαστρεφόμενον καὶ καμπτόμενον εὐθύνοσι ἀπειλαῖς καὶ τυν κτλ = broken shins to gait, or, much.

screen, pretext, ornament.

μάλα, ἔφη. Δοκεῖς οὖν τι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, διαφέρειν αὐτοὺς ἰδεῖν ἀργύριον κτησαμένου χαλκέως φαλακροῦ καὶ σμικροῦ, νεωστὶ μὲν ἐκ δεσμῶν λελυμένου, ἐν βαλανείῳ δὲ λελουμένου, νεουργὸν ἱμάτιον ἔχοντος, ὡς νυμφίου παρεσκευασμένου, διὰ πενίαν καὶ ἐρημίαν τοῦ 496 δεσπότητος τὴν θυγατέρα μέλλοντος γαμεῖν; Οὐ | πάννυ, ἔφη, 35 διαφέρει. Ποῖ' ἅττα οὖν εἰκὸς γεννᾶν τοὺς τοιούτους; οὐ νόθα καὶ φαῦλα; Πολλὴ ἀνάγκη. Τί δέ; τοὺς ἀναξίους παιδεύσεως, πληγὰς makes it not unlikely that the metaphor is as Schneider supposes. On the vox nihili ἀποτεθρυνώμενοι (in the margin of Flor. A) see Ruhnken on Timaeus Lex. s.v. Timaeus seems to have found it in his text of the Republic.

30 διὰ τὰς βανανυσίας. Cf. Xen. Oec. 4. 2 αἱ γε βανανυσικαὶ καλοῦμεναι (sc. τέχναι)—καταλυμαίνονται—τὰ σώματα τῶν τε ἐργαζομένων καὶ τῶν ἐπιμελομένων, ἀναγκάζουσαι καθῆσθαι καὶ σκιατραφεῖσθαι, ἐνίαι δὲ καὶ πρὸς πῦρ ἡμερεύειν. τῶν δὲ σμμάτων θηλυνομένων καὶ αἱ ψυχαὶ πολὺ ἀρρωστότεραι γίνονται. It is probable that βανανυσία was "primarily a military conception, dependent for its origin on the obvious fact that certain modes of life and the exercise of certain trades disqualify from prowess in the field" (Greenidge Gk. Const. History p. 22, quoting in support Hdt. II 165—167). "Sedentary and within-door arts," says Bacon (quoted by Newman Politics of Aristotle I p. 105), "have in their nature a contrariety to a military disposition." In practice the term is freely applied by the writers of the best period to every kind of mechanical or illiberal labour or pursuit. Aristotle defines βανανυσία in these words: βάνανυσον δ' ἔργον εἶναι δεῖ τοῦτο νομίζειν καὶ τέχνην ταύτην καὶ μάθησιν, ὅσαι πρὸς τὰς χρήσεις καὶ τὰς πράξεις τὰς τῆς ἀρετῆς ἀχρηστον ἀπεργάζονται τὸ σῶμα τῶν ἐλευθέρων ἢ τὴν ψυχὴν ἢ τὴν διάνοιαν (Pol. Θ 2. 1337^b 8 ff.). See also Whibley Gk. Olig. pp. 42 ff. and Newman l.c. pp. 104—115. The ancients mostly derived the word from βαθνός 'a furnace' and αἰώ, "quasi βάνανυσος qui caminum accendit" (Stephanus-Hase Theor. s.v.). In view of the Boeotian βανά=γυνή and βανήκας γυναικας Cl. Rev. VII p. 112 that βάνανυσος, which does not look like an Attic word, may be connected with βανά. If so, the word perhaps originally meant 'effeminate'

'unmanly': cf. θηλυνομένων in the extract quoted from Xenophon. In any case, however, the ancient etymology can hardly be right.

31 δοκεῖς οὖν τι κτλ. In the 'little bald tinker' several critics have recognised Isocrates: see for example Teichmüller Lit. Fehd. I p. 105 and Jackson's article on the Sophists in the Enc. Brit. ἐκ δεσμῶν λελυμένου—ἐν βαλανείῳ δὲ λελουμένου is an admirable example of rhetorical παρομοίωσις, and satirises the tricks of style for which Isocrates was notorious. But all the sophistical rhetoricians of the school of Gorgias affected meretricious ornaments of this kind (see Hug on Symp. 194 E ff. and especially Cope's Rhetoric of Aristotle III pp. 105, 106), and Plato's shafts are not levelled at Isocrates alone. As usual, he individualises the type, and if the resultant picture resembles Isocrates, so much the worse for him. Plato would not be sorry (cf. Euthyd. 305^{ff.}, with Spengel's Isokr. u. Pl. pp. 36—40), and doubtless intended his readers to think of Isocrates, as they certainly would. See also on 498 E.

32 ἀργύριον κτλ. Cf. Cratin. Seriph. 2 Meineke ἀνδρῶν νεοπλουτοπονήρων | αἰσχυρῶν.

φαλακροῦ καὶ σμικροῦ. Was Isocrates bald and short? The bust of him in the Villa Albani is not bald, and it would be pressing the personality to the verge of absurdity to take these words so seriously. The poverty (πενίαν etc.) and loneliness is of course the daughter's (cf. 495 C ἐρημον καὶ ἀτελῆ φιλοσοφίαν λείποντες), not her father's, as D. and V. suppose. In other words τοῦ δεσπότητος belongs only to τὴν θυγατέρα.

496 A 2 διαφέρει. See on 484 D. Herwerden ejects the word, quite needlessly, as usual.

ὅταν αὐτῇ πλησιάζοντες ὁμιλῶσι μὴ κατ' ἀξίαν, ποῖ' ἅττα φῶμεν 5 γεννᾶν διανοήματά τε καὶ δόξας; ἄρ' οὐχ ὡς ἀληθῶς προσήκοντα ἀκοῦσαι σοφίσματα καὶ οὐδὲν γνήσιον οὐδὲ φρονήσεως ἀληθινῆς ἐχόμενον; Παντελῶς μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

Χ. Πάνσμικρον δὴ τι, ἔφην ἐγώ, ὦ Ἀδείμαντε, λείπεται τῶν κατ' ἀξίαν ὁμιλούντων φιλοσοφία, ἣ που ὑπὸ φυγῆς καταληφθὲν Β 10 γενναῖον καὶ εὖ τεθραμμένον ἦθος, ἀπορία τῶν διαφθερούντων κατὰ φύσιν μείναν ἐπ' αὐτῇ, ἣ ἐν σμικρᾷ πόλει ὅταν μεγάλη ψυχὴ φυῇ

6. φρονήσεως Ast: φρονήσεως ἄξιον AΞg: φρονήσεως ἄξιον ὡς Π.

8. ἔφην Π: ἔφη ἦν δ' Α.

4 ποῖ' ἅττα—δόξας. Cf. Symp. 210 D πολλοὺς καὶ καλοὺς λόγους καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τίκτει καὶ διανοήματα ἐν φιλοσοφίᾳ ἀφθόνῳ. τίκτειν ὁ γεννᾶν ἐν is the usual expression for begetting on or out of: cf.
τὸκος ἐν καλῷ Symp. 206 B.

5 προσήκοντα κτλ.: 'deserving to be called sophisms.' The fallacies in the Euthydemus are cases in point: cf.
495 D n. With φρονήσεως ἀληθινῆς ἐχό-μενον cf. Euthyd. 306 D. ἄξιον, which occurs in A after φρονήσεως, is probably, as Cobet supposed, a marginal note directing attention to this vigorous and highly elaborated passage: cf. 504 E n. and see the curious description by Diogenes Laertius (III 65 f.) of the different σημεία by which it was customary to draw attention to noteworthy or difficult places in the text of Plato. Schneider and Jowett can hardly be right in retaining the word.
Stephanus' conjecture οὐδὲ ἄξιον οὐδὲ φρονήσεως ἀληθινῆς is awkward and not likely to be correct. Campbell neatly conjectures ἀξίως, but Cobet's solution, which Ast foreshadowed, is more probable.

496 A—497 A The few who, from various reasons, remain faithful to philosophy, withdraw from political life. By so doing, they keep themselves unspotted from the world—no mean achievement, yet not the greatest. If they meet with a commonwealth appropriate to them, they will themselves attain a larger growth, as well as prove the saviours of their country.

496 B g ὑπὸ φυγῆς καταληφθὲν:
'arrested by exile,' so as not ἐκπεσεῖν ἐκ τοῦ ἐπιτηδεύματος (495 A): cf. κατασχέιν below. Stallbaum's explanation 'overtaken by exile,' which D. and V. apparently accept, is in my judgment wrong. The reading καταληφθὲν (g and several other MSS, followed by Ast and one or two other scholars) is less expressive and picturesque, though it gives a fair sense if interpreted as καταλειφθὲν τῇ φιλοσοφίᾳ. Van Heusde's conjecture ἀπὸ φυγῆς καταλειφθὲν would (as Schneider observes) mean 'those who survived after exile' and is wholly inadmissible, as well as ἀπὸ φυγῆς καταληφθὲν (‘debarred from exile’), which Herwerden proposes, inserting also ἦ after ἦθος. Has Plato any special instances in view?

Steinhart (Einleitung p. 208) thinks of Anaxagoras, and even of Plato himself.
But it cannot be said that either of them was saved by exile from deserting Philosophy, and Plato was hardly exiled, even metaphorically speaking. Krohn (Pl. St.
pp. 117, 384) declares for Xenophon. It is however more than doubtful, even after Boeckh's attempt to overthrow the tradition about unfriendliness between Xenophon and Plato (De similitudine quam Pl. c. Xen. exercuisse fertur 1811), whether Plato would have gone out of his way to pay a compliment to his fellow-disciple.
Can Plato be thinking of his friend Dio?
If so, this passage must have been written in or after 367 B.C., the year of Dio's banishment from Syracuse. A personal reference is easily combined with the description of a class, and a tribute to Dio would be very pleasing here. I have lately found the same conjecture in Thomas Gray's notes on the Republic.
See also Introd. § 4 and (for Plato's connexion with Dio) Grote x pp. 332 ff.
See also 499 B n.

11 ὅταν κτλ. There is no reason to suppose (with e.g. Steinhart Einleitung
p. 208) that Plato means Euclides of Megara. Heraclitus is a good instance, although Ephesus was hardly a σμικρὰ πόλις.

καὶ ἀτιμίσασα τὰ τῆς πόλεως ὑπερίδῃ· βραχὺ δὲ πού τι καὶ ἀπ' ἄλλης τέχνης δικαίως ἀτιμίσαν εὐφυνὲς ἐπ' αὐτὴν ἂν ἔλθοι. εἴη δ' ἂν καὶ ὁ τοῦ ἡμετέρου ἐταίρου Θεάγους χαλινὸς οἷος κατασχεῖν.

C καὶ γὰρ Θεάγει τὰ μὲν ἄλλα πάντα παρεσκεύασται πρὸς τὸ ¹ ἐκ- 15 πεσεῖν φιλοσοφίας, ἡ δὲ τοῦ σώματος νοσοτροφία ἀπείργουσα αὐτὸν τῶν πολιτικῶν κατέχει. τὸ δ' ἡμέτερον οὐκ ἄξιον λέγειν, τὸ δαιμόνιον σημεῖον· ἡ γὰρ πού τινι ἄλλῳ ἢ οὐδενὶ τῶν ἔμπροσθεν γέγονεν. καὶ τούτων δὴ τῶν ὀλίγων οἱ γενόμενοι καὶ γευσάμενοι ὥς ἡδὺ καὶ μακάριον τὸ κτῆμα, καὶ τῶν πολλῶν αὐτὸ ἱκανῶς ἰδόντες 20 τὴν μανίαν, καὶ ὅτι οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν περὶ τὰ τῶν D πόλεων πράττει, οὐδ' ἔστι ξύμμαχος, μεθ' ὅτου τις ἰὼν ἐπὶ ¹ τὴν τῷ δικαίῳ βοήθειαν σφάζοιτ' ἂν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ εἰς θηρία ἄνθρωπος

13. ἂν ἔλθοι II: ἀνέλθοι A.

12 βραχὺ δὲ πού τι κτλ. Some have thought of Phaedo of Elis, and Simon the Athenian, both of whom were members of the Socratic circle (Steinhart l.c. p. 208). The latter (whose very existence has been denied by some recent critics, but—as Hirzel Der Dialog pp. 102 ff. shews—on wholly inadequate grounds) was once a shoemaker (D. L. II 122). We may also in some respects compare the architect-philosopher Hippodamus of Miletus: see Susemihl and Hicks' Politics of Aristotle I pp. 331—334. Zeller¹ II 1, p. 52 n. 1 thinks Plato may have had Socrates himself in view, but the δαιμόνιον σημείον accounts for him.

14 Θεάγους. Cf. Ap. 33 E, where it is implied that Theages died before Socrates. The tribute which Plato pays to his memory is all the more touching because Greek literature too seldom recognises that physical weakness may be combined with mental and moral strength: see III 406 C n. Plutarch (de tuenda san. praesepia 126 C, quoted by Stallbaum) remarks καὶ γὰρ φιλοσοφεῖν ἀρρωστία πολλοὺς παρέχουσι—a reminiscence, perhaps, of Plato.

496 C 18 τὸ δαιμόνιον σημείον. Socrates regarded his divine sign as a special if not unique revelation from God, without submitting it to further analysis. As here, so in Ap. 31 D, it is this which forbids him to enter on political life (τοῦτ' ἔστιν ὅ μοι ἐναντιοῦται τὰ πολιτικά πράττειν). What the phenomenon really was, is a question which different writers have answered differently, according to their different points of view: see Zeller¹ II 1 pp. 75—91. The subject is treated with great fulness in Ribbing's Socrat. Stud. II pp. 1 ff. and in Riddell's edition of the Apology pp. 109—117. τῶν ἔμπροσθεν γέγονε does not deny that such a sign may be vouchsafed to others in the future. Schneider conjectures that Plato added this limitation with a view to himself—an unlikely supposition, although no doubt the present passage is in some measure intended as a defence of Plato's abstention from political life: cf. 496 D n.

ἡ γὰρ πού τι κτλ. Cobet and Herwerden reject ἄλλῳ, because ἡ τις ἢ οὐδεὶς is the regular phrase: cf. Ap. 17 B and Hdt. III 140. But the separation of ἡ from τινι makes ἄλλῳ desirable to help out the meaning of τινι, and to ἄλλῳ in itself there cannot possibly be any objection.

19 τούτων—γενόμενοι: 'those who have become members of this small band.' J. and C. quote an exact parallel from Thuc. III 56. 6 ὧν ἡμεῖς γενόμενοι: cf. also supra II 360 A, Phaed. 69 D, Parm. 127 D (τὸν τῶν τριάκοντα γενόμενον) and Laws 754 D. γενόμενοι is found in some inferior MSS, and was accepted till Schneider, who restored the true reading. Liebhold absurdly conjectures ἐλόμενοι.

21 ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν. See on I 341 B.

496 D 23 τῷ δικαίῳ was restored by Schneider instead of τῶν δικαίων, on the sole authority of Vind. F. It has ἐμπροσθὸν οὔτε ξυναδικεῖν ἐθέλων οὔτε ἱκανὸς ἂν εἰς πᾶσιν ἀγρίοις 25 ἀντέχειν, πρὶν τι τὴν πόλιν ἢ φίλους ὀνῆσαι, προαπολόμενος ἀνωφελὲς αὐτῷ τε καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἂν γένοιτο, ταῦτα πάντα λογισμῷ λαβὼν ἡσυχίαν ἔχων καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ πράττων, οἷον ἐν χειμῶνι κοινορ-τοῦ καὶ ζάλης ὑπὸ πνεύματος φερομένου ὑπὸ τειχίῳ ἀποστάς, 30 καθαρὸς ἀδικίας τε¹ καὶ ἀνοσίῳ ἐργῶν τὸν τε ἐνθάδε βίον βιώσεται E καὶ τὴν ἀπαλλαγὴν αὐτοῦ μετὰ καλῆς ἐλπίδος ἰλεῶς τε καὶ εὐμενῆς ἀπαλλίξεται. Ἀλλὰ τοι, ἡ δ' ὅς, οὐ τὰ ἐλάχιστα ἂν | διαπραξά- 49

 μενος ἀπαλλάττοιο. Οὐδέ γε, εἶπον, τὰ μέγιστα, μὴ τυχόν

since been found that τῷ δικαίῳ is actually the reading of A. ἡ τῶν δικαίων βοήθεια would mean something quite different, as Schneider shews; viz. "auxilium vel a iustis vel rebus in iustis, vel contra iustos seu iusta latum vel ferendum." With the general sentiment cf. Alc. 31 E—32 A, a passage which proves—if proof were needed—that Liebholt's extraordinary proposal to read σπονδάσοι for σφάζοι is untenable.

εἰς θηρία ἄνθρωπος κτλ. Herwerden would read ἀνθρώπους 'among men who are as beasts.' But the point is that the philosopher in existing commonwealths is like a lonely human being in the midst of wild beasts. Cf. Timon of Athens IV 3 "The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts." The comparison may have been suggested to Plato by Pherecrates' Ἀγριοί, to which he alludes in Prot. 327 D. In Pherecrates' play the Ἀγριοί were savages, to whom apparently some Athenians betook themselves, in the hope of finding more happiness than they enjoyed in Athens: see Kock's Com. Graec. Fr. I pp. 146—150. Plato points out that there are savages enough at home. In πᾶσιν ἀγρίοις the emphasis is on πᾶσιν: we should translate 'to hold out alone where all are savages.' Cf. ὑπὸ πάντων πολεμίων IX 579 B. Herwerden weakens the effect by adding ὅσων after ἀγρίοις.

27 λαβὼν: singular, in spite of γενόμενοι in 496 C. Cf. I 347 A n.

οἷον ἐν χειμῶνι κτλ. Jowett construes χειμῶνι with κοινορτοῦ; but χειμῶν κοινορτοῦ for 'a storm of dust' is scarcely a Greek idiom. κοινορτοῦ—φερομένου is of course a descriptive genitive absolute.

In this way Schneider also took the passage. ζάλη is 'tempestuous rain' μετὰ ὄμβρου πνοῆς, as Hesychius explains. χαλάζης was once conjectured by Ast, but he afterwards rightly withdrew the suggestion. Herwerden proposes οἷον ἐν ζάλῃ κοινορτοῦ ὑπὸ κτλ., and Richards ἐν χειμῶνι καὶ κοινορτοῦ ζάλη (or ζάλη κοινορτοῦ). Neither proposal is supported by any of the ancient citations, except that of Themistius (Or. VIII p. 104 C) whose reproduction of this passage is in other respects, as in this, extremely inaccurate: see Schneider's note. And ζάλη κοινορτοῦ is, to say the least, a questionable phrase. It is not well to mar the wonderful force and beauty of writing such as this by tasteless and inept conjectures. The passage has often been compared with Lucretius' "Suave mari magno," but the difference is greater than the resemblance. The Platonic philosopher is content (ἀγαπᾷ), if he can keep his own soul pure, because he cannot, as things now are, save both himself and others. But it is no pleasure for him to see "quibus ipse malis careat," for he would fain help others if they would but let him. That they will not is a misfortune, not for others only, but for him (αὐτὸς τε μᾶλλον αὐξήσεται κτλ.). We seem to catch in Plato's words a certain tone of sorrow, as if he had not himself attained the highest of which he was capable, because he could not find a philosophic city in which to dwell: see Morgenstern De Plat. rep. p. 161, where reference is made to Alc. 31 E and to the Platonic Epistles V 322 A, B, VII 324 B—326 B, 330 C—331 D: cf. also Gorg. 515 A—522 E, and Susemihl Gen. Entw. II p. 190.

πολιτείας προσηκούσης· ἐν γὰρ προσηκούσῃ αὐτὸς τε μᾶλλον αὐξήσεται καὶ μετὰ τῶν ιδίων τὰ κοινὰ σώσει.

XI. Τὸ μὲν οὖν τῆς φιλοσοφίας ὧν ἕνεκα διαβολὴν εἴληφεν, 5 καὶ ὅτι οὐ δικαίως, ἐμοὶ μὲν δοκεῖ μετρίως εἰρῆσθαι, εἰ μὴ ἔτ' ἄλλο λέγεις τι σύ. Ἄλλ' οὐδέν, ἢ δ' ὅς, ἔτι λέγω περὶ τούτου· ἀλλὰ τὴν προσήκουσαν αὐτῇ τίνα τῶν νῦν λέγεις πολιτειῶν; Οὐδ' B ἡντινοῦν, εἶπον, ἀλλὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἐπαιτιῶμαι, μηδεμίαν ἀξίαν εἶναι τῶν νῦν κατάστασιν πόλεως φιλοσόφου φύσεως· διὸ καὶ στρέφε- 10 σθαί τε καὶ ἀλλοιοῦσθαι αὐτήν· ὥσπερ ξενικὸν σπέρμα ἐν γῇ ἄλλῃ σπειρόμενον ἐξίτηλον εἰς τὸ ἐπιχώριον φιλεῖ κρατούμενον ἵεναι, οὕτω καὶ τοῦτο τὸ γένος νῦν μὲν οὐκ ἴσχειν τὴν αὐτοῦ δύναμιν, ἀλλ' εἰς ἀλλότριον ἦθος ἐκπίπτειν· εἰ δὲ λήψεται τὴν ἀρίστην C πολιτείαν, ὥσπερ καὶ αὐτὸ ἀριστόν ἐστιν, τότε δηλώσει, ὅτι τοῦτο 15 μὲν τῷ ὄντι θεῖον ἦν, τὰ δὲ ἄλλα ἀνθρώπινα, τὰ τε τῶν φυσεων καὶ τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων. δῆλος δὴ οὖν εἰ ὅτι μετὰ τοῦτο ἐρήσει τίς αὕτη ἡ πολιτεία. Οὐκ ἔγνωσ, ἔφη· οὐ γὰρ τοῦτο ἔμελλον, ἀλλ' εἰ αὕτη, ἣν ἡμεῖς διεληλύθαμεν οἰκίζοντες τὴν πόλιν, ἢ ἄλλῃ. Τὰ μὲν ἄλλα, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, αὕτη· τοῦτο δὲ αὐτὸ ἐρρήθη μὲν καὶ τότε, ὅτι 20

497 A 3 προσηκούσης. The only city suited to the philosophic nature is Plato's: cf. IX 592 A.

497 A—498 C Our justification of Philosophy is now complete. It remains to ask—Where is the political constitution adapted to the philosophic nature? Where, in other words, is the best polity? In the city which we have founded, except that the position of the Rulers requires to be more fully explained. A State, which is to handle Philosophy without danger, must assume a new attitude towards the subject. Philosophy should receive more, instead of less attention, as a man grows older.

497 B 10 κατάστασιν πόλεως is treated as a single noun: cf. πόλεως διοίκησις in Prot. 319 D and Pol. 296 E.

II ὥσπερ—ἐκπίπτειν explains and amplifies στρέφειν τε καὶ ἀλλοιοῦσθαι. Asyndeton is regular in such cases, and Stephanus ought not to have proposed the insertion of καὶ before ὥσπερ: cf. IV 432 D, VIII 557 C and Prot. 311 E, where more illustrations are cited in my note. Stallbaum's punctuation is here, I think, preferable to that of Schneider, who prints only a comma before ὥσπερ.

A. P. II.

12 εἰς τὸ ἐπιχώριον: as though 'a foreign geranium, allowed to run wild in England' were to 'degenerate into one of the English wild geraniums.' The illustration is due to Bosanquet. Plato's botanical error, such as it is, does not affect the argument.

14 ἦθος is read by II as well as A. The majority of MSS read εἶδος, which was accepted till Schneider restored the better and more authoritative reading.

497 C 15 δηλώσει='experience will shew' is idiomatic. See Blaydes on Ar. Frogs 1261.

16 ἦν. The past does not exclude the present: cf. IV 436 C n.

17 τίς—πολιτεία: i.e. what the best constitution is. Adimantus was about to ask whether the ἀρίστη πολιτεία is not the one which they have described. The reply is yes, provided that the position and status of the Rulers is made clearer. As it stands it is not the best: cf. VIII 543 E καλλίω ἔτι ἔχω (imperfect participle) εἰπεῖν πόλιν τε καὶ ἄνδρα (the Philosopher's City and the Philosopher), where see note.

20 ὅτι δεῖσοι κτλ.: 'that there would always have to be present in the city a

δεήσοι τι αὐτὸν ἐνεῖναι ἐν τῇ πόλει λόγον ἔχον τῆς πολιτείας τὸν αὐτόν, ὅνπερ καὶ σύ, ὁ νομοθέτης, ἔχων τοὺς νόμους ἐτίθεις. Ἐρρήθη γάρ, ἔφη. Ἄλλ' οὐχ ἰκανῶς, εἶπον, ἐδηλώθη, φόβῳ ὧν ὑμεῖς ἀντιλαμβάνόμενοι δεδηλώκατε μακρὰν καὶ χαλεπὴν αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀπόδειξιν· ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸ λοιπὸν οὐ πάντως ῥᾶστον διελθεῖν. Τὸ ποῖον; Τίνα τρόπον μεταχειριζομένη πόλις φιλοσοφίαν οὐ διολεῖται. τὰ γὰρ δὴ μεγάλα πάντα ἐπισφαλῆ, καὶ τὸ λεγόμενον τὰ καλὰ τῷ ὄντι χαλεπά. Ἄλλ' ὅμως, ἔφη, λαβέτω τέλος ἡ ἀπόδειξις τούτου φανεροῦ γενομένου. Οὐ τὸ μὴ βούλεσθαι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀλλ' εἴπερ, τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι διακωλύσει· παρὼν δὲ τὴν γ' ἐμὴν προθυμίαν εἴσει. σκόπει δὲ καὶ νῦν, ὡς προθύμως καὶ παρακινδυνευτικῶς μέλλω λέγειν, ὅτι τοῦναντίον ἢ νῦν δεῖ τοῦ ἐπιτηδεύματος τούτου πόλιν ἵπτεσθαι. Πῶς; Νῦν μὲν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οἱ καὶ ἀπτόμενοι μερικάκια ὄντα ἄρτι | ἐκ παίδων τὸ μεταξὺ οἰκονομίας certain factor possessed of a reasoned theory of the constitution, identical with that possessed by you, the legislator, when you made the laws.' The rulers must understand the constitution and not merely accept it on the legislator's authority, if the spirit of the original legislator is to survive his death. ὁρθὴ δόξα is not enough; in order to fill the place of the founder of the city they require ἐπιστήμη. Plato confesses that he did not make this clear enough before (οὐχ ἰκανῶς ἐδηλώθη), and his confession is most true. In one passage (IV 429 C II.), indeed, he seems expressly to imply that the Rulers do not fill the legislator's shoes. But there are also some hints or traces of the later view: see on III 414 A, IV 423 E (to which, perhaps, ἐρρήθη is intended to refer, although the reference is hardly justified), and 442 C. Cf. 502 D, 503 A, 504 D III.

21. ἐνεῖναι Ξ γ: ἐν εἶναι A: ἐν εἶναι (sic) II.

497 D 23 ὧν κτλ.: i.e. ἐκείνων ὧν κτλ. The literal translation is 'through dread of the topics to which cleaving you have shewn that the demonstration thereof is long and difficult.' (So also Schneider.) ἀντιλαμβάνόμενοι (the opposite of ἀφίεσθαι as used in V 449 B and infra 504 E) refers to Adimantus' and the others' resolute determination not to let Socrates slur over the questions relating to women and children (V 449 B ff.) and to the possibility of realising the perfect city (471 C ff.). Cf. infra 505 A. φόβῳ is explained by V 450 C ff., 457 C, 473 E. J. and C. take ὧν as "ἐκείνων αἰ (cognate accusative)," understanding ἀντιλαμβάνόμενοι as 'objecting to' or 'attacking,' but no objections were made by Glauco and Adimantus. They merely asked for further explanation, and were in fact favourably disposed rather than otherwise (V 450 D, 451 B). Herwerden's conjecture ὡς for ὧν refutes itself.

24 αὐτοῦ (like the subject of ἐδηλώθη) refers to the position of the Rulers in Plato's city—with everything that it involves, including the Community of wives and children, the Philosopher-king and all the leading topics discussed in V—VII; and τὸ λοιπὸν is what remains of this topic—the rest of VI and VII in fact.

25 πάντως. Bekker's πάντων (cf. Latius 779 E οὐ πάντων εὐκολώτατον) is a neat emendation, which Baiter and others have accepted. But οὐ πάντως ῥᾶστον 'not in every respect quite easy' (with the usual Greek litotes), is quite unobjectionable, as Schneider points out, and the confusion of ς and ν is rare.

27 τὸ λεγόμενον κτλ. D. and V. wrongly make τῷ ὄντι part of the proverb. Translate 'and it is true, as the proverb says, that beautiful things are hard.' Cf. IV 435 C and (for τῷ ὄντι) VIII 563 E.

497 E 33 οἱ καὶ ἀπτόμενοι κτλ. καὶ = 'at all.' Cf. ἐὰν καὶ—ἐθέλωσιν 498 A.

498 A 1 τὸ μεταξὺ means 'in the interval before entering upon' (Richards καὶ χρηματισμοῦ πλησιάσαντες αὐτοῦ τῷ χαλεπωτάτῳ ἱπαλάττονται, οἱ φιλοσοφώτατοι ποιούμενοι· λέγω δὲ χαλεπώτατον τὸ περὶ τοὺς λόγους· ἐν δὲ τῷ ἔπειτα, ἐὰν καὶ ἄλλων τοῦτο πρᾶτ-τόντων παρακαλούμενοι ἐθέλωσιν ἀκροαταὶ γίγνεσθαι, μεγάλα 5 ἡγοῦνται, πάρεργον οἰόμενοι αὐτὸ δεῖν πρᾶττειν· πρὸς δὲ τὸ γήρας ἐκτὸς δὴ τινων ὀλίγων ἀποσβέννυνται πολὺ μᾶλλον τοῦ Ἡρακλει-Β τείου ἡλίου, ὅσον αὐθις οὐκ ἐξάπτονται. Δεῖ δὲ πῶς; ἔφη. Πᾶν τοῦναντίον· μειράκια μὲν ὄντα καὶ παῖδας μεираκιώδη παιδείαν καὶ φιλοσοφίαν μεταχειρίζεσθαι, τῶν τε σωμάτων, ἐν ᾧ βλαστάνει 10 τε καὶ ἀνδροῦται, εὖ μᾶλα ἐπιμελεῖσθαι, ὑπηρεσίαν φιλοσοφία κτωμένους· προοίους δὲ τῆς ἡλικίας, ἐν ᾗ ἡ ψυχὴ τελειοῦσθαι in Cl. Rev. II p. 324). The correlating or contrasting notion is idiomatically omitted: cf. note on περιαγωγῆς in VII 518 E. Plentiful examples of this usage are supplied by Shilleto on Dem. F. L. 181, and Blaydes on Ar. Ach. 434 μεταξὺ τῶν Ἰνοῦς and Birds 187. With the sentiment cf. 487 C n. Richards was, I believe, the first to point out the true meaning of this passage: see also Solomon in Cl. Rev. VII p. 11. The traditional view, that μεταξὺ κτλ. means 'in the spare moments of house-keeping and business,' though still given as an alternative by J. and C., is untenable.

3 οἱ—ποιούμενοι: 'and they it is, forsooth, who are regarded as accomplished in philosophy.' Sarcasm is often expressed by an appositional participial clause at the end of a sentence: cf. e.g. Ap. 34 A, Crilo 51 A. ποιεῖσθαι here is the passive of ποιεῖν in the sense of 'to construct in fancy,' 'represent,' as e.g. in Theaet. 197 D and infra x 609 C. The usage is at first sight strange, but occurs again in VIII 538 C, IX 573 B and 574 D, where no other meaning is suitable. Stallbaum's attempt to explain the passages differently is unsuccessful, and the proposed emendations (such as Ἀστ' ὁδοῦμενοι for ποιούμενοι) are unsatisfactory in each of the four cases. See notes ad ll.

4 ἐὰν καὶ goes with ἐθέλωσιν (Schneider): 'if they do consent' (cf. καὶ ἀπτόμενοι above). It is implied that many, or most of them, do not.

5 μεγάλα κτλ. Plato distinguishes three stages. In the first, τὸ περὶ λόγους is a man's ἔργον after boyhood until he begins practical life; it then becomes his πάρεργον, and he 'thinks it great things' to go to an occasional lecture: towards old age all but very few neglect philosophy entirely. The proper study of philosophy reverses all this (πᾶν τοῦναντίον) as is shewn in B and C.

7 τοῦ Ἡρακλειτείου ἡλίου. Heraclitus Fr. 32 Bywater νέος ἐφ' ἡμέρῃ ἡλίου. Heraclitus meant the saying to be taken literally, and not merely as an expression of the universal law of change: see the authorities cited by Bywater ad loc. and *Zeller*⁵ I p. 684 n. 2.

498 B 10 φιλοσοφίαν κτλ. φιλοσοφίαν in its wider sense denotes any 'liberal' training or study: cf. Theaet. 143 D, 172 C, and Prot. 335 D with my note ad loc. D. and V. are in error (as Bosanquet remarks) when they translate παιδείαν καὶ φιλοσοφίαν by 'a course of training in philosophy.' Nor is Susemihl (Gen. Entw. II p. 187) right in supposing that the reference is to the musical education of the earlier books. Plato explains what he means in VII 536 D, E.

11 ἀνδροῦται. The early editors read ἀδροῦται (with E). ἀδροῦμαι is a rare and somewhat obscure word, nowhere found in Plato; and it is better to retain ἀνδροῦται, although the subject is not μειράκια, but σώματα.

ὑπηρεσίαν φιλοσοφία κτωμένους sums up in a single phrase the Platonic theory of athletics: see on III 410 A ff. and cf. IX 591 C, D.

12 ἐν ᾗ. Richards would write ἐν ᾧ as in ἐν ᾧ βλαστάνει above, asserting that "ἡ ἡλικία is their years, not any particular time of life"; but ἡ ἡλικία is often so used, e.g. Symp. 209 B and Men. 89 B. Nor is ἐν ᾧ, 'while,' appropriate here. Translate 'when the years advance, in which the soul begins to reach its maturity.'

ἀρχεται, ἐπιτείνειν τὰ ἐκείνης γυμνάσια· ὅταν δὲ λήγῃ μὲν ἡ ῥώμη, πολιτικῶν¹ δὲ καὶ στρατειῶν ἐκτὸς γίγνηται, τότε ἤδη ἀφέτους C 15 νέμεσθαι καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο πράττειν, ὅ τι μὴ πάρεργον, τοὺς μέλλοντας εὐδαιμόνως βιώσεσθαι καὶ τελευτήσαντας τῷ βίῳ τῷ βεβιωμένῳ τὴν ἐκεῖ μοῖραν ἐπιστῆσειν πρέπουσαν.

XII. Ὡς ἀληθῶς μοι δοκεῖς, ἔφη, λέγειν γε προθύμως, ὃ Σώκρατες· οἶμαι μέντοι τοὺς πολλοὺς τῶν ἀκουόντων προθυμότερον 20 ἔτι ἀντιτείνειν οὐδ' ὅπωςτιοῦν πεισομένους, ἀπὸ Θρασυμάχου ἀρξαμένους. Μὴ διάβαλλε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐμὲ καὶ Θρασύμαχον¹ ἄρτι D φίλους γεγονότας, οὐδὲ πρὸ τοῦ ἐχθροὺς ὄντας. Πείρας γὰρ οὐδὲν ἀνήσομεν, ἕως ἂν ἡ πείσωμεν καὶ τοῦτον καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους, ἡ προὔργου τι ποιήσωμεν εἰς ἐκείνον τὸν βίον, ὅταν αἰθῆς γενόμενοι τοῖς 25 τοιούτοις ἐντύχωσι λόγοις. Εἰς μικρὸν γ', ἔφη, χρόνον εἴρηκας. | Εἰς οὐδὲν μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, ὥς γε πρὸς τὸν ἅπαντα. τὸ μέντοι μὴ

14. στρατειῶν γ: στρατῶν AΠΞ.

498 C 14 γίγνηται κτλ. The subject is still ἡ ῥώμη, 'their physical strength,' not τις (as J. and C. assert). In ἀφέτους νέμεσθαι the metaphor (as observed by Heindorf on Protr. 320 A) is taken de grege numini alicui consecrato: cf. Critias 119 D ἀφέντων ὄντων ταύρων ἐν τῷ τῷ Ποσειδῶνος ἱερῷ. νέμεσθαι is properly 'to graze.' The effect of the Greek may be conveyed by rendering 'they roam the sacred fields at will,' although ἀφέτους of course agrees with the subject of νέμεσθαι.

498 C—502 C Adimantus hardly expects the reasoning of Socrates to carry conviction to most of his hearers. But Socrates will not despair, believing that his words may perhaps bear fruit hereafter, if not here. As for the Multitude, their dissent is easily explained. They have heard enough of jingling rhetoric, but they have never yet seen a Philosopher-king, nor are they accustomed to discourses whose only aim is truth. Our perfect city is realised always and everywhere, wheresoever and whensoever Philosophy sits on the throne. The Multitude will assent, if we approach them rightly; for their hatred is against the false philosophers, and not against the true. The lover of Truth is absorbed in contemplation of the changeless Realities, on the model of which he will frame human institutions, should he be called upon to enter public life. Point this out to the Many, and reason with them, and they will agree. Our proposals, though difficult, are not impossible.

20 ἀντιτείνειν κτλ. I formerly read ἀντιτενέειν with Stephanus and others; but the present, which is in all the MSS, gives a good sense and makes a better balance with λέγειν προθύμως. Translate 'offer a still more enthusiastic opposition, being not in the least likely to agree.' The majority of editors retain the present.

ἀπὸ Θρασυμάχου κτλ. Thrasymachus was not likely to agree with so fierce an onslaught on his profession: see 493 A ff., 495 C ff.

498 D 22 οὐδὲ—ὄντας. Cf. I 354 A n.

24 αἰθῆς γενόμενοι 'born again' implies the re-incarnation of the Soul, as described in the end of Book X: see on 608 D ff. It is from casual allusions like the present, made in all seriousness, that we can best understand how profound and practical was Plato's belief in immortality. The seed sown here may bear its fruit in another life, so that the educator need not despair.

25 εἰς μικρὸν κτλ. is not merely ironical but incredulous. We need not therefore (with J. and C.) be surprised

2. σωστός - let loose, free ranging, (of 2 and flock) free from work.
ἐκ τῆς τῆς - even μὲν οὖν - neither

πείθεσθαι τοῖς λεγομένοις τοὺς πολλοὺς θαῦμα οὐδέν· οὐ γὰρ πώποτε εἶδον γενόμενον τὸ νῦν λεγόμενον, ἀλλὰ πολὺ μᾶλλον E¹ τοιαῦτ' ἅττα ῥήματα ἐξεπίτηδες ἀλλήλοις ὁμοιωμένα, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ αὐτομάτου ὥσπερ νῦν συμπεσόντα· ἄνδρα δὲ ἀρετῇ 30 παρισωμένον καὶ ὁμοιωμένον μέχρι τοῦ δυνατοῦ τελέως ἔργω τε καὶ λόγῳ, δυναστεύοντα ἐν πόλει ἑτέρα τοιαύτῃ, οὐ πώποτε | 499 ἐωράκασιν οὔτε ἓνα οὔτε πλείους. ἢ οἶε; Οὐδαμῶς γε. Οὐδέ γε αὐτὸν λόγων, ὦ μακάριε, καλῶν τε καὶ ἐλευθέρων ἱκανῶς ἐπήκοοι γεγόνασιν, οἷον ζητεῖν μὲν τὸ ἀληθὲς ξυντεταμένως ἐκ παντὸς τρόπου τοῦ γινῶναι χάριν, τὰ δὲ κομψά τε καὶ ἐριστικά καὶ μηδαμόσε ἄλλοσε τείνοντα ἢ πρὸς δόξαν καὶ ἔριν καὶ ἐν δίκαις καὶ 5 ἐν ἰδίαις συνουσίαις πόρρωθεν ἀσπαζομένων. Οὐδὲ τούτων, ἔφη.
 B Τούτων· τοὶ χάριν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ταῦτα προορώμενοι ἡμεῖς τότε καὶ δεδιότες ὅμως ἐλέγομεν, ὑπὸ τάληθοῦς ἡναγκασμένοι, ὅτι οὔτε πόλις οὔτε πολιτεία οὐδέ γ' ἀνὴρ ὁμοίως μὴ ποτε γένηται τέλεος, 28. πολὺ A¹Π: πολλοὶ corr. A².

mg. A². 32. ἑτέρα Π: ἑτέρα A.

4. τρόπον Π et γρ in mg. A²: προσώπου A¹.

29. τοιαῦτ' ἅττα A¹Π: γρ τοιαντὶ in

mg. A². 3. ξυντεταμένως A²Π: ξυντεταγμένως A¹.

at Glauco's incredulity and wonder in x 608 D. For οὐδέν 'a mere nothing' 'nought,' the much less expressive οὐδένα was conjectured by Hirschig and others. An exact parallel may be found in x 608 C. The grandeur and elevation of this passage recall vi 486 A.

498 E 29 τοιαῦτ' ἅττα κτλ. Plato is here alluding to epideictic harangues by sophistical rhetoricians of the school of Gorgias. τοιαῦτ' ἅττα ῥήματα = 'expressions of this sort' refers to the jingle in γενόμενον—λεγόμενον, which is an example of the rhetorical device called παρομοίωσις: see Arist. Rhet. III 9. 1410^a 24 ff. παρομοίωσις δ' ἐὰν ὅμοια τὰ ἔσχατα ἐχῇ ἐκάτερον τὸ κῶλον, e.g. ἐν πλείοσιν δὲ φροντίσι καὶ ἐν ἐλαχίστοις ἐλπίσι, and many other examples: see Cope ad loc. In ἐξεπίτηδες—ὁμοιωμένα, 'assimilated to one another of set purpose,' the same device is meant. Isocrates and his literary brethren employed it constantly: see the references on 495 E.

ἀλλ' οὐκ—συμπεσόντα κτλ.: 'instead of spontaneously chiming together, as in the present case' etc., where the παρομοίωσις of γενόμενον and λεγόμενον is ἀπὸ τοῦ αὐτομάτου ('natural,' 'spontaneous,' 'accidental' as opposed to ἐξεπίτηδες). παρισωμένον and ὁμοιωμένον are said with a reference to παρίσσωσις (the equality of clauses, as for example in Isocr. Paneg. 76: see Cope l.c. p. 106) and παρομοίωσις. The Many have had quite enough of παρίσσωσις etc. in words; but they have never seen a Man παρισώμενον τῇ ἀρετῇ. Plato means that the time for mincing Rhetoric is past; we want a Man (ἀνδραῖς emphatic), "with heart head hand, One still strong man in a blatant land, Who can rule, and dare not lie" (Tennyson). It is highly probable, as Dümmler holds (Chron. Beitr. p. 14), that Plato has specially in view Isocrates' Panegyricus throughout this passage. The contemptible devices which Plato here ridicules are extraordinarily common in that harangue. For other views of this passage see App. III.

499 A 5 δόξαν is 'seeming,' 'appearance' (τὸ ἀληθές above (Schneider): cf. 505 D. The rendering 'applause' (D. and V.) or 'fame,' is, I think, less likely to be right. For ἔριν cf. V 454 A n.

499 B 7 τότε. V 473 D.

8 οὔτε—οὔτε—οὐδέ γε is a common sequence where stress is laid on the last alternative: cf. 492 E and x 608 B. οὐδέ γ' ἀνὴρ = 'no, nor yet an individual man' is said because even the philosopher is not τέλεος except in the philosopher's city: cf. 497 A. ὁμοίως means simply 'in

- 10 πρὶν ἂν τοῖς φιλοσόφοις τούτοις τοῖς ὀλίγοις καὶ οὐ πονηροῖς, ἀχρήστοις δὲ νῦν κεκλημένοις, ἀνάγκη τις ἐκ τύχης παραβάλῃ, εἴτε βούλονται εἴτε μὴ, πόλεως ἐπιμεληθῆναι, καὶ τῇ πόλει κατηκόω γενέσθαι, ἢ τῶν νῦν ἐν δυναστείαις ἢ βασιλείαις ὄντων ὑέσιν ἢ αὐτοῖς ἐκ τινος θείας ἐπιπνοίας ἀληθινῆς φιλοσοφίας C
- 15 ἀληθινὸς ἔρως ἐμπέσῃ. τούτων δὲ πότερα γενέσθαι ἢ ἀμφοτέρα ὡς ἄρα ἐστὶν ἀδύνατον, ἐγὼ μὲν οὐδένα φημί ἔχειν λόγον. οὕτω γὰρ ἂν ἡμεῖς δικαίως καταγελώμεθα, ὡς ἄλλως εὐχαῖς ὅμοια

11. παραβάλῃ Ξγ: περιβάλῃ ΑΠ.
ΑΞγ: κατήκοι (sic) Π.

13. κατηκόω Schleiermacher: κατήκοοι
17. καταγελώμεθα Π: καταγελώμεθα Α.

like manner,' 'likewise,' and should not be construed with τέλειος in the sense of 'equally perfect,' as J. and C. translate.

11 ἀνάγκη—παραβάλῃ. See cr. n. παραβάλλειν means accedere (not, as has been asserted, accidere): cf. VIII 556 C and Lys. 203 B. The word is not however quite appropriate here: and I should much prefer a convincing emendation of the text of A, Π and other MSS (ἀνάγκη—περιβάλῃ). As it stands, περιβάλῃ must either be intransitive, or else the infinitive ἐπιμεληθῆναι serves as its object in place of an accusative. Neither view is supported by any evidence. I formerly conjectured ἀνάγκη τις ἐκ τύχης περιβάλῃ 'until some one happens to compel these philosophers' etc., but τις ἀνάγκη—γέγονεν in C does not favour this remedy. It is perhaps safest to read παραβάλῃ provisionally and pro tempore. With ἐκ τύχης cf. IX 592 A εἰ μὴ θεὰ τις ξυμβῇ τύχῃ and Er. VII 327 E.

13 κατηκόω. Schleiermacher's conjecture is accepted by Madvig, Baiter, and J. and C. Stallbaum was inclined to read κατηκόοις. If κατήκοοι is right, it must stand for κατηκόοις, the nominative being due to the interposition of εἴτε βούλονται κτλ. But the construction is difficult, and the sense unsatisfactory. We require some guarantee that the city will obey (cf. 502 B), and κατηκόω is the only reading which provides it.

τῶν νῦν—ὑέσιν. "I do not doubt but that this was meant as a compliment and incitement to the younger Dionysius (see Plato Epist. 7, p. 327). And I understand what follows p. 502 in the same manner. Hence it seems that this part of the dialogue was written after his first voyage to Sicily, and probably not long before his second, about Ol.

101, 3, when the elder Dionysius was just dead" (Thomas Gray Works ed. Gosse IV p. 251). In the parallel passage V 473 D Plato speaks of kings and δυνάσται, but not yet of kings' sons. The substance of Gray's conjecture is confirmed by recent criticism (see e.g. Hirmer Entst. u. Kompos. etc. p. 668): but Dionysius I died in Ol. 103, 2 (367 B.C.) and not in Ol. 101, 3 (374 B.C.), and Plato's second visit to Sicily seems to have taken place just after the old tyrant's death (Grote x pp. 346—356). See also on V 473 D, VI 496 B and Introd. § 4.

499 C 15 τούτων δὲ πότερα κτλ. Grote pronounces the Platonic commonwealth impossible because "we cannot understand from whence the force is to come, tending and competent to generate" it at the first. Once begun, he holds, "there is no reason why it might not have continued." That the real difficulty is in starting it, Plato himself clearly understands (cf. 501 A n.). He would not however allow that the difficulty is insurmountable; since a θεὰ τις τύχῃ (IX 592 A) may well occur. But the true fulfilment of Plato's Ideal, as he himself foretells in IX 592 B, is to be sought, not in any single earthly commonwealth, but in its influence, direct and indirect, upon the moral, political, religious, and intellectual progress of mankind: see V 470 E n. and Zeller's dissertation on Der platonische Staat in seiner Bedeutung für die Folgezeit in his *Vorträgen und Abhandlungen*² pp. 68 ff.

17 ἄλλως κτλ. For ἄλλως 'merely' cf. Theaet. 176 D γῆς ἄλλως ἀχθῇ. On εὐχαῖς see V 450 D n.

λέγοντες. ἢ οὐχ οὕτως; Οὕτως. Εἰ τοίνυν ἄκροις εἰς φιλοσοφίαν πόλεως τις ἀνάγκη ἐπιμεληθῆναι ἢ γέγονεν ἐν τῷ ἀπείρῳ τῷ παρεληλυθότι χρόνῳ, ἢ καὶ νῦν ἐστὶν ἐν τινι βαρβαρικῷ τόπῳ 20
 D πόρρῳ που ἐκτὸς ὄντι τῆς ἡμετέρας ἐπόψεως, ἢ καὶ ἔπειτα γενήσεται. περὶ τούτου ἔτοιμοι τῷ λόγῳ διαμάχεσθαι, ὥς γέγονεν ἢ εἰρημένη πολιτεία καὶ ἔστιν καὶ γενήσεται γε, ὅταν αὕτη ἡ Μοῦσα πόλεως ἐγκράτης γένηται. οὐ γὰρ ἀδύνατος γενέσθαι. οὐδ' ἡμεῖς ἀδύνατα λέγομεν· χαλεπὰ δὲ καὶ παρ' ἡμῶν ὁμολογεῖται. 25
 E αὐ δοκεῖ, ἐρεῖς; ἴσως, ἔφη. ὦ μακάριε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἢ μὴ πάνυ οὕτω τῶν πολλῶν κατηγορεῖ. ἀλλοίαν τοι δόξαν ἔχουσιν, ἐὰν αὐτοῖς μὴ φιλονικῶν ἀλλὰ παραμυθούμενος καὶ ἀπολνόμενος τὴν τῆς φιλομαθίας διαβολὴν ἐνδεικνύῃ οὓς λέγεις τοὺς φιλοσόφους, καὶ διορίζῃ 30 500 ὥσπερ ἄρτι τὴν τε φύσιν αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν ἐπιτήδευσιν, ἵνα μὴ ἡγῶνται σε λέγειν οὓς αὐτοὶ οἴονται. ἢ καὶ ἐὰν οὕτω θεῶνται, ἀλλοίαν τ' οὐ φήσεις αὐτοὺς δόξαν λήψεσθαι καὶ ἄλλα ἀποκρινεῖσθαι; ἢ οἶε τινὰ χαλεπαίνειν τῷ μὴ χαλεπῷ ἢ φθονεῖν τῷ μὴ φθονερῷ ἄφθονόν τε καὶ πρᾶον ὄντα; ἐγὼ μὲν γάρ σε προφθιάσας 5 λέγω, ὅτι ἐν ὀλίγοις τισὶν ἡγοῦμαι, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν τῷ πλήθει χαλεπὴν

23. αὕτη A¹H: αὕτη A². ἀποκρινεῖσθαι A.

3. τ' οὐ Baier: τοι AHΞg. ἀποκρινεῖσθαι H:

20 βαρβαρικῷ—ἐπόψεως. Cf. Phaed. 78 A. Touches of this kind are rare in Plato and generally full of pathos, as if the hope of mankind no longer lay in Hellas. The present sentence is a confession of the fact that the foundations of Plato's city are not laid in Hellenism, but in Humanity, understood as Plato himself understands the word in 501 B. See on V 470 E.

499 D 22 ἔτοιμοι. The ellipse of the first person of the copula is rare, except when ἐγώ or ἡμεῖς is expressed, but ἔτοιμος is a privileged word: cf. Parm. 137 B and other examples in Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. p. 35.

23 αὕτη ἡ Μοῦσα. Philosophy.

499 E 27 μὴ πάνυ κτλ. Plato's attitude to οἱ πολλοί (as Krohn remarks Pl. St. p. 118) has somewhat altered since 492 B ff., partly, perhaps, because his wrath has been diverted against the false philosophers. But this attempt to soothe the many-headed Beast should not be taken too seriously: see 501 E—ἀκροῖς—first place

502 A n.

28 ἀλλοίαν τοι κτλ. See App. IV.

500 A 2 ἢ καὶ κτλ. 'Or even if they view them in this light, will you deny that they will change their opinion?' Baier's correction—see cr. n.—is, as I now think, the simplest, and best explains the corruption. I can see no ground for writing ἐὰν οὕτω αἰσθῶνται or ἐὰν τοῦτ' αἰσθῶνται with Richards. With οὐ φήσεις cf. VII 534 B. For other views on this passage see App. IV.

5 πρᾶον is an allusion to the universally admitted πραότης of the Athenian δῆμος; see Arist. Ath. Pol. 22. 4 τῇ εὐνοίᾳ τοῦ δήμου πραότητι (where Sandys quotes Dem. Timocr. 51) with Isocr. Antid. 20, 300. Hence (as Schneider points out) δημοτικόν τι καὶ πρᾶον in Euthyd. 303 D. Cf. also Soph. O. C. 1126 f.

6 ἐν ὀλίγοις τισίν. Dümmler (Chr. Zeit. p. 45) thinks of Isocrates, but there is nothing to suggest a specific reference here.

οὕτω φύσιν γίγνεσθαι. Καὶ ἐγὼ ἀμέλει, ἔφη, ξυνοίομαι. ¹ Οὐκοῦν B καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο ξυνοίει, τοῦ χαλεπῶς πρὸς φιλοσοφίαν τοὺς πολλοὺς διακεῖσθαι ἐκείνους εἶναι τοὺς ἔξωθεν οὐ προσήκον ¹⁰ ἐπεισκεκωμακότας, λοιδορουμένους τε αὐτοῖς καὶ φιλαπεχθημόνους ἔχοντας καὶ αἰεὶ περὶ ἀνθρώπων τοὺς λόγους ποιουμένους, ἥκιστα φιλοσοφία πρέπον ποιούντας; Πολύ γ', ἔφη.

XIII. Οὐδὲ γάρ που, ὦ Ἀδείμαντε, σχολὴ τῷ γε ὥς ἀληθῶς πρὸς τοῖς οὖσι τὴν διάνοιαν ἔχοντι κάτω βλέπειν εἰς ἀνθρώπων ¹⁵ πραγματείας καὶ μαχόμενον αὐτοῖς φθόνου τε καὶ δυσμενείας C ἐμπίμπλασθαι, ἀλλ' εἰς τεταγμένα ἅττα καὶ κατὰ ταῦτά αἰεὶ ἔχοντα ὀρώντας καὶ θεωμένους οὐτ' ἀδικούντα οὐτ' ἀδικούμενα ὑπ' ἀλλήλων, κόσμῳ δὲ πάντα καὶ κατὰ λόγον ἔχοντα, ταῦτα μιμῆσθαι τε καὶ ὅ τι μάλιστα ἀφομοιοῦσθαι. ἢ οἷε τινα μηχανὴν ²⁰ εἶναι, ὅτῳ τις ὁμιλεῖ ἀγάμενος, μὴ μιμῆσθαι ἐκείνο; Ἀδύνατον, ἔφη. Θείῳ δὴ καὶ κοσμίῳ ὅ γε φιλόσοφος ὁμιλῶν κόσμιός τε ¹ καὶ D

17. ἀδικούμενα Ξ¹g: ἀδικούμενον ΑΗ¹Ξ²: ἀδικούμενος II².

500 B 9 τοὺς ἔξωθεν κτλ. Isocrates seems to have taken this as a personal attack, as perhaps it was intended to be. His reply may be found in Antid. 260 ff. περὶ τοὺς πολιτικοὺς λόγους ἡμεῖς ὄντες, οὓς ἐκεῖνοί φασιν εἶναι φιλαπεχθημόνας (cf. φιλαπεχθημόνους ἔχοντας here), πολλοὶ πραῖτεροι τυγχάνομεν αὐτῶν ὄντες· οἱ μὲν γὰρ αἰεὶ τι περὶ ἡμῶν φλαῦρον λέγουσιν, ἐγὼ δ' οὐδὲν ἂν εἰποίμι τοιούτου, ἀλλὰ ταῖς ἀληθείαις χρῆσθαι περὶ αὐτῶν κτλ. See the interesting discussion in Dümmler l.c. pp. 8 ff.

10 αὐτοῖς and not αὐτοῖς is certainly what Plato wrote. False philosophers, like bad scholars, are always abusing one another. The middle, which is reciprocal, is also decisive in favour of αὐτοῖς: cf. Charm. 154 A λοιδορουμένους ἀλλήλοις. J. and C. (with Stallbaum and the editors generally, except Schneider) read αὐτοῖς, remarking that "it was by no means an uncommon practice of the old philosophers to abuse the people." Plato is not speaking of the old philosophers at all, but only of sophists and pretenders, who do not abuse, but flatter and cajole the people (493 A ff.).

11 αἰεὶ περὶ ἀνθρώπων κτλ. The seeker after Truth does not indulge in personalities (cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. IV 9. 1125^a 5 ff. and Rhet. II 4. 1381^b 7), or scandal (Theaet. 173 D: cf. 174 E ff.). His single-minded pursuit of Truth leaves him neither time nor inclination to talk about people.

12 πολὺ γε: sc. ἥκιστα. Adimantus accommodates his answer to the last clause of Socrates' question. See on V 465 E.

13 σχολή. Cf. Theaet. 172 D ff. 500 C 16 εἰς τεταγμένα ἅττα κτλ. With the general sense cf. Theaet. 174 D ff., Phaed. 79 C, D, Tim. 47 B, C and Euripides Fr. 902 δλβιος ὅστις τῆς ἱστορίας | ἔσχε μάθησιν | μήτε πολιτῶν ἐπὶ πημοσύνην | μήτ' εἰς ἀδίκους πράξεις ὁρμῶν | ἀλλ' ἀθανάτου καθορῶν φύσεως | κόσμον ἀγήρων, πῇ τε συνέστη | καὶ δπη καὶ ὅπως. | τοῖς δὲ τοιούτοις οὐδέποτε | αἰσχυρῶν | ἔργων μελέτημα προσίξει. Euripides' lines are conceived in the spirit of Plato and exactly illustrate his meaning, especially if, as is usually supposed, they refer to the philosopher Anaxagoras. An eloquent modern parallel may be found in Stevenson's 'Virginibus puerisque' p. 260.

17 ὀρώντας. For the change from singular to plural cf. I 347 A n.

21 κοσμίῳ. It has been thought that there is a play on κόσμος in the sense of the Universe or Heavens. But the philosopher's gaze outsoars the Heavens, and is fixed on the ὑπερουράνιος τόπος, where the Ideas dwell (Phaedr. 247 C). such in like disorderly revellers (Theaet) garrulous, wagging.

θεῖος εἰς τὸ δυνατόν ἀνθρώπῳ γίγνεται· διαβολὴ δ' ἐν πᾶσι πολλή. Παντάπασιν μὲν οὖν. "Αν οὖν τις, εἶπον, αὐτῷ ἀνάγκη γένηται ἢ ἐκεῖ ὁρᾷ μελετῆσαι εἰς ἀνθρώπων ἥθη καὶ ἰδίᾳ καὶ δημοσίᾳ τιθέναί καὶ μὴ μόνον ἑαυτὸν πλάττειν, ἄρα κακὸν δημιουργὸν αὐτὸν οἶε 25 γενήσεσθαι σωφροσύνης τε καὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ ξυμπάσης τῆς δημοτικῆς ἀρετῆς; "Ηκιστὰ γε, ἢ δ' ὅς. 'Αλλ' ἐὰν δὴ αἰσθωνται

E οἱ πολλοί, ὅτι ἀληθῆ περὶ αὐτοῦ λέγομεν, ¹ χαλεπανοῦσι δὴ τοῖς φιλοσόφοις καὶ ἀπιστήσουσιν ἡμῖν λέγουσιν, ὥς οὐκ ἂν ποτε ἄλλως εὐδαιμονήσεις πόλις, εἰ μὴ αὐτὴν διαγράψειαν οἱ τῷ θεῷ παρα- 30 δέγματι χρώμενοι ζογράφοι; Οὐ χαλεπανοῦσιν, ἢ δ' ὅς, ἐάνπερ

01 αἰσθωνται. ἀλλὰ δὴ τίνα | λέγεις τρόπον τῆς διαγραφῆς; Λαβόντες, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὥσπερ πίνακα πόλιν τε καὶ ἥθη ἀνθρώπων πρῶτον μὲν καθαρὰν ποιήσεις αὖ, ὃ οὐ πάνυ ῥάδιον· ἀλλ' οὖν οἶσθ' ὅτι τούτῳ ἂν εὐθὺς τῶν ἄλλων διενέγκοιεν, τῷ μῆτε ἰδιώτου μῆτε πόλεως ἐθελῆσαι ἂν ἵψασθαι μηδὲ γράφειν νόμους, πρὶν ἢ 5 παραλαβεῖν καθαρὰν ἢ αὐτοὶ ποιῆσαι. Καὶ ὁρθῶς γ', ἔφη. Οὐκ-

4. διενέγκοιεν q: διενεγκεῖν ΑΠ: διενεγκεῖεν (sic) Ξ.

500 D 22 διαβολή κτλ. ἐν πᾶσι is neuter, 'albeit misrepresentation is rife everywhere,' "there is always detraction going on" (J. and C.).

23 ἂν οὖν τις κτλ. Cf. 484 C.

27 δημοτικῆς ἀρετῆς. Not scientific virtue, because its intellectual basis in the minds of the people is ὁρθὴ δόξα, and not ἐπιστήμη. See IV 430 C n., and on δημοτικὴ ἀρετὴ generally Zeller⁴ II 1, pp. 593—601, and Archer-Hind's edition of the Phaedo App. I. The 'demotic virtue' which the philosopher constructs is of course the best of its kind.

501 A 3 δ οὐ πάνυ ῥάδιον. Cf. 499 C n. Plato's kátharsis is sufficiently drastic. He would rusticate the entire population above ten years of age, and bring up the remainder in the principles of his καλλίπολις (VII 540 E ff. n.).

4 διενέγκοιεν. See cr. n. Schneider retains διενεγκεῖν, comparing other passages in which ὅτι is followed by an infinitive. Instances of this irregularity occasionally occur (Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 877), but it is unusually awkward here, and the majority of editors are probably right in following q. With the sentiment cf. Laws 735 B—736 C, where the necessity of an initial kátharsis is equally insisted on, and various forms of legislative purgation are described.

μῆτε ἰδιώτου κτλ. The individual is cleansed by the Socratic elenchus, which purges him of his false persuasion of knowledge: cf. Soph. 230 B—E, where this kind of kátharsis is expounded in detail. Gildersleeve (A. J. Ph. III p. 201) points out that the 'articular infinitive' with án is rare in Plato.

5 γράφειν νόμους: 'to paint or draft laws.' Richards is inclined to cancel μηδὲ—νόμους as involving "a most awkward and inartistic confusion of the figure (painting) with the thing figured (legislation)." Nothing is more usual in Plato than such a 'confusion,' if the phrase employed bears, like γράφειν νόμους, or is capable of bearing, like ἀνδρείκλον below, a meaning of its own as well as an application in the simile, and it is a narrow conception of art which pronounces the idiom inartistic. Cf. 507 A n. and Euthyph. 3 A with my note ad loc., and see also on V 451 B. Cobet's ἐγγράφειν νόμους, which Baier adopts, is another unsuccessful attempt to obliterate this characteristic feature of Plato's style.

6 παραλαβεῖν καθαρὰν. Plato would cite as examples a tutor who is entrusted with the sole authority over a child, and legislators who (as in the Laws 702 B ff.) receive autocratic power in order to found a colony. Cf. 499 B n.

οὖν μετὰ ταῦτα οἶε ὑπογράψασθαι ἂν τὸ σχῆμα τῆς πολιτείας; Τί μὴν; "Επειτα, ¹ οἶμαι, ἀπεργαζόμενοι πυκνὰ ἂν ἐκατέρωσε B ἀποβλέποιεν, πρὸς τε τὸ φύσει δίκαιον καὶ καλὸν καὶ σῶφρον καὶ 10 πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα καὶ πρὸς ἐκείνο αὖ, ὃ ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἐμ-ποιοῖεν, ξυμμιγνύντες τε καὶ κεραυνύντες ἐκ τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων τὸ ἀνδρείκελον, ἀπ' ἐκείνου τεκμαιρόμενοι, ὃ δὴ καὶ "Ομηρος ἐκαλεσεν ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἐγγιγνόμενον θεοειδές τε καὶ θεοείκελον. "Ορθῶς, ἔφη. Καὶ τὸ μὲν ἄν, οἶμαι, ἐξαλείφοιεν, τὸ δὲ πάλιν ἐγγράφοιεν, 15 ἕως ὅ τι μάλιστα ἀνθρώπεια ἦθη εἰς ὅσον ἐνδέχεται θεοφιλῇ C

8. ἐκατέρωσε q: ἐκατέρως AΠΞ. 10. δ Ξ et corr. q: τὸ AII. In A tamen cum non post ἀνθρώποις (quod affirmant Turicensis), sed post ἐαποιοῖεν interpunctum sit, videtur scriba neglegentius exarasse τὸ pro ὃ.

501 B 9 τὸ φύσει δίκαιον is assuredly the Idea of Justice, as opposed to τὸ νόμῳ δίκαιον 'conventional justice': cf. 500 C and (for φύσει) V 476 B. See also on X 598 A. Bosanquet ignores the most essential and characteristic feature of Plato's teaching when he remarks that "the 'natural' principles of justice and other moral qualities are no doubt those which Plato believes himself to have found present, in various degrees, throughout inorganic and organic nature and the animal world, and culminating in the life of man." It is better to let Plato soar where we cannot follow him than thus to clip his wings. See the Appendix to Book VII On Plato's Dialectic.

10 καὶ πρὸς ἐκείνο κτλ. The legislative painter looks now at his model (the φύσει δίκαιον etc.), now at his picture (the δίκαιον etc. which he is implanting among men), rubbing out one part and painting another in again (τὸ μὲν—ἐγγράφοιεν), till he is satisfied with the result. He combines and mixes various ἐπιτηδεύματα or institutions, till he produces the true ἀνδρείκελον or 'colour and likeness of true Manhood'; just as the painter mixes various colours to produce his ἀνδρείκελον or flesh-tint. ἀνδρείκελον in painting was a sort of flesh-colour, made by mixing various colours together: see Crat. 424 E, Xen. Oec. 10. 5, Arist. de gen. an. I 18. 725^a 26 and Ruhnken on Timaeus Lex. s.v. To this Plato of course alludes, but he intends us also to take the word in its etymological signification, as is clear from θεοείκελον below. The stress in ἀνδρείκελον, as in θεοειδές and θεοείκελον, is on the first part of the compound: it is not the mere ἀνθρωποειδές, but the Man-like, at which the legislator aims: cf. the force of ἀνδρα in 498 E. ἀνδρείκελον might be translated by 'the human form divine,' except that 'form' suggests a wrong notion. For other views on this passage see App. V.

13 θεοείκελον. II. I 131 et al. It is pleasing to meet with so cordial and spontaneous an acknowledgment of Homer as a kindred spirit in a passage so full of Plato's characteristic idealism. There is more than a grain of truth in Longinus' observation: μόνος Ἡρόδοτος Ὀμηρικώτατος ἐγένετο; Στρησίχορος ἐτι πρότερον ὅ τε Ἀρχίλοχος, πάντων δὲ τούτων μάλιστα ὁ Πλάτων ἀπὸ τοῦ Ὀμηρικοῦ κείνου νάματος εἰς αὐτὸν μυρίας ὅσας παρατροπὰς ἀποχετευσάμενος (περὶ ὕψους 13. 3). By the words τὸ ἀνδρείκελον—θεοείκελον Plato means to suggest that Man is then most manlike when he most resembles God: and (as Tennyson says) "then most god-like being most a man." Cf. IX 589 D II. This sure and abiding conviction of the presence of a divine element within us, rendering our nature essentially and truly human, makes itself felt in nearly all the dialogues of Plato. It is the ultimate source of all his idealism, religious and metaphysical, no less than moral and political, and may well be considered the most precious and enduring inheritance which he has bequeathed to posterity.

501 C 15 ὃ τι μάλιστα should be taken with ποιήσειαν, and εἰς ὅσον ἐνδέχεται with θεοφιλῇ: 'until, as far as possible, they have made mere human characters as dear to God as human ποιήσκειαν. Καλλίστη γοῦν ἄν, ἔφη, ἡ γραφὴ γένοιτο. Ἄρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πείθομέν πῃ ἐκείνους, οὓς διατεταμένους ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ἔφησθα ἵεναι, ὡς τοιοῦτός ἐστι πολιτειῶν ζωγράφος ὃν τότ' ἐπηνούμεν πρὸς αὐτούς, δι' ὃν ἐκείνοι ἐχαλέπαινον, ὅτι τὰς πόλεις αὐτῶ παρεδίδομεν, καὶ τι μᾶλλον αὐτὸ νῦν ἀκούοντες πραῦννται; Καὶ 20 D πολὺ γε, ἡ δ' ὅς, εἰ σωφρονοῦσιν. Πῇ ἢ γὰρ δὴ ἔξουσιν ἀμφισβητῆσαι; πότερον μὴ τοῦ ὄντος τε καὶ ἀληθείας ἐραστὰς εἶναι τοὺς φιλοσόφους; Ἄτοπον μέντ' ἄν, ἔφη, εἶη. Ἀλλὰ μὴ τὴν φύσιν αὐτῶν οἰκείαν εἶναι τοῦ ἀρίστου, ἣν ἡμεῖς διήλθομεν; Οὐδὲ τοῦτο. Τί δέ; τὴν τοιαύτην τυχούσαν τῶν προσηκόντων ἐπιτηδευμάτων 25 οὐκ ἀγαθὴν τελέως ἔσεσθαι καὶ φιλόσοφον εἶπερ τινὰ ἄλλην; ἡ E ἐκείνους φήσει μᾶλλον, οὓς ἡμεῖς ἀφωρίσαμεν; Ὁὐ δὴπου. Ἔτι οὖν ἀγριανοῦσι λεγόντων ἡμῶν, ὅτι πρὶν ἂν πόλεως τὸ φιλόσοφον γένος ἐγκρατὲς γένηται, οὔτε πόλει οὔτε πολίταις κακῶν παῦλα ἔσται, οὐδὲ ἡ πολιτεία, ἣν μυθολογοῦμεν λόγῳ, ἔργῳ τέλος λήψεται; 30 Ἰσως, ἔφη, ἦττον. Βούλει οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μὴ ἦττον φῶμεν αὐτούς, 02 ἀλλὰ παντάπασιν πράους γεγονέναι καὶ πεπεισθαι, ἵνα | εἰ μὴ τι ἄλλο, αἰσχυρθέντες ὁμολογήσωσιν; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

20. καὶ τι Vind. E Flor. ACTV: καὶ τί A: καὶ ἔτι ΠΞ q. φήσιν ΑΠΞ: φήσεις q.

27. φήσει nos:

characters can be.' For the σχῆμα ἐκ παραλλήλου see Schanz, Nov. Comm. Pl. pp. 12—15. Schneider can hardly be right in connecting ὅ τι μάλιστα with ἀνθρώπεια. For θεοφιλή Badham conjectured θεοειδῆ—a most arbitrary change, though approved by Cobet and Baiter. How could θεοειδῆ have degenerated into θεοφιλή, which is in all the MSS? The opposite corruption was far more likely. Plato means us to understand that God loves those most who most resemble Him: cf. x 612 E and Laus 716 C.

17 ἔφησθα. v 474 A.

20 αὐτό: viz. the statement ὡς τοιοῦτος—αὐτούς with its interpretation in the preceding exposition.

501 D 27 φήσει. We should expect φήσουσι, but the transition from plural to singular is common (see on 1 347 A), and Plato is probably thinking of the objector in 487 C (φαίη ἂν τις κτλ.): cf. 489 D and 490 D. οὐκ ἀγαθὴν just above (instead of μὴ ἀγαθὴν as in μὴ τὴν φύσιν) prepares the way for φήσει, by shewing that the infinitives are beginning to escape from the sway of ἀμφισβητῆσαι. φήσει in φήσει λογιζόμενος II 366 A furnishes an exact parallel to φήσει here. The best MSS—see cr. n.—read φήσιν, which is retained by Schneider and others. If φήσιν is right, we must either (1) refer it to ἔξουσι, and suppose that the future is “ob ἔσεσθαι prò φάναι receptum” (Schneider, Stallbaum), or (2) supply an οἷε (J. and C.). Neither explanation is in my judgment possible. φήσεις, the reading of q and editors before Bekker, may be defended from 489 B and 489 D, where Adimantus is identified with the antagonist of 487 C, but the corruption is not a very likely one. Madvig, more suo, expels the word. Cf. Introd. § 5.

501 E 31 μὴ ἦττον. Herwerden would insert χαλεπούς or πικρούς, Richards ἀγρίους or ἀγριαίνειν. If ἦττον is pronounced with emphasis, its meaning is easily caught, after ἦττον in Adimantus' reply. It is virtually a quotation: “wollen wir nicht statt dieses weniger” etc. (Schneider).

XIV. Οὗτοι μὲν τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοῦτο πεπεισμένοι ἔστων· τοῦδε δὲ πέρι τις ἀμφισβητήσει, ὡς οὐκ ἂν τύχοιεν γενόμενοι
 5 βασιλέων ἔκγονοι ἢ δυναστῶν τὰς φύσεις φιλόσοφοι; Οὐδ' ἂν εἰς, ἔφη. Τοιούτους δὲ γενομένους ὡς πολλὴ ἀνάγκη διαφθαρῆναι, ἔχει τις λέγειν; ὡς μὲν γὰρ χαλεπὸν σωθῆναι, καὶ ἡμεῖς ξυγworοῦμεν· ὡς δὲ ἐν παντὶ τῷ χρόνῳ τῶν πάντων οὐδέποτε οὐδ' ἂν
 10 δ' ἐγώ, εἰς ἱκανὸς γενόμενος, πόλιν ἔχων πειθομένην, πάντ' ἐπιτελέσαι τὰ νῦν ἀπιστούμενα. Ἰκανὸς γάρ, ἔφη. Ἀρχοντος γάρ που, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τιθέντος τοὺς νόμους καὶ τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα, ἃ διεληλύθαμεν, οὐ δῆπου ἀδύνατον ἐθέλειν ποιεῖν τοὺς πολίτας. Οὐδ' ὁπωστίουν. Ἀλλὰ δὴ ἄπερ ἡμῖν δοκεῖ, δόξαι καὶ ἄλλοις
 15 θαυμαστόν τι καὶ ἀδύνατον; Οὐκ οἶμαι ἔγωγε, ἢ δ' ὅς. Καὶ C μὴν ὅτι γε βέλτιστα, εἴπερ δυνατὰ. ἱκανῶς ἐν τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν, ὡς ἐγὼμαι, διήλθομεν. Ἰκανῶς γάρ. Νῦν δὴ, ὡς ἔοικεν, ξυμβαίνει ἡμῖν περὶ τῆς νομοθεσίας ἄριστα μὲν εἶναι ἃ λέγομεν, εἰ γένοιτο, χαλεπὰ δὲ γενέσθαι, οὐ μέντοι ἀδύνατά γε. Ξυμβαίνει γάρ, ἔφη.
 20 XV. Οὐκοῦν ἐπειδὴ τοῦτο μόγις τέλος ἔσχει, τὰ ἐπίλοιπα δὴ μετὰ τοῦτο λεκτέον, τίνα ἴτρόπον ἡμῖν καὶ ἐκ τίνων μαθημάτων τε D

9. ἀμφισβητήσει 9: ἀμφισβητήσειε AΞ: ἀμφισβητήσεως Π.

502 A 3 πεπεισμένοι ἔστων. See on 499 E. Plato's attempt to conciliate the Many is obviously half-hearted. The Multitude can never be philosophers (494 A), and are not likely to believe in the Philosopher-king. But it was necessary to prove or postulate some degree of assent or at least quiescence on their part in order to demonstrate the possibility of the perfect city. Cf. 502 C n.

4 τις. τίς is read by A, but Adimantus's reply makes it probable that the indefinite pronoun is correct.

5 βασιλέων ἔκγονοι. See on 499 B.

502 B 10 εἰς ἱκανὸς κτλ. Krohn (Pl. St. p. 125) justly sees in this sentence "an expression of the convictions which led Plato to Sicily" in 367 B.C. Cf. Grote Plato I p. 126 and supra 499 B n. Richards would read "<σῶς> γενόμενος or γενόμενός <τε καὶ σῶς γενόμενος> or something similar." <περὶ> γενόμενος would give the same sense, and be better Greek. But γενόμενος = εἰ γένοιτο, 'should he arise,' is sufficient. He could not be said to be ἱκανός if he were corrupted.

14 ἄπερ ἡμῖν δοκεῖ: i.e. the arrangements of Plato's καλλίπολις, as J. and C. point out. A ruler may arise who will approve of these, and frame laws accordingly. Plato is trying to prove that his ideal city is not impossible.

502 C 19 οὐ μέντοι ἀδύνατά γε. 'Not impossible' is the final verdict which Plato's readers, like Plato himself, will pass upon his city. His tone is far less hopeful than in Books II—IV, and even in V 473 B ff. he is, I think, more optimistic. It is impossible not to feel that 501 C—502 C is written, in some measure, invita Minerva. Plato is glad to escape from so difficult and congenial a topic into his native element again. He is beginning to see that the Perfect City is in truth a παράδειγμα ἐν οὐρανῷ (IX 592 B). See on V 470 E, VI 499 C, 499 E, 502 A and VII 540 D—541 B, and cf. Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. etc. p. 638.

502 C—504 A Our next duty is to καὶ ἐπιτηδευμάτων οἱ σωτῆρες ἐνέσονται τῆς πολιτείας, καὶ κατὰ ποίας ἡλικίας ἕκαστοι ἐκάστων ἀπτόμενοι; Λεκτέον μέντοι, ἔφη. Οὐδέν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ σοφὸν μοι ἐγένετο τήν τε τῶν γυναικῶν τῆς κτήσεως δυσχέρειαν ἐν τῷ πρόσθεν παραλιπόντι καὶ παιδογονίαν ²⁵ καὶ τὴν τῶν ἀρχόντων κατάστασιν, εἶδοτι ὡς ἐπίφθονός τε καὶ χαλεπὴ γίγνεσθαι ἢ παντελῶς ἀληθῆς. νῦν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἦττον Ε ἦλθεν τὸ δεῖν ¹ αὐτὰ διελθεῖν. καὶ τὰ μὲν δὴ τῶν γυναικῶν τε καὶ παίδων πεπέρανται, τὸ δὲ τῶν ἀρχόντων ὥσπερ ἐξ ἀρχῆς μετελθεῖν

27. ἡ Ξ: ἡ ΑΠ: εἰ καὶ γ.

describe the Rulers and their position in our city. We have already seen that they must be patriotic; let us now add that they must be philosophers. Those who combine the peculiar features of the philosophic temperament are necessarily few, and they must be submitted to stringent intellectual as well as moral tests, to see whether they will be able to endure the greatest of all studies.

502 D 22 ἐνέσονται. ἐγγενήσονται is conjectured by Richards, who compares 521 C and VIII 552 E, 557 C. The proposal is attractive, but involves too great a departure from the MSS. ἐνέσονται moreover is better suited to καὶ κατὰ ποίας—ἀπτόμενοι than ἐγγενήσονται would be. τίνα τρόπον ἐνέσονται means, I think, not how they will be produced (that is expressed in ἐκ τίνων—ἐπιτηδευμάτων), but how they will be in the city, i.e. the whole subject of their position and standing in the State. It is this, as well as their education, which is described in the sequel. The present sentence is intended as a full and accurate forecast of the rest of VI and VII. Ξ has ἔσονται, which was read till Bekker restored ἐνέσονται.

24 οὐδὲν κτλ. Cf. 497 C, D nn. There, as here, the κατάστασις τῶν ἀρχόντων and the position of women and children etc. are treated as parts of one and the same question. The first obscure hint of this connexion is in IV 423 E, but it is not till V 471 C ff. that we begin to see the intimate relation between the two subjects. In V 450 C Socrates for the first time touches on the question 'Are our proposals about women' etc. 'possible?' The same question reappears in 471 C, but with a larger scope 'Is the perfect city possible as a whole?' The reply is 'Yes, if Philosophers are Kings'; and thus is re-opened the whole subject of the κατάστασις τῶν ἀρχόντων. Plato is therefore justified in connecting, as he does, the two topics here mentioned. But he overstates the case when he asserts that the κατάστασις τῶν ἀρχόντων has been omitted in Books III and IV (see III 412 B ff.), or slurred over in the same way as the Community of Wives and Children, in spite of various hints of a fuller treatment still to come (III 414 A: cf. IV 442 C n.). See also on 503 A and Krohn Pl. St. p. 127, Pfeiderer Zur Lösung etc. p. 28, with the replies of Grimmelt de reip. Pl. comp. et univ. p. 49 and Westerwick de rep. Pl. comm. pp. 54 ff.

26 τὴν—κατάστασιν = 'the appointment of the Rulers' is equivalent, as in the title or heading of a chapter, to τὸ περὶ τῆς—καταστάσεως. Of this subject the Rulers' education naturally forms the most important part; but we ought not to explain τῶν ἀρχόντων as brachylogical for τῆς τῶν ἀρχόντων παιδείας (with Krohn Pl. St. p. 126).

27 παντελῶς ἀληθῆς. The adjective should be translated literally, so as to suggest that the best κατάστασις is also the truest. The ideal is the true in Plato: cf. V 473 A n.

502 E 29 τὸ δὲ—δεῖ. Plato admits that the subject of the Rulers requires to be reinvestigated practically from the beginning. Their strictly intellectual needs have hitherto been almost ignored: see 497 C n. But Plato does not propose to supersede the earlier education in Music and Gymnastic, nor are the two schemes theoretically incompatible, as Krohn appears to hold (Pl. St. p. 127). We are clearly intended to suppose that the

- 30 δεῖ. ἐλέγομεν δ', εἰ μνημονεύεις, δεῖν αὐτοὺς φιλοπόλιδ' αἰς τε 50 φαίνεσθαι βασανιζομένους ἐν ἡδοναῖς τε καὶ λύπαις καὶ τὸ δόγμα τοῦτο μήτ' ἐν πόνοις μήτ' ἐν φόβοις μήτ' ἐν ἄλλῃ μηδεμιᾷ μετα-βολῇ φαίνεσθαι ἐκβάλλοντας, ἢ τὸν ἀδυνατοῦντα ἀποκριτέον, τὸν 5 δὲ πανταχοῦ ἀκήρατον ἐκβαίνοντα ὥσπερ χρυσὸν ἐν πυρὶ βασανι-ζόμενον στατέον ἄρχοντα καὶ γέρα δοτέον καὶ ζῶντι καὶ τελευτήσαντι καὶ ἄθλα. τοιαῦτ' ἅττα ἦν τὰ λεγόμενα παρεξίοντος καὶ παρακαλυπτομένου τοῦ λόγου, ¹ πεφοβημένου κινεῖν τὸ νῦν παρόν. Β
'Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη, λέγεις· μέμνημαι γάρ. "Οκνος γάρ, ἔφην, ὦ 10 φίλε, ἐγώ, εἰπεῖν τὰ νῦν ἀποτετολμημένα· νῦν δὲ τοῦτο μὲν τετολμήσθω εἰπεῖν, ὅτι τοὺς ἀκριβεστάτους φύλακας φιλοσόφους δεῖ καθιστάναι. Εἰρήσθω γάρ, ἔφη. Νόησον δὴ, ὡς εἰκότως ὀλίγοι ἔσονται σοι. ἦν γὰρ διήλθομεν φύσιν δεῖν ὑπάρχειν αὐτοῖς, εἰς ταῦτ' οὖν ξυμφέεσθαι αὐτῆς τὰ μέρη ὀλιγίαις ἐθέλει, τὰ πολλὰ δὲ 15 διεσπασμένη φύεται. ¹ Πῶς, ἔφη, λέγεις; Εὐμαθεῖς καὶ μνήμονες C

Rulers receive the moral as well as the intellectual training, although in practice, no doubt, some modifications might be necessary, so long as the two proceeded simultaneously. See VII 536 D and II 376 E nn.

30 ἐλέγομεν. III 412 C—414 B.

503 A 2 τὸ δόγμα τοῦτο. The patriot's creed: see III 412 E, 413 C.

4 ἦ = 'alioquin.' Cf. V 463 D n.

7 καὶ ἄθλα is ejected by Cobet. The precise words do not occur in III 414 A, but they are unobjectionable, and end the sentence well. Cf. V 460 B καὶ γέρα δοτέον καὶ ἄθλα, and see also on V 465 D.

8 παρακαλυπτομένου: 'putting on her veil.' The λόγος is personified, as often.

κινεῖν τὸ νῦν παρόν. There is perhaps a hint of the proverb εἰ κείμενον κακὸν μὴ κινεῖ. No one who reads III 412 B—414 B without reference to the present passage would detect that the λόγος 'leaves the high road' in 414 B because she is afraid to raise the question of the Philosopher-king. The words ὡς ἐν τύπῳ, μὴ δὲ ἀκριβείας, εἰρήσθαι would not suggest to him anything of the kind; and the impression which the earlier account of the Rulers leaves on us is that it was intended by Plato himself to be complete in outline, though not in detail. From the standpoint of Book VI it is certainly even in outline incomplete. Cf. Krohn Pl. St. p. 126, where the case is somewhat overstated; and see on 497 C, 502 D. But there is nothing in all this to justify any chorizontic inference, if only we have regard to the laws of the Dialogue as a form of literary art. See Introd. § 4.

503 B 9 ὀκνος κτλ. Examples of the omission of ἦν will be found in Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. p. 33. *q*² has ὠκνον: but cf. V 450 D.

11 ὅτι—καθιστάναι: lit. 'that we must appoint philosophers in the persons of our most perfect guardians,' i.e. that the rulers we appoint must be philosophers. The ἀκριβεστάτοι φύλακες are the same as the τέλει φύλακες of IV 428 D: and the whole expression is equivalent to ὅτι φιλοσόφους δεῖ εἶναι τοὺς ἀκριβεστάτους φύλακας οὓς καθίσταμεν. To read καθιστάναι for καθιστάναι (with v) is much less elegant; still less should we follow D. and V. in transposing φύλακας and φιλοσόφους. For the sense of ἀκριβεστάτους cf. (with Jackson) I 341 B, 342 D.

15 διεσπασμένη. Cobet proposes διεσπασμένα, which he wrongly asserts to be the reading of A. But the parts of the philosophic φύσις are not torn asunder; it is the φύσις itself which is in partes distincta. Bywater's διεσπαρμένα avoids this difficulty; but διεσπασμένη is much better, because it suggests that the disjunction is 'unnatural' (in the Platonic sense of παρὰ φύσιν): see on IV 443 B.

καὶ ἀγχίνοι καὶ ὀξεῖς καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα τούτοις ἔπεται καὶ νεανικοί τε καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τὰς διανοίας οἷσθ' ὅτι οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν ἅμα φύεσθαι οἱοι κοσμίως μετὰ ἡσυχίας καὶ βεβαιότητος ἐθέλειν ζῆν, ἀλλ' οἱ τοιοῦτοι ὑπὸ ὀξύτητος φέρονται ὅπη ἂν τύχωσιν, καὶ τὸ βέβαιον ἅπαν αὐτῶν ἐξοίχεται. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη, λέγεις. Οὐκοῦν τὰ 20 βέβαια αὐτὰ ταῦτα ἦθη καὶ οὐκ εὐμετάβολα, οἷς ἂν τις μᾶλλον ὡς πιστοῖς ἵ χρήσαιο, καὶ ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ πρὸς τοὺς φόβους δυσκίνητα ὄντα πρὸς τὰς μαθήσεις αὐ ποιεῖ ταῦτόν· δυσκινήτως ἔχει καὶ δυσμαθῶς ὥσπερ ἀπονεαρκωμένα, καὶ ὕπνου τε καὶ χάσμης ἐμπίμπλονται, ὅταν τι δέη τοιοῦτον διαπονεῖν. Ἔστι ταῦτα, ἔφη. 25 Ἡμεῖς δέ γε ἔφαμεν ἀμφοτέρων δεῖν εὖ τε καὶ καλῶς μετέχειν, ἢ μήτε παιδείας τῆς ἀκριβεστάτης δεῖν αὐτῷ μεταδιδόναι μήτε τιμῆς μήτε ἀρχῆς. Ὁρθῶς, ἢ δ' ὅς. Οὐκοῦν σπάνιον αὐτὸ οἶε ἔσσεσθαι; Ε Πῶς δ' οὐ; Βασανιστέον δὴ ἔν τε ὁἷς τότε ἐλέγομεν πόνοις τε καὶ φόβοις καὶ ἡδοναῖς, καὶ ἔτι δὴ ὁ τότε παρεῖμεν νῦν λέγομεν, ὅτι καὶ 30 ἐν μαθήμασι πολλοῖς γυμνάζειν δεῖ σκοποῦντας εἰ καὶ τὰ μέγιστα 04 μαθήματα δυνατὴ ἔσται ἐνεργεῖν, εἴτε καὶ ἀποδιδελιάσει, ὥσπερ οἱ

16. καὶ νεανικοί τε—διανοίας post ἔπεται nos: post φύεσθαι codd.

The philosophic nature ought to be born whole.

503 C 15 εὐμαθεῖς κτλ. 'The faculty of learning easily, memory, sagacity, quickness, and so on, together with spirit and high-mindedness, are, as you know, not often naturally combined with the disposition to live soberly in quiet and steadfast ways' etc. Plato means that natural intelligence and vivacity, with their accompaniments of spirit and highmindedness, rarely go with moral steadfastness. A good illustration is afforded by the contrast between "the Athenian and the Spartan, the former 'neither resting themselves nor letting anyone else rest, the latter so slow that aggression can hardly rouse them to repel it'" (Bosanquet). Cf. Thucyd. 1 70. For other views on the text and interpretation of this difficult passage see App. VI.

19 ὑπὸ ὀξύτητος κτλ. Theaet. 144 A οἷ τε ὀξεῖς—καὶ ἀγχίνοι καὶ μνήμονες—ἄττοντες φέρονται ὥσπερ τὰ ἀνερμάτιστα πλοῖα.

20 τὰ βέβαια κτλ. Theaet. 144 B οἷ τε αὐ ἐμβριθέστεροι νωθροὶ πῶς ἅπαν-τῶσι πρὸς τὰς μαθήσεις καὶ λήθης γέμοντες.

503 D 26 ἔφαμεν. 484 D—487 A. ἀμφοτέρων is explained in 503 C n.

27 αὐτῷ is probably masculine (Schneider), in spite of αὐτό (the philosophic ἦθος) immediately following. We can hardly speak of assigning concrete τιμή or ἀρχή to an ἦθος. The pronoun refers to the philosophic guardian, that is to be. See on δυνατὴ ἔσται 503 E.

503 E 29 ἐλέγομεν. III 413 A ff.

32 δυνατὴ ἔσται: sc. ἡ φύσις αὐτῶν. φύσις was last employed in 503 B, since when it has been represented both by the individual and by the ἦθος (αὐτῷ and αὐτό in 503 D). We must bear in mind that the Greek inflexions of gender made it easier for them than it is for us to tolerate such irregularities. No Greek could possibly misunderstand the reference, as soon as he heard the -η of δυνατή. A tolerably close parallel will be found in Phaedr. 254 B (not D, as Stallbaum prints). See also 508 D and X 605 C m. Bywater conjectures δυνήσεται, but δυνήσεται is unlikely to have been corrupted into δυνατὴ ἔσται.

ἀπονεαρκω - to be quite torpid or stupid.

ἐν τοῖς ἄθλοις ἀποδειλιῶντες. Πρέπει γέ τοι δὴ, ἔφη, οὕτω σκοπεῖν· ἀλλὰ ποῖα δὴ λέγεις μαθήματα μέγιστα;

XVI. Μνημονεύεις μὲν που, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι τριττὰ εἶδη ψυχῆς διαστησάμενοι ξυμβιβάζομεν δικαιοσύνης τε πέρι καὶ σωφροσύνης καὶ ἀνδρείας καὶ σοφίας ὃ ἕκαστον εἶη. Μὴ γὰρ μνημονεύων, ἔφη, τὰ λοιπὰ ἂν εἶην δίκαιος μὴ ἀκούειν. Ἡ καὶ τὸ προρρηθὲν αὐτῶν; Ἡ τοῖον δὴ; Ἐλέγομέν που, ὅτι, ὡς μὲν δυνατόν ἦν κάλλιστα Β αὐτὰ κατιδεῖν, ἄλλη μακροτέρα εἶη περίοδος, ἣν περιελθόντι κατα-

2. ἄθλοις Orelli: ἄλλοις codd.

504 A 2 ἄθλοις. See cr. n. Orelli's emendation has met with considerable favour; but Schneider, Stallbaum, and J. and C. still retain ἄλλοις. With the MS reading we must, I think, translate 'in the other cases' i.e. in the πόνοι etc. spoken of just before. (If Plato merely meant 'in other kinds of effort' it was not worth his while to insert the clause at all.) But ὥσπερ certainly suggests something more than a mere comparison between flinching at moral, and flinching at intellectual tests; and nothing could be more appropriate, or more in Plato's way, than an allusion to the games: see on V 465 D. That ἄθλοι in this sense is half-poetic, "occurring only in the Timaeus and the Lysis" (J. and C.), is scarcely an objection in Plato. ἄθλοις also suits well with γυμνάζειν. In [Axióch.] 365 A occur the words ὡς γὰρ ἀγωνιστῆς δειλός, ἐν τοῖς γυμνασίοις γενναῖος φαινόμενος, ἀποτέλειται ἐν τοῖς ἄθλοις. The author of the Axióchos may have been thinking of the present passage, and if so, he certainly read ἄθλοις. See also the fine anecdote in Plut. Them. II. 3.

504 A—505 B Glauco enquires what these 'greatest studies' are. You will remember, says Socrates, that we described our earlier or psychological method of arriving at the Virtues as inadequate and incomplete. Our guardians must travel by a longer road, if they would reach their proper goal, i.e. the highest of all studies, which is something above and beyond even the virtues. And these very virtues must no longer be seen merely in outline; they must be studied in all their fulness and perfection. The highest study is the Idea of the Good, as Glauco has often heard before. It is the knowledge of this Idea which alone renders all other knowledge useful and profitable.

504 A 5 διαστησάμενοι. IV 436 A ff. ξυμβιβάζομεν: 'we drew conclusions,' viz. in IV 441 C ff. The use of συμβιβάζειν as a synonym for συμπεραίνεισθαι, συλλογίζεσθαι, is common in Aristotle: for examples see Bonitz Ind. Ar. s. v.

504 B 8 ἐλέγομεν. See IV 435 D n. ἦν: "ut ἐχρῆν et similia dictum" (Schneider). There is no reason to eject the word (with Madvig) or to write εἶη: why should not the mood of the oratio recta be retained? εἶη would be displeasing with εἶη following so soon. Liebholt's ὡς μὲν δυνατόν ἦ is unclassical: see on I 349 C. Richards conjectures ὡς μὲν <ὡς ἢ ὅσον ἢ εἰς τὸ> δυνατόν κάλλιστα κτλ., taking ὡς with κατιδεῖν. But we ought not to multiply instances of ὡς for ὥστε in Plato (II 365 D n.). The infinitive means simply 'for desecring,' 'in order to desecry them in the best possible way': see Goodwin MT. p. 308 and Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 586.

9 αὐτά is of course the four cardinal virtues, like ταῦτα in 504 D. The 'longer circuit' is the educational training necessary in order to enable the guardians to obtain scientific knowledge of the virtues by discerning their relation with the Idea of Good: cf. 506 A. In Book IV Justice, Temperance etc. were regarded as psychological qualities or relations; but the philosophic Guardians must learn their metaphysical import. Throughout the rest of VI and VII Plato, in short, discards Psychology for Metaphysics. Thus much is clear; but many difficult and interesting questions arise in connexion with this passage, as Krohn and others have pointed out. The μακροτέρα περίοδος mentioned in IV 435 D appears to be a longer way of determining, not the essential nature of the virtues, but whether Soul has 'parts' or not. (A φανῇ γίγνοιτο, τῶν μέντοι ἔμπροσθεν προειρημένων ἐπομένους 10 ἀποδείξεις οἷον τ' εἶη προσάψαι. καὶ ὑμεῖς ἔξαρκεῖν ἔφατε, καὶ οὕτω δὴ ἐρρήθη τὰ τότε τῆς μὲν ἀκριβείας, ὥς ἐμοὶ ἐφαίνετο, ἐλλιπῇ, εἰ δὲ ὑμῖν ἀρεσκόντως, ὑμεῖς ἂν τοῦτο εἴποιτε. 'Αλλ'

 C ἔμοιγε, ἔφη, μετρίως· ἐφαίνετο μὴν καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις. ¹ 'Αλλ', ὦ φίλε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μέτρον τῶν τοιούτων ἀπολείπον καὶ ὁτιοῦν τοῦ 15 ὄντος οὐ πᾶν μετρίως γίγνεται· ἀτελὲς γὰρ οὐδὲν οὐδενὸς μέτρον.
 δοκεῖ δ' ἐνίοτε τισιν ἱκανῶς ἤδη ἔχειν καὶ οὐδὲν δεῖν περαιτέρω ζητεῖν. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη, συχνοὶ πάσχουσιν αὐτὸ διὰ ῥαθυμίαν.
 Τούτου δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοῦ παθήματος ἥκιστα προσδεῖ φύλακι πόλεώς τε καὶ νόμων. Εἰκός, ἦ δ' ὅς. Τὴν μακροτέραν τοίνυν, ὦ 20 D ἐταῖρε, ἔφην, περιτέον ¹ τῷ τοιούτῳ, καὶ οὐχ ἥττον μαυθάνοντι πονητέον ἢ γυμναζομένῳ· ἢ, ὃ νῦν δὴ ἐλέγομεν, τοῦ μεγίστου τε καὶ μάλιστα προσήκοντος μαθήματος ἐπὶ τέλος οὐποτε ἤξει. Οὐ γὰρ ταῦτα, ἔφη, μέγιστα, ἀλλ' ἔτι τι μεῖζον δικαιοσύνης τε καὶ ὧν

13. ἐλλιπῇ II: ἐλλειπῇ (sic) A. 15. ἀπολείπον υ et in mg. A² (γρ ἀπολείπον καὶ ὅτι ὄν τοιούτος οὐ πᾶν μέτριος): ἀπολείπων A¹: ἀπολειπών (sic) II: ἀπολιπών γ.
 17. δεῖν II: δεῖ A. 19. προσδεῖ II: προσδεῖται A. 22. ἢ γυμναζομένῳ—τε II: om. A.

solution of this difficulty is suggested on 435 D). Socrates' shorter road, again, is not a way by which the Guardians are to go, but a method employed by himself in studying primarily the Soul, and secondarily the virtues. Finally, what is the relation between the psychological conception of Virtue and the metaphysical? And does the metaphysical conception involve a revised psychology or not? The last question is touched on in the notes to X 611 B, where Plato himself appears to raise it. For the last but one see on 504 D.

10 ἐπομένους: 'corresponding with' 'on a level with' (Jowett) viz. in point of ἀκριβεία: cf. IV 435 D τῶν γε προειρημένων τε καὶ προσεκεμμένων ἀξίως, where see note. For the genitive with ἐπόμενος cf. (with Stallbaum) Pol. 271 E and Latws 899 C (ὅποσα τούτων ξυνεπόμενα, according to the best MS). Bywater would read ἐχομένα here and ἐχόμενα in the Politicus, but it is safer to make no change, although the reverse corruption of ἐχόμενα for ἐπόμενα apparently occurs in Gorg. 494 E, if Bekker's restoration is correct.

504 C 14 ἀλλ' ὦ φίλε κτλ. Socrates σοφίζεται περὶ τὸ ὄνομα (509 D)—plays on the etymological sense of μετρίως. In effect he says "Don't say 'μετρίως': short measure in such cases is no measure at all: for—if 'Measure' be rightly understood—there can be no imperfect measure of anything." Etymologically, for example, ἀτελὲς μέτρον ὕδατος is a misnomer, for the measure must be exactly commensurate with the water. Hence the μέτρον τῶν ἀκριβεστάτων must itself be ἀκριβεστάτον (cf. 504 E). The essential perfection of μέτρον, τὸ μέτριον and the like is expounded in Pol. 284 A ff., Phil. 64 D ff. and 66 A: cf. also Latws 716 C ff., where we read that God, not Man, is the Measure of all things. The translation 'Nothing imperfect is the measure of anything' (Jowett and others) suggests, I think, a wrong idea, and is not so well adapted to μέτρον—γίγνεται.

17 τισιν: with reference, perhaps, to Adimantus and the others (J. and C., comparing II 372 E. Cf. also V 465 E). Adimantus betrays no consciousness of the allusion in his reply.

504 D 22 ἢ=alioquin. Cf. V 463 D n.

νῦν δῆ. The reference (somewhat loose, as usual) is to 503 E.

25 διήλθομεν; Καὶ μείζον, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ αὐτῶν τούτων οὐχ ὑπο-γραφὴν δεῖ ὥσπερ νῦν θεάσασθαι, ἀλλὰ τὴν τελεωτάτην ἀπεργασίαν μὴ παρίεναι. ἣ οὐ γελοῖον ἐπὶ μὲν ἄλλοις σμικροῦ ἀξίοις πᾶν ποιεῖν συντετιμένους, ὅπως ὅ τι ἀκριβέστατα καὶ καθαρώτατα Ε ἔξει, τῶν δὲ μεγίστων μὴ μεγίστας ἀξιούν εἶναι καὶ τὰς ἀκριβείας; 30 Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. ὁ μέντοι μέγιστον μάθημα καὶ περὶ ὅ τι αὐτὸ λέγεις, οἷοι τιν' ἂν σε, ἔφη, ἀφείναι μὴ ἐρωτήσαντα τί ἐστίν; Οὐ πάνυ, ἣν δ' ἐγώ. ἀλλὰ καὶ σὺ ἐρώτα: πάντως αὐτὸ οὐκ ὀλιγάκις ἀκήκοας, νῦν δὲ ἢ οὐκ ἐννοεῖς ἢ αὐ διανοεῖ ἐμοὶ πράγματα παρέχειν 50 ἀντιλαμβανόμενος. οἶμαι δὲ τοῦτο μᾶλλον, ἐπεὶ ὅτι γε ἡ τοῦ

30. ἔφη Ast: ἔφη, ἄξιον τὸ διανόημα codd.

25 καὶ μείζον κτλ. καί—καί= 'not only—but also.' αὐτῶν τούτων is 'harum ipsarum virtutum.'

οὐχ ὑπογραφὴν—ὥσπερ νῦν is as clear a proof as we could wish that Justice and the other virtues, as described in Book IV, are not the transcendental αὐτὰ καθ' αὐτὰ εἶδη: see on III 402 C. They are only a ὑπογραφὴ or 'adumbratio' of the Ideas, being, we may suppose, simply the psychological relations which result from the παρουσία of the Ideas in certain particulars, viz. in human souls, during their union with human bodies. ὥσπερ νῦν admits moreover that the Rulers of III and IV (apart from a few suggestions to the opposite effect: see on 497 C) had only 'correct opinion' and not 'knowledge' (in the strict Platonic sense): it was their duty to accept and carry out the precepts of Plato, the founder of the city (IV 429 C n.).

27 παρίεναι. The present is better than παρεῖναι, which Herwerden conjectures.

504 E 30 καὶ μάλα. See cr. n. The words ἄξιον τὸ διανόημα are not strictly suitable to ἣ οὐ γελοῖον, and although διανόημα is of course a Platonic word, it is questionable whether Plato could have used it in this way. Perhaps we owe the comment to a gratified monk, who may have applied the observation to systematic theology. The comment is at all events a just one. Cf. 496 A n. Plato's remark is best illustrated by the case of the exact sciences; and in a certain sense it may be said that he wished to make Politics into an exact science.

ὁ μέντοι κτλ.: lit. 'but that which you call the greatest study, and that which you call its subject whatever it be—do you suppose any one would let you off without asking what they are?' Richards finds a difficulty, but there is none, if only we take ὅ τι not as interrogative, but as the indefinite relative. For εἶναι omitted see Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. p. 33. The μέγιστον μάθημα is Dialectic; and its subject the Idea of Good, though of course the latter can itself be called the μέγιστον μάθημα, as in 505 A. For ἐρωτᾷ Richards neatly conjectures ἐρωτᾷς, but the text ('You may ask it yourself if you like') is better. See next note.

505 A 2 ἀντιλαμβανόμενος: 'by holding on fast to me,' 'refusing to let me go,' is the opposite of ἀφείναι: cf. VIII 544 B n. 'By raising objections' (D. and V.) is incorrect: see on 497 D. Socrates means 'you intend to bother me as before'—αὐ refers to V 449 B ff.—'by not letting me off, but on this occasion you won't succeed, for I have the answer ready, so ask away!' Cf. ἐρώτα in Gorg. 448 B.

ἡ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέα κτλ. It is clear from πολλὰκις ἀκήκοας that the supremacy of the Idea of Good was already a recognised tenet of the Platonic school. No proof of the doctrine is here attempted by Plato (cf. V 475 E n.): it is merely expounded and explained. τὸ Ἰλατῶνος ἀγαθόν was in antiquity a proverb for any dark or obscure saying: see Amphis ap. D. L. III 27 ἥττον οἶδα τοῦτ' ἐγώ, | ὦ δέσποτ', ἢ τὸ Ἰλατῶνος ἀγαθόν. (Another allusion occurs in Alexis ap. Athen. VIII

ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέα μέγιστον μάθημα, πολλάκις ἀκήκοας, ἥ δίκαια καὶ τᾶλλα προσχρησάμενα χρήσιμα καὶ ὠφέλιμα γίνονται. καὶ νῦν σχεδὸν οἶσθ' ὅτι μέλλω τοῦτο λέγειν, καὶ πρὸς τούτῳ ὅτι αὐτὴν 5 οὐχ ἰκανῶς ἴσμεν· εἰ δὲ μὴ ἴσμεν, ἄνευ δὲ ταύτης εἰ ὅ τι μάλιστα τᾶλλα ἐπισταίμεθα, οἶσθ' ὅτι οὐδὲν ἡμῖν ὄφελος, ὥσπερ οὐδ' εἰ B κεκτῆμεθά τι ἄνευ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ. ἥ οἶει τι πλεον εἶναι πᾶσαν κτῆσιν ἐκτῆσθαι, μὴ μέντοι ἀγαθὴν; ἥ πάντα τᾶλλα φρονεῖν ἄνευ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ, καλὸν δὲ καὶ ἀγαθὸν μηδὲν φρονεῖν; Μὰ Δί' οὐκ 10 ἔγωγ', ἔφη.

8. εἶναι Ξγ: εἰδέναι AII, sed δ et ε punctis notavit A².

354 D). Some account of the enormous literature of the subject will be found in Zeller¹ II 1. pp. 709 ff., 718 n. 1. In addition to Stumpf's treatise to be presently named, I have found the monograph by Biehl Die Idee des Guten bei Platon Graz 1870 particularly good and useful. Other special treatises are also referred to in the course of the notes. The majority of interpreters are now agreed in identifying Plato's Idea of the Good with his philosophical conception of the Deity. The best and fullest proof of the identity is still, I think, Stumpf's exhaustive dissertation Das Verhältniss des Platonischen Gottes zur Idee des Guten Halle 1869. There is only one passage in his works where Plato himself appears expressly to identify the two, viz. Phil. 22 C, but on the principle that things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another, the identification is complete, and I have therefore thought myself at liberty throughout the notes occasionally to illustrate Plato's metaphysics by his theology.

3 δίκαια καὶ τᾶλλα. It is only by κοινωνία with the Idea of Good that δίκαια, καλά etc. become good i.e. useful and beneficial (synonyms of 'good': see V 457 B n.). Otherwise they are altogether useless. δίκαια does not of course mean the Idea of Justice, but τὰ πολλὰ δίκαια in the widest sense of the term, including νόμιμα περὶ δικαίων: see on V 476 A, 476 C, 479 D. Baiter's δὴ καὶ for δίκαια καὶ occurs in one or two inferior MSS, but is certainly wrong: see on 506 A.

5 ὅτι—ἴσμεν. Cf. 506 D ff., VII 517 B ff., 532 E ff. and Tim. 28 C, where much the same is said of the πατήρ τοῦ παντός.

6 εἰ δὲ μὴ ἴσμεν κτλ.: 'and if we know it not, and should know all else excepting it never so well' etc. Cobet does ill to expunge εἰ δὲ μὴ ἴσμεν. The repetition of εἰ before ἐπισταίμεθα is necessary because, while ἴσμεν expresses a fact, ἐπισταίμεθα is only an improbable supposition: see next note. The sentiment is one of Plato's commonplaces: see for example Alc. II 144 D ff. (where it is expounded in detail), 147 B, Charm. 173 A ff., Euthyd. 280 E ff., 289 A ff., 291, and cf. also Lach. 199 C, Lys. 219 B ff., Phaed. 69 B. 'Stumpf das Verhältniss etc. p. 87 n. compares also the language about the Gods in Laws 905 C. The Euthydemus and Charmides already forecast the city of the Philosopher-king, in which the Knowledge of Good shall 'sit alone in the helm of the state' (Euthyd. 291 D): see Nohle die Staatslehre Pl. pp. 39—48.

8 κεκτῆμεθα. To possess a thing ἄνευ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ is matter of common and daily occurrence; to know everything (except the Good) is not. Hence the indicative κεκτῆμεθα is as appropriate now as the optative ἐπισταίμεθα was before. I formerly read κεκτῆμεθα with II and the majority of editors, but now agree with Schneider that there is no reason to depart from the text of A.

505 B 9 φρονεῖν ἄνευ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ. The last three words were suspected by Morgenstern and bracketed by Stallbaum and others. If we take these words (like ἄνευ ταύτης above) with τᾶλλα, they are not superfluous; 'eo enim quod quis reliqua omnia excepto bono intelligit, efficitur ut nihil, quod pulchrum et bonum sit, intelligat' (Schneider). That some writers might have omitted the phrase is no ground for interfering with Plato's characteristic fullness of expression.

XVII. Ἀλλὰ μὴν καὶ τόδε γε οἶσθα, ὅτι τοῖς μὲν πολλοῖς ἡδονὴ δοκεῖ εἶναι τὸ ἀγαθόν, τοῖς δὲ κομψοτέροις φρόνησις. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Καὶ ὅτι γε, ὦ φίλε, οἱ τοῦτο ἡγούμενοι οὐκ ἔχουσι δεῖξαι, 15 ἥτις φρόνησις, ἀλλ' ἀναγκάζονται τελευτώντες τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ φάναι. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη, γελοῖως. Πῶς γὰρ οὐχί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ¹ εἰ ὀνειδίζοντές γε, ὅτι οὐκ ἴσμεν τὸ ἀγαθόν, λέγουσι πάλιν ὡς εἰδόσιν; φρόνησιν γὰρ αὐτό φασι εἶναι ἀγαθοῦ ὡς αὐτοὶ ξυνιέντων ἡμῶν ὅτι λέγουσιν, ἐπειδὴν τὸ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ φθέγγωνται ὄνομα. Ἀληθέστατα, 20 ἔφη. Τί δέ; οἱ τὴν ἡδονὴν ἀγαθὸν ὀρίζομενοι μὴν μὴ τι ἐλάττωτος πλάνης ἔμπλεοι τῶν ἐτέρων; ἢ οὐ καὶ οὗτοι ἀναγκάζονται ὁμολογεῖν ἡδονὰς εἶναι κακὰς; Σφόδρα γε. Συμβαίνει δὲ αὐτοῖς, οἶμαι, ὁμολογεῖν ¹ ἀγαθὰ εἶναι καὶ κακὰ ταῦτά. ἢ γάρ; Τί μὴν; Οὐκοῦν ὅτι μὲν μεγάλα καὶ πολλὰ ἀμφισβητήσεις περὶ αὐτοῦ, 25 φανερόν; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Τί δέ; τόδε οὐ φανερόν, ὡς δίκαια μὲν

505 B—506 A What then is the Good? The majority answer 'Pleasure,' others, who are more refined, 'Knowledge.' Neither of these views is tenable. Men are constantly disputing about the Good, but its existence is practically admitted by all, for it is the ultimate object of all endeavour. The Idea of the Good must be known by our Guardians; for unless they know the connexion between the Good, and particular instances of the just, the honourable etc., they cannot guard the latter, or even indeed be said to know them in any adequate measure.

12 τοῖς μὲν πολλοῖς κτλ. We need not (with Tietzel Die Id. d. Guten u. d. Gottesbegriff p. 9) find in this an allusion to Aristippus and the Cyrenaics. Plato means what he says and no more. Pleasure is always the summum bonum of the Many: cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. i 3, 1095^b 16. In τοῖς κομψοτέροις Dümmler (Antisth. p. 43) and others have recognised Antisthenes: cf. RP⁷ § 218 B n. b. Hermann (Gesch. u. System p. 329 n. 323) interprets the words—more correctly, I think—of Socrates (cf. Xen. Mem. iv 5. 6) and his immediate followers, Antisthenes included. The Megarians sometimes held the same view (D. L. ii 106). See also next note.

505 C 19 ἐπειδὴν κτλ.: "when they utter the mysterious word 'good'." For φθέγγεσθαι of a high-sounding, oracular, impressive utterance cf. vii 527 A, viii 568 A, Prot. 342 E, Phaedr. 238 D, Ar. Clouds 315. Plato's criticism applies to himself, in common with the other pupils of Socrates, and was doubtless intended to do so. He constantly declares that 'knowledge of the good' is the all-important possession for man: see on ei δὲ μὴ ἴσμεν 505 A. The present discussion removes the petitio principii by explaining what the ἰδέα τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ really means.

21 ἢ οὐ καὶ οὗτοι κτλ. This is exactly what happens to Callicles in Gorg. 495 A—499 C. If Plato is referring to any dialogue at all, the Gorgias i.e. illustrates his point much better than the Philebus (13 A—C), to which Zeller⁴ II 1. p. 548, Susemihl Gen. Entw. II p. 192, and others of the older generation of scholars suppose that Plato is alluding. But there is nothing to suggest any cross-reference at all. On the question whether the Philebus is or is not prior to the Republic see Jackson in J. Ph. xxv pp. 65—82.

505 D 25 τόδε οὐ φανερόν κτλ. The contrast is between δίκαια, καλὰ on the one hand, and ἀγαθὰ or ὠφέλημα (V 457 B n.) on the other. All men desire the reality of good (cf. IV 438 A n.), but many are content with the semblance of honour. Cobet expunges τὰ δοκούντα, and καὶ before δοκεῖν, thereby leaving a very crabbed piece of Greek. Ast's καὶ διώκειν for καὶ δοκεῖν is on a higher plane of criticism. The text is nevertheless sound. δοκεῖν 'to seem' is used absolutely, as in II 361 B,

26. $\tilde{\eta} \Theta \Phi r: \epsilon \tilde{\eta} \Lambda \Pi \Xi q.$

Let me remind you (he proceeds) of our

XVIII. Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη. ἀλλὰ σὺ δὴ, ὦ Σώκρατες, πότερον 10 ἐπιστήμην τὸ ἀγαθὸν φησὶ εἶναι, ἢ ἡδονήν, ἢ ἄλλο τι παρὰ ταῦτα; Οὗτος, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀνὴρ, καλῶς ἦσθα καὶ πάλοι καταφανὴς ὅτι σοὶ οὐκ ἀποχρήσοι τὸ τοῖς ἄλλοις δοκοῦν περὶ αὐτῶν. Οὐδὲ γὰρ δίκαιόν μοι, ἔφη, ὦ Σώκρατες, φαίνεται τὰ τῶν ἄλλων μὲν ἔχειν εἰπεῖν δόγματα, τὸ δ' αὐτοῦ μή, τοσοῦτον χρόνον περὶ ταῦτα 15πραγματευόμενον. Τί δέ; ἦν δ' ἐγώ. ἰδοκεῖ σοι δίκαιον εἶναι περὶ ὧν τις μὴ οἶδεν λέγειν ὡς εἰδότα; Οὐδαμῶς γ', ἔφη, ὡς εἰδότα, ὡς μέντοι οἰόμενον ταῦθ' ἂ οἶεται ἐθέλγειν λέγειν. Τί δέ; εἶπον.
 οὐκ ἦσθησαι τὰς ἄνευ ἐπιστήμης δόξας, ὡς πᾶσαι αἰσχυραί; ὧν αἱ βέλτισται τυφλαί. ἢ δοκοῦσί τί σοι τυφλῶν διαφέρειν ὁδὸν ὀρθῶς 20πορευομένων οἱ ἄνευ νοῦ ἀληθές τι δοξάζοντες; Οὐδέν, ἔφη.
 Βούλει οὖν αἰσχυρὰ θεάσασθαι, τυφλά τε καὶ σκολιά, ἔξον παρ' D

II. ἀνὴρ καλῶς II: ἀνὴρ καλῶς A¹: ἀνὴρ καλὸς A².

usual distinction between Particulars and Ideas, the former apprehended by Sight, the latter by Reason. In the case of most of the senses, nothing is required except the faculty and its object in order that a sensation may take place. But in order that we may see, a third requisite is necessary, viz. Light. Now the author of Light is the Sun, and we may therefore say that the Sun is the cause of Sight. We must not identify either Sight or the Eye with the Sun, although the Eye resembles the Sun more closely than any other organ of sense, and the Sun himself is seen by the Eye.

506 B 9 πότερον ἐπιστήμην κτλ. Even if it could be shewn that the Philebus is earlier than the Republic—and recent critics take the opposite view—there would be no sufficient reason for holding (with Zeller⁴ II i. p. 708 n.) that Plato is referring to that dialogue, although he there denies that either Knowledge or Pleasure is the Chief Good (20 B ff., 60 E). See also on 505 C and 506 E.

II οὗτος κτλ. καλῶς has in reality—see cr. n.—more and better MS support than καλός, which Schneider retained in the belief that A read καλός. Used in this way, καλῶς is colloquial (Jebb on Soph. O. T. 1008 καλῶς εἰ ὄηλος οὐκ εἰδῶς τί δρᾶς).

506 C 15 δοκεῖ σοι δίκαιον κτλ. The sentence is ironical, as is clear from ἔξον παρ' ἄλλων (the Sophists forsooth) ἀκούειν φανὰ τε καὶ καλά in D below.

Plato frequently feigns ignorance and self-distrust before expounding some great principle of whose truth he is himself profoundly convinced: cf. V 450 D. The notion that he really lays claim only to δόξα or even ὀρθὴ δόξα of the Good is hardly to be entertained, although he does not claim to have perfect knowledge: to that we may, perchance, attain hereafter. See 505 A n.

19 ἢ δοκοῦσί τί σοι κτλ. On ὀρθὴ δόξα see Men. 97 A—98 A, Theaet. 201 C, Tim. 51 D, E. Correct opinion believes, but does not know, and is therefore blind and insecure. Its ethical correlate is πολιτικὴ or δημοτικὴ ἀρετή: cf. 500 D and IV 430 C n. See in general Zeller⁴ II i. pp. 588 ff.

21 σκολιά='crooked,' 'awry' is objected to by Hermann on the ground that ὀρθαὶ δόξαι may be blind, but cannot be 'crooked.' This is true, but αἱ ἄνευ ἐπιστήμης δόξαι may be both blind and awry; and αἰσχυρά, which looks back to αἰσχυραί, shews that it is not correct opinions, but opinions without knowledge generally, which are described in τυφλά—σκολιά. Socrates' mock humility will not pretend to more than δόξα, let alone ὀρθὴ δόξα. If you wish for 'science,' go to your sophistical rhetoricians, forsooth, and 'hear things bright and beautiful.' φανὰ τε καὶ καλά may be an allusion to the 'lumina orationis' of Isocrates and his friends: see 498 E n. σκότια, which Hermann conjectures, is apparently not used by Plato.

ἄλλων ἀκούειν φανί τε καὶ καλά; Μὴ πρὸς Διός, ἦ δ' ὅς, ὃ Σώκρατες, ὁ Γλαῖκων, ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τέλει ὦν ἀποστής. ἀρκέσει γὰρ ἡμῖν, κἂν ὥσπερ δικαιοσύνης πέρι καὶ σωφροσύνης καὶ τῶν ἄλλων διήλθης, οὕτω καὶ περὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ διέλθης. Καὶ γὰρ ἐμοί, ἦν δ' 25 ἐγώ, ὃ ἑταῖρε, καὶ μάλα ἀρκέσει· ἀλλ' ὅπως μὴ οὐχ οἷός τ' ἔσομαι, προθυμούμενος δὲ ἀσχημονῶν γέλωτα ὀφλήσω. ἀλλ', ὃ μακάριοι, Εὐ αὐτὸ μὲν τί ποτ' ἐστὶ τἀγαθόν, ἑάσωμεν τὸ νῦν εἶναι· πλέον γὰρ μοι φαίνεται ἢ κατὰ τὴν παρούσαν ὁρμὴν ἐφικέσθαι τοῦ γε δοκοῦν- 30 τος ἐμοὶ τὰ νῦν· ὃς δὲ ἔκγονός τε τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ φαίνεται καὶ ὁμοιότatos ἐκείνῳ. λέγειν ἐθέλω, εἰ καὶ ὑμῖν φίλον, εἰ δὲ μή, ἑάν. Ἄλλ', ἔφη, λέγε· εἰσαυθὶς γὰρ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀποτείσεις τὴν διήγησιν.
 07 Βουλοίμην ἂν, εἶπον, ἐμέ τε δύνασθαι αὐτὴν | ἀποδοῦναι καὶ ὑμᾶς κομίσασθαι, ἀλλὰ μὴ ὥσπερ νῦν τοὺς τόκους μόνον. τοῦτον δὲ δὴ

506 D 23 ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τέλει ὦν: not 'just as you are reaching the goal' (Jowett), but 'as if you were at the end.' Jowett practically omits ὥσπερ in his translation.

506 E 29 ὁρμὴν. The idea is as of a start or impulse which enables one to clear the obstacles in the way: cf. v 451 C.

30 τὰ νῦν should be taken with ἐφικέσθαι. If we take it with δοκοῦντος, we must suppose that Socrates intends to suggest that his view of the matter may change (so D. and V.). He is hardly likely to have made such a suggestion, even ironically. ἑάσωμεν τὸ νῦν εἶναι is also in favour of connecting τὰ νῦν with ἐφικέσθαι. Cf. Tim. 48 C f. τὴν μὲν γὰρ περὶ πάντων εἴτε ἀρχὴν εἴτε ἀρχὰς—τὸ νῦν οὐ ῥητέον, δι' ἄλλο μὲν οὐδέν, διὰ δὲ τὸ χαλεπὸν εἶναι κατὰ τὸν παρόντα τρόπον τῆς διεξόδου δηλωσαὶ τὰ δοκοῦντα κτλ. The emphasis on τὸ νῦν εἶναι and τὰ νῦν seems to hint that a description of the ἀγαθόν, as it is in itself, may be expected on some future occasion. But there is no dialogue in which the Idea of Good is so clearly described as in the Republic, and it is not without reason that every historian of Philosophy regards this passage as the locus classicus on the subject. O. Schneider (Versuch einer genet. Entw. d. Pl. ἀγαθόν p. 15) thinks of the Philebus; Susemihl (Gen. Entw. II p. 193) of the Φιλόσοφος, which was perhaps planned, but probably never executed (see on 484 A). The Philebus is unsuitable; and of the Φιλό- σοφος we know nothing. I am inclined to think—in view especially of βουλοίμην ἂν κτλ. below—that, although Plato may have cherished the idea of describing the Good without the aid of a simile—εἶδεν αὐτοῖς δι' αὐτῶν—, he never, at all events in any of his dialogues, did so. In a certain sense, perhaps, the Timaeus describes the Good (see Archer-Hind's edition p. 27), but even there, we study the 'Father of all' not in himself so much as in his works. I agree with Stumpf's conclusion (l.c. p. 75) that Plato could hardly have depicted the Idea of Good at all except by means of a comparison. Certainly nothing else could have made it equally clear; and, in point of fact, 'es wird nirgends Mehr gegeben' (Stumpf, l.c. p. 59 n.). See also next note.

ὃς δὲ ἔκγονος κτλ. The ἔκγονος is the Sun, as presently appears. Socrates' procedure in Phaed. 99 C—E is in some respects like his procedure here. A nearer parallel is Phaedr. 246 A, where, before describing the soul, Socrates observes ὅλον μὲν ἐστι, πάντῃ πάντως θείας εἶναι καὶ μακρὰς διηγήσεως, ᾧ δὲ ἔοικεν, ἀνθρωπίνης τε καὶ ἐλάττωτος. The Idea of Good, like the Soul, is best described by one man to another in a figure. On εἰσαυθὶς see last note and IV 430 C n.

507 A 2 τοὺς τόκους. The comparison, which is already suggested in ἀποτείσεις, ἀποδοῦναι ('pay' as well as 'render'), and κομίσασθαι, culminates in the word τόκος ('interest' and 'offspring'). See on γράφειν νόμους 501 A and (for a οὖν τὸν τόκον τε καὶ ἔκγονον αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ κομίσασθε· εὐλα-βείσθε μέντοι, μή πη ἐξαπατήσω ὑμᾶς ἄκων, κίβδηλον ἀποδιδούς 5 τὸν λόγον τοῦ τόκου. Εὐλαβησόμεθα, ἔφη, κατὰ δύναμιν· ἀλλὰ μόνον λέγε. Διομολογησάμενός γ', ἔφην ἐγώ, καὶ ἀναμνήσας ὑμᾶς τὰ τ' ἐν τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν ρηθέντα καὶ ἄλλοτε ἤδη πολλάκις εἰρημένα.

 Τὰ ποῖα; ἢ δ' οὗς. Πολλὰ καλὰ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ πολλὰ ἀγαθὰ καὶ Β ἕκαστα οὕτως εἶναι φαμέν τε καὶ διορίζομεν τῷ λόγῳ. Φαμέν γάρ.
 10 Καὶ αὐτὸ δὴ καλὸν καὶ αὐτὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ οὕτω περὶ πάντων, ἃ τότε ὡς πολλὰ ἐτίθεμεν· πάλιν αὖ καὶ ἰδέαν μίαν ἐκάστου, ὡς μιᾶς οὔσης, τιθέντες, ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστον προσαγορεύομεν. Ἔστι ταῦτα.
 Καὶ τὰ μὲν δὴ ὁράσθαι φαμεν, νοεῖσθαι δ' οὐ, τὰς δ' αὖ ἰδέας νοεῖσθαι μὲν, ὁράσθαι δ' οὐ. Παντίπασι μὲν οὖν. Τῷ οὖν C 15 ὁρῶμεν ἡμῶν αὐτῶν τὰ ὁρώμενα; Τῇ ὄψει, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἰκοῇ τὰ ἀκουόμενα καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις αἰσθήσεσι πάντα τὰ αἰσθητά; Τί μὴν; Ἀρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐννεόηκας τὸν τῶν

3. κομίσασθε A²H: κομίσασθαι A¹.

11. καὶ nos: κατ' codd.

[similar play on τόκος] cf. VIII 555 E and Ar. Thesm. 842—845. κίβδηλον below is a metaphor from counterfeit coinage.

6 διομολογησάμενός γε. γε ('yes,'
 'not until': cf. with Schneider Phaedr.
 228 D δείξας γε πρῶτον κτλ.) was restored by Bekker from the best MSS. Stephanus (with Ξ etc.) read δέ.

7 ἐν τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν. Cf. V 475 E n.

507 B 9 εἶναι is not of course used in its technical sense, otherwise it would be inconsistent with the end of Book V.
 Socrates means only that the Platonist distinguishes between two categories—τὰ πολλὰ, and the Ideas.

10 καὶ αὐτὸ δὴ κτλ. The literal meaning of the text above printed is as follows:
 'So likewise a Beautiful itself, and a Good itself and similarly about all which we formerly took' (or 'postulated') 'as many: reversing our procedure (πάλιν αὖ), we postulate also one Idea of each, believing that there is but one, and call it the essential so-and-so.' καὶ—ἐτίθεμεν is best explained as still under the influence of φαμέν—λόγῳ. τότε (as Schneider observes) refers 'ad eam, quae modo facta est, multorum commemorationem': cf.
 510 B. Stallbaum is mistaken in supposing that the allusion is to V 475 E ff.
 Plato's meaning will appear from a single example. We postulate both πολλὰ δίκαια and also ἐν δίκαιον, viz. the ἰδέα μία δικαίου, and we call the latter ὃ ἔστιν δίκαιον: cf. Phaed. 75 B τοῦ δ' ἔστιν ἴσον, Symp. 211 C and elsewhere. We postulate only one ἰδέα δικαίου, because we believe that there is but one: see X 597 C, D, where Plato shews why there cannot be more. For αὐτό used of the Ideas, see on IV 438 B, 438 C and V 476 A n. Instead of καὶ ἰδέαν, the MSS—see cr. n.—read κατ' ἰδέαν (κατιδέαν Vind.

 F.). For the interchange of καὶ and κατά see Schaefer's Greg. Cor. p. 234 n. 26. An unduly sloping accent is enough to account for the corruption of ΚΑΙΙΔΕΑΝ into ΚΑΤΙΔΕΑΝ (as in uncial MSS it would be written: see Thompson Gk.
Palaeogr. p. 127). See also my article in Cl. Rev. XIII p. 100. Other views on the text and interpretation of this difficult passage are discussed in App. VII.

507 C 17 ἄρ' οὖν κτλ. On the unique position of Sight among the senses see Phaedr. 250 D and Bonitz on Arist.
Met. A 1. 980^a 23: cf. also Phaed. 65 B, Tim. 47 A ff., Hipp. Maior 297 E ff. It is the costliest (πολυτελεστάτη) because it requires an additional precious or valuable element (μὴ ἄτιμον 508 A) beyond what is necessary for the operation of the others, viz. Light: cf. Tim. 45 C, D and Arist.
de An. II 7. 418^b 2 ff.

αἰσθήσεων δημιουργὸν ὅσῳ πολυτελεστάτην τὴν τοῦ ὁρᾶν τε καὶ ὁρᾶσθαι δύνάμιν ἐδημιούργησεν; Οὐ πάνυ, ἔφη. Ἄλλ' ὥδε σκοπεῖ. ἔστιν ὃ τι προσδεῖ ἀκοῇ καὶ φωνῇ γένους ἄλλου εἰς τὸ 20 τὴν μὲν ἀκούειν, τὴν δὲ ἀκούεσθαι, ὃ ἐὰν μὴ παραγένηται τρίτον, ἢ μὲν οὐκ ἀκούσεται, ἢ δὲ οὐκ ἀκουσθήσεται; Οὐδενός, ἔφη. Οἶμαι δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὐδ' ἄλλαις πολλαῖς, ἵνα μὴ εἴπω ὅτι οὐδεμιᾷ, τοιούτου προσδεῖ οὐδενός. ἢ σὺ τίνα ἔχεις εἰπεῖν; Οὐκ ἔγωγε, ἦ δ' ὅς. Τὴν δὲ τῆς ὀψews καὶ τοῦ ὁρατοῦ οὐκ ἐννοεῖς ὅτι 25 προσδεῖται; Πῶς; Ἐνούσης που ἐν ὄμμασιν ὀψews καὶ ἐπιχειροῦντος τοῦ ἔχοντος χρῆσθαι αὐτῇ, παρούσης δὲ χρώας ἐν αὐτοῖς, ἐὰν μὴ παραγένηται γένος τρίτον ιδία ἐπ' αὐτὸ τοῦτο πεφυκός, οἶσθα, ὅτι ἢ τε ὀψις οὐδὲν ὀψεται τά τε χρώματα ἔσται ἀόρατα. Τίνος δὴ λέγεις, ἔφη, τούτου; Ὁ δὴ σὺ καλεῖς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, φῶς. 30 Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη, λέγεις. Οὐ σμικρᾷ ἄρα ιδέα ἡ τοῦ ὁρᾶν αἴσθησις καὶ ἡ τοῦ ὁρᾶσθαι δύνάμεις τῶν ἄλλων ξυζευξέων τιμιωτέρῳ ζυγῷ

30. σὺ—ὀρώμενα (515 D) om. II, duobus excisis foliis.

20 ἔστιν ὃ τι κτλ. Steinhart (p. 689 n. 213) and others remark on Plato's error in denying that a medium is necessary in Hearing etc. Aristotle was well aware of this fact (see his de An. II 7. 419^a 25 ff.), and there are several indications that it was not altogether unknown to Plato. In Tim. 67 B, for example, air is regarded as in a certain sense the medium of sound. Here, however, where a scientific analysis of perception is not proposed, Plato takes his stand upon the broad fact of experience, that whereas we can hear, touch, etc. either in light or in darkness, we can see only where there is light.

507 D 23 οὐδ' ἄλλαις πολλαῖς. 'Non αἰσθήσεσι supplendum est, quippe quae non amplius tres supersint, sed δυνάμεις vel δυνάμειων σύζευξεν' (Schneider). It may be added that the antecedent of ἄλλαις is the same as that of τίνα and τὴν τῆς ὀψews καὶ τοῦ ὁρατοῦ, and τὴν is certainly for τὴν δύνάμιν: cf. τὴν τοῦ ὁρᾶν τε καὶ ὁρᾶσθαι δύνάμιν in C. Plato is thinking quite generally of δυνάμεις τοῦ ποιεῖν τε καὶ πάσχειν: cf. Theaet. 156 A.

27 ἐν αὐτοῖς κτλ. If ἐν αὐτοῖς is right, αὐτοῖς must be interpreted as τοῖς ὀρωμένοις, for it is clear from 508 C ὦν ἂν τὰς χρώας τὸ ἡμερινὸν φῶς ἐπέχῃ that colour is here regarded as inherent in the object. Grammatically, however, αὐτοῖς can scarcely mean anything except τοῖς ὄμμασιν, and in my edition of 1897 I accordingly proposed to read ἐν αὐτοῖς <τοῖς ὀρωμένοις>. Ficinus translates praesente illem colore, omitting ἐν αὐτοῖς altogether. For other views see App. VIII.

507 E 30 τίνος—τούτου; The genitive has been variously explained as (1) dependent on γένος (Schneider), (2) in agreement with παραγενομένου understood (Stallbaum, Campbell), (3) like ἵππων in τί δὲ ἵππων οἶει; V 459 B (Jowett). (2) is in my opinion grammatically impossible. For (3) cf. V 470 A n. Jowett's view is perhaps possible, but we should have expected simply τί δὴ λέγεις—τούτο; Schneider's explanation ('Pray what is this whose γένος you mention?') is, I think, the least unsatisfactory. Perhaps we should read δεῖν for δῆ.

ὁ δὴ σὺ καλεῖς. Herwerden needlessly writes δ δὴ καὶ σὺ καλεῖς.

31 οὐ σμικρᾷ κτλ. ιδέα, 'kind,' 'class,' is here a synonym for γένος as in Theaet. 184 D, Pol. 289 B. The dative expresses the 'amount of difference' after the comparative τιμιωτέρῳ ('more precious': cf. πολυτελεστάτην in 507 C). Cf. II 373 E and IX 579 C τοῖς τοιούτοις κακοῖς πλείω καρπούται with note ad loc.

ἐξύγησαν, εἴπερ μὴ ἄτιμον τὸ φῶς. Ἀλλὰ μήν, ἔφη, πολλοῦ γε δεῖ ἄτιμον εἶναι.

XIX. Τίνα οὖν ἔχεις αἰτιάσασθαι τῶν ἐν οὐρανῷ θεῶν τούτου 5 κύριον, οὗ ἡμῖν τὸ φῶς ὅψιν τε ποιεῖ ὁρᾶν ὃ τι κάλλιστα καὶ τὰ ὀρώμενα ὀράσθαι; Ὅνπερ καὶ σύ, ἔφη, καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι· τὸν ἥλιον γὰρ δῆλον ὅτι ἐρωτᾷς. Ἄρ' οὖν ὧδε πέφυκεν ὅψις πρὸς τοῦτον τὸν θεόν; Πῶς; Οὐκ ἔστιν ἥλιος ἢ ὅψις οὔτε αὐτὴ οὔτ' ἐν ᾧ ἐγγίγνεται, ὃ δὲ καλοῦμεν ὄμμα. Οὐ γὰρ οὖν. Ἀλλ' ἡλιοειδέσ- B 10 τατόν γε οἶμαι τῶν περὶ τὰς αἰσθήσεις ὀργάνων. Πολύ γε.
 Οὐκοῦν καὶ τὴν δύναμιν, ἣν ἔχει, ἐκ τούτου ταμεινομένην ὥσπερ ἐπέρρυτον κέκτῃται; Πάνν μὲν οὖν. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ καὶ ὁ ἥλιος ὅψις μὲν οὐκ ἔστιν, αἴτιος δ' ὧν αὐτῆς ὁρᾶται ὑπ' αὐτῆς ταύτης; Οὕτως, ἢ δ' ὅς. Τοῦτον τοίνυν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, φάναι με λέγειν τὸν τοῦ

508 A 4 τῶν ἐν οὐρανῷ θεῶν: the heavenly constellations, which form the οὐράνιον θεῶν γένος (Tim. 40 A). Plato's description of the sun is instinct with religious feeling. The 'clear god and patron of all light, From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow The beauteous influence that makes him bright' claims adoration from Plato not merely as an οὐράνιος θεός, like the other stars, but as the symbol and scion (ἐκγονος) of the Supreme Idea or God. Cf. Bonitz Disp. Plat. duae, p. 6 n. 3, and especially Paul Shorey in Chicago Studies in Cl. Phil. Vol. I pp. 224 ff. The sun-worship of some of the Neo-Platonists was inspired in no small measure by this passage of the Republic; see in particular Julian's 'Address to the Sovereign Sun' (ἐς τὸν βασιλέα ἡλίου) Or. IV. Cf. 508 D n.

508 B 9 ἡλιοειδестаτήν. The Eye is the Body's Sun: cf. Ar. Metem. 16, 17 ᾧ μὲν βλέπειν χρή πρῶτ' ἐμμηχανήσατο | ὀφθαλμὸν ἀντίμιμον ἡλίου τροχῷ. A similar idea appears in St. Matth. 6. 22 ὁ λύχνος τοῦ σώματος ἐστὶν ὁ ὀφθαλμός. Conversely, the Sun is often in Greek poetry called the Eye of the World or of Day, and Shakespeare invokes the Sun in the words 'O eye of Eyes!' (Rape of Lucrece): cf. also Milton Par. Lost v 171 'Thou Sun! of this great world both eye and soul.' Both comparisons rest ultimately on the favourite Greek idea of the Universe as the Macrocosm, and Man as the Microcosm. See on this subject Zeller³ II 2. p. 488, III 2. pp. 136, 397 nn., and Stein Psych. d. Stoa I pp. 205—214.

11 οὐκοῦν κτλ. Pindar fr. 107 (Bergk) expresses the same idea in the language of poetry: 'Ἀκτὶς ἀελίου, τί πολὺ σκοπ' ἐμήσαο, θεῶν μήτερ ὀμμάτων'.

τὴν δύναμιν is of course τὴν δύναμιν τοῦ ὁρᾶν, 'the power of seeing.' The translation 'faculty' (D. and V.) for δύναμιν is incorrect; for the faculty of ὅψις is supposed to be present in the eyes even when there is no light (507 D). But the eye has no 'power' to see, i.e. cannot exercise the faculty of ὅψις unless such a power is constantly dispensed (ταμεινομένην) to it from the Sun. Cf. Biehl die Id. d. Guten p. 52, where the same view is taken. The word ἐπέρρυτον ('flowing over,' 'overflowing it,' cf. Tim. 80 D) as well as ταμεινομένην unmistakably points the allusion to Light. See also on ὅταν μὲν κτλ. and τοῦτο τοίνυν κτλ. in 508 D.

508 B—509 A So much for our similitude. The interpretation is as follows. The offspring and image of the Good is the Sun, whose relation to Sight and its objects is the same as that of the Good to Thought (νοῦς) and the objects of Thought. The analogue of Light is Truth; as we cannot see without Light, so, where Truth is absent, we cannot know. The Idea of the Good is the source of Truth and Knowledge, although itself apprehended by Knowledge. As Light and Sight resemble the Sun, so Truth and Knowledge resemble the Good, but the Good is not identical with either, for it transcends both.

14 φάναι. Cf. 473 A n.

C ἀγαθοῦ ἔκγονον, ὃν τὸ ἀγαθὸν ἐγέννησεν ἀνάλογον¹ ἑαυτῷ, ὃ τί περ 15 αὐτὸ ἐν τῷ νοητῷ τόπῳ πρὸς τε νοῦν καὶ τὰ νοούμενα, τοῦτο τοῦτον ἐν τῷ ὁρατῷ πρὸς τε ὄψιν καὶ τὰ ὁρώμενα. Πῶς; ἔφη· ἔτι διέλθέ μοι. Ὁφθαλμοί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οἶσθ' ὅτι ὅταν μηκέτι ἐπ' ἐκείναι τις αὐτοὺς τρέπη, ὧν ἂν τὰς χροάς τὸ ἡμερινὸν φῶς ἐπέχῃ, ἀλλὰ ὡν νυκτερινὰ φέγγη, ἀμβλυώττουσί τε καὶ ἐγγὺς φαίνονται τυφλῶν, 20 ὥσπερ οὐκ ἐνούσης καθαρᾶς ὀψεως. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. Ὅταν δέ D γ', οἶμαι, ὧν ὁ ἥλιος¹ καταλάμπει, σαφῶς ὁρῶσι, καὶ τοῖς αὐτοῖς τοῦτοις ὄμμασιν ἐνούσα φαίνεται. Τί μὴν; Οὕτω τοίνυν καὶ τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ὧδε νόει· ὅταν μὲν, οὐ καταλάμπει ἀλήθειά τε καὶ τὸ

24. καταλάμπει A¹g: καταλάμπη A²Ξ.

508 C 15 ὃ τί περ—ὁρώμενα explains ἀνάλογον ἑαυτῷ, which should be understood in its strict sense of proportionate or 'geometrical equality': see Gorg. 508 A ἡ ἰσότης ἡ γεωμετρικὴ καὶ ἐν θεοῖς καὶ ἐν ἀνθρώποις μέγα δύναται.

16 τοῦτον—after τοῦτο is needed to balance αὐτό (cf. 511 E): in construction, it depends, like ὃν, on ἐγέννησεν (Schneider). τοῦτο itself, like ἀνάλογον ἑαυτῷ, is predicative ('ut hoc esset'). Stallbaum erroneously supplies φάναι με λέγειν to govern τοῦτον.

19 ὧν ἂν—ἐπέχῃ. ἐπέχῃ 'occupat' as in the Homeric ἐπὶ δ' ἐπέσχε πέλεθρα and the like. With ἐπὶ of light cf. Mimn. 2. 8 ἐπὶ γῆν κίοναται ἥλιος. The Greek will not admit of D. and V.'s translation 'upon which the light of day is shedding colour'; and Plato moreover, both here and in Tim. 67 c, looks on Colour as something inherent in the Object, not imparted by Light, although Light is of course necessary in order to see it. Cf. 507 D n.

φῶς—φέγγη: 'lux—lumina.' The words are constantly interchanged, but, when contrasted with φέγγος, φῶς denotes a natural or primary, φέγγος an artificial or derivative light. See Neil on Ar. Knights 1319. Plato knew that the Moon's light is borrowed from the Sun (x 616 E).

22 ὧν ὁ ἥλιος κτλ. 'The Sun' is here said loosely for 'the Sunlight' or 'light of Day' (τὸ ἡμερινὸν φῶς above); for, as appears from 508 E, 508 A, it is not the Sun, but Light, which is to be equated with Truth and Being (οὐ καταλάμπει ἀλήθειά τε καὶ τὸ ὄν in D). See also on τοῦτο τοίνυν κτλ. in 508 D. Instead of καταλάμπει, καταλάμπη is read by a majority of editors, with several MSS, including Ξ: but ὅς for ὃς ἂν is, to say the least, extremely rare in prose, and the corruption καταλάμπη was easy after ὅταν. καταλάμπει was, if I mistake not, originally the reading of A (see cr. n.), and is at least as well supported by the other MSS as καταλάμπη. J. and C., reading καταλάμπη, strangely observe that 'ἂν would be felt as superfluous after ὅταν.'

508 D 23 ἐνούσα φαίνεται: sc. καθαρά ὄψις, supplied from καθαρᾶς ὀψεως above. '<ὄψις> ἐνούσα <σαφῆς> lubens suppleverim' says Herwerden, and ὄψις is found in a few MSS, including g. But the feminine inflexion prevents the possibility of mistake: cf. 503 E n. The initial syllable of ἐνούσα should be emphasized to point the contrast with οὐκ ἐνούσης, where οὐκ is also emphatic.

24 ὅταν μὲν κτλ. ἀπερλεσθῆται='is stayed upon' (cf. IX 581 A), not 'has fastened upon' (D. and V.), which suggests an altogether different and much less appropriate idea. Cf. Phaed. 79 D πέπανται τοῦ πλάνου, Plot. xx 4 Kirchhoff παύσασα δὲ τῆς περὶ τὸ αἰσθητὸν πλάνης ἐνιδρύει τῷ νοητῷ, and Dante Parad. 4. 124, 125 Io veggio ben che giammai non si sazia Nostro intelletto, se 'l ver non lo illustra. The soul can find no rest except in that 'whereon Truth and Being shine': elsewhere she is tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine (ἄνω—μεταβάλλον. For ἄνω καὶ κάτω see Heindorf on Gorg. 495 A). Instead of οὐ, van Heusde proposes ὅ, but ὅ is proved correct by ὧν above. With ἐνόσεν τε καὶ ἔγνω cf. 490 B n. Here, as there, the aorists ἀμβλυώσσω—to be dim sighted or blind

25 ὅν, εἰς τοῦτο ἀπερείσῃται, ἐνόησέν τε καὶ ἔγνω αὐτὸ καὶ νοῦν ἔχειν φαίνεται· ὅταν δὲ εἰς τὸ τῷ σκότῳ κεκραμένον, τὸ γιγνόμενον τε καὶ ἀπολλύμενον, δοξάζει τε καὶ ἀμβλυώττει ἄνω καὶ κάτω τὰς δόξας μεταβάλλον καὶ ἔοικεν αὐτὸς νοῦν οὐκ ἔχοντι. Ἔοικε γάρ. Τοῦτο τοίνυν τὸ ἴτην ἀλήθειαν παρέχον τοῖς γινωσκομένοις καὶ Ε 30 τῷ γινώσκοντι τὴν δύναμιν ἀποδιδόν τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέαν φάθι

denote instantaneous action. The faculty of νοῦς is suddenly actualized into νόησις by being turned upon its proper object. Then and not till then does the Soul 'appear to have reason,' for Reason has hitherto lain dormant within. Cf. (with Biehl l.c. p. 51) Tim. 37 C, Parm. 136 E and VII 518 C—519 A. See also on τοῦτο τοίνυν κτλ. below, and 508 E n.

26 κεκραμένον. The suggestion κεκραμένον forgets that τὸ γιγνόμενον is not total darkness but only twilight. It is ἀμφοτέρων μετέχον, τοῦ εἶναι τε καὶ μὴ εἶναι (V 478 E: cf. also 479 C)—a half-way house between absolute Not-Being and absolute Being.

27 δοξάζει is explained by V 476 D ff.

29 τοῦτο τοίνυν κτλ. The following equations are involved:

- | | | | |
|-----|--------------------------------|---|--|
| | τόπος ὁρατός | = | τόπος νοητός. |
| (1) | Sun | = | Idea of Good. |
| (2) | Light | = | Truth. |
| (3) | Objects of Sight (Colours) | = | Objects of Knowledge (Ideas). |
| (4) | Seeing Subject | = | Knowing Subject. |
| (5) | Organ of Sight (Eye) | = | Organ of Knowledge (νοῦς). |
| (6) | Faculty of Sight (ὄψις) | = | Faculty of Reason (νοῦς). |
| (7) | Exercise of Sight (ὄψις, ὁρᾶν) | = | Exercise of Reason (νοῦς i.e. νόησις, γνώσις, ἐπιστήμη). |
| (8) | Ability to see | = | Ability to know. |

With regard to (2), Light has been variously interpreted as symbolizing the Idea of Good (Plotinus, as appears from XXIII 4), Reason (Steinhart, Einleitung pp. 212 ff.), and the Ideas (Sussemihl Gen. Entw. II pp. 195 ff.). But the chiasmus in 508 E, 509 A (ἐπιστήμην—ὄψιν) clearly establishes equation (2) as well as (6), and the entire simile is plunged in confusion if Light is equated with anything except Truth. Cf. Stumpf l.c. p. 60 nn. and Biehl l.c. pp. 50—53. Plato means that as Light, coming from the Sun, enables colours to be seen, and the faculty of Sight to see, so Truth (or rather Trueness, as Bosanquet remarks), coming from the Good, enables the Ideas to be known, and the faculty of νοῦς to know. It should be carefully noted that Truth (or its source, the Idea of Good) is not yet regarded as creating, but only as actualizing the faculty of Reason. The conception of the Good as the ultimate cause of all Existence follows later (509 B ff.): here it is represented only as the cause of Knowledge. See also on 490 B, 508 D (ὅταν μὲν κτλ.). If we would grasp the full significance of Plato's comparison, we must not be content with the merely philosophical interpretation of Light, but remember also the many poetical and religious associations which attached themselves to such words as φῶς and φέγγος, especially in the Mysteries: see Neil on Ar. Knights 1319, Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen pp. 229 f., 238 f. and Hatch on The Influence of the Mysteries upon Christian usages in his Hibbert Lectures pp. 283—309. The prominent position occupied by Light in the half-religious, half-philosophical teaching of Plotinus (see Zeller³ III 2 pp. 498 f., 500 n. 2, 616 al.) may to a large extent be attributed to the elaboration and expansion of the mystical elements involved in Plato's simile, the whole of which, together with the similes of the Line and the Cave, is of the greatest importance for the history of Neoplatonism. Cf. also 508 A, B nn.

508 E 30 τὴν δύναμιν sc. τοῦ γινώσκου is not the faculty of Knowledge or Reason, but the power to exercise that faculty, hardly different, indeed, from the actual exercise of Reason ('die thatkräftige Aeusserung' Biehl l.c.). Hence γνώσεως ('the exercise of knowledge,' cf. ὁρασις, νόησις and the like) below. Plato's εἶναι, αἰτίαν δ' ἐπιστήμης οὖσαν καὶ ἀληθείας ὡς γιγνωσκομένην μὲν διανοοῦ, οὕτω δὲ καλῶν ἀμφοτέρων ὄντων, γνώσεώς τε καὶ ἀληθείας, ἄλλο καὶ κάλλιον ἔτι τούτων ἡγούμενος αὐτὸ ὀρθῶς 5 ἡγήσει· ἐπιστήμην δὲ καὶ ἀλήθειαν, ὥσπερ ἐκεῖ φῶς τε | καὶ ὄψιν ἡλιοειδῇ μὲν νομίζειν ὀρθόν, ἥλιον δ' ἡγεῖσθαι οὐκ ὀρθῶς ἔχει, οὕτω καὶ ἐνταῦθα ἀγαθοειδῇ μὲν νομίζειν ταύτ' ἀμφοτέρα ὀρθόν, ἀγαθὸν δὲ ἡγεῖσθαι ὁπότερον αὐτῶν οὐκ ὀρθόν, ἀλλ' ἔτι μειζόνως τιμητέον τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἔξιν. Ἀμήχανον κάλλος, ἔφη, λέγεις, εἰ ἐπιστήμην 5 μὲν καὶ ἀλήθειαν παρέχει, αὐτὸ δ' ὑπὲρ ταῦτα κάλλει ἐστίν· οὐ γὰρ δήπου σύ γε ἡδονὴν αὐτὸ λέγεις. Εὐφήμει, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· ἀλλ' B ὧδε μᾶλλον τὴν εἰκόνα αὐτοῦ ἔτι ἐπισκόπει. ¹ Πῶς; Τὸν ἥλιον τοῖς ὀρωμένοις οὐ μόνον. οἶμαι, τὴν τοῦ ὀράσθαι δύναμιν παρέχειν φήσεις, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν γένεσιν καὶ αὔξην καὶ τροφήν, οὐ γένεσιν 10 αὐτὸν ὄντα. Πῶς γάρ; Καὶ τοῖς γιγνωσκομένοις τοίνυν μὴ

31. γιγνωσκομένην nos: γιγνωσκομένης codd.

exposition suffers somewhat from the want of a strict philosophical nomenclature. Aristotle would have expressed the same meaning by saying that ὄψις and νοῦς are two δυνάμεις, which ἐνεργοῦσι through Light and Truth respectively, becoming in the one case ὄρασις, in the other νόησις. Plato's τὴν δύναμιν, in fact, is nearly equivalent to Aristotle's τὴν ἐνέργειαν. Cf. Biehl l.c. pp. 50—53.

31 αἰτίαν κτλ. 'And being the cause of Knowledge and Truth, I would have you conceive of it as apprehended, no doubt, by Knowledge, but beautiful as is the act of Knowledge, and beautiful though Truth be, you will be right in thinking that it is something other and even more beautiful than these.' The words αἰτίαν—ἀληθείας sum up and carry on τὸ—ἀποδιδόν. ὡς γιγνωσκομένην is in predicative agreement with αἰτίαν after διανοοῦ (cf. Pol. 258 C πᾶσας τὰς ἐπιστήμας ὡς οὖσας δύο εἶδη διανοηθῆναι): the words are the counterpart of ὁ ἥλιος—ὀράται ὑπ' αὐτῆς ταύτης (sc. τῆς ὄψεως) in the simile 503 B. μὲν after γιγνωσκομένην balances δέ after οὕτω: though apprehended by Knowledge, and therefore in some sense subject thereto, the Idea of Good is (as being the cause of both) more beautiful than Knowledge and Truth. I have (with van Heusde) altered γιγνωσκομένης of the best MSS—see cr. n.—to γιγνωσκομένην. On other interpretations of this difficult passage see App. IX.

509 A 5 τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἔξιν: i.q. τὸ ἀγαθὸν ὡς ἔχει (J. and C.).

6 οὐ γὰρ δήπου κτλ. is said in view of the question in 506 B. There is certainly no allusion to the Philebus: see 505 C n.

509 A—C In the second place the Sun also provides the objects of sight with generation (γένεσις), increase, and nutriment, although generation is not identical with the Sun. In like manner, the objects of Knowledge receive their Being and Existence from the Good, which is itself distinct from and higher than Existence.

509 B ff. 8 τὸν ἥλιον κτλ. The Good has been shewn to be the cause of Knowledge: Socrates now proceeds to shew that it is also the cause of Being. In the philosophy of Plato, Knowledge is the epistemological counterpart of Being, Being the ontological counterpart of Knowledge: see V 476 E ff. iii. The final unity in which both Knowledge and Being meet is the Idea of the Good, which is therefore the supreme and ultimate cause of the Universe. See also on οὐκ οὐσίας κτλ. below and the Appendix to Book VII On Plato's Dialectic.

10 οὐ γένεσιν αὐτὸν ὄντα. See on οὐκ οὐσίας ὄντος τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ below.

μόνον τὸ γινώσκεισθαι φάναι ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ παρῆναι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ εἶναι τε καὶ τὴν οὐσίαν ὑπ' ἐκείνου αὐτοῖς προσεῖναι, οὐκ οὐσίας ὄντος τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ, ἀλλ' ἔτι ἐπέκεινα τῆς οὐσίας πρεσβεία καὶ 15 δυνάμει ὑπερέχοντος.

XX. Ἡ Καὶ ὁ Γλαῦκων μάλα γελοῖως, Ἄπολλον, ἔφη, δαιμονίας C ὑπερβολῆς. Σὺ γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, αἴτιος, ἀναγκάζων τὰ ἐμοὶ δοκοῦντα περὶ αὐτοῦ λέγειν. Καὶ μηδαμῶς γ', ἔφη, παύσῃ, εἰ μὴ τι, ἀλλὰ ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ εἶναι κτλ. Cf. Arist. Met. A 6. 988^a 10 τὰ γὰρ εἶδη τοῦ τί ἐστιν αἰτία τοῖς ἄλλοις, τοῖς δ' εἶδει τὸ ἐν. Plato identified τάγαθον and τὸ ἐν: see the anecdote in Aristox. Harm. § 30 Marquard.

18. ἀλλὰ Ξγ: ἄλλα Α.

12 φάναι. V 473 A n.

13 οὐκ οὐσίας κτλ. has occasioned a vast amount of discussion. Krohn boldly declares that 'Die Ideā τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ist keine Idee, denn sie hat keine οὐσία, sondern es ist eine Macht, die mit unserer Denkweise nur als die Gottheit begriffen werden kann' (Pl. St. p. 146). Fouillée La Philosophie de Platon II p. 109 draws an over-subtle distinction between εἶναι and οὐσία, holding that although the Good is not οὐσία, it nevertheless is ὄν (cf. VII 518 C). Others have suspected the text, O. Schneider, for example, proposing οὐ <μόνον> οὐσίας κτλ. (Versuch einer genet. Entw. d. Plat. ἀγαθόν p. 16). That the text is right, the balance with οὐ γένεσιν—ὄντα conclusively shews. The Sun, said Socrates, is the cause of γένεσις, though not himself γένεσις. Just so the Good is the cause of οὐσία, though not itself οὐσία, but (to use a Neoplatonic expression) ὑπερούσιος. Plato's meaning is as follows. The Sun is not γένεσις in the sense in which the objects which he produces are γινόμενα.

Yet in a certain sense he too is γένεσις, for he is ὁρατός: see VII 529 C ff. and Tim. 28 B. (Bosanquet cannot be right in denying that Plato regards the Sun as a γινόμενον). As the cause of γένεσις, we may, in fact, regard the Sun as the only true γένεσις, for all γινόμενα are derived from him. Similarly the Good is not οὐσία in the sense in which the Ideas are οὐσάι; but in a higher sense it is the only true οὐσία, for all οὐσάι are only specific determinations of the Good. The ὑπερουσίτης of the Good is merely Plato's way of saying that the first Principle of all existence must itself be undervived. See on ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον 510 B and cf. Biehl l.c. p. 62 and Fouillée l.c. II pp. 105—111, where the matter is very clearly explained. The doctrine of the ὑπερουσίτης of the Highest afterwards became a cardinal point with the Neoplatonists: see Plotinus ap. R.P.⁷ p. 528, and for other references Hermann Vind. disp. de id. boni pp. 40 n. 84, 41 n. 87, Zeller³ III 2. pp. 490 ff., Fouillée La Philosophie de Platon III pp. 289, 291 nn., and Shorey Chicago Studies in Cl. Phil. I p. 188 n. 1. It is highly characteristic of Plato's whole attitude that he finds the true keystone of the Universe—the ultimate fountain from which both Knowledge and Existence flow—in no cold and colourless ontological abstraction, like Being, but in that for which pāsa ἡ κτίσις συσπενάξει καὶ συνωδίνει (Rom. 8. 22)—viz. τὸ ἀγαθόν. Cf. Phaed. 97 c ff. and see also on 508 D. The conception is poetical and religious no less than philosophical, and may be compared with Dante's 'L' Amor che muove il Sole e l'altre Stelle' and Tennyson's 'For so the whole round world is every way Bound by gold chains about the feet of God,' as well as with Aristotle's πρῶτον κινεῖον ἀκίνητον Met. A 7 et al.

509 C 16 καὶ ὁ Γλαῦκων κτλ. "Glauco exclaimed, very comically, 'Save us all, what an amazing transcendence!'" It is Glauco's προθυμία which is γελοῖον: see 506 D. ὑπερβολῆς is not 'exaggeration' (Jowett), but refers to ὑπερέχοντος: cf. ἀμήχανον κάλλος λέγεις 509 A. A ὑπερβολή which transcends existence may well be called δαιμονία ('supernatural,' 'miraculous').

18 εἰ μὴ τι, ἀλλὰ κτλ. Stephanus proposed ἄλλο for ἄλλα (as in 501 E), but cf. Men. 86 E εἰ μὴ τι οὖν, ἀλλὰ μικρὸν γέ μοι τῆς ἀρχῆς χάλασον.

509 C—511 E Socrates, at Glauco's εἰ μὴ τι, ἀλλὰ — if nothing else, yet.

ἐπ' ἐκείνῃ — beyond.

τὴν περὶ τὸν ἥλιον ὁμοιότητα αὐτὴ διεξιὼν, εἴ πῃ ἀπολείπεις. Ἄλλὰ μὴν, εἶπον, συχνά γε ἀπολείπω. Μηδὲ σμικρὸν τοῖνυν, ἔφη, παρὰ λήπης. Οἶμαι μὲν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ πολὺ ὅμως δέ, ὅσα γ' ἐν τῇ παρόντι δυνατὸν, ἐκὼν οὐκ ἀπολείψω. Μὴ γάρ, ἔφη. Ἄ Νόησον τοῖνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὥσπερ λέγομεν, δύο αὐτῷ εἶναι, καὶ βασιλεύειν τὸ μὲν νοητοῦ γένους τε καὶ τόπου, τὸ δ' αὐτὸ ὄρατοῦ, ἵνα μὴ οὐρανοῦ εἰπὼν δόξω σοὶ σοφίζεσθαι περὶ τὸ ὄνομα. ἄλλ' οὖν ἔχεις ταῦτα 25 διττὰ εἶδη, ὀρατὸν, νοητόν; Ἐχω. Ὡσπερ τοῖνυν γραμμὴν δίχα τετμημένην λαβὼν ἄνισα τμήματα πάλιν τέμνε ἐκάτερον τὸ τμήμα request, now proceeds to expound the similitude more fully. Let us take a line, and divide it into two unequal parts, to represent the objects of Sight and the objects of Thought respectively. If we further subdivide each part in the ratio of the original sections, we shall have four segments, representing, in order of clearness, (1) Images and the like, (2) so-called real things, (3) the objects of that intellectual method which descends from assumptions to a conclusion, using sensible objects as images or illustrations, (4) the objects of that intellectual method, which ascends from assumptions to an unassumed first principle, without making use of any sensible illustrations whatsoever, and thereafter descends to a conclusion. The third section represents the subjects investigated by the so-called 'Arts' or mathematical sciences; the fourth is the sphere of Dialectic. The corresponding mental states are called by Socrates εἰκαστά, πίστις, διάνοια, and νόησις. Each of these is clear or sure exactly in proportion as its objects are true.

24. οὐρανοῦ Ξγ: οὐρανὸν A.

27. τὸ Ξγ: om. A.

509 D ff. The simile of the Line contains perhaps more Platonic teaching than any passage of equal length in Plato's writings, and is of primary and fundamental importance for the interpretation of his philosophy. I have discussed the various difficulties as they occur, partly in the notes and partly in the Appendices to this Book. For a consecutive exposition of the whole simile in its connexion with the simile of the Cave see App. I to Book VII.

509 D 23 αὐτῷ: the Sun and the Idea of the Good.

24 ἵνα μὴ οὐρανοῦ κτλ. "I do not say

'of heaven,' lest you should imagine that I am etymologising on the name." The Sun might well be called βασιλεὺς οὐρανοῦ. Socrates pretends to avoid the word οὐρανός, lest by thus equating it with ὀρατόν (for the contrast with νοητοῦ would suggest that οὐρανοῦ = ὀρατοῦ) he should be accused of deriving οὐρανός from ὀρᾶν, as certain clever people did in Plato's time (Crat. 396 B. The same derivation is given by Philo Jud. de mund. opif. 10). For σοφίζεσθαι in this sense cf. σοφία in Crat. 396 C, D. E. S. Thompson (Proceedings of the Camb. Phil. Soc. 1888 p. 14) takes σοφίζεσθαι simply as 'pun' and thinks that the pun is between νοῦ (suggested in νοητοῦ above) and οὐρα-νοῦ, quoting ἀπ' ὄνου πεσεῖν, and the anecdote in D. L. II 118, VI 3: cf. also Isocrates Apophth. Fr. 8 ed. Blass. But such a pun is both far-fetched and pointless, and in view of the passage from the Cratylus there should be no doubt that Plato more suo is merely scoffing at a well-known contemporary etymology. The reading οὐρανόν—see cr. n.—would be fatal to Thompson's theory, but οὐρανοῦ (which most MSS read) is more pointed and idiomatic, and perhaps right, though the accusative is not indefensible.

27 ἄνισα. It appears from the Scholiast that even ancient critics debated whether ἄνισα or ἴσα (eis isa v) should be read. Proclus (in Plat. remp. I p. 288 Kroll) and the author of the third Quaest. Plat. in Plutarch (1001 C ff.) read ἄνισα: ἴσα appears in a grammarian cited by Stallbaum from Villoson Anecd. Gr. II p. 199. The dispute still reigns, Stallbaum and some others ἀνὰ τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον, τό τε τοῦ ὁρωμένου γένους καὶ τὸ τοῦ νοουμένου, καὶ σοι ἔσται σαφηνεία καὶ ἄσαφεία πρὸς ἀλλήλα ἐν μὲν τῷ 30 ὁρωμένῳ τὸ μὲν ἕτερον τμήμα εἰκόνες. λέγω δὲ τὰς εἰκόνας Ε πρῶτον μὲν | τὰς σκιάς, ἔπειτα τὰ ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι φαντάσματα καὶ 510 ἐν τοῖς ὅσα πυκνὰ τε καὶ λεῖα καὶ φανὰ ξυνέστηκεν, καὶ πᾶν τὸ τοιοῦτον, εἰ κατανοεῖς. Ἀλλὰ κατανοῶ. Τὸ τοίνυν ἕτερον τίθει ᾧ τοῦτο ἔοικεν, τά τε περὶ ἡμᾶς ζῶα καὶ πᾶν τὸ φυτευτὸν καὶ τὸ preferring ἴσα, others, such as Richter (Fl. Jahrb. 1867 p. 145) and Dümmler (Antisth. p. 80) ἀν' ἴσα, others even ἀν ἴσα (which is certainly not Greek, though found in a few inferior MSS); but there should be no question that Plato wrote ἄνισα. If the line is bisected, all four segments are equal, and the elaborate proportions drawn in 510 A, 511 E, VII 534 A represent no corresponding relations between the different segments of the line. The inequality, as Schneider and Steinhart point out, is intended to represent the difference in σαφήνεια or ἀλήθεια between the δοξαστόν (or ὁρατόν) and the γνωστόν (or νοητόν): cf. σαφηνεία καὶ ἄσαφεία below and 510 A. (So also Benson in Nettleship's Lect. and Rem. II p. 239 n.). For this reason the νοητόν should be represented by a longer segment. Others assign the larger part to the ὁρατόν, as being the region of τὰ πολλά (Plutarch l.c. and Espinas in his edition of Book VI), but the length of the two main segments should follow the primary and fundamental principle of Plato's classification. The relevant consideration is not at present multiplicity versus unity, but different degrees of clearness and truth. Beckman's excision of ἄνισα τμήματα (nim Plato artefactorum ideas statuerit p. 38) needs no refutation. See also next note.

27 πάλιν τέμνε κτλ. See Figure 1 on p. 65.

$$AD : DC :: AC : CB,$$

$$\text{and } CE : EB :: AC : CB.$$

It follows (1) that $AD : DC :: CE : EB$,
 (2) that $DC = CE$; for

$$\frac{CE}{EB} = \frac{AC}{CB}, \therefore \frac{CE}{CE + EB} = \frac{AC}{AC + CB},$$

$$\text{i.e. } \frac{CE}{CB} = \frac{AC}{AB}, \therefore CE = \frac{AC \cdot CB}{AB}.$$

Similarly

$$\frac{DC}{AC} = \frac{CB}{AB}, \therefore DC = \frac{AC \cdot CB}{AB}.$$

But $\frac{AC \cdot CB}{AB}$ has been proved equal to CE .

$$\therefore DC = CE.$$

(This last equality—so far as it goes—is a slight though unavoidable defect in the line, for DC is not equal to CE in point of clearness. See last note). Neither of these inferences is expressly drawn by Plato himself; but he appears to make use of the first in 532 A ff.

29 καὶ σοι ἔσται κτλ.: 'and when classified according to their relative clearness and obscurity, the different segments will represent—in the visible sphere, segment 1, Images' etc. The datives, like ἀληθεία in 510 A, are causal, and state the principle on which the entire classification (of νοητά as well as ὁρατά) rests. With ἐν μὲν τῷ ὁρωμένῳ Socrates begins to describe the contents of the particular segments. This is interrupted by the definition of εἰκόνες, and resumed, in a different form, at τὸ τοίνυν ἕτερον in 510 A. μὲν before τῷ ὁρωμένῳ contrasts with σκόπει δὴ αὖ ἐν B, much as τὸ τοίνυν ἕτερον balances the second μὲν. On σαφηνεία see below 511 C n.

510 A 2 ὅσα πυκνὰ κτλ. Cf. Tim. 46 A ff. πυκνὰ) (μαδά is 'of close texture,' 'close grained' (D. and V.), not exactly 'solid' (as Jowett).

πᾶν τὸ τοιοῦτον. Although the productions of imitative art and the like must be held to belong to this category (see App. I to Book VII), there is nothing to shew that Plato was thinking of them when he wrote this sentence.

3 ᾧ τοῦτο ἔοικεν: 'whereof this is an image.' ἔοικεν corresponds to εἰκόνας above.

FIG. i. THE LINE.

FIG. ii. TO ILLUSTRATE THE CAVE.

ef. ὁδός.

gh. τειχίον.

ab. Row of Prisoners.

cd. Wall on which the Shadows are thrown.

5 σκευαστὸν ὅλον γένος. Τίθημι, ἔφη. Ἡ καὶ ἐθέλοις αὖ αὐτὸ φάναι, ἣν δ' ἐγὼ, διηγήσθαι ἀληθεία τε καὶ μή, ὥς τὸ δοξαστὸν πρὸς τὸ γνωστὸν, οὕτω τὸ ὁμοιωθὲν πρὸς τὸ ὅ ὁμοιωθή; "Εγωγ', ἔφη, καὶ μίλα. Σκόπει δὴ αὖ καὶ τὴν τοῦ νοητοῦ τὸμὴν ἢ τμητέον. B Πῃ; Ἡ τὸ μὲν αὐτοῦ τοῖς τότε μιμηθεῖσιν ὥς εἰκόσιν χρωμένη ψυχὴ ζητεῖν ἀναγκάζεται ἐξ ὑποθέσεων οὐκ ἐπ' ἀρχὴν πορευομένη, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τελευτήν, τὸ δ' αὖ ἕτερον ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον ἐξ ὑποθέ-

11. ἕτερον Ast: ἕτερον τὸ codd.

5 αὐτό: viz. τὸ ὁρώμενον, with reference to ἐν μὲν τῷ ὁρωμένῳ above.

6 ὥς τὸ δοξαστὸν κτλ. i.e.

AD: DC:: AC: CB.

Hitherto AC has not been called δοξαστὸν, only ὁρατὸν. The new terminology appears again in 511 D (δόξης) and VII 534 A: see also on VII 516 D, 523 C. δοξαστὸν is of course a wider term than ὁρατὸν, for it includes the entire domain of τὰ πολλὰ, by whatever sense or faculty apprehended (V 479 D ff.). δόξα is, in fact, the intellectual state of the ordinary uneducated man. This further specification of AC is of no small importance for the understanding of the similes of the Line and Cave: see VII 514 A, 517 A nn. and App. I to Book VII.

510 B 9 ἢ κτλ. With ἢ cf. Theaet. 172 D. τὸ μὲν is CE.

τοῖς τότε μιμηθεῖσιν: i.e. the objects represented by CD, which were 'imitated' or copied in AD. They were originals then, but are only images now: this is the force of the collocation μιμηθεῖσιν—εἰκόσι. Cf. 510 E ἃ πλάττουσιν τε καὶ γράφουσιν, ὧν καὶ σκιαὶ καὶ ἐν ὕδασι εἰκόνες εἰσὶ, τοῖς μὲν ὥς εἰκόσιν αὖ χρώμενοι, 511 A εἰκόσι δὲ χρωμένην αὐτοῖς τοῖς ὑπὸ τῶν κάτω ἀπεικασθεῖσι, and for the meaning of μιμηθεῖσιν X 599 A τό τε μιμηθησόμενον καὶ τὸ εἶδωλον and Laws 668 B. I have restored the reading of A, μιμηθεῖσιν, with which Proclus (in Plat. remp. I p. 291 Kroll) also agrees. τμηθεῖσιν, which appears to be adopted by all other editors, occurs in all the available MSS except A. But τοῖς τότε τμηθεῖσι would include AD as well as DC, and the illustrations employed in the inferior νοητὸν are drawn solely from DC, as is proved by 510 E (cited above), as well as by the actual facts of the case. The sole objection to μιμηθεῖσι is that the word is generally used only of "artificiosa imitatio" (Schneider): yet in Pol. 293 E, 297 C, Phil. 40 C and Arist. Hist. An. II 8. 502^b 9 the 'imitatio' can hardly be called 'artificiosa.' 511 A seems to me sufficient by itself to prove that A is right. Schneider (Addit. p. 51) refers to a dissertation by Mommsen published in 1842 as taking the view here advocated.

10 ἐξ ὑποθέσεων. ὑπόθεσις is correctly defined in the Platonic ὅροι (415 B) as ἀρχὴ ἀναπόδεικτος, a starting-point which is not demonstrated, but taken for granted, assumed, postulated. The arithmetician, for example, ὑποτίθεται the odd, the even, etc., i.e. assumes that his definition of odd, even, etc. is correct, and draws conclusions from his ὑπόθεσις of the odd, the even, etc. by means of exclusively deductive reasoning: cf. H. Sidgwick in J. Ph. II p. 100. If we attack his ὑπόθεσις, as Lucian for example does (Hermot. 74, quoted by Stallbaum), he must, quid arithmetician, throw up the sponge, for the ὑποθέσεις of the inferior νοητὸν can be demonstrated (or overthrown) only by Dialectic. Cf. generally Men. 86 E ff. Schneider may be right in supposing that Aristotle had the present passage in view when he wrote εἰ γὰρ καὶ Πλάτων ἡγόρει τοῦτο καὶ ἐξήτει, πότερον ἀπὸ τῶν ἀρχῶν ἢ ἐπὶ τὰς ἀρχὰς ἐστὶν ἡ δόξ, ὥσπερ ἐν τῷ σταδίῳ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀθλοθετῶν ἐπὶ τὸ πέρασ ἢ ἀνάπαλιν (Eth. Nic. I 2. 1095^a 32), though it is perhaps better (with Zeller⁴ II 1, p. 587 n. 2) to suppose that he is alluding to Plato's oral instruction.

11 τὸ δ' αὖ ἕτερον κτλ. τὸ ἕτερον is EB. The article after ἕτερον (see cr. n.) stands self-condemned, although its intrusion is difficult to explain. ὅ, which Schneider proposes, is also difficult, though in harmony with Ficinus (alterum vero, quod excogitat animus), for the verb of the relative clause can hardly be omit-σεως ἰοῦσα καὶ ἄνευ ὧν περ ἐκείνο εἰκόνων αὐτοῖς εἶδεσι δι' αὐτῶν τὴν μέθοδον ποιουμένη. Ταῦτ', ἔφη, ἃ λέγεις, οὐχ ἱκανῶς ἔμαθον.

C' Ἀλλ' αὖθις, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· ῥῆον γὰρ τούτων προειρημένων μαθήσει.

ted. λόγῳ, once proposed by Hermann, has nothing in its favour. ζητεῖ must be supplied to govern τὸ ἔτερον.

ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον. The only ἀρχὴ ἀνυπόθετος is the Idea of the Good: cf. VII 532 A f. Towards this the Dialectician travels, starting from ὑποθέσεις. He may begin, for example, by 'assuming' the 'just.' In such a case he assumes that his definition of 'just' is correct, i.e. corresponds exactly to the Idea of 'Just.' But whereas the arithmetician treats his ὑποθέσεις as an ultimate truth, and proceeds deductively to a conclusion, making use of sensible images by way of illustration, the dialectician treats his hypothesis as purely provisional, testing, revising, rejecting (VII 533 C n.), and reconstructing, and gradually ascending step by step to the first principle of all (τὴν τοῦ παντός ἀρχήν), without employing any sensible objects to illustrate his reasoning. The one gives no account of his ὑποθέσεις (οὐδένα λόγον—φανερῶν in C below); the other not only does, but must do so, just because he is a dialectician: cf. VII 533 C ff. He connects his ὑποθέσεις with others, subsuming them under higher and yet higher—better and truer—ὑποθέσεις, until at last he has traversed the whole region of νοητά. Such of his ὑποθέσεις as survive will be improved at each stage in the ascent, and finally, as soon as the Idea of Good is reached, all his surviving ὑποθέσεις will actually have become perfect counterparts of the Ideas which they have hitherto been only assumed to represent. In the meantime the ἀρχὴ τοῦ παντός, which Plato himself described dogmatically δι' εἰκόνας in 507 A—509 C, will have ceased to be a mere ὑποθέσεις: it will have become, in the fullest sense of the term, an ἀρχὴ ἀνυπόθετος: for the highest rung of the ladder is not reached until the entire domain of the knowable has been exhausted, and shewn to be the expression of the Idea of Good. Plato's ideal—it is no more—is a comprehensive and purely intellectual view of the totality of νοητά, in which every department is seen in its connexion with every other, and all in their dependence on the Good, which is in itself ἀνυπό-θετος and ὑπερούσιος—ἀνυπόθετος because higher than all ὑποθέσεις and itself proved by an exhaustive scrutiny of all νοητά, ὑπερούσιος because higher than, and the cause of, all existence. See also on 511 B and the Appendix to Book VII On Plato's Dialectic, together with Jackson J. of Ph. x pp. 145 f., where the distinctive peculiarities of the two methods are very clearly explained.

12 ὧν περ ἐκείνο εἰκόνων: i. q. ἀνευ τῶν αἰσπερ ἐκείνο (ζητεῖ) εἰκόνων. I formerly read τῶν περὶ ἐκείνο εἰκόνων (with g), but now think (with Schneider and others) that A is right. The attraction of a relative in the dative case is rare, but not unexampled. Van Cleef (de attract. in enunt. rel. usu Plat. p. 45) cites Gorg. 509 A, Prot. 361 E, Theaet. 144 A, Rep. VII 531 E (all examples of ἐντυγχάνω, whose proper construction in the sense of 'fall in with' is the dative, not the genitive), and Ep. VII 327 A (with προσέτυχον); for examples in other authors see Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 914. If ἀνευ and ἐκείνο are pronounced with emphasis, the meaning, I think, is easily caught. Stallbaum reads ὧν περὶ κτλ. with one Vienna MS, understanding, I suppose, χρῆται.

αὐτοῖς—δι' αὐτῶν. αὐτοῖς (ipsis= solis) is further accentuated by δι' αὐτῶν ('through themselves alone'): cf. 511 C. The εἶδη of the dialectician do not employ the adventitious aid of εἰκόνας: see on 511 B. The use of εἶδεσι here must not be held to imply that even the dialectician's conceptions of the Ideas are correct before he has reached the Idea of the Good. Till then, they are only ὑποθέσεις, though the false ὑποθέσεις are weeded out (VII 533 C n.), and the hypothetical character of the survivors is gradually eliminated in the course of the ascent. See on ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον above, and contrast 511 C.

14 ἀλλ' αὖθις κτλ. 'Then have it over again, said I.' The ellipse has a colloquial effect. Ast's εὐθύς for αὖθις is unlikely: nor does Cobet's <ἐρῶ> after ἐγώ sound right. If Plato had written ἐρῶ, he would, I think, have placed it after αὖθις. μάνθανε, or the like, supplied from ἔμαθον, suits the con-

15 οἶμαι γὰρ σε εἰδέναι, ὅτι οἱ περὶ τὰς γεωμετρίας τε καὶ λογισμὸν καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα πραγματευόμενοι, ὑποθέμενοι τὸ τε περιττὸν καὶ τὸ ἄρτιον καὶ τὰ σχήματα καὶ γωνιῶν τριττὰ εἶδη καὶ ἄλλα τούτων ἀδελφὰ καθ' ἐκάστην μέθοδον, ταῦτα μὲν ὡς εἰδότες, ποιησάμενοι ὑποθέσεις αὐτά, οὐδένα λόγον οὔτε αὐτοῖς οὔτε ἄλλοις ἔτι ἀξιούσι 20 περὶ αὐτῶν διδόναι ὡς παντὶ φανερῶν, ἐκ τούτων δ' ἀρχόμενοι τὰ D λοιπὰ ἤδη διεξιόντες τελευτῶσιν ὁμολογουμένως ἐπὶ τούτῳ, οὐ ἂν ἐπὶ σκέψιν ὁρμήσωσι. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, τοῦτό γε οἶδα.
Οὐκοῦν καὶ ὅτι τοῖς ὁρωμένοις εἵδεσι προσχρῶνται καὶ τοὺς λόγους περὶ αὐτῶν ποιοῦνται, οὐ περὶ τούτων διανοοῦμενοι, ἀλλ' ἐκείνων 25 πέρι, οἷς ταῦτα ἔοικε, τοῦ τετραγώνου αὐτοῦ ἔνεκα τοὺς λόγους text (ῥᾶον γὰρ—μαθήσει) best. Similarly in D below, οἶσθα is understood out of Glauco's reply. Cf. also ἀλλ' ὥδε in I 352 E.

510 C 15 οἱ περὶ κτλ. In CE, as will afterwards appear, are included five sciences, which form the προοίμιον (VII 531 D) or προπαιδεῖα (ib. 536 D) to Dialectic, represented by EB. They are the Science of Number, Plane Geometry, Stereometry, Astronomy, and Harmonics: VII 522 C—531 C. In each of these the method, according to Plato, is the same. Certain ὑποθέσεις are taken for granted, and inferences drawn from them by purely deductive reasoning, aided by the use of sensible likenesses or illustrations. See also App. I to Book VII.

18 ὡς εἰδότες. They have no know-ledge of their ὑποθέσεις, otherwise they would be able to give an account of them: see VII 533 C and 531 E μὴ δυνατόι τινες ὄντες δοῦναι τε καὶ ἀποδέξασθαι λόγον εἰσεσθαι ποτέ τι ὧν φάμεν δεῖν εἰδέναι; Οὐδ' αὖ, ἔφη, τοῦτό γε.

510 D 21 ὁμολογουμένως = "folger-rechterweise" (Cohen Pl. Ideenl. u. d. Math. p. 29) refers to the agreement between premises, intermediate steps, and conclusion: cf. VII 533 C, where ὁμολογία is used in the same way. "With perfect unanimity" (D. and V.) is incorrect and pointless.

23 τοῖς ὁρωμένοις εἵδεσι κτλ. They use the 'visible kinds,' i.e. visible squares, visible diagonals, etc., but they are thinking about mathematical squares and diagonals etc. Cf. generally Euthyd. 290 B οἱ δ' αὖ γεωμέτραι καὶ οἱ ἀστρονόμοι καὶ οἱ λογιστικοί· θηρευτικοὶ γὰρ εἶσι καὶ οὗτοι· οὐ γὰρ ποιοῦσι τὰ διαγράμματα ἕκαστοι τούτων ἀλλὰ τὰ ὄντα ἀνευρίσκουσιν, and VII 527 A.

25 ἔοικε. Visible σχήματα are imperfect copies of 'mathematical' σχήματα: cf. VII 526 A and App. I to Book VII.

τοῦ τετραγώνου αὐτοῦ κτλ.: 'for that with a view to which they are discoursing is the square itself and a diagonal itself, not this which they draw' etc. αὐτοῦ ('by itself,' i.e. apart from its embodiment in perceivable squares) is ambiguous, and might (so far as language is concerned) refer either to the Idea of Square (cf. v 476 A ff.) or to the Mathematical Square (cf. VII 525 D, E mm.), which—see App. I to Book VII—Plato holds to be distinct from the Idea. But the ambiguity is resolved as soon as we are shewn (in 511 C ff.) how to interpret διανοοῦμενοι and διανοία (511 A), and we then see that Plato is here speaking of the mathematical square. The singular τοῦ τετραγώνου is generic (cf. ὁ σοφιστής for the whole class of Sophists), for there are many 'mathematical' squares, diagonals etc. (VII 526 A n. and App. I to Book VII). It is conceivably for this reason that Plato drops the article with διαμέτρον ('a diagonal itself'), thereby also getting a more precise antithesis to ἀλλ' οὐ ταύτης, or else (if this suggestion is hypercritical) διαμέτρον is also generic. Sidgwick is, I think, mistaken when he says (J. Ph. II p. 103) that the language of this passage "in no way supports the interpolation of intermediates (Aristotle's τὰ μεταξύ) between particulars and Ideas": for διανοοῦμενοι involves διάνοια, and since διάνοια is intermediate between νοῦς and δόξα (511 D), we may reasonably suppose that its objects are likewise intermediate ποιοῦμενοι καὶ διαμέτρου αὐτῆς, ἀλλ' οὐ ταύτης, ἣν γράφουσιν, καὶ E τᾶλλα οὕτως, ¹ αὐτὰ μὲν ταῦτα, ἃ πλάττουσιν τε καὶ γράφουσιν, ὧν καὶ σκιαὶ καὶ ἐν ὕδασι εἰκόνας εἰσὶν, τούτοις μὲν ὡς εἰκόσιν αὐ χρώμενοι ζητοῦντές τε αὐτὰ ἐκεῖνα ἰδεῖν, ἃ οὐκ ἂν ἄλλως ἴδοι

 11 τις | ἢ τῇ διανοίᾳ; Ἄληθῇ, ἔφη, λέγεις. 30

XXI. Τοῦτο τοίνυν νοητὸν μὲν τὸ εἶδος ἔλεγον, ὑποθέσει δ' ἀναγκαζομένην ψυχὴν χρῆσθαι περὶ τὴν ζήτησιν αὐτοῦ, οὐκ ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἰοῦσαν, ὡς οὐ δυναμένη τῶν ὑποθέσεων ἀνωτέρω ἐκβαίνειν, εἰκόσι δὲ χρωμένην αὐτοῖς τοῖς ὑπὸ τῶν κάτω ἀπεικασθεῖσιν καὶ 5 ἐκείνοις πρὸς ἐκεῖνα ὡς ἐναργέσι δεδοξασμένοις τε καὶ τετιμημένοις.

6. τετιμημένους A²mr: τετιμημένοις A¹Ξ q.

between the higher νοητά and δοξαστά.
 See App. I to Book VII.

27 πλάττουσιν: with reference to models of geometrical figures, orreries etc., all of which belong to CD, and may themselves have shadows and likenesses in AD.

28 ὡς εἰκόσιν αὐ χρώμενοι. See 510 B n. The anacoluthon in αὐτὰ μὲν ταῦτα—τούτοις μὲν χρώμενοι is illustrated by Engelhardt Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 8:
 cf. also VII 520 D.

29 ζητοῦντές τε. Instead of τε, I formerly read δέ (on slight MS authority), with Ast and Stallbaum; but the corruption of δέ to τε is exceedingly improbable here. The antithetical force of the clause ζητοῦντες—ἰδεῖν is weakened by the occurrence of the words ὡς εἰκόσιν αὐ in the μὲν clause. If the objects in question are used as images, the further statement that the real object of investigation is their originals (αὐτὰ ἐκεῖνα) loses its antithetical force, and becomes a sort of adjunct. Hence τε following ζητοῦντες is more appropriate than αὐτὰ δὲ ἐκεῖνα ζητοῦντες ἰδεῖν, which would be the natural way of expressing an antithesis.
 Cf. Latw 927 B δὲ μὲν ἀκούουσι βλέπουσι τε δὲ ὅ (where the order is the same as here), Phaedr. 266 C and other examples cited by Hofer de part. Pl. pp. 17 f.

511 A 1 τῇ διανοίᾳ. See on τοῦ τετραγώνου αὐτοῦ 510 D.

2 ἔλεγον. 510 B.

3 ἀναγκαζομένην. For the participle we might expect ἀναγκάζεσθαι. But ἀναγκαζομένην gives a better balance with νοητὸν, and the meaning is 'Accordingly I described this class as intelligible indeed, but the soul as compelled' etc.

4 τῶν ὑποθέσεων—ἐκβαίνειν: 'to step out of and above assumptions,' viz.
 by reaching the ἀρχὴ ἀνυπόθετος: cf.
 510 B n.

5 αὐτοῖς τοῖς κτλ. αὐτοῖς is 'the actual things,' 'the originals,' as in αὐτὰ μὲν ταῦτα 510 E: 'employing as images the originals from which images were made' (lit. 'the imaged-from' "abge-bildet" Schneider) 'by the objects below,' i.e. employing as images the originals in CD, which were copied by the shadows etc. in AD. For ἀπεικασθεῖσι in this sense cf. ἀπεικασθῆναι in Tim. 48 C and (with J. and C.) εἰκασθέντος in Phaedr.
 250 B. Other views of this passage are discussed in App. X.

καὶ ἐκείνοις κτλ.: 'those also, in comparison with those remoter objects, being esteemed and honoured as palpable and clear.' καὶ is 'also' and not 'and,'
 as some have supposed. ἐκείνοις is DC, and ἐκεῖνα AD. Plato uses the pronoun ἐκείνοις to indicate that the objects in CD are less near to the mind of the mathe-matician than those in CE, which are the immediate object of his study (cf.
 Sidgwick in J. Ph. II p. 98). He could not, even if he had wished to, have written καὶ αὐτοῖς (et ipsis) without sacrificing αὐτοῖς just before. ἐκεῖνα is said because AD is remoter still. See also App. X.

6 δεδοξασμένοις means, I believe,
 'esteemed,' 'valued' as in Polyb. VI 53.
 9 τῶν ἐπ' ἀρετῇ δεδοξασμένων ἀνδρῶν:
 cf. the regular use of δοξάζειν for 'glorify' in the N. T. No other certain instance of this usage appears to occur in Plato, or even in classical Greek: at all events neither Thuc. III 45. 6 nor Dionys.

Μαυθίνω, ἔφη, ὅτι τὸ ὑπὸ ¹ ταῖς γεωμετρίαις τε καὶ ταῖς ταύτης B ἀδελφαῖς τέχναις λέγεις. Τὸ τοίνυν ἕτερον μάνθανε τμήμα τοῦ νοητοῦ λέγοντά με τοῦτο, οὗ αὐτὸς ὁ λόγος ἄπτεται τῇ τοῦ διαλέ-10 γεσθαι δυνάμει, τὰς ὑποθέσεις ποιούμενος οὐκ ἀρχάς, ἀλλὰ τῷ ὄντι ὑποθέσεις, οἷον ἐπιβάσεις τε καὶ ὁρμάς, ἵνα μέχρι τοῦ ἀνυπο-θέτου ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ παντὸς ἀρχὴν ἰὼν, ἀφάμενος αὐτῆς, πάλιν αὖ

Thesm. I. 24 Meineke, cited by L. and S., is a case in point. But the collocation with τετμημένοις makes it probable that the usage, though rare, is Platonic; and every other interpretation of the word is beset with serious difficulties, as is shewn in App. X.

τετμημένοις. τετμημένοις is read by Schneider, with several MSS (see cr. n.), and understood as 'cut off' (abgeschnitten); but, as J. and C. observe, this does not suit δεδοξασμένοις, and it is doubtful if the objects can be said to be 'cut,' although the line is: see on τοῖς τότε μνηθεῖσιν 510 B.

511 B 7 ταύτης in spite of γεωμετρίαις because Geometry is itself one art: cf. VII 533 C γεωμετρίας τε καὶ τὰς ταύτης ἐπομένας. The plural γεωμετρίαις does not mean the 'various branches of geometry' (as D. and V. suppose), but geometrical investigations: cf. λογισμούς for 'Arithmetic' in 510 C.

9 αὐτὸς ὁ λόγος κτλ.: 'the argument grasps by itself, through the power of dialectic.' λόγος is not the faculty of reason ("Vernunft" Schleiermacher), which is νοῦς, or even 'thought' ("Gedanke" Schneider), but rather "the impersonal reason, or drift of the argument" (Bosanquet), the instrument by which νοῦς works (Krohn Pl. St. p. 140). ὁ λόγος is of course personified, as it constantly is in this sense.

10 δυνάμει should not be translated 'faculty,' but simply 'power' (cf. 508 E n.); the argument, unaided by εἰκόνες (αὐτὸς 'by itself,' cf. αὐτοῖς εἶδеси 510 B n.), grasps its object by the inherent power of dialectical argumentation (διαλέγεσθαι), and nothing else. In spite of Grimmelt (de reip. unil. etc. p. 52) it is certainly an error to identify ὁ λόγος with νοῦς. Why does Dialectic dispense with all sensible images or illustrations? Plato (it should be remembered) holds that the intrusion of any element of sense-perception, however small, impedes the exercise of thought: see Phaed. 79 C ff. The ὑπο-

θέσεις of the dialectician may be and often are generalisations from αἰσθητά, but a generalisation, regarded in itself, is wholly νοητόν. These ὑποθέσεις it is the province of Dialectic to test in every possible way, to demolish where necessary (VII 533 C n.), to correct by one another, to classify according to their mutual coherence and interdependence, until by an exhaustive scrutiny of all νοητά we grasp the unifying principle of all existence—the Idea of the Good. Cf. VII 517 C n. and see on τοῦ ἀνυποθέτου below and the Appendix to Book VII On Plato's Dialectic.

τῷ ὄντι indicates that we are to take the word in its literal etymological signification, 'literally hypotheses or underpositions, stepping-stones as it were and starting-points.' For this use of τῷ ὄντι and kindred expressions see I 343 C, V 474 A n. and W. G. Headlam On editing Aeschylus pp. 138 ff. With ἐπιβάσεις cf. Symp. 211 C ὥσπερ ἐπανάβαθμοῖς χράμενοι.

11 τοῦ ἀνυποθέτου. See on ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον 510 B. Plato makes no attempt in the Republic to classify Ideas in such an ascending scale as he here suggests, though it is probable from 509 A that Knowledge and Truth would rank near to the Good. Nor is there any dialogue in which an exhaustive classification is even attempted. Such hints as Plato gives us throughout his writings are enumerated in Stumpf das Verhältniss etc. pp. 50, 56, 76, and in Zeller¹ II 1, pp. 704—707: cf. also Fouillée La Philosophie de Platon II pp. 99—104. We must suppose that each higher Idea will excel all the lower both in range and in excellence. These two characteristics are, from Plato's point of view, the same. The wider an Idea is in range and extension, the greater will be the sum of existences of which it is the cause. But the Idea of Good is the cause of all existence, so that each higher Idea will be better than all below it, because it contains more of ἐχόμενος τῶν ἐκείνης ἐχομένων, οὕτως ἐπὶ τελευτὴν καταβαίνει C αἰσθητῷ παντάπασιν οὐδενὶ προσχρώμενος, ἄλλ' εἶδесιν αὐτοῖς δι' αὐτῶν εἰς αὐτά, καὶ τελευτᾷ εἰς εἶδη. Μανθάνω, ἔφη, ἱκανῶς 15 μὲν οὐ· δοκεῖς γάρ μοι συχνὸν ἔργον λέγειν· ὅτι μέντοι βούλει διορίζειν σαφέστερον εἶναι τὸ ὑπὸ τῆς τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι ἐπιστήμης τοῦ ὄντος τε καὶ νοητοῦ θεωρούμενον ἢ τὸ ὑπὸ τῶν τεχνῶν καλουμένων, αἷς αἱ ὑποθέσεις ἀρχαὶ καὶ διανοίᾳ μὲν ἀναγκάζονται ἀλλὰ

16. οὐ Α'Ξγ: οὐν Α¹.

Good. Beyond this it is perhaps safer not to go. A systematic attempt to correlate all intelligibles among themselves and in their connexion with the Good would have been premature in Plato's day, and is premature still. The permanent value of Plato's conception lies in the ideal which it sets before every succeeding generation of investigators.

12 πάλιν αὖ κτλ. The dialectician's progress involves both an ascent and a descent—an ascent ἐπὶ τὴν ἀρχήν, and a descent ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἐπὶ τὴν τελευτήν (cf. Aristotle quoted on 510 B). By the time that he reaches the Idea of the Good, all his surviving ὑποθέσεις have become exact counterparts of the Ideas which are their objective correlates; the others have all of them been demolished (VII 533 C n.). The conclusions (τελευταί) of dialectic are therefore impregnable; ψευδὴς ἐπιστήμη is a contradiction in terms (V 477 E n.). For more on this subject see the Appendix to Book VII On Plato's Dialectic.

511 C 14 εἶδесιν—εἶδη. On αὐτοῖς δι' αὐτῶν see 510 B n. εἶδесιν may now be taken in its full force; for after the Idea of Good has been reached, the dialectician's conception of each εἶδος is accurate and complete: see last note. I formerly read αὐτοῖς δι' αὐτῶν, rejecting εἰς αὐτά as superfluous on account of καὶ τελευτᾷ εἰς εἶδη. But αὐτῶν is certainly wrong (cf. 510 B), and εἰς αὐτά, which may well be taken loosely with καταβαίνει or a participle supplied from it, merely states that the conclusions of dialectic are likewise εἶδη: whereas καὶ τελευτᾷ εἰς εἶδη seems to lay emphasis on the fact that dialectic never descends below εἶδη to particulars ("und bei Begriffen endigt" Schneider). We may translate 'and with Ideas end.' Plato means to emphasize the fact that the Dialectician quā Dialectician does not draw conclusions as to particulars: if he did, he could scarcely be said αἰσθητῷ παντάπασιν οὐδενὶ προσχρῆσθαι. See the Appendix to Book VII On Plato's Dialectic.

16 ὅτι μέντοι κτλ. There is no anacoluthon as Engelhardt (Anal. Pl. Spec. III p. 9) supposes, but ὅτι depends on μανθάνω. With σαφέστερον cf. V 478 C and 509 D above. σαφής, originally 'clear,' often = 'true' in Greek. Plato's comparison between Light and Truth in 507 C ff. gave a new and profound significance to the equation. The present passage should be compared with Phil. 57 B ff., where Dialectic is said to excel mathematical and all other sciences in respect of 'the clearness' (τὸ σαφές καὶ τὰκριβές καὶ τὰληθέστατον) of its object. In general, the higher a science is, the greater (according to Plato) is the amount of truth or knowability which its subject-matter contains. Plato's theory on this subject is the source of Aristotle's doctrine of ἀπλῶς γνώριμα or γνωριμώτερα φύσει, for which see Stewart on Eth. Nic. I 4. 1095^b 2.

18 τὸ—καλουμένων. καλουμένων implies that τέχναι ('Arts') sometimes bore the specific meaning of 'mathematical sciences' as early as the time of Plato. This use of the word may have been introduced by some of the Sophists, perhaps Hippias: cf. Prot. 318 E, where Protagoras says οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλοι λωβῶνται τοὺς νέους· τὰς γὰρ τέχνας αὐτοὺς πεφευγόντας ἀκόντας πάλιν αὐτὸντες ἐμβάλλουσιν εἰς τέχνας, λογισμοὺς τε καὶ ἀστρονομίαν καὶ γεωμετρίαν καὶ μουσικὴν (the medieval quadrivium) διδάσκοντες—καὶ ἅμα εἰς τὸν Ἱππίαν ἀπέβλεψεν. If we can understand μουσικὴν as 'theory of Music,' Hippias' quadrivium is identical with Plato's, except that Plato would like to add Stereometry. Cf. also Theaet.

20 μὴ αἰσθήσεσιν αὐτὰ θεᾶσθαι οἱ θεώμενοι, διὰ δὲ ἡ τὸ μὴ ἐπ' ἀρχὴν D ἀνελθόντες σκοπεῖν, ἀλλ' ἐξ ὑποθέσεων, νοῦν οὐκ ἴσχειν περὶ αὐτὰ δοκοῦσί σοι, καίτοι νοητῶν ὄντων μετὰ ἀρχῆς. διάνοιαν δὲ καλεῖν μοι δοκεῖς τὴν τῶν γεωμετρικῶν τε καὶ τῶν τοιούτων ἔξιν, ἀλλ' οὐ νοῦν, ὡς μεταξὺ τι δόξης τε καὶ νοῦ τὴν διάνοιαν οὔσαν. Ἰκανώ-25 τατα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀπεδέξω. καὶ μοι ἐπὶ τοῖς τέτταρσι τμήμασι τέτταρα ταῦτα παθήματα ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ γιγνόμενα λαβέ, νόησιν μὲν ἐπὶ τῷ ἀνωτάτῳ. διάνοιαν δὲ ἐπὶ τῷ δευτέρῳ, τῷ τρίτῳ δὲ πίστιν E ἀπόδος καὶ τῷ τελευταίῳ εἰκασίαν, καὶ τάξον αὐτὰ ἀνὰ λόγον, 145 A, B and see Tannery L'Éducation Platonicienne in Rev. Philos. x p. 523, the Appendix to Book VII On the propædæutic studies of the Republic and my article in Cl. Rev. xv p. 220, where I have tried to shew that our use of the word 'Arts' in 'Bachelor of Arts' etc. is an inheritance from the Platonic Academy.

19 καὶ—θεώμενοι. The relative sentence passes into a main clause, as in II 357 B, where see note.

20 αὐτὰ: viz. the subject-matter of the so-called 'Arts': cf. VII 518 B.

511 D 22 καίτοι—ἀρχῆς: 'although they are intelligibles with a first principle.' The mathematician does not ascend to an ἀρχή, and therefore does not exercise—for ἴσχειν in its original half-inchoative sense cf. IX 585 B and Kühner-Blass Gr. Gr. I 2, p. 434 n.—νοῦς on his subject, but nevertheless his subject is νοητόν (as we have been told before 510 B, 511 A, C) and has an ἀρχή, viz. his ὑποθέσεις (as αἱ ὑποθέσεις ἀρχαί above). καίτοι is not found elsewhere in Plato for καίπερ with a participle (Hoefer de part. Pl. p. 28) but occurs in Simonides ap. Prot. 339 C, in Asiarch. 364 B and Lysias 31. 34. To write καίπερ (with Kugler de part. τοι etc. p. 18) would be rash. For other views on this difficult clause see App. XI.

καλεῖν μοι δοκεῖς. See 510 D n.

24 ὡς—οὔσαν. διάνοια is the most general word for a state (ἔξις) of mind or mode of thought in Greek; and the limitation here introduced is entirely Plato's own. Plato apparently attempts to fortify his innovation by etymology, hinting that the word διάνοια is by derivation that which is between (διὰ μέσου) νοῦς and δόξα. So also J. and C. Cf. εἰκασία (with allusion to εἰκόνες) in E. On δόξης see 510 A n.

26 νόησιν is used in its strict sense of νοῦς in actual exercise, not merely the faculty of νοῦς: cf. 508 E n. The exercise of νοῦς is correctly spoken of as a πάθημα ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ γιγνόμενον, but the faculty itself could hardly be thus described.

511 E 27 πίστιν κτλ. If we strictly limit DC to ὁρατά, πίστις must be understood as the state of mind which believes only in visible, palpable (ἐναργῆ) things (τὰ περὶ ἡμᾶς ὥρα καὶ πάν τὸ φυτευτὸν καὶ τὸ σκευαστὸν ὅλον γένος 510 A): 'seeing,' as we still say, 'is believing.' But Plato has already spoken of AC as δοξαστόν (510 A n.); so that πίστις should not be confined to the objects of sight. It is in fact a subdivision of δόξα, superior in point of 'clearness' (σαφήνεια) to εἰκασία. We may regard it as the normal condition of the average uneducated mind. εἰκασία is the state of mind in which εἰκόνες are held to be true. Here again, if εἰκόνες are strictly limited to images of ὁρατά (cf. 509 E, 510 A), εἰκασία must be similarly confined in its scope, and loses all metaphysical interest and importance: see VII 517 A n. But since the εἰκόνες are a lower grade of δοξαστά (510 A n.), εἰκασία should be understood as a lower variety of δόξα (as in VII 534 A), viz. the state of mind which accepts as true that which is a copy of a copy (τρίτον πρὸς ἀλήθειαν). In this sense εἰκασία (with a play on εἰκόνες) is a new coinage of Plato's. The translation 'conjecture' is misleading, for conjecture implies conscious doubt or hesitation, and doubt is foreign to εἰκασία in Plato's sense. Plato may however have intended to suggest that such a state of mind is in reality no better than conjecture. See also X 598 A n. and Bosanquet Companion pp. 261 f. with Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II pp. 242—246.

ὥσπερ ἐφ' οἷς ἔστιν ἀληθείας μετέχειν, οὕτω ταῦτα σαφηνείας ἡγησάμενος μετέχειν. Μανθάνω, ἔφη, καὶ ξυγχωρῶ καὶ τάττω ὡς 30 λέγεις.

ΤΕΛΟΣ ΠΟΛΙΤΕΙΑΣ Σ'.

29 ὥσπερ ἐφ' οἷς κτλ.: "attributing to them such a degree of clearness as their objects have of truth" J. and C. Liebholt's ἐφ' ὅσον for ἐφ' οἷς is an unhappy suggestion: cf. VII 534 A. A corrector in q changed the first μετέχειν to μετέχει, which, in deference to Schneider's arguments, I formerly printed. But the text is quite sound. Stated categorically, the clause would run ὥσπερ ἐφ' οἷς ἔστιν ἀληθείας μετέχει, οὕτω ταῦτα σαφηνείας μετέχει. Under the government of ἡγησάμενος, the first as well as the second μετέχει becomes μετέχειν; for the accusative with infinitive may be employed even in the subordinate clauses of Indirect. See on 492 C. The jingle μετέχειν—μετέχειν is inoffensive: cf. X 614 A, 621 B.

APPENDICES TO BOOK VI.

I.

VI 488 D. ὅπως δὲ κυβερνήσει εἰάν τε τινες βούλωνται εἰάν τε μή, μήτε τέχνην τοῦτον μήτε μελέτην οἰόμενοι δυνατόν εἶναι λαβεῖν ἅμα καὶ τὴν κυβερνητικὴν.

Schneider's translation of this sentence is as follows:—"wie aber zu steuern sei, es mögen nun einige wollen oder nicht, davon glauben sie nicht dass es eine Kunst und Übung gebe, mit der man dann eben die Steuermannskunst habe." The view which I have given in the notes is in general harmony with this interpretation: but I think that the word μελέτη denotes 'study' rather than actual 'practice' ("Übung" or "exercitatio" Schneider): see the notes.

The strength of Schneider's explanation lies in its conformity with the whole course of Plato's argument both here and in the passages which I have cited from the Politicus. In particular, the exact parallel between εἰάν τε τινες βούλωνται εἰάν τε μή and εἰάν τε ἐκόντας εἰάν τε ἄκοντας (in Pol. 293 E) appears to me the strongest possible confirmation of the general soundness of his view. No interpretation that I know of, Schneider's alone excepted, assigns its proper force to εἰάν τε τινες βούλωνται (cf. εἰάν τε ἐκόντας, Pol. l.c.) as well as to εἰάν τε μή. The true pilot cares just as little whether people wish him to steer as whether they do not: his art has nothing whatever to do with the sentiments with which his passengers regard his rule. Schneider's interpretation is also supported by the emphatic μήτε τέχνην μήτε μελέτην: the false pilot will not allow that you can learn 'either art or theory' of how to steer, because according to him there is absolutely nothing technical or theoretical about steering. The only 'art of steering' which he will admit is the art of collaborating with himself in order to get command of the ship (ναυτικὸν μὲν καλοῦντας καὶ κυβερνητικὸν καὶ ἐπιστάμενον τὰ κατὰ τὰν ὅς ἂν ἐλλαμβάνειν δεινὸς ἢ ὅπως ἄρξουσιν κτλ.). It must, however, be admitted that ἅμα καὶ τὴν κυβερνητικὴν is not altogether easy on Schneider's view. The reader naturally expects τὴν κυβερνητικὴν to be different from the τέχνη and μελέτη: for on a first examination of the passage, Plato seems to be speaking of the impossibility of acquiring at the same time two different arts: whereas Schneider holds that the two arts are the same, τὴν κυβερνητικὴν being only Plato's way of expressing the τέχνη and μελέτη τοῦτον ὅπως κυβερνήσει.

Is it possible to devise any explanation which, while agreeing in the main with Schneider's, will escape the apparent difficulty to which I have just drawn attention?

We note that κυβερνητικὴν has already been implicitly defined by the sailors as the art of helping them to get command (κυβερνητικὸν κτλ.

above). Why then should we not suppose that the sailors 'think it impossible to acquire an art of how to steer (ὅπως κυβερνήσει) along with κυβερνητική' in their sense of the term, i.e. (practically) along with the art of making themselves masters of the ship? This interpretation, as far as concerns the language, seems to me possible enough; but it implies that the sailors do think it possible to learn the art of how to steer independently and by itself: whereas they have already said that such an art cannot be taught at all (φάσκοντας μηδὲ διδακτὸν εἶναι 488 B). For this among other reasons I think that this solution should not be entertained.

I have endeavoured in the notes to justify Schneider's explanation of ἄμα καί, and here it need only be added that one source of embarrassment is the tendency which we feel to give to ἄμα more of a strictly temporal signification than necessarily belongs to it in that idiomatic phrase.

An entirely different view of the sentence is taken by Ast and others. According to Ast, Plato is here distinguishing between two arts, viz. (1) scientific pilotage (the knowledge of astronomy etc.), and (2) the "ars imperandi—ut quae scientia et ars ipsum doceant, a multitudine ipsi subdita fieri curet." τὴν κυβερνητικὴν is (1), and τέχνην τοῦτου (2). On this view Plato asserts that the crew in general consider it impossible to acquire both the art of steering (τὴν κυβερνητικὴν) and that of steering whether people wish it or no (ὅπως κυβερνήσει τέχνην τοῦτου), i.e. in other words, enforcing and maintaining authority. Both arts—so Ast interprets—are united, according to Plato, in the true pilot.

This explanation Stallbaum apparently accepts, conjecturing only τῇ κυβερνητικῇ for τὴν κυβερνητικὴν. I do not deny that it can be elicited from Plato's language, if we take this sentence by itself: but it is open to serious objection on the score of meaning, as has been pointed out by H. Sidgwick (J. Ph. v pp. 274—276), Richards (Cl. Rev. viii p. 23), and Shorey (A. J. Ph. xvi p. 234)¹. It represents the sailors as admitting that there is a true art of steering, which under certain circumstances it is possible to acquire. But this is precisely what they deny (see 488 B πρὸς δὲ τοῦτοις φάσκοντας μηδὲ διδακτὸν εἶναι), nor could they possibly admit it, so long as they 'have not so much as a notion that the true Pilot should study the year and the seasons' etc. (488 D). Their solitary notion of an art of steering is how to get the helm into their hands (488 C πάντα ποιούντας ὅπως ἂν σφίσι τὸ πηδάλιον ἐπιτρέψῃ and C, D ναυτικὸν μὲν καλοῦντας καὶ κυβερνητικὸν —ὅς ἂν ἐξλλαμβάνειν δευρὸς ἢ κτλ.). Moreover, even if they were to allow that there is an art of steering, they would certainly not allow that others possessed it rather than themselves: cf. Pol. 302 A, B. Nor, again, does Plato ever admit that the art of enforcing one's authority has anything whatever to do with the art of steering. In the Politicus, he is careful to point out that they are entirely distinct: see the passages referred to in the note.

¹ For another special discussion of the passage see Richter in Fleckeisen's Jahrbuch, 1867, p. 145.

Jowett and Campbell's explanation is somewhat different. They do not suppose that Plato himself means to attribute to the true pilot both knowledge and power to enforce his authority; but apparently agree with Ast that the false pilot admits the existence of a scientific κυβερνητική, which can be acquired by itself, but cannot be combined with the art of getting possession of the helm. This view is open to all except the last of the objections already noted.

Sidgwick and Richards both agree with Grote (Plato III p. 80) that Plato does not regard scientific κυβερνητική as involving the power to enforce one's authority as well as knowledge of steering. According to Richards, we should read ἀδύνατον instead of δυνατόν. "The crew deem it by no means as impossible as it really is that, while a man acquires κυβερνητική, he should at the same time acquire this other art" (viz. ὅπως κυβερνήσει, ἐάν τέ τινες βούλωνται ἐάν τε μὴ). This view is attractive in some ways, but the corruption of ἀδύνατον to δυνατόν is not a very probable one, and it would still seem to be implied that the crew admit the existence of a true art of steering, which is, under certain circumstances, capable of being learnt. If, with Sidgwick, we read οιομένῳ, in agreement with αὐτῷ, this particular difficulty disappears. I formerly accepted Sidgwick's proposal, but there is force in Richards' criticism that "the sentence would be most clumsy in form, nor is it to the point what the true steersman thinks; Plato is describing the state of mind of the crew." δέ after ὅπως is also a difficulty.

On the whole, I am now inclined to think that Schneider's interpretation has the most numerous and important arguments in its favour, and for this reason I have adopted it in the notes.

II.

VI 492 E. οὐ γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ ἐπιχειρεῖν πολλὴ ἄνοια. οὔτε γὰρ γίγνεται οὔτε γέγονεν οὐδὲ οὐδ' ἂν μὴ γένηται ἄλλοιον ἢ θος πρὸς ἀρετὴν παρὰ τὴν τοῦτων παιδείαν πεπαιδευμένον, ἀνθρώπειον, ὃ ἐταῖρε· θεῖον μέντοι κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν ἐξαιρῶμεν λόγου.

I agree in the main with Schneider's view of this passage, which he translates—more freely than usual—as follows: "Denn keine Erziehung, o Freund, vermag oder vermochte oder wird auch vermögen der Erziehung dieser gegenüber ein Gemüth zur Tugend umzulenken, nämlich ein menschliches; das göttliche freilich müssen wir wie es im Sprichwort heisst, ausnehmen von unserer Rede." J. and C. (with Ast) connect πρὸς ἀρετὴν with πεπαιδευμένον, comparing Prot. 342 D λακεδαιμόνιοι πρὸς φιλοσοφίαν—ἄριστα πεπαιδευμένοι and Gorg. 471 D εἰ πρὸς τὴν ῥητορικὴν πεπαιδευθεῖν, but the adverbs make all the difference. Without an adverb Plato writes εἰς ἀρετὴν παιδεύειν (e.g. Gorg. 519 E). An entirely different explanation is given by Stallbaum and others. Stallbaum translates as follows: "neque enim indoles iuxta istorum erudita disciplinam neque fit neque facta est, nec vero unquam fiet ad virtutem (virtutis habita ratione) aliusmodi (ἄλλοιον) humana quidem" etc. But (1) Plato is professedly giving a reason (οὔτε γάρ κτλ.) why it is the height of folly to attempt to teach a young man what is opposed to public opinion, and Stallbaum's translation gives no such reason: (2) παρά cannot mean 'iuxta' 'according to,' but only 'opposed to.' Stallbaum's view, which is as old as Ficinus, has been widely accepted, but no one has yet explained how παρά can be used for κατά.

The adherents of this erroneous view have also in many cases suspected the word ἀλλοῖον. Even if we adopt Schneider's explanation, ἀλλοῖον seems at first sight strange: should not Plato have written ἄμεινον, which Vermehren (Pl. Stud. p. 95) considers more natural? I think not, for Plato means to suggest that public opinion will not tolerate any kind of dissent, whether better or worse than itself, except the θεῖον ἦθος, which is a special example of the ἀλλοῖον ἦθος πρὸς ἀρετήν. Instead of ἀλλοῖον the following proposals have been made, all of them (except the last) on the mistaken assumption that παρά means κατά: (1) οὐκ ἀλλοῖον ('not alien to' Nägelsbach), (2) <ἄλλο ἢ> ἀλλοῖον ('other than alien to,' Hermann, who also suggests ἄλλο ἢ ὄνειδος for ἀλλοῖον ἦθος), (3) ἀξιόλογον (Vermehren), (4) ἀληθινόν (Richards). The last of these critics 'strongly suspects' that Plato also wrote κατὰ and not παρά.

III.

VI 498 D, E. οὐ γὰρ πώποτε εἶδον γενόμενον τὸ νῦν λεγόμενον, ἀλλὰ πολὺ μᾶλλον τοιαῦτ' ἅττα ῥήματα ἐξεπίτηδες ἀλλήλοις ὁμιωμένα, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ αὐτομάτου, ὥσπερ νῦν, συμπεσόντα. ἄνδρα δὲ ἀρετῇ παρισωμένον καὶ ὁμιωμένον μέχρι τοῦ δυνατοῦ τελέως ἔργῳ τε καὶ λόγῳ, δυναστεύοντα ἐν πόλει ἑτέρα τοιαύτῃ, οὐ πώποτε ἑώρακασιν κτλ.

The view which I take of this passage is new in some of its details, but Reinhardt had already pointed out that Plato is referring to Isocrates (de Isocr. aem. p. 39), and Dümmler has made it probable that the reference is specifically to the Panegyricus (probably published about 380 B.C.). The same general view is adopted by the French editors of Book vi (Espinass and Maillet), and was also held by Schneider, as appears from his translation "denn sie haben das jetzt aufgestellte niemals in der Wirklichkeit gesehen, sondern viel eher etwa solche Worte, sorgfältig mit einander in Gleichklang gebracht, nicht zufällig, wie diese, zusammengesetzt; einen Mann aber, der sich mit der Tugend in Einstimmung und Gleichklang gebracht so vollkommen wie möglich in Werk und Wort—haben sie niemals gesehen" etc. See also Hirmer Entstehung u. Kompos. d. pl. Pol. pp. 664, 665. Schneider appears to understand τοιαῦτ' ἅττα ῥήματα as referring only to what follows (ἐξεπίτηδες—συμπεσόντα), and the same view is apparently taken by Dümmler (Chr. Beitr. p. 14). That they refer more naturally to what precedes will hardly be denied, and γενόμενον—λεγόμενον is as good an example of παρομοίωσις as one could wish. Reinhardt (l.c.) supposes that τοιαῦτ' ἅττα ῥήματα means proposals for political reform, resembling Plato's ideal State, and on this ground holds that it is the Areopagiticus, and not the Panegyricus, of which Plato is thinking. But Plato would hardly have compared any of Isocrates' political speeches to his own Republic, and the following words shew that the contrast is intended to be between mere vapouring rhetoricians and true Men. Nor is it likely that the Republic alludes to a work published so late as 354, the approximate date of the Areopagiticus (Christ Litteraturgesch. p. 297). The interpretation which I have given of τοιαῦτ' ἅτα ῥήματα appears to me exactly to suit ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ αὐτομάτου, ὥσπερ νῦν, συμπεσόντα. It is perfectly true, as Plato says, that the figure of παρομοίωσις is never deliberately aimed at by him; or, if it is, he has the good manners to conceal his art. Isocrates' ῥήματα, on the other hand, are correctly described as ἐξεπίτηδες ἀλλήλοις ὁμιωμένα.

Davies and Vaughan completely miss the meaning of the passage when they translate "they have met with proposals somewhat resembling ours, but forced expressly into appearing of a piece with one another, instead of falling spontaneously into agreement, as in the present case." Jowett errs in much the same way, except that he seems to have suspected an allusion to the sophistical rhetoricians in ῥήματα—ὁμιωμένα. The view adopted in J. and C.'s note is practically identical with that of D. and V.

IV.

VI 500 A. ἡ καὶ ἐν οὕτω θεωῖνται. ἀλλοίαν τ' οὐ φήσεις αὐτοὺς δόξαν λήψεσθαι καὶ ἄλλα ἀποκρινεῖσθαι;

The reading of the best mss ἡ καὶ—ἀλλοίαν τοι κτλ. is retained by Schneider and (with τ's change of τοι to τε) by Stallbaum and Hermann. On this view ἀλλοίαν δόξαν λήψεσθαι must be understood as denoting a change of opinion from the ἀλλοίαν δόξαν of 499E. But it is extremely awkward to suppose that the ἀλλοία δόξα is different in the two cases; nor can men be said to change an opinion which it is doubtful if they ever held. These difficulties have led Hermann to read ἀλλ' οἶαν τοι (with Stephanus and some inferior mss) in 499E, understanding λογίζομενος before οἶαν τοι—surely a strange ellipse, and otherwise an insufficient remedy. ἀλλ' οἶαν τοι in 499E was also adopted by Ast, with other changes much too extensive to need refutation, though supported in part by the reading of inferior mss. There should be no doubt that ἀλλοίαν τοι in the earlier passage is sound. In 500A Jowett proposes to read ἡ καί, joining καί and οὕτω, and placing a full stop after ἀποκρινεῖσθαι. A similar view was held by Ast. But καί could hardly be taken with οὕτω, and ἡ καί would strike every reader as the usual particle of interrogation. ἡ γάρ (interrogative), which Vermehren conjectures (Pl. Stud. p. 68), is highly improbable. I formerly read ἡ οὐκ, and altered τοι to τε. ἡ οὐκ is favoured also by Campbell, but the authority for the negative—q and Flor. U—is extremely slight, and Baiter's emendation accounts more easily for the reading of the oldest mss. The retention of καί 'even' is also an improvement: if a negative had been used, we should have expected rather οὐδέ than οὐκ.

V.

VI 501 A. B. Ἐπειτα, οἶμαι, ἀπεργαζόμενοι πυκνὰ ἂν ἐκατέρωσε ἀπο-βλέπειν πρὸς τε τὸ φύσει δίκαιον καὶ καλὸν καὶ σωφρον καὶ πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα, καὶ πρὸς ἐκείνῳ αὖ, ὃ ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἐμποιοῖεν, ξυμμιγνύντες τε καὶ κερανύντες ἐκ τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων τὸ ἀνδρείκελον κτλ.

My view of this passage agrees closely with that of Schneider (see his translation pp. 169, 303) except that I think it is better to translate ἀνδρείκελον by the 'colour and likeness of true Manhood,' rather than by "die Farbe des Menschen," so as to bring out the double signification of the word (see on γράφειν νόμους 501 A). Schneider formerly denied that ἀνδρείκελον meant anything beyond "imago hominis," but he retracts this view in his Additamenta (p. 49) and Translation.

Schneider's text is followed also by Baier. The majority of editors prefer καὶ πρὸς ἐκείνῳ αἶ τὸ ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἐμποιοῖεν ξυμμιγνύντες κτλ. (see cr. n.). In that case we must emend and write either ἐμποιοῖέν τε (Schleiermacher) or καὶ ἐμποιοῖεν (Ast), or ἀποβλέποντες instead of ἀπο-βλέπειν (Stallbaum), or something else to the same purpose. Hermann and J. and C. ignore the difficulty altogether. But even with such an emended text, the sense is faulty; for the legislator who starts with a tabula rasa need not trouble about τὸ ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις δίκαιον etc. His constitution is not a compromise between for example Athens and the World of Ideas, but something as near the latter as the limitations of earthly existence will allow—in other words such a polity as is described in the Republic. The Philosopher-king is not the man to paint an imperfect picture, though he knows that it will be but a picture after all.

Burnet prints ἔπειτα—πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα, καὶ πρὸς ἐκείν' αὖ τὸ ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἐμποιοῖεν, κτλ. This emendation appears to me to deprive ἐκατέρωσε of all meaning and point.

VI

VI 503 C. Εὐμαθεῖς καὶ μνήμονες καὶ ἀγχίνοι καὶ δξεῖς καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα τούτοις ἔπεται οἷσ' ὅτι οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν ἅμα φύεσθαι καὶ νεανικοὶ τε καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τὰς διανοίας οἷοι κοσμίως μετὰ ἡσυχίας καὶ βεβαιότητος ἐθέλειν ζῆν, ἀλλ' οἱ τοιοῦτοι ὑπὸ δξύτητος φέρονται ὅπῃ ἂν τύχωσιν, καὶ τὸ βέβαιον ἅπαν αὐτῶν ἐξοίχεται.

Such is the reading of A and Π: and none of the other mss have any variant worth discussing.

Of the qualities named, the following appear in the description of the philosophic character (485 C—487 A): εὐμάθεια, μνήμη, μεγαλοπρέπεια. It is also clear that οἷοι κοσμίως—ζῆν represents σωφροσύνη (485 E). ἀγχίνοι and δξεῖς certainly refer to intellectual qualities, as appears from their combination with εὐμαθεῖς καὶ μνήμονες, and with ὅσα ἄλλα τούτοις ἔπεται: cf. also Theaet. 144 A. νεανικοὶ 'spirited' has affinities with ἀνδρεῖοι (486 B—487 A), but Vermehren (Pl. Stud. pp. 98—103) is mistaken in holding that the two notions are identical.

According to Schneider, who retains the reading of the MSS, εὐμαθεῖς—μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τὰς διανοίας forms the predicate, the subject being οἶοι—ζῆν. This interpretation gives the right sense, but is otherwise forced and unnatural in the last degree. Moreover, if οἶοι is the subject, we can scarcely dissociate οἱ τοιοῦτοι from it, and even on Schneider's view οἱ τοιοῦτοι refers to εὐμαθεῖς—διανοίας.

Stallbaum prints a comma after φέεσθαι, and understands Plato to mean that a combination of the intellectual virtues enumerated in εὐμαθεῖς—δόξεῖς is itself rare, as well as the union of spirit and sobriety. Such a view, even if grammatically possible, is certainly awkward; and we have every reason to suppose that Plato did not consider the union of kindred intellectual qualities as in any way exceptional. It is the union of certain intellectual and moral virtues with certain other moral virtues which he considers rare: cf. Theaet. 144 A, B, the whole of which passage is important for the understanding of Plato here.

Others, such as Vermehren l.c. and J. and C., suppose that οἶοι—ζῆν is a consequence of ρεαυκοί—μεγαλοπρεπεῖς. This is however (as Shorey points out A. J. Ph. xvi p. 236) opposed to every statement made by Plato on the subject. The opposition between θηροειδές, ρεαυκόν, ἀνδρεῖον (by which is meant, in this particular contrast, the active side of Courage) and πρᾶον, κόσμιον, σόφρων etc., is regarded by him as the fundamental antithesis of human character: see for example II 375 C, III 399 C, 410 D, Pol. 306 Cff., 307 C, 309 E, 311 B, Tim. 18 A and Lysis 731 B. We have no right to hide this fact by explaining away ρεαυκόν. The word means 'full of youthful vigour,' 'spirited,' and nothing more. ρεαυκόν is of course a constituent factor in ἀνδρεῖον, but it is not identical with it, nor do any of the passages which Vermehren cites (Theaet. 168 C, Rep. 425 C, 491 E, 563 E, Lys. 204 E, Alc. 104 A) prove any such identity. Still less does the word mean "generous" (J. and C.) or "kräftig, mannhaft, und sittlich tüchtig" (Vermehren).

We may therefore be certain that ρεαυκοί—μεγαλοπρεπεῖς is opposed to οἶοι—ζῆν. The MS reading will admit of this only if we construe φέεσθαι with οἶοι, and suppose that καὶ ρεαυκοί—διανοίας is added parenthetically as a sort of afterthought. This was Schleiermacher's view, and it is also one of J. and C.'s alternatives. It is certainly right in sense, but the construction is intolerably ambiguous and awkward (cf. Susemihl, Gen. Entw. II p. 191 n.).

Various solutions are possible. I formerly (with Heindorf on Theaet. 144 A) transposed καί, reading φέεσθαι ρεαυκοί—καὶ οἶοι κτλ. Heindorf's remedy is however not quite satisfactory, because it lays all the stress upon the difficulty of finding the two opposite kinds of moral qualities united with intellectual sagacity, whereas—as appears from the next sentence—the relevant point is that intellectual vivacity and acumen are seldom found along with one of the two phases of moral character, viz. sobriety and stediastness. For this reason I now venture on the transposition printed in the text. It is worthy of note that in two places where the scribe of A omitted a passage of some length.

without the excuse of homoioteleuton, the number of letters is 41 and 39. (See cr. m. on 504 D, X 601 A and Introd. § 5). Here it is 40. καὶ γεανικοί—διανοίας may of course be an interpolation, but it is more likely to be an omitted line or lines wrongly replaced.

VII.

VI 507 B. καὶ αὐτὸ δὴ καλὸν καὶ αὐτὸ ἀγαθόν, καὶ οὕτω περὶ πάντων ἃ τότε ὡς πολλὰ ἐτίθεμεν, πάλιν αὖ καὶ ἰδέαν μίαν ἑκάστων, ὡς μιᾶς οὔσης, τιθέντες, ὃ ἔστιν ἑκάστων προσαγορεύομεν.

The difficulties of this sentence have hardly received sufficient attention at the hands of editors.

If κατ' ἰδέαν—the reading of all the mss—is genuine, what is the grammatical object of τιθέντες?

Two possibilities suggest themselves. One is to understand ἑν or the like, as parallel to αὐτὸ καλόν and αὐτὸ ἀγαθόν. This view is apparently adopted by Schneider, who translates “Und dann ein schönes selbst und ein gutes selbst und so bei allem, was wir dort als vieles setzten, wiederum eins nach der angenommenen Einheit des Begriffs eines jeden setzend nennen wir jedes das, was ist.” Stallbaum seems to have taken a similar view, although his note is not quite explicit. But it is so difficult to supply ἑν as an object to τιθέντες that we must, I think, reject this interpretation altogether. The second and more plausible alternative is—with Prantl, and the English editors and translators—to regard the object of τιθέντες as identical with that of ἐτίθεμεν. But κατ' ἰδέαν μίαν τιθέντες is far from clear. τιθέντες ought clearly to be understood in the same sense as ἐτίθεμεν, and the whole phrase should express the antithesis of ὡς πολλὰ ἐτίθεμεν. We are hardly justified in translating τιθέναι κατ' ἰδέαν μίαν as ‘reduce to a single form’ (D. and V.) or ‘bring under a single idea’ (Jowett), although the phrase might possibly here mean ‘regard as belonging to one idea.’ If κατ' ἰδέαν is sound, the least unsatisfactory course is perhaps to print a colon after ἐτίθεμεν, and explain thus: ‘reversing our procedure, we view them as falling under a single Idea of each,...and call each that-which-is’: i.e. for example δίκαιον, σῶφρον etc., each of which we took as πολλά, we now regard as belonging to or falling under one Idea of δίκαιον, one of σῶφρον etc. But neither this interpretation nor any other which I can devise (such as ‘regard according to’ or ‘in the light of’ one Idea of each) furnishes a thoroughly clear and simple sense, or a satisfactory antithesis to ὡς πολλὰ ἐτίθεμεν. The only suitable contrast is that between the one Idea itself and the πολλά. For this reason I have ventured to replace κατ' by καί. The occurrence of τὰς δ' αὖ ἰδέας in the next sentence is also, so far as it goes, in favour of the proposed correction.

If we read καί for κατά, we ought certainly (with Bosanquet) to take ὃ ἔστιν ἑκάστων as a secondary predicate after προσαγορεύομεν. The translation “we call each ‘that-which-is’” (Schneider and others) is grammatically possible and even necessary, I think, if κατά is retained; but it will scarcely be denied that ὃ ἔστιν ἑκάστων, taken by itself, is most easily and naturally understood as the generalised form of the idiom ὃ ἔστιν καλόν, ὃ ἔστιν ἀγαθόν etc. If so, ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστος is an additional reason for reading καί instead of κατά. We postulate 'one Idea of each' and call it 'what each is.' The balance between ἰδεάν μίαν ἐκάστων and ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστος could not be more precise.

In order to provide an object for τιθέντες, I formerly read ἕκαστος, instead of ἐκάστων, but the correction now suggested appears to me better and more likely to be right.

VIII.

VI 507 D, E. Τὴν δὲ τῆς ὀψεως καὶ τοῦ ὁρατοῦ οὐκ ἔννοεῖς ὅτι προσδεῖται; Ποῖς; Ἐνούσης πον ἐν ὀμμασιν ὀψεως καὶ ἐπιχειροῦντος τοῦ ἔχοντος χρῆσθαι αὐτῇ, παρούσης δὲ χροᾶς ἐν αὐτοῖς, ἐὰν μὴ παραγένηται γένος τρίτον ἰδίᾳ ἐπ' αὐτὸ τοῦτο πεφυκός, οἶσθα, ὅτι ἡ τε ὀψις οὐδὲν ὀψεται τὰ τε χρώματα ἔσται ἀόρατα.

The mss have no variant of any consequence.

Schneider boldly understands αὐτοῖς as τοῖς ὀμμασιν, referring to Tim. 67c ff., where it is virtually said that Colour, in an act of Sight, ἐμπίπτει εἰς τὴν ὀψιν. But a careful study of the analysis of Sight in the Timaeus will shew that Schneider's view is not supported by that dialogue. If ἐν αὐτοῖς = ἐν τοῖς ὀμμασιν, it is clear from the rest of the sentence that Plato thinks Colour may be present in the eyes even where there is no light. But in the Timaeus Colour does not ἐμπίπτειν εἰς τὴν ὀψιν when light is absent: see 45c with Archer-Hind ad loc. The fact is that both in the Timaeus and in the Republic Colour is regarded as inherent in things and not in the eyes: see Tim. 67c χροᾶς ἐκαλέσαμεν, φλόγα τῶν σωμάτων ἐκάστων ἀπορρέουσιν and Rep. 508c οὐκ ἂν τὰς χροᾶς τὸ ἡμερῶν φῶς ἐπέχρη.

By Schneizer and the Oxford editors, αὐτοῖς is interpreted as τοῖς ὁρατοῖς "from τοῦ ὁρατοῦ supra." Plato certainly allows himself great latitude in matters of this kind, but not, I think, where the result would be that he must inevitably be misunderstood; and even an intelligent reader might here be forgiven if he referred αὐτοῖς to τοῖς ὀμμασιν.

Various corrections have been proposed. ἐν αὐτοῖς ὁρατοῖς > is Richards' conjecture; but Plato is careful throughout this whole discussion to use ὁρατόν only in the singular, as a general term for the visible: cf. 508c, 509b (bis). For 'things seen' he uses ὁρώμενα 507c, 508a, 508c, 510b. On this account ἐν αὐτοῖς ὁρωμένοις > or (better) ἐν αὐτοῖς τοῖς ὁρωμένοις > appears to me preferable, if the passage is to be emended on these lines.

In CZ. Rev. XIII p. 99 I ventured to submit another emendation. It will be observed that in the latter part of the sentence Plato treats the colours themselves as the objects of vision (τὰ τε χρώματα ἔσται ἀόρατα), without alluding to the visible objects in which the colours inhere. Cf. also Tim. 67c ff., and Arist. de An. II 7. 418^a 26 ff. Hence I proposed to read παρούσης δὲ χροᾶς, ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐὰν μὴ παραγένηται κτλ., i.e. 'unless they' (viz. ἡ ὀψις and χροᾶ s. τὰ χρώματα) 'are reinforced by one genus—making three in all—specially adapted by Nature for this very purpose, you are aware that Sight will see nothing and the colours will be invisible.’ The order of words recalls ὁ ἐὰν μὴ παραγένηται τρίτον above, and the position of ἐν may perhaps be defended as calling special attention to this one thing without which an act of sight is altogether impossible, and as inviting Glauco’s question τίος δὴ—τούτου; Morgenstern retained ἐν αὐτοῖς and connected it with the following clause, but ἐν does not go well with παραγένηται, and the emphasis on ἐν αὐτοῖς is excessive.

Other suggestions are ἐφ’ ἣ ἔστι for ἐν αὐτοῖς (Biehl Die Id. d. Guten p. 52), [ἐν] αὐτοῖς (Stallbaum) and ἐπ’ αὐτοῖς (Ast).

If we might venture to read παρούσης δὲ χροῶς, ἐὰν (or ἢν) αὐτοῖς μὴ παραγένηται κτλ., all difficulty would disappear. Meantime, as none of the remedies hitherto suggested is convincing, I have thought it safest to retain the ms reading, understanding αὐτοῖς perforce as τοῖς ὁρωμένοις. The interesting analysis of Sight in Theaet. 156D ff. is unfortunately of no use for emending the present passage.

IX.

VI 508 D, E. τοῦτο τοῖνυν τὸ τὴν ἀλήθειαν παρέχον τοῖς γιγνώσκο- μένοις καὶ τῷ γινώσκοντι τὴν δύναμιν ἀποδιδόν τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέαν φάθι εἶναι, αἰτίαν δὲ ἐπιστήμης οὔσαν καὶ ἀληθείας ὡς γιγνώσκομένης μὲν διανοοῦ, οὕτω δὲ καλῶν ἀμφοτέρων οὖτων, γνώσεως τε καὶ ἀληθείας, ἄλλο καὶ κάλλιον ἔτι τούτων ἡγούμενος αὐτὸ ὁρθῶς ἡγήσει.

So A reads. The only important variant is διὰ τοῦ (Ξτ’ and several other MSS) for διανοοῦ.

Jowett and Campbell, following Schneider and Hermann, retain the text of A, and translate as follows: “This then, which imparts truth to the things that are known and gives to the knower the power of knowing, is what I would have you call the idea of good: and this you will deem to be the cause of knowledge and of truth so far as the latter is known: but fair as are both these, knowledge and truth, you will be right in thinking that it is something fairer than these.” μὲν is explained as belonging strictly to αἰτίαν and “opposed to the following δέ: the idea of good is indeed (μὲν) the cause of knowledge and truth, but (δέ) it is other and fairer than they.” Schneider’s explanation and translation differs hardly at all from that of the Oxford editors.

The above rendering is open to grave objections both on the score of grammar and of sense. διανοεῖσθαι can hardly be used with a participle (οὔσαν) without ὡς: and ὡς γιγνώσκομένης surely cannot mean ‘so far as known.’ It is also, to say the least, extremely difficult to explain the position of μὲν. διὰ τὸν ἐγγεγονότα μὲν ἔρωτα, which Schneider (Addit. p. 51) cites from X 607E, is a very remote parallel. Nor is there any point, so far as I can discover, in saying that the Idea of the Good is the cause of truth so far as truth is known. The Idea of the Good is the cause of all Truth, known and unknown. And there is no echo of any such limitation in the analogous description of Light.

For these and other reasons, Schneider's explanation is, in my opinion, untenable. Nor can I devise any other reasonable solution without altering the text. Of emendations there is, as usual, no lack.

The smallest change is to read διὰ νοῦ, with Ξ etc. and the editors down to Bekker. But the construction remains extraordinarily obscure. Few will agree with Schmelzer in construing ἡγοούμενος δὲ (τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέαν) αἰτίαν ἐπιστήμης—νοῦ, ἡγοούμενος δὲ οὕτω καλῶν κτλ. Other proposals are (1) to omit μὲν (Stephanus, who also suggests that a clause may be lost), (2) δὲ αὐτοῦ (viz. τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ) for διανοοῦ (Nägelsbach), (3) to omit αἰτίαν—διανοοῦ or ὥς—διανοοῦ, in the latter case reading γ' for δ' after αἰτίαν (Ast), (4) to transpose and read φύθι εἶναι, ὥς γνωστικὴ μὲν διὰ νοῦ, αἰτίαν δ' ἐπιστήμης οἶσαν καὶ ἀληθείας (van Heusde), (5) to cancel ὥς—ἡγήσει as a gloss (Stallbaum), (6) to read δὲ for δέ after αἰτίαν and διὰ νοῦ for διανοοῦ (Richter Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 143). Of these suggestions (1) is inadequate; (2) and (6) only make matters worse; (3) and (5) fail to provide a parallel to ὁράται ὑπ' αὐτῆς ταύτης (sc. τῆς ὁψέως) in 508 B, and are also in themselves too drastic. Van Heusde's solution, which (in common with Baiter) I formerly adopted, gives a good sense, if ὥς be taken principally with the δέ clause ('as being the cause of Knowledge and Truth, although it is itself known by means of Reason'). But it is impossible to assign any probable motive for so serious a dislocation of the text of the MSS. The usual devices of homoioteleuton and the accidental omission of a line in the archetype fail us here. See Introd. § 5.

The explanation given in the notes is, I think, satisfactory in point of sense, and assumes no corruption except that of γνωστικὴν μὲν for γνωστικῆς—a natural error after ἀληθείας. I now regard it as much more probable than Van Heusde's solution (see his Init. Phil. Pl. ed. 1842 p. 388 n.).

X.

VI 511 A. εἰκόσι δὲ χρομένην αὐτοῖς τοῖς ὑπὸ τῶν κάτω ἀπεικασθεῖσιν καὶ ἐκείνους πρὸς ἐκεῖνα ὥς ἐναργέσι δεδοξασμένοις τε καὶ τετυμημένοις.

The difficulties of this sentence are familiar to all students of Plato. After much consideration, I believe the text to be sound, and the meaning to be as explained in the notes.

In J. Ph. x p. 76 Bywater objects to taking ἀπεικασθεῖσιν as 'copied' or 'imitated,' urging that it must refer to the actual copies themselves. In order to obtain this meaning, he would read ὑποκάτω for ὑπὸ τῶν κάτω, and explain ὑποκάτω ἀπεικασθεῖσιν as the 'sensible copies, and not the (intelligible) originals,' i.e. as CD and not CE. But (1) on this view αὐτοῖς loses its force, and (2) αὐτὰ μὲν ταῦτα ἃ πλάττουσιν τε καὶ γράφουσιν, ὧν καὶ σκιαὶ καὶ ἐν ὕδασι εἰκόνες εἰσίν, τοῦτοις μὲν ὥς εἰκόσιν αὐτῶν χρώμενοι in 510 E and τοῖς τότε μιμηθεῖσιν in 510 B (where see note) prove that ἀπεικασθεῖσιν means not 'copies' but 'copied.'

It is true that this sense of ἀπικασθέντα is extremely rare, but Tim. 48 c furnishes a close parallel. and εἰκασθέντος in Phaedr. 250 B (quoted by J. and C.) certainly means 'copied.' In this passage ὑπὸ τῶν κάτω, and ἀπ- in ἀπικασθεῖσι (combined with the play on εἰκόσι), as well as the precise parallel in 510 E, would make it impossible for a Greek to mistake Plato's meaning. Stallbaum's explanation ("formae rerum adspectabilium intelligibiles, sive abstractae ab ipsis rebus et una mentis cogitatione conceptae, quae a rebus inferioribus, i.e. concretis, tanquam similitudine expressae sunt") is in my judgment wholly wrong: see below. Liebhold's conjecture ἀπό for ὑπό would make the higher segment a copy of the lower! His further proposal, to read αὐταῖς (viz. ταῖς ὑποθέσεσιν) ὁμοίως τοῖς κτλ. plunges everything into hopeless confusion. The explanation which I have given of this part of the sentence agrees with that of Schneider and the Oxford editors.

καὶ ἐκείνους is also undeniably difficult; but κακέῃ (proposed by Bywater l.c.) is hardly less so; and we are certainly not justified in transposing αὐτοῖς and ἐκείνους, as Richards proposes to do. Should we perhaps punctuate ἀπικασθεῖσι καὶ ἐκείνους, πρὸς ἐκείνα κτλ., and understand καὶ ἐκείνους as only 'et illis,' 'illis quoque' as in Sympr. 212 A καὶ ἔπερ τῷ ἄλλῳ ἀνθρώπῳ, ἀθανάτῳ καὶ ἐκείνῳ? The objects in CD are 'also' copied by those in AD, exactly as the νοητόν is by CD (510 A).

If δεδοξασμένοις is not 'valued,' it can only mean 'opined,' and we must translate either (1) 'being opined and honoured as palpable,' or else (2) 'being opined as palpable' ("für wirklich gehalten" Schneider), 'and honoured accordingly.' If we adopt the second alternative, ὡς ἐναργέσι belongs only to δεδοξασμένοις: but τε καί strongly suggests that ὡς ἐναργέσι was meant to be taken also with the second participle. The first alternative remedies this defect, but is hardly less unsatisfactory than the second. For ὡς ἐναργέσι must then mean one thing with δεδοξασμένοις, and another with τετιμημένοις—'opined as palpable,' i.e. 'opined to be palpable' and 'honoured as palpable,' i.e. 'honoured because they are palpable.' Or is δεδοξασμένοις used absolutely, in the sense of 'the objects of opinion'? If so, this particular difficulty disappears, and Plato means that the contents of CD are the 'objects of opinion' (and not of some inferior ἕξις) because they are ἐναργῆ, and honoured for the same reason. The sentence would then prepare us for the distinction to be presently drawn between δόξα and εἰκασία (511 E). This interpretation is perhaps the least vulnerable, if δεδοξασμένοις can mean no more than 'opined,' but it is too subtle and obscure.

A wholly different explanation is given by Stallbaum, and adopted by D. and V. Stallbaum understands ἐκείνα as the objects contained in CE, compared with which, those in DC are 'vulgarly esteemed distinct and valued accordingly.' On this view ὡς would hint that the objects in DC are not in reality, compared with those in CE, ἐναργῆ: and the same insinuation would be still further emphasized by δεδοξασμένοις ('opined' as opposed to 'known'). This interpretation is possible so far as the Greek is concerned, except that ἐκείνα can hardly mean anything but AD. Nevertheless, even if we allow that ἐκείνα could refer to CE, an allusion to the popular prejudice in favour of materialism would be out of place in a scientific classification of τὰ ὄντα in their order of 'clearness.' And Plato has already shewn a tendency to introduce the shadow segment at each stage "in order to make it quite clear at each step how the whole classification coheres" (Bosanquet): hence τοῖς τότε μιμηθεῖσιν (510 B) and ὧν καὶ σκιαὶ καὶ ἐν ὑδασιν εἰκόνες εἰσὶν (510 E). Finally, the whole description in τοῦτο—ἀπεικασθεῖσιν passes first from CE to DC, and then from DC to AD (ὑπὸ τῶν κάτω), and a return to CE in the last clause of the sentence, such as Stallbaum supposes, would be artistically displeasing.

XI.

VI 511 C, D. ὅτι μέντοι βούλει διορίζειν σαφέστερον εἶναι τὸ ὑπὸ τῆς τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι ἐπιστήμης τοῦ ὅτιος τε καὶ νοητοῦ θεωρούμενον ἢ τὸ ἐπὶ τῶν τεχνῶν καλουμένον, αἷς αἱ ὑποθέσεις ἀρχαὶ καὶ διανοίαι μὲν ἀναγκάζονται ἀλλὰ μὴ αἰσθίσεις αὐτὰ θεῖσθαι οἱ θεωμένοι, διὰ δὲ τὸ μὴ ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνελθόντες σκοπεῖν ἀλλ' ἐξ ὑποθέσεων, νοῦν οὐκ ἴσχειν περὶ αὐτὰ δοκοῦσί σοι, καίτοι νοητῶν ὄντων μετ' ἀρχῆς.

The ordinary view of the last clause of this sentence appears to be "obwohl es in Verbindung mit dem Anfange denkbares ist" (Schneider: cf. Jowett's "although when a first principle is added to them they are cognizable by the higher reason"). Some of the difficulties which this translation involves are pointed out by Krohn (Pl. St. p. 141). The most serious of them is that it makes Plato imply that the objects of mathematical study as pursued by mathematicians are not νοητά, whereas he has repeatedly said that they are (see note ad loc.). It may be urged on the other hand that we ought not to take the words too strictly, and that νοῦν οὐκ ἴσχειν περὶ αὐτὰ δοκοῦσί σοι prepares us for taking νοητῶν in a narrower sense than it has hitherto had. But νοῦν οὐκ ἴσχειν is a different thing from the assertion that the objects are not νοητά, for νοῦς is expressly limited by Plato to the higher intellectual method throughout the whole of this passage, διάνοια being used for the lower, as the next sentence carefully explains. In a passage expressly occupied with defining terms, Plato is not, I think, likely to have contradicted himself within a single sentence, by first saying that μαθηματικά (as ordinarily studied) are νοητά and afterwards implying that they are not. μετ' ἀρχῆς is also far from clear on the ordinary view, for (1) the use of the preposition is obscure, unless something like λαμβανομένου is understood, and (2) it is not easy to interpret ἀρχῆς of the ἀρχὴ κατ' ἐξοχὴν, i.e. the Good, just after we have been told that μαθηματικά possess ἀρχαί of their own (αἷς αἱ ὑποθέσεις ἀρχαί). It may be said that ἀρχὴν in ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνελθόντες is the Good. So no doubt it is, from Plato's point of view; but we should translate this also 'a beginning,' for the contrast is between the dialectician who ascends (ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνελθόντες) to an ἀρχή and the mathematician who does not, but nevertheless has one (without ascending) in his ὑπόθεσις.

On these grounds I am unable to accept what seems to be the current interpretation. Campbell appears to take νοητὰ μετ' ἀρχῆς as a single phrase denoting a special sort of νοητά ('while not absolute νοητά, they are νοητὰ μετ' ἀρχῆς' Vol. II p. 16). This is certainly better than Jowett's view, but linguistically it is a little harsh, and in point of fact the higher νοητά (except of course the Good itself) are also νοητὰ μετ' ἀρχῆς, for μετ' ἀρχῆς cannot be construed 'with a hypothetical ἀρχή.' The interpretation which is given in the notes agrees with that of Prantl, and (if I understand him rightly) Krohn. It is, in my opinion, the only natural meaning of the Greek, and what Plato, if Plato wrote the words, intended to say.

The explanation of this clause is a matter of some importance because, if Schneider's translation is right, it would appear that μαθηματικά can, under certain circumstances, be apprehended by the higher noetic process, and on this an argument might conceivably be founded for identifying them with Ideas. In App. I to Book VII I have tried to shew that Plato himself distinguishes no less clearly between the contents of the two higher segments of the line than Aristotle assures us that he did. In reality however the present sentence does not affect the question either way.

The use of καίτοι is so strange that some may be inclined to suspect interpolation. It is noticeable that καίτοι was often thus used by Plotinus (e.g. x 9. 490 init.). The clause could easily be spared, and may be spurious; but the evidence is not sufficient to justify its exclusion from the text.

Z.

I. Μετὰ ταῦτα δὴ, εἶπον. ἀπέεικασον τοιοῦτόν πάθει τὴν 514
 ἡμετέραν φύσιν παιδείας τε περί καὶ ἀπαιδευσίας. ἰδὲ γάρ

514 A—517 A The following comparison represents our nature in respect of education and the absence thereof. Let us imagine a number of prisoners confined in a subterranean cave, and unable to see anything except shadows of images and other such objects, cast by the light of a fire. Such men will believe that shadows of manufactured things are the only truth. If they are released, and led up step by step towards the light, they will turn and flee back into the cave; but if we compel them to emerge, they will gradually grow accustomed to the brightness, and be able to gaze upon the Sun and understand his sovereignty in the domain of visible things. Pity for their former friends will then begin to mingle with joy at their own escape. Should they redescend into their former place, the darkness will at first affect their vision, and expose them to the laughter of the others, who will, it may be, lay hands upon their deliverer and slay him.

514 A ff. The simile of the Cave presents us with a picture of the life of the uneducated man (τὴν ἡμετέραν φύσιν παιδείας τε περί καὶ ἀπαιδευσίας 514 A: cf. also 515 A). From this point of view it should be compared with Theaet. 172 C—177 C, and (in spite of the different situation) with Phaed. 109 A—E, where the equation is:—Depths of Ocean : Hollows of Earth = Hollows of Earth : The true Earth. Plato bids us connect the Cave with the Line (517 A), and does so himself (l.c., and 532 C). We have seen that the lower segment of the line (AC) is spoken of sometimes as ὁρατόν, sometimes as δοξαστόν (VI 510 B n.).

Plato does not even now distinguish between the two terms; and since the ἀπαιδευτος is concerned with τὸ δοξαστόν in general rather than with τὸ ὁρατόν exclusively, we shall best apprehend Plato's meaning if we interpret the simile by the following proportion:—Cave : ὁρατόν s. δοξαστόν = δοξαστόν s. ὁρατόν : νοητόν. See on 517 A and App. I.

2 ἰδὲ γάρ κτλ. Empedocles spoke of the terrestrial region as a cave (ἡλύθομεν τὸδ' ὑπ' ἄντρον ὑπόστεγον 31 ed. Karsten), and similar expressions occur in the Orphic verses e.g. ταῦτα πατήρ πολῆσε κατὰ σπέος ἡρσοειδές (ap. Procl. in Tim. 95 D): see Rohde Psyche II p. 178 n. and Dieterich Nekyia p. 159 n. There is however nothing to shew that Plato borrowed the underlying idea, much less the details, of his simile from any previous writer: for the metaphorical application of ἄνω, ὑπόθεν and kindred words in connexion with true παιδεία is a favourite usage of Plato's (cf. Theaet. 175 B, Soph. 216 C, Phaed. 109 A ff.), and the simile might easily have been elaborated from such a metaphor. For a strikingly eloquent imitation see Cic. de nat. deor. II 95 (translated from Aristotle: see Frag. 14. 1476^a 34 ff.). With the life of the cave-dwellers Bosanquet aptly compares the account of uncivilized humanity in Aesch. Prom. 447—453. A kindred though not identical figure is employed in Fitzgerald's Omar Khayyám LXVIII: "We are no other than a moving row Of magic Shadow-shapes that come and go Round with the Sun-illuminated Lantern held In Midnight by the Master of the Show."

ἀνθρώπους οἷον ἐν καταγείῳ οἰκῇσιν σπηλαιώδει ἀναπεπταμένην πρὸς τὸ φῶς τὴν εἴσοδον ἐχούσῃ, μακράν, παρ' ἧπαν τὸ σπήλαιον, ἐν ταύτῃ ἐκ παίδων ὄντας ἐν δεσμοῖς καὶ τὰ σκέλη καὶ τοὺς αὐχένας, 5 ὥστε μένειν τε αὐτοῦ εἰς τε¹ τὸ πρόσθεν μόνον ὄραν, κύκλῳ δὲ τὰς κεφαλὰς ὑπὸ τοῦ δεσμοῦ ἀδυνάτους περιάγειν, φῶς δὲ αὐτοῖς πυρὸς ἄνωθεν καὶ πόρρωθεν καόμενον ὅπισθεν αὐτῶν, μεταξὺ δὲ τοῦ πυρὸς καὶ τῶν δεσμῶν ἐπάνω ὁδόν, παρ' ἣν ἰδὲ τέλειον παρῳκοδομημένον, ὥσπερ τοῖς θαυματοποιοῖς πρὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων πρόκειται 10

6. αὐτοῦ Hirschig: αὐτοὺς codd.

τὸ A²Ξq: om. A¹.

3 ἀναπεπταμένην κτλ. Herwerden suspects corruption, on the ground that the cave is dark, except for the light of the fire. But unless the entrance to the cave is open to the light of day, how are the prisoners ever to emerge, as they ultimately do (515 E)? The εἴσοδος is long (μακρά) and steep (515 E), so that the daylight cannot reach the cave in any case. Prantl is right, I think, in understanding μακράν of length and not width, although Schneider and the English translators apparently hold the other view. See next note.

4 παρ' ἅπαν τὸ σπήλαιον should (I believe) be taken separately from μακράν. The words define the width of the entrance, which is 'along the whole of,' i.e. 'as wide as,' the cave. The reason will appear later: see on ὅρα τοῖνυν 514 B. The translation "extending along the entire length of the cavern" (D. and V.) seems to render μακράν altogether otiose. See Fig. ii on p. 65.

6 μένειν τε αὐτοῦ. See cr. n. Hirschig's emendation, which Cobet approves and Hermann and others adopt, I now think right. μένειν is not, I believe, used absolutely in the sense of μένειν αὐτοῦ, which is the meaning required here. It might be possible to understand μένειν as equivalent to μένειν ἀκινήτους, in view of Crat. 426 E and Phaedr. 261 D, but 'remain motionless' is not quite suitable in point of sense. Still less does the possible rendering 'remain by themselves' fit the situation. On the other hand μένειν τε αὐτοῦ 'remain where they are,' 'remain in one place' (cf. I 327 C, II 371 C), corresponds exactly to ἐν δεσμοῖς τὰ σκέλη, just as εἰς τε τὸ πρόσθεν μόνον ὄραν echoes ἐν δεσμοῖς τοὺς αὐχένας. The τε—τε after καί—καί suggests that Plato intended this correspondence. There is nothing to be said for Herwer-den's proposal to insert ἀκινήτους.

514 B 7 ὑπὸ τοῦ δεσμοῦ κτλ. "Puerile interpretamentum" says Herwerden, quite superfluously. Hirschig's ἀδυνατοῦντας for ἀδυνάτους is no improvement. The word, like ὄντας, depends of course on ἰδέ. For καόμενον, Hirschig, with Cobet's approval, conjectures καομένου, and so Baiter also reads: but καομένου leaves αὐτοῖς out in the cold. "Vide ne φῶς πυρὸς ita in unam notionem coalescant, ut alterius attributum simul etiam alteri conveniat" Hermann. This explanation is correct: cf. 517 B.

9 ἐπάνω ὁδόν. ἐπάνωδον (Badham), which means 'ascensum,' is out of place here. ἐπάνω means only that the road is at a higher elevation than the prisoners (so also Schneider): it should not be taken with ὁδόν in the sense of a 'raised way' (Jowett). There is no reason why the ὁδός should be raised above the level of the ground, and it is unnecessarily harsh to construe the adverb with the noun. The fact that verbal nouns occasionally take an adverb in Plato (see on IV 434 C) does not justify Jowett's construction in this passage.

10 ὥσπερ τοῖς θαυματοποιοῖς κτλ. As in a Punch and Judy show. Cf. [Arist.] de Mundo 6. 398^b 16 ff. οἱ νευροσπάσται μίαν μῆρινθον ἐπισπασάμενοι ποιοῦσι καὶ αὐχένα κινεῖσθαι καὶ χεῖρα τοῦ ζῶντος καὶ ὤμον καὶ ὀφθαλμὸν κτλ. (Blümner, Privatallerth. p. 503 n. 5, where other references are given). I agree with the Oxford editors in holding that τῶν ἀνθρώπων denotes the performers, and not, as Schneider and others translate, the spectators. οἱ ἄνθρωποι could not, without further specification, stand for the spectators, and no further specification is given. But Jowett and Campbell are, I think, in error when they distinguish between the θαυματοποιοί and the ἄν-τὰ παραφράγματα, ὑπὲρ ὧν τὰ θαύματα δείκνυσιν. Ὅρῳ, ἔφη.

 "Ορα τοίνυν παρὰ τοῦτο τὸ τειχίον φέροντας ἀνθρώπους σκευή τε παντοδαπὰ ὑπερέχοντα τοῦ τειχίου καὶ ἀνδριάντας | καὶ ἄλλα ζῶα 515 λίθινά τε καὶ ξύλινα καὶ παντοῖα εἰργασμένα, οἷον εἰκός, τοὺς μὲν φθηγόμενους, τοὺς δὲ σιγῶντας τῶν παραφερόντων. Ἀτοπον, ἔφη, λέγεις εἰκόνα καὶ δεσμώτας ἀτόπους. Ὅμοιους ἡμῖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· 5 τοὺς γὰρ τοιούτους πρῶτον μὲν ἑαυτῶν τε καὶ ἀλλήλων οἶει ἂν τι ἑωρακεῖναι ἄλλο πλὴν τὰς σκιὰς τὰς ὑπὸ τοῦ πυρὸς εἰς τὸ καταντικρὺν αὐτῶν τοῦ σπηλαίου προσπιπτούσας; Πῶς γάρ, ἔφη, εἰ ἀκινήτους γε τὰς κεφαλὰς ἔχειν ἡναγκασμένοι¹ εἶεν διὰ βίου; Τί B δέ; τῶν παραφερομένων οὐ ταῦτόν τοῦτο; Τί μὴν; Εἰ οὖν 10 διαλέγεσθαι οἰοί τ' εἶεν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, οὐ ταῦτα ἡγεῖ ἂν τὰ

10. ταῦτα Ξg: ταῦτα A.

θρωποι, and suppose that the θαυματοποιός is "not the actual exhibitor or puller of the strings, but the master of the show." The ἄνθρωποι and the θαυμα-τοποιοί are the same, and Plato might, if he had been so minded, have written ὥσπερ τοῖς θαυματοποιοῖς πρὸ ἑαυτῶν κτλ.
 The substitution of τῶν ἀνθρώπων for ἑαυτῶν puts the matter in a more objective way, and has also a contemptuous effect.

12 ὅρα τοίνυν κτλ. τοίνυν is 'also'
 (I 339 D n.). The low wall which crosses the εἰσοδος at a point between the prisoners and the fire intercepts the shadows of the παραφέροντες: but the σκευή which they carry, presumably on their heads, overtop the wall, and are reflected on the wall of the cave in front of the prisoners.
 See Fig. ii on p. 65. Plato adopts various devices in order to suggest a due proportion between the objects inside and outside the cave in point of reality. Thus
 (1) the typical examples ἀνδριάντες etc.
 are themselves images of the natural objects of the superior ὁρατόν: (2) the originals of the Cave are all (except the prisoners themselves 515 A) σκευαστά, whereas those of the superior ὁρατόν are —primarily speaking—φυτευτά (for the significance of this see 532 C n.): (3) the contents of the Cave, both originals and shadows, may be regarded as less luminous and true than the ὁρατά outside, because they derive their light and truth, not from the Sun, but from an artificial Fire (see also on 517 C). The interpretation of the simile is to be sought in the δοξαστόν generally as well as in the ὁρατόν in particular (see on 517 A), but we need not suppose that every detail is significant. Comparisons have been made between the παραφέροντες and (in the ὁρατόν) δαίμονες (Campbell II p. 16, comparing Tim. 43), or (in the δοξαστόν) Sophists etc. (Shorey, Idea of Good etc.

 p. 238). The latter analogy is the more fruitful, but neither of them is altogether free from difficulty, and Plato may have intended the παραφέροντες only as part of the machinery of his similitude. If the Cave is to represent the world of τὰ πολλά, it must have a semblance of life and motion; and without the παραφέροντες the shadows would be motionless and dead.

515 A 2 οἷον εἰκός should be taken with what follows: cf. IV 419 A n.

3 φθηγόμενους merely prepares the way for 515 B εἰ καὶ ἡχώ κτλ., and beyond this, it has, I think, no meaning. It certainly does not "prepare for the science of harmonics" (as J. and C. hold): see 532 B n. and App. I.

τῶν παραφερόντων (bracketed by Baiter) is natural enough, παρὰ τοῦτο τὸ τειχίον φέροντας being too distant to cause difficulty.

515 B 8 τί δέ; τῶν παραφερομέ-νων κτλ. After τοῦτο supply οἶει ἂν ἑωρακεῖναι αὐτούς. I have placed a mark of interrogation after τί δέ, in order that τῶν παραφερομένων may have its proper emphasis: cf. V 470 A n.

10 οὐ ταῦτα κτλ.: 'do you not suppose they would believe that they were παριόντα αὐτοὺς νομίζειν ὀνομάζειν, ἥπερ ὀρῶεν; Ἀνάγκη. Τί δ'; εἰ καὶ ἡχῶ τὸ δεσμωτήριον ἐκ τοῦ καταντικρὺ ἔχοι, ὅποτε τις τῶν παριόντων φθέγγαιτο, οἶε ἂν ἄλλο τι αὐτοὺς ἡγεῖσθαι τὸ φθεγγόμενον ἢ τὴν παριούσαν σκιάν; Μὰ Δί' οὐκ ἔγωγ', ἔφη.

C Παντάπασι δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οἱ τοιοῦτοι οὐκ ἂν ἄλλο τι νομίζοιεν τὸ 15 ἀληθὲς ἢ τὰς τῶν σκευαστῶν σκιάς. Πολλὴ ἀνάγκη, ἔφη. Σκόπει δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. αὐτῶν λύσιν τε καὶ ἴασιν τῶν δεσμῶν καὶ τῆς ἀφροσύνης, ὅα τις ἂν εἴη, εἰ φύσει τοιάδε ξυμβαίνει αὐτοῖς· ὅποτε τις λυθείη καὶ ἀναγκάζοιτο ἐξαίφνης ἀνίστασθαι τε καὶ περιάγειν τὸν

11. παριόντα Flor. T: παρόντα AΞ q. τοιάδε q praebet εἴη φύσει τοιάδε, εἰ.

18. εἰ A²Ξ: om. A¹. Pro εἴη, εἰ φύσει naming these particular passing objects which they saw?' They have never seen anything of the real παριόντα (or παραφερόμενα): therefore (οὖν) they suppose themselves to be naming, i.e. using the name of, not (as is in point of fact the case) the real παριόντα, but only these παριόντα which they see. For example, they call the shadow of a table 'a table,' and in so doing they are, without knowing it, naming, not, as they suppose, the shadow, but the substance. J. and C. remark that "παριόντα is rather confusing as it might signify either the shadows" (cf. 516 C) "or the realities" (cf. 515 D). True: but τὰυτα τὰ παριόντα, ἥπερ ὀρῶεν can signify only the shadows. The corruption παρόντα for παριόντα (see cr. n.) is easy, and occurs in some MSS at 516 C (where παριόντα again = παριούσαι σκιάι). Plato means (to interpret the allegory) that what the ἀπαιδευτος calls a substance is only a shadow. For other views of this sentence see App. IV.

12 εἰ καὶ ἡχῶ κτλ. The voices heard by the ἀπαιδευτος are as shadowy as the forms he sees: βλέποντες ἔβλεπον μάτην, ἁλύνοντες οὐκ ἤκουον, ἀλλ' ὀνειράτων ἁλγυκιοι μορφαῖσι τὸν μακρὸν βίον ἱέφυρον ἐκτὴ πᾶντα (Aesch. P. V. 447—450).

515 C 15 νομίζοιεν κτλ. νόμος, not φύσις, is the watchword of ἀπαιδευσία.

16 σκευαστῶν is said by J. and C. to be "diminutive images of ordinary artificial objects," but the word does not convey this meaning. For the purposes of this simile σκευαστά are reckoned as less real than φυτεῖα: see on ὅρα τοῖνυν κτλ.

514 B and φαντάσματα θεῖα 532 C. Plato takes no account of the fact that the prisoners also see shadows of themselves (515 A).

17 λύσιν κτλ. According to 532 B (where see note), λύσιν—τῶν ἄλλων εἰδῶλα (516 A) symbolizes Plato's προπαιδεία or inferior νοητόν.

18 εἰ φύσει τοιάδε κτλ. φύσει has been variously interpreted as follows. (1) 'φύσει est revera' (Ast, Stallbaum): (2) 'si res et natura ferret,' 'in the course of nature' (Schneider, J. and C., D. and V.): (3) 'φύσει, no one knows how' (Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 260). None of these explanations is either linguistically easy or altogether suitable in point of meaning. It should be remembered that the condition of the prisoners, shut out as they are from light and truth amid the darkness of the Cave, is 'unnatural' (παρὰ φύσιν) in the Platonic sense of the word (see IV 443 B n.). Their release is therefore a return to their true nature, and may for this reason be described as 'natural.' This, I think, is what Plato means to suggest by φύσει. It is true, as we are presently told (515 E βίᾳ), that force has to be employed in order to drag the prisoners on high; but their deliverance is none the less 'natural' in Plato's way of thinking. Schleiermacher and Herwerden wish to read ὅα τις ἂν εἴη φύσει, εἰ τοιάδε κτλ. The fact that εἰ was omitted by A¹, and is absent from five other MSS, may appear to favour this conjecture. We might suppose that εἰ fell out by ὁμοιοτέλετον after φύσει, disappeared altogether from several MSS, and was wrongly replaced in A. (The evidence of II is unfortunately wanting here.) But on this view it is difficult to see what φύσει adds to ὅα τις ἂν εἴη, and for this and other reasons I prefer the solution which I have given.

20 αὐχένα καὶ βαδίζειν καὶ πρὸς τὸ φῶς ἀναβλέπειν, πάντα δὲ ταῦτα ποιῶν ἀλγοὶ τε καὶ διὰ τὰς μαρμαρυγὰς ἀδυνατοὶ καθορᾶν ἐκείνα, ὧν¹ τότε τὰς σκιας ἑώρα, τί ἂν οἶε αὐτὸν εἰπεῖν, εἴ τις αὐτῷ λέγοι, D ὅτι τότε μὲν ἑώρα φλναρίας, νῦν δὲ μᾶλλον τι ἐγγυτέρω τοῦ ὄντος καὶ πρὸς μᾶλλον ὄντα τετραμμένος ὀρθότερον βλέποι, καὶ δὴ καὶ 25 ἑκαστον τῶν παριόντων δεικνὺς αὐτῷ ἀναγκάζει ἐρωτῶν ἀποκρί-νεσθαι ὃ τι ἔστιν; οὐκ οἶε αὐτὸν ἀπορεῖν τε ἂν καὶ ἡγείσθαι τὰ τότε ὁρώμενα ἀληθέστερα ἢ τὰ νῦν δεικνύμενα; Πολύ γ', ἔφη.

II. Οὐκοῦν κὰν εἰ πρὸς αὐτὸ τὸ φῶς ἀναγκάζει¹ αὐτὸν βλέ- E πειν, ἀλγεῖν τε ἂν τὰ ὄμματα καὶ φεύγειν ἀποστρέφόμενον πρὸς 30 ἐκείνα, ἃ δύναται καθορᾶν, καὶ νομίζειν ταῦτα τῷ ὄντι σαφέστερα τῶν δεικνυμένων; Οὕτως, ἔφη. Εἰ δέ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐντεῦθεν ἔλκοι τις αὐτὸν βία διὰ τραχείας τῆς ἀναβάσεως καὶ ἀνάντους καὶ μὴ ἀνείη πρὶν ἐξελκύσειεν εἰς τὸ τοῦ ἡλίου φῶς, ἄρα οὐχὶ ὀδυνᾶσθαι τε ἂν καὶ ἀγανακτεῖν ἐλκόμενον, καὶ ἐπειδὴ πρὸς τὸ φῶς | ἔλθοι, 516 αὐγῆς ἂν ἔχοντα τὰ ὄμματα μεστὰ ὀρᾶν οὐδ' ἂν ἐν δύνασθαι τῶν νῦν λεγομένων ἀληθῶν; Οὐ γὰρ ἂν, ἔφη, ἐξαίφνης γε. Συνηθείας δὴ, οἶμαι, δέοιτ' ἂν, εἰ μέλλοι τὰ ἄνω ὁψεσθαι, καὶ πρῶτον μὲν τὰς

23. τι A²Ξ: om. A¹ γ. ἑκαστων nisi fallor A¹.

24. καὶ δὴ καὶ Ξ γ: καὶ δὴ A.
 33. ἀνείη A¹: ἀνίη A² ΠΞ: ἀνίοι γ.

25. ἑκαστον A² Ξ γ:

20 τὸ φῶς is the light of the fire (514 B): contrast αὐτὸ τὸ φῶς 515 D.

ἀναβλέπειν. ἀνα- is appropriate, for the fire is ἀνωθεν (514 B). Education always points upward in Plato (514 A n.).

515 D 23 ἐγγυτέρω. It is needless to add <ῶν>, as I formerly did (with Richards, who compares I 330 E). The copula is easily supplied, especially with τετραμμένος following.

24 ὀρθότερον and not ὀρθότερα (as seems to be generally believed, even by J. and C.) is the reading of A. The adverb ('more truly sees') can alone be justified. For the meaning see VI 490 B n.

βλέποι. The indicative βλέπει (which I formerly read, with γ, Flor. U, Bekker and others) would be more usual,
 "in an indirect quotation depending on an optative which refers to the future" (Goodwin MT, p. 61). But the rule which excludes the optative in such cases is not absolute, as appears from Dem. 16. 5 (cited by Goodwin l.c.), and ἔχοι in VIII 544 A is in principle the same as βλέποι here. For the collocation of indicative (ἑώρα) with optative Schneider quotes Phaed. 96 B and 95 D.

καὶ δὴ κτλ. ἀπορεῖν is almost a technical term of Socrates' dialectic (cf. Xen.
Mem. III 10. 7 and Theaet. 149 A ff.), but Plato has in mind the effect of his own προπαίδεια, as appears from 532 B, C.

515 E 29 φεύγειν ἀποστρέφόμενον
 κτλ. As when a bewildered disputant takes refuge again in the fallacious position from which he has been dislodged:
 see I 334 B n. For δύναται Richards would read δύναιτο, comparing ἄπερ ὀρῶν in 515 B. δύναται treats the simile as a reality, exactly like ἀμβλυ-ῶνται in 516 E: compare also 538 A n., and (for the construction) Phaed. 67 E οὐ πολλῇ ἂν ἀλογία εἴη, εἰ μὴ ἄσμενοι ἐκείσε ἴοιεν, οἱ ἀφικομένοις ἐλπίς ἐστίν οὐ διὰ βίον ἥρων τυχεῖν.

31 ἔλκοι κτλ. Cf. Theaet. 175 B ὅταν δέ γέ τινα αὐτός, ὦ φίλε, ἐλκύσῃ ἄνω κτλ.
 The alliteration of ἀν- (ἀναβάσεως, ἀνάν-τους, ἀνείη, ἀγανακτεῖν) should be noticed: see on 514 A. With αὐγῆς ἂν ἔχοντα κτλ.
 we may compare Theaet. 175 D βλέπων μετέωρος ἀνωθεν ὑπὸ ἀληθείας ἀδημονῶν τε καὶ ἀπορῶν καὶ βαρβαρίζων κτλ.

516 A 4 πρῶτον μὲν κτλ. πρῶτον μὲν—εἰδῶτα (the lower ὁρατόν of the line) σκιάς ἂν ῥᾶστα καθορῶ καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι τά τε τῶν 5 ἀνθρώπων καὶ τὰ τῶν ἄλλων εἶδωλα, ὕστερον δὲ αὐτά· ἐκ δὲ τούτων τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ αὐτὸν τὸν οὐρανὸν νύκτωρ ἂν ῥᾶον B θεάσαιτο, προσβλέπων τὸ τῶν ἄστρον τε καὶ σελήνης¹ φῶς, ἥ μεθ' ἡμέραν τὸν ἥλιόν τε καὶ τὸ τοῦ ἡλίου. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Τελευταίου δὴ, οἶμαι, τὸν ἥλιον, οὐκ ἐν ὕδασι οὐδ' ἐν ἀλλοτρίᾳ ἔδρα φαντίσ- 10 ματα αὐτοῦ, ἀλλ' αὐτὸν καθ' αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ αὐτοῦ χώρα δύναιτ' ἂν κατιδεῖν καὶ θεάσασθαι οἷός ἐστιν. Ἀναγκαῖον, ἔφη. Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτ' ἂν ἤδη συλλογίζοιτο περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι οὗτος ὁ τὰς τε ὥρας παρέχων καὶ ἐνιαυτοὺς καὶ πάντα ἐπιτροπεύων τὰ ἐν τῷ ὁρωμένῳ

 C τόπῳ καὶ ἐκείνων, ὧν¹ σφεῖς ἑώρων, τρόπον τινὰ πάντων αἴτιος. 15 Δῆλον, ἔφη, ὅτι ἐπὶ ταῦτα ἂν μετ' ἐκείνα ἔλθοι. Τί οὖν; ἀναμιμνησκόμενον αὐτὸν τῆς πρώτης οἰκήσεως καὶ τῆς ἐκεῖ σοφίας καὶ τῶν τότε ξυνδεσμωτῶν οὐκ ἂν οἶε αὐτὸν μὲν εὐδαιμονίζειν τῆς μεταβολῆς, τοὺς δὲ ἐλεεῖν; Καὶ μάλα. Τιμαὶ δὲ καὶ ἔπαινοι εἰ τινες αὐτοῖς ἦσαν τότε παρ' ἀλλήλων καὶ ἡμέρα τῷ ὀξύτατα καθορ- 20 ῶντι τὰ παριόντα καὶ μνημονεύοντι μάλιστα, ὅσα τε πρότερα D αὐτῶν καὶ¹ ὕστερα εἰώθει καὶ ἴμα πῶρευσθαι, καὶ ἐκ τούτων δὴ δυνατώτατα ἀπομαντευομένῳ τὸ μέλλον ἥξειν, δοκεῖς ἂν αὐτὸν ἐπιθυμητικῶς αὐτῶν ἔχειν καὶ ζηλοῦν τοὺς παρ' ἐκείνοις τιμωμένους symbolizes the higher stages of Plato's προπαιδεία, and ὕστερον δὲ αὐτά—οἷός ἐστιν (the higher ὁρατόν) corresponds to the higher νοητόν. See 532 B, C iii. αὐτά, τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ—νύκτωρ and τὸν ἥλιον represent an ascending scale of Ideas up to the Good: cf. note on τοῦ ἀνυποθέτου VI 511 B. It may be doubted whether in point of fact the released prisoner would not be able to look on the heavens by night sooner than upon 'objects themselves' (αὐτά) by day. But the simile holds good in so far as the eye mounts ever higher: and the moon and stars are nearest to the sun (ἡλιοειδῆ), says Proclus in rmp. I p. 294. 6 Kroll), which is the ultimate goal.

13. οὗτος II: αὐτός A.

516 B 13 συλλογίζοιτο κτλ. should be interpreted by VI 509 B (the Good as the cause of Being). οὗτος is preferred by Stallbaum and others to αὐτός (see cr. n.), in which J. and C. find "a solemn emphasis." There is no difficulty about the repetition (αὐτοῦ—αὐτός), but αὐτός

'ipse' is less suitable here than the deictic οὗτος: cf. αὕτη in 517 C and VI 462 E n.

516 C 20 τῷ ὀξύτατα καθορῶντι κτλ. "Induction conceived as inference from particulars to particulars, its test being prediction (not explanation), and its method being association of images or unanalysed likenesses, by contiguity in co-existence or succession" Bosanquet. Plato is thinking chiefly of the empirical politician and political adviser, who foretells the future from the present and the past (cf. Thuc. I 22), but limits his intellectual horizon by his own experience, and knows nothing of the real determining causes of events. The vast majority of Athenian statesmen belonged in Plato's opinion to this category: see on V 473 C and VI 488 B.

22 αὐτῶν does not of course depend on πρότερα (as D. and V. translate), but is a partitive genitive after ὅσα.

25 τε καὶ ἐνδυναστεύοντας, ἢ τὸ τοῦ Ὀμήρου ἂν πεπονθέναι καὶ σφόδρα βούλεσθαι ἐπάρουρον ἔοντα θητενέμεν ἄλλω, ἀνδρὶ παρ' ἀκλήρῳ, καὶ ὅτιοῦν ἂν πεπονθέναι μᾶλλον ἢ κείνῳ τε δοξάζειν καὶ ἐκείνως ζῆν; Οὕτως, ἔφη, ἔγωγε οἶμαι, πᾶν μᾶλλον E πεπονθέναι ἂν δεξασθαι ἢ ζῆν ἐκείνως. Καὶ τότε δὴ ἐννόησον, ἦν
30 δ' ἐγώ. εἰ πάλιν ὁ τοιοῦτος καταβάς εἰς τὸν αὐτὸν θάκον καθίζοιτο, ἄρ' οὐ σκότους <ἂν> ἀνάπλεως σχολή τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐξαίφνης ἦκων ἐκ τοῦ ἡλίου; Καὶ μάλα γ', ἔφη. Τὰς δὲ δὴ σκιὰς ἐκείνας πάλιν εἰ δέοι αὐτὸν γνωματεύοντα διαμιλλᾶσθαι τοῖς αἰεὶ δεσμώταις ἐκείνοις, ἐν ᾧ ἀμβλυώττει, πρὶν | κατὰστήναι τὰ ὄμματα, οὗτος δ' 517 ὁ χρόνος μὴ πάνυ ὀλίγος εἴη τῆς συνηθείας, ἄρ' οὐ γέλωτ' ἂν παράσχοι, καὶ λέγοιτο ἂν περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὡς ἀναβάς ἄνω διεφθαρμένος ἦκει τὰ ὄμματα, καὶ ὅτι οὐκ ἄξιον οὐδὲ πειράσθαι ἄνω ἵεναι; καὶ τὸν

30. ὁ τοιοῦτος II: ὅτι οὗτος A.

31. <ἂν> Baiter: om. codd.

516 D 25 τὸ τοῦ Ὀμήρου κτλ. I formerly proposed to omit πεπονθέναι, but a precise parallel is furnished by Symp. 198 C ἀτεχνῶς τὸ τοῦ Ὀμήρου ἐπεπόνθη. ἂν makes πεπονθέναι equivalent to the future perfect—a more vigorous form of expression than the future (or aorist with ἂν) would be. The quotation (which is from Od. XI 489, cf. supra III 386 C) “has a curious felicity, being the words of Achilles in expressing his detestation of the world of shades (lit. shadows) in comparison with the world of human life” (Bosanquet). It is better, I think, to connect ἄλλω with θητενέμεν (Ameis on Od. I.c.) than with παρά (as Schneider does).

27 καὶ ὅτιοῦν κτλ. ἂν (which Richards would alter to δῆ) is as suitable here as before, since ἂν πεπονθέναι depends in both cases directly on δοκεῖς. The confusion of ἂν and δῆ is not so frequent as some have thought: see on V 450 C.

28 δοξάζειν = ‘opine’ is technical: for the cave is an allegory of τὸ δοξαστόν (514 A n.).

516 E 31 ἂν. See cr. n. and IV 437 B n. Stallbaum proposes ἂν πλέως, but Baiter’s solution (which Cobet and Herwerden also recommend) is easier and better. ἀνάπλεως suggests contagion: see Ruhnken on Tim. Lex. s. v.

σχολή as usual is inchoative or ingressive (‘get’): cf. 520 D and 527 B.

33 γνωματεύοντα: ‘discriminating,’ ‘distinguishing,’ ‘judging,’ as explained by the Scholiast (διακρίνοντα, διαγιγνώσκοντα ἀκριβῶς), Suidas and Timaeus (if with Ruhnken we read γνωματεύοντα for γνωμονεύοντα). A similar explanation appears in the margin of A (γρ κρίνοντα γρ γιγνώσκοντα ἀκριβῆ). The word is derived of course from γνῶμα (‘means of judging,’ ‘test’), for which see Jebb on Soph. Tr. 593. γνωματεύω occurs only here in good Greek, but became more frequent afterwards (for instances see Ruhnken in Tim. Lex. s. v.). Here, as J. and C. remark, it seems to be “used with some degree of contempt” (like τευτάζω in 521 E).

34 ἀμβλυώττει. For the mood see 515 E n. ἀμβλυώττει occurs in g and Flor. U. and is read by Bekker and others. Herwerden adds ἐτι after ἀμβλυώττει, comparing 517 D, but the text is sound.

517 A 1 οὗτος δ' ὁ χρόνος κτλ. is still under the influence of cl. With ἄρ' οὐ γέλωτ' ἂν κτλ. cf. Phaedr. 249 D ἐξιστάμενος δὲ τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων σπουδασμάτων, καὶ πρὸς τῷ θεῷ γιγνώμενος, νοουθετεῖται μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν ὡς παρακινῶν, ἐνθουσιάζων δὲ λέληθε τοὺς πολλοὺς, Theaet. 172 C, 174 C—175 B, Soph. 216 D and infra 517 D.

4 οὐκ ἄξιον κτλ. The prisoners are almost relieved to find themselves able to suppress their higher promptings and sink back into indolence and self-complacency.

καὶ τὸν ἐπιχειροῦντα κτλ. is a mani-ἐπιχειροῦντα λῦειν τε καὶ ἀνάγειν, εἴ πως ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ δύναιτο 5 λαβεῖν καὶ ἀποκτινύναι, ἀποκτείνειαν ἄν; Σφόδρα γ', ἔφη.

III. Ταύτην τοῖνυν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τὴν εἰκόνα, ᾧ φίλε Γλαύκων, B προσαπτέον ἅπασαν τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν ¹ λεγομένοις, τὴν μὲν δι' ὄψεως φαινομένην ἔδραν τῇ τοῦ δεσμοτηρίου οἰκῇσει ἀφομοιοῦντα, τὸ δὲ τοῦ πυρὸς ἐν αὐτῇ φῶς τῇ τοῦ ἡλίου δυνάμει· τὴν δὲ ἄνω 10

6. καὶ ἀποκτινύναι, ἀποκτείνειαν ἄν nos: καὶ ἀποκτείνειν, ἀποκτινύναι ἄν AII et (nisi quod ἀποκτινύναι scribit) q: καὶ ἀποκτινύνειν, ἀποκτινύναι ἄν E. 10. αὐτῇ A²H: fortasse ἐαυτῇ A¹.

fest and touching allusion to the death of Socrates, whose fate was the most conspicuous example in Greek history of the principle here laid down. See Zeller⁴ II 1, pp. 223—227 and cf. VI 406 C, D im. Read in the light of another and even more momentous sacrifice, the sentence assumes a kind of prophetic import, like the famous passage about the λόγος θεῖος in the Phaedo (85 c, D). See Geddes's Phaedo of Plato pp. 280—283. The text is difficult to determine. If we retain λαβεῖν καὶ ἀποκτείνειν, ἀποκτινύναι ἄν, we must either (a) regard ἄρ' οὐ—λέγουτ' ἄν as equivalent to ἄρ' οὐκ οἶει γέλωτ' ἄν αὐτὸν παρασχεῖν καὶ λέγεσθαι ἄν, and take λέγεσθαι ἄν as equivalent to ἐκείνους ἄν εἰπεῖν, carrying on ἐκείνους as subject to ἀποκτινύναι ἄν (Schneider), or (b) supply οὐκ οἶει, although these words do not occur after 516 C (J. and C.). The second solution is preferable to the first, but either is a tour de force. No satisfactory explanation of the infinitive ἀποκτινύναι ἄν appears to be possible, and the immediate juxtaposition of the two forms of the infinitive is also in itself suspicious. A few inferior MSS read ἀποκτενεῖν for the ἀποκτείνειν and αὖ for the ἄν of A: but otherwise there is no important variant. The emendations proposed are (1) λαβεῖν, καὶ ἀποκτείνειαν (Ast), (2) λαβεῖν, καὶ ἀποκτενοῖεν ἄν (Stallbaum), (3) λαβεῖν, καὶ ἀποκτινύοιεν (Cobet), (4) λαβεῖν, καὶ ἀποκτείνειαν ἄν (Baier). The correction in the text appears to me not only easier, but more in harmony with Plato's fullness of expression. I suppose that the error arose thus. A scribe accidentally omitted ἀποκτινύναι, and the infinitive was wrongly replaced after, instead of before, ἀποκτείνειαν. This would give λαβεῖν καὶ ἀποκτείνειαν, ἀποκτινύναι ἄν, from which the change is inevitable to the text of A.

517 A—518 B The simile of the Cave should be connected with the Line. The Cave is the visible world, the fire is the Sun, and the prisoners' journey towards the light resembles the ascent of the soul into the intelligible sphere, in which the Idea of Good reigns supreme. We need not wonder that the philosopher is unwilling to leave the light of thought for the darkness of practical affairs, or that he is dazed and confused when he does.

7 ταύτην κτλ. If we interpret the lower section of the line as ὁρατόν and nothing more, the following comparisons are involved:—(1) Fire=Sun: (2) Shadows of ἀνδριάντες and other σκευαστά cast by Fire=Shadows etc. of φυτευτά and σκευαστά cast by the Sun: (3) ἀνδριάντες and other σκευαστά in the Cave=φυτευτά and σκευαστά in the ὁρατόν: (4) the ascent from the Cave into the ὁρατόν=the ascent from the ὁρατόν into the νοητόν. The second comparison is of little or no importance, for the ἀπαιδευτος, of whose condition the Cave is an allegory, does not contemplate exclusively or even principally natural shadows of φυτευτά and σκευαστά (cf. VI 511 E n). Nor do the other comparisons exhaust the significance of the Cave as an allegory of ἀπαιδευσία. In order fully to apprehend its meaning, we must regard the lower section of the line as δοξαστόν in the sense of V 475 E ff. Plato himself does so: see VI 510 A n. The shadows and originals within the cave will then symbolise δόξαι which are respectively twice and once removed from the truth which they seek to portray (see on 517 D), and the ascent from the Cave into the ὁρατόν will represent the soul's ascent from the δοξαστόν into the νοητόν—from the πολλά (in the widest sense) to the ἓν. Cf. 514 B and 532 B, C im.

ἀνάβασιν καὶ θέαν τῶν ἄνω τὴν εἰς τὸν νοητὸν τόπον τῆς ψυχῆς ἄνοδον τιθεῖς οὐχ ἁμαρτήσῃ τῆς γ' ἐμῆς ἐλπίδος, ἐπειδὴ ταύτης ἐπιθυμεῖς ἀκούειν· θεὸς δὲ πού οἶδεν, εἰ ἀληθῆς οὐσα τυγχάνει.
 τὰ δ' οὖν ἐμοὶ φαινόμενα οὕτω φαίνεται, ἐν τῷ γνωστῷ τελευταία 15 ἢ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέα καὶ μόγις ὁρᾶσθαι, ὁφθείσα δὲ συλλογιστέα εἶναι ὡς ἄρα πᾶσι πάντων αὕτη ὁρθὴν τε καὶ καλὴν αἰτία, ἐν τε ὁρατῷ φῶς καὶ τὸν τούτου κύριον τεκούσα ἐν τε νοητῷ αὕτη κυρία ἀλήθειαν καὶ νοῦν παρασχομένη, καὶ ὅτι δεῖ ταύτην ἰδεῖν τὸν μέλλοντα ἐμφρόνως πράττειν ἢ ἰδίᾳ ἢ δημοσίᾳ. Ξυνοίομαι, 20 ἔφη, καὶ ἐγώ, ὅν γε δὴ τρόπον δύναμαι. "Ἴθι τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ τόδε ξυνοιήθητι καὶ μὴ θαυμάσης, ὅτι οἱ ἐνταῦθα ἐλθόντες οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων πράττειν, ἀλλ' ἄνω αἰεὶ ἐπείγονται αὐτῶν αἱ ψυχαὶ διατρίβειν· εἰκὸς γάρ πού οὕτως, εἴπερ αὐτὰ κατὰ τὴν προειρημένην εἰκόνα τοῦτ' ἔχει. Εἰκὸς μέντοι, ἔφη. Τί δέ; 25 τόδε οἶε τι θαυμαστόν, εἰ ἀπὸ θείων, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, θεωριῶν ἐπὶ τὰ ἀνθρώπειά τις ἐλθὼν κακὰ ἀσχημονεῖ τε καὶ φαίνεται σφόδρα γελοῖος ἔτι ἀμβλυώττων καὶ πρὶν ἱκανῶς συνήθης γενέσθαι τῷ παρόντι σκότῳ ἀναγκαζόμενος ἐν δικαστηρίοις ἢ ἄλλοθι πού ἀγωνίζεσθαι περὶ τῶν τοῦ δικαίου σκιῶν ἢ ἀγαλμάτων ὧν αἱ σκιαί, 30 καὶ διαμιλλᾶσθαι περὶ τούτου, ὅπῃ ποτέ· ὑπολαμβάνεται ταῦτα

17. αὕτη γ: αὕτη ΑΞ: αὕτῃ (sic) II.

517 B 12 ἐλπίδος: 'surmise': cf. II 383 B n. The diffidence of tone recalls VI 506 E: cf. infr. 523 A.

14 φαίνεται. For the construction cf. I 334 B n.

τελευταία as well as μόγις should be taken predicatively with ὁρᾶσθαι. The sentiment is as in VI 505 A (ὅτι—ἴσμεν), where see note.

517 C 17 τεκούσα κτλ. τεκούσα reminds us that the Sun is the ἔκγονος of the Good (VI 506 E). On ἀλήθειαν καὶ νοῦν see VI 508 D n. ὅτι δεῖ depends on φαίνεται, not (as D. and V. translate) on συλλογιστέα. Cf. VI 505 A, 506 A n. Plato's guardians are not to rest satisfied with the εἰκὼν or ἔκγονος of the Good; they must see the Good itself, and infer (not by intuition, but) by means of reasoning (συλλογιστέα) that it is the cause of all. See the notes on VI 511 B (αὐτὸς ὁ λόγος and τοῦ ἀνυποθέτου).

517 D 26 ἀσχημονεῖ κτλ. Cf. Theat. 174 B, C ὅταν ἐν δικαστηρίῳ ἢ πὺν ἄλλοθι ἀναγκασθῇ περὶ τῶν παρὰ πόδας—διαλέγεσθαι, γέλωτα παρέχει—ἢ ἀσχημοσύνη δεινὴ—γελοῖος φαίνεται. The whole of the description of the φιλόσοφος in the Theaetetus should be carefully compared with this passage.

27 ἔτι ἀμβλυώττων is logically subordinate to ἀναγκαζόμενος.

29 τῶν τοῦ δικαίου κτλ. treats the Cave as an allegory of δοξαστά (see on VI 510 A, VII 517 A). The expression 'shadows of the just' is vague (cf. σκιαμαχοῦντων in 520 C), and ἡ ἀγαλμάτων ὧν αἱ σκiai introduces more precision. We may regard ἀγαλμάτων as symbolising the enacted laws of a city, and their shadows as the "representation or misrepresentation of the existing laws (themselves only 'images' of justice) by a rhetorician or pleader" (Nettleship Hell. p. 141 n. 1). Compare (with Shorey Idea of Good etc. p. 287) Soph. 234 C and Pol. 303 C.

30 ὅπῃ ποτέ—ἰδόντων. For the real ὑπὸ τῶν αὐτὴν δικαιοσύνην μὴ πρόποτε ἰδόντων; Οὐδ' ὅπωςτιοῦν 518 θαυμαστόν, ἔφη. Ἀλλ' εἰ νοῦν γε ἔχοι τις, | ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μεμνητ' ἄν, ὅτι διτταὶ καὶ ἀπὸ διττῶν γίνονται ἐπιταράξεις ὄμμασιν, ἕκ τε φωτὸς εἰς σκότος μεθισταμένων καὶ ἐκ σκότους εἰς φῶς. ταῦτά δὲ ταῦτα νομίσας γίνεσθαι καὶ περὶ ψυχὴν, ὅποτε ἴδοι θορυβουμένην τινὰ καὶ ἀδυνατοῦσάν τι καθορᾶν, οὐκ ἂν ἀλογίστως γελῶ, ἀλλ' 5 ἐπισκοποῖ ἄν, πότερον ἐκ φανότερου βίου ἤκουσα ὑπὸ ἀηθείας

 B ἐσκότῳται, ἢ ἐξ ἀμαθίας πλείονος εἰς φανότερον | ἰοῦσα ὑπὲρ λαμπροτέρου μαρμαρυγῆς ἐμπέπλησται, καὶ οὕτω δὴ τὴν μὲν εὐδαιμονίσειεν ἂν τοῦ πάθους τε καὶ βίου, τὴν δὲ ἐλεήσειεν, καὶ εἰ γελᾶν ἐπ' αὐτῇ βούλοιο, ἥττον ἂν καταγέλαστος ὁ γέλως αὐτῷ 10 εἴη ἢ ὁ ἐπὶ τῇ ἀνῳθεν ἐκ φωτὸς ἡκούση. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη, μετρίως λέγεις.

IV. Δεῖ δὴ, εἶπον, ἡμᾶς τοιόνδε νομίσαι περὶ αὐτῶν, εἰ ταῦτ' ἀληθῆ· τὴν παιδείαν οὐχ οἷαν τινὲς ἐπαγγελλόμενοί φασιν εἶναι,

9. εὐδαιμονίσειεν q: εὐδαιμονήσειεν AΠΞ.

point at issue is not the law, but the judges' interpretation thereof. Plato is doubtless thinking of Socrates and his judges throughout the whole of this passage.

518 A 7 φανότερον ('greater brightness,' 'more light') and λαμπροτέρου are neuter. The omission of articles elevates the style. Richards would delete ὑπὸ λαμπροτέρου, but the words balance ὑπὸ ἀηθείας exactly as ἐσκότῳται balances μαρμαρυγῆς ἐμπέπλησται ('has been dazzled'). Any stronger antithesis than ὑπὸ ἀηθείας would give a false meaning, for the blindness is not caused by σκότος, but only by ἀήθεια: ξυνεχίζόμενοι γὰρ μὲν βέλτιον ὤψεσθε τῶν ἐκεῖ κτλ. (520 C).

518 B 10 εἰ γελᾶν κτλ. Cf. Theaet. 175 B, D. There is more of pity than of malice in Plato's philosophic smile.

518 B—521 B It follows that Education is not a way of putting knowledge into empty souls, but a revolution of the Reason or organ of Knowledge, whose gaze must be directed upon Being and the brightest part thereof, which is the Good. The entire soul turns round along with Reason in this revolution. Other virtues are secondary and adventitious, but Reason never loses its power, and works well or woe, according as it is or is not converted by means of Education. The best natures in our city, after they have ascended to the Good, must rejoin the prisoners whom they have left. To force them thus to redescend, may seem unjust; but Law seeks to make the whole city prosperous rather than a single class. And indeed it is also just that they should thus repay their country for having reared and educated them. They will themselves admit the force of our demands, and take their turn in the work of government, not eagerly, but as a necessity. We have seen that a well governed city is impossible unless a life better than that of ruling is open to its rulers, and the life of true philosophy is better.

518 B ff. Nothing that Plato has bequeathed to us is more valuable than his theory of education as developed in this part of the Republic, and there is probably nothing in the whole range of educational literature, ancient or modern, which takes so far-reaching and profound a view of the aim and scope of education, or is so well fitted to inspire the teacher with indomitable courage and inextinguishable hope. See on 518 C and App. II.

13 αὐτῶν: 'the subject before us': cf. VI 511 C, and αὐτό in I 339 E n.

14 ἐπαγγελλόμενοι κτλ. ἐπαγγέλλεσθαι of sophistic 'professions' is almost technical: cf. e.g. Prot. 319 A, Gorg. 447 C and Isocr. Soph. 1. τινὲς from its

15 τοιαύτην καὶ εἶναι. φασὶ δέ που οὐκ ἐνούσης¹ ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἐπι- C στήμης σφεῖς ἐντιθέναι, οἷον τυφλοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς ὄψιν ἐντιθέντες.
Φασὶ γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη. 'Ο δέ γε νῦν λόγος, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, σημαίνει ταύτην τὴν ἐνούσαν ἐκάστου δύναμιν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ τὸ ὄργανον, ᾧ κατα-μανθάνει ἕκαστος, οἷον εἰ ὄμμα μὴ δυνατὸν ἦν ἄλλως ἢ ξὺν ὄλῳ 20 τῷ σώματι στρέφειν πρὸς τὸ φανὸν ἐκ τοῦ σκοτώδους, οὕτω ξὺν ὄλῳ τῇ ψυχῇ ἐκ τοῦ γιγνομένου περιακτέον εἶναι. ἕως ἂν εἰς τὸ οὖν position is emphatic, and makes us half-suspect some allusion to a particular Sophist: cf. Aristotle's use of τινές (Bonitz Ind. Arist. p. 598). Similar sophistic ἐπαγγέλματα are ridiculed, though on different grounds, by Isocrates Soph. 2 ff.: see also Prot. 318 E ff. and Euthyd. 273 D ff. (ἀρετὴν, ἔφη sc. ὁ Εὐθύδημος,—οἰόμεθα οἷω τ' εἶναι παραδοῖναι κάλλιστ' ἀνθρώπων καὶ τάχιστα), and cf. Newman Politics of Aristotle 1 p. 387. It should be mentioned that the double εἶναι has been suspected by Richards, who would omit the first; but Plato himself is not averse to such repetitions: cf. μετέχειν—μετέχειν in VI 511 E and X 621 B n.

518 C 16 ἐντιθέναι. Cf. Theognis 429—438 (εἰ δ' ἦν ποιητὸν τε καὶ ἐνθετον ἀνδρὶ νοῆμα 435). The grossly material and mechanical view of education which Plato here attacks has some affinity with what is sometimes called 'cram.' ἐντιθέναι was used of a nurse feeding children (I 345 B n.); but such an allusion, though not in itself inappropriate, is scarcely intended here. Cf. also Symp. 175 D, E.

17 ὁ δέ γε νῦν λόγος κτλ. Sophists profess to put ἐπιστήμη into the soul; but Plato's argument indicates that the power or faculty of ἐπιστήμη (ταύτην τὴν δύναμιν), and its organ νοῦς are already present in the soul of each individual, just as ὄψις and ὄμμα are already possessed by the prisoners in the cave. νοῦς is in fact the θεῖον τι ἐν ἡμῖν, according to Plato, through whose indwelling man is most truly man by being like to God (VI 501 B, IX 589 D nm.). The doctrine that μάθησις is ἀνάμνησις implies what is fundamentally the same view: see Aleno 81 A ff. and Phaed. 72 E—76 D, especially 73 A ἐρωτῶμενοι οἱ ἄνθρωποι, εἰάν τις καλῶς ἐρωτᾷ, αὐτοὶ λέγουσιν πάντα ἣ ἔχει· καίτοι εἰ μὴ ἐτύγχανεν αὐτοῖς ἐπιστήμη ἐνούσα καὶ ὀρθὸς λόγος, οὐκ ἂν οἶοι τ' ἦσαν τοῦτο ποιῆσειν. We may even go further and say that Plato's conception of the divine element in man is the ultimate basis of all his proofs of Immortality. In its deeper bearings, therefore, the view of education here presented is incomparably grander and more profound than the usual connotation of the word either in ancient or in modern times. We educate our pupils not only for time, but for eternity, and therefore πείρας οὐδὲν ἀνήσομεν, ἕως ἂν ἡ πείσωμεν καὶ τοῦτον καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους, ἢ προύργου τι ποιήσωμεν εἰς ἐκείνον τὸν βίον, ὅταν αὐθις γενόμενοι τοῖς τοιοῦτοις ἐντύχωμεν λόγοις (VI 498 D). See also X 618 C ff. and Phaed. 107 D f. οὐδὲν γὰρ ἄλλο ἔχουσα εἰς Αἴδου ἡ ψυχὴ ἐρχεται πλὴν τῆς παιδείας τε καὶ τροφῆς κτλ. Michael Angelo used to say that every block of marble contained a statue, and that the sculptor brings it to light by cutting away the encumbrances by which the 'human face divine' is concealed. In like manner, according to Plato, it is the business of the teacher to prune the soul of his pupil of those unnatural excrescences and incrustations which hide its true nature (519 A, B n.), until the human soul divine (VI 501 B n.) stands out in all its pristine grace and purity. It should carefully be noted that in Plato's theory of education the entire soul is involved (ξὺν ὄλῳ τῇ ψυχῇ). The Platonic περιαγωγή, although, or rather, perhaps, because, it applies primarily and immediately to the intellect, effects a moral no less than an intellectual revolution. The moral discipline of Books II—IV, so far from being overthrown, is strengthened and consolidated by being intellectualised. Cf. also 519 A B n.

18 ἐκάστου. ἐκάστῳ was read by Iamblichus (Protrept. 16) for ἐκάστου: but cf. 527 D n.

19 ξὺν. See on IV 424 D. Here, as in Gorg. 513 A and Laws 678 c, it implies an intimate, almost organic, connexion ('in conjunction with'). Lina (de praepos. usu Plat. p. 33) is mistaken in holding that ξὺν introduces a mere "Anhängsel" in this passage.

καὶ τοῦ ὄντος τὸ φανότατον δυνατὴ γένηται ἀνασχέσθαι θεωμένη.
 D τοῦτο δ' εἶναί φαμεν ἰ τὰγαθόν· ἢ γάρ; Ναί. Τούτου τοίνυν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, αὐτοῦ τέχνη ἂν εἴη τῆς περιαγωγῆς, τίνα τρόπον ὡς ῥᾶστα τε καὶ ἀνυσιμώτατα μεταστραφήσεται, οὐ τοῦ ἐμποιῆσαι 25 αὐτῷ τὸ ὁρᾶν, ἀλλ' ὡς ἔχοντι μὲν αὐτό, οὐκ ὀρθῶς δὲ τετραμμένῳ οὐδὲ βλέποντι οἱ ἔδει, τοῦτο διαμηχανήσασθαι. Ἐοῖκεν γάρ, ἔφη.
 Αἱ μὲν τοίνυν ἄλλαι ἀρεταὶ καλούμεναι ψυχῆς κινδυνεύουσιν ἐγγύς τι εἶναι τῶν τοῦ σώματος· τῷ ὄντι γὰρ οὐκ ἐνούσαι πρότερον E ὕστερον ἰ ἐμποιεῖσθαι ἔθεσι καὶ ἀσκήσεσιν· ἢ δὲ τοῦ φρονῆσαι 30

27. διαμηχανήσασθαι II et nisi fallor A¹: δεῖ μηχανήσασθαι A².

518 D 23 τοῦτου τοίνυν κτλ. "Construe: (ἡ παιδεία) εἴη ἂν τέχνη τῆς περιαγωγῆς (i. q. τοῦ περιάγειν, quod praecedit) τοῦτου αὐτοῦ (τοῦ ὄργάνου τῆς ψυχῆς, ᾧ καταμανθάνει ἕκαστος)—οὐ (τέχνη) τοῦ ἐμποιῆσαι αὐτῷ τὸ ὁρᾶν—ἀλλὰ (τοῦ) μηχανήσασθαι τοῦτο (ὥστε βλέπειν οἱ ἔδει)." Ast. This interpretation is, I believe, correct. Plato began by asserting that Education is not what certain Sophists declare it to be—the putting of sight, as it were, into blind eyes. For there is already in every man's soul an eye or ὄργανον, which sees or learns already; what is required is to turn this ὄργανον round. Hence he concludes (τοίνυν) Education is not (as the Sophists say) an art of putting sight into the soul's eye (τοῦ ἐμποιῆσαι αὐτῷ τὸ ὁρᾶν refers to τυφλοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς ὅψιν ἐντιθέντες), but an art of turning round just this very eye or ὄργανον which is present in every soul from the first. The prevailing view since Schneider regards τοῦτου αὐτοῦ as anticipating and explained by, not as depending on, τῆς περιαγωγῆς. This yields a tolerable sense, but makes it difficult to supply the subject of μεταστραφήσεται, and αὐτῷ is also awkward. On Ast's view τίνα—μεταστραφήσεται explains τοῦτου αὐτοῦ τῆς περιαγωγῆς, and the subject of μεταστραφήσεται as well as the antecedent of αὐτῷ is at once seen to be τὸ ὄργανον ᾧ καταμανθάνει ἕκαστος, for it is identical with the antecedent of τοῦτου αὐτοῦ.

25 τοῦ ἐμποιῆσαι κτλ. The genitive has been wrongly taken as one of the rare examples in good Greek of an independent final infinitive (Weiske quoted in A. J. Ph. IV p. 418), a construction for which see Jannaris Historical Greek Grammar pp. 483, 578. It depends on τέχνη: see last note. For διαμηχανήσασθαι Ast (with some inferior MSS) reads δὴ μηχανήσασθαι: but cf. (with Schneider) Laus 746 C τοῦτ' αὐτὸ διαμηχανᾶσθαι ὅπως ἂν γίγνηται.

28 αἱ μὲν τοίνυν κτλ. ἄλλαι is anticipative) (ἢ δὲ τοῦ φρονῆσαι below. καλούμεναι (as Bosanquet points out) should be taken with ψυχῆς (lit. 'which are called soul's' i. e. 'which are commonly said to belong to the soul'). Plato does not mean to deny that they are virtues, but they do not belong to soul essentially and from the first. Krohn (Pl. St. pp. 185 ff.), who, with the editors generally, takes καλούμεναι as 'sogenannten,' affirms that Plato here discards the virtues of Book IV; but he is merely contrasting these and other virtues or excellencies with νόησις.

29 ἐγγύς τι εἶναι. Campbell conjectures ἐγγύς τι τείνειν. I once thought of ἐγγύς τι τείνειν, taking the aorist as an explicit reference to the ethical virtues already discussed; but the text is doubtless sound: cf. v 472 C and VIII 544 D (μεταξύ τι τούτων πού εἰσιν).

518 E 30 ἔθεσι καὶ ἀσκήσεσιν. Aristotle Nic. Eth. II I is in effect a commentary on this text: note in particular ἢ δ' ἠθικὴ (ἀρετὴ) ἐξ ἔθους περιγίγνεται (1103^a 17)—οὐδεμὶα τῶν ἠθικῶν ἀρετῶν φύσει ἡμῖν ἐγγίγνεται (ibid. 19)—τὰς δ' ἀρετὰς λαμβάνομεν ἐνεργήσαντες πρότερον (1103^a 31).

ἢ δὲ τοῦ φρονῆσαι κτλ. The ἀρετὴ of φρονῆσαι (=νόησις or the exercise of νοῦς) is not merely καλουμένη ψυχῆς, but does in reality belong to (for τυγχάνει οὐσα ci. I 337 B n.)—is an essential attribute of—something more divine (than that to which the other virtues belong), παντὸς μᾶλλον θειοτέρου τινὸς τυγχάνει, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐσα, δ' τὴν μὲν δύναμιν οὐδέποτε ἀπόλλυσιν, ὑπὸ δὲ τῆς περιαγωγῆς χρησίμους τε καὶ ὠφέλιμους καὶ ἄχρηστους αὖ | καὶ βλαβερὸν γίγνεται. ἡ 519 οὐπω ἐννεόηκας τῶν λεγομένων πονηρῶν μὲν, σοφῶν δέ, ὡς δριμύ μὲν βλέπει τὸ ψυχάριον καὶ ὀξέως διορᾷ ταῦτα ἐφ' ἃ τέτραπται, ὡς οὐ φαύλην ἔχον τὴν ὄψιν, κακία δ' ἠναγκασμένον ὑπηρετεῖν, 5 ὥστε ὅσῳ αὖ ὀξύτερον βλέπῃ, τοσούτῳ πλείω κακὰ ἐργαζόμενον; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Τοῦτο μέντοι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ τῆς τοιαύτης φύσεως εἰ ἐκ παιδὸς εὐθὺς κοπτόμενον περιεκόπη τὰς τῆς γενέσεως viz. νοῦς. The meaning of φρόνησις has changed since IV 433 B (see on IV 428 B) in conformity with the intellectualism of Books VI and VII.

31 παντὸς μᾶλλον has been suspected, and Madvig proposes ὑφάσματος or πλάσματος μᾶλλον, Richards ὀργάνου μᾶλλον: but the text is indubitably sound. The phrase, like πάντων μάλιστα, means 'most assuredly,' and has nothing to do with the comparative θειοτέρου, but emphasises the whole assertion exactly as in Crit. 49 B and Prot. 344 B.

τὴν μὲν δύναμιν κτλ. Plato means that νοῦς can never lose its power or function, which is νόησις. οὐδέποτε should not be limited to this life. The Peripatetic doctrine of "das unsterbliche Attribut der denkenden Function" is here foreshadowed, as Krohn observes (Pl. St. p. 160). See also on 518 C.

32 ὑπὸ δὲ τῆς περιαγωγῆς is equivalent to ὑπὸ δὲ τῆς περιαγωγῆς τε καὶ μὴ ('according as it is or is not turned round'). See on VI 498 A.

519 A 2 δριμύ μὲν κτλ. δριμύ is 'shrewdly,' 'astutely,' like a quick-sighted lawyer: cf. (with J. and C.) Theaet. 175 D τὸν σμικρὸν ἐκείνον τὴν ψυχὴν καὶ δριμύν καὶ δικανικόν. For ταῦτα Cobet needlessly proposes τά: cf. 519 B n. Instead of ὥστε (which three MSS omit) Ast conjectured καί, and E. S. Thompson (Cambr. Phil. Soc. Proceed. XXI p. 13) ὡς τε: but the clause ὅσῳ—ἐργαζόμενον is a logical inference from οὐ φαύλην—ὑπηρετεῖν and should not therefore be introduced by καί, still less by ὡς τε. I formerly printed ἐργάζεται (Ξ) and the three MSS already referred to reading ἐργάζεται, but the finite verb is not likely to have been corrupted into a participle, and exactly the same ungrammatical assimilation appears with ὥστε in Andoc. 4. 20, Isaeus 9. 16 and Isocr. Paneg. 64, 65 (quoted by Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 1015 n. 3). The instances cited by Schneider (Addit. p. 52) viz. Tim. 56 B, [Eryx.] 404 A and Thuc. I 25 are not strictly parallel to this.

519 A, B 7 τὰς τῆς γενέσεως κτλ.: 'as it were the leaden weights, which are of the family of Becoming, and which, through indulgences in eating and through pleasures and gluttonous desires connected with such like indulgences, adhere to it' (i.e. to such a nature, τὸ τῆς τοιαύτης φύσεως) 'and turn the soul's vision round below.' The eye of the soul ought to be turned round ἐκ τοῦ γιγνομένου (518 C): and it is our duty to shake the soul clear of τὰς τῆς γενέσεως ξυγγενεῖς μολυβδόδας. For γενέσεως see on VI 485 B, and cf. μεταστροφῆς ἀπὸ γενέσεως ἐπ' ἀλήθειαν τε καὶ οὐρανόν infra 525 C and 525 B, 526 E, 534 A al. With ξυγγενεῖς cf. VIII 554 D where τὰς τοῦ κηφῆνος ξυγγενεῖς ἐπιθυμίας = τὰς κηφηνώδεις ἐπιθυμίας. The μολυβδόδες are the accumulated products of sensual indulgence and desire: see X 611 C ff., especially ἃ νῦν αὐτῇ, ἅτε γῆν ἐστιμῆν, γενηρὰ καὶ πετρώδη πολλά καὶ ἄγρια περιπέφυκεν ὑπὸ τῶν εὐδαιμόνων λεγομένων ἐστιάσεων 611 E—612 A, and Phaed. 81 C together with Ep. VII 326 B. Cf. also Clement Strom. IV 4 p. 1228 C Migne ὥσπερ μολυβδόδας τὰς ἐπιθυμίας. These μολυβδόδες are akin to the world of γένεσις because they are σωματοειδῆ, γεώδη, γενηρὰ (Plato II. cc.), of the earth earthy. They become incorporate with the soul (προσφυνεῖς γιγνόμεναι, cf. προσπεφυκέναι X 611 D), making it, as Plato does not hesitate to say, σωματοειδῆ, δοξάζουσαν ταῦτα ἀληθῆ εἶναι, ἅπερ ἂν καὶ τὸ σῶμα φῇ (Phaed. 83 D, cf. ib. 82 E, 83 C). Milton is platonizing when he tells how the soul "grows clotted by con-

- Β ξυγγενεῖς ὥσπερ μολυβδίδας, ¹ αἱ δὴ ἐδωδαῖς τε καὶ τοιούτων ἡδοαῖς τε καὶ λιχνεῖαις προσφυεῖς γιγνόμεναι περικαίτω στρέφουσι τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ὕψιν· ὧν εἰ ἀπαλλαγὴν περιεστρέφετο εἰς ¹⁰ τὰ ἀληθῆ, καὶ ἐκεῖνα ἂν τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο τῶν αὐτῶν ἀνθρώπων ὀξύτατα ἑώρα, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐφ' ἃ νῦν τέτραπται. Εἰκός γε, ἔφη. Τί δέ; τόδε οὐκ εἰκός, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἀνάγκη ἐκ τῶν προειρημένων, μήτε τοὺς ἀπαιδεύτους καὶ ἀληθείας ἀπείρους ἱκανῶς ἂν ποτε
- Γ πόλιν ἐπιτροπεύσαι, ¹ μήτε τοὺς ἐν παιδείᾳ ἐωμένους διατρίβειν ¹⁵ διὰ τέλους, τοὺς μὲν ὅτι σκοπὸν ἐν τῷ βίῳ οὐκ ἔχουσιν ἓνα, οὐ στοχαζομένους δεῖ ἅπαντα πράττειν, ἃ ἂν πράττωσιν ἰδίᾳ τε καὶ δημοσίᾳ, τοὺς δὲ ὅτι ἐκόντες εἶναι οὐ πράξουσιν, ἡγούμενοι ἐν μακάρων νήσοις ζῶντες ἔτι ἀποκίσθαι; Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη. Ἡμέτερον δὴ ἔργον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τῶν οἰκιστῶν, τὰς τε βελτίστας φύσεις ²⁰ ἀναγκάσαι ἀφικέσθαι πρὸς τὸ μάθημα, ὃ ἐν τῷ πρόσθεν ἔφαμεν
- Δ εἶναι μέγιστον, ἰδεῖν τε τὸ ἀγαθὸν ¹ καὶ ἀναβῆναι ἐκείνην τὴν ἀνάβασιν, καὶ ἐπειδὴν ἀναβάντες ἱκανῶς ἴδωσι, μὴ ἐπιτρέπειν αὐτοῖς ὃ νῦν ἐπιτρέπεται. Τὸ ποῖον δὴ; Τὸ αὐτοῦ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καταμένειν καὶ μὴ ἐθέλειν πάλιν καταβαίνειν παρ' ἐκείνους τοὺς ²⁵ δεσμώτας μηδὲ μετέχειν τῶν παρ' ἐκείνοις πόνων τε καὶ τιμῶν, εἴτε tagion, Imbodies and imbrutes, till she quite lose The divine property of her first being" (Comus 464 ff.). Through the weight of these encumbrances the eye of the soul is turned down (cf. IX 586 A κάτω αἱ βλέποντες καὶ κεκυφότες εἰς γῆν καὶ εἰς τραπέζας κτλ.), nor can the soul look upwards until they are knocked away (περιεκόπη; cf. περικρουσθεῖσα in X 611 E). We may again compare the lines of Milton "Mammon, the least erected spirit that fell From Heaven; for e'en in Heaven his looks and thoughts Were always downward bent" (Par. Lost I 679 ff.). For περικαίτω cf. Photius περικαίτω τραπήσεται· ἀντὶ τοῦ περιτραπήσεται κάτω. The περι- balances περι- in περιεστρέφετο just below. Instead of ἐδωδαῖς, Jackson suggests ἐδωδῆς, comparing III 389 E τῶν περὶ πότους καὶ ἀφροδίσια καὶ περὶ ἐδωδῆς ἡδονῶν. The proposal is attractive and may be right; but I think there is hardly sufficient reason for departing from the MSS. See also on περικαίτω and the whole of this difficult and highly important sentence, App. V.

519 B 10 ὧν εἰ ἀπαλλαγὴν κτλ. For the anacoluthon cf. Laws 810 D, E (Engelhardt Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 37). Cobet gratuitously adds τὰ before ἐφ' ἃ. Cf. 519 A n. With the sentiment cf. VI 491 C, D iii., 494 C ff. iii. Plato may well be thinking of Alcibiades again. The present passage is a conspicuous proof of the almost boundless influence which Plato ascribed to education, when applied to gifted natures.

519 C 16 σκοπὸν—ἓνα κτλ. The εἰς σκοπὸς of Plato's guardians is the Idea of Good, which is therefore clearly not only a metaphysical but also an ethical concept—the goal of conduct as well as the ultimate cause of knowledge and existence. Cf. 540 A and App. III.

18 ἐκόντες εἶναι. I 336 E n.

20 τῶν οἰκιστῶν= 'the founders' is in explanatory apposition with ἡμέτερον.

21 ἐν τῷ πρόσθεν. VI 505 A.

22 ἰδεῖν τε κτλ. depends on ἀναγκάσαι and explains ἀφικέσθαι—μέγιστον (J. and C.). τε balances καὶ before ἀναβῆναι. This explanation is better than to regard τε as 'and' (with Schneider and D. and V.).

φαιλότεραι εἴτε σπουνδαιότεραι. "Επειτ', ἔφη, ἀδικήσομεν αὐτούς, καὶ ποιήσομεν χεῖρον ζῆν, δυνατόν αὐτοῖς ὃν ἄμεινον;

V. Ἐπελάθου, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πάλιν, ὦ φίλε, ὅτι νόμῳ οὐ τοῦτο E 30 μέλει, ὅπως ἐν τι γένος ἐν πόλει διαφερόντως εὖ πράξει, ἀλλ' ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ πόλει τοῦτο μηχανᾶται ἐγγενέσθαι, ξυναρμόττων τοὺς πολίτας πειθοῖ τε καὶ ἀνάγκῃ, ποιῶν μεταδιδόναι ἀλλήλοις τῆς ὠφελείας, ἦν ἂν ἕκαστοι τὸ κοινὸν | δυνατοὶ ὧσιν ὠφελεῖν, καὶ 520 αὐτὸς ἐμποιῶν τοιούτους ἄνδρας ἐν τῇ πόλει, οὐχ ἵνα ἀφίῃ τρέ-πεσθαι ὅπῃ ἕκαστος βούλεται, ἀλλ' ἵνα καταχρήται αὐτὸς αὐτοῖς ἐπὶ τὸν ξύνδεσμον τῆς πόλεως. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη· ἐπελαθόμην γάρ.
5 Σκέψαι τοῖνυν, εἶπον, ὦ Γλαύκων, ὅτι οὐδ' ἀδικήσομεν τοὺς παρ' ἡμῖν φιλοσόφους γιγνομένους, ἀλλὰ δίκαια πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἐροῦμεν προσαναγκάζοντες τῶν ἄλλων ἐπιμελεῖσθαι τε καὶ φυλάττειν. ἐροῦμεν γάρ, ὅτι οἱ μὲν ἐν ταῖς ἄλλαις πόλεσι τοιοῦτοι γιγνόμενοι B εἰκότως οὐ μετέχουσι τῶν ἐν αὐταῖς πόνων· αὐτόματοι γὰρ ἐμ-10 φύονται ἀκούσης τῆς ἐν ἐκάστῃ πολιτείας, δίκην δ' ἔχει τό γε αὐτοφυές, μηδενὶ τροφήν ὀφείλον, μηδ' ἐκτίνειν τῷ προθυμείσθαι τὰ τροφεῖα· ὑμᾶς δ' ἡμεῖς ὑμῖν τε αὐτοῖς τῇ τε ἄλλῃ πόλει ὥσπερ ἐν σμῆνεσιν ἡγεμόνας τε καὶ βασιλέας ἐγεινήσαμεν, ἄμεινόν τε καὶ

II. τῷ II: τῷ A.

27 ἔπειτα and αἶτα are used like our 'what!' in indignant or quasi-indignant questions. Cf. Gorg. 466 c, Ap. 28 B and elsewhere, with Blaydes on Ar. An. 911.

519 D, E 29 ἐπελάθου κτλ. πάλιν does not mean that Glauco has forgotten twice, but only that he remembered before. The emphasis falls on ἐπελάθου rather than on πάλιν. Plato is thinking of V 466 A, where Glauco says μέμνημαι when challenged on this point. To this explanation, which he gives as an alternative, Schneider inclines to prefer the view which sees in πάλιν a reference directly to IV 419 Aff. But the interlocutor there is Adimantus, not Glauco, and even Adimantus in IV could not strictly be said to forget what Socrates for the first time expressly asserts (IV 420 B οὐ μὴν πρὸς τοῦτο—ἡ πόλις) in reply to Adimantus' difficulties.

νόμῳ is the reading of all the best MSS, and was restored by Schneider for νομοθέτῃ. Law is personified throughout the whole sentence: cf. (with Schneider) Tim. 24 B. νομοθέτῃ gives a good sense, but is weaker than νόμῳ: Law, we feel, is free from selfishness and partiality, but a legislator need not be.

520 A 4 ἐπὶ τὸν ξύνδεσμον is not 'so as to be the bond of the State' (as J. and C. suggest), but 'for binding the city together,' with reference to ξυναρμόττων τοὺς πολίτας. Cf. Laus 921 c.

5 τοῖνυν='further' (I 339 D n.). Socrates has not yet replied to Glauco's indignant ἀδικήσομεν αὐτούς; but proceeds to do so now.

οὐδ' ἀδικήσομεν: (besides what I have just said) we shall not be wronging them either. οὐδέ is used in the same way in Euthyphr. 12 A and Laus 673 c. δέ in οὐδέ cannot mean 'in spite of what you say' (as J. and C. imagine).

520 B 12 ὥσπερ ἐν σμῆνεσιν κτλ. is probably a Socratic comparison: cf. Xen. Cyr. V 1. 24 (quoted by Ast) βασιλεὺς μὲν γὰρ ξιμοιγε δοκεῖς σὺ πεφυκέναι οὐδὲν ἦττον ἢ ὅ ἐν τῷ σμῆνι φερόμενος τῶν μελιττῶν ἡγεμόν. See also Pöhlmann Gesch. d. ant. Komm. p. 134 n.

ο τελεώτερον ἐκείνων πεπαιδευμένους¹ καὶ μᾶλλον δυνατοὺς ἀμφοτέρων μετέχειν. καταβατέον οὖν ἐν μέρει ἐκάστῳ εἰς τὴν τῶν 15 ἄλλων ξυνοίκησιν καὶ συνεθιστέον τὰ σκοτεινὰ θεάσασθαι· ξυνεθιζόμενοι γὰρ μυρίῳ βέλτιον ὄψεσθε τῶν ἐκεῖ καὶ γνώσεσθε ἕκαστα τὰ εἶδωλα ἅττα ἐστὶ καὶ ὧν, διὰ τὸ τἀληθὴ ἐωρακέναι καλῶν τε καὶ δικαίων καὶ ἀγαθῶν πέρι. καὶ οὕτω ὕπαρ ἡμῖν καὶ ὑμῖν ἡ πόλις οἰκήσεται, ἀλλ' οὐκ ὄναρ, ὥς νῦν αἱ πολλαὶ ὑπὸ σκιαμα- 20 χούντων τε πρὸς ἀλλήλους καὶ στασιαζόντων· περὶ τοῦ ἄρχειν οἰκοῦνται, ὥς μεγάλου τινὸς ἀγαθοῦ ὄντος. τὸ δέ που ἀληθὲς ὧδ' ἔχει· ἐν πόλει ἥ ἥκιστα πρόθυμοι ἄρχειν οἱ μέλλοντες ἄρξειν, ταύτην ἄριστα καὶ ἀστασιαστότατα ἀνάγκη οἰκεῖσθαι, τὴν δ' ἐναντίους ἄρχοντας σχοῦσαν ἐναντίως. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. 25 Ἀπειθήσουσιν οὖν ἡμῖν, οἷι, οἱ τρόφιμοι ταῦτ' ἀκούοντες καὶ οὐκ ἐθελήσουσιν ξυμπονεῖν ἐν τῇ πόλει ἕκαστοι ἐν μέρει, τὸν δὲ πολὺν χρόνον μετ' ἀλλήλων οἰκεῖν ἐν τῷ καθαρῷ; Ἀδύνατον, ἔφη.

520 C 14 ἀμφοτέρων: "et publicorum negotiorum et philosophiae" Stallbaum. Cf. Gorg. 485 A ἀλλ', οἶμαι, τὸ ὀρθότατον ἐστὶν ἀμφοτέρων μετασχεῖν. Is the θεωρητικός or the πρακτικός βίος the better? It is clear that the subject was often debated in Plato's time: see the fragments of Euripides' Antiope in Pl. Gorg. 484 E ff. and Arist. Eth. Nic. I 3. 1095^b 17 ff., x 7. 1177^a 12 ff. If we contrast them with each other, Plato would reply, the θεωρητικός easily wins the prize, but under the existing conditions of human nature the best life is a combination of both. The practical statesman must derive his inspiration from θεωρία, and experience of affairs is an advantage as well as a duty to the thinker. Cf. VI 496 D—497 A nn.

16 ξυνεθιζόμενοι κτλ. Cf. 518 A n.

18 εἶδωλα. 517 D n. The word is here used quite generally of all the idols of Plato's cave. "We have risen to a point of view from which the σκευαστά and the σκιάι are included under one notion as εἶδωλα" (J. and C.).

19 ὕπαρ κτλ. Cf. V 476 C. The Homeric line οὐκ ὄναρ, ἀλλ' ὕπαρ ἐσθλόν, ὃ τοι τετελεσμένον ἔσται (Od. 19. 547) is in Plato's mind, though ὕπαρ and ὄναρ are here adverbial accusatives (cf. Cobet *V. L.*² pp. 523 ff.).

20 σκιαμαχούντων: 'fighting about shadows.' See 517 D n. and cf. IX 586 C n. Dreamland is also shadowland.

520 D 23 ἐν πόλει ἥ κτλ. On ἥ for ἐν ἥ see note on ἐν ἅπασιν οἷς ἐστὶ III 402 A. Van Cleef (de attr. in enunt. rel. usu Plat. p. 46) explains the construction as equivalent to ἐν ἡ πόλει, comparing Men. 96 C, which is however (like Tim. 45 D) only an example of inverse attraction.

24 ταύτην: an anacoluthon, as in VI 510 E. For the sentiment see I 347 D n.

25 σχοῦσαν = 'which gets': a gnomic aorist participle. See Goodwin MT. p. 55. Richards conjectures ἐχουσιν, and ἰσχοῦσαν (which appears in the margin of A) has slight MS authority; but the inchoative sense (516 E n.) is better suited to οἱ μέλλοντες ἄρξειν.

27 ἕκαστοι. The plural implies relays of governors relieving one another from time to time: cf. ἐκάστοις in 540 B.

28 μετ' ἀλλήλων κτλ. "Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife." ἐν τῷ καθαρῷ means 'in the undefiled.' The phrase is half-mystical, as καθαρὸν constantly is in Plato. It is natural to think of the myth of the Phaedo (109 B ff. αὐτὴν δὲ τὴν γῆν καθάρην ἐν καθαρῷ κείσθαι τῷ οὐρανῷ), but we should not translate "sub divo" (Ast), nor even "auf der reinen Höhe" (Schneider). Either version is too precise, and ἐν καθαρῷ does not mean sub divo even in Homer. The Ideas in Plato are τὸ καθαρόν: see Phaed. 79 D ἐκέισε οἷχεται εἰς τὸ καθαρὸν τε καὶ αἰεὶ ὄν καὶ ἀθάνατον καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχον.

δίκαια ἡ γὰρ δὴ δικάοις ἐπιτάξομεν. παντὸς μὲν μᾶλλον ὡς ἐπ' Ε 30 ἀναγκαῖον αὐτῶν ἕκαστος εἰσι τὸ ἄρχειν, τούναντίον τῶν νῦν ἐν ἐκάστη πόλει ἀρχόντων. Οὕτω γὰρ ἔχει, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ὧς ἑταῖρε· εἰ μὲν βίον ἐξευρήσεις ἀμείνω τοῦ ἄρχειν τοῖς | μέλλουσιν ἄρξειν, 521 ἔστι σοι δυνατὴ γενέσθαι πόλις εὐ οἰκουμένη· ἐν μόνῃ γὰρ αὐτῇ ἄρξουσιν οἱ τῷ ὄντι πλούσιοι, οὐ χρυσίου, ἀλλ' οὗ δέ τὸν εὐδαίμονα πλουτεῖν, ζωῆς ἀγαθῆς τε καὶ ἔμφορος· εἰ δὲ πτωχοὶ καὶ 5 πεινῶντες ἀγαθῶν ἰδίων ἐπὶ τὰ δημόσια ἴασιν ἐντεῦθεν οἰόμενοι τὰγαθὸν δεῖν ἀρπάζειν, οὐκ ἔστι· περιμάχητον γὰρ τὸ ἄρχειν γιγνόμενον, οἰκεῖος ὢν καὶ ἔνδον ὁ τοιοῦτος πόλεμος αὐτοῦς τε ἀπόλλυσι καὶ τὴν ἄλλην πόλιν. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη. Ἐχεις οὖν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, βίον ἄλλον τινὰ πολιτικῶν ἀρχῶν καταφρονούντα Β 10 ἢ τὸν τῆς ἀληθινῆς φιλοσοφίας; Οὐ μὰ τὸν Δία, ἢ δ' ὅς.
 Ἀλλὰ μέντοι δεῖ γε μὴ ἐραστὰς τοῦ ἄρχειν ἵνα ἐπ' αὐτό· εἰ δὲ μή, οἷ γε ἀντερασταὶ μαχοῦνται. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Τίνας οὖν ἄλλους ἀναγκάσεις ἵνα ἐπὶ φυλακὴν τῆς πόλεως, ἢ οἱ περὶ τούτων τε φρονιμώτατοι, δι' ὧν ἄριστα πόλις οἰκεῖται, ἔχουσὶ τε 15 τιμὰς ἄλλας καὶ βίον ἀμείνω τοῦ πολιτικοῦ; Οὐδέ τις ἄλλους, ἔφη.

12. μαχοῦνται A²H: μάχονται A¹.

13. οἱ II: οἱ A.

520 E 29 παντὸς μὲν κτλ. The πόλις ἀνδρῶν ἀγαθῶν has now been found. That Plato intended to recall the prophecy of I 347 D is clear from the verbal echoes between the two passages. On the absence of the preposition before τὸ ἄρχειν see VIII 553 B n.

521 A 3 οὐ χρυσίου κτλ. Cf. VIII 547 B φύσει ὄντε πλουσίω τὰς ψυχὰς and Phaedr. ad fin. πλούσιον δὲ νομίζοιμι τὸν σοφόν.

4 πτωχοὶ κτλ.: 'men who are poor and an-hungered for lack of goods of their own.' So Schneider and Bosanquet rightly explain the passage. πεινῶν is used almost in its original etymological sense (πεινᾶ from πέν-ης, πέν-ομαι): cf. Xen. Cyr. VII 5. 50 and VIII 3. 39 ὧς μακάριε σὺ τὰ τε ἄλλα καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο, ὅτι ἐκ πένητος πλούσιος γεγένησαι· πολλὸ γὰρ οἶομαι σε καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἦδον πλουτεῖν, ὅτι πεινήσας χρημάτων πεπλούτηκας. The contrast with πλούσιοι, and the presence of πτωχοί, make it easy to catch the meaning. The translation 'hunger after private advantages' (D. and V., Jowett) is in my opinion incorrect.

6 τὰγαθόν 'their good' (Bosanquet), hardly 'the chief good' (Jowett). Not possessing any ἴδια ἀγαθὰ in the shape of virtue, they are fain to make up for it at the expense of the State.

περιμάχητον κτλ. For the construction cf. (with J. and C.) Phaedr. 69 b.

521 B 11 τοῦ ἄρχειν is personified and ἵνα ἐπ' αὐτό should be translated 'woo her.' Cf. VI 489 D n.

13 οἱ κτλ. The copula is rarely omitted in a relative clause except in statements of proportion like Gorg. 465 c. An example occurs in II 370 E: see also Kühner-Blass Gr. Gr. II 1, p. 41. We ought not to revert to the old reading οὔτε for οἱ περὶ (with q and E. S. Thompson, Cambr. Phil. Soc. Proc. XXI p. 14, who also suggests οὔτε περὶ), even if—which is far from clear—ὅσπερ can, as Thompson says, dispense with the copula more easily than ὅς.

521 C—523 A We have next to consider how we can lead our guardians up into the light. The studies which we require are such as will tend to draw the soul from Becoming to Being, and are at the same time of some practical utility in war. Our earlier training in gymnastic and music will not serve the purpose; nor yet will the mechanical arts. What do you say to Number and Calculation, which enter into every art and science? Their importance in strategy is obvious, and we shall find that they do emphatically, if rightly used, lead the soul towards Intelligence and Being.

C VI. Βούλει οὖν τοῦτ' ἤδη σκοπῶμεν, τίνα τρόπον οἱ τοιοῦτοι ἐγγενησονται, καὶ πῶς τις ἀνάξει αὐτοὺς εἰς φῶς, ὥσπερ ἐξ Ἰδίου λέγονται δὴ τινες εἰς θεοὺς ἀνελθεῖν; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ βούλομαι; ἔφη. Τοῦτο δὴ, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐκ ὀστράκου ἀν εἶη περιστροφή, ἀλλὰ ψυχῆς 20 περιαγωγή ἐκ νυκτερινῆς τινος ἡμέρας εἰς ἀληθινὴν, τοῦ οὗτος

17. σκοπῶμεν A²Π: σκοποῖμεν A¹.

521 c ff. For Plato's theory of the higher education see Appendix II on 'The Propædæutic Studies of the Republic' and Appendix III on 'Dialectic.'

19 λέγονται δὴ τινες κτλ. With εἰς θεοὺς ἀνελθεῖν cf. Plut. de ser. num. vind. 566 A ἔλεγε δὲ ταύτη τὸν Διόνυσον εἰς θεοὺς ἀνελθεῖν. If Plato's words are to be taken in their full significance, we can hardly (with J. and C.) suppose that the allusion is to Heracles, Pollux etc., for Heracles' descent to Hades was an incident which happened long before his ascent to Heaven; and Pollux's life among the gods was intermittent. Cf. Schneider in his translation p. 304 n. 187. Schneider himself suggests that Plato is thinking of legends about e.g. Aesculapius' deliverance from Hades, after Zeus had smitten him (cf. III 408 c and Roscher's Lexicon d. Mythologie I p. 620), and others have thought of Briareos and the ἐκατόγχειροι: see Il. I 402—405 and cf. Hes. Theog. 617—721. Mr Walter Headlam has pointed out to me that Semele was also raised from Hades to Heaven, citing Paus. II 31. 2 and ib. 37. 5: cf. also Plut. I c. Διόνυσον εἰς θεοὺς ἀνελθεῖν καὶ τὴν Σεμέλην ἀνάγειν ὕπερον. These examples are certainly more to the point. It is worthy of remark that Justin Martyr in a remarkable passage of his Apologia pro Christianis speaks of the ascent of Asclepius and others into Heaven as Pagan parallels to the Christian doctrine of the Ascension: Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν—σταυρωθέντα καὶ ἀποθανόντα καὶ ἀναστάντα ἀνελθόντα εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, οὐ παρὰ τοὺς παρ' ὑμῶν λεγόμενους υἱοὺς τῷ Διὶ καὶ τὸν φέρομεν. πόσους γὰρ υἱοὺς φάσκουσιν τοῦ Διὸς οἱ παρ' ὑμῶν τιμῶμενοι συγγραφεῖς ἐπίστασθε, Ἑρμῆν μὲν λόγον τὸν ἐρμηνευτικόν καὶ πάντων διδάσκαλον· Ἀσκληπιὸν δὲ καὶ θεραπευτὴν γενόμενον, κεραυνωθέντα, ἀνελθόντα εἰς οὐρανόν· Διόνυσον δὲ διασπαρχθέντα κτλ. (I. c. I 21: cf. also Dialogus cum Tryphone 69). I was once half inclined to suspect that the clause ὥσπερ ἐξ Ἰδίου—ἀνελθεῖν (although it appears in all MSS) might be an early satirical adscript by some Pagan scribe on the doctrine of our Lord's descent into Hell, and subsequent resurrection and ascent into Heaven. τινες might well be a specific allusion (518 B n.), and there is more than a suspicion of satire in δὴ. But I have no longer any doubt that the text is sound.

20 ὀστράκου—περιστροφή. On the different interpretations given by the ancients of this proverb see App. VI. The proverb is derived from the game of ὀστρακινὰ, the authorities for which are cited by Grasberger Erziehung u. Unterricht I pp. 57—60. The players were divided into two parties, separated by a line. A shell, black on one side, and white on the other, was thrown on the ground by one of the boys, who shouted νῆξ ἡμέρα or νῆξ ἡμέρα, 'Heads or Tails,' as he threw it. According as the white or black fell uppermost, one side ran away and the other gave chase. Plato means that education is not, like the 'spinning of a coin,' an affair of no consequence, to be settled off-hand, and by chance, but a slow and laborious scientific process, dealing with the gravest of all possible issues. See also App. VI.

ψυχῆς περιαγωγή κτλ.: 'the turning round of a soul from a day which is as night into the true day, that is, the ascent into Being' (not the tarrying in γιγνόμενον, which is the νυκτερινὴ ἡμέρα). In νυκτερινῆς τινος ἡμέρας (for which see 520 c n.), Plato, more suo, plays on the οὔσαν ἐπάνοδον, ἣν δὴ φιλοσοφίαν ἀληθῆ φήσομεν εἶναι. Πάνν μὲν οὖν. Οὐκοῦν δεῖ σκοπεῖσθαι, τί τῶν μαθημάτων ἔχει τοιαύτην ὁ δύναμιν; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Τί ἂν οὖν εἴη, ὃ Γλαύκων, μάθημα ψυχῆς D 25 ὁλκὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ γιγνομένου ἐπὶ τὸ ὄν; τόδε δ' ἐννοῶ λέγων ἅμα· οὐκ ἀθλητὰς μέντοι πολέμου ἔφαμεν τούτους ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι νέους ὄντας; Ἐφαμεν γάρ. Δεῖ ἄρα καὶ τοῦτο προσέχειν τὸ μάθημα, ὃ ζητοῦμεν, πρὸς ἐκείνῳ. Τὸ ποῖον; Μὴ ἄχρηστον πολεμικοῖς ἀνδράσιν εἶναι. Δεῖ μέντοι, ἔφη, εἴπερ οἶόν τε. Γυμναστικῇ ὁ μὴν E 30 καὶ μουσικῇ ἐν γε τῷ πρόσθεν ἐπαιδεύοντο ἡμῖν. Ἦν ταῦτα, ἔφη. Γυμναστικῇ μὲν που περὶ γιγνόμενον καὶ ἀπολλύμενον τετεύτακεν· σώματος γὰρ αὔξης καὶ φθίσεως ἐπιστατεῖ. Φαίνεται.

7181

 Τοῦτο μὲν δὴ οὐκ ἂν εἴη ὃ ζητοῦμεν μάθημα. | Οὐ γάρ. Ἄλλ' 522 ἄρα μουσικῇ ὅσῃν τὸ πρότερον διήλθομεν; Ἄλλ' ἦν ἐκείνη γ', ἔφη, ἀντίστροφος τῆς γυμναστικῆς, εἰ μέμνησαι, ἔθεσι παιδεύουσα τοὺς φύλακας, κατὰ τε ἁρμονίαν εὐαρμοσίαν τινά, οὐκ ἐπιστήμην, 5 παραδιδούσα, καὶ κατὰ ῥυθμὸν εὐρυθμίαν, ἐν τε τοῖς λόγοις ἕτερα τούτων ἀδελφά, ἔφη, ἅττα ἔχουσα, καὶ ὅσοι μυθῶδεις τῶν λόγων

29. γυμναστικῇ—μουσικῇ II: γυμναστικῇ—μουσικῇ A.

exclamation 'νῦξ ἡμέρα': cf. IV 422 D, E nn. (It may be noted that Plato's adaptation is from νῦξ ἡμέρα rather than from νῦξ ἡ ἡμέρα.) The words τοῦ ὄντος—ἐπάνοδον explain the figure, οὔσαν 'that is' being used as in φορὰν οὔσαν βάθους 528 D. The daylight in which the ἀπαιδεύτος lives is darkness; the true day is the ascent of the soul out of the ὄρατόν and δοξαστόν into the νοητόν: cf. 517 B τὴν δὲ ἄνω ἀνάβασιν καὶ θέαν τῶν ἄνω τὴν εἰς τὸν νοητὸν τόπον τῆς ψυχῆς ἀνοδὸν τιθεὶς οὐχ ἀμαρτῆσαι τῆς γ' ἐμῆς ἐπιόδου. This and this alone is true philosophy. The phrase τὴν τοῦ ὄντος ἐπάνοδον is copied by Alcinous from Plato (Isag. p. 7 ed. Hermann). Cf. also Clement Strom. v 14 p. 196 Migne ψυχῆς περιαγωγή ἐκ νυκτερινῆς τινος ἡμέρας εἰς ἀληθινὴν τοῦ ὄντος (vv. 11. ὄντος and ὄντως ὄντος) οὔσαν ἐπάνοδον κτλ. Other views on the text and interpretation of this passage are discussed in App. VI.

521 D 26 μέντοι. For μέντοι in questions see on I 339 B.

ἔφαμεν. Cf. III 403 E, 416 D and VIII 543 B.

27 δεῖ ἄρα κτλ. The subject of προσέχειν is τὸ μάθημα δὲ ζητοῦμεν: its object is τοῦτο. With προσέχειν 'insuper habere' (a rare use) cf. προσγενέσθαι II 375 E n.

521 E 30 ἐν γε τῷ πρόσθεν. II 376 E ff.

32 τετεύτακεν, τευτάζων· πραγματενόμενος, ἐνδιατρίβων (Tim. Lex. s.v., where Ruhnken elaborately illustrates the word. See also Stephanus-Hase Thest. s.v.). τευτάζω is always, I believe, semi-contemptuous in Plato (Phil. 56 E, Tim. 90 B). Brugmann's connexion of the word with σεύω (Vergl. Gr. I p. 362) may not be right, but the notion that τευτάζω is for ταυτάζω (L. and S.) is certainly wrong.

522 A 2 ὅσῃν κτλ. There is (as J. and C. remind us) a sense in which φιλοσοφία itself is μουσική: cf. III 403 C n. and VI 499 D.

3 ἀντίστροφος κτλ. is best explained by III 410 C—412 A, and κατὰ τε ἁρμονίαν—εὐρυθμίαν by III 400 D, E.

5 τοῖς λόγοις. II 377 ff., III 392 A ff.

6 ἔφη is repeated as in Phaed. 78 A: cf. I 348 D n. and VIII 557 C, Euthyd. 296 D (ἦν δ' ἐγὼ repeated). Here "iteratum ἔφη—ethicam, ut ita dicam, vim habet" (Schneider). I formerly omitted the word (with Flor. T), but now believe it genuine. ἔθη (II², v and two other MSS, καὶ ὅσοι ἀληθινώτεροι ἦσαν. μάθημα δὲ πρὸς τοιοῦτόν τι ἀγαθόν, οἷον σὺ νῦν ζητεῖς, οὐδὲν ἦν¹ ἐν αὐτῇ. Ἀκριβέστατα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀναμνησκεις με· τῷ γὰρ ὄντι τοιοῦτον οὐδὲν εἶχεν. ἀλλ', ὃ δαιμόνιε Πλάκων, τί ἂν εἴη τοιοῦτον; αἱ τε γὰρ τέχναι βάνανσοί¹⁰ που ἵπασαι ἔδοξαν εἶναι. Πῶς δ' οὐ; καὶ μὴν τί ἔτ' ἄλλο λείπεται μάθημα, μουσικῆς καὶ γυμναστικῆς καὶ τῶν τεχνῶν κεχωρισμένον; Φέρε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, εἰ μὴδὲν ἔτι ἐκτὸς τούτων ἔχομεν λαβεῖν, τῶν ἐπὶ πάντα τεινόντων τι λάβωμεν. Τὸ ποῖον;¹ Οἷον τοῦτο τὸ κοινόν, ὃ πᾶσαι προσχρῶνται τέχναι τε καὶ διάνοιαι¹⁵ καὶ ἐπιστήμαι, ὃ καὶ παντὶ ἐν πρώτοις ἀνάγκη μανθάνειν. Ποῖον; ἔφη. Τὸ φαῦλον τοῦτο, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ ἐν τε καὶ τὰ δύο καὶ τὰ τρία διαγιγνώσκειν· λέγω δὲ αὐτὸ ἐν κεφαλαίῳ ἀριθμόν τε καὶ λογισμόν. ἢ οὐχ οὕτω περὶ τούτων ἔχει, ὥς πᾶσα τέχνη τε καὶ ἐπιστήμη ἀναγκάζεται αὐτῶν μέτοχος γίγνεσθαι; Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη.²⁰ Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἡ πολεμικῆ; Πολλή, ἔφη, ἀνάγκη. Παγ-

D γέλοιον γοῦν, ἔφη, στρατηγὸν Ἀγαμέμνονα ἐν ταῖς τραγωδίαις

12. κεχωρισμένον A²Π: κεχωρισμένων A¹.

with Eusebius Praep. Ev. XIV 13. 3) is unsuitable in point of sense, and also because of ἅττα.

7 ἀληθινώτεροι: not = 'more true' but 'true on the other hand.' The comparative only points the contrast with μυθώδεις: cf. Homer's well-known γυναικῶν θηλυτεράων.

πρὸς τοιοῦτόν τι κτλ.: 'useful for any such purpose as you now require.' ἀγαθόν goes with πρὸς: cf. with Schneider Xen. Mem. IV 6. 10 ἂρ' οὖν τοὺς μὲν ἀγαθοὺς πρὸς τὰ δεινὰ καὶ ἐπικίνδυνα ὄντας ἀνδρείους ἡγεῖ εἶναι, τοὺς δὲ κακοὺς δειλοὺς; The words οἷον—ζητεῖς are equivalent to πρὸς οἷον—ζητεῖς sc. μάθημα ἀγαθὸν εἶναι: cf. ἐν πόλει ἦ = ἐν πόλει ἐν ᾧ (520 D n.), and (for ζητεῖς with infinitive) IV 443 B. The Oxford editors connect ἀγαθόν with τοιοῦτον and not with μάθημα, referring οἷον σὺ νῦν ζητεῖς 'probably to μάθημα'—a highly unnatural interpretation, because it separates οἷον from τοιοῦτον, and leaves πρὸς out in the cold. ἄγον (γρ II and Eusebius l. c.) for ἀγαθόν is an obvious but wholly unnecessary 'emendation.' The present passage is Plato's authoritative statement of the relation between his two curricula of education. The aim of the first is morality, and its method habituation; in the second knowledge is attained by a scientific discipline. Cf. II 376 E, VI 502 E III.

522 B 10 αἱ τε κτλ. On τε used ἀνακολουθῶς see II 373 B n. "Quid addere Socrates in animo habuerit, Glauconis intercipiens verba docent: καὶ μὴν τί ἔτ' ἄλλο λείπεται μάθημα" (Schneider).

11 ἔδοξαν. VI 495 D.

522 C 15 διάνοιαι scarcely means the mathematical sciences here, as J. and C. suggest, but simply 'modes of thought': cf. VI 511 D n. Plato does not, I believe, use the plural of διάνοια in its peculiar technical sense, and in any case such a meaning is here unsuitable.

17 τὸ ἐν τε κτλ. Cf. Laws 818 C μήτε ἐν μήτε δύο μήτε τρία μήθ' ὅλως ἄρτια καὶ περιττὰ δυνάμενος γινώσκειν, μηδὲ ἀριθμεῖν τὸ παράπαν εἰδώς and [Epin.] 977 C.

18 ἀριθμόν τε καὶ λογισμόν. See on λογιστικὴ τε καὶ ἀριθμητικὴ 525 A.

522 D 22 ἐν ταῖς τραγωδίαις κτλ. Plato speaks as if he were bored to death by Palamedes' damnable iteration. Plays on the subject of Palamedes were written by all three dramatists (see the fragments of Aeschylus 180 ff., Sophocles 426 ff., Euripides 582 ff. Dindorf), and the invention of number or the like is ascribed

Παλαμῆδης ἐκάστοτε ἀποφαίνει. ἥ οὐκ ἐννεύοηκας, ὅτι φῆσιν ἀριθμὸν εὐρὼν τῆς τε τάξεις τῷ στρατοπέδῳ καταστήσαι ἐν Ἰλίῳ 25 καὶ ἐξαριθμῆσαι ναῦς τε καὶ τᾶλλα πάντα, ὡς πρὸ τοῦ ἀναριθμήτων ὄντων καὶ τοῦ Ἀγαμέμνονος, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐδ' ὅσους πόδας εἶχεν εἰδότος, εἴπερ ἀριθμεῖν μὴ ἡπίστατο; καίτοι ποῖον τιν' αὐτὸν οἶε στρατηγὸν εἶναι; Ἄτοπόν τιν', ἔφη, ἔγωγε, εἰ ἦν τοῦτ' ἀληθές.

VII. Ἄλλο τι οὖν, ἥ ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μάθημα ἀναγκαῖον πολεμικῷ Ε 30 ἀνδρὶ θήσομεν καὶ λογίζεσθαι τε καὶ ἀριθμεῖν δύνασθαι; Πάντων γ', ἔφη, μάλιστα, εἰ καὶ ὅτιοῦν μέλλει τάξεων ἐπαίειν, μᾶλλον δ' εἰ καὶ ἄνθρωπος ἔσσεσθαι. Ἐννοεῖς οὖν, εἶπον, περὶ τοῦτο τὸ μάθημα ὅπερ ἐγώ; Τὸ ποῖον; Κινδυνεύει τῶν πρὸς τὴν νόησιν ἀγόντων φύσει εἶναι ὧν ζητοῦμεν, χρῆσθαι δ' οὐδεὶς αὐτῷ 523 ὀρθῶς, ἐλκτικῷ ὄντι παντάπασιν πρὸς οὐσίαν. Πῶς, ἔφη, λέγεις; Ἐγὼ πειράσομαι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τό γ' ἐμοὶ δοκοῦν δηλώσαι. ἂ γὰρ to him by Aesch. l.c. Soph. Fr. 379 and Eur. l.c. Aeschylus also gives Prometheus the credit of the discovery (P. V. 459 f.).

27 καίτοι κτλ. 'Well, what d'ye think of Agamemnon for a general now?' καίτοι (lit. 'and yet' sc. if this was true) is often thus used to introduce a question 'cum quadam indignatione' (real or, as here, feigned); for examples see Kugler de part. toi ap. Pl. p. 18. ποῖον τινα is derivative, as ποῖος constantly is: see on 1330 A. D. and V.'s translation "Yet what do you think of Agamemnon as a general?" misses the ἥθος of the original, which is correctly reproduced by Schneider and Jowett.

522 E 30 καὶ λογίζεσθαι τε κτλ. καὶ 'also,' because "et aliarum rerum et arithmetices peritum imperatorem esse decet" (Schneider). Cf. VI 506 A. The word is omitted by II' 7 E and some other MSS. καὶ may of course be spurious, but it was not likely to have been added by a scribe, and the balance of MS evidence is in its favour. The other variants (ἥ and ἥ τό and μᾶλλον ἥ in place of καὶ) are corruptions due to the erroneous idea that ἄλλο τι is 'any other' and not 'nonne.'

31 μᾶλλον δὲ κτλ. μᾶλλον δὲ is 'vel potius,' as usual. ἄνθρωπος = 'human being,' not 'anything of a man' (D. and V.), which suggests an entirely wrong idea. We may compare the Latin use of homo, for example in Cic. ad Quint. II 11. 5 "sed cum veneris, virum te putabo, si Sallusti Empedoclea legeris: hominem non putabo." For the sense cf. Laus 819 D, where the Greek ignorance of arithmetic appears to Plato οὐκ ἀνθρώπινον ἀλλὰ ὑγνῶν τινῶν εἶναι μᾶλλον θρεμμάτων. The knowledge of number is one of the characteristic differences between man and the lower animals: see Tim. 39 B and [Epin.] 978 C.

523 A 1 φύσει belongs to ἀγόντων (Schneider) rather than to εἶναι (Stallbaum and others), as is clear from the antithesis χρῆσθαι δ' οὐδεὶς αὐτῷ ὀρθῶς (explained in 525 C).

3 τό γ' ἐμοὶ δοκοῦν. Cf. 517 B n. Plato is careful to eschew the appearance of dogmatism, even where his convictions are most profound.

523 A—524 C I distinguish (says Socrates) between two classes of perceptions, those which stimulate the intellect, and those which do not. To the former belong all such sense-presentations as are self-contradictory. We have here, for example, three fingers. Sight tells us that each is a finger. So far there is no contradiction and the intellect is not roused. But it is otherwise with size and smallness, thickness and thinness, and the like. The perception which reports that such-and-such a thing is hard frequently tells us that it is also soft, and the same, mutatis mutandis, may be said of all perceptions which deal with relative qualities of this kind. In such cases the soul is perplexed, and appeals to the intellect for help. The intellect, promptly respondδιαιροῦμαι παρ' ἑμαυτῷ ἀγωγὰ τε εἶναι οἱ λέγομεν καὶ μὴ, ξυνθεατῆς γεγόμενος ξύμφαθι ἢ ἄπειπε, ἵνα καὶ τοῦτο σαφέστερον 5 ἴδωμεν εἰ ἔστιν οἶον μαντεύομαι. Δείκνυ', ἔφη. Δείκνυμι δὴ, εἶπον, εἰ καθορᾶς, τὰ μὲν ἐν ταῖς αἰσθήσεσιν οὐ παρακαλοῦντα

B τὴν νόησιν εἰς ἐπίσκεψιν, ὡς ἱκανῶς ὑπὸ τῆς αἰσθήσεως κρινόμενα, τὰ δὲ παντάπασι διακελευόμενα ἐκείνην ἐπισκέψασθαι, ὡς τῆς αἰσθήσεως οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς ποιούσης. Τὰ πόρρωθεν, ἔφη, φαινόμενα 10 δῆλον ὅτι λέγεις καὶ τὰ ἐσκιαγραφημένα. Οὐ πάννυ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἔτυχες οὐ λέγω. Ποῖα μὲν, ἔφη, λέγεις; Τὰ μὲν οὐ παρακα-C λοῦντα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅσα μὴ ἐκβαίνει εἰς ἐναντίαν αἴσθησιν ἅμα· τὰ δ' ἐκβαίνοντα ὡς παρακαλοῦντα τίθημι, ἐπειδὴν ἡ αἴσθησις μὴδὲν ing, apprehends 'great' and 'small' (for example) as distinct and separate from one another, unlike the senses, by which they were seen together and in confusion. It is thus that we are first led to ask 'What is the great?' 'What is the small?'

523 B ff. In this section of the Republic, Plato ascribes the originating impulse of his intellectual discipline to the stimulus supplied by the self-contradictory evidence of sense-perception. On the connexion of this principle with earlier Greek philosophy see 523 C n., and on the aim and scope of Plato's theory of Education as a whole App. II.

8 ὡς ἱκανῶς κτλ. is taken by Krohn (Pl. Fr. p. 91) as excluding the possibility of Ideas of concrete things. Such an inference is unwarranted. ἱκανῶς, 'adequately' 'satisfactorily' (cf. E below), does not imply that sensation can apprehend everything there is to know about e.g. a finger, but merely that in the case of a finger etc., sensible perception is as a rule all that we demand: we are not impelled to summon νόησις to our aid. Even the perception of a finger may awaken the intelligence, and in such cases we shall be led to the Idea of finger (523 D n.).

9 ὡς τῆς αἰσθήσεως κτλ. On αἰσθήσεως see 523 C n. ποιούσης has been doubted by Ast, who conjectures νοούσης; "sed αἰσθήσεως non est νοεῖν" (Schneider). The Greek means 'produces no sound result,' "nichts zuverlässiges giebt" (Schneider): the product of sensation is, in such cases, ἔπουλον or νοσῶδες. For οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς metaphorically used c. Phaed. 90 E and (with Schneider) Ar. Plut.

50, 355 (πρὸς ἀνδρὸς οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς ἐστ' εἰργασμένον).

10 τὰ πόρρωθεν κτλ. readily suggest themselves to Glauco, for they were familiar examples of optical delusion in the Platonic school: cf. (for πόρρωθεν φαινόμενα) Prot. 356 C, Theaet. 191 B, infra X 602 C ff., and (for ἐσκιαγραφημένα) II 365 C n.

523 C 13 αἴσθησιν. Strictly speaking, of course, αἴσθησις by itself does not, and cannot, present us with a judgment of any kind. It merely furnishes a particular sensation, which is referred to our mental picture of the objects in question, and the resulting judgment is not αἴσθησις, but δόξα, which is, according to Plato, a combination of μνήμη and αἴσθησις (see Phil. 38 B ff. with Bury's notes). And in point of fact, the sort of contradictory judgments which are here ascribed to the initial step in the psychological process, viz. αἴσθησις (524 A), have already been attributed to δόξα in V 479 B—479 E. We have already seen that Plato throughout the whole of this part of the Republic is not careful to distinguish between αἰσθητόν (especially ὁρατόν) and δοξαστόν (VI 510 A n.); and the same tendency shews itself again here. But in this part of the dialogue, Plato's argument is no way affected by his imperfect analysis of the psychological process involved in such a judgment as 'This is a finger.' The relevant consideration is that in such cases the intellect is not, as a rule, aroused, and this is equally true whether we regard the judgment as an act of αἴσθησις alone or as the joint product of αἴσθησις and μνήμη.

- 15 μᾶλλον τοῦτο ἢ τὸ ἐναντίον δηλοῖ, εἴτ' ἐγγύθεν προσπίπτουσα εἴτε πόρρωθεν. ὧδε δὲ ἂ λέγω σαφέστερον εἴσει. οὗτοι, φαμέν, τρεῖς ἂν εἶεν δάκτυλοι, ὃ τε σμικρότατος καὶ ὁ δεύτερος καὶ ὁ μέσος. Πάνυ γ', ἔφη. Ὡς ἐγγύθεν τοῖνυν ὁρωμένους λέγοντός μου διανοοῦ. ἀλλὰ μοι περὶ αὐτῶν τόδε σκόπει. Τὸ ποῖον; Δάκτυλος μὲν 20 αὐτῶν φαίνεται ὁμοίως ἕκαστος, ¹ καὶ ταύτῃ γε οὐδὲν διαφέρει, εἴαν D τε ἐν μέσῳ ὁράται εἴαν τ' ἐν ἐσχάτῳ, εἴαν τε λευκὸς εἴαν τε μέλας, εἴαν τε παχὺς εἴαν τε λεπτός, καὶ πᾶν ὃ τι τοιοῦτον. ἐν πᾶσι γὰρ τούτοις οὐκ ἀναγκάζεται τῶν πολλῶν ἡ ψυχὴ τὴν νόησιν ἐπερέσθαι, τί ποτ' ἔστι δάκτυλος· οὐδαμοῦ γὰρ ἡ ὄψις αὐτῇ ἅμα ἐσήμηνεν 25 τὸν δάκτυλον τοῦναντίον ἢ δάκτυλον εἶναι. Οὐ γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, εἰκότως τό γε τοιοῦτον νοήσεως οὐκ ἂν παρακλητικὸν οὐδ' ¹ ἐγερτικὸν εἴη. Εἰκότως. Τί δὲ δῆ; τὸ μέγεθος E αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν σμικρότητα ἡ ὄψις ἄρα ἰκανῶς ὁρᾷ, καὶ οὐδὲν αὐτῇ διαφέρει ἐν μέσῳ τινὰ αὐτῶν κείσθαι ἢ ἐπ' ἐσχάτῳ; καὶ ὡσαύτως 30 πᾶχος καὶ λεπτότητα ἢ μαλακότητα καὶ σκληρότητα ἢ ἀφ' ἣ; καὶ

15 εἴτ' ἐγγύθεν κτλ. (like ὡς ἐγγύθεν etc. below) is said to prevent misapprehension, in view of Glauco's τὰ πόρρωθεν etc. in B.

16 ὧδε δὲ κτλ. The best commentary on the following exposition is Phaed. 101 A ff., especially 102 B ff.: cf. also Theaet. 154 C. These passages should be carefully read in connexion with the view enunciated here. I have endeavoured to explain some of the wider bearings of Plato's principle in a pamphlet on Classical Education published by Deighton, Bell and Co. 1895; see also App. II and Nettle-ship Hellen. pp. 152 ff. We should bear in mind that the antithesis of ἐν and πολλά was the fons et origo of Greek philosophy, and runs throughout its entire history. In Plato's time the question had become acute in connexion particularly with the problem of predication, and it was in trying to solve this special form of the antinomy that Plato devised his theory of Ideas. Nothing could be more natural or just than that his philosopher-kings should receive their first scientific impulse from the problem which had proved so great an intellectual stimulus in the past, and which had also led Plato himself to the goal whither he would have his guardians arrive, the contemplation of the Idea.

523 D 20 εἴαντε ἐν μέσῳ κτλ.:

i.e. εἴαν τε ἐν μέσῳ ἢ ὁ ὁρώμενος κτλ. This is said with reference to their size: cf. E below and Phaed. 102 B, C, where the difficulty is explained by the theory of Ideas. Thus b is both great and small, great relatively to a, small relatively to c. Similarly with the other antinomies. The Philebus dismisses such puzzles as τὰ δεδημευμένα τῶν θαυμασῶν περὶ τὸ ἐν καὶ πολλά (14 D)—an indication perhaps of the priority in date of the Republic (cf. VI 505 C n. and Jackson in J. Ph. x pp. 263 ff.).

23 ἀναγκάζεται is said of the 'Drang nach Wahrheit': cf. 524 C, E, 525 D and 518 E ff. It is not the 'nature' of Soul to acquiesce in falsehood: for man is an οὐράνιον φυτὸν, οὐκ ἐγγεῖον (IV 443 B n.).

τῶν πολλῶν. Some exceptional natures, who are endowed with an uncommon share of noble curiosity, may find intellectual stimulus even in perceptions such as these: cf. 523 B n. Ast, who missed the point, wanted to excise the phrase. Herwerden seriously proposes <μὰ> τὸν Ἀπόλλω.

24 οὐδαμοῦ: 'at no stage' viz. in the psychological process, not exactly 'never' (as Jowett, D. and V. etc.).

αἱ ἄλλαι αἰσθήσεις ἀρ' οὐκ ἐνδεῶς τὰ τοιαῦτα δηλοῦσιν; ἡ ὥδε
 4 ποιεῖ ἐκάστη αὐτῶν· πρῶτον | μὲν ἡ ἐπὶ τῷ σκληρῷ τεταγμένη αἰσθησις ἡνάγκασται καὶ ἐπὶ τῷ μαλακῷ τετίχθαι, καὶ παραγέλλει τῇ ψυχῇ ὡς ταῦτόν σκληρόν τε καὶ μαλακὸν αἰσθανομένη; Οὕτως, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀναγκαῖον ἐν τοῖς τοιοῦτοις αὐ τὴν ψυχὴν ἀπορεῖν, τί ποτε σημαίνει αὕτη ἡ αἰσθησις τὸ σκληρόν, 5 εἶπερ τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ μαλακὸν λέγει, καὶ ἡ τοῦ κούφου καὶ ἡ τοῦ βαρέος, τί τὸ κούφον καὶ βαρὺ. εἰ τό τε βαρὺ κούφον καὶ τὸ κούφον B βαρὺ σημαίνει; ¹ Καὶ γάρ, ἔφη, αὐταί γε ἄτοποι τῇ ψυχῇ αἱ ἐρμηνεῖαι καὶ ἐπισκέψεως δεόμεναι. Εἰκότως ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐν τοῖς τοιοῦτοις πρῶτον μὲν πειρᾶται λογισμὸν τε καὶ νόησιν ψυχῇ 10 παρακαλοῦσα ἐπισκοπεῖν, εἴτε ἐν εἴτε δύο ἐστὶν ἕκαστα τῶν εἰσαγγελλομένων. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Οὐκοῦν ἐὰν δύο φαίνεται, ἕτερόν τε καὶ

524 A 2 παραγέλλει κτλ.: 'intimates to the soul that the same thing is both hard and soft when it perceives it to be so.' With παραγέλλει (needlessly suspected by Stephanus) cf. Tim. 70 B τοῦ λόγου παραγγείλαντος ὡς τις ἄδικος περὶ αὐτὰ γίγνεται πρᾶξις. The English translators, together with Schneider, appear to take ὡς with αἰσθανομένη ('that it feels the same thing to be both hard and soft' D. and V.). But such a construction is difficult (cf. Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 652) and the meaning scarcely satisfactory. It should be remembered that touch does not always report that an object is both hard and soft, but only when it feels the object hard in relation to one thing and soft in relation to another, and similarly in other cases. This limitation is expressed by αἰσθανομένη (as well as by ἐν τοῖς τοιοῦτοις), and explains its emphatic position. I have sometimes thought that <οὕτως> should be added after αἰσθανομένη, but the object can be supplied from ὡς—μαλακόν. Prantl understands the construction in somewhat the same way as I do.

5 ἀπορεῖν. The word is Socratic: see on 515 D. It is worthy of note that Plato, like Socrates, makes intellectual ἀπορία the beginning of Education. See App. II.

αὕτη ἡ αἰσθησις means 'this present sensation,' not the sense of touch in general, and similarly with ἡ τοῦ κούφου κτλ., which J. and C. erroneously understand as a special sense, apparently 'the same which modern philosophers call the sense of resistance.' But Plato nowhere recognises any such sense, and if he did, he would call it ἡ τοῦ κούφου καὶ βαρέος, and not ἡ τοῦ κούφου καὶ ἡ τοῦ βαρέος. The parallel in τί ποτε σημαίνει—λέγει shews that Plato means: 'what do the sensation of light and the sensation of heavy mean by light and heavy, if they indicate, the one that the heavy is light and the other that the light is heavy?' The last clause contains an elegant chiasmus. Schneider understands αὕτη ἡ αἰσθησις as ἡ αἰσθησις τοῦ σκληροῦ, but it is better taken as deictic: cf. 516 B, 523 C. Otherwise his view agrees with mine.

524 B 8 ἄτοποι. Herwerden's ἄποροι is an elegant conjecture, in view of ἀπορεῖν in A and 524 E; but the text is more forcible.

9 ἐρμηνεῖαι = 'communications,' not 'interpretations,' as D. and V. translate. αἰσθησις is as it were the ἐρμηνεύς καὶ ἄγγελος (Crat. 407 E) between the object of the perception and the soul: cf. παραγέλλει in A.

10 λογισμόν. See on λογιστικῷ 525 B.

12 οὐκοῦν ἐὰν κτλ. Thus: Perception reports 'This finger' (let us say) 'is big-and-little.' Thereupon the soul is puzzled (ἀπορεῖ), and calls in νόησις. If big-and-little appear (viz. to νόησις) not one but two, then each of them appears distinct from the other, and one: cf. V 476 A and Parm. 143 D. 'Accordingly—if each appears one, and both together two—νόησις, conceiving as it does of two (τά γε δύο), will conceive of them as separate; for otherwise it would ἐν ἑκάτερον φαίνεται; Ναί. Εἰ ἄρα ἐν ἑκάτερον, ἀμφότερα δὲ δύο, τά γε δύο κεχωρισμένα νοήσει· οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἀχώριστά γε δύο 15 ἐνόει, ἄλλ' ἓν. Ὁρθῶς. Μέγα μὴν καὶ ὄψις καὶ σμικρὸν ἑώρα, C φασκόμεν, ἀλλ' οὐ κεχωρισμένον, ἀλλὰ συγκεχυμένον τι. ἦ γάρ; Ναί.

 Διὰ δὲ τὴν τοῦτου σαφῆνειαν μέγα αὖ καὶ σμικρὸν ἢ νόησις ἡναγ-κάσθη ἰδεῖν, οὐ συγκεχυμένα, ἀλλὰ διωρισμένα, τοῦναντίον ἢ κείνη.
 Ἀληθῆ. Οὐκοῦν ἐντεῦθεν ποθεν πρῶτον ἐπέρχεται ἐρέσθαι ἡμῖν, 20 τί οὖν ποτ' ἔστι τὸ μέγα αὖ καὶ τὸ σμικρὸν; Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν.
 Καὶ οὕτω δὴ τὸ μὲν νοητόν, τὸ δ' ὁρατόν ἐκαλέσαμεν. Ὁρθότατ', D ἔφη.

VIII. Ταῦτα τοίνυν καὶ ἄρτι ἐπεχείρουν λέγειν, ὥς τὰ μὲν παρακλητικά τῆς διανοίας ἐστί, τὰ δὲ οὐ, ἃ μὲν εἰς τὴν αἴσθησιν 25 ἴμα τοῖς ἐναντίοις ἑαυτοῖς ἐμπίπτει, παρακλητικά ὀριζόμενος, ὅσα δὲ μή, οὐκ ἐγερτικά τῆς νοήσεως. Μανθάνω τοίνυν ἤδη, ἔφη, καὶ δοκεῖ μοι οὕτω. Τί οὖν; ἀριθμὸς τε καὶ τὸ ἐν ποτέρων δοκεῖ εἶναι; Οὐ ξυννοῶ, ἔφη. Ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν προειρημένων, ἔφη, ἀναλογίζου. εἰ μὲν γὰρ ἰκανῶς αὐτὸ καθ' αὐτὸ ὁράται ἢ ἄλλη τιμὴ 30 αἰσθίσει λαμβάνεται ἢ τὸ ἔν, οὐκ ἂν ὁλκὸν εἶη ἐπὶ τὴν οὐσίαν, E

27. ποτέρων A²II: πότερον A¹.

have conceived, not of two, but of one.' Plato's object is to make out that νόησις, in order to clear up the συγκεχυμένον τι of sensation (διὰ τὴν τοῦτου σαφῆνειαν) is compelled to view sensation's μέγα-καὶ-σμικρὸν (for example) separately, i.e. as τὸ μέγα and τὸ σμικρὸν. These antinomies consequently force us to ask 'What is the great?' 'What is the small?' etc.; and just herein consists their peragogic or educative value, for to such questions the theory of Ideas alone furnishes an adequate and final answer (Phaed. 99 B ff.). κεχωρισμένα νοήσει perhaps = 'are separate to νόησις,' but the ordinary view, which understands νόησις as subject to νοήσει, is better. It may have been this passage of the Republic, or Phaed. 96 E ff., or both which inspired the line of Theopompus τὰ δὲ δύο μόλις (sic) ἐν ἑστίν, ὡς φησιν Πλάτων (D. L. III 26).

524 C 15 καὶ ὄψις: 'sight also' sc. as well as νόησις.

17 ἡναγκάσθη. See 523 D n.

524 C — 526 C Now consider — to which of these classes do number and 'one' belong? Our perception of 'one' is self-contradictory; for any unit which we see, we see both as one and as infinite in number. This is also true of number generally, since it is true of 'one.' The science of number is therefore a suitable study on educational as well as on utilitarian grounds, provided it is pursued in such a way as to lead the soul from visible to the invisible numbers of true mathematics. We may add that arithmetical studies are an excellent test of general capacity, a good intellectual discipline, and difficult.

524 D ff. On Plato's treatment of ἀριθμητική—i.e. the Science of Number, not Arithmetic in the modern sense of the word: see on 525 A—reference may be made to Blass de Platone mathematico (Bonnae 1861), Cantor Gesch. d. Mathem. pp. 183 ff., and especially Rothlauf's excellent monograph Die Mathem. z. Platons Zeit u. s. Beziehungen zu ihr (Jena 1878) pp. 19—49. See also App. II.

524 D 27 ποτέρων is intrinsically better than πότερον, which has considerable MS authority (including A¹, Ξ and M), and is read by Hermann and Baier. Cf. τῶν ἀγωγῶν ἂν εἴη κτλ. 525 A. For the error see Introd. § 5.

ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τοῦ δακτύλου ἐλέγομεν· εἰ δ' αἰεί τι αὐτῷ ἅμα ὁράται ἐναντίωμα, ὥστε μηδὲν μᾶλλον ἐν ἢ καὶ τοῦναντίον φαίνεσθαι, τοῦ ἐπικρινούντος δὴ δέοι ἂν ἤδη καὶ ἀναγκάζοιτ' ἂν ἐν αὐτῷ ψυχὴ ὑπορεῖν καὶ ζητεῖν κινούσα ἐν ἑαυτῇ τὴν ἔννοιαν καὶ ἰνερωτᾶν, τί 5 ποτε ἔστιν αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν, καὶ οὕτω τῶν | ἀγωγῶν ἂν εἴη καὶ μετα- 35 στρεπτικῶν ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ ὄντος θέαν ἢ περὶ τὸ ἐν μάθησις. Ἄλλὰ μέντοι, ἔφη, τοῦτό γ' ἔχει οὐχ ἥκιστα ἢ περὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ὄψις· ἅμα γὰρ ταῦτόν ὡς ἐν τε ὁρῶμεν καὶ ὡς ἄπειρα τὸ πλήθος. Οὐκοῦν εἴπερ τὸ ἐν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ξύμπας ἀριθμὸς ταῦτόν πέποιθε τοῦτο; Πῶς 5 δ' οὐ; Ἄλλὰ μὴν λογιστικὴ τε καὶ ἀριθμητικὴ περὶ ἀριθμὸν πᾶσα.
B Καὶ μάλα. Ταῦτα δέ γε φαίνεται ἀγωγὰ ἰ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν. Ὑπερφυῶς μὲν οὖν. Ὡν ζητοῦμεν ἄρα, ὡς ἔοικε, μαθημάτων ἂν εἴη· πολεμικῷ μὲν γὰρ διὰ τὰς τάξεις ἀναγκαῖον μαθεῖν ταῦτα, φιλοσόφῳ δὲ διὰ τὸ τῆς οὐσίας ἀπτεόν εἶναι γενέσεως ἐξαναδύντι, ἢ 10 μηδέποτε λογιστικῷ γενέσθαι. Ἔστι ταῦτ', ἔφη. Ὁ δέ γε ἡμέτερος

5. τοῦτο Π: τοῦτω Α.

524 E 31 εἰ δ' αἰεί τι κτλ. A visible ἐν is always seen both as ἐν and πολλά (one wood, many trees; one tree, many branches etc.).

33 ἐν αὐτῷ is not ἐν τῷ ἐνί, but 'in the case in question,' 'in such a case,'
"dabei" (Schneider): cf. I 339 E n.

35 αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν. See on αὐτῶν τῶν ἀριθμῶν 525 D.

525 A 3 ἢ περὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ὄψις. I formerly read αὐτό instead of τὸ αὐτό with Ξ and a few inferior MSS. αὐτό, which Bekker, Schneider and Stallbaum adopt, is easier, but lacking in authority; and τὸ αὐτό is in reality more elegant. The marked antithesis between ἢ περὶ τὸ ἐν μάθησις ('the intellectual apprehension of the one') and ἢ περὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ὄψις (('the visual apprehension of the same')) makes it clear that τὸ αὐτό means 'the same' as that with which ἢ μάθησις was concerned (viz. τὸ ἐν), and not (as Hermann imagined) 'one and the same object of vision' (like ταῦτόν presently). Plato may have deliberately employed the two forms τὸ αὐτό and ταῦτόν in order to dissociate them from one another.

5 καὶ ξύμπας ἀριθμὸς κτλ. Because ἀριθμὸς is τὸ ἐκ μονάδων συγκείμενον πλήθος (Euclid VII def. 2), or in other words a σύστημα μονάδων (Theo Smyrn.
p. 18 ed. Hiller), and thus for example a visible three (i.e. three visible things) presents us with three separate cases of the contrast between ἐν and πολλά.

τοῦτο (see cr. n.) is preferable to τοῦτω, which appears in no MS except A, and would be superfluous after εἴπερ τὸ
ἐν. Two MSS do in point of fact omit the word altogether.

6 λογιστικὴ τε καὶ ἀριθμητικὴ.) Greek mathematicians distinguished between ἀριθμητικὴ 'the science of numbers' and λογιστικὴ 'the art of calculation' (Gow Greek Math. p. 22). It has been doubted whether Plato also held this distinction; but a comparison of Gorg.
451 B, 453 E, Theaet. 198 A (on ἀριθμητικῇ) with Gorg. 451 C, Charm. 166 A, Pol. 259 E (on λογιστικῇ) proves that he did (Rothlauf, l. c. pp. 19—21). Plato does not insist on the distinction here, but we may reasonably suppose that his pupils would begin with λογισμοί (λογισ-τικῇ) and rise from thence to ἀριθμητικῇ:
cf. C, D and Latos 817 E, 819 A ff. See also on λογιστικῇ in B.

7 ταῦτα: i.e. τὰ τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ.

525 B 7 ἀλήθειαν: viz. the Ideas, and ultimately the Idea of Good (517 B).

10 γενέσεως. See on 519 A.

ἦ = 'aliquin' (V 463 D n.). Liebhöhl absurdly adds ἔστιν after γενέσθαι.

11 λογιστικῷ: 'a reasoning proficient in the art of calculation,' with a play on λογιστικός in its deeper sense, as φύλαξ πολεμικός τε καὶ φιλόσοφος τυγχάνει ὢν. Τί μὴν; Προσ-ἦκον δὴ τὸ μάθημα ἂν εἴη, ὃ Γλαύκων, νομοθετῆσαι, καὶ πείθειν τοὺς μέλλοντας ἐν τῇ πόλει τῶν μεγίστων μεθέξειν ἐπὶ λογιστικῇ 15 ἵεσθαι καὶ ἀνθίπτεσθαι αὐτῆς μὴ ἰδιωτικῶς, ἀλλ' ἕως ἂν ἐπὶ θεῶν C τῆς τῶν ἀριθμῶν φύσεως ἀφίκωνται τῇ νοήσει αὐτῇ, οὐκ ὦνῃς οὐδὲ πρίσσεως χάριν ὡς ἐμπόρους ἢ καπήλους μελετῶντας, ἀλλ' ἕνεκα πολέμου τε καὶ αὐτῆς τῆς ψυχῆς ῥαστώνης μεταστροφῆς ἀπὸ γενέσεως ἐπ' ἀλήθειάν τε καὶ οὐσίαν. Κάλλιστ', ἔφη, λέγεις. Καὶ 20 μὴν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, νῦν καὶ ἐννοῶ ῥηθέντος τοῦ περὶ τοὺς λογισμοὺς μαθήματος, ὡς κομψόν ἐστι καὶ πολλαχῇ χρήσιμον ἡμῖν πρὸς ὃ D βουλόμεθα, ἐὰν τοῦ γνωρίζειν ἕνεκά τις αὐτὸ ἐπιτηδεύῃ, ἀλλὰ μὴ τοῦ καπηλεύειν. Πῇ δὴ; ἔφη. Τοῦτό γε, ὃ νῦν δὴ ἐλέγομεν, ὡς σφόδρα ἄνω ποι ἄγει τὴν ψυχὴν καὶ περὶ αὐτῶν τῶν ἀριθμῶν

18. ῥαστώνης II: ῥαστώνης τε A.

Shorey points out (Chicago Studies I p. 222 n. 4), comparing the double meaning of παρανομία in IV 424 D. λογισμὸν in 524 B prepared the way for this; and the same ambiguity partly explains why Plato puts λογιστικῇ rather than ἀριθμητικῇ in the forefront of this discussion (cf. λογιστικῇ below and λογισμοὺς in C). We readily feel that λογιστικῇ will arouse τὸ λογιστικόν. Cf. also X 602 E n.

13 καὶ πείθειν. προσῆκον ἂν εἴη is carried on: cf. I 334 B n. and infra 530 B. J. and C.'s explanation, that "μάθημα (or αὐτό) is to be repeated in the accusative after νομοθετῆσαι and πείθειν ἐπὶ λογιστικῇν ἵεσθαι," is untenable.

14 τῶν μεγίστων is idiomatically used of government: cf. 534 D and Apol. 22 D with my note ad loc.

525 C 15 θεῶν—αὐτῇ. The 'nature of numbers' cannot be fully seen except in their connexion with the Good and with all other νοητά (VI 511 B—D nn.). Plato does not of course imply that ἀριθμητικῇ by itself will achieve this result (although it may be doubted whether some of his successors did not exalt the science to something like this dignity: see e.g. the Erinomis): neither ἀριθμητικῇ nor all the propaedeutic studies taken together will ever carry us so far. He only means that the student, having once set foot on the ladder, must not re-descend until he reaches the Good. Then and then only will he understand the 'nature of numbers' i.e. the Ideas of 1, 2, etc., because only then will he know Numbers dialectically (VI 511 B). On the use of φύσις see X 597 B n.

16 τῇ νοήσει αὐτῇ: 'by thought alone.' αὐτῇ is 'by itself' i.e. (in this case) unadulterated with αἰσθησις: cf. 525 D n. and supra IV 437 E, 438 B, VI 510 B, D nn.

18 ῥαστώνης. A few inferior MSS add καὶ after this word: A alone has ῥαστώνης τε. I agree with Schneider in holding that the conjunctions are interpolated to avoid the concurrence of genitives, in which there is, however, no difficulty at all: cf. V 449 A n.

20 νῦν καὶ ἐννοῶ. Cf. (with J. and C.) II 370 A ἐννοῶ γὰρ καὶ αὐτὸς εἰπόντος σοῦ.

Λογισμοὺς: see on λογιστικῇ in B.

525 D 24 αὐτῶν τῶν ἀριθμῶν: 'numbers themselves,' e.g. 1, 2, 3, 4 etc., in other words individual mathematical numbers and nothing more. αὐτῶν means 'by themselves,' 'alone,' i.e. with nothing αἰσθητόν about them, such as is present in the ὁρατά ἢ ἀπὰ σώματα ἔχοντας ἀριθμοὺς (= Aristotle's αἰσθητικοὶ or σωματικοὶ ἀριθμοί: v. Bonitz Ind. Arist. s. v. ἀριθμός), e.g. one man, two men etc. These mathematical numbers are not Ideas, but (like τὰ μαθηματικά generally) a half-way house between sensibles and Ideas, and for this reason valuable as a προπαιδεῖα to Dialectic: cf. 526 A n. and see on VI 510 D ἀναγκάζει διαλέγεσθαι, οὐδαμῇ ἀποδεχόμενον, ἐάν τις αὐτῇ ὁρατὰ 25 ἢ ἀπτὰ σώματα ἔχοντας ἀριθμούς προτεινόμενος διαλέγεται. οἶσθα γάρ που τοὺς περὶ ταῦτα δεινούς¹, ὥς ἐάν τις αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν ἐπιχειρήτῳ λόγῳ τέμνῃ, καταγελῶσί τε καὶ οὐκ ἀποδέχονται, ἀλλ' ἐὰν σὺ κερματίζῃς αὐτό, ἐκεῖνοι πολλαπλασιοῦσιν, εὐλαβούμενοι μὴ ποτε φανῇ τὸ ἐν μὴ ἐν ἀλλὰ πολλὰ μόρια. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη, λέγεις. 30 Τί οὖν οἶε, ὦ Γλαῦκων, εἴ τις ἔροιτο αὐτοῦς, ὦ θαυμάσιοι, περὶ ποίων ἀριθμῶν διαλέγεσθε, ἐν οἷς τὸ ἐν οἶον ὑμεῖς ἀξιοῦτέ ἐστιν, 27. δεινούς Ξ q: δεινούς δύο ΑΠ, sed δύο punctis notare A²Π². ἐστιν Ξ q: ἀξιοῦτε ἐστιν Α: ἀξιοῦντε (sic) ἐστὶν Π.

2. ἀξιοῦτέ

and App. I. For αὐτῶν in this sense cf. αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν in E, αὐτῇ τῇ νοήσει 526 B and ἀριθμῶν αὐτῶν ἀλλ' οὐ σώματα ἔχόντων [Epin.] 990 c.

27 δεινούς. The word δύο, which was originally written after δεινούς (see cr. n.) in A and Π, is probably due to a marginal adscript on the words ἐάν τις αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν ἐπιχειρή—τέμνῃ. Burnet neatly conjectures δεινούς αὐ, but αὐ is inappropriate here.

525 E 27 ἐάν τις κτλ. αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν means 'the unit itself' i.e. the mathematical number 'one' which is ex hypothesi and by definition ἀμέριστον καὶ ἀδιαίρετον (Theo Smyrn. 18). If any one maintains that the mathematical unit is divisible, the mathematicians καταγελῶσί τε καὶ οὐκ ἀποδέχονται. Quā mathematicians, they never condescend to justify either this or any other mathematical definition (οὐδένα λόγον οὔτε αὐτοῖς οὔτε ἄλλοις ἐτι ἀξιοῦσι—διδόναι VI 510 C), and think it ridiculous that any one should question the foundations of their science. The moment they begin to render an account of their ὑποθέσεις they cease to be mathematicians and become διαλεκτικοί. See also on VI 510 C and App. III.

28 ἐὰν σὺ κερματίζῃς κτλ.: 'if you mince it, they multiply it.' If you insist on dividing their unit, they insist on multiplying it (viz. by your divisor), and so defeat your purpose and keep the unit one and indivisible as before. 'I cut that unit up!' you exclaim. 'I multiply it!' is their reply; and you are checkmated. They have just as much right to multiply it as you to divide it; for the mathematical unit is only a ὑπόθεσις when all is said and done. Plato is humorously describing a passage-at-arms between mathematicians and some obstinate fellow who will not admit the indivisibility of their unit. The words 'back again' in D. and V.'s translation "they multiply it back again" correspond to nothing in the Greek and suggest an erroneous idea; nor can the Greek mean "that division is regarded by them as a process of multiplication, for the fractions of one continue to be units" (as Jowett suggests). Each of these explanations misses the humour of the original. The word μόρια is doubtless genuine, though its rejection (proposed by Herwerden) would improve the antithesis. Cf. μόριόν τε ἔχον ἐν ἑαυτῷ οὐδέν (526 A), for which μόρια here prepares the way.

526 A 1 περὶ ποίων κτλ. On the derisive ποῖος see 522 D n. Mathematical units are in every case (ἐκαστον) equal each to each (πάν παντί), and destitute of parts; whereas sensible units (e.g. one horse, one cow etc.) are not equal to each other, and are divisible. In πάν παντί Plato copies the formal language of mathematics: cf. ἐκατέραν ἐκατέρα and the like in Euclid passim. For the sense see Phil. 56 C ff., where these two kinds of number are made the basis of a distinction between philosophical or scientific and popular or unscientific ἀριθμητική. It should be carefully noted that a plurality of mathematical units is expressly recognised both here (ἴσον τε ἐκαστον πάν παντί κτλ.) and in Phil. I. c. (μονάδα μονάδος ἐκάστης τῶν μυρίων μηδεμίαν ἄλλην ἄλλης διαφέρουσιν). This entirely confirms what Aristotle tells us, viz. that Plato placed μαθηματικά between αἰσθητά and εἶδη, τῷ τὰ μὲν πόλλ' ἅττα ὅμοια εἶναι, τὸ δὲ εἶδος αὐτὸ ἐν ἐκαστον μόνον (Met. A 6. 987^b 14 ff.). There are therefore three kinds of μονάδες in Plato's scheme—the Ideal μονάς, of ἴσον τε ἕκαστον πᾶν παντὶ καὶ οὐδὲ σμικρὸν διαφέρειν μῑρίον τε ἔχον ἐν ἑαυτῷ οὐδέν; τί ἂν οἷε αὐτοὺς ἀποκρίνασθαι; Τοῦτο

 5 ἔγωγε, ὅτι περὶ τούτων λέγουσιν, ὧν διανοηθῆναι μόνον ἐγχωρεῖ, ἄλλως δ' οὐδαμῶς μεταχειρίζεσθαι δυνατόν. Ὅρᾳς οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ φίλε, ὅτι τῷ ὄντι ἀναγκαῖον ἡμῖν κινδυνεύει εἶναι τὸ μάθημα, ἐπειδὴ φαίνεται γε προσαναγκάζον αὐτῇ τῇ νοήσει χρῆσθαι τὴν
 10 ψυχὴν ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὴν ἀλήθειαν; Καὶ μὲν δὴ, ἔφη, σφόδρα γε ποιεῖ αὐτό. Τί δέ; τόδε ἤδη ἐπεσκέψω, ὥς οἱ τε φύσει λογιστικοὶ εἰς πάντα τὰ μαθήματα ὥς ἔπος εἰπεῖν ὀξεῖς φύονται, οἱ τε βραδεῖς, ἂν ἐν τούτῳ παιδευθῶσι καὶ γυμνάσωνται, κἂν μηδὲν ἄλλο ὠφελήθωσι, ὅμως εἰς γε τὸ ὀξύτεροι αὐτοὶ αὐτῶν γίγνεσθαι πάντες ἐπιδιδόασιν; Ἔστιν, ἔφη, οὕτω. Καὶ μὴν, ὥς ἐγὼμαι, ἅ γε C

8. τῇ II: om. A.

which only one exists, the Mathematical and the Sensible, of each of which there are many. See on VI 510 D and App. I, where I have quoted further evidence on this subject, and endeavoured to explain the philosophical truth which is contained in the Platonic doctrine of mathematical numbers, magnitudes etc. as intermediates between the Ideas and sensibles.

5 ὧν κτλ. ὧν is for περὶ ὧν rather than ἃ (as J. and C. hold): cf. VI 510 D οὐ περὶ τούτων διανοούμενοι, and (for the grammatical construction) III 402 A η. διανοηθῆναι should be understood in the technical sense of VI 511 E.

7 τῷ ὄντι ἀναγκαῖον. Perhaps with a play on προσαναγκάζον (J. and C.): see on τῷ ὄντι VI 511 B.

526 B 11 ὀξεῖς κτλ. Plato was very emphatic on this point: see Laos 747 B and 819 C. φύονται was restored by Schneider from the best MSS. Earlier editions read φαίνονται on inferior authority.

ἀν—γυμνάσωνται κτλ. Even Isocrates admits this, although his self-styled 'Philosophy' was something very different from Plato's: see Antid. 265—266, especially γυμνασίαν μέντοι τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ παρασκευὴν φιλοσοφίας καλῶ τὴν διατριβὴν τὴν τοιαύτην (mathematical studies).

526 C 14 ἅ γε μείζω κτλ. is an important principle with Plato, who does not believe in any royal road to learning: cf. 530 C and VI 503 E. In antiquity, while algebra was still unknown, ἀριθμητικὴ must have taxed the powers of thought far more than now, and been, from the Platonic point of view, all the more valuable on that account as an educative discipline. The treatment of numbers by Euclid Books VII—X will illustrate Plato's observation: see Gow Gk Math. pp. 74—85, with De Morgan's remarks there quoted.

16 ὥς τοῦτο. ὥς = 'quam' instead of ἥ is found sporadically in Greek literature after comparatives: see my note on Ap. 30 B, 36 D. To say that in all such cases the comparative is equivalent to οὕτω with the positive is only to shelve the difficulty; and it is better to recognise the usage as exceptional than summarily to dismiss it as a barbarism (with Thompson on Gorg. 492 E). J. and C. after οὐδὲ πολλά supply ἃ πόνον οὕτω μέγαν παρέχεται, but the ellipse is too difficult, especially as οὐδὲ πολλά is only a kind of afterthought to or elaboration of οὐ βραδύς.

526 C—527 C Next in order comes Plane Geometry. On its practical uses we need not dilate; the important question is whether it tends to turn the soul towards Being. A mere tiro in Geometry knows that it is not a practical art, in spite of such terms as 'squaring' etc., which the poverty of language compels it to employ. The object of geometrical knowledge is ever-existent Being. For this reason we shall prescribe the study of Geometry, a subject which is moreover practically useful and an excellent educational propaedeutic.

526 C ff. On the subject of this μείζω πόνον παρέχει μανθάνοντι καὶ μελετῶντι, οὐκ ἂν ῥαδίως 15 οὐδὲ πολλὰ ἂν εὖροις ὥς τούτο. Οὐ γὰρ οὖν. Πάντων δὲ ἕνεκα τούτων οὐκ ἀφετέον τὸ μάθημα, ἀλλ' οἱ ἄριστοι τὰς φύσεις παι-δευτέοι ἐν αὐτῷ. Ξύμφημι, ἣ δ' ὅς.

IX. Τούτο μὲν τοίνυν, εἶπον, ἐν ἡμῖν κείσθω· δεύτερον δὲ τὸ ἐχόμενον τούτου σκεψώμεθα ἅρά τι προσήκει ἡμῖν. Τὸ ποῖον; 20 ἢ γεωμετρίαν, ἔφη, λέγεις; Αὐτὸ τούτο, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. "Ὅσον μὲν, ἔφη, πρὸς τὰ πολεμικὰ αὐτοῦ τείνει, δῆλον ὅτι προσήκει· πρὸς γὰρ τὰς στρατοπεδεύσεις καὶ καταλήψεις χωρίων καὶ συναγωγὰς καὶ ἐκτάσεις στρατιᾶς καὶ ὅσα δὲ ἄλλα σχηματίζουνσι τὰ στρατό-πεδα ἐν αὐταῖς τε ταῖς μάχαις καὶ πορείαις, διαφέρει ἂν αὐτὸς 25 αὐτοῦ γεωμετρικὸς καὶ μὴ ὢν. 'Αλλ' οὖν δὴ, εἶπον, πρὸς μὲν τὰ

16. ἂν εὖροις II: ἀνεύροις A.

19. ἐν Ξ q: ἐν AII.

26. δὴ A² II: om. A¹.

section consult Blass and Cantor referred to on 524 D, Rothlauf l.c. pp. 50—69, and App. II to this book. The great importance attached by Plato and his school to geometry and kindred studies is attested from many sources: see for example Philoponus in Arist. de an. I 3 (Comment. in Arist. p. 117. 26 ὁ Πλάτων οὐ καὶ πρὸ τῆς διατριβῆς ἐπεγέγραπτο Ἀγεωμέτρητος μὴ εἰσὶτω, Tzetzes Chil. VIII 973 μηδεὶς ἀγεωμέτρητος εἰσὶτω μου τὴν στέγην, Proclus in Euclid. pp. 29 f. Friedlein Πλάτων καθαρτικὴν τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ ἀναγωγὴν τὴν μαθηματικὴν εἶναι σαφῶς ἀποφαίνεται, τὴν ἄλλιν ἀφαιροῦσαν τοῦ νοεροῦ τῆς διανοίας φωτὸς κτλ., and D. L. IV 10 πρὸς δὲ τὸν μῆτε μουσικὴν μῆτε γεωμετρίαν μῆτε ἀστρονομίαν μεμαθηκότα, βουλόμενον δὲ παρ' αὐτὸν (Ξενοκράτη) φοιτᾶν Πορεύου, ἔφη· λαβὰς γὰρ οὐκ ἔχεις φιλοσοφίας. Among Plato's companions or pupils in the Academy, Eudoxus and Menaechmus rendered the most conspicuous services to mathematical science (see Allman Greek Geometry from Thales to Euclid pp. 129—179), and Euclid himself, according to Proclus (in Euclid. p. 68), was τῇ προαιρέσει Πλατωνικὸς καὶ τῇ φιλοσοφίᾳ ταύτῃ οἰκεῖος. That ὁ θεὸς αἰεὶ γεωμετρεῖ was a characteristic and profound saying of Plato's (Plut. Conv. Disp. VIII 2. 718 C ff.), on the meaning of which see App. I.

19 τὸ ἐχόμενον τούτου. If γεωμετρία i.e. ἡ τοῦ ἐπιπέδου (plane surfaces) πραγματεία (528 D) concerns itself with δευτέρα αἰξή, and Stereometry with τρίτη αἰξή, we may infer that ἀριθμητικὴ deals with the πρώτη αἰξή, i.e. presumably the line, which, according to the Pythagoreans, is a collection of points (cf. Latw 894 A and Rothlauf l.c. p. 51). And in point of fact the line represented number among the Pythagoreans exactly as the point is the geometrical symbol for the unit: cf. IX 587 D n. Hence ἐχόμενον τούτου: we take the δευτέρα αἰξή after the first. See also App. II to this Book, and App. I to Book VIII Part I § 2.

21 ἢ γεωμετρίαν κτλ. The sequence —Geometry after ἀριθμητικὴ—was probably a usual one with teachers, even in Plato's time: see Grasberger Erziehung u. Unterricht II p. 340 and cf. App. II.

ὅσον μὲν κτλ. is exactly the attitude of the historical Socrates, as Krohn (Pl. St. p. 376) and others have pointed out, comparing Xen. Mem. IV 7. 2 ff. Practical necessities of this kind probably originated the science (Gow Gk Math. pp. 134 ff.) and gave it its name γεωμετρία. The name μαθήματα (or μαθηματικά) in the special sense of Mathematics owes its origin, no doubt, to the position occupied by mathematical studies in Plato's μαθήματα: but the usage itself is not found till Aristotle (Rothlauf l.c. p. 18), although it is clear from [Epin.] 990 D, that some Platonists resented the γελοῖον ὄνομα γεωμετρίαν. Glaucō represents the practical point of view throughout: cf. 527 D.

526 D 25 καὶ πορείαις. "Scriptum vellem καὶ ἐν πορείαις" (Stallbaum). The idiom is common enough: see Kühner-Blass Gr. Gr. II 1, p. 548.

1 τοιαῦτα βραχύ τι ἂν ἔξαρκοῖ γεωμετρίας τε καὶ λογισμῶν μόνιον· τὸ δὲ πολλὸν αὐτῆς καὶ πορρωτέρω προῖόν σκοπεῖσθαι¹ δεῖ εἴ τι Ε πρὸς ἐκεῖνο τείνει, πρὸς τὸ ποιεῖν κατιδεῖν ῥῶον τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ 30 ἰδέαν. τείνει δέ, φαμέν, πάντα αὐτόσε, ὅσα ἀναγκάζει ψυχὴν εἰς ἐκεῖνον τὸν τόπον μεταστρέφεσθαι, ἐν ᾧ ἐστὶ τὸ εὐδαιμονέστατον τοῦ ὄντος, ὃ δὲ αὐτὴν παντὶ τρόπῳ ἰδεῖν. Ὅρθως, ἔφη, λέγεις.
 Οὐκοῦν εἰ μὲν οὐσίαν ἀναγκάζει θεάσασθαι, προσήκει, εἰ δὲ γένεσιν, οὐ προσήκει. Φαμέν γε δὴ. Οὐ τοίνυν τοῦτό γε, | ἦν δ' ἐγώ, 52 ἀμφισβητήσουσιν ἡμῖν ὅσοι καὶ σμικρὰ γεωμετρίας ἔμπειροι, ὅτι αὕτη ἡ ἐπιστήμη πᾶν τοῦναντίον ἔχει τοῖς ἐν αὐτῇ λόγοις λεγο-μένοις ὑπὸ τῶν μεταχειριζομένων. Πῶς; ἔφη. Λέγουσι μὲν πού 5 μᾶλα γελοῖως τε καὶ ἀναγκαίως· ὥς γὰρ πρᾶττοντές τε καὶ πρᾶξεως ἕνεκα πάντας τοὺς λόγους ποιούμενοι λέγουσιν τετραγωνίζειν τε καὶ παρατείνειν καὶ προστιθέναι καὶ πάντα οὕτω φθεγγόμενοι·

28. προῖόν Π: προσίόν Α.

32. ὃ Π: οὐ Α¹: οὐ Α².

526 Ε 31 τὸ εὐδαιμονέστατον τοῦ ὄντος is cited by Stumpf (l.c. p. 95 n. 3) in support of his identification of the Idea of Good with God: see on VI 505 Α.

33 γένεσιν. 519 Α n.

527 Α 3 αὕτη ἡ ἐπιστήμη κτλ.: 'the nature of this science is in precise contradiction to' etc. πᾶν τοῦναντίον is adverbial, and ἔχει intransitive. In what follows Plato is not (as Stallbaum strangely supposes) censuring contemporary geometricians, "sed vitium quoddam ipsius scientiae" (Schneider, who refers to VI 510 Ε—511 Α), for even those ὅσοι καὶ σμικρὰ γεωμετρίας ἔμπειροι agree with him. It is however probable on other grounds that Plato himself was afraid lest his pupils should depend too much on geometrical figures and instruments; and Plutarch tells us that he reproved Eudoxus and others for this very fault: ἀπόλλυσθαι γὰρ οὕτω καὶ διαφθεῖρεσθαι τὸ γεωμετρίας ἀγαθὸν αὐθις ἐπὶ τὰ αἰσθητὰ παλινδρομοῦσης, καὶ μὴ φερομένης ἂν μὴδὲ ἀντιλαμβάνομένης τῶν αἰδίων καὶ αἰσμάτων εἰκόνων, πρὸς ὅσπερ ὦν ὁ θεὸς αἰεὶ θεός ἐστι (Conv. Disp. VIII 2. 718 F: cf. also Vit. Marc. 14. 5—7. The anecdote refers in particular to stereometrical instruments, but its moral applies equally to the study of plane geometry). See Rothlauf l.c. pp. 66 ff. and Gow Gk Math. p. 181.

5 ἀναγκαίως 'in beggarly fashion' ("nothgedrungenen Weise" Prantl). They are 'hard up' for words to express their meaning, and must consequently use language which does not: cf. VI 510 D. J. and C.'s explanation "with merely practical needs in view" is quite wrong; nor does the word appear to me to contain "a facetious allusion to geometrical necessity" (in the sense of V 458 D), as they assert. Madvig's ἀκάκως for ἀναγκαίως is a singularly unhappy suggestion.

7 παρατείνειν = 'to apply,' e.g. a parallelogram to a given line: cf. Men. 87 Α (παρὰ τὴν δοθείσαν—γραμμὴν παρατείναντα κτλ.) with E. S. Thompson's note. Blass takes the same view (de Pl. math. p. 19). Euclid's expression for this is παραβάλλειν (X 18 ff. and passim: cf. Cantor l.c. p. 145). The ordinary translation 'produce' (as e.g. a line) has no authority, and Euclid's word for 'producing' a line is ἐκβάλλειν or προσεκβάλλειν (I 5, 17 and passim). So also in Aristotle: see the Ind. Arist. s.v.).

προστιθέναι: 'to add,' sc. one μέγεθος to another in any geometrical construction: cf. Nicom. Introd. Ar. II 12. 2. Euclid uses συντιθέναι, σύγκειμαι (X 16 and passim) of such an operation.

φθεγγόμενοι is said "non sine eleganti quadam irrisione" (Stallbaum): cf. VI 505 C n.

Β τὸ δ' ἔστι που πᾶν τὸ μάθημα ἢ γνώσεως ἕνεκα ἐπιτηδευόμενον. Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν τοῦτο ἔτι διομολογητέον; Τὸ ποῖον; Ὡς τοῦ αἰὲ ὄντος γνώσεως, ἀλλ' οὐ τοῦ ποτέ τι γιγνομένου καὶ ἀπολλυμένου. Εὐομολόγητον, ἔφη· τοῦ γὰρ αἰὲ ὄντος ἡ γεωμετρικὴ γνώσις ἐστίν. Ὀλκὸν ἄρα, ὦ γενναῖε, ψυχῆς πρὸς ἀλήθειαν εἴη αὖ καὶ ἀπεργαστικὸν φιλοσόφου διανοίας πρὸς τὸ ἄνω σχεῖν ἂ νῦν κάτω οὐ δέον ἔχομεν. Ὡς οἶόν τε μάλιστα, ἔφη. C Ὡς οἶόν τ' ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἔγώ, μάλιστα προστακτέον, ὅπως οἱ ἐν τῇ καλλιπόλει σοι μηδενὶ τροπῇ γεωμετρίας ἀφέξονται. καὶ γὰρ τὰ

II. εὐομολόγητον II et γρ in marg. A²: εὐ διομολογητέον A¹. 16. ἀφέξονται Ξ: ἀφέξονται AII g.

8 τὸ δέ: 'whereas': cf. I 340 D n.

527 B 10 τοῦ αἰὲ ὄντος. Plato held the objects of mathematical study to be αἰδία καὶ ἀκίνητα 'eternal and unchangeable' (Arist. Met. A 6. 987^b 16: cf. VI 510 c ff., VII 526 A n.), but not Ideas. The Platonic meaning of τοῦ αἰὲ ὄντος is certainly not exhausted by the observation that "the truths of every science are always true" (Bosanquet). ὄντος implies substantial existence, independently of our thoughts, and independently also of particulars. The existence of τὰ μαθηματικά as μιμήματα τῶν ὄντων or copies of the Ideas, 'moving in and out of' the material substance of the Universe, which they stamp with an infinite diversity of forms and shapes, is a cardinal doctrine of Plato's physics (Tim. 50 c al.), and Bosanquet appears to me to rob the words of Plato of half their significance, in the fruitless attempt to find in his ontology nothing but what commends itself to certain schools of philosophy in the present day. See v 476 E and App. I.

10 τοῦ ποτέ κτλ.: 'that which at some particular time is a particular instance of becoming and perishing.' τι γιγνομένου = ὄντος (the copula) γιγνομένου τινός, but γιγνομένου itself involves the copula, the presence of which would here be intolerable. Cf. v 473 D n. and Euthyphr. 10 c εἴ τι γίγνεται ἢ τι πάσχει, οὐχ ὅτι γιγνόμενόν ἐστι, γίγνεται, ἀλλ' ὅτι γίγνεται, γιγνόμενόν ἐστι. Here τι is indeclinable like τι in Lach. 200 B, Menex. 247 B (οἰομένῳ τι εἶναι), Euthyphr. 303 C (δοκούντων τι εἶναι), οὐδέν, μηδέν etc. tolerably often in tragedy, and the adverbial use of ἀμφότερα and τάναντία

(e.g. Lach. 185 A νέων γὰρ που ἡ χρηστῶν ἢ τάναντία γενομένων κτλ.): cf. also (with Schneider Addit. p. 57) Procl. in Tim. 136 E τοῦ—ἀδιαρέτως πάντα ὄντος et al. The indeclinable form adds to the emphasis, and indeed τινός (if placed after ποτέ) could hardly stand at all. Schneider translates "des etwas werdenden und vergehenden," apparently taking τι predicatively with γιγνομένου. But the expression 'that which becomes something' suggests a substratum underlying γιγνόμενον, whereas the only correct antithesis to ὄν (τοῦ αἰὲ ὄντος) is γιγνόμενον itself. Stallbaum wrongly explains τι as "aliqua ratione." A few inferior MSS omit the word. I believe the text is sound, though possibly τι should be accented, as in the exactly similar Aristotelian usage of τις "ad significandam τὴν ἀτομότητα" (Bonitz Ind. Ar. p. 763) e.g. ὁ τις ἄνθρωπος. The use of ποτέ also reminds us of the ποτέ of the Categories.

12 γεωμετρικὴ is an adjective (Schneider).

14 σχεῖν. The tense is inchoative or ingressive, as usual: see 516 E n.

527 C 16 καλλιπόλει. Socrates rallies Glauco on his 'braif toun.' The word, as J. and C. point out, is full of tenderness and affection. Callipolis was the name of several cities in Greece (Pape-Benseler Gr. Eigennam. s.v.), a fact which sufficiently refutes Herwerden's doubts as to the formation of the word: see also (with Schneider) Lobeck's Phrynichus pp. 600—607. Herwerden ought not to have revived the tasteless and prosaic conjectures καλῇ πόλει (II²) and καλλίστῃ πόλει (Ξ).

πάρεργα αὐτοῦ οὐ σμικρὰ. Ποῖα; ἡ δ' ὅς. "Α τε δὴ σὺ εἶπες, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὰ περὶ τὸν πόλεμον, καὶ δὴ καὶ πρὸς πάσας μαθήσεις, ὥστε κάλλιον ἀποδέχεσθαι, ἴσμεν πού ὅτι τῷ ὅλῳ καὶ παντὶ 20 διοίσει ἡμέμενος τε γεωμετρίας καὶ μή. Τῷ παντὶ μέντοι νῆ Δί', ἔφη. Δεύτερον δὴ τοῦτο τιθώμεν μάθημα τοῖς νέοις; Τιθώμεν, ἔφη.

X. Τί δέ; ἰ τρίτον θώμεν ἀστρονομίαν; ἡ οὐ δοκεῖ; Ἐμοὶ D γοῦν, ἔφη· τὸ γὰρ περὶ ὥρας εὐαισθητοτέρως ἔχειν καὶ μηνῶν καὶ

24. ἐμοὶ γοῦν Π: ἔμουγ' οὖν A.

17 αὐτοῦ: viz. τοῦ μαθήματος.

18 καὶ δὴ καὶ κτλ. See on 526 B.

20 ἡμέμενος τε. Herwerden excises τε, comparing 526 D; but the MSS are a safer guide.

527 C—528 E Shall we prescribe Astronomy as our third subject? Glauco approves, pointing to its usefulness in practical affairs. After reproving his friend for advocating the Platonic curriculum chiefly on this ground, Socrates observes that the solid should first be studied in itself, and afterwards the solid in motion. In other words Stereometry should precede Astronomy. Although the problems of Stereometry are not yet solved, we may hope for success under proper guidance, and with the support of the State.

527 D ff. On stereometry in the age of Plato see Rothlauf l.c. pp. 69—74, Cantor l.c. pp. 194—202, Tannery Rev. Phil. x (1880) pp. 523 ff. The most famous stereometrical problem of Plato's time was the so-called 'Delian problem' or duplication of the cube, and it is highly probable that Plato had this question in his mind when he wrote the present chapter. A dramatic poet, whom Valckenaer supposed to be Euripides, had already made allusion to it in the lines μικρόν γ' ἔλεξας βασιλικῷ σηκὸν τάφου· ἰ διπλάσιος ἔστω. τοῦ καλοῦ (v.l. κύβου) δὲ μὴ σφαλεῖς ἰ δίπλας' ἕκαστον κῶλον ἐν τάχει τάφου (Nauck Trag. Gr. Fr. p. 676). The story runs that the Delians, having been commanded by an oracle to double a certain altar, were in great perplexity, διαπεμφθέντων δὲ τοῖς παρὰ τῷ Πλάτῳ ἐν Ἀκαδημίᾳ γεωμέτρως ἀξιούν αὐτοὺς εὐρεῖν τὸ ζητούμενον (Eratosthenes, quoted by Eutocius in Archimed. III pp. 102 ff. Heiberg. See also Plut. de gen. Socr. 7. 579 B—D and de el. ap. Delphos 6.

386 E f., and Johannes Philop. quoted by Sturm Das Delische Problem p. 10). Plato favourably entertained their application, and the students of the Academy set to work with extraordinary enthusiasm. A remarkable stimulus was thereby given to the study of stereometry, and the Delian problem was successfully solved. The anecdote may of course be apocryphal, but we have not the smallest reason for rejecting it. The memory of such incidents is usually cherished with peculiar care in the history of a College, and Eratosthenes (276—194 B.C.) was born only seventy-one years after Plato's death. In any case the duplication of the cube may well have seemed in Plato's time a question of the first importance for the purposes of stereometrical science, for, as Tannery remarks (l.c. p. 256), the duplication of the square, which had already been discovered (Men. 82 B ff.), was believed to be the key to plane problems, and so it was probably surmised that the διπλασιασμός τοῦ κύβου would give the solution of a whole series of solid problems. English readers will find a short account of this classical ἀπορία with some of its ancient solutions in Rouse Ball's Math. Recreations and Problems pp. 154 ff. The most elaborate and exhaustive history of the problem and its solutions in antiquity is that of Sturm Das Delische Problem 1896.

23 ἐμοὶ γοῦν. Schneider and others write ἐμουγ' οὖν (see cr. n.), but οὖν is too strongly illative for this passage. Cf. I 335 E n.

24 τὸ γὰρ περὶ κτλ. Cf. 526 C n. and Xenophon there quoted, esp. § 4 ἐκέλευε δὲ καὶ ἀστρολογίας ἐμπείρους γίγνεσθαι, καὶ ταύτης μέντοι μέχρι τοῦ νυκτός τε ὥραν καὶ μηνὸς καὶ ἐνιαυτοῦ δύνασθαι γιγνώσκειν κτλ. and infra τὰς ὥρας τῶν εἰρημένων διαγιγνώσκοντες. The ana-ἐνιαυτῶν οὐ μόνον γεωργία οὐδὲ ναυτιλία προσήκει, ἀλλὰ καὶ 25 στρατηγία οὐχ ἥττον. Ἴδὺς εἶ, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι ἔοικας δεδιότι τοὺς πολλούς, μὴ δοκῆς ἄχρηστα μαθήματα προστάττειν. τὸ δ' ἔστιν οὐ πᾶν φαῦλον, ἀλλὰ χαλεπὸν πιστεῦσαι, ὅτι ἐν τούτοις τοῖς μαθήμασιν ἐκάστου ὄργανόν τι ψυχῆς ἐκκαθαίρεται τε καὶ ἀναζωπυρεῖται ἁπολλύμενον καὶ τυφλούμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἐπιτηδευ- 30 μάτων, κρεῖττον δὲ σωθῆναι μυρίων ὀμμάτων· μόνῳ γὰρ αὐτῷ ἀλήθεια ὁράται. οἷς μὲν οὖν ταῦτα ξυνδοκεῖ ἀμυχάνως ὥς εὖ δόξεις λέγειν· ὅσοι δὲ τούτου μηδαμῇ ἡσθημένοι εἰσίν, εἰκότως logy of this passage suggests that in Plato καὶ ('both') μηνῶν καὶ ἐνιαυτῶν depends on ὥρας, which is the accusative plural: cf. Laus 812 B εὐαισθητοὺς δεῖν γεγενῆσθαι περὶ τε τοὺς ῥυθμοὺς κτλ. Practical astronomy will enable one to tell both the time of month and the time of year by looking at the moon and the sun. For ὥρας μηνῶν cf. also, besides the passage of Xenophon just quoted, Eur. Alc. 449 f. Σπάρτα κυκλὰς ἀνίκα Καρνείου περιώσεται ὥρα ἡ μηνὸς κτλ. Schneider and the English translators take ὥρας as genitive and parallel with μηνῶν κτλ., but it is difficult to see what εὐαισθητοτέρως ἔχειν περὶ ἐνιαυτῶν can mean: for ἐπιμέλειαν ποιεῖσθαι ἐνιαυτοῦ καὶ ὥρων in VI 488 D is quite different. Schleiermacher translates the passage correctly.

εὐαισθητοτέρως. For this form of the comparative advb. see I 343 E n.

26 ἡδὺς εἶ: 'you amuse me.' See I 337 D n.

27 μὴ δοκῆς κτλ. The usefulness of 'useless' studies is a fundamental principle in Plato's theory; and (as Schneider points out) ὅτι ἐν τούτοις κτλ. is intended to shew that liberal studies are in the highest and truest sense useful.

τὸ δ' ἔστιν. I 340 D n.

28 χαλεπόν. Cobet's παγχάλεπον (after Nicom. Introd. Ar. III 7) is a wholly gratuitous change: see App. VII.

29 ἐκάστου. Every human being has an ὄργανον ψυχῆς viz. νοῦς: it is indeed the possession of νοῦς which makes him at once truly human and therewithal divine (VI 501 B n.). The genitive is much more expressive than ἐκάστῳ, which Herwerden proposes: cf. 518 C n., and for the combination of genitives V 449 A n.

ἐκκαθαίρεται κτλ.: 'is purged and rekindled.' In passages like this Plato hurls his metaphors about with Shakespearian vehemence and profusion. Cf. II 365 C n., and see the admirable remarks on metaphor by the author of the treatise περὶ ὕψους 32. 4 πλήθους καὶ τόλμης μεταφορῶν—τὰ εὐκαιρά καὶ σφοδρὰ πάθη καὶ τὸ γενναῖον ὕψος εἶναι φημι ἰδίᾳ τινα ἀλεξιφάρμακα, ὅτι τῷ ῥολίῳ τῆς φορᾶς ταυτὶ πέφυκεν ἅπαντα τᾶλλα παρασύρειν καὶ προωθεῖν, μᾶλλον δὲ καὶ ὡς ἀναγκαῖα πάντως εἰσπράττεσθαι τὰ παράβολα, καὶ οὐκ ἐὰν τὸν ἀκροατὴν σχολάζειν περὶ τὸν τοῦ πλήθους ἔλεγχον διὰ τὸ συνενθουσιᾶν τῷ λέγοντι. The eye of soul is purged of its blindness: its smouldering fires flame forth afresh. To translate "'is polished' like a soiled mirror" (J. and C.), besides being wrong, falls far below the level of Plato's ὕψος. The chiasmus in ἐκκαθαίρεται—τυφλούμενον adds to the literary effect. On other readings in this passage see App. VII.

527 E 32 οἷς μὲν οὖν κτλ. The logical sequence is somewhat difficult. Do not (says Socrates) be so anxious to persuade οἱ πολλοί of the usefulness of our curriculum. Its true utility is difficult to understand, and οἱ πολλοί will not easily be persuaded of it. Those who agree with us about its true utility will highly approve of your proposals; but οἱ πολλοί will not, for they can see no practical advantage (worthy of mention) accruing from them. δόξεις λέγειν attributes the proposals to Glauco as in D μὴ δοκῆς—προσ-τάττειν, and ἄλλην is said with reference to τούτου. To the ὠφελία of intellectual salvation such persons are blind; and they cannot see any other, i.e. any practical ὠφελία worth mentioning in Plato's studies. ἄλλην cannot be understood as "beyond their practical applications" (D. and V.) unless we refer it to Glauco's remark τὸ γὰρ περὶ κτλ. in D, to the detriment both of grammar and of sense.

ἡγήσονται σε λέγειν οὐδέν· ἄλλην γὰρ ἀπ' αὐτῶν οὐχ ὁρῶσιν 35 ἀξίαν λόγου ὠφελίαν. σκόπει οὖν αὐτόθεν, πρὸς ποτέρους διαλέγει· ἢ οὐ | πρὸς οὐδετέρους, ἀλλὰ σαυτοῦ ἕνεκα τὸ μέγιστον ποιεῖ 528 τοὺς λόγους, φθοροῖς μὴν οὐδ' ἂν ἄλλω, εἴ τίς τι δύναίτο ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὄνασθαι; Οὕτως, ἔφη, αἰροῦμαι, ἑμαυτοῦ ἕνεκα τὸ πλεῖστον λέγειν τε καὶ ἐρωτᾶν καὶ ἀποκρίνεσθαι. Ἄναγε τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, 5 εἰς τοῦπίσω· νῦν δὲ γὰρ οὐκ ὁρθῶς τὸ ἐξῆς ἐλάβομεν τῇ γεωμετρῖᾳ.
 Πῶς λαβόντες; ἔφη. Μετὰ ἐπίπεδον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐν περιφορᾷ ὅν ἤδη στερεὸν λαβόντες, πρὶν αὐτὸ καθ' αὐτὸ λαβεῖν· ὁρθῶς δὲ B ἔχει ἐξῆς μετὰ δευτέραν αὔξην τρίτην λαμβάνειν. ἔστι δέ που τοῦτο περὶ τὴν τῶν κύβων αὔξην καὶ τὸ βάθους μετέχον. Ἔστι 10 γάρ, ἔφη· ἀλλὰ ταῦτά γε, ὦ Σώκρατες, δοκεῖ οὐπω ἠυῶσθαι.

527 E—528 A 35 σκόπει οὖν κτλ.
 'Very well: make up your mind once for all with which of these parties you are discoursing: or are you not addressing your remarks to either, but' etc.? Glauco's insistence on the practical uses of astronomy may be all very well with a popular audience, but are out of place in a philosophical discussion. For this peremptory αὐτόθεν cf. Symp. 213 A. οὐ πρὸς οὐδετέρους lit. 'not to neither': cf. the familiar μάλλον ἢ οὐ for μάλλον ἢ (Kühner Gr. Gr. II pp. 771—773). I understand ἢ—ὄνασθαι (with Ast) as an independent question: for it is difficult to supply 'whether.' Schneider's objections to this view are based on the idea that ἢ οὐ (if interrogative) must have an affirmative answer; but οὐ has nothing to do with ἢ, and only balances ἀλλά: cf. Ar. Plut. 372 μὴν οὐ κέκλοφας, ἀλλ' ἤρπακας; Plato makes this clear by placing the two contrasting clauses in close juxtaposition. οὐ is omitted by Ξ and some inferior MSS. The text is, however, sound, and none of the proposed corrections—σὺν for οὐ (Schneider), εἰ πρὸς οὐδετέρους (Madvig), οὐδὲ πρὸς ἐτέρους (Cobet), εἰ οὐδὲ πρὸς ἐτέρους (Baier), ἢ που πρὸς οὐδετέρους (Liebhold)—will bear examination, though Cobet's deserves the praise of elegance.

528 A 4 ἀναγε—εἰς τοῦπίσω: 'fall back then': cf. Ar. Birds 383 ἀναγ' ἐπὶ σκέλος, with Blaydes' note. The metaphor is not naval (as Ast and Stallbaum hold), but military, nor is ἀνάγειν (ναῦν) even in naval language 'inhibere,' but 'put out to sea,' as in Hdt. VII 100, VIII 76 et al. and occasionally in Attic (for ἀνάγεσθαι). Cf. ἀνεχώρησας 528 D.

5 οὐκ ὁρθῶς: see on τὸ ἐχόμενον τούτου 526 C. The subjects ought to follow each other in the order of their complexity: see App. II. Plato's error was of course deliberately "contrived to emphasize the principle which it violated" (Bosanquet), and also, it may be added, to enable him to call especial attention to the study of Stereometry, on which he laid very great stress (527 D n.).

7 ἤδη should be taken with ὅν ('already in revolution'), not (as D. and V.) with λαβόντες.

528 B 8 δευτέραν αὔξην κτλ. It is better (with Schneider) to translate αὔξη by 'increase' than by 'dimension'; for αὔξη always implies something increased, and in the phrases δευτέρα αὔξη etc. this 'something' is the point. Among the Pythagoreans, who probably originated these expressions, the line was regarded as an αὔξη of the point, the plane of the line, the solid of the plane. See App. II.

9 κύβων αὔξην: 'cubic increase,' i.e. the increase which belongs to, or results in, cubes, with perhaps also a play on a different sense of κύβων αὔξην, 'how to increase cubes,' as in the famous 'Delian problem' of the διπλασιασμός κύβου (so also Tannery l. c. x p. 525). See on 527 D. But as cubes are not the only solid bodies, Plato adds τὸ βάθους μετέχον. By Aristotle's time the name στερεομετρία had been invented to designate the science as a whole (An. Post. II 13. 78^b 38).

10 ταῦτά γε—ἠυῶσθαι. Plato does not of course mean to say that the study of Stereometry had not yet been invented, for the subject had already in one form or another engaged the attention of the Py-

Διττὰ γάρ, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τὰ αἴτια· ὅτι τε οὐδεμία πόλις ἐντίμως αὐτὰ ἔχει, ἀσθενῶς ζητεῖται χαλεπὰ ὄντα, ἐπιστάτου τε δέονται οἱ ζητοῦντες, ἄνευ οὐ οὐκ ἂν εὖροιεν· ὃν πρῶτον μὲν γενέσθαι χαλεπόν, ἔπειτα καὶ γενομένου, ὡς νῦν ἔχει, οὐκ ἂν πείθοντο οἱ περὶ ταῦτα ζητητικοὶ μεγαλοφρονούμενοι. εἰ δὲ πόλις ὅλη ξυνεπιστατοῖ 15

12. τε Α²Π: om. Α¹.

14. οὐκ—μεγαλοφρονούμενοι Π et in marg. Α²: om. Α¹.

thagoreans, Anaxagoras and Democritus (Blass l.c. p. 21, Tannery l.c. x p. 524), not to speak of Hippocrates of Chios, who had concerned himself in the fifth century B.C. with the question of the duplication of the cube (Allman Gk Geometry etc. pp. 84 ff.). He only means that its problems had not yet been 'discovered' (ἡρῆσθαι as in Pythagoras' ἡύρηκα) or solved. When and by whom the 'Delian problem' in particular was definitively solved to the satisfaction of the Academy, is not quite clear. The tradition which ascribes a solution of it to Plato himself is beset with grave difficulties, as Blass (l.c. pp. 21—30) and others have pointed out (see especially Cantor l.c. pp. 194—202 and Sturm Das Delische Problem pp. 49 ff.). It is however universally allowed that the principle involved—the finding of "two mean proportionals between one straight line and another twice as long" (Gow Gk Math. p. 169)—was first stated by Hippocrates of Chios and well known to Plato, at all events when he wrote the Timaeus (32 A ff.: see also Häbler Ueber zwei Stellen in Platons Timaeus etc. pp. 1—17). We may perhaps infer from οὕτω ἡρῆσθαι that Plato did not think a final solution of this as of other stereometrical problems had yet been reached: there is at all events nothing in the Republic to justify the curious statement of Diogenes Laertius that (Ἀρχύτας) πρῶτος κύβον διπλασιασμὸν εἶρεν, ὡς φησι Πλάτων ἐν πολιτείᾳ (VIII 83), although it is probably true that Archytas was the first to offer a solution of the famous difficulty (see Sturm l.c. pp. 22—32). In D. L. l.c. Cobet reads πρῶτος κύβον εἶρεν κτλ., whether on his own responsibility, or on MS authority, he does not tell us. See also on 527 D, 528 C.

11 ὅτι τε κτλ. In Laws 819 E ff. Plato reproaches the Greeks for their ignorance of and indifference to stereometrical questions.

ἐντίμως ἔχει: 'holds in honour,' as in VIII 548 A. The expression usually means 'is honoured' (Xen. An. II 1. 7): hence ἀγει for ἔχει is proposed by Herwerden, who compares 528 C, 538 E. But the error is not an easy one in such a MS as A, and it is safer to keep ἔχει and take the phrase as=ἐν τιμῇ ἔχει (cf. ἐν ἀτιμίῃ ἔχει Hdt. III 3, ἐν εὐνοίᾳ ἔχειν [Dem.] 284. 11, and Jebb on Soph. Ant. 639) as ἀγειν ἐντίμως=ἄγειν ἐν τιμῇ (538 E).

14 ὡς νῦν ἔχει belongs no doubt to the following clauses (IV 419 A n.): but see also on 528 C.

15 μεγαλοφρονούμενοι is condemned as un-Attic by Cobet (V. L. pp. 232, 531); but μεγαλόφρων, μεγαλοφροσύνη are Attic, and Xenophon uses μεγαλοφρονεῖν. μεγαλαυχούμενοι (Cobet's emendation) would mean 'vaunting': cf. III 395 D.

528 C 15 εἰ δὲ πόλις κτλ. is perhaps the earliest demand in literature for the State-encouragement—we might almost say the State-endowment—of pure science (cf. Krohn Pl. St. p. 169). Plato implies that in his city this claim will be fully satisfied; and the Platonic Utopia is in fact "la revendication du pouvoir pour la science" (Tannery l.c. p. 521).

ξυνεπιστατοῖ κτλ.: 'should cooperate with the superintendent' etc. not (as Jowett) 'become the director of these studies': for a special ἐπιστάτης—Plato has just said—is needed in any case. Plato's picture of the odium stereometricum, if the phrase may be allowed, is evidently drawn from life. He seems to speak as if he had himself an ἐπιστάτης ready, and wished to secure for him public support in order that students might be willing to work under him. Now although ὡς νῦν ἔχει belongs, strictly speaking, to the following clause, the words may, so far as the Greek is concerned, be connected with ἔπειτα καὶ γενομένου, and will then be equivalent to ὡς νῦν ἐγένετο ἐπιστάτης. I think it not impossible that Plato intended his readers to suspect him ἐντίμως ἄγουσα αὐτά, οὐτοί τε ἂν πείθοντο, καὶ ξυνεχῶς τε ἂν καὶ ἐντόνως ζητούμενα ἐκφανῇ γένοιτο ὅπῃ ἔχει· ἐπεὶ καὶ νῦν ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν ἀτιμαζόμενα καὶ κολουόμενα, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν ζητούντων, λόγον οὐκ ἐχόντων καθ' ὃ τι χρήσιμα, ὅμως πρὸς ἅπαντα ταῦτα βίᾳ ὑπὸ

 20 χάριτος αὐξάνεται, καὶ οὐδὲν¹ θαυμαστὸν αὐτὰ φανῆναι. Καὶ μὲν D

of this further meaning. If there is anything in this conjecture, to whom does Plato allude? Not, surely, to himself, although some have suspected the philosopher of blowing his own trumpet in a somewhat similar passage of the Phaedo (78 A): see Lutoslawski's Plato's Logic pp. 263 f. We are told by Plutarch de genio Socratis 7. 579 C that Plato referred the Delian deputation to Eudoxus, telling them that the problem was οὐ τοι φαῦλον οὐδ' ἀμβλὺν διανοίας ὁρώσης, ἀκρῶς δὲ τὰς γραμμὰς ἡσκημένης ἔργον εἶναι· τοῦτο μὲν οὖν Εὐδόξον αὐτοῖς τὸν Κνίδιον ἢ τὸν Κυζικηνὸν Ἐλικῶνα συντελέσειν κτλ. Now we know that Eudoxus not only himself achieved a solution of the Delian problem (Sturm l.c. pp. 32—37), but was also, in the fullest sense of the term, 'the founder of scientific Stereometry' (Günther in Müller's Handbuch v 1, p. 30), and did more for the subject than any of Plato's disciples (Cantor l.c. pp. 208—210). For these reasons I think it not unlikely that Plato has Eudoxus in his mind. Eudoxus and his pupils seem to have been living and working in the Academy along with the followers of Plato some time between Plato's second and third visits to Sicily (368 B.C. and 361 B.C.: see Allman Gk Geometry etc. p. 178), and it is a pleasing and I hope pardonable conjecture—I do not claim that it is more—to suppose that Plato avails himself of this opportunity to pay a graceful compliment to his fellow-workers. See also on line 19 below and Introd. § 4.

16 ἐντίμως ἄγουσα. The phrase is illustrated by Lobeck Phryn. p. 419.

18 ὑπὸ δὲ κτλ. ὑπὸ depends on ἀτιμαζόμενα καὶ κολουόμενα. There is a sense in which the students also ἀτιμάζουσι καὶ κολουοῦσι a subject, which they ἀσθενῶς ζητοῦσιν (B above). κολουόμενα is in harmony with αὐξάνεται—though cut short, the study still grows or advances. For other views on this sentence see App. VIII.

Λόγον κτλ. The ζητοῦντες are the ζητητικοί of B—not, I think, Plato's pupils, but men who cannot explain the true utility of stereometry (as described in 527 D, E), and are unwilling to throw their whole hearts into a 'useless' study.

19 βίᾳ—αὐξάνεται. Blass (l.c. p. 22) observes that in these words "sine dubio mathematici ex schola Platonis profecti intelligendi sunt." It is just conceivable—though of course no stress should be laid on the conjecture—that ὑπὸ χάριτος conceals some complimentary allusion to a particular person. If so, Eudoxus may be intended (see above on 528 C). There is, it is true, a tradition that Plato and Eudoxus had not always been on the best of terms (Allman Gk Geom. pp. 128 f.), but during the visit of Eudoxus to Athens between 368 and 361 B.C., they appear to have worked harmoniously and even cordially together (ib. pp. 133, 178). See also 530 A n. But we have no evidence to shew that Eudoxus bore the sobriquet of χάρις, though his character and personality (see Arist. Eth. Nic. x 2. 1172^b 15 ff.), and even perhaps his name, deserved such a compliment. I think Plato means merely 'through elegance,' i.e. through the inherent elegance of the subject: cf. τὸ γε ἐπιχάρι καὶ διαφερόντως ἔχει. The use of ὑπὸ is as in ὑπὸ θεοῦς φωνὴν ἔρρηξε and the like: see Kühner-Gerth Gr. Gr. II 1, p. 523. Badham's ἐπιχάριτα for ὑπὸ χάριτος is an unlucky venture. Dr Jackson suggests that ὑπὸ χάριτος may perhaps mean 'by grace, favour,' 'on sufferance': but Glauco's reply appears to me against this view.

528 C, D 20 οὐδὲν—φανῆναι: 'be brought to light,' 'discovered,' 'solved': cf. x 602 D and ἠρῆσθαι and ἐκφανῇ above. Unless Badham, Madvig, and Baiter had entirely mistaken the meaning of φανῆναι, they could scarcely have conjectured or approved of τοιαῦτα in place of αὐτά. Plato's language seems to point to some exceptional activity in connexion with the study of stereometrical problems, such as may have been occasioned by the application from Delos (527 D n.), and to encourage his pupils to hope for success at no distant date.

δὴ, ἔφη, τό γε ἐπίχαρι καὶ διαφερόντως ἔχει. ἀλλὰ μοι σαφέστερον εἰπὲ ἂ νῦν δὴ ἔλεγες. τὴν μὲν γάρ που τοῦ ἐπιπέδου πραγματεῖαν γεωμετρίαν ἐτίθης. Ναί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. Εἰτά γ', ἔφη, τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀστρονομίαν μετὰ ταύτην, ὕστερον δ' ἀνεχώρησας. Σπεύδων γάρ, ἔφην, ταχὺ πάντα διεξελθεῖν μᾶλλον βραδύνω· ἐξῆς γὰρ οὖσαν 25 τὴν βάθους αὐξήσεως μέθοδον, ὅτι τῇ ζητήσῃ γελοίως ἔχει, ὑπερβὰς αὐτὴν μετὰ γεωμετρίαν ἀστρονομίαν ἔλεγον, φορὰν οὖσαν βάθους. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη, λέγεις. Τέταρτον τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τιθῶμεν μάθημα ἀστρονομίαν, ὡς ὑπαρχούσης τῆς νῦν παραλειπομένης, ἐὰν αὐτὴν πόλις μετή. Εἰκός, ἦ δ' ὅς· καὶ ὁ γε νῦν δὴ μοι, ὦ Σώκρατες, 30

29. παραλειπομένης A²H²Ξ γ: παραλειπομένης A¹Π.

528 D 21 ἀλλὰ μοι κτλ. The recapitulation is intended to emphasize once more the principle regulating Plato's sequence of subjects (528 A n. and App. II).

24 σπεύδων—βραδύνω: a proverbial saying, like our 'more haste, less speed': cf. (with Stallbaum) Pol. 264 B. If we σπεύδωμεν ταχέως, we are apt σπεύδοντες βραδύνειν; hence the proverb σπεῦδε βραδέως 'Eile mit Weile.' See Jebb on Soph. Ant. 231.

26 ὅτι τῇ ζητήσῃ κτλ.: not "quia ita est comparata, ut de ea quaerere ridiculum sit" (Stallbaum), but "quia ridicule tractatur": cf. (with Schneider) 529 E.

528 E—530 C Astronomy will accordingly be fourth in order, and Stereometry third. Yes, says Glauco; for assuredly Astronomy compels the soul to look 'on high.' On the contrary, Socrates replies, as studied at present, Astronomy turns the soul's eye down, though the bodily eye looks upward. True astronomy is not observation of the visible heavens, which are, like all things seen, imperfect and subject to change; it is a mathematical science, which studies the true movements of intelligible stars and uses the visible firmament as its orrery. We shall therefore pursue Astronomy by making use of problems and leave the heavens alone.

528 E ff. We have seen that the study of Stereometry, the science which deals with τρίτη αὐξή, naturally follows the study of Geometry, in which δευτέρα αὐξή is investigated (526 C n.). Astronomy, like Stereometry, is still concerned with bodies of three dimensions, but in Astronomy we have one additional element, viz. Motion, so that the study of Astronomy, as Plato conceives it, is a degree more complicated than Stereometry, and forms its natural sequel: cf. 528 A, B. Plato's conception of ἀριθμητική and γεωμετρική would have commended itself in the main to the mathematicians of his day (cf. 525 D ff., 527 A), although they might not have accepted his view of the ontology of these sciences; but in the two remaining subjects of his curriculum, Astronomy and Harmonics, he consciously and deliberately parts company with his contemporaries (see 529 A—530 C, 530 E—531 C). After every allowance has been made for the perfervid enthusiasm of Plato's style, it must be confessed that the application of the principles laid down in this chapter would have checked the progress of astronomical science. Both Astronomy and Harmonics are treated by Plato as branches of pure rather than applied mathematics; and in each of these sciences Plato either discredits or altogether prohibits observation. It must be remembered, on the other hand, that Plato's object is not to promote the study of physical science for its own sake, but to provide a suitable προπαιδεία for those who are to crown their lives by the contemplation of the Idea, from which every element of sense-perception is far removed. The astronomy which Plato sketches in this chapter is a unique compound of poetry, metaphysics and mathematics. Besides the powerful appeal which it makes to the poetical imagination, it has a permanent value even in the ἐπέπληξας περὶ ἀστρονομίας ὡς φορτικῶς ἐπαινοῦντι, νῦν ἢ σὺ μετέρχει ἐπαινώ. παντὶ γάρ μοι δοκεῖ δῆλον, ὅτι αὕτη γε ἀναγκάζει 529 ψυχὴν εἰς τὸ ἄνω ὄραν καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐνθένδε ἐκείσε ἄγει. Ἴσως, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, παντὶ δῆλον πλὴν ἐμοί· ἐμοὶ γὰρ οὐ δοκεῖ οὕτως. Ἀλλὰ πῶς; ἔφη. Ὡς μὲν νῦν αὐτὴν μεταχειρίζονται οἱ εἰς φιλοσοφίαν 5 ἀνάγοντες, πάννυ ποιεῖν κάτω βλέπειν. Πῶς, ἔφη, λέγεις; Οὐκ ἀγεννῶς μοι δοκεῖς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὴν περὶ τὰ ἄνω μάθησιν λαμβάνειν παρὰ στυγρῇ ἢ ἐστὶ· κινδυνεύεις γὰρ καὶ εἰ τις ἐν ὀροφῇ ποικίλ- B ματα θεώμενος ἀνακλύπτων καταμανθάνοι τι, ἡγεῖσθαι ἂν αὐτὸν νοήσει ἀλλ' οὐκ ὁμμασι θεωρεῖν. Ἴσως οὖν· καλῶς ἡγεῖ, ἐγὼ δ'

7. ἢ Ξγ: ἢ A²Π: η (sic) A¹.
Glaucōi tribuit A².

9. νοήσει Π: νοήσιν A.

ἴσως—εὐθηκῶς

history of Astronomy as a passionate protest against mere empiricism, and an emphatic if exaggerated vindication of the theoretical side of the science. See also on 529 C, D and App. II.

528 E—529 A 31 ἢ σὺ μετέρχει: lit. 'in respect of that, in respect of which you pursue it,' i.e. 'in the way in which you pursue it,' no longer for its practical uses, as I did before (527 D), but because it leads the soul 'on high,' and from things here yonder ("from the things of this world to the next," say D. and V., quite wrongly). The object of ἐπαινώ is not ἢ σὺ μετέρχει, but astronomy. Glauco has assimilated the phraseology of Socrates without its meaning. 'On high' and 'yonder' mean to Glauco the material heavens, not the νοητὸς τόπος: and he thinks the soul looks upwards if the bodily eye is turned aloft! The essence of Glauco's error consists in materializing the spiritual; and Plato here warns us against a danger which is responsible for countless errors, not only in Platonic criticism, but in every department of human thought and dogma. See also on 529 B, C.

529 A 4 οἱ εἰς φιλοσοφίαν ἀνάγοντες: 'those who would lead us upwards to philosophy ("welche zur Wissenschaftsliebe hinaufführen wollen," Schneider). Plato is thinking of teachers who recognise (with Isocr. Antid. 261) that Astronomy and kindred subjects are the παρασκευὴ φιλοσοφίας, but nevertheless teach Astronomy on methods directly calculated to turn the soul's eye down. His description fits some of the Sophists, particularly Hippias (see Prot. 318 E and cf. Isocr. Pan. 26—28). In οἱ—ἀνάγοντες Plato takes them at their own valuation. For the Greek cf. 521 C ψυχῆς περιγωγῇ ἐκ νυκτερινῆς τινος ἡμέρας εἰς ἀληθινὴν, τοῦ ὄντος οὖσαν ἐπάνοδον, ἣν δὴ φιλοσοφίαν ἀληθῆ φήσομεν εἶναι, where ἀληθῆ points the contrast with the false philosophy to which some would lead the soul. ἀνάγοντες preserves the idea of education as an ascent, in harmony with the prevailing metaphor throughout this book. The translation "those who embark on philosophy" (D. and V.) is untenable: so also are the two other versions in J. and C. ('raise astronomy to the rank of a science,' 'refer astronomy to philosophy'), as Shorey—whose view is more nearly correct—has pointed out (A. J. Ph. xvi p. 237).

5 οὐκ ἀγεννῶς: 'with a fine audacity,' "non sine generosa fiducia" (Schneider), as in Gorg. 492 D οὐκ ἀγεννῶς γε—ἐπεξέρχει τῷ λόγῳ παρρησιαζόμενος, and elsewhere.

529 B, C 7 κινδυνεύεις γὰρ κτλ. Glauco conceives of astronomy in exactly the same way as the Aristophanic Socrates; and this indignant repudiation by the Platonic Socrates is the more intelligible, if (with Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 274 n.) we suppose that Plato is thinking of the Clouds. Our astronomy (says Plato in effect), our vision upward, is not what Aristophanes made it appear to be, but something very different. See below on ἄνω κεχηνῶς in B and ἐξ ὑπτίας νέων in C.

εὐθηκῶς. ἐγὼ γὰρ αὖ οὐ δύναμαι ἄλλο τι νομίσαι ἄνω ποιοῦν 10 ψυχὴν βλέπειν μάθημα ἢ ἐκεῖνο, ὃ ἂν περὶ τὸ ὄν τε ἢ καὶ τὸ αὐρατον, εἴαν τε τις ἄνω κεχηνῶς ἢ κάτω συμμεμνκῶς τῷ αἰσθητῶν τι ἐπιχειρῇ μαθάνειν, οὔτε μαθεῖν ἂν ποτέ φημι αὐτόν—ἐπιστήμην C γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔχειν τῶν τοιούτων—οὔτε ἄνω ἀλλὰ κάτω αὐτοῦ¹ βλέπειν τὴν ψυχὴν, καὶ ἐξ ὑπτίας νέων ἐν γῇ ἢ ἐν θαλάττῃ μαθάνῃ. 15

XI. Δίκην, ἔφη, ἔχω· ὀρθῶς γάρ μοι ἐπέπληξας. ἀλλὰ πῶς ἐὶ ἔλεγε δεῖν ἀστρονομίαν μαθάνειν παρὰ ἃ νῦν μαθάνουσιν, εἰ μέλλοιεν ὠφελίμως πρὸς ἃ λέγομεν μαθήσεσθαι; Ὡδε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ·

12. ἢ κάτω II: ἢ κάτω A.

15. νέων II: μὲν A.

529 B 10 ἄλλο τι νομίσαι κτλ.:
 'think any other study one that makes,'
 etc. "Aliud esse puto νομίσαι τι ποιεῖν, aliud ποιοῦν idque huic loco magis aptum, scilicet non solum facere sive faciendū in praesentia occupatum esse, sed vim et consuetudinem faciendi habere aliquid existimare" (Schneider). ποιοῦν is half adjectival, like συμφέρον in Xen. Rep.
 Lac. I 6 (quoted by Ast) τοῦτο συμφέρον τῇ εὐγονίᾳ νομίζω. Heindorf's conjecture ποιεῖν was approved by Kühner Gr.
 Gr. II p. 631; but ποιοῦν is in all the MSS, and should be retained.

12 εἴαν τέ τις κτλ.: 'and if any one attempts to learn aught which is perceivable
 I care not whether his open mouth yawn upwards or his closed mouth look below—he will never, as I hold, learn' etc. For εἴαν τε, Hermann and Stallbaum read εἴαν δέ on slight MS authority; but οὐ δύναμαι and οὐ (τε)—φημι are properly joined by τε (Schneider). The English translators understand συμμεμνκῶς of closed eyes; but the eyes must of course be open in any case, and the balance with ἄνω κεχηνῶς is conclusive against this view. συμμύω, as the Lexica shew, is used of closing any bodily aperture. The state of the mouth is ludicrously irrelevant, but κεχηνῶς, which betokens rapt stupidity, inevitably suggests συμμεμνκῶς, and the whole expression is a finely indignant outburst of exuberant and extravagant satire on a gross misapprehension of Socratico-Platonic views.

ἄνω κεχηνῶς refers perhaps specifically to Clouds 171—173 ζητούντος αὐτοῦ τῆς σελήνης τὰς ὁδοὺς | καὶ τὰς περιφορὰς

εἴτ' ἄνω κεχηνῶτος | ἀπὸ τῆς ὀροφῆς νύκ-τωρ γαλειώτης κατέχεσεν. It will be admitted that Plato had some ground for his anger. I don't in the least care, he says in effect to Aristophanes, whether your Socrates looks up or down: so long as he studies αἰσθητά, he is not my Socrates, and I disown your caricature.
 For the general sense cf. (with J. and C.)
Tim. 91 D.

13 ἐπιστήμην—ἔχειν: 'admits of knowledge.'

529 C 15 τὴν ψυχὴν: though his bodily eye looks upwards.

καὶ ἐξ ὑπτίας κτλ.: 'aye, even though the learner float face upwards on land or in the sea.' I understand ἐξ ὑπτίας νείν ἐν γῇ as an allusion to Socrates in the κρεμάθρα: cf. Ar. 19 C ταῦτα γὰρ ἑώρατε καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀριστοφάνους κω-μῳδίᾳ, Σωκράτη τινὰ ἐκεῖ περιφερόμενον, φάσκοντά τε ἀεροβατεῖν κτλ. and see Ar.
Clouds 218—226. If we suppose that Socrates lay supine in his swinging κρε-μάθρα, as presumably he did, since he was looking at the moon, then any one who had seen the Clouds would at once catch the allusion, especially after ἄνω κεχηνῶς and the other references just above. For νείν of floating in the air, cf. ἀερωνυχής Ar. Clouds 337, with Blaydes ad loc. and on Peace 831.

ἢ ἐν θαλάττῃ is thrown in by Plato with the same extravagant mockery as κάτω συμμεμνκῶς. Float him on land, float him, if you like, in the sea; but though his body's eye looks upward, his soul looks down. On the text and other views of this passage see App. IX.

ταῦτα μὲν τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ποικίλματα, ἐπείπερ ἐν ὁρατῷ πεποι-

529 C, D 19 ταῦτα μὲν κτλ. 'Yonder embellishments in the heavens, forasmuch as they are wrought in that which is seen with the bodily eye, we should indeed consider more beautiful and perfect than anything visible, but far inferior to those which are genuine and true—far inferior to the movements wherewith essential speed and essential slowness, in true and genuine number and in all true forms, are moved in relation to each other and therewithal make that which is essentially in them to move: the true adornments, which are apprehended by reasoning and the mathematical intelligence, but not by sight.' The clause κάλλιστα μὲν—ἔχειν is concessive, and ἐπείπερ ἐν ὁρατῷ πεποικίλται gives the reason why τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ ποικίλματα πολὺ ἐνδεί τῶν ἀληθινῶν (sc. ποικιλμάτων), for the ἀληθινὰ ποικίλματα are wrought, not ἐν ὁρατῷ, but ἐν νοητῷ, i.e. in the lower νοητόν, with which and which alone the true astronomer as such is conversant. See App. I. The clause ἄς τὸ ὄν τάχος—φορὰς κτλ. explains τῶν ἀληθινῶν (ποικιλμάτων), being equivalent, as Schneider points out, to τοῦτ' ἔστι, τῶν φορῶν, ἄς κτλ., 'that is, the movements which' etc. So much for the relation between the different members of the sentence. In order to grasp the meaning of Plato, we should read the sentence aloud, letting the full stress of the voice fall on the words ἀληθινῶν, ὄν, οὕσα, ἀληθινῷ, ἀληθέσι and -όντα in τὰ ἐνόητα φέρει. Each of these words is emphatic, and expresses that degree of Truth or Being which belongs to the mathematical realities of true astronomy, as opposed to the sensibles or αἰσθητά which form the subject-matter of the astronomy which Plato has just condemned. Popular astronomy observes with the bodily eye the movements of visible and material planets, e.g. Mercury and Mars. These two planets φορὰς πρὸς ἀλλήλα φέρει in γιγνόμενος or κινήτος ἀριθμός, i.e. in time (cf. Tim. 37 C ff.), Mercury, as astronomers tell us, completing his orbit in about three, and Mars in about twenty-three, months. In the second place, these planets travel in γιγνόμενα (not ἀληθῆ) σχήματα, i.e. in forms or orbits which belong to the world of γιγνόμενα, and as they travel they carry with them the γιγνόμενα which they contain, Mars for example his snow-caps and canals. The

Platonic astronomer, on the other hand, looks with the eye of διάνοια at the ἀληθινὰ ποικίλματα, i.e. at the motions of true or mathematical stars. These mathematical stars φορὰς πρὸς ἀλλήλα φέρεται ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἀριθμῷ, i.e. in mathematical number, e.g. in 3 and 23 (not three months, etc.), and also ἐν ἀληθέσι σχήμασιν, i.e. in mathematical orbits, viz. the perfect ellipses which are imperfectly reproduced in the orbits of the visible material planets. Furthermore, although here perhaps our imagination may refuse to follow Plato in his slight, just as the visible Mars in his journey carries with him the γιγνόμενα which he contains, so Plato represents the true stars of mathematical astronomy as carrying round with them τὰ ἐνόητα, i.e. the mathematical realities which are in them. The mathematical counterpart of Mars, for example, will take with it in its revolution those perfect mathematical forms which are imperfectly reproduced in the canals and snow-caps of the visible Mars. Plato in short conceives of a mathematical οὐρανός of which the visible heavens are but a blurred and imperfect expression in time and space, just as every visible and material triangle is only an approximation to a true or perfect, i.e. a mathematical, triangle. The following remark of Aristotle's is intended as an objection to Plato's theory, but, according to the doctrine of this part of the Republic, Plato would have accepted the criticism as containing a just and true account of the astronomy which he prescribes: ἔτι δὲ εἰ τις παρὰ τὰ εἶδη καὶ τὰ αἰσθητὰ τὰ μεταξὺ θήσεται, πολλὰς ἀπορίας ἔξει. δῆλον γὰρ ὡς ὁμοίως γραμμαὶ τε παρ' αὐτὰς καὶ τὰς αἰσθητάς ἔσονται καὶ ἕκαστον τῶν ἄλλων γενόν. ὥστ' ἐπείπερ ἀστρολογία μία τούτων ἐστίν, ἔσται τις καὶ οὐρανός παρὰ τὸν αἰσθητὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ ἥλιός τε καὶ σελήνη καὶ τὰλλα ὁμοίως τὰ κατὰ τὸν οὐρανόν (Met. B 2. 997^b 12 ff.). It remains to speak of two particular difficulties. What does Plato mean by ταῦτα τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ποικίλματα, and by τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὕσα βραδυτής? The ποικίλματα seem to be generally identified with the stars and nothing more. But inasmuch as astronomy deals with φορὰ βάθους, and the ordinary astronomer, according to Plato, studies τὰς τῶν ἀστρων φορὰς (cf. 533 A) rather than

Δ κίλται, κάλλιστα μὲν ἡγείσθαι καὶ ἰ ἀκριβέστατα τῶν τοιούτων 20
 ἔχειν, τῶν δὲ ἀληθινῶν πολὺ ἐνδεῖν, ὥς τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυτῆς ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἀριθμῷ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἀληθέσι σχήμασι φοράς τε πρὸς ἄλληλα φέρεται καὶ τὰ ἐνόντα φέρει. ἂ δὲ λόγῳ μὲν καὶ διανοίᾳ ληπτὰ, ὅψει δ' οὐ· ἢ σὺ οἶε; Οὐδαμῶς, ἔφη.
 Οὐκοῦν, εἶπον, τῇ περὶ τὸν οὐρανὸν ποικιλίᾳ παραδείγμασι χρη- 25 στέον τῆς πρὸς ἐκεῖνα μαθήσεως ἕνεκα, ὁμοίως ὥσπερ ἂν εἴ τις Ε ἐντύχοι ὑπὸ Δαιδάλου ἢ ἰ τινος ἄλλου δημιουργοῦ ἢ γραφέως διαφερόντως γεγραμμένοις καὶ ἐκπεπονημένοις διαγράμμασιν.
 ἡγήσαιτο γὰρ ἂν πού τις ἔμπειρος γεωμετρίας ἰδὼν τὰ τοιαῦτα κάλλιστα μὲν ἔχειν ἀπεργασίᾳ, γελοῖον μὴν ἐπισκοπεῖν ταῦτα 30

28. διαφερόντως Α²Π: διαφέροντος Α¹.

ἄστρα themselves, it may be presumed that the ποικίλματα ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ in reality denote the stars regarded as moving bodies, i.e., strictly speaking, the movements of the heavenly bodies revolving in their orbits (cf. Tim. 39 D and 40 C); and the presumption becomes a certainty when we reach the words τῶν ἀληθινῶν, ὥς—φέρει, for since the true ποικίλματα which true astronomy studies are identified with the movements of true stars, we are bound in like manner to suppose that the γιγνόμενα ποικίλματα which observational astronomy studies are the movements of γιγνόμενα ἄστρα. Some may be disposed to think that τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ ποικίλματα refers to the intricate and complex patterns which the orbits of the celestial bodies weave upon the Heavens: cf. Tim. 39 D τὰς τούτων πλάνας, πλήθει μὲν ἀμυχάνῳ χρωμένας, πεποικιλμένας δὲ θανμαστῶς. But in view of expressions like Aesch. P. V. 24 ἡ ποικιλείμων νύξ and Eur. Hel. 1102 ἀστέρων ποικίλματα, it is better to hold that Plato adopts the word which was usually applied to the 'spangles' in the heavens, the "patines of bright gold," with which "the floor of heaven is thick inlaid" (Merchant of Venice v 1), and uses it of the movements of the stars, especially as throughout this chapter he consistently represents the visible stars which popular astronomy investigates as nothing but visible or material φοραί. I understand τὸ ὄν τάχος and ἡ οὐσα βραδυτῆς as the mathematical counterparts of visible stars. This interpretation is, I think, the only one which gives a proper sense to φοράς τε πρὸς ἄλληλα φέρεται καὶ τὰ ἐνόντα φέρει, and no other solution preserves in its full and unimpaired significance the necessary contrast between the astronomy of observation and Plato's form of the science. The place which in popular astronomy is occupied by a γιγνόμενον τάχος, e.g. the planet Mercury, and a γιγνομένη βραδυτῆς, e.g. the planet Mars, is in true astronomy filled by ὄν τάχος and οὐσα βραδυτῆς. Plato's conception of a true science of Astronomy is a remarkable product of his peculiar half-poetical, half-philosophical imaginative faculty, and differs fundamentally from the theory and practice of the science both in antiquity and now. But it must in fairness be allowed that if a science of astronomy could be constructed on Platonic principles, admitting no element of sense-perception, and dealing exclusively with incorporeal mathematical abstractions, it would prove a better prelude to the study of the ἀχρώματός τε καὶ ἀσχημάτιστος καὶ ἀναφῆς οὐσία (Phaedr. 247 C) than could ever be provided by the astronomy which depends on observation of the heavenly bodies. See further App. II, and for other views of this passage App. X.

529 D, E 25 παραδείγμασι κτλ. The visible heavens may be used as a moving orrery, but nothing more. ὁμοίως κτλ. is a singularly apt illustration, because the special feature of Daedalus' statues was that they moved (Euthyph. 11 B ff., Men. 97 D ff., Eur. Frag. 373).

σπουδῇ, ὡς τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἐν αὐτοῖς ληψόμενον ἴσων ἢ διπλασίων
 | ἢ ἄλλης τινὸς συμμετρίας. Τί δ' οὐ μέλλει γελοῖον εἶναι; ἔφη. 530
 Τῷ ὄντι δὴ ἀστρονομικόν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὄντα οὐκ οἶε ταῦτόν πείσεσθαι εἰς τὰς τῶν ἀστρων φορὰς ἀποβλέποντα; νομιεῖν μὲν, ὡς οἶόν τε 5 κάλλιστα τὰ τοιαῦτα ἔργα συστήσασθαι, οὕτω ξυνεστάναι τῷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ δημιουργῷ αὐτόν τε καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ· τὴν δὲ νυκτὸς πρὸς ἡμέραν ξυμμετρίαν καὶ τούτων πρὸς μῆνα καὶ μηνὸς πρὸς ἐνιαυτόν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀστρων πρὸς τε ταῦτα ¹ καὶ πρὸς ἄλληλα οὐκ B ἄτοπον, οἶε, ἡγήσεται τὸν νομίζοντα γίγνεσθαι τε ταῦτα αἰὲ ὡσαύτως καὶ οὐδαμῇ οὐδὲν παραλλάττειν, σῶμά τε ἔχοντα καὶ ὁρώμενα, 10 καὶ ζητεῖν παντὶ τρόπῳ τὴν ἀλήθειαν αὐτῶν λαβεῖν; Ἐμοὶ γοῦν δοκεῖ, ἔφη, σοῦ νῦν ἀκούοντι. Προβλήμασιν ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, χρώμενοι ὥσπερ γεωμετρίαν οὕτω καὶ ἀστρονομίαν μέτιμεν, τὰ δ'

530 A 2 τῷ ὄντι δὴ κτλ. It has been conjectured by Brandt (z. Entw. d. plat. Lehr. v. d. Seelenteilen p. 8) that Plato is thinking of Eudoxus; but there is nothing to suggest a specific reference here, as there was in 528 B, C, and as Eudoxus, "the father of scientific astronomical observation in Greece" was preeminently "a practical observer" (Allman Gk. Geometry etc. p. 142), he would hardly be described by Plato in this passage as τῷ ὄντι ἀστρονομικός. See also Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. d. plat. Pol. p. 667.

4 τὰ τοιαῦτα: i.e. ὁρατά, σωματοειδῆ. τῷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ δημιουργῷ: the Demiurgus of the Timaeus.

5 τὴν δὲ νυκτὸς κτλ.: with which astronomical observation is concerned. Plato's tone is very different in the Timaeus (47 A ff.) as Grote points out (Plato III p. 235 n., where also an amusing parallel is quoted from Malebranche); but it should be remembered that it is with the educational value of astronomy as a preparation for Dialectic that we are here concerned (note εἰ μέλλομεν—ποιήσῃν in B, and see App. II).

7 τῶν ἄλλων ἀστρων: 'the other stars' (Schneider), as ταῦτα shews, not 'the stars besides' (as Stallbaum).

ταῦτα: viz. the Sun and Moon, which make day, night, year, and month.

530 B 9 παραλλάττειν—ὁρώμενα is a cardinal principle with Plato: see Tim. 28 A, B, 37 D and especially Pol. 269 D, E. παράλλαξις is used half-technically of any change or deviation in the courses of the heavenly bodies, as for example in the legend of Atreus (Pol. 269 A): cf. Tim. 22 C.

10 ζητεῖν depends on ἄτοπον ἡγήσεται, ἄτοπον being now taken as neuter. A reference to 525 B n. will shew that Madvig's ζητήσῃ (or ζητεῖν δεῖν), and Richards' ζητοῦντα, with other conjectures, are wholly beside the mark. J. and C. (following Stallbaum) say ζητεῖν "depends on νομίζοντα with the common ellipse of δεῖν": but δεῖν is not commonly omitted. In ζητεῖν—λαβεῖν there is a slight suggestion of something like the historical Socrates' distrust of astronomy (Xen. Mem. IV 7. 6).

11 προβλήμασιν κτλ. Some have cited in illustration "Leverrier and Adams calculating an unknown planet into existence by enormous heaps of algebra" (De Morgan, quoted by Bosanquet p. 293: cf. Lutoslawski Plato's Logic p. 300). The example is striking but inapposite; for, according to this passage, the visible perturbations of Uranus, which occasioned the search for Neptune, would not have seemed to Plato anything very extraordinary. Unless he is greatly exaggerating here, and I do not deny that throughout this passage there is a touch of γενναῖον πάθος, ὥσπερ ὑπὸ μανίας τινὸς καὶ πνεύματος ἐνθουσιαστικῶς ἐκπνέον καὶ οἰοεὶ φοιβεῖν τοὺς λόγους (Longinus περὶ ὕψους 8. 4), Plato's views on law in the heavens must have undergone considerable modification before he wrote the Latus: see the striking passage 821 B ff., and Tim. 47 A ff.

12 τὰ δ' ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ εἴσομεν: 'we

Ο ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἐάσομεν, εἰ μέλλομεν ὄντως ἀστρονομίας μεταλαμβάνοντες χρήσιμον τὸ φύσει φρόνιμον ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἐξ ἀχρήστου ποιήσῃν. Ἡ πολλαπλάσιον, ἔφη, τὸ ἔργον ἢ ὡς νῦν ἀστρονομεῖται 15 προστάττεις. Οἷμαι δέ γε, εἶπον, καὶ τᾶλλα κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον προστάξειν ἡμᾶς, εἴν τι ἡμῶν ὡς νομοθετῶν ὕφελος ᾗ.

14. ἀχρήστου A²Π: ἀρχῆς τοῦ A¹.

will dispense with the starry heavens.' There is a touch of fine audacity, not to say impiety, in Plato's phrase. Greater than the starry heavens is the mind of man. Nettleship (Lect. and Rem. II pp. 271—277) and Bosanquet (Companion pp. 290—293) are, as it seems to me, unduly anxious throughout the whole of this episode to minimise and explain away Plato's depreciation of the senses and their objects, although by so doing they can make his theories harmonize more nearly with the views of certain modern philosophers, and possibly also with the truth. Krohn (Pl. St. pp. 170—174) inclines to the opposite error, although, except perhaps on verbal grounds, Plato would not quarrel with his definition of Platonic astronomy as "die Wissenschaft von den Bewegungen intelligiblen Körper." Plato's Astronomy is in fact a kind of idealised Kinematics, with occasional illustrations from the visible movements of the heavenly bodies (τῇ περὶ τὸν οὐρανὸν ποικιλῶν παραδείγμασι χρηστέον κτλ. 529 D).

16 οἷμαι δέ γε κτλ. 526 C n.

530 C—531 C Next will come the science which is sister to Astronomy, viz. Harmonics. For particulars we will refer to the Pythagoreans, taking care, however, to maintain our leading principles intact. We may ignore the good people who try to determine a minimum interval and unit of measurement by the ear; but the Pythagoreans are also wrong, for it is the numerical ratios of audible consonances which they study. They ought to ascend to problems and examine which numbers are consonant, which not, and why. The science of Harmonics is useless for our purpose if otherwise pursued.

530 C ff. With the science of Harmonics we reach the end of Plato's προπαιδεία. Plato's conception of Harmonics is in all respects analogous to his view of Astronomy. We have seen that the visible movements of the celestial bodies are only imperfect copies of those mathematical movements which true Astronomy seeks to apprehend. In like manner, the audible movements which produce audible consonances are imperfect reproductions of those mathematical movements from which result mathematical consonances, and it is these true consonances which the ἀρμονικός should study. The methods of pure mathematics are to be employed in Harmonics as well as in Astronomy, and observation and experiment are forbidden. If we criticise Plato from the standpoint of acoustical science, we must allow that he falls into the same error as before, but the emphasis, however exaggerated, which he lays on the mathematical and theoretical element in Harmonics, is not without importance in the history of the science; and we must remember that the study of Harmonics is valuable to Plato only as a preparation for Dialectic. The poetical affinities of the Platonic science of Harmonics are worthy of remark, though this chapter refrains from any allusion to them. It is altogether in harmony with Plato's theory to hold that 'the solemn and divine harmonies of music, heard or learned,' appeal to us so powerfully because they are one expression of those 'unheard harmonies' which are also expressed in the sister souls of Nature and of Man (Tim. 35 A ff.), and although there is much in Browning's Abt Vogler to which Plato would demur, the idea which inspires that noble poem has its philosophical basis in some such theory as Plato here suggests.

"But here is the finger of God, a flash of the will that can,
Existent behind all laws, that made them and lo they are!
And I know not, if, save in this, such gift be allowed to man,
That out of three sounds he frame, not a fourth sound, but a star.

XII. Ἀλλὰ γὰρ τί ἔχεις ὑπομνήσαι τῶν προσηκόντων μαθημάτων; Οὐκ ἔχω, ἔφη, νῦν γ' οὕτωςί. Οὐ μὲν ἔν, ἀλλὰ 20 πλείω, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, εἶδη παρέχεται ἡ φορά, ὡς ἐγὼμαι. τὰ μὲν οὖν πάντα ἴσως ὅστις σοφὸς ἔξει εἰπεῖν· ἡ δὲ καὶ ἡμῖν προφανῆ. ἐνὸς D Ποῖα δὴ; Πρὸς τούτῳ, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἀντίστροφον αὐτοῦ. Τὸ ποῖον; Κινδυνεύει, ἔφην, ὡς πρὸς ἀστρονομίαν ὄμματα πέπηγεν, ὡς πρὸς ἐναρμόνιον φορὰν ὅτα παγῆναι, καὶ αὗται ἀλλήλων ἀδελφαί τινες 25 αἱ ἐπιστῆμαι εἶναι, ὡς οἱ τε Πυθαγόρειοι φασὶ καὶ ἡμεῖς, ὧ Γλαῦκων, συγχωροῦμεν. ἡ πῶς ποιοῦμεν; Οὕτως, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἐπειδὴ πολὺ τὸ ἔργον, ἐκείνων πευσόμεθα, πῶς λέγουσι E περὶ αὐτῶν καὶ εἴ τι ἄλλο πρὸς τούτοις· ἡμεῖς δὲ παρὰ πάντα

Consider it well: each tone of our scale in itself is nought;
It is everywhere in the world—loud, soft, and all is said:
Give it to me to use! I mix it with two in my thought;
And there! ye have heard and seen: consider and bow the head!"

It is perhaps because he believed that the Soul of the Universe no less than that of Man is attuned to these eternal harmonies, as well as for other reasons, that Plato makes his προπαιδεία culminate in Harmonics. See also App. II.

530 C 18 ἀλλὰ γάρ κτλ. Socrates means: If you criticise my curriculum (as in ἡ πολλαπλάσιον—προσάττει), you are doubtless ready with suggestions of your own: hence I appeal to you: 'what suitable study can you suggest?' 'I cannot,' says Glauco, 'make any suggestion straight off.' ἀλλὰ γάρ ('however' as in Theaet. 144 B, Sympr. 220 E) goes closely with the previous sentence; if it were otherwise, Plato would have added ἣν δ' ἐγώ or the like. The reading ἀλλὰ γάρ τι (q Vind. F, Hermann etc.) can hardly stand; nor is Steinhart's ἄλλο γάρ τι κτλ., or Richards' ἀλλὰ γάρ <ἄλλο> τι (or ἀλλὰ γάρ <ἐτι> τι) pleasing or probable. I formerly suggested ἀλλὰ γάρ τι ἔχεις <σύ> ὑπομνήσαι κτλ., the other subjects having all been suggested by Socrates and not Glauco, with the partial exception of geometry 526 C; but now believe (with Schneider) that the text is sound.

20 πλείω κτλ. φορὰ is (according to both Plato and Aristotle) a specific variety of κίνησις, being in fact, ἡ κατὰ τόπον κίνησις. Of the genus κίνησις Plato enumerates ten varieties in Laws 893 B ff.; of φορὰ in particular some specific εἶδη are mentioned by Arist. Eth. Nic. X 3 1174^a 30 ff.

530 D 22 πρὸς τούτῳ: "praeter astronomicum φορὰς s. motus genus" (Stallbaum).

23 ὡς πρὸς ἀστρονομίαν κτλ. ἀστρονομία is φορὰ βάθους (528 E n.), and appeals to the eye in the same way as ἐναρμόνιος φορὰ, or movement in accordance with the laws of ἁρμονία (III 397 B, 398 D, E m.), appeals to the ear. In ἐναρμόνιος φορὰ the air moves more or less quickly etc., and this accounts for the different pitch etc. of notes: see Tim. 67 B, 80 A ff. and Theo Smyrn. p. 50 Hüller, where this—Pythagorean as well as Platonic—theory of sound is very clearly explained. Cf. also von Jan Musici Scriptores Graeci pp. 130 ff.

24 ἀδελφαί τινες. Cf. [Archytas] in Mullach Frag. Phil. Graec. I p. 564 περὶ τε δὴ τὰς τῶν ἀστρον ταχυνάτος καὶ ἐπιτολῶν καὶ δυσίων παρέδωκαν αἰνὴν διάγνωσιν καὶ περὶ γαμετρίας καὶ ἀριθμῶν καὶ οὐχ ἥκιστα περὶ μουσικῆς· ταῦτα γὰρ τὰ μαθήματα δοκοῦντι εἶμεν ἀδελφαί, ib. p. 565 and (with J. and C.) Tim. 47 B, C. The sisterhood of Music and Astronomy is best seen in the 'harmony of the Spheres': see X 617 B n. and RP⁷. 68 B m.

530 E 27 ἐκείνων πευσόμεθα κτλ. Plato does not claim to be a specialist in musical matters: cf. III 400 A. The words καὶ εἴ τι ἄλλο πρὸς τούτοις look like a general acknowledgment of obligation throughout this part of the Republic to the Pythagoreans. See App. II.

ταῦτα φυλάζομεν τὸ ἡμέτερον. Ποῖον; Μή ποτ' αὐτῶν τι ἀτελὲς ἐπιχειρῶσιν ἡμῖν μαίνεται οὓς θρέψομεν, καὶ οὐκ ἐξήκον ἐκείσε 3: αἰί, οἱ πάντα δεῖ ἀφήκειν, οἶον ἄρτι περὶ τῆς ἀστρονομίας ἐλέγομεν. 531 ἢ οὐκ οἶσθ' ὅτι καὶ περὶ ἁρμονίας ἕτερον | τοιοῦτον ποιοῦσι; τὰς γὰρ ἀκουόμενας αὐ συμφωνίας καὶ φθόγους ἀλλήλοις ἀναμετροῦντες ἀνήνυτα ὥσπερ οἱ ἀστρονόμοι πονοῦσιν. Νῆ τοὺς θεούς, ἔφη, καὶ γελοῖως γε, πυκνώματ' ἅττα ὀνομάζοντες καὶ παραβάλλ-

30 ἐξήκον κτλ. The MS reading αἰί, οἱ gives a weightier and better meaning than οἱ αἰί, which Richards proposes. For ἀφήκειν Eusebius (Præf. Ev. XIV 13. 5) has ἀνήκειν, also a rare word: Stephanus conjectured ἐφήκειν. ἀφήκειν is better, though rarer, than either: cf. (with Schneider) ἀφίκεται in 531 D. The reference in ἄρτι is to 529 A ff.

531 A I τὰς γὰρ ἀκουόμενας κτλ. The intervals reckoned as consonant (σύμφωνα) were such as the octave, double octave, fifth and fourth: see on IV 430 E. These the Pythagoreans 'measure by' (or 'against') 'one another,' by comparing the lengths of vibrating strings of the same material, thickness and tension. It is thus found that the octave is 2 : 1, the double octave 4 : 1, the fifth 3 : 2, and the fourth 4 : 3. See Dict. of Ant. II p. 193 with Theo Smyrn. pp. 48—51, 56—61 Hiller, and Aristox. Harm. 20 ff. Marquard. Richards proposes <έν> ἀλλήλοις, but the dative is strictly accurate: cf. Tim. 39 D τῷ τοῦ ταῦτο καὶ ὁμοίως ἴστος ἀναμετρηθέντα κύκλω.

3 ὥσπερ οἱ ἀστρονόμοι. The parallel is exact: as the astronomers studied visible, so the Pythagoreans investigated audible φοραί (Theo l.c.). To Plato, on the other hand, ἁρμονία ἀφανὴς φανερῆς κρείσσων (Heracl. Fr. 47 Bywater). 'Heard harmonies are sweet, but those unheard are sweeter.' See above on 530 C.

3 νῆ τοὺς θεούς κτλ. There were two rival schools of musical theory in Greece, viz. "(1) the Pythagorean or mathematical, who identified each interval with a ratio, (2) the 'musical' (μουσικοί), who measured all intervals as multiples or fractions of the Tone" (Monro in Dict. Ant. II p. 193). Cf. Modes of Anc. Gk. Mus. p. 124. Plato's criticism was intended to apply to the first school; but Glaucō erroneously understands it of the second.

4 πυκνώματα κτλ. ἅττα (nescio quare) and ὀνομάζοντες shew that πυκνώματα is a technical term. The word πύκνωμα does not appear to occur elsewhere in this sense, but πυκνόν was a favourite word with writers of the 'musical' school, as may be seen from its constant employment by Aristoxenus. πυκνόν is thus defined: τὸ ἐκ δύο διαστημάτων συνεστηκὸς ἂ συντεθέντα ἑλαττον διάστημα περιέξει τοῦ λειπομένου διαστήματος ἐν τῷ διὰ τεσσάρων (Aristox. Harm. 24. 10 ff. Marquard) i.e. any combination of two intervals which are together less than the interval remaining in the Fourth when the πυκνόν is subtracted from the Fourth, e.g. two quarter tone intervals, or even two semitone intervals (but not more): see Aristox. l.c. 50. 15 ff. The definition in Bacchius Isag. 20 von Jan τὸ ἐκ δύο διαστημάτων ἐλαχίστων συγκείμενον ἐν ἐκάστῳ γένει is less exact, but not, so far as it goes, inconsistent with that of Aristoxenus. Plato's πυκνώματα must be "haec ipsa πυκνά vel alia parva et tamen composita intervalla," so called "propter sonorum in angusto spatio quasi confertiorum frequentiam" (Schneider). Cf. πυκνότης in Latins 812 D, καταπυκνοῦσθαι, καταπύκνωσις etc. in Theo 91 and often in Aristoxenus, and see generally Westphal and Rossbach Gr. Harm. etc. pp. 105 ff. It is possible that the musical application of these terms was originally a metaphor borrowed from the art of weaving: for "vestes spatha textae, ob densitatem, quam inde consequantur, πυκνώματα dictae ap. Aesch. Suppl. 235 πέπλοις βαρβαροῖσι, καὶ πυκνώμασι" (Stephanus-Hase s.v. πύκνωμα, where reference is made also to Hesych. s.v. σπάθημα and a Scholiast on Ar. Ach. 180). I agree with Schneider in doubting whether Gellius' "frequentamenta" (I 11. 12, V 1. 1) are the same as Plato's πυκνώματα.

5 λοντες τὰ ὧτα, οἶον ἐκ γειτόνων φωνὴν θηρευόμενοι, εἰ μὲν φασι
 ἔτι κατακούειν ἐν μέσῳ τινὰ ἤχην καὶ σμικρότατον εἶναι τοῦτο διάστημα, ᾧ μετρητέον, οἱ δὲ ἀμφισβητοῦντες ὡς ὅμοιον ἤδη φθεγγομένων, ἀμφοτέροι ὧτα | τοῦ νοῦ προστησάμενοι. Σὺ μὲν, B ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοὺς χρηστοὺς λέγεις τοὺς ταῖς χορδαῖς πράγματα 10 παρέχοντας καὶ βασανίζοντας, ἐπὶ τῶν κολλόπων στρεβλοῦντας· ἵνα δὲ μὴ μακροτέρα ἢ εἰκὼν γίγνηται πλήκτρῳ τε πληγῶν γιγνομένων καὶ κατηγορίας περὶ καὶ ἐξαρνήσεως καὶ ἀλαζονείας χορδῶν,

8. φθεγγομένων A¹Π: φθεγγόμενον corr. A².

5 οἶον ἐκ γειτόνων κτλ.: 'as if they were trying to catch a sound in the neighbourhood.' Cf. Heliod. i 17 πίνει δὲ ἐνταῦθα ἐκ γειτόνων and Blaydes on Ar. Plut. 435 or Stephanus-Hase Thest. s.v. γείτων, where numerous examples of this highly idiomatic phrase are quoted. J. and C.'s translation "from a neighbour's house" is incorrect and pointless; still worse is Westphal's "als ob sie die Intervallgrösse dem Nachbarton ablauschen wollen." The idiom was understood by Ficinus, who translates it by "viciniore loco."

οἱ μὲν φασι κτλ. Some will have it that they overhear a note between (let us say) B and C, and that this is the smallest interval, and should be the unit of measurement: others say 'No! it is not different from B.' Plato (who is all for simplicity in music Latius 812 c) here satirises the μουσικοί, who made the quartertone or diesis their unit: see Theo 55 δέισιν δὲ καλοῦσιν ἐλαχίστην οἱ περὶ Ἀριστόξενον τὸ τεταρτημόριον τοῦ τόνου, ἥμισυ δὲ ἡμιτονίου, ὡς ἐλάχιστον μελῶδῶν διάστημα, and on the ἐναρμόνιον γένος generally, which Plato strongly disliked (Theo 56; cf. also Procl. in Tim. 191 E), and in which the δέισις played a large part, Dict. of Ant. l.c. and Westphal and Rossbach l.c.

7 ἀμφισβητοῦντες. We should expect ἀμφισβητοῦσιν (so Theo 6) or else φάσκοντες instead of φασι above. Cobet would emend, but the anacoluthon is not difficult in a writer like Plato: see on VI 488 c, D and supra 519 A n.

8 φθεγγομένων: sc. τῶν χορδῶν, omitted as in ἡ διὰ πασῶν.

ὧτα κτλ. This bitter epigram was applied by Adrastus to Aristoxenus (Procl. in Tim. 192 B). The cap fits admirably; for Aristoxenus was afterwards the leader of the μουσικοί whose principle is here ridiculed. With the expression itself cf. Pliny Epp. VII 27. 8 sed offirmare animum auribusque praetendere.

531 B 8 σὺ μὲν κτλ. Socrates now corrects Glauco's error: see on νῆ τοὺς θεοὺς κτλ. 531 A. τοὺς χρηστοὺς is of course contemptuous. Plato has no sympathy with the 'μουσικοί.'

9 τοὺς ταῖς χορδαῖς κτλ.: 'who persecute and torture the strings, racking them upon the pegs. But lest my figure become somewhat tedious if I dwell upon the blows delivered with the plectrum, and the accusations brought against the strings, as well as their denials and braggadocio behaviour' etc. The figure (εἰκὼν) is from torturing and beating slaves, as βασανίζοντας, στρεβλοῦντας and πληγῶν shew: even πράγματα παρέχοντας suggests a court of law (cf. Crit. 44 E). The strings are the victims, while the pegs are the pulleys by which they were racked upon the τροχός (see Dict. Ant. s. v. eculus). For ἐπὶ Herwerden proposes ὑπό: but the strings are racked by the musicians upon the pegs.

11 πλήκτρῳ τε πληγῶν κτλ. The etymological meaning of πλήκτρον adds point to this part of the comparison.

12 περὶ from its position divides πληγῶν and κατηγορίας, which refer to the behaviour of the musicians, from ἐξαρνήσεως καὶ ἀλαζονείας, in which the behaviour of the strings is described. For the anastrophe of περὶ see Lina de praeposit. usu Plat. pp. 26—30. The angry musician is like the prosecutor, and blames the strings, which in their turn repudiate the charge and swagger away like a stubborn slave however savagely the screw is turned. For a further discussion of this passage see App. XI.

παύομαι τῆς εἰκόνης καὶ οὐ φημι τούτους λέγειν, ἀλλ' ἐκείνους οὓς ἔφαμεν νῦν δὴ περὶ ἀρμονίας ἐρήσσεσθαι. ταὐτὸν γὰρ ποιοῦσι C τοῖς ἐν τῇ ἀστρονομίᾳ. ¹ τοὺς γὰρ ἐν ταύταις ταῖς συμφωνίαις ταῖς 15 ἀκουσόμεναις ἀριθμοὺς ζητοῦσιν, ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰς προβλήματα ἀνίσχουσιν, ἐπισκοπεῖν τίνες ξύμφωνοι ἀριθμοὶ καὶ τίνες οὐ, καὶ διὰ τί ἐκίτεροι. Δαιμόνιον γάρ, ἔφη, πρᾶγμα λέγεις. Χρήσιμον μὲν οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρὸς τὴν τοῦ καλοῦ τε καὶ ἀγαθοῦ ζήτησιν, ἄλλως δὲ μεταδιωκόμενον ἄχρηστον. Εἰκός γ', ἔφη. 20

XIII. Οἶμαι δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἡ τούτων πάντων ὧν D διεληλύθαμεν μέθοδος ἐὰν ¹ μὲν ἐπὶ τὴν ἀλλήλων κοινωνίαν ἀφί-κηται καὶ ξυγγένειαι, καὶ ξυλλογισθῇ ταῦτα ἧ ἐστὶν ἀλλήλοις οἰκεία. φέρειν τι αὐτῶν εἰς ἃ βουλόμεθα τὴν πραγματείαν, καὶ οὐκ

14. ἐρήσσεσθαι A²Π²Ξ g: αἰρήσσεσθαι A¹Π¹. 16. ἀνίσχουσιν A²Π: ἀνίσχουσιν A¹.

13 ἐκείνους: i.e. the Pythagoreans, and not the μουσικοί, as Glauco supposed.

531 C 15 τοὺς γὰρ κτλ. It is strange that in spite of οὓς ἔφαμεν νῦν δὴ κτλ. this should have been so frequently understood as referring to the school satirised by Glauco: see for example Susemihl Gen. Eritw. II p. 210. Plato is of course, as Schneider pointed out, speaking about the Pythagoreans who investigated the numbers or ratios of audible consonances: see 531 A n. and RP.⁷ § 56 C.

16 ἀλλ' οὐκ κτλ. Cf. 530 B. ἀνίσχουσιν is undoubtedly present, and not future, here: see on V 473 C.

17 τίνες ξύμφωνοι κτλ. As the true astronomer should study intelligible stars with the mathematical intelligence, using the visible stars only as imperfect παραδείγματα (529 C, D n.), so the true ἀρμονικός must investigate intelligible, and not audible, consonances. In the words of a modern writer, he must "look, not into the tone-world here, but into the world of harmony beyond." Plato holds that certain mathematical numbers are in themselves ξύμφωνοι, and others not: see Theo 72—75, where examples of both varieties are given. The numbers or ratios of audible consonances are only particular and imperfect embodiments or expressions of these numbers: they may serve as παραδείγματα, but nothing more. In the Timaeus Plato represents the World-soul as the grandest expression of certain ξύμφωνοι ἀριθμοί, so that it is natural enough for him to crown his προπαιδεία with the study of mathematical συμφωνία, and say that it is 'useful in seeking out the beautiful and good.' It must nevertheless be admitted that Plato's conception of Harmonics as well as of Astronomy is fundamentally different from that of modern science, in spite of the attempts which Bosanquet and others have made to prove their essential harmony. See on 530 C and App. II.

531 C—533 D The pursuit of these studies, if carried far enough to reveal their mutual relationship, will contribute to the end which we desire; but after all, they are only the prelude to Dialectic. We may compare Dialectic to the prisoner's progress from looking on real animals to beholding the sun, and these preparatory studies to his release and ascent from shadows and images within the cave to shadows of real objects in the world above. Socrates declines to give an account of the method and object of Dialectic; but insists that the Good must be seen, and that Dialectic alone can reveal it, for Dialectic is the only study which ascends on the ruins of its hypotheses to the Idea of Good, leading the soul on high, and using the 'Arts' as handmaidens and helpers in the process of education.

531 D ff. Plato's conception of Dialectic and dialectical science is fully discussed in App. III.

23 ἧ—οἰκεία κτλ. Cf. [Epin.] 991 E ff. πᾶν διάγραμμα ἀριθμοῦ τε σύστημα καὶ ἀρμονίας σύστασιν ἅπασαν τῆς τε τῶν ἀστρων περιφορᾶς τὴν ὁμολογίαν οὔσαν

25 ἀνόνητα πονεῖσθαι, εἰ δὲ μή, ἀνόνητα. Καὶ ἐγώ, ἔφη, οὕτω μαν-τεύομαι. ἀλλὰ πάμπολυ ἔργον λέγεις, ὦ Σώκρατες. Τοῦ προοιμίον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἢ τίνας λέγεις; ἢ οὐκ ἴσμεν, ὅτι πάντα ταῦτα προοιμιά ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ τοῦ νόμου, ὃν δεῖ μαθεῖν; οὐ γάρ που δοκοῦσί γέ σοι οἱ ταῦτα¹ δεινοὶ διαλεκτικοὶ εἶναι. Οὐ μὰ τὸν Δί', ἔφη, εἰ μὴ Ε 30 μάλα γέ τινες ὀλίγοι ὦν ἐγὼ ἐντετύχηκα. Ἄλλ' ἤδη, εἶπον, μὴ δυνατοὶ τινες ὄντες δοῦναί τε καὶ ἀποδεξασθαι λόγον εἰσεσθαι ποτέ τι ὦν φάμεν δεῖν εἰδέναι; Οὐδ' αὖ, ἔφη, τοῦτό γε. | Οὐκοῦν, 532 εἶπον, ὦ Γλαύκων, οὗτος ἤδη αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ νόμος, ὃν τὸ διαλέγεσθαι περαίνει; ὃν καὶ ὄντα ἰοητὸν μιμοῖτ' ἂν ἢ τῆς ὄψεως δύναμις, ἣν ἐλέγομεν πρὸς αὐτὰ ἤδη τὰ ζῶα ἐπιχειρεῖν ἀποβλέπειν καὶ πρὸς

30. μὴ II: οἱ μὴ A, sed οἱ punctis notavit A². 3. περαίνει q: παραινέει AΠΞ.

μίαν ἀπάντων ἀναφανῆναι δεῖ τῷ κατὰ τρόπον μανθάνοντι, ἀναφανήσεται δὲ ἂν—ὁρθῶς τις εἰς ἐν βλέπων μανθάνη· δεσμός γὰρ πεφυκὼς πάντων τούτων εἰς ἀναφανήσεται διανοουμένοις· εἰ δ' ἄλλως πως ταῦτα μεταχειριέται τις, τύχην δεῖ καλεῖν. The apprehension of the 'one in the many' in these preliminary studies prepares us for the dialectical conception of the universe of Thought as an organic and correlated whole (VI 511 R—D nn.); but the mere specialist in mathematics for example, or astronomy, can never become a dialectician. Cf. 537 C and Euthyd. 290 B ff.

28 νόμου: 'song' or 'strain.' There is no pun on νόμος 'law,' as Bosanquet supposes. Dialectic is not a 'law' in the Greek sense of the word.

οὐ γάρ που κτλ. Theodorus in the Theaetetus (146 B) is a good example, and everyone who knows men who are distinguished mathematicians and nothing more will heartily echo Glauco's emphatic οὐ μὰ τὸν Δία. Taught on the Platonic method, not as an end, but as a means, by teachers who have themselves penetrated into regions beyond and above the sphere of pure mathematics, and who are constantly on the alert to direct their pupils thither, the study of mathematics may prove one of the most valuable of all instruments of education. See App. II.

531 E 30 ὦν. For the attraction see VI 510 B n.

ἀλλ' ἤδη κτλ. 'Well, did it ever seem to you that persons who are unable' etc.
The subject is μὴ δυνατοὶ τινες ὄντες—λόγον, and after ἤδη "supplendum est ἔδοξαν, quod ipsum Glauconis verbis ma-gis accommodatum est quam δοκοῦσι" (Schneider). The form of Socrates' question is in fact affected by Glauco's reference to the past in ὦν ἐγὼ ἐντετύχηκα.

I formerly, with v and three other mss, including Vind. F, read ἀλλὰ δὴ, understanding δοκοῦσι: but ἀλλὰ δὴ is scarcely appropriate here (see on II 365 C), and Schneider's explanation gives a satisfactory meaning to ἤδη. J. and C. take ἤδη with μὴ δυνατοὶ τινες ὄντες ('persons who are as yet unable' etc.); but the hyper-baton is too difficult, and the meaning (which Plato would rather have expressed by μὴπω δυνατοὶ κτλ.) unsuitable. Few will approve of Badham's ἀλλ' οἱ δὴ κτλ.
or even of Burnet's ἀλλὰ δὴ, εἶπον, μὴ δυνατοὶ οἵτινες δοῦναί τε κτλ. For the sentiment, which is a commonplace of the Socratic school, cf. Xen. Mem. IV 6. 1, Prot. 336 C, Phaed. 76 B, Crat.
390 C ff. al.

32 οὐδ' αὖ κτλ. 'My answer to this question is also no.'

532 A 3 περαίνει = 'performs': cf.
Plut. Crass. 33. 3 ἀναβακχεύσας ἐπέραειν ἐκεῖνα τὰ μέλη κτλ., Tim. 29 D τὸ μὲν ὄν προοίμιον θαυμασιῶς ἀπεδεξάμεθ' αὖ τὸν δὲ δὴ νόμον ἡμῖν ἐφεξῆς πέραειν, and Lates 723 E. The metaphor is still from music, though D. and V. erroneously translate "of which dialectical reasoning is the consummation."

ἦν ἐλέγομεν κτλ. It follows that the progress of the prisoner after he has begun to look on real objects outside the Cave represents Dialectic: cf. 516 A n. and 532 B.

αὐτὰ ἄστρο τε καὶ τελευταῖον δὴ πρὸς αὐτὸν τὸν ἥλιον; οὕτω καὶ 5 ὅταν τις τῷ διαλέγεσθαι ἐπιχειρῇ ἄνευ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθήσεων διὰ τοῦ λόγου ἐπ' αὐτὸ ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστον ὁρμᾶν, καὶ μὴ ἀποστῇ, πρὶν B ἂν αὐτὸ ὃ ἔστιν ἀγαθὸν¹ αὐτῇ νοήσῃ λάβῃ, ἐπ' αὐτῷ γίγνεται τῷ τοῦ νοητοῦ τέλει, ὥσπερ ἐκεῖνος τότε ἐπὶ τῷ τοῦ ὁρατοῦ. Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Τί οὖν; οὐ διαλεκτικὴν ταύτην τὴν πορείαν¹⁰ καλεῖς; Τί μήν; Ἡ δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λύσις τε ἀπὸ τῶν δεσμῶν καὶ μεταστροφὴ ἀπὸ τῶν σκιῶν ἐπὶ τὰ εἶδωλα καὶ τὸ φῶς καὶ ἐκ τοῦ καταγείου εἰς τὸν ἥλιον ἐπάνοδος, καὶ ἐκεῖ πρὸς μὲν τὰ ζῷα τε

7. ἕκαστον Π: om. A. ὁρατοῦ A¹.

ὁρμᾶν Ast: ὁρμᾶ codd.

9. τοῦ ὁρατοῦ A²Π:

5 αὐτὰ ἄστρο. I formerly read αἶτα <τὰ> ἄστρο with Baiter; but there is no MS authority for the article, and its presence is unnecessary even between αὐτὰ τὰ ζῷα and αὐτὸν τὸν ἥλιον.

οὕτω καὶ κτλ.: 'so also whenever by means of dialectic one attempts through discourse of reason' etc. On τοῦ λόγου and ἄνευ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθήσεων see VI 511 B n. and App. III. Ast's conjecture ὁρμᾶν (see cr. n.) is supported by Clement Strom. V 112 B Migne (quoted by Schneider: ἐὰν ἐπιχειρῇ τις ἄνευ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθή-σεων διὰ τοῦ λόγου ἐπ' αὐτὸ ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστον ὁρμᾶν κτλ., and closely corresponds with ἐπιχειρεῖν ἀπορρίπτειν in the last sentence.
 There is no occasion for Stallbaum's professional ridicule of Schneider's view:
 'quasi vero recte dici potuerit: τῷ διαλέγεσθαι ἐπιχειρεῖν διὰ τοῦ λόγου ὁρμᾶν ἐπὶ τι!' for οὐ αὐτὸς ὁ λόγος ἀπτεται τῇ τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι δυνάμει in VI 511 B is an exact parallel. On other views see App. XII.

7 ἕκαστον is omitted in A (see cr. n.) and some other MSS. It is however necessary both in itself, and in order to provide a proper contrast with αὐτὸ ὃ ἔστιν ἀγαθόν. For the process here described see App. III.

532 B 9 τότε. 516 B.

11 ἡ δέ γε κτλ. Having described διαλεκτικὴ in terms of the cave-simile, Plato now proceeds to describe his προ-παιδεία in the same way: cf. 515 C, 516
 A nn. Bosanquet finds a difficulty in ἡ λύσις—ἐπάνοδος, and thinks it just conceivable that these words describe the training in music and gymnastic and not the προπαιδεία (so also Susemihl *Gen.
 Entw.* II p. 201). But Plato's language is perfectly definite; and τῶν τεχνῶν ἅς διήλθομεν (532 C) cannot mean anything beyond or except the five studies just described. Nor is this the only passage where the 'turning round' of the prisoners while still in the cave and their gradual ascent are identified with the προπαι-δεία, or with part of it: see 521 C. Plato means that the emancipation of the soul is a gradual process, and that we are not to expect our mathematical studies to deliver us from δόξα all at once. ἡ λύσις —εἰδῶλα suggests that their first effect will be to loosen our intellectual bonds, and turn us as it were from reflected to original δόξα—from εἰκασία to πίστις (VI 511 E, VII 517 A nn.). The higher we mount, the less of δόξα we retain, and in the higher stages of the προπαιδεία (symbolized by ἐκεῖ—ἀποσκιαζομένης) we escape from δόξα altogether. See App. I.

532 B, C 13 καὶ ἐκεῖ κτλ. 'and when there, their inability still to look upon animals and plants and the light of the sun, but upon divine reflections in water and shadows of things real, not, as before, shadows of images thrown by a light which is itself but an image compared with the sun.' Cf. 516 A, B. ἐτι ἀδυναμία is due to Iamblichus: see *cr.
 n.* and cf. Bywater in J. Ph. x p. 78.
 Nägelsbach also conjectured ἐτ' ἀδυναμία.
 The difference between ἐτι and ἐπ in an uncial MS is practically nil. With πρὸς δὲ τὰ κτλ. the positive counterpart of ἀδυναμία (βλέπειν) is to be supplied: cf.
Ap. 36 B (where Schanz's insertion of οὐ after οἱ πολλοί is inelegant and unnecessary) and Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 1072.
 For ἐτι with a verbal noun cf. IV 434 C n.
 'Divine' φαντάσματα is a half-technical καὶ φυτὰ καὶ τὸ τοῦ ἡλίου φῶς ἔτι ἀδυναμία βλέπειν,¹ πρὸς δὲ C 15 τὰ ἐν ὕδασι φαντάσματα θεῖα καὶ σκιὰς τῶν ὄντων, ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰδῶλων σκιὰς δι' ἐτέρου τοιούτου φωτὸς ὡς πρὸς ἥλιον κρίνειν ἀποσκιαζόμενας, πᾶσα αὕτη ἡ πραγματεία τῶν τεχνῶν, ἃς διήλθομεν, ταύτην ἔχει τὴν δύναμιν καὶ ἐπαναγωγὴν τοῦ βελτίστου ἐν ψυχῇ πρὸς τὴν τοῦ ἀρίστου ἐν τοῖς οὐσι θέαν, ὥσπερ τότε τοῦ 20 σαφεστάτου ἐν σώματι πρὸς τὴν τοῦ φαινοτάτου ἐν τῷ σωματοειδεῖ τε καὶ ὁρατῷ τόπῳ. Ἐγὼ μὲν, ἔφη, ἀποδέχομαι οὕτω. καίτοι D παντίπασί γέ μοι δοκεῖ χαλεπὰ μὲν ἀποδέχεσθαι εἶναι, ἄλλον δ' αὐτὸν τρόπον χαλεπὰ μὴ ἀποδέχεσθαι. ὅμως δὲ—οὐ γὰρ ἐν τῷ νῦν παρόντι μόνον ἀκουστέα, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐθις πολλάκις ἐπανιτέον—25 ταῦτα θέντες ἔχουν ὡς νῦν λέγεται, ἐπ' αὐτὸν δὴ τὸν νόμον ἴωμεν, καὶ διέλθωμεν οὕτως, ὥσπερ τὸ προοίμιον διήλθομεν. λέγε οὖν, τίς ὁ τρόπος τῆς τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι δυνάμεως, καὶ κατὰ ποῖα δὴ E εἶδη διέστηκεν, καὶ τίνας αὐτοῦ ὁδοί. αὐταὶ γὰρ ἂν ἤδη, ὡς ἔοικεν, αἱ πρὸς αὐτὸ ἀγρῶσαι εἶεν, οἳ ἀφικομένῳ ὥσπερ ὁδοῦ ἀνάπαυλα 30 ἂν εἴη καὶ τέλος τῆς πορείας. Οὐκέτ', ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ φίλε Γλαύκων,

14. ἐτι ἀδυναμία Iamblichus (Villoison Anecd. II p. 196): ἐπ' ἀδυναμίᾳ AΠΞ² q: ἐπὶ δύναμίᾳ (sic) Ξ¹. 26. διέλθωμεν Ξ q: ἐλθωμεν AΠ.

Platonic phrase for reflections of natural objects produced by natural lights: they are θεῖα because theias ἔργα ποιήσεως (Soph. 266 C, where the whole matter is very clearly explained). Even without the aid of the Sophist, we might deduce the meaning from the antithetical clause ἀλλ' οὐκ—ἀποσκιαζόμενας, if we remember that the sun is a θεός (VI 508 A). The adjective is regularly placed after the substantive when two coordinate qualifications have to be expressed (here ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι and θεῖα): cf. III 397 D τὸν τοῦ ἐπικκοῦς μιμητὴν ἄκρατον, IX 573 A τῶν ἐν ταῖς τοιαύταις συνουσίαις ἡδονῶν ἀνεμμένων. Other examples are given by Jebb on Soph. O. T. 1245 and Sandys on Arist. Ath. Pol. 51. 3: cf. also Stallbaum on Phil. 20 B. The present passage explains why Plato was so careful to make the originals in the Cave σεναστά and εἰδῶλα, and not φυτευτά: see on 514 B. Other views of this sentence are discussed in App. XIII.

17 πᾶσα κτλ. The anacoluthon is illustrated by Engelhardt Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 45.

18 ταύτην τὴν δύναμιν: viz. λύσιν ἀπὸ τῶν δεσμῶν κτλ.

532 D 23 οὐ γὰρ ἐν τῷ νῦν κτλ. We ought not to interpret this as a promise of future dialogues (with Siebeck Unters. z. Phil. d. Griechen p. 118); it is only a way of indicating, before we pass on, that the subject is not exhausted. See on IV 430 C.

532 E—533 A 30 οὐκέτι κτλ. With the general tenour and form of the sentence cf. (with Jackson) Symp. 210 A. I can see no reason for suspecting the text (with Madvig, who proposes εἰ γ' ἔτι, or εἰ σύ γ' ἔτι, and Badham, who would insert εἰ before οἷός τ' ἔσει). Glauco has not without difficulty (517 C) followed Socrates thus far: nor is there anything rude in telling him frankly that he has reached his limit, and even if there were, Socrates does not spare Glauco's feelings (cf. 527 D, 529 A). That his audience would not be able to follow a description of the Good, has already been implied in VI 506 E ff. βουλομένην ἂν, εἶπον, ἐμέ τε δύνασθαι αὐτὴν (the account of the Good itself) ἀποδοῖναι καὶ ὑμᾶς κομίσασθαι. Here Socrates appears to be a trifle more confident of his own expository powers, though he is careful, as before, to avoid

533 οἷός τ' | ἔσει ἀκολουθεῖν· ἐπεὶ τό γ' ἐμὸν οὐδὲν ἂν προθυμίας ἀπολείποι, οὐδ' εἰκόνα ἂν ἔτι οὐ λέγομεν ἴδοις, ἀλλ' αὐτὸ τὸ ἀληθές, ὃ γε δὴ μοι φαίνεται· εἰ δ' ὄντως ἢ μὴ, οὐκέτ' ἄξιον τοῦτο δισχυρίζεσθαι· ἀλλ' ὅτι μὲν δεῖ τοιοῦτόν τι ἰδεῖν, ἰσχυριστέον. ἢ γάρ; Τί μὴν; Οὐκοῦν καὶ ὅτι ἡ τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι δύναμις μόνῃ ἂν φήναιεν ἐμπείρῳ ὄντι ὧν νῦν διήλθομεν, ἄλλῃ δὲ οὐδαμῇ δυνατόν; Καὶ τοῦτ', ἔφη, ἄξιον δισχυρίζεσθαι. Τόδε γοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, Β οὐδεὶς ἡμῖν | ἀμφισβητήσῃ λέγουσιν, ὥς αὐτοῦ γε ἐκάστου πέρι ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστον ἄλλῃ τις ἐπιχειρεῖ μέθοδος ὁδῶ περὶ παντός

2. ἀπολείποι A¹P¹: ἀπολείποι A²P².
exceptis Φ et Mon. C, qui pro μὲν δὴ τοιοῦτον praebent δεῖ μὲν τοιοῦτο.

4. δεῖ ut videtur Ficinus: δὴ codd., exceptis Φ et Mon. C, qui pro μὲν δὴ τοιοῦτον praebent δεῖ μὲν τοιοῦτο.

the appearance of dogmatism and therefore introduces the expressions ὃ γε δὴ μοι φαίνεται etc. (cf. τοῦ γε δοκοῦντος ἐμοί l.c.) and προθυμίας (cf. προθυμούμενος δὲ κτλ. vi 506 D). Krohn (Pl. St. pp. 179 ff.) bitterly complains of Socrates for drawing back; and Whewell (Phil. of Discovery p. 436) observes "We may venture to say that it does not appear that he had any answer ready." The dialectical method recommended by Plato in the Republic is doubtless, in its full significance, an unrealised ideal (cf. iii. on ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον vi 510 B and τοῦ ἀνυποθέτου 511 B), just as the ultimate object of Dialectic, the Idea of Good, will still recede as we approach it. The description which follows merely recapitulates the account already given in Book vi, with a few additional characteristics already familiar in the Socratic school: but the majority of the Platonic dialogues furnish practical illustrations of many essential features in Plato's dialectical method: so that it is possible to form a tolerably clear idea of the kind of answer which the Platonic Socrates might have made in reply to Glauco's invitation. See on the whole subject App. III.

533 A 2 οὐδ' εἰκόνα ἂν ἔτι κτλ.: such as we saw before in vi 506 E ff. Glauco's question refers to the method, Socrates' reply to the object, of Dialectic: it is of course impossible to separate the two. On δισχυρίζεσθαι followed by ἰσχυριστέον see I 336 E n.

4 ὅτι μὲν δεῖ κτλ. Ci. vi 505 E ff., supra 517 C (δεῖ ταύτην ἰδεῖν κτλ.), 519 C, 526 E (δὲ δεῖ αὐτὴν παντὶ τρόπῳ ἰδεῖν). These passages are strongly in favour of δεῖ as against δὴ (see cr. n.), which Schneider, Hermann, and Stallbaum retain. ἰδεῖν is displeasing if we read δὴ, and μὲν δὴ is not free from difficulty here. For μέν without δέ following see v 475 E n.

533 A, B 7 τόδε γοῦν κτλ. Socrates proceeds to establish what he has just asserted, viz. that only dialectic can reveal the Good to those who are versed in the propaedeutic 'arts' or sciences. In this at least (he says) every one will agree with us, viz. 'that it is some other μέθοδος' (different from the five propaedeutic 'arts') 'which endeavours in every case to apprehend by scientific procedure concerning each several self' (e.g. αὐτοῦ καλοῦ, αὐτοῦ δικαίου, etc.) 'that which they severally are' (the οὐσία of each) e.g. ὃ ἔστιν καλόν, etc. Cf. 531 D οὐ γάρ που δοκοῦσί γε σοι οἱ ταῦτα (the five propaedeutic 'arts') δεινοὶ διαλεκτικοὶ εἶναι. Socrates continues: while all the other arts (except τὰ μαθηματικά) address themselves πρὸς δόξας ἀνθρώπων, etc., even the mathematical 'arts' give no λόγος of their ὑποθέσεις (and so do not apprehend the δέξιον of their subject). Dialectic and Dialectic alone does this (533 C), so that Dialectic is the ἄλλῃ τις μέθοδος and alone satisfies our needs. τόδε is the object of λέγουσιν, on which, and not on ἀμφισβητήσῃ, ὥς depends. ἄλλῃ means other than ἃν νῦν διήλθομεν. ἀλλά is opposed to the negative notion contained in ἄλλῃ (another μέθοδος, not that of the five 'arts,' but etc.). Badham arbitrarily proposes to read ὅρῳ περιλαμβάνειν for ὁδῶ περὶ παντός λαμβάνειν. The expression περὶ παντός 'about everything' is of course different from αὐτοῦ ἐκάστου πέρι, and μέθοδος ὁδῶ is the kind of collocation in which Plato delights. For other views on this sentence see App. XIV.

- 10 λαμβάνειν, ἀλλ' αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι πᾶσαι τέχναι ἢ πρὸς δόξας ἀνθρώπων καὶ ἐπιθυμίας εἰσίν, ἢ πρὸς γενέσεις τε καὶ συνθέσεις, ἢ πρὸς θεραπείαν τῶν φυομένων τε καὶ συντιθεμένων ἅπασαι τετράφεται, αἱ δὲ λοιπαί, ἃς τοῦ ὄντος τι ἔφαμεν ἐπιλαμβάνεσθαι, γεωμετρίας τε καὶ τὰς ταύτη¹ ἐπομένας, ὁρῶμεν ὡς ὀνειρώττουσι μὲν περὶ τὸ C 15 ὄν, ὕπαρ δὲ ἀδύνατον αὐταῖς ἰδεῖν, ἕως ἂν ὑποθέσει χρώμεναι ταύτας ἀκινήτους ἑῶσι, μὴ δυνάμεναι λόγον διδόναι αὐτῶν. ᾧ γὰρ ἀρχὴ μὲν ὃ μὴ οἶδε, τελευτὴ δὲ καὶ τὰ μεταξὺ ἐξ οὗ μὴ οἶδεν συμπλέκεται, τίς μηχανὴ τὴν τοιαύτην ὁμολογίαν ποτὲ ἐπιστήμην γενέσθαι; Οὐδεμία, ἢ δ' ὅς.
- 20 XIV. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἡ διαλεκτικὴ μέθοδος μόνη ταύτη πορεύεται, τὰς ὑποθέσεις ἀναιροῦσα, ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὴν ἀρχήν, ἵνα

12. ἅπασαι II: ἅπανα A.

10 αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι κτλ. Cf. Phil. 55 E—58 E. Plato is thinking of a threefold classification of arts under κολακική, ποιητική, and ἐπιμελητική or the like (J. and C., comparing Gorg. 463 ff., 501, 502, Soph. 222 E, 265 ff., Pol. 261 ff.).

12 τετράφεται is one of Plato's archaisms: see on I 330 B. Such forms are not found in inscriptions after 410 B.C. (Meisterhans³ p. 166).

13 γεωμετρίας—ταύτη. For the syntax cf. VI 511 B n.

533 C 14 ὀνειρώττουσι κτλ. Krohn (Pl. St. pp. 179—181) accuses Plato of a sudden volte face in regard to mathematical studies. It is true that the same language is used of δόξα in V 476 C (cf. VII 520 C), but there are dreams and dreams, and we may fairly say that if the προπαυδεῖα is only a dream in comparison with Dialectic, at least it is one of those dreams which come through the gates of horn.

16 ᾧ γὰρ ἀρχὴ κτλ. See VI 510 C, D III. ὁμολογίαν means 'agreement' 'harmony' ("Übereinstimmung" Schneider), viz. of ἀρχή, τελευτή and τὰ μεταξὺ, not 'admissions' (as D. and V. translate): cf. ὁμολογουμένως I. c.

20 οὐκοῦν κτλ. 'Well then,' said I, 'the method of dialectic alone proceeds by the destruction of hypotheses to the actual first principle, in order to make its results secure.' Dialectic examines and cancels (ἀναιρεῖ) one ὑπόθεσις after another, till in the end it reaches the Idea of Good. Suppose for example that δοσιότης is the subject of discussion. Various ὑποθέσεις are proposed, tested, and overthrown.

Out of the ruins of the former ὑποθέσεις we built a new and better one, which must in its turn be thoroughly tested, tried, and perhaps overthrown, before it can serve as a stepping-stone to one which is higher, truer and better: cf. 534 B, C. Now this process of testing, revising, discarding, is not, ideally speaking, complete until we examine the relations of our ὑπόθεσις of δοσιότης with all νοητά, and in such an examination we apply the same 'hypothetical method' throughout the whole noetic sphere, testing and correcting all our ὑποθέσεις by one another. In the final stage, which is of course only an ideal, all our ὑποθέσεις become exact counterparts of the Ideas, and we have reached the ἀρχή or Good. Thereafter the results of Dialectic are βέβαια: see VI 511 B. The earlier steps in this dialectical ascent may be illustrated from many, if not most, of the Platonic dialogues. For ἀναιροῦσα cf. Arist. Topic. I 6. 120^a 6—31, and especially Eth. Eud. II 6. 1222^b 27 f. κινουμένης τῆς ἀρχῆς πάντα μάλιστ' ἂν τὰ δεικνύμενα μεταβάλλοι, αὐτὰ δ' αὐτὰ οὐ μεταβάλλει ἀναιρουμένου θατέρου ὑπὸ θατέρου, ἂν μὴ τῷ τὴν ὑπόθεσιν ἀνελεῖν καὶ δι' ἐκείνης δεῖξαι. The word is often used in connexion with the Eleatic dialectic, of which Plato's ἡ ἐξ ὑποθέσεως ἀνάλυσις (Alcin. Isag. 7), here described, is a development: see RP⁷. §§ 95 n. 2, 105 A—106, 110—115. For other views on this passage see App. XV: and for a farther discussion of the method itself and its permanent value in the history of investigation consult App. III.

D βεβαιώσεται, καὶ τῷ ὄντι ἐν βορβόρῳ βαρβαρικῷ τινὶ τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ὄμμα κατορωρυγμένον ἡρέμα ἔλκει καὶ ἀνάγει ἄνω, συνερίθοις καὶ συμπεριαγωγοῖς χρωμένη αἷς διήλθομεν τέχναις· ὡς ἐπιστήμας μὲν πολλάκις προσείπομεν διὰ τὸ ἔθος, δέονται δὲ ὀνόματος 25 ἄλλου, ἐναργεστέρου μὲν ἢ δόξης, ἀμυδροτέρου δὲ ἢ ἐπιστήμης· διάνοιαν δὲ αὐτὴν ἐν γε τῷ πρόσθεν που ὠρισάμεθα· ἔστι δ' ὡς E ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ, οὐ περὶ ὀνόματος ἀμφισβήτησις, οἷς τοσούτων πέρι σκέψις ὅσων ἡμῖν πρόκειται. Οὐ γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη. Ἀρέσκει οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὥσπερ τὸ πρότερον, τὴν μὲν πρώτην μοῖραν ἐπιστήμην 30 534 καλεῖν, δευτέραν δὲ διάνοιαν, τρίτην δὲ πίστιν καὶ εἰκασίαν τετάρτην, καὶ ξυναμφότερα μὲν ταῦτα δόξαν, ξυναμφότερα δ' ἐκείνα νόησιν, καὶ δόξαν μὲν περὶ γένεσιν, νόησιν δὲ περὶ οὐσίαν, καὶ ὅ τι οὐσία πρὸς γένεσιν, νόησιν πρὸς δόξαν, καὶ ὅ τι νόησις πρὸς δόξαν, ἐπιστήμην πρὸς πίστιν καὶ διάνοιαν πρὸς εἰκασίαν· τὴν δ' ἐφ' 5 οἷς ταῦτα ἀναλογίαν καὶ διαίρεσιν διχῇ ἑκατέρου, δοξαστοῦ τε καὶ

29. ἔφη Ξ: ἔφη· ἄλλ' ὁ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν ἔξιν σαφηνεῖα λέγει ἐν ψυχῇ A: ἔφη· ἄλλο (ἄλλ' ὁ Π²) ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν ἔξιν (sic) σαφηνεῖα λέγει ἐν ψυχῇ Π:
 ἔφη· ἄλλ' ὁ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν λέξιν σαφηνεῖα ὁ λέγει ἐν ψυχῇ η'. ἀρέσκει οὖν Π: ἀρέσκει γοῦν A. 5. ἐπιστήμην A¹Π: ἐπιστήμη A².

533 D 22 βορβόρῳ. The image is taken from Orphic theology: cf. II 363 D n.

27 ἐν γε τῷ πρόσθεν. VI 511 D, E. ἔστι δ', ὡς κτλ. Cf. Laos 864 A. Plato constantly reminds us that he has no fixed terminology (see Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. d. pl. Pol. p. 647 and Hirzel Der Dialog pp. 246 ff.), and the ancients were well aware of this fact, though modern interpreters of Plato too often forget it; see the references collected by Hermann Gesch. u. Syst., p. 573 n. 106 and D. L. III 63 (quoted by Hirmer).

533 E—534 E In conclusion, after pointing out the proportions between the different intellectual states, Socrates declares that the essential feature of Dialectic is its power to grasp the reason or principle of all Being, separating the Idea of Good, for example, from everything else, defining it in words, and scrutinizing the definition by tests, from each and all of which it must emerge triumphantly. Glauco agrees that such a study is indispensable to the rulers, and that the curriculum is now complete.

533 E 29 οὐ γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη. See cr. n. The interpolation which follows these words in all MSS except Ξ is discussed in App. XVI.

ἀρέσκει οὖν. See cr. n. Though γοῦν is in A and Ξ, a majority of MSS read οὖν, which is alone suitable. The same error occurs in one or more MSS in V 455 E and VI 506 C (Schneider).

534 A 4 ὅ τι νόησις—εἰκασίαν. That is to say, in the Simile of the Line (see Fig. i on p. 65), (1) $CB : AC :: EB : DC$ and (2) $CB : AC :: CE : AD$. We have already seen that $CE : EB :: AD : DC$ (VI 509 D n.); ∴ componendo

$$CE + EB : EB :: AD + DC : DC$$

i.e. $CB : EB :: AC : DC$; ∴ alternando $CB : AC :: EB : DC$. This proves (1), and (2) is proved as follows. Since

$$CE : EB :: AD : DC,$$

∴ invertendo $EB : CE :: DC : AD$; hence componendo

$$EB + CE : CE :: DC + AD : AD$$

i.e. $CB : CE :: AC : AD$; ∴ alternando $CB : AC :: CE : AD$. I owe this proof to the kindness of a mathematical friend.

5 τὴν δ' ἐφ' οἷς κτλ. Liebhold (who also conjectured καὶ ἔτι νόησις for καὶ ὅ τι νόησις) makes the extraordinary νοητοῦ, ἐώμεν, ὦ Γλαῦκων, ἵνα μὴ ἡμᾶς πολλαπλασιῶν λόγων ἐμπλήσῃ ἢ ὅσων οἱ παρεληλυθότες. ¹ Ἄλλὰ μὴν ἔμοιγ', ἔφη, τά γε B ἄλλα, καθ' ὅσον δύναμαι ἔπεσθαι, ξυνδοκεῖ. Ἡ καὶ διαλεκτικὸν ¹⁰ καλεῖς τὸν λόγον ἐκάστου λαμβάνοντα τῆς οὐσίας; καὶ τὸν μὴ ἔχοντα, καθ' ὅσον ἂν μὴ ἔχῃ λόγον αὐτῷ τε καὶ ἄλλῳ διδόναι, κατὰ τοσοῦτον νοῦν περὶ τούτου οὐ φήσεις ἔχειν; Πῶς γὰρ ἂν, ἡ δ' ὅς, φαίην; Οὐκοῦν καὶ περὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ὡσαύτως· ὃς ἂν μὴ ἔχῃ διορίσασθαι τῷ λόγῳ ἀπὸ τῶν ἄλλων πάντων ἀφελῶν τὴν τοῦ

¹⁵ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέαν καὶ ὥσπερ ἐν μάχῃ διὰ πάντων ἐλέγχων διεξιῶν, μὴ C

8. ὅσων Ξγ: ὅσον ΑΠ.

suggestion τὴν δ' ἐφ' οἷς ταῦτ' ἂν διέχῃ ἀναλογίαν καὶ διαίρεσιν ἐκατέρου (Philol. 1876 p. 372). The text is of course quite sound and = τὴν δὲ <τούτων> ἐφ' οἷς ταυτά <έστιν> ἀναλογίαν κτλ.: cf. VI 511 E. I cannot agree with Shorey when he says (Idea of Good etc. p. 235) that Plato "avoids drawing out the proportion εἶδη: objects of διάνοια = σκευαστά etc.: εἰκόνες, because he is aware that the second member is a blank and the fourth is largely fantastic." Both of these assertions are in my opinion quite wrong, and if they were true, Plato would have refrained from drawing out the proportions between the faculties themselves for exactly the same reasons. See App. I. As it is, we should take Plato at his word. He may well decline to enter on the tedious and unprofitable task of expounding and illustrating in detail the proportions which may be conjectured to obtain between the different objects of our intellectual powers. It would for example lead to no useful result if we tried to establish a proportion between a particular εἶδος, one of the five μαθήματα, a particular object of πίστις, and a particular object of εἰκασία. Such attempts would certainly involve us in an endless amount of talk, and would hardly result in anything but a series of barren and pedantic formulae and subdivisions.

8 ἢ ὅσων. See cr. n. ὅσων is read by a large majority of mss, and the confusion of ο and ω is common: see Introd. § 5. The construction (as Schneider points out) is ἡ ὅσων λόγων οἱ παρεληλυθότες λόγοι ἡμᾶς ἐνέπλησαν: cf. (with Schneider) παρὰ δόξαν τοῖς νῦν δοκουμένοις VI 490 A. Madvig's ὅσοι has little probability, although it avoids a certain awkwardness.

534 B 9 ἡ καὶ διαλεκτικὸν κτλ. Cf. 531 E n. As far as words go, this definition of Dialectic might almost have come from the historical Socrates, although of course λόγον λαμβάνειν, οὐσία and λόγον διδόναι meant less to him than to Plato.

12 οὐ φήσεις = 'negabis.' οὐ is not here 'nonne.' The interrogation is carried on from the last clause.

14 διορίσασθαι—ἀφελῶν perhaps suggests the διαίρεσις, which was an essential part of Plato's dialectical method: see App. III. It is noteworthy however that the Republic lays far more stress on συναγωγή than on διαίρεσις: cf. 537 C, Zeller⁴ II i. p. 617 n. and App. III.

534 C 15 ὥσπερ ἐν μάχῃ κτλ.: 'as it were in a battle, exhausting every elenchus, striving to test his view not by that which seems, but by that which is' etc. For διὰ πάντων—διεξιῶν cf. Thuc. III 45. 3 διεξεληλύθασι γε διὰ πασῶν τῶν ζημιῶν and Parm. 136 E διὰ πάντων διεξέδουν. We apply the ἐλεγχοί ourselves: cf. ἐξελέγωμεν in X 610 A. The ordinary interpretation supposes that the ἐλεγχοί are applied by others ('running the gauntlet of all questionings' J. and C.); but in that case we must take ἐλέγχω as = ἐλέγχωιν τοὺς τῶν ἄλλων ἐλέγχους, which is difficult, because ἐλέγχωιν is most naturally interpreted by ἐλέγχων just before, and ἐλέγχων certainly means tests or elenchi which are applied to the theory which the dialectician is himself maintaining. Plato means that the dialectician tests his view of good not by 'seeming' i.e. by what 'seems' (good, bad etc.) to the many, but by the Truth i.e. by that which 'is' in the Platonic sense of οὐσία, viz. the Ideas, such as (let us say) the Ideas of κάλλος, δίκαιον κατὰ δόξαν, ἀλλὰ κατ' οὐσίαν προθυμούμενος ἐλέγχειν, ἐν πᾶσι τούτοις ἀπτῶτι τῷ λόγῳ διαπορεύεται, οὔτε αὐτὸ τὸ ἀγαθὸν φήσεις εἶδέναι τὸν οὕτως ἔχοντα οὔτε ἄλλο ἀγαθὸν οὐδέν, ἀλλ' εἴ πῃ εἰδῶλου τινὸς ἐφάπτεται, δόξῃ, οὐκ ἐπιστήμῃ ἐφάπτεσθαι, καὶ τὸν νῦν βίον ὀνειροπολοῦντα καὶ ὑπνώττοντα, πρὶν ἐνθάδ' ἐξεγρῆσ- 20 D θαι, εἰς Ἄιδου ἰ πρότερον ἀφικόμενον τελέως ἐπικαταδαρθάνειν; Νῆ τὸν Δία, ἧ δ' ὅς, σφόδρα γε πάντα ταῦτα φήσω. Ἀλλὰ μὴν τούς γε σαυτοῦ παῖδας, οὓς τῷ λόγῳ τρέφεις τε καὶ παιδεύεις, εἴ ποτε ἔργῳ τρέφοις, οὐκ ἂν ἐάσεις, ὥς ἐγῶμαι, ἀλόγους ὄντας ὥσπερ γράμμεις, ἄρχοντας ἐν τῇ πόλει κυρίους τῶν μεγίστων εἶναι. Οὐ 25 γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη. Νομοθετήσεις δὴ αὐτοῖς ταύτης μάλιστα τῆς παιδείας ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι, ἐξ ἧς ἐρωτᾶν τε καὶ ἀποκρίνεσθαι ἐπι-E στημονέστατα οἰοί τ' ἔσονται; Νομοθετήσω, ἔφη, μετὰ γε σοῦ.

Ἄρ' οὖν δοκεῖ σοι, ἔφην ἐγώ, ὥσπερ θριγκὸς τοῖς μαθήμασιν ἢ διαλεκτικῇ ἡμῖν ἐπάνω κεῖσθαι, καὶ οὐκέτ' ἄλλο τούτου μῖθημα 30 ἀνωτέρω ὀρθῶς ἂν ἐπιτίθεσθαι, ἀλλ' ἔχειν ἤδη τέλος τὰ τῶν 535 | μαθημάτων; Ἐμοιγ', ἔφη.

21 ἐπικαταδαρθάνειν A²Π: ἐπικαταδαρθανεῖν (sic) A¹.

and so forth. The Idea of Good has connexions and relations with all the other Ideas (cf. VI 510 B, 511 B nn.); and our knowledge of these may therefore be used to test the accuracy of our conception of Good. Zeller¹ II i. p. 620 n. rightly compares the present passage with Parm. 135 C—136 E: see App. III. It is perhaps unnecessary to notice Liebhold's foolish conjecture νόσιν for οὐσίαν.

20 ὀνειροπολοῦντα κτλ. 533 C n.

534 D 24 οὐκ ἂν ἐάσεις κτλ.: 'you will not suffer to be mere irrational quantities, if they are to rule in the city and control the higher issues.' ἀλογοὶ γράμμαι are irrational magnitudes (cf. Arist. περὶ ἀτόμων γραμμῶν 968^b 18), which Greek mathematicians treated "geometrically through a symbolism of irrational lines," as in Euclid Bk. X (Gow Gk Math. p. 78). They are ἀλογοὶ or ἀρρητοὶ because "nicht aussprechbar" (Cantor Gesch. d. Math. p. 154 n.), whereas rational lines are ῥηταί, 'expressible' (cf. Blass de Pl. Math. p. 18). In its application to Glauco's 'children,' ἀλογοὶ is active, and means of course μὴ λόγον ἔχοντες διδόναι (534 B). Has γράμμαι also any special application? Probably it has: otherwise the witticism seems unnecessarily far-fetched and frigid, even if we make every allowance for Plato's love of a mathematical jest (cf. Pol. 266 B), as well as for the interest which the subject of irrationals seems to have excited among the mathematicians of his day (see Theaet. 147 D ff. and Cantor l.c. pp. 182, 191, 203). Lucilius (II 20) has the line "vix vivo homini ac monogrammo" ("a dead-alive sketch of an anatomy" Tyrrell Lat. Poetry p. 175), and Cicero mocks at Epicurus' gods as "monogrammos" (N. D. II 59: cf. I 123 homunculi similem deum—liniamentis dumtaxat extremis, non habitu solido—praeditum etc., and other passages in Usener Epicurea p. 234). Perhaps Plato means to suggest that his "airy burgo-masters," as Milton calls them, would in such a case be only as it were mere silhouettes ("Schattenrisse" Bertram Bilderspr. Pl. p. 46) of rulers moving blindly to and fro in a sort of dreamland (cf. ὀνειροπολοῦντα 534 C and 533 C n.). For other views see App. XVII.

25 τῶν μεγίστων. 525 B n.

27 ἐρωτᾶν τε καὶ ἀποκρίνεσθαι κτλ. Plato concludes by emphasizing the most conspicuous and characteristic feature of the Socratic method: cf. Crat. 390 c.

XV. Διανομή τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ λοιπόν σοι, τίσιν ταῦτα τὰ μαθήματα δώσομεν καὶ τίνα τρόπον. Δήλον, ἔφη. Μέννησαι οὖν τὴν προτέραν ἐκλογὴν τῶν ἀρχόντων, οἷους ἐξελέξαμεν; Πῶς γάρ, 5 ἢ δ' ὅς, οὐ; Τὰ μὲν ἄλλα τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐκείνας τὰς φύσεις οἷου δεῖν ἐκλεκτέας εἶναι· τοὺς τε γὰρ βεβαιοτάτους καὶ τοὺς ἀνδρειοτάτους προαιρετέον καὶ κατὰ δύναμιν τοὺς εὐειδεστάτους· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις ζητητέον¹ μὴ μόνον γενναίους τε καὶ βλοσυροὺς B τὰ ἦθη, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἃ τῇδε τῇ παιδείᾳ τῆς φύσεως πρόσφορα ἐκτέον 10 αὐτοῖς. Ποία δὲ διαστέλλει; Δριμύτητα, ὦ μακίριε, ἔφην, δεῖ αὐτοῖς πρὸς τὰ μαθήματα ὑπάρχειν καὶ μὴ χαλεπῶς μανθάνειν· πολὺ γάρ τοι μᾶλλον ἀποδελιῶσι ψυχαὶ ἐν ἰσχυροῖς μαθήμασιν ἢ ἐν γυμνασίοις· οἰκειότερος γὰρ αὐταῖς ὁ πόνος, ἴδιος, ἀλλ' οὐ

6. οἷον II: οἷον A.

535 A—536 B It only remains to apportion these studies and prescribe how they are to be pursued. Our pupils must possess not only the qualities of steadfastness and courage etc., but also those other natural qualifications which our peculiar course of training demands. These are now enumerated by Socrates.

535 A 2 διανομή κτλ. Herwerden needlessly and wantonly inserts σκεπτέα after τὸ λοιπόν.

4 τὴν προτέραν ἐκλογὴν. III 412 B ff.

5 ἐκείνας τὰς φύσεις κτλ. 'I would have you suppose that it must be those natures which are to be selected,' lit. 'those natures must be to-be-selected.' Kopetsch (de verbalibus Plat. p. 29) confesses himself unable to quote any parallels for the 'pleonasm.' We might compare the use of δεῖν in μνημονικὴν αὐτὴν ζητῶμεν δεῖν εἶναι VI 486 D, where see note; but the fact is that δεῖν is not altogether pleonastic in the present passage. Without δεῖν we should translate 'that it is those natures' etc. and not 'that it must be those natures' etc.; and there is a slight but appreciable difference between the two. Richards would expunge δεῖν or read αἰ, but αἰ is quite unsuitable here. ἐκλεκτάς (which I once proposed, taking the words as='ought to have been selected') is equally unsatisfactory, nor does θείναι, which might be suggested in place of εἶναι, carry conviction. The text is in my judgment sound.

6 βεβαιοτάτους—ἀνδρειοτάτους. The contrast is between steadfastness and spirit:

cf. II 375 A ff. and VI 503 C with Appendix VI to Book VI. εὐειδεστάτους has not hitherto been mentioned as a qualification of Plato's rulers: for VI 494 C cannot be interpreted in such a sense. The word is however certainly genuine: cf. ἀρτιμελής in 536 B.

535 B 8 γενναίους—τὰ ἦθη: 'of noble and masculine characters.' Cf. Theaet. 149 A μάλα μάλα γενναίως τε καὶ βλοσυρῶς, Nicostrat. Frag. 35 ed. Kock νῆ τὴν Ἀφροδίτην, ὧ ξένη, βλοσυρὰν γε τὴν ψυχὴν ἔχεις, and Aelian Var. Hist. 12. 21 σεμνὸν ἅμα καὶ βλοσυρὸν ὀρώσαι (of Spartan women). In Cl. Rev. XIII p. 10 I have tried to shew that the original meaning of this vigorous and expressive word is 'hairy,' 'shaggy,' 'bristling' (horridus), from which to 'virile' the transition is natural enough. Mr L. D. Barnett has since supplied me with an interesting confirmation from Pollux IV 136 (on tragic masks) ὁ δὲ οὐλός, ξανθός, ὑπερογκός. αἱ τρίχες τῷ ὄγκῳ προσπεπήγασιν, ὀφρύες ἀνατέτανται, βλοσυρὸς τὸ εἶδος.

9 ἀ—πρόσφορα: 'the natural characteristics suitable for our scheme of education.' τῆς φύσεως depends on ἀ, not (as Stallbaum supposes) on τῇδε τῇ παιδείᾳ. The following list of qualifications should be compared with that in VI 485 A ff. The difference is slight, but φιλοπονία as a special attribute is new, and on the other hand some of the secondary moral qualities are not insisted upon here.

12 ἀποδελιῶσι κτλ. Cf. VI 504 A.

κοινὸς ὢν μετὰ τοῦ σώματος. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη. Καὶ μνήμονα δὴ καὶ C ἄρρατον καὶ ἵπντη φιλόπονον ζητητέον. ἢ τίμιν τρόπῳ οἶει τὰ τε 15 τοῦ σώματος ἐθελήσειν τινὰ διαπονεῖν καὶ τοσαύτην μάθησίν τε καὶ μελέτην ἐπιτελεῖν; Οὐδένα, ἢ δ' ὅς, ἐὰν μὴ παντάπασί γ' ἢ εὐφυής. Τὸ γοῦν νῦν ἀμάρτημα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἡ ἀτιμία φιλοσοφία διὰ ταῦτα προσπέπτωκεν, ὃ καὶ πρότερον εἶπον, ὅτι οὐ κατ' ἀξίαν αὐτῆς ἄπτονται· οὐ γὰρ νόθους ἔδει ἄπτεσθαι, ἀλλὰ γνησίους. 20 D Πῶς; ἔφη. Πρῶτον μὲν, εἶπον, φιλοπονίᾳ ἢ οὐ χωλὸν δεῖ εἶναι τὸν ἀντόμενον, τὰ μὲν ἡμίσεα φιλόπονον, τὰ δ' ἡμίσεα ἄπονον· ἔστι δὲ τοῦτο, ὅταν τις φιλογυμναστῆς μὲν καὶ φιλόθηρος ἢ καὶ πάντα τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος φιλοπονῇ, φιλομαθῆς δὲ μή, μηδὲ φιλήκοος μηδὲ ζητητικός, ἀλλ' ἐν πᾶσι τούτοις μισοπονῇ· χωλὸς δὲ καὶ ὁ τάναν- 25 τία τούτου μεταβεβληκῶς τὴν φιλοπονίαν. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη, λέγεις. Οὐκοῦν καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ταῦτόν τοῦτο E ἀνάπηρεον ψυχὴν θήσομεν, ἢ ἂν τὸ μὲν ἐκούσιον ψεῦδος μισῇ καὶ χαλεπῶς φέρῃ αὐτὴ τε καὶ ἐτέρων ψευδομένων ὑπεραγανακτῇ, τὸ δ' ἀκούσιον εὐκόλως προσδέχεται καὶ ἀμαθαίνουσά που ἀλίσκομένη 30 μὴ ἀγανακτῇ, ἀλλ' εὐχερῶς ὥσπερ θηρίον ὕειον ἐν ἀμαθίᾳ μολύν-536 ται; Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Καὶ πρὸς σωφροσύνην, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἀνδρείαν καὶ μεγαλοπρέπειαν καὶ πάντα τὰ τῆς ἀρετῆς

28, 29. μισῇ—φέρῃ A²Π: μισεῖ—φέρει A¹.

15 ἄρρατον. The word ἄρρατος, which occurs again in Crat. 407 D, is apparently, like βλοσυρός, an expressive vulgarism de foro arripitum. There is considerable variety here in the inferior mss, but the evidence of the Scholiast places the reading beyond doubt. ἄρρατος is explained by Timaeus (s. v.) as ἰσχυρός, στερεός, and with this explanation the Scholiast and Lexicographers agree. Some of the ancients derived the word from an obsolete verb ῥάω = ῥαίω. Schneider remarks that the α must be long "si verum est quod scholiastes Victorianus ad Il. XIII 56 tradit, pro ἄρρηκτον alios legisse ἄρρατον." See Stephanus-Hase Thes. s. v.

535 C 17 οὐδένα: 'I think no one will.' Van Prinsterer's οὐδενί, as Stallbaum observes, is unnecessary. In written dialogue, as in actual conversation, the answer does not always accommodate itself to the exact form of the question: cf. v 465 E n.

19 πρότερον κτλ. The reference in πρότερον is to VI 495 C—496 A. In οὐ κατ' ἀξίαν αὐτῆς ἄπτονται Dümmler sees an allusion to Antisthenes (Antisth. p. 34), but see on 535 D, E.

535 D 22 ἄπονον: not μισόπονον, although μισοπονῇ appears below. Plato loves variety as well as uniformity, and Herwerden should not have proposed to write μισόπονον.

23 φιλόθηρος. Dümmler thinks Plato perhaps means Xenophon, who loved the chase; but it is unlikely that any personal reference is intended either here or in 535 C. See also on 535 E.

25 ὁ—φιλοπονίαν: 'whose love of work has taken the opposite direction.'

535 E 29 αὐτὴ τε καὶ κτλ. See on αὐτός τε καὶ—παρακάλει IV 427 D.

τὸ δ' ἀκούσιον. See II 382 A—C.

31 θηρίον ὕειον. Dümmler again recognises the unhappy Antisthenes, remembering, no doubt, the 'city of pigs.' See however on II 372 D.

536 A 2 μεγαλοπρέπειαν: 'high-mindedness,' not (as Jowett) 'magnificence.' See VI 486 A n.

μέρη οὐχ ἥκιστα δεῖ φυλάττειν τὸν νόθον τε καὶ τὸν γνήσιον. ὅταν γάρ τις μὴ ἐπίστηται τὰ τοιαῦτα σκοπεῖν καὶ ιδιώτης καὶ πόλις, λανθάνουσι χωλοῖς τε καὶ νόθοις χρώμενοι πρὸς ὃ τι ἂν τύχωσι τούτων, οἱ μὲν φίλοις, οἱ δὲ ἄρχουσι. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη, οὕτως ἔχει. Ἡμῖν δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα διευλαβητέον, ὥς ἐὰν μὲν ἀρτιμελεῖς τε καὶ ἀρτίφρονας ἐπὶ τοσαύτην μάθησιν B καὶ τοσαύτην ἀσκησιν κομίσαντες παιδεύωμεν, ἥ τε δίκη ἡμῖν οὐ μέμψεται αὐτή, τὴν τε πόλιν καὶ πολιτείαν σώσομεν, ἀλλοίους δὲ ἄγοντες ἐπὶ ταῦτα τάναντία πάντα καὶ πράξομεν καὶ φιλοσοφίας ἔτι πλείω γέλωτα καταντλήσομεν. Αἰσχροὺς μὲντ' ἂν εἴη, ἦ δ' ὅς. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, εἶπον· γελοῖον δ' ἔγωγε καὶ ἐν τῷ παρόντι ἔοικα παθεῖν. Τὸ ποῖον; ἔφη. Ἐπελαθόμεν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι ἐπαίζομεν, C

3. δεῖ A² II: δὴ A¹.

4 τὰ τοιαῦτα ("das dazu gehörige" Schneider) is quite general, and means how so-and-so is in respect of the virtues just enumerated: cf. VIII 549 D. The Oxford editors wrongly understand τὰ τοιαῦτα as τὰ τῆς ἀρετῆς μέρη.

5 λανθάνουσι κτλ.: 'they unconsciously use cripples and bastards for any of these services that happen, as friends in the one case, and in the other rulers.' Schneider explains τούτων as "horum negotiorum, hoc est, aliquam ex his, quae dictae sunt, virtutibus requirentium." This is perhaps safer than to understand it merely of the services rendered by friends and rulers. In either case cf. for τούτων VIII 543 C n. J. and C. have rightly noted that "the subject of τύχωσι is the same with that of λανθάνουσι": but they are mistaken in referring τούτων to τὰ τῆς ἀρετῆς μέρη, and in connecting πρὸς with χωλοῖς τε καὶ νόθοις. It is certain that χρώμενοι is understood with τύχωσι, and, if so, πρὸς can belong only to χρώμενοι. D. and V. are consistently wrong in the translation of this somewhat perplexing little clause.

536 B 8 ἀρτιμελεῖς κτλ. For ἀρτιμελεῖς cf. 535 A. ἀσκησιν is of course the physical discipline: note the chiasmus.

9 ἦ τε δίκη κτλ. Cf. VI 487 A where οὐδ' ἂν ὁ Μῶμος, ἔφη, τό γε τοιοῦτον μέμψαιτο similarly concludes the earlier enumeration of qualities necessary to the philosophic ruler.

11 καὶ πράξομεν. καὶ (which some inferior MSS omit) is "paullo insolentius positum, sed ita ut τάναντία πάντα partim ad civitatis conditionem—partim ad opi-nionem hominum atque existimationem philosophiae, quam sequi errorem istum oporteat, spectare et utramque contra, quam dictum optandumque sit, casuram esse significet" (Schneider).

13 γελοῖον takes up γέλωτα just before, hence καὶ. My extreme προθυμία, says Socrates in effect, was fitted to provoke a smile (cf. VI 506 D).

ἐν τῷ παρόντι. The reference is to 535 C and VI 495 C—496 A. After παρόντι Burnet adds <τι>, needlessly: see on III 388 D.

536 B—537 C After apologising for his excessive zeal in defence of Philosophy, Socrates lays down his ordinances. We must select our pupils while they are young, and put before them in their boyhood all the propaedeutic studies, taking care to avoid compulsion. At the same time they will be brought on the field of battle and receive their baptism of fire. From eighteen to twenty, gymnastic exercises claim their undivided attention. At twenty, those who have proved themselves the best will enter on a systematic comparative study of mathematics etc., lasting ten years.

536 C 14 ἐπαίζομεν. Literature is not life, but 'noble play'—παγκάλην—παιδιάν—τοῦ ἐν λόγοις δυναμένου παίζειν (Phaedr. 276 E. Cf. also X 599 A n.). See Hirzel der Dialog I p. 180, where this thoroughly Platonic view is admirably expounded. There is a touch of pathos in Plato's application of it to his own dialogues, recalling to my mind, I know not exactly why, the saying of Isaac Newton about gathering pebbles by the καὶ μᾶλλον ἐντεινόμενος εἶπον. λέγων γὰρ ὕμα ἔβλεψα πρὸς 15 φιλοσοφίαν καὶ ἰδὼν προπεπηλακισμένην ἀναξίως ἀγανακτήσας μοι δοκῶ καὶ ὥσπερ θυμωθεὶς τοῖς αἰτίοις σπουδαιότερον εἰπεῖν ἢ εἶπον. Οὐ μὰ τὸν Δί', ἔφη, οὐκ οὖν ὥς γ' ἐμοὶ ἀκροατῇ. Ἀλλ' ὥς ἐμοί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ῥήτορι. τόδε δὲ μὴ ἐπιλανθανώμεθα, ὅτι ἐν μὲν τῇ προτέρᾳ ἐκλογῇ πρεσβύτας ἐξελέγομεν, ἐν δὲ ταύτῃ οὐκ ἐγχωρήσει· 20 Σόλωνι γὰρ οὐ πειστέον, ὥς γηράσκων τις πολλὰ δυνατὸς μαθηθάνειν, ἀλλ' ἦττον ἢ τρέχειν· νέων δὲ πάντες οἱ μεγάλοι καὶ οἱ πολλοὶ πόνοι. Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη.

XVI. Τὰ μὲν τοίνυν λογισμῶν τε καὶ γεωμετριῶν καὶ πάσης τῆς προπαιδείας, ἣν τῆς διαλεκτικῆς δεῖ προπαιδευθῆναι, παισὶν 25 οὖσι χρὴ προβάλλειν, οὐχ ὥς ἐπάναγκες μαθεῖν τὸ σχῆμα τῆς διδασκαλίας ποιουμένους. Τί δῃ; "Οτι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὐδὲν μάθημα¹ μετὰ δουλείας τὸν ἐλεύθερον χρὴ μαθάνειν. οἱ μὲν γὰρ τοῦ σώματος πόνοι βία πονοῦμενοι χεῖρον οὐδὲν τὸ σῶμα ἀπεργάζονται, ψυχῇ δὲ βίαιον οὐδὲν ἔμμονον μάθημα. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη. Μὴ τοίνυν βία, 30 εἶπον, ὦ ἄριστε, τοὺς παῖδας ἐν τοῖς μαθήμασιν, ἀλλὰ παΐζοντας τρέφε, ἵνα καὶ μᾶλλον οἷός τ' ᾖ καθορᾶν ἐφ' ὃ ἕκαστος πέφυκεν.

21. πειστέον A²Ξγ: πιστέον A¹Π.

shore, as well as Heraclitus' αὐὼν παῖς ἔστι παῖζων πεσσεύων (Fr. 79 Bywater).

15 μᾶλλον ἐντεινόμενος. Plato's apology is by no means intended to appease the 'bald little tinker' (VI 495 E) and his crew; for he still holds them responsible for the insults levelled at philosophy (τοῖς αἰτίοις). He is merely apologising, not without a characteristic touch of irony, for an offence against the canons of literary taste. One ought not to turn 'play' into earnest, and, as Longinus remarks, κάν βακχεύμασι νήφειν ἀναγκαῖον (περὶ ὕψους 16. 4).

20 πρεσβύτας ἐξελέγομεν. III 412 C. It is quite clear that the προτέρᾳ ἐκλογῇ is not supplemented but superseded by the provisions now laid down. Cf. VIII 543 D 22.

536 D 21 γηράσκων κτλ. γηράσκω δ' αἰεὶ πολλὰ διδασκόμενος Solon Fr. 18 Bergk. The line is quoted in [Erast.] 133 C and alluded to again in Lach. 188 B, 189 A.

22 ἦττον. ἔτι ἦττον, which Herwerden proposes, is no improvement, but rather the reverse. Plato may be alluding to some proverbial saying, as D. and V. appear to believe, translating thus: "an 'old man can sooner run than learn.'" νέων δὲ κτλ. Cf. Eur. I. T. 122 μόχθος γὰρ οὐδεὶς τοῖς νέοις σκῆψιν φέρει and Theaet. 146 B, Symp. 175 E.

25 παισὶν οὖσι κτλ. This preliminary survey is clearly meant to take place in the years during which 'Music' and Gymnastic are chiefly cultivated. See Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 290.

26 οὐχ ὥς ἐπάναγκες κτλ. We must bear in mind throughout the whole of this subject that Plato is legislating for a select class who naturally love labour and truth. They alone are nature's freemen and must be treated as such in their education, but the compulsory method may be necessary, Plato would say, in order to educate others, so far as others can be educated at all. With the general sense cf. Phaedr. 240 C and Theogn. 472 πᾶν γὰρ ἀναγκαῖον χρῆμ' ἀνιερὸν ἔφν.

536 E 31 παίζοντας: with a play on παῖδας: cf. infra VIII 545 E and ἀτεχνῶς παισὶν—μετὰ παιδιᾶς—μαθάνειν in Laws 819 B, a passage in which the general idea is that play should be study, whereas here it is that study should be play.

Ἐχει δ' λέγεις, ἔφη, λόγον. Οὐκοῦν μνημονεύεις, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι καὶ εἰς τὸν πόλεμον ἔφαμεν τοὺς παῖδας εἶναι ἀκτέον ἐπὶ τῶν ἵππων 5 θεωρούς, καὶ ἐάν που ἀσφαλὲς ᾖ, προσακτέον ἐγγὺς καὶ γευστέον αἵματος, ὥσπερ τοὺς σκύλακας; Μέννημαι, ἔφη. Ἐν πᾶσι δὴ τούτοις, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοῖς τε πόνοις καὶ μαθήμασι καὶ φόβοις ὃς ἂν ἐντρεχέστατος αἰεὶ φαίνεται, εἰς ἀριθμὸν τινα ἐγκριτέον. Ἐν τίνι, B ἔφη, ἡλικία; Ἰνίκα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τῶν ἀναγκαίων γυμνασίων μεθιέν-10 ται. οὗτος γὰρ ὁ χρόνος, ἐάν τε δύο ἐάν τε τρία ἔτη γίγνηται, ἀδύνατός τι ἄλλο πρᾶξαι· κόποι γὰρ καὶ ὕπνοι μαθήμασι πολέμοιοι καὶ ἕμα μία καὶ αὕτη τῶν βασάνων οὐκ ἐλαχίστη, τίς ἕκαστος ἐν τοῖς γυμνασίοις φανεῖται. Πῶς γὰρ οὐκ; ἔφη. Μετὰ δὲ τοῦτον τὸν χρόνον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐκ τῶν εἰκοσιετῶν οἱ προκριθέντες τιμᾶς τε
 15 μείζους τῶν ἄλλων οἴσονται, τά τε¹ χυδῶν μαθήματα παισὶν ἐν τῇ C παιδείᾳ γενόμενα τούτοις συνακτέον εἰς σύνοψιν οἰκειότητος ἀλλήλων τῶν μαθημάτων καὶ τῆς τοῦ ὄντος φύσεως. Μόνη γοῦν, εἶπεν, ἡ τοιαύτη μάθησις βέβαιος ἐν οἷς ἂν ἐργένηται. Καὶ μερίστη γε,

3. δ A¹Π: ὦ A². 14. εἰκοσιετῶν Schneider secundum εἰκοσιετῶν (sic) Vind. F.: εἰκοσι ἐτῶν AΠ: εἰκοσὶν ἐτῶν Ξq. 16. παιδεία Ξ: παιδείᾳ (sic) A¹: παιδιᾳ corr. A²: παιδία vel παιδία II q.

537 A 4 ἔφαμεν. V 467 C—E.

8 ἐντρεχέστατος: 'most agile in' ('der rühmrigste' Schneider). The word is rare, and apparently not elsewhere found in writers of the best period. It occurs in Longinus περὶ ὕψους 44. 1 ὀριμεῖαι τε καὶ ἐντρεχεῖς (φύσεις) and Marc. Aur. VI 14: cf. id. VII 66 (ἐντρεχέστερον) and I 8 (ἐντρέχεια). For a kindred use of the verb ἐντρέχειν see Hom. Il. 19. 385 εἰ οἱ ἐφαρμόσσειε (sc. ἐντεα) καὶ ἐντρέχοι ἀγλαὰ γυῖα.

537 B 10 οὗτος—ὁ χρόνος κτλ. The compulsory military or militia service of Athenian youth during their eighteenth and nineteenth years is probably in Plato's mind: see Gilbert Gk. Const. Ant. E. T. pp. 311—313.

14 προκριθέντες. See on 537 D.

537 C 15 ἐν τῇ παιδείᾳ. It is difficult to decide whether Plato in this instance wrote παιδιᾶ, παιδία or παιδεία. παιδιᾶ is supported by three inferior MSS as well as by A² and the oldest MS of Theo (see Hiller's edition p. 3), and παίζοντας τρέφει in 536 E seems at first sight to favour it. But ἐν τῇ παιδιᾶ is different from ἐν παιδιᾷς μέρει, and ought to mean 'in their play'; whereas 536 E does not distinguish between 'study' and 'play' (see note ad loc.). παιδιᾶ 'boyhood' has also some MS support, and the existence of the word in Greek is fully proved by Schneider in his elaborate note. But ἐν τῇ παιδιᾶ would be superfluous after παισίν, and on the whole I now prefer the traditional reading παιδεία, which appears to be in a majority of MSS.

16 τούτοις συνακτέον κτλ. τούτοις (sc. τοῖς προκριθείσι) goes with συνακτέον. The propaedeutic studies now begin to be pursued no longer χυδῶν, but systematically and comparatively, so as to reveal the 'kinship of the studies with one another and with the nature of Being': cf. 531 D n., and (for the meaning of οἰκειότης) 526 C n. Platt would omit τῶν μαθημάτων as a gloss on ἀλλήλων, but without these words the Greek might mean 'their mutual kinship and the kinship of true being' (with itself). τῶν μαθημάτων is also in Theo (l. c.). For the genitives ἀλλήλων and τῆς—φύσεως, (which D. and V. wrongly connect with σύνοψιν), cf. VI 501 D τὴν φύσιν αὐτῶν οἰκεῖαν εἶναι τοῦ ἀρίστου.

ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πείρα διαλεκτικῆς φύσεως καὶ μὴ. ὁ μὲν γὰρ συνοπτικὸς διαλεκτικός, ὁ δὲ μὴ οὐ. Ξυνοίομαι, ἦ δ' ὅς. Ταῦτα τοίνυν, ἦν δ' 20

D ἐγώ, δεήσει σε ἐπισκοποῦντα ὁὐ ἂν μάλιστα τοιοῦτοι ἐν αὐτοῖς ὧσι καὶ μόνιμοι μὲν ἐν μαθήμασι, μόνιμοι δ' ἐν πολέμῳ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις νομίμοις. τούτους αὖ, ἐπειδὴν τὰ τριάκοντα ἔτη ἐκβαίνωσιν, ἐκ τῶν προκρίτων προκρινάμενον εἰς μείζους τε τιμὰς καθιστάναι καὶ σκοπεῖν τῇ τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι δυνάμει βασανίζοντα, τίς ὁμμάτων καὶ 25 τῆς ἄλλης αἰσθήσεως δυνατὸς μεθιέμενος ἐπ' αὐτὸ τὸ ὄν μετ' ἀληθείας ἰέναι. καὶ ἐνταῦθα δὴ πολλῆς φυλακῆς ἔργον, ὧ ἐταῖρε.

E Τί μάλιστα; ἦ δ' ὅς. Οὐκ ἐννοεῖς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ νῦν περὶ τὸ διαλέγεσθαι κακὸν γιγνόμενον ὅσον γίγνεται; Τὸ ποῖον; ἔφη. Παρανομίας πού, ἔφην ἐγώ, ἐμπίμπλονται. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. Θαυμασ- 30 τὸν οὖν τι οἶει, εἶπον, πᾶσχειν αὐτοὺς καὶ οὐ ξυγγιγνώσκεις; Πῇ μάλιστα; ἔφη. Οἶον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, εἴ τις ὑποβολιμαῖος τραφείη 538 ἐν πολλοῖς μὲν χρήμασι, πολλῷ δὲ καὶ μεγάλῳ γένηι καὶ κόλαξι πολλοῖς, ἀνὴρ δὲ γενόμενος αἰσθοίτο, ὅτι οὐ τούτων ἐστὶ τῶν φασκόντων γονέων, τοὺς δὲ τῷ ὄντι γευνήσαντας μὴ εὐροί, τοῦτον ἔχεις

23. τούτους q¹: τούτοις AΠΞ q². 29. κακὸν Π: καλὸν A. 30. ἐμπίμπλονται A²: ἐμπίπλαται A¹ΠΞ q¹: ἐμπίπλασθαι q².

19 ὁ μὲν γὰρ συνοπτικὸς κτλ. Cf. 531 D n.: also Phaedr. 265 D ff. εἰς μίαν ἰδέαν συννορῶντα ἀγειν τὰ πολλαχῇ διεσπαρμένα, Laws XII 965 B (συννορῶντα), Phaedr. 273 E, Soph. 253 D ff. and other passages cited by Zeller¹ II 1. p. 616 n. 3. See also App. III.

21 ἐν αὐτοῖς. αὐτοῖς is masculine (Schneider), not neuter (as D. and V. translate).

537 D—540 C At this stage the best proficients will be advanced to higher honours, and tested by Dialectic. Great care must be taken in introducing them to this study; for where the character is immature and weak, dialectical debate too frequently engenders lawlessness, by overthrowing inherited beliefs. We shall therefore forbid such disputations to the young. After five years devoted solely to Dialectic, the next fifteen will be spent in acquiring experience of government and practical affairs. At the age of fifty those who have triumphantly passed through every trial, will thenceforward contemplate the Good, descending when their turn comes into the Cave to order human institutions after its likeness. All these regulations apply of course to women as well as to men.

537 D 23 ἐκ τῶν προκρίτων. πρόκριτοι was a familiar term in the organisation of Greek polities: see Arist. Ath. Pol. 8. 1 with Sandys ad loc., and cf. also Pl. Laws 753 C f.

25 ὁμμάτων—μεθιέμενος. See VI 511 B n.

537 E 29 παρανομίας κτλ. Like Phidippides in Ar. Clouds 1399 ff. ὡς ἡδὺν καὶ νομοῖς πράγμασιν καὶ δεξιοῖς ὁμιλεῖν | καὶ τῶν καθεστώτων νόμων ὑπερφρονεῖν δύνασθαι κτλ. Schneider retains ἐμπίπλαται (see cr. n.), making the subject τὸ διαλέγεσθαι, but the present tense ('they become filled with lawlessness') favours the plural. Or does Plato mean that the dialectic of his day was degenerating? I think not; for that is scarcely a reason for exercising special care in connexion with his own (ἐνταῦθα δὴ πολλῆς φυλακῆς ἔργον). αὐτοὺς is not decisive, though it points to the plural, which is also supported by 539 A παράνομος δὴ—δόξει γεγονέναι ἐκ νομίμου.

538 A 2 τῶν φασκόντων γονέων: 'his self-styled parents.' For the omission μαντεύσασθαι, πῶς ἂν διατεθείη πρὸς τε τοὺς κόλακας καὶ πρὸς 5 τοὺς ὑποβαλομένους ἐν ἐκείνῳ τε τῷ χρόνῳ, ᾧ οὐκ ἤδει τὰ περὶ τῆς ὑποβολῆς, καὶ ἐν ᾧ αὐτῷ ἤδει; ἢ βούλει ἐμοῦ μαντευομένου ἀκοῦσαι; Βούλομαι, ἔφη.

XVII. Μαντεύομαι τοίνυν, εἶπον, μᾶλλον αὐτὸν τιμᾶν ἂν τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν¹ μητέρα καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους οἰκείους δοκοῦντας ἢ τοὺς B 10 κολακεύοντας, καὶ ἦττον μὲν ἂν περιδεῖν ἐνδεεῖς τινός, ἦττον δὲ παράνομόν τι δράσαι ἢ εἰπεῖν εἰς αὐτούς, ἦττον δὲ ἀπειθεῖν τὰ μεγάλα ἐκείνοις ἢ τοῖς κόλαξιν, ἐν ᾧ χρόνῳ τὸ ἀληθές μὴ εἰδείη.
 Εἰκός, ἔφη. Αἰσθόμενος τοίνυν τὸ ὄν, μαντεύομαι αὐτῷ περὶ μὲν τούτους ἀνείναι ἂν τὸ τιμᾶν τε καὶ σπουδάζειν, περὶ δὲ τοὺς 15 κόλακας ἐπιτείνει καὶ πείθεσθαι τε αὐτοῖς διαφερόντως ἢ πρότερον καὶ ζῆν ἂν ἤδη κατ' ἐκείνους, ξυνόντα αὐτοῖς ἀπαρακαλύπτως, C πατρὸς δὲ ἐκείνου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ποιουμένων οἰκείων, εἰ μὴ πάνν εἴη φύσει ἐπιεικής, μέλειν τὸ μηδέιν. Πάντ', ἔφη, λέγεις οἷά περ ἂν γένοιτο. ἀλλὰ πῇ πρὸς τοὺς ἀπτομένους τῶν λόγων αὕτη φέρει ἢ 20 εἰκῶν; Ὅτι δὲ. ἔστι που ἡμῖν δόγματα ἐκ παίδων περὶ δικαίων καὶ

13. αἰσθόμενος A¹ cum ceteris, excepto M, ubi secundum Rostagno legitur αἰσθόμενον: idem ut videtur corr. A².

of εἶναι see Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. p. 34.
 γονέων <εἶναι>, which Herwerden proposes, is weaker and less emphatic.

5 ὑποβαλομένους is the reading of A and Cesenas M; whereas all, or nearly all, the other MSS have ὑποβαλλόμενους.
 "Ac nescio an qui suppositum sibi ali-quando filium pro suo habere et venditare pergunt, ὑποβαλλόμενοι dici potuerint" (Schneider, comparing καθιστάντες in III 410 B). This is true, and the present may be right, especially as in v 469 E, A has βαλόντος (wrongly, as I think) for the βάλλοντος of all the other MSS. But M may here perhaps be allowed to turn the scale.

ἡδει. εἶδελθ (suggested by Richards) would be more regular (as in B below), but cf. δύναται 515 E n.

538 B II εἰς αὐτούς. εἰς (which Herwerden brackets) is used as in ὑβρίσειν εἰς.

13 αἰσθόμενος. αἰσθόμενον, which is read by Hermann and others, has no MS authority except a variant, perhaps an early variant, in A, and apparently also
 M. The anacoluthon will of course be scouted by many scholars; but although it is ungrammatical, no doubt, it is scarcely harsher than many anacolutha in Plato; see Schneider on IV 430 E and Engel-hardt Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 40, where numerous examples of the nomina-tivus pendens are given. Plato begins as if he were going to write δοκεῖ μοι instead of μαντεύομαι: compare Ap. 21 C διασκοπῶν οὖν τοῦτον—καὶ διαλεγόμενος αὐτῷ, ἔδοξέ μοι κτλ., where ἔδοξέ μοι is substituted for ἔγνω or the like. Here the nominative seems to me to emphasize the contrast with ἐν ᾧ χρόνῳ—εἶδελθ better than the accusative could have done; but in any case it is safer to retain than to expunge such echoes of conversational style in Plato wherever the weight of MS evidence is in their favour. For this reason I now, with Schneider and others, revert to αἰσθόμενος.

538 C 17 πατρὸς δὲ ἐκείνου κτλ.:
 'his former father' etc. i.e. the reputed father of his earlier days. ποιουμένων 'reputed' (J. and C.), lit. 'made out to be,' is scarcely different from δοκοῦντων (τοὺς ἄλλους οἰκείους δοκοῦντας in B).
 Cobet conjectures προσποιουμένων, but the text is sound: cf. VI 498 A n.

20 ἔστι που κτλ. Plato, as Bosanquet points out (Companion p. 305), seems to καλῶν, ἐν οἷς ἐκτεθράμμεθα ὥσπερ ὑπὸ γονεῦσι, πειθαρχοῦντές τε D καὶ τιμῶντες αὐτά. "Ἔστι γάρ. Οὐκοῦν καὶ ἄλλα ἐναντία τούτων ἐπιτηδεύματα ἡδονὰς ἔχοντα, ἃ κολακεύει μὲν ἡμῶν τὴν ψυχὴν καὶ ἔλκει ἐφ' αὐτά, πείθει δ' οὐ τοὺς καὶ ὀπηροῦν μετρίους· ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνα τιμῶσι τὰ πάτρια καὶ ἐκείνοις πειθαρχοῦσιν. "Ἔστι 25 ταῦτα. Τί οὖν; ἦν δ' ἐγὼ ὅταν τὸν οὕτως ἔχοντα ἐλθὼν ἐρώτημα ἔρηται, τί ἐστὶ τὸ καλόν, καὶ ἀποκριναμένου ὃ τοῦ νομοθέτου ἤκουεν ἐξελέγχῃ ὁ λόγος καὶ πολλάκις καὶ πολλαχῇ ἐλέγχων εἰς E δόξαν καταβάλλῃ, ὡς τοῦτο ἢ οὐδὲν μᾶλλον καλὸν ἢ αἰσχρόν, καὶ περὶ δικαίου ὡσαύτως καὶ ἀγαθοῦ καὶ ἃ μάλιστα ἦγεν ἐν τιμῇ, 30 μετὰ τοῦτο τί οἶει ποιήσῃ αὐτὸν πρὸς αὐτὰ τιμῆς τε πέρι καὶ πειθαρχίας; Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη, μήτε τιμᾶν ἔτι ὁμοίως μήτε πείθεσθαι.

 "Ὅταν οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγὼ, μήτε ταῦτα ἡγήται τίμια καὶ οἰκεῖα ὥσπερ 539 πρὸ τοῦ, τά τε ἀληθῆ μὴ εὐρίσκη, ἔστι πρὸς ὁποῖον βίον ἢ ἄλλον ἢ τὸν κολακεύοντα εἰκότως προσχωρήσεται; Οὐκ ἔστιν, ἔφη. Παράνομος δὴ, οἶμαι, δόξει γεγενῆσθαι ἐκ νομίμου. Ἀνάγκη. Οὐκοῦν, ἔφην, εἰκὸς τὸ πάθος τῶν οὕτω λόγων ἀπτομένων καί, ὃ ἄρτι ἔλεγον, πολλῆς συγγνώμης ἄξιον; Καὶ ἐλέου γ', ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν ἵνα μὴ 5 γίγνηται ὁ ἔλεος οὗτος περὶ τοὺς τριακοντούτας σοι, εὐλαβουμένῳ

28. ἤκουεν A¹Π: ἤκουσεν corr. A².

ἐξελέγχῃ A¹Π: ἐξελέγξῃ corr. A².

29. καταβάλλῃ E: καταλάβῃ A: καταβάλλῃ (sic) Π q.

think it possible enough that the higher education will lead his rulers to criticise the δόγματα of the earlier 'musical' training. "But if this criticism is only the negative side of the deepening grasp with which a mature and steadfast mind lays hold on reality, no harm, he urges, will be done" (Bosanquet l.c.). We may even go farther and say that Dialectic and its ancillary studies are expressly intended to place the Guardians in the same position as the original legislator (VI 497 D) and enable them within limits to modify and reconstruct the authoritative δόγματα of the city (VI 500 E ff.).

538 D 26 ἐλθὼν ἐρώτημα. See IV 434 D n.

27 ἀποκριναμένου. The genitive is defended by Schneider from IX 590 D. ἀποκρινάμενον (E and two other MSS) is obviously a 'correction.'

28 καὶ πολλάκις κτλ. The whole of this passage should be compared with the account of the genesis of μισολογία in Phaed. 90 B ff.

538 E 33 μήτε—τε. See on IV 430 B.

539 A 2 τὸν κολακεύοντα is explained by the Oxford editors as 'the life that is flattering him,' with reference to 538 D. It is rather, I think, 'the flattering life' i.e. the life of the κόλαξ (cf. ὁ ἀπολαυστικὸς βίος and the like in Arist. Eth. Nic. I 2. 1095^b 17 ff.). In other words the epithet which properly belongs to the person who lives the life is transferred to the life which he lives. Aristotle reminds us that ὁ δημαγωγὸς καὶ ὁ κόλαξ οἱ αὐτοὶ καὶ ἀνάλογον (Pol. Δ 4. 1292^a 20), and the demagogic life may be taken as one among many illustrations of Plato's meaning, especially as in παράνομος κτλ. he seems to be thinking of Alcibiades: cf. Thuc. VI 15. 4 and 28. 2. See VI 494 C ff. iii. and Bosanquet Companion p. 306.

3 δόξει. The appearance does not exclude the reality: cf. (with J. and C.) Soph. O. T. 402 and Thuc. III 10. 1.

6 εὐλαβουμένῳ refers not to the pupils, but to Glauco as legislator, who παντὶ τρόπῳ τῶν λόγων ἀπτέον; Καὶ μάλ', ἢ δ' ὅς. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ μία μὲν εὐλάβεια αὕτη συχνή, τὸ ἢ μὴ νέους ὄντας αὐτῶν γεύεσθαι; Β οἶμαι γάρ σε οὐ λεληθέναι, ὅτι οἱ μεираκίσκοι, ὅταν τὸ πρῶτον 10 λόγων γεύονται, ὡς παιδιᾷ αὐτοῖς καταχρῶνται, ἀεὶ εἰς ἀντιλογίαν χρώμενοι, καὶ μιμούμενοι τοὺς ἐξελέγχοντας αὐτοὶ ἄλλους ἐλέγχουσι, χαίροντες ὥσπερ σκυλάκια τῷ ἔλκειν τε καὶ σπαράττειν τῷ λόγῳ τοὺς πλησίον αἰεὶ. Ὑπερφυῶς μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν 15 σφόδρα καὶ ἢ ταχὺ ἐμπίπτουσιν εἰς τὸ μηδὲν ἡγεῖσθαι ὧν περ C πρότερον· καὶ ἐκ τούτων δὴ αὐτοὶ τε καὶ τὸ ὅλον φιλοσοφίας περὶ εἰς τοὺς ἄλλους διαβέβληνται. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη. Ὁ δὲ δὴ πρεσβύτερος, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τῆς μὲν τοιαύτης μαίνιας οὐκ ἂν ἐθέλοι μετέχειν, τὸν δὲ διαλέγεσθαι ἐθέλοντα καὶ σκοπεῖν τάληθες μᾶλλον 20 μιμήσεται ἢ τὸν παιδιᾷς χάριν παίζοντα καὶ ἀντιλέγοντα, καὶ αὐτός τε μετριώτερος ἢ ἔσται καὶ τὸ ἐπιτήδευμα τιμιώτερον ἀντὶ D ἀτιμωτέρου ποιήσει. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν καὶ τὰ προειρημένα τούτου ἐπ' εὐλαβείᾳ πάντα προείρηται, τὸ τὰς φύσεις κοσμίους εἶναι καὶ στασίμους οἷς τις μεταδώσει τῶν λόγων, καὶ μὴ ὡς νῦν ὁ 25 τυχὼν καὶ οὐδὲν προσήκων ἔρχεται ἐπ' αὐτό; Πάννυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

XVIII. Ἀρκεῖ δὴ ἐπὶ λόγων μεταλήψει μεῖναι ἐνδελεχῶς καὶ ζυντόνως μηδὲν ἄλλο πράττουσι, ἀλλ' ἀντιστρόφως γυμναζομένῳ τοῖς περὶ τὸ σῶμα γυμνασίοις, ἔτη διπλάσια ἢ τότε; Ἐξ, ἔφη, ἢ E τέτταρα λέγεις; Ἀμέλει, εἶπον. πέντε θές· μετὰ γὰρ τοῦτο κατα-

14. ἐλέγξωσιν A²Π: fortasse ἐλέγχωσιν Δ¹.

28. ἐτη A²q: ἐτι A¹ΠΞ.

'meddles with Dialectic' by introducing the Guardians to it. This appears clearly both from εὐλάβεια and from ἐνταῦθα δὴ πολλῆς φυλακῆς ἔργον in 537 D. εὐλαβου- μένους (Madvig) and εὐλαβουμένοις (Baiter) are therefore wrong.

539 B 8 μὴ νέους κτλ. Cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. I 1, 1095^a 2 τῆς πολιτικῆς οὐκ ἔστιν οἰκείος ἀκροατῆς ὁ νέος. It is clear from the present passage that Dialectic is largely concerned with moral and religious questions, as Bosanquet (Companion p. 302) and Nettleship (Lect. and Rem. II p. 291) remark. See App. III. Grote (III pp. 237—239) has some interesting observations on Plato's exclusion of the young from dialectical debate; but it is scarcely right to say that the Parmenides (135 C—136 E) contradicts Plato's precept in the Republic, for the disputations in the Parmenides are a preliminary exercise (γυμνασία 135 D) to be undertaken before we attempt to define καλὸν τε τί καὶ δίκαιον καὶ ἀγαθὸν καὶ ἐν ἑκάστῳ τῶν εἰδῶν (135 C).

9 οἶμαι γάρ σε κτλ. The same phenomenon is similarly described in Phil. 15 D—16 A: cf. also Ap. 23 C and Isocr. Panath. 26.

10 ἀντιλογίαν. See on V 454 A.

539 D 23 τούτων: this provision, viz. that they shall not begin Dialectic in youth (539 B). The genitive depends on προειρημένα (which refers to passages like VI 485 ff., 490, 503 C, VII 535 A ff.), and not, as J. and C. suggest, on εὐλαβεία.

24 ὡς—ἔρχεται. On the construction see III 410 B η.

28 ἐτη—τότε. 537 B.

539 E 29 πέντε θές. Krohn thinks five years very short, compared with the βιβαστέοι ἔσονται σοι εἰς τὸ σπήλαιον πάλιν ἐκεῖνο, καὶ ἀναγ- 30 καστέοι ἄρχειν τά τε περὶ τὸν πόλεμον καὶ ὅσαι νέων ἀρχαί, ἵνα μὴδ' ἐμπειρία ὑστερῶσι τῶν ἄλλων· καὶ ἔτι καὶ ἐν τούτοις βασα-540 νιστέοι, εἰ ἐμμενοῦσιν ἐλκόμενοι πανταχόσε ἥ τι καὶ παρακινήσουσι.

 Χρόνον δέ, ἧ δ' ὅς, πόσον τούτου τίθης; Πεντεκαίδεκα ἔτη, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. γενομένων δὲ πεντηκοντούτων τοὺς διασωθέντας καὶ ἀριστεύσαντας πάντα πάντη ἐν ἔργοις τε καὶ ἐπιστήμαις πρὸς τέλος ἡδὴ ἀκτέον καὶ ἀναγκαστέον ἀνακλίναντας τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς αὐγὴν 5 εἰς αὐτὸ ἀποβλέψαι τὸ πᾶσι φῶς παρέχον, καὶ ἰδόντας τὸ ἀγαθὸν αὐτό, παραδείγματι χρωμένους ἐκείνῳ, καὶ πόλιν καὶ ἰδιώτας καὶ Β εαυτοὺς ἑκοσμεῖν τὸν ἐπίλοιπον βίον ἐν μέρει ἐκάστους, τὸ μὲν πολὺ πρὸς φιλοσοφίᾳ διατρίβοντας, ὅταν δὲ τὸ μέρος ἦκη, πρὸς πολιτικοῖς ἐπιταλαιπωροῦντας καὶ ἄρχοντας ἐκάστους τῆς πόλεως 10 ἕνεκα, οὐχ ὥς καλόν τι, ἀλλ' ὥς ἀναγκαῖον πράττοντας, καὶ οὕτως ἄλλους αἰεὶ παιδεύσαντας τοιούτους, ἀντικαταλιπόντας τῆς πόλεως φύλακας, εἰς μακίρων νήσους ἀπιόντας οἰκεῖν· μνημεῖα δ' αὐτοῖς
 C καὶ θυσίας τὴν πόλιν δημοσίᾳ ποιεῖν, ἔαν καὶ ἡ Πυθία ξυναναιρῇ, 9. φιλοσοφία corr. A²: φιλοσοφίαν A¹ cum ceteris.

 A: ξυναίρη (sic) Π.

14. ξυναναιρῇ Ξg: ξυναιρῇ time allotted to the προπαιδεία, and suspects that we have here 'a silent confession that there is not so very much to say about the Ideas after all.' (Pl. St. p. 187). Five years devoted ἐνδελεχῶς καὶ ξυντόνως to Dialectic exclusively is a good deal; and we may be sure that Plato does not intend his Guardians to neglect the subject between 35 and 50, although practical duties occupy most of their time. Moreover at 50, Dialectic is resumed, and it is not till then that the Idea of Good is fully apprehended, so that the five years from 30 to 35 were certainly not thought by Plato to exhaust the subject. We must also beware of supposing that there is any break of continuity in the education of the Guardians. The study of each προπαιδευτικὸν 'art' by itself prepares us for seeing all the 'arts' in their mutual relations and interdependence, and the comparative survey of the 'arts' in turn prepares us for Dialectic (537 C), nor need the subjects of the προπαιδεία be finally abandoned after we enter on Dialectic. See Appendices II and III.

540 A 3 πεντηκοντούτων. We are told that in Chalcis the magistrates had to be at least 50 years of age: νόμος δὲ ἦν Χαλκιδεῦσι μὴ ἄρξαι μὴδὲ πρεσβεῦσαι νεώτερον ἑτῶν πενήκοντα (Heraclides Fr. Hist. Gr. II p. 222), but advanced age was rarely a condition of holding office in Greek states. See Whibley Gk. Olig. pp. 148 f.

5 τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς αὐγὴν: 'the radiant light of the soul.' αὐγή is highly poetic in this sense: cf. Soph. Ajax 70. There is more than a touch of mysticism in this and similar passages throughout Books VI and VII (cf. especially VI 490 A, B), but it is exaggerated by Krohn (Pl. St. p. 187), who boldly declares that "the only person who correctly understood the later phase of the Republic was Plotinus," and that "the so-called Platonic Dialectic is a Missverständniss."

7 παραδείγματι κτλ. See VI 484 C, 501 A—C nn.

540 B 10 ἐκάστους. See 520 D n.

11 οὐχ ὥς καλόν τι κτλ. 520 E n.

540 C 14 ἔαν καὶ ἡ Πυθία κτλ. See on IV 427 B, C.

ξυναναιρῇ. See cr. n. The error in A, II, and several mss besides, is a pretty example of lipography: contrast

15 ὥς δαίμοσιν, εἰ δὲ μή, ὥς εὐδαίμοσί τε καὶ θείοις. Παγκάλους, ἔφη, τοὺς ἄρχοντας, ὧ Σώκρατες, ὥσπερ ἀνδριαντοποιὸς ἀπείργασαι. Καὶ τὰς ἀρχούσας γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὧ Γλαύκων. μηδὲν γάρ τι οἶον με περὶ ἀνδρῶν εἰρηκέναι μᾶλλον ἢ εἰρηκα ἢ περὶ γυναικῶν, ὅσαι ἂν αὐτῶν ἱκαναὶ τὰς φύσεις ἐγγίγνωνται. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη, εἴπερ
20 ἴσα γε πάντα τοῖς ἀνδράσι κοινωνήσουσιν, ὥς διήλθομεν. Τί¹ οὖν; D ἔφη· ξυγχωρεῖτε περὶ τῆς πόλεώς τε καὶ πολιτείας μὴ παντάπασιν ἡμᾶς εὐχὰς εἰρηκέναι, ἀλλὰ χαλεπὰ μὲν, δυνατὰ δέ πῃ, καὶ οὐκ ἄλλη ἢ εἴρηται, ὅταν οἱ ὥς ἀληθῶς φιλόσοφοι δυνάσται, ἢ πλείους ἢ εἷς, ἐν πόλει γενόμενοι τῶν μὲν νῦν τιμῶν καταφρονήσωσιν, 25 ἡγησάμενοι ἀνελευθέρους εἶναι καὶ οὐδενὸς ἀξίας, τὸ δὲ ὀρθὸν περὶ πλείστου ποιησάμενοι καὶ τὰς ἀπὸ τούτου τιμὰς, ¹ μέγιστον δὲ καὶ E ἀναγκαιότατον τὸ δίκαιον, καὶ τούτῳ δὴ ὑπηρετοῦντές τε καὶ αὔξοντες αὐτὸ διασκευωρήσωνται τὴν ἑαυτῶν πόλιν; Πῶς; ἔφη. Ὅσοι μὲν ἂν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρεσβύτεροι τυγχάνωσι δεκετῶν ἐν τῇ

21. ξυγχωρεῖτε A² γ: ξυγχωρεῖν τε A¹ Π: ξυγχωρεῖς Ξ. ἐτῶν A.

29. δεκετῶν Π: δέκ'

προσαναίρῃ in V 461 E, where the temptation is absent and the mss right. Burnet says that A² has ξυναναίρῃ, I know not on what authority: I found no trace in the MS of anything except ξυαναίρῃ.

15 εὐδαίμοσι. If not δαίμοσιν, then εὐ-δαίμοσιν.

16 ὥσπερ ἀνδριαντοιοῖς. Jowett seems to find an allusion to the fact that Socrates had been a sculptor; but the same words might have been used if he had not: cf. (with J. and C.) II 361 D.

20 ὥς διήλθομεν. V 451 C ff.

540 D—541 B Finally, we repeat, our perfect city is not an idle aspiration, but capable of being realised, when true philosophers become kings and educate the young themselves, after banishing every one above the age of ten. Our account of the perfect city and man is now completed.

540 D 22 εὐχὰς. V 450 D n.

χαλεπὰ κτλ. See VI 502 C n.

23 ἢ πλείους ἢ εἷς. See on IV 445 D.

540 E 27 ἀναγκαιότατον. They will admit no compulsion save that of Right; Non civium ardor prava iubentium Non vultus instantis tyranni Mente quatit solida. Contrast VI 492 B—493 D.

29 ὅσοι μὲν ἂν κτλ. Newman (Aristotle's Politics I p. 413 n.) thinks this proposal is "a softened version of the sentence which Heraclitus passed on the Ephesians for expelling Hermodorus" (Bywater's Fr. 114), but the parallel is not very close. Plato's καθαρός is sufficiently explained by the precepts which he himself lays down in VI 501 A: see also Pol. 293 D and especially Laus 735 B—736 C, where he gives an interesting survey of the various καθαροί applicable to commonwealths, and 752 B ff. Whether the καθαρός of the Republic is itself either possible or adequate is another matter: Grote pronounces it an εὐχή (Plato III p. 218 n.). An age which had witnessed the διοικισμός of Mantinea (Xen. Hell. V 2.7) might well have regarded it as feasible. 'Possible, but difficult' is perhaps the safest verdict. The purgation, even if successfully applied, might not be sufficient to start the city well, but it would be a useful auxiliary to that "express initiative force, exceptional and belonging to some peculiar crisis," which (according to Grote l.c.) would float the enterprise. Bosanquet raises the question how far the καθαρός is seriously meant. To me it appears to be neither more nor less serious than Plato's treatment of the general question as to the possibility of his ideal city: see on VI 502 C and Hirmer Entstehung u. Komp. d. pl. Pol. p. 638.

541 πόλει, πάντας ἐκπέμψωσιν εἰς τοὺς | ἀγρούς, τοὺς δὲ παῖδας αὐτῶν 30 παραλαβόντες ἐκτὸς τῶν νῦν ἡθῶν, ἃ καὶ οἱ γονεῖς ἔχουσι, θρέψωνται ἐν τοῖς σφετέραις τρόποις καὶ νόμοις, οὓσιν οἷοις διεληλύθαμεν τότε, καὶ οὕτω τάχιστα τε καὶ ῥᾶστα πόλιν τε καὶ πολιτείαν, ἣν ἐλέγομεν, καταστήσαν αὐτήν τε εὐδαιμονήσῃ καὶ τὸ ἔθνος, ἐν ᾧ ἂν 5 B ἐγγένηται, πλείστα ὀνήσειν; Πολύ γ', ἔφη·¹ καὶ ὥς ἂν γένοιτο, εἴπερ ποτὲ γίγνοιτο, δοκεῖς μοι, ὦ Σώκρατες, εὖ εἰρηκέναι. Οὐκοῦν ἄδην ἡδη, εἶπον ἐγώ, ἔχουσιν ἡμῖν οἱ λόγοι περὶ τε τῆς πόλεως ταύτης καὶ τοῦ ὁμοίου ταύτῃ ἀνδρός; δῆλος γάρ που καὶ οὗτος, οἷον φήσομεν δεῖν αὐτὸν εἶναι. Δῆλος, ἔφη· καὶ ὅπερ ἐρωτᾷς, 10 δοκεῖ μοι τέλος ἔχειν.

τέλος πολιτείας Ζ'.

30 ἐκπέμψωσιν—Θρέψονται. Stephanus (with some inferior MS authority) reads the future, which Liebhold also would restore; but ὅταν is carried on. Cf. II 359 B n.

541 A 31 θρέψονται κτλ. J. and C. accuse Plato of barely considering "how the provision, which he here abruptly introduces, is to be reconciled with what precedes. For how are the children to be taught music and gymnastic when all their elders have been sent away? From what other State are the new teachers to be brought?" Plato is perfectly consistent. The new teachers are οἱ ὡς ἀληθῶς φιλόσοφοι δυνάσται ἐν πόλει γενόμενοι (540 D: cf. VI 499 B, 502 A ff.), and they rusticate the parents etc. just because their presence makes it impossible to bring up children on the new lines. If 'their elders' could teach the young children, it would be unnecessary and wrong to send them into the country. Jowett seems to forget for the moment that Plato is not here speaking of his own city, but of an actual city which he wishes to transform into his καλλίπολις.

4 καὶ οὕτω κτλ. The infinitives still depend on ἐνυχωρεῖτε.

5 ἐλέγομεν. Liebhold's λέγομεν is harmless, but unnecessary: cf. διεληλύθαμεν τότε above.

541 B 7 εἴπερ ποτὲ γίγνοιτο. Cf. VI 502 C n.

10 ὅπερ ἐρωτᾷς refers to Socrates' question οὐκοῦν—ἀνδρός; Cf. X 595 C ἀλλ' ὃ λέγω, ῥητέον. "The present inquiry is, I believe, concluded" (D. and V.) is an erroneous translation.

APPENDICES TO BOOK VII.

I.

ON THE SIMILES OF THE LINE AND THE CAVE.

The famous similitudes in Books VI and VII have claimed the attention of every writer who has seriously attempted to expound the philosophy of Plato. It must suffice to refer generally to Ueberweg-Heinze *Grundriss*⁸ etc. pp. 167—174: and in particular to Whewell, Philosophy of Discovery, pp. 429—448: Sidgwick, Journal of Philology, II pp. 96 ff.; Jackson ib. x pp. 132 ff.; and Shorey On the Idea of Good in Plato's Republic (Chicago Studies in Classical Philology I pp. 188—239). The aim of the present Appendix is not polemical, but explanatory, and its scope is limited to an exposition of the difficulties of the subject in a more consecutive and reasoned manner than was possible in the notes.

An interpreter ought in the first instance to confine himself to such express statements, hints, and indications as are furnished by Plato himself in the Republic. The evidence of other Platonic dialogues and of Aristotle is certainly admissible, and may prove extremely useful in supplementing and confirming our results; but it ought not to be appealed to until the testimony of the Republic has been heard.

I will try to conform to these canons of interpretation.

The line is divided into two unequal parts, each of which is subdivided according to the proportions of the original section. Thus (Fig. i.) $AD:DC::AC:CB$, and $CE:EB::AC:CB$.

FIG. i. THE LINE.

CB represents the νοητόν: and AC is called sometimes ὁρατόν, sometimes δοξαστόν.

AD stands for εἰκόνες, i.e. πρῶτον μὲν τὰς σκιὰς, ἔπειτα τὰ ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι φαντάσματα καὶ ἐν τοῖς ὅσα πικρία τε καὶ λεία καὶ φαυλὰ ξηρόστηκεν, καὶ πᾶν τὸ τοιοῦτον: DC for τὰ περὶ ἡμᾶς ζῶα καὶ πᾶν τὸ φυτευτὸν καὶ τὸ σκευαστὸν ὅλον γένος (509 D—510 A nn.). It is clear, therefore, that if Plato means what he says, the objects represented by AD are distinct from those represented by DC, though they are each of them ὁρατά (δοξαστά).

CE stands for one part of τὸ νοητόν, EB for the other: see 510 B τὸ μὲν αὐτοῦ—τὸ δ' αὖ ἕτερον and 511 C σαφέστερον εἶναι τὸ ἐπὶ τῆς τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι ἐπιστήμης τοῦ ὄντος τε καὶ νοητοῦ θεωρούμενον ἢ τὸ ἐπὶ τῶν τεχνῶν καλουμένον. Here again, if Plato's words are to be taken strictly, the objects represented by CE are distinct from those represented by EB. This conclusion is confirmed by 516 A compared with 532 A ff., where the objects of the lower intellectual method are compared with shadows of so-called real things (AD), whereas the higher νοητά correspond to ζῶα etc. (DC): cf. 511 E ἐφ' οἷς ἔσται and 534 A.

So far, it will scarcely, I think, be denied that Plato's language points to a fourfold division, in which there are two main segments, each with two subsections. This view, which had hitherto been generally approved, was attacked by Jackson on the ground that "the introduction of the first segment is unmeaning and worse than unmeaning, on the assumption that 'the universe is compared to a quadripartite line'" (see Journal of Philology x pp. 132—150). Let us therefore examine the evidence of the Republic on the subsection AD.

AD is part of AC, and AC is called by Plato sometimes δοξαστόν and sometimes ὁρατόν: see 510 A and the other passages cited in my note ad loc. What then is the meaning of δοξαστόν? The word is certainly not synonymous with ὁρατόν, and we are surely bound to interpret its meaning here by the meaning which Plato has already given to it in the Republic. Now according to the explanation of δόξα in v 476 B—480 A, δοξαστόν includes not only the objects of sight and the other senses, but also, for example, τὰ τῶν πολλῶν πολλὰ νόμιμα καλοῦ τε πέρι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων (479 D, with note ad loc.). It would appear therefore that AC embraces not only ὁρατά, but other δοξαστά also, and that among these δοξαστά are contained inter alia popular canons or opinions on the subject of what is beautiful, ugly, right, wrong etc., as explained in 479 D. If Plato intended us to restrict AC to ὁρατά, it is reasonable to suppose that he would have used the term ὁρατά throughout, instead of employing a word which he has already defined as including not only visibles, but other opinables as well. That visible εἰκόνες of ὁρατά are of little or no metaphysical importance, is doubtless true; but there are other δοξασταὶ εἰκόνες besides those which are visible, and some of these are by no means destitute of significance and value.

For examples of such εἰκόνες we have not far to seek. Plato himself appears to recognize them in 517 D, 520 C, D (see the notes on these passages, and on 514 A, 517 A). They include the νόμιμα on subjects of taste, morality, truth etc. expressed or embodied in the works of poets, painters, and artists generally, sophists and rhetoricians, demagogues, statesmen, and others, in so far as these canons and opinions are copied from τὰ τῶν πολλῶν πολλὰ νόμιμα καλοῦ τε περί καὶ τῶν ἄλλων, or from any other opinions and 'appearances' whatsoever : see VI 492 A—493 E, III 401 B ff., 402 B ff. and X 595 B—602 B. Much the same view is held by Nettleship (Lect. and Rem. II pp. 242—246) and others, although they have not, I think, sufficiently insisted on the fact that Plato stamps this interpretation as legitimate and correct by calling AC δοξαστόν, and including among δοξαστά (in Book V) not only ὁρατά but also τὰ τῶν πολλῶν πολλὰ νόμιμα καλοῦ τε περί καὶ τῶν ἄλλων.

If we now look for confirmations in other dialogues, the Sophist is ready at hand with its elaborate amount of εἰκαστική and φανταστική (233 E—236 C, 264 C ff.). The objects with which these two arts are concerned cannot be placed in any segment of the line except AD. In the Sophist Plato distinguishes between θεία ποιητική and ἀνθρωπίνη ποιητική (θήσω τὰ μὲν φύσει λεγόμενα ποιεῖσθαι θείῃ τέχνῃ, τὰ δ' ἐκ τούτων ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ξυνιστάμενα ἀνθρωπίνῃ, καὶ κατὰ τοῦτον δὴ τὸν λόγον δύο ποιητικῆς γένῃ, τὸ μὲν ἀνθρώπινον εἶναι, τὸ δὲ θείον 265 E), and between θεία εἰδωλοποιική and ἀνθρωπίνη εἰδωλοποιική (266 B ff. : see on VII 532 C). Now the works of ἀνθρωπίνη (as well as θεία) ποιητική are expressly recognized in DC, which includes σκευαστά as well as φντεντά. It is therefore reasonable to suppose that AD includes the works of ἀνθρωπίνη (as well as θεία) εἰδωλοποιική. And the sophistic art is one among several varieties of ἀνθρωπίνη εἰδωλοποιική, being a subdivision of δοξομήσεις. Compare also, for Poetry, Music, and the imitative arts in general, Laus 669 D ff. It may be noted that this is not the only part of the Republic in which we meet with doctrines and ideas which are more fully developed in the Sophist and other dialogues which are now commonly considered to be relatively late : see on V 476 A.

On these grounds I am unable to look upon the first section of the line as in any way otiose or destitute of importance. It would be strange if in an enumeration of the objects of knowledge and opinion Plato should have left no room for the whole domain of 'imitation,' with which, in the Republic and elsewhere, he is continually concerned. In the analogous classification of Phil. 55 D—58 A μουσική is similarly placed in the lowest of the four divisions: cf. Bosanquet Companion p. 262.

The second division of the line need not detain us long. In so far as it is ὁρατόν, it includes the originals, whether natural or artificial, of the ὁραταὶ εἰκόνες in AD. Regarded in its wider meaning, it embraces all the other δοξαστά of which AD presents us with δοξασταὶ εἰκόνες, and doubtless also more ; for we need not suppose that everything in DC has its counterpart in AD. The corresponding state of mind is πίστις, or 'belief': cf. Tim. 26 C δ' τί περ πρὸς γένεσιν οὐσία, τοῦτο πρὸς πίστιν ἀλήθεια and Gorg. 454 D ff., from which and other passages it is clear that πίστις (in the widest sense) is the normal attitude of the ἀπαίδευτος towards his δοξαστά in general as well as his αἰσθητά in particular. The difference between πίστις and εἰκασία, both of which are here regarded as varieties of δόξα, is a varying quantity ; for πίστις may be right or wrong. I think the particular contrast which Plato has in view is best illustrated by such a case as he himself describes in X 601 D—602 B, where the maker of a σκεῦος is said to have πίστις ὀρθή, ξυνὸν τῷ εἰδότει καὶ ἀναγκαζόμενος ἀκούειν παρὰ τοῦ εἰδότος, whereas the imitator οὔτε εἴσεται οὔτε ὀρθὰ δοξάσει, so that his state of mind can only be εἰκασία. In view of this passage in Book x, we may also (with Bosanquet, Companion, p. 262) compare Phil. 56 B ff. The arts of carpentry, ship-building, house-building etc., as well as ‘popular’ ἀριθμητική, μετρητική etc. (56 E—57 D: cf. VII 526 A n.) are placed in the second lowest category of the Philebus. They are all of them concerned with objects belonging to the second division of the line, and we may therefore take it that the intellectual condition of those who profess and practise these arts is also, according to Plato, πίστις.

It is about the third division of Plato’s line that the greatest disputes have raged.

We have already seen that Plato verbally distinguishes between the contents of CE and those of EB. It is difficult to conceive why he should have done so unless he meant them to be really distinct; for the resources of his language were certainly equal to expressing his real view, whatever it was. There is moreover an exact correspondence between the objects of the different psychical affections or states (παθήματα ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ) and the states themselves; and διάνοια, which Plato regularly uses in connexion with CE (510 D, 511 A, 511 C, 511 D, 511 E, 526 A, 529 D, 533 D, 533 E, 534 A), is expressly distinguished from νόησις or νόησις in 511 D. We are, therefore, prepared to find a similar distinction between the objects of the two mental states. What is the positive evidence on the subject? That the lower νοητά are the subjects of Plato’s propaedeutic studies, viz. mathematical numbers, mathematical plane surfaces, mathematical βάθος, mathematical πορὰ βάθος, and ‘consonant’ mathematical numbers, appears from 510 C—E, 511 A, B, 511 C (τεχνῶν), 525 C—526 A, 527 B, 532 C (τεχνῶν) 533 D συνερίθοις καὶ συμπεριγωγόις χρωμένη αἰς διήλθομεν τέχναις: ἃς ἐπιστήμης μὲν πολλάκις προσείπομεν διὰ τὸ ἔθος, δέονται δὲ ὁνόματος ἄλλου, ἐναργεστέρου μὲν ἢ δόξης, ἀμυδροτέρου δὲ ἢ ἐπιστήμης. διάνοιαν δὲ αὐτὴν ἐν γε τῷ πρόσθεν που ὠρισάμεθα, and 534 A. They are αἰεὶ ὄντα (see 527 B and cf. 529 C, D n.). but nevertheless πολλά, i.e. there are many mathematical units etc. (526 A n.), many mathematical triangles, squares¹ etc., many mathematical cubes etc., many specimens (if the word may be allowed) of each mathematical πορὰ, many of each particular set of ἑξήφωνοι ἀριθμοί. Finally these μαθηματικά occupy an intermediate position between αἰσθητά (δοξαστά) and Ideas. We learn this (1) from their position in the line, (2) from the statement that the mathematical intelligence or διάνοια, which cognizes them, is μεταξύ τι δόξης τε καὶ νοῦ 511 D, (3) from the constantly repeated observation that such studies ‘tend to drag us towards Being’ (i.e. towards EB) etc. 523 A, 525 A, 527 B: cf. also 525 C, 526 B, (4) from the fact that while αἰσθητά are perishable and πολλά, μαθηματικά are πολλά (526 A) and αὐτὸ ὄντα (527 B), whereas the Idea is αὐτὸ ὄν and ἐν.

¹ A hasty perusal of 510 D might lead us to suppose that there is but one ‘mathematical’ square, and even to identify it with the Idea; but see the notes ad loc.

Aristotle's evidence is in complete accord with these statements of Plato himself in the Republic. The relevant passages are cited by Bonitz on Met. A 6. 987^b 14 ff. ἔτι δὲ παρὰ τὰ αἰσθητὰ καὶ τὰ εἶδη τὰ μαθηματικά τῶν πραγμάτων εἶναι φησι (sc. Πλάτων) μεταξύ, διαφέροντα τῶν μὲν αἰσθητῶν τῷ αἰδία καὶ ἀκίνητα εἶναι, τῶν δ' εἰδῶν τῷ τὰ μὲν πολλὰ ἄττα ὅμοια εἶναι, τὸ δὲ εἶδος αὐτὸ ἐν ἑκάστων μόνον. "Tria rerum genera posuisse Platonem, sensibilia mathematica ideas, constanter multis locis refert Aristoteles, cf. 9. 992^b 14, B 1. 995^b 16, 2. 997^b 12, 6. 1002^b 12 sqq., Z 2. 1028^b 19, K 1. 1059^b 4 sqq., A 1. 1069^a 34. Et a sensibilibus quidem rebus differre mathematicas aeterna et immutabili natura (ἀκίνητα^b 16...), ab ideis autem eo, quod mathematicae quidem res eiusdem formae indefinitae numero sunt, idea vero quaelibet simpliciter est una, cf. B 6. l. l.: τὰ μὲν μαθηματικά τῶν δεῦρο (i.e. τῶν αἰσθητῶν) ἄλλω μὲν τὰ διαφέρει, τῷ δὲ ὅλλ' ἄττα ὁμοειδῆ εἶναι οὐθέν διαφέρει. Ita quum sua natura in medio posita sint mathematica inter sensibilia et ideas (μεταξύ^b 16), saepe ea Platonico sensu significat hoc ipso vocabulo τὰ μεταξύ, cf. 9. 991^b 29, 992^b 16, B 2. 997^b 2, 13, 998^a 7, 6. 1002^b 13, 21, K 1. l. l., M 2. 1077^a 11" (Bonitz). It may be desirable to quote one of the numerous criticisms which Aristotle makes on Plato's view of μαθηματικά, because it appears to allude directly to the educational curriculum of the Republic: ἔτι δὲ εἴ τις παρὰ τὰ εἶδη καὶ τὰ αἰσθητὰ τὰ μεταξύ θήσεται, πολλὰς ἀπορίας ἔξει. δῆλον γὰρ ὡς ὁμοίως γραμμαὶ τε παρ' αὐτὰς καὶ τὰς αἰσθητὰς εἰσονται καὶ ἑκάστων τῶν ἄλλων γενῶν· ὥστ' ἐπεὶ περ ἡ ἀστρονομία μία τούτων ἐστίν, ἐστὶ τις καὶ οὐρανὸς παρὰ τὸν αἰσθητὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ ἡλιὸς τε καὶ σελήνη καὶ τᾶλλα ὁμοίως τὰ κατὰ τὸν οὐρανόν (cf. 529 c. D nn.)—ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ περὶ ὧν ἡ ὀπτική πραγματεύεται καὶ ἡ ἐν τοῖς μαθήμασιν ἀρμονική (531 C n.) κτλ. (Met. B 2. 997^b 12 ff., cf. M 2. 1076^b 11—1077^b 14). These words are, in my judgment, an altogether just and relevant criticism on Plato from the standpoint of a man of science, and one with which Plato himself, when he wrote the Republic, would not have quarrelled.

In spite of this body of evidence, Shorey speaks of "utilissima illa hariolatio de numeris mathematicis inter numeros sensiles et numeros ideales positus" (de Pl. id. doct. p. 33), refuses to attribute the doctrine to Plato, and is surprised that Zeller should have been led astray. The entire theory, according to the American critic, arose from a mistaken interpretation of 523 D—526 B, where αὐτοὶ οἱ ἀριθμοὶ (525 D), he declares, are "nihil aliud quam ideae numerorum, sicut αὐτὸ τὸ μέγα est ipsius magnitudinis idea" (l.c.). I have stated my view of αὐτῶν τῶν ἀριθμῶν in the notes on 525 D. Here it need only be said that if αὐτῶν τῶν ἀριθμῶν, about which mathematicians converse, means Ideas of numbers, then αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν (525 D), i.e. the ἐν about which mathematicians converse (526 A), is the Idea of 'one.' But Plato speaks of a multiplicity of mathematical units: περὶ ποίων ἀριθμῶν διαλέγεσθε, ἐν οἷς τὸ ἐν οἷον ἡμεῖς ἀξιοῦτέ ἐστιν, ἕκαστον πᾶν παντὶ καὶ οὐδὲ σμικρὸν διαφέρον (526 A). Are we then to suppose that there are many Ideas of 'one'? It may be added that in his later treatise on 'The Idea of Good in Plato's Republic,' Shorey still adheres to his old view.

The explanation which I am advocating has the support of Zeller¹ II 1. pp. 679 ff., Trendelenburg Plat. de id. et num. doct. pp. 70—80, Bonitz l.c. and a majority of scholars. To me it appears fully demonstrated by the evidence of the Republic alone; and Aristotle's testimony is a welcome confirmation from a source which is only second in value to Plato's own writings.

The ontological theories of the Philebus and Timæus are, I believe, in harmony with the position here assigned to μαθηματικά. In the Republic, τὰ μαθηματικά are the link between αἰσθητά and εἶδη, regarded as objects respectively of sensible apprehension and knowledge; in the Philebus and especially the Timæus, they are the cosmological μεταξύ τι. The αἰτία τῆς μίξεως of the Philebus (23 c ff.) is the Idea, and πέρασ in that dialogue is τὰ μαθηματικά. Professor G. Schneider has pointed out that Plato "machte für alle Erscheinungen der Welt und des Geistes das Mathematische zum Gesetze für die Verwirklichung des Guten," and the Timæus is an elaborate commentary on his remark. We see the soul and body of the Universe and Man built up by means of the μεταξύ or μαθηματικά of the Republic, ἀριθμητική supplying numbers (32 B et al.), Plane Geometry ἐπίπεδα (53 D ff.), Stereometry βάθη (54 B ff.), Astronomy φοραὶ βάθους (36 c ff., 39 A ff., 40 c ff.), and Harmonics the ἑυμῶνοι ἀριθμοί (35 B ff.), according to which the Souls of the world and man are framed. The εἰσιόντα καὶ ἐξιόντα, τῶν ὄντων αἰεὶ μινύματα, τυπωθέντα ἀπ' αὐτῶν τρόπον τινὰ δίσφραστον καὶ θαυμαστόν (50 C), which enter into the ἐκμαγεῖον and leave it according as mortal things arise and perish, are nothing but mathematical forms—the contents of CE. It is impossible to pursue the subject farther here; but reference may be made to F. Schmitt's Dissertation on die Verschiedenheit d. Ideenlehre in Pl. Rep. u. Phil. (Giessen 1891) and G. Schneider's admirable work on Das Princip d. Maasses in d. Pl. Philos. (Gera 1878), where this interpretation of the Philebus and Timæus is expounded and justified in detail.

There remains the further question whether these μαθηματικά have, like the Ideas themselves, a real and substantial existence, apart from, as well as in, sensible particulars. Plato speaks of the object of geometrical study as αἰεὶ ὄν, οὐ ποτέ τι γιγνόμενον καὶ ἀπολλύμενον (527 B n.: cf. 529 C, D nn.), and in the Timæus (l.c.) they are εἰσιόντα καὶ ἐξιόντα. In the passages already referred to, Aristotle states or implies that Plato regarded them as χωριστά, not merely in thought, but actually, although in Met. B 2. 998^a 7 ff. he informs us that another interpretation of τὰ μεταξύ was current, according to which they do exist, οὐ μὴν χωρὶς γε τῶν αἰσθητῶν, ἀλλ' ἐν τούτοις. The evidence of the Republic and Timæus is in my opinion altogether in favour of the view which Aristotle attributes to Plato.

The Platonic theory on this subject will be most easily apprehended if we contrast it with that of a very different school of Philosophy. According to John Stuart Mill "there exist no real things exactly conformable to the definitions" (of geometrical science). "There exist no points without magnitude; no lines without breadth, nor perfectly straight; no circles with all their radii exactly equal, nor squares with all their angles perfectly right." The "really existent" lines, angles, and figures are those which we apprehend through the senses, and "the definitions, as they are called, must be regarded as some of our first and most obvious generalisations concerning those natural objects" (Logic, Book II ch. 5 § 1). To Plato, on the other hand, the "really existent" straight lines are just those of which the definition speaks: whereas visible lines and magnitudes do not exist, but only 'become.' It is the true μαθηματικά described in his definitions of mathematical science which the γεωμετρικός investigates, and if they do not correspond with the forms which we see, so much the worse for Nature! The fault lies not with them nor with the δημιουργός, but with the conditions of finite existence: μεμιγμένη γὰρ ἡ τοῦδε τοῦ κόσμου γένεσις ἐξ ἀνάγκης τε καὶ νοῦ συστάσεως ἐγεννήθη (Tim. 48 A).

If the interpretation which I have given is correct, we can at once see why Plato makes the study of μαθηματικά his προπαιδεία. τὰ μαθηματικά are, objectively and de facto, according to Plato, the 'golden chain' between Ideas and particulars, and he who would ascend to Ideas must climb by the ladder which the Architect of the Universe—θεὸς αἰὲν γεωμετρῶν—has himself provided. Cf. Schneider l.c. p. 54.

If the question is asked 'What is the element of truth embodied in Plato's theory of τὰ μαθηματικά as μεταξύ?', the answer is not far to seek. "All objects in the world," says Whewell, "which can be made the subjects of our contemplation are subordinate to the conditions of Space, Time, and Number; and on this account, the doctrines of pure mathematics have most numerous and extensive applications in every department of our investigation of nature" (Philosophy of the Inductive Sciences, p. 153). It is an admitted fact that "all causes operate according to mathematical laws" (Mill, Logic, Book III, ch. 24 § 9). The position which Plato assigns to τὰ μαθηματικά as intermediates between Ideas and sensible things is at once an affirmation of this fact and an explanation, from the Platonic point of view, of the reason which underlies it. The supreme Cause of the Universe, according to Plato, is the Idea of Good, of which, in the last analysis, the other Ideas are special determinations, and τὰ μαθηματικά are the instruments by means of which that Idea works in Nature. This and nothing else is the meaning of Plato's profound and famous text θεὸς αἰὲν γεωμετρεῖ, on which the bulk of the Timaeus is only an elaborate commentary. Why is it, to take an obvious illustration, that the laws of physical science are habitually expressed in terms of mathematics? Plato's reply would be: simply because God made use of μαθηματικά in constructing the world, and we must interpret the Universe as God made it. The Laws of Kepler have been described as "three Laws of Divine Working in Nature, discovered by Kepler," and the description is in full harmony with Plato's conception. For the rest it should be noted that such a view of μαθηματικά appeals in its broader outlines with peculiar force to the religious and poetical imagination, as is often the case with the speculative flights of Plato. We may compare not only the lines of Milton (Paradise Lost, VII 221 ff.)

“Him all his train
Followed in bright procession, to behold Creation, and the wonders of his might.
Then stayed the fervid wheels, and in his hand
He took the golden compasses, prepared In God’s eternal store, to circumscribe
This Universe, and all created things.
One foot he centred, and the other turned Round through the vast profundity obscure,
And said, ‘Thus far extend, thus far thy bounds;
This be thy just circumference, O world!’”;

but also the famous passage in Isaiah xl 12 “Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?”

For special discussions on ‘The propaedeutic studies of the Republic’ and ‘On Plato’s Dialectic’ see Appendices II and III.

The view which I take of the simile of the Cave and its connexion with that of the Line is fully explained in the notes on Book VII (514 A, B, 515 A, 515 C, 516 A—C, 517 A, 517 D, 519 B, C, 520 C, 532 A—C). It is only necessary to add here that Jowett and Campbell’s interpretation (Vol. II pp. 14—18, III pp. 315—317 and elsewhere) appears to me somewhat seriously wrong in regard to the ἀγάλματα or εἰδῶλα of the allegory, which, according to Campbell, “constitute a lower stage of the ideal which in Plato’s language is alone the real, not the immediately visible, but the truth of phenomena, the ἐν ἐπὶ πολλῶν ἐκάστων τῶν αἰσθητῶν, the infima species, the first intention of the ἐν λογισμῷ ξυναιρούμενον” (II p. 17). Jowett, if I understand him rightly, goes even farther, and apparently regards some of the propaedeutic studies as symbolized by the εἰδῶλα (III pp. 316, 317). It seems to me quite clear from the general proportions of the simile (514 A n.) that the εἰδῶλα in the cave represent nothing beyond the higher ὁρώμενα and the higher δοξαστά (517 A, 532 B, C n.), which are emphatically πολλὰ and not ἐν ἐπὶ πολλῶν, still less “the world as conceived of by the mathematician” (Jowett), which might possibly be figured as a φάντασμα θεῖον (532 C n.), but certainly not as a σκευαστὸν εἰδῶλον: τοῦ γὰρ αἰεὶ ὄντος ἢ γεωμετρικῇ γνῶσίς ἐστιν (527 B).

II.

ON THE PROPAEDEUTIC STUDIES OF THE REPUBLIC.

Plato’s higher scheme of education has formed the subject of a large number of dissertations and articles, besides the attention which it has received at the hands of commentators and historians of philosophy. The best and ablest discussion of the method and general principles of the system is still, I think, Nettleship’s article in Hellenica (pp. 135—180), to which the second volume of his Lectures and Remains (pp. 238—294) is a welcome supplement. Tannery's articles in the Revue Philosophique (x pp. 517 ff. and xi pp. 283 ff.) are concerned chiefly with the scientific aspect of Plato's curriculum. The mathematical difficulties have been to a large extent cleared up by historians of mathematics, and other authors of special monographs mentioned in the notes. Theo's treatise περὶ τῶν κατὰ τὸ μαθηματικὸν χρησίμων εἰς τὴν Πλάτωνος ἀνάγνωσιν, which Dupuis has edited and translated (Paris 1892), will be found extremely useful, all the more so that it is largely a compilation from earlier sources.

In this appendix I propose to touch on some questions which could not be adequately treated in the notes.

The novelty of Plato's curriculum lies in the interpretation which he puts upon the subjects prescribed, and in his conception of scientific method, rather than in his selection of studies to be pursued. It will be observed that he confesses his debt to the Pythagoreans (530 E u.); and, as Tannery points out (l.c. x pp. 521 ff.: cf. Diels Dox. Gr. 555. 17), there is no reason to doubt that the Pythagoreans made use of a quadrivium embracing (1) ἀριθμητική, (2) μουσική, (3) γεωμετρία, (4) σφαιρική (see Theol. Ar. 4. 19 Ast and Hippolytus in Diels l.c., where the order is (1) <ἀριθμητική>, (2) μουσική, (3) γεωμετρία, (4) ἀστρονομία). See also [Archytas] quoted on 530 D. The allusions in Isocrates (Panath. 26, Antid. 261 ff., 266) to an educational curriculum of this kind may of course be aimed at Plato, but it is, I think, more probable, in view of some passages in the Platonic dialogues, that ἡ ἐφ' ἡμῶν κατασταθεῖσα παιδεία (Panath. l.c.) has a wider reference. In Theæt. 145 A Theodorus is said to be γεωμετρικός—καὶ ἀστρονομικός καὶ λογιστικός τε καὶ μουσικός καὶ ὅσα παιδείας (liberal education) ἔχεται, and Theaetetus professes to have learnt from him γεωμετρίας ἅπτα—καὶ τῶν περὶ ἀστρονομίαν τε καὶ ἀρμονίας καὶ λογισμούς (ib. 145 C, D). The studies in question were called 'Arts,' and Hippias was one of those who professed to teach them under this name, as appears from Prot. 318 E (see 511 C u. and Hipp. Mai. 285 B ff.). From these passages we are justified in drawing the inference that the Pythagorean quadrivium was in some form or another becoming recognized in the early part of the fourth century B.C., and even earlier (cf. Grasberger Erziehung u. Unterr. II p. 340). The addition of Stereometry as a separate and independent branch of study is doubtless due to Plato, as may indeed be inferred from his own remarks (528 B ff.); but stereometrical problems had been handled before his time not only by the Pythagoreans, but also by Anaxagoras and Democritus (528 B, C uu.), and were probably reckoned as part of γεωμετρία.

The studies are arranged by Plato in the sequence, Theory of Numbers, Geometry, Stereometry, Astronomy and Harmonics. It is not, of course, to be supposed that each of the earlier subjects is dismissed as soon as its successor comes upon the stage; Plato indeed implies the opposite in 531 C ff. and elsewhere. The order which he prescribes is the order in which the subjects are to be begun. I have touched on the principle underlying the sequence of studies in the notes on 526 C and 528 A. We proceed from number, which is presumably the first 'increase,' to plane geometry and stereometry, which are concerned respectively with the second and third 'increases,' and thence to φορὰ βάθος, taking Astronomy, the intellectual counterpart of visible φορὰ, before Harmonics, which deals with the intellectual counterpart of audible φορὰ, viz. 'consonant' and 'dissonant' numbers. The general principle plainly is that we should progress from the less to the more complex (Nettleship Lect. and Rem. 11 p. 269), each successive study adding a fresh element to those which have preceded it and presupposing them all. Plato would not, I think, allow that his intention was 'to arrange the sciences according to their object-matter in a direction from abstract to concrete' (Bosanquet Companion p. 288), for the Platonic sciences of Astronomy and Harmonics are, to say the least, as 'abstract' as the sciences of Number. But inasmuch as a solid concrete thing is after all an embodiment, though only an imperfect embodiment, of mathematical βάθος, Plato's curriculum, so far, and only so far, as it does in reality teach us to understand the visible concrete universe, may, if we are so minded, be held to proceed, in Aristotelian language, from the πρότερα φύσει to the πρότερα πρὸς ἡμᾶς.

Except in the position ascribed to 'Music' or 'Harmonics,' the order of studies in the Republic agrees with that of the Pythagorean quadrivium. The phraseology of 526 C and 528 A makes it probable that the principle of the Pythagorean arrangement was the same. 'Second increase' can only mean 'second increase' of the point or unit, the 'first increase' being the line or number. Now the Pythagoreans, as is well known, built up the line out of points, the plane out of lines, and the solid out of planes: see RP.⁷ § 64. (This is equally true whether we suppose that they consciously or unconsciously regarded the cosmogonical unit or point as having μέγεθος, though for my own part I agree with Burnet, Early Greek Philosophy pp. 312—315, that they consciously so regarded it, at all events in the earlier and more original form of their theory: see Arist. Met. M 6. 1080^b 20, 32 and N 1091^a 15 with Phys. Z 1. 231^a 24, 10. 241^a 3, and other passages cited in Burnet, l.c. p. 315 n.) It may therefore be inferred that the expressions 'second' and 'third increase' are in their origin Pythagorean, and, if so, we cannot doubt that Plato's principle of arrangement agrees on the whole with that of his predecessors.

The position of Harmonics in the Platonic scheme is however a remarkable divergence, especially as the study, according to 531 C, is concerned with numbers. In discussing this point Theo, who himself expounds the σύμφωνοι ἀριθμοί in connexion with ἀριθμητική, distinguishes between three kinds of ἁρμονία, viz. ἡ ἐν ὀργάνοις αἰσθητή, ἡ ἐν ἀριθμοῖς νοητή, and ἡ ἐν κόσμῳ ἁρμονία (pp. 16, 47 ed. Hiller). Plato's ἁρμονική deals of course with the second of these ἁρμονίαι. The first would have seemed to him educationally useless except by way of illustration, like mathematical diagrams (cf. 527 A, 529 D). ἡ ἐν κόσμῳ ἁρμονία, which is described in x 616 D ff., Tim. 35 B ff. and by Theo 139—147, could not serve this purpose, because it is inaudible. If we take Plato at his word, we are bound to suppose that the Music of the Spheres, though more beautiful and perfect than any audible 'harmonies,' is nevertheless inferior to that which the student of harmonics apprehends in his mind (cf. 529 C, D with 531 C), because it is produced by the movements of visible and corporeal stars; but it is permissible to suppose that the sublime Pythagorean conception of the Universe as 'God's organ' (Censor. de die nat. 13) may have induced him to crown his προπαιδεία with the study of those numerical 'consonances' whose grandest expression in time and space is the harmony of heaven. See also on x 617 B.

The most characteristic and essential feature of the Platonic curriculum is, as I have already remarked, its method: see on 523 B, C, 528 E, 529 C, D, 530 C. Plato himself obviously claims it as new (523 A, 530 C, 530 E ff.), and there can be little doubt that the claim is just. The modern scientific reader cannot fail to be surprised and perhaps shocked by Plato's unconcealed distrust of observation and the use of the senses. In the Theory of Numbers and pure mathematics generally, this is natural and right; but what hope, he will ask, is there for Astronomy if we 'dispense with the starry heavens' (530 B)? And how can Harmonics be advanced if we prohibit all inquiry into οἱ ἐν ταύταις ταῖς συμφωνίαις ταῖς ἀκουόμεναις ἀριθμοί (531 C)? It has, indeed, been maintained that 'the discovery of Neptune is a fulfilment of Plato's anticipations' (Bosanquet Companion p. 293), and that 'the mathematical treatment of the analysis of wave-forms (see Helmholtz, Popular Lectures, E.T. 1 75) seems to be an example of research which would have been after Plato's own heart' (ib. p. 294). There is something to be said in favour of such a view, and Bosanquet and Nettleship plead their case valiantly and well. But was it possible to discover the perturbations of Uranus without observation? And even supposing they had been observed, would Plato, at the time when he wrote 530 A ff., have suspected that they were due to the influence of an unknown planet, and betaken himself to his desk? If Professor Adams' calculations had failed, Plato might have called him ἄτοπος for thinking γίγνεσθαι τε ταῦτα αἰὲς ὡσαύτως καὶ οὐδ' αὐτῇ οὐδὲν παραλλάττειν and seeking παντὶ τρόπῳ τὴν ἀλήθειαν αὐτῶν λαβεῖν, although he would have emphatically approved of the algebra. The fact is that Plato and Professor Adams began at different ends—Plato with problems, Adams with observation. That which is only an orrery to the former (529 D f.) is to the latter the reality which calls for explanation. It is true, of course, that Plato makes the primary impulse to reflection come from contradictory sense-perceptions (523 A ff.), but as soon as the intellect is fairly roused, the senses are dispensed with as much as possible, because they thwart and debilitate the operations of the mind, rendering its conclusions less scientific and exact (525 D, 529 C, 531 A, 532 A). Nor does this conclusion rest on a few isolated passages, which may well be tinged with exaggeration, owing to Plato's contempt for the empiric sciolism of certain Sophists. The whole of the seventh book breathes a spirit of uncompromising hostility to the senses, and the same attitude is characteristic of many other dialogues, and, in particular, of the Phaedo (65 A—67 B).

The fact is that the Astronomy and Harmonics of the Republic are fundamentally different from the Astronomy and Harmonics of modern, as well as of ancient science. The objects which they investigate are not sensible phenomena, but intelligible realities occupying an intermediate position between sensibles and Ideas, and resembling Ideas much more than they resemble sensibles. Plato's whole conception of these sciences is idealistic; nor need we wonder if some light from the land of Ideas irradiates the path of the pilgrim as he nears the end of his propaedeutic journey. Platonic Science, like Platonic Metaphysics, can of course be arrayed in modern attire; but it may be doubted whether Plato does not lose more than Science, or even the cause of liberal education gains, by having his philosophy called down from heaven to earth. See also Appendix III. The famous words of Goethe; which I have already quoted on 486 A, express the true spirit of Plato's teaching in Books VI and VII, and are a loftier and juster tribute to his genius than any panegyric on his contributions to the cause of science: "Er bewegt sich nach der Höhe, mit Sehnsucht seines Ursprungs wieder theilhaft zu werden. Alles, was er aussert, bezieht sich auf ein ewig Ganzes, Gutes, Wahres, Schönes, dessen Forderung er in jedem Busen aufzuregen strebt. Was er sich im Einzelnen von irdischem Wissen zueignet, schmilzt, ja man kann sagen, verdampft in seiner Methode, in seinem Vortrag" (Farbenlehre Vol. III p. 141 Weimar 1893).

Plato's error lies in an undue extension of the method of pure mathematics to Astronomy and Harmonics: see on 529 D ff. His theory of these sciences is geometrical, and the heavens are actually compared to a mathematical diagram or orrery. It is not the visible movements of the visible heavens, but the intelligible movements of certain mathematical heavens which the pupil is to investigate. Even apart from his unquenchable idealism, we shall not find it difficult to account for Plato's attitude, if we remember the extraordinary value which he attached to Geometry (see on 526 C), and if we also accept his assurances that the astronomy and acoustics of his day were grossly empirical. It should likewise be borne in mind that his primary aim throughout the whole of this προπαιδεία is to discipline the intellectual powers and prepare the student to enter on the higher dialectic, in which all employment of the senses is rigidly proscribed. The goal is never for a moment lost sight of, and to a large extent affects the method by which the preliminary studies are to be themselves pursued. If his aim had been to make his pupils merely specialists in mathematics or astronomy, he might have taught them these subjects on other lines, but the man who is a mathematical specialist and nothing more is unfitted to be a Guardian, for we cannot allow 'our children' ἀλόγους ὄντας ὥσπερ γραμμὰς ἄρχοντας ἐν τῇ πόλει κυρίου τῶν μεγίστων εἶναι (VII 534 D). Plato endeavours to treat the study of mathematics and the mathematical sciences not as an end in itself, but as a means whereby to "revolutionize the whole state of mind"¹ of his pupils; and his vindication of the 'Arts' as the indispensable basis of a liberal training has been justified by history. Even the very name survives in the degrees which our Universities confer (see my article in Cl. Rev. xv p. 220). After Stereometry resumed its place as a department of Geometry, the four Sciences, Arithmetic, Music, Geometry and Astronomy, gradually established themselves as the Quadrivium of the Middle Ages, and room was also found for a pale and ghostly shadow of Dialectic in the Trivium (see Grasberger Erzieh. u. Unterricht pp. 235—237). Finally it is clear from some notable passages in his later writings (see on 530 v) that Plato's feeling about the visible heavens underwent a change as he grew older. In the Laws the very name of 'planets' or 'wanderers' sounds blasphemous in his ear (821 c). Such a change of sentiment is characteristic of his later dialogues in general, and in the Laws, perhaps, there is an added touch of the old man's feeling 'ἐν εὐφημίᾳ χρὴ τελευτᾶν.' But Plato may also have felt that his magnificent dream of a starry firmament more beautiful and perfect than the visible sky had served its purpose in the stimulus which it had given to a more theoretical and educative interpretation of physical science within the Academy. See Cantor Gesch. d. Math. pp. 202—216.

¹ The phrase is applied by Herbert Spencer (Education, p. 86) to the effects of mathematics as an educative discipline, provided the teacher knows how to teach.

But, when all is said and done, the abiding value of Plato's theory of Education is not affected by his misconception, if such it be, of the sciences of Astronomy and Harmonics. It may be doubted whether any writer has ever held so inspiring and profound a view of the aim and scope of education. Regarding man's reasoning faculty as the element of God within him, Plato makes it the supreme and only duty of education to foster and develop this element, not by feeding it with dull and lifeless dogma, but by emancipating it from the noxious influences which impede its growth. Nothing is admitted into his scheme except what tends to keep alive humanity's most precious heritage, the love of truth and knowledge. By nurturing and cherishing this instinct, Education, according to Plato, turns the moral as well as the intellectual nature of man from darkness to light, until he becomes 'like God as far as it is possible for man to be.' Nor is the horizon of the educator limited to this life. The soul is but a sojourner on earth, and its union with a particular body only a single episode in a life which reaches through 'both eternities.' Plato believes that the teacher can influence the pupil for hereafter as well as for life here, and that the soul which is once smitten with the love of truth may still advance from knowledge to more knowledge throughout unnumbered lives and phases of existence on earth and elsewhere. The sea of knowledge stretches wide, its waves unharvested as ever.

"Nay, come up hither.....

Unto the furthest flood-brim look with me;
Then reach on with thy thought till it be drown'd.
Miles and miles distant though the last line be,
And though thy soul sail leagues and leagues beyond, Still leagues beyond those leagues there is more sea."

III.

ON PLATO'S DIALECTIC.

Although Socrates professes to decline the invitation of Glauco to expound Dialectic (532 E n.: cf. 506 E), he gives us in Books vi and vii plentiful indications of its method and content, and an editor of the Republic is bound, I think, to face the task of reconstructing, in its general outlines, the science as it appeared to Plato when he wrote that dialogue. The literature of the subject is immense, as may be seen from the notes in Zeller¹ II 1. pp. 614—632, pp. 643—718: cf. also Lutoslawski Plato's Logic pp. 21—27.

It will be convenient to separate, as far as possible, the discussion of the objects of dialectical study from that of its method. Its supreme object, the Idea of the Good, is treated of in VI 504 E—509 B: VI 510 B, 511 E, C, and VII 531 D—534 E, 537 D—540 E are concerned chiefly with the method, although the objects are occasionally mentioned. Other passages in the Republic which throw light upon Plato's theory will be mentioned in the course of the discussion.

It is hardly necessary to say that Dialectic is concerned with the Ideas. What Plato meant by the 'Ideas,' is a question which has been, and in my opinion always will be, much debated. I have explained my general view in the note on V 476 A; and it is only necessary to add here that the Republic, as I interpret it, nowhere indicates that the Ideas are only thoughts, whether of the divine or human mind¹, and lends no support whatever to any of the "mildere Auslegungen" by means of which certain modern philosophers try to reconcile their own doctrines with those of Plato (see on X 597 E). Each Idea, according to the Republic, is a single independent, separate, self-existing, perfect and eternal essence, forming the objective correlate of our general notion (596 A), which may or may not, and usually does not, reproduce it with accuracy and completeness. Any milder interpretation cannot be reconciled either with Plato's language or with the evidence of Aristotle. It may be well to take as an illustration the view of Lotze. "The truth which Plato intended to teach is no other than that which we have just been expounding, that is to say, the validity of truths as such, apart from the question whether they can be established in relation to any object in the external world, as its mode of being, or not... But the Greek language then, as afterwards, was wanting in an expression for this Validity (Gelten) as a form of Reality not including Being or Existence; and this very expression Being came, often indeed quite harmlessly, but in this instance"—viz. in the interpretation of Plato's Theory of Ideas—"with momentous consequences, to fill the place."... "The reality of Being, indeed, they"—the Platonic Ideas—"have or have not, according as transient things of sense are clothed with them or not; but that reality which consists in Validity, which is a reality all their own, remains untouched by all this change."... "It seems incredible that the most acute of Plato's disciples, informed by personal intercourse with their master, should have misunderstood him in a point of such serious moment as this" (Logic E. T. pp. 441, 444). We may fairly reply that it does not seem, but is, incredible that Aristotle should have been guilty of so gross a blunder. It is far less incredible that Lotze is himself mistaken; nor indeed can I believe that any scholar who is capable of understanding Greek could read Books v—vii of the Republic and still agree with Lotze. "The truth which Plato intended to teach is no other than that which we have just been expounding." In this we have, I think, the key to a whole school of interpreters of Plato. "Hic liber est, in quo quaerit sua dogmata quisque: Invenit et pariter dogmata quisque sua." It is perhaps the highest tribute which can be offered to the strength and vitality of Plato's influence that successive generations of idealists rejoice to discover themselves anew in him: but only by employing the methods of Procrustes can we force Plato into the habiliments of modern philosophy. Even if it were granted that the transcendence of the Ideas is, philosophically speaking, absurd (see Lotze l.c. p. 440), we cannot too strongly insist that Plato's thought is steeped in poetical and religious fervour: "Verlangen zum Guten und Göttlichen pulsirt durch alle seine Adern" (Krohn Pl. St. p. 191): and I confess that Plato, without transcendent Ideas to fire the imagination and generate philosophical and even religious enthusiasm, appears to me perhaps an eagle still, but chained. Those critics who deny the transcendence of the Platonic ideas are compelled to discredit the authority of Aristotle, who assures us that the Ideas were χωρισταί: but in reality such writers resemble Aristotle far more than Plato, for their eagerness to acquit Plato of such a 'poetical absurdity' (Lutoslawski Plato's Logic, p. 447) springs from the same scientific instinct which made Aristotle attack the doctrine, as in Aristotle's day they also would assuredly have done. Zeller's discussions, with the results of which I in the main agree, appear to me both temperate and sound¹.

¹ Lutoslawski's formidable array of authorities who support the view that the Ideas are "a kind of notions of the human mind" (l.c. 26, 27) is not always accurate, and I suspect that some of the authors whom he cites would disown the interpretation which he puts upon their works. Among others, Shorey is claimed as holding this view, although he expressly repudiates it in the treatise referred to in App. I, and also in his De Plat. idearum doctr. atque mentis humanae notionibus comment., the very treatise which Lutoslawski refers to in support of his assertion: see p. 22, n. 2: "Opinio—ideas Platonicas meras mentis humanae notiones fuisse iamdudum explosa est."

It is clear that in the Republic Plato believes in the existence of an Idea corresponding to every class or group of particulars, artificial as well as natural. See on v 476 A and x 596 A ff. If we are mainly concerned in that dialogue with Ideas like Justice and its sister Virtues, the sole and sufficient reason is that the Republic is an ideal city, and the institutions of an ideal city must be regulated chiefly by ethical and political principles: see on vi 484 C and 501 A ff. The totality of Ideas forms an hierarchy reaching in just and well-ordered sequence to the Idea of the Good, of which each individual Idea must be held to be one particular form, aspect, or determination. The hints which the Republic furnishes as to the place of the several Ideas in this hierarchy are enumerated in the notes on vi 510 B, 511 B. On the supremacy of the Good, there is little to add beyond what the notes contain: see on vi 506 E ff. The Idea of the Good transcends Knowledge and is its source and fountain, as well as the ultimate cause of whatsoever shadow of Truth still clings to the lower grades of intellectual apprehension enumerated in the simile of the Line. Itself above and beyond Being, the Good is the author of the other Ideas, and through them of the realities which the mathematician studies: it is also the cause of that image or semblance of reality which remains in the objects comprehended under the name of γένεσις. We may therefore call the Idea of Good the 'Maker and Father of all' (cf. Tim. 28 c), and identify it, in this aspect, as in others, with the supreme God (505 A n.). Its relation to the Universe of Mind and the objects which are apprehended by mind may be expressed by the following diagram, in which the lines A'B' and AB are divided according to the proportions of the simile of the Line:

¹ In edition 4, Vol. II 1. pp. 658-679. See also Krohn Pl. St. pp. 188-192, and Kramm De Ideis Platonis a Lotzei indicio defensis Halae 1879. The last-named writer appears to me to have completely refuted Lotze's interpretation of Plato's theory of Ideas.

ἀνυπόθετον.....THE GOOD.....ὑπερούσιον

A further and perhaps still more significant presentation of the Good in the Republic is as the true and ultimate object of all creation—the οὐ ἕνεκα of the whole universe and every part thereof, and consequently at once the regulating law of everything which exists, so far as it exists, both organic and inorganic, and the πρῶτον φίλον for which the whole of Nature, with greater or less degree of consciousness, for ever yearns and strives. See on VI 505 D f. It is, I think, scarcely more than half the truth to say that the Idea of Good, “means, when stripped of its poetic vesture, a rational consistent conception of the greatest possible attainable human happiness, of the ultimate laws of God, nature or man that sanction conduct, and of the consistent application of those laws in legislation, government and education” (Shorey On the Idea of Good etc. p. 239). Man is not the whole of creation, though its highest product; and the Good is the final as well as the efficient cause, not only of human institutions, but also of the rest of nature—the ἀρχὴ ἀφ’ ἧς ἡρτῆται ὁ οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ φύσις (cf. Arist. Met. A 7. 1072^b 14). The reason why in the Republic Plato deals, not indeed by any means exclusively, but chiefly perhaps, with the bearings of the Good on human life and interests, is because that aspect of the Idea is more relevant than any other for the founder of a city. In the Timaeus Plato completes his account of the Good by tracing its operation in the works of Nature. It helps us to understand the many-sidedness of Plato’s conception if we remember that ‘good’ was a term of wide application among the Greeks in general, and that the Socratic school in particular regarded things as good in proportion as they fulfilled their proper office in the economy of Nature and Society. See I 353 A—E, V 457 B and the suggestive remarks of Nettleship Lectures and Remains II pp. 221—225.

There remains the further question: How does the Supreme Cause operate in the Universe? or in other words, What is the mode or kind of relationship existing between the Idea of Good and the particular of which it is the cause? The subject is full of difficulties, and it must be premised at the outset that the relation between the eternal and self-existent and the derivative and transient cannot be otherwise expressed than by a metaphor. Cf. A. E. Taylor in Mind N. S. v pp. 309 f. But we are none the less bound to examine the metaphors employed in describing the connexion if we would see how the relationship was figured by Plato in his own mind. If we follow the indications furnished in our dialogue, we may suppose that Plato, when he wrote the Republic, conceived of the matter somewhat in the following way. The Idea of Good is the principle from which the other Ideas derive their existence (VI 509 B ff. nn.), and may therefore be regarded as the ultimate cause of everything which they in their turn produce. The immediate cause accounting for the existence of a particular is the ‘presence’ (παρουσία) of an Idea. Thus for example the cause which enables us to say that Socrates is a just and pious man is the ‘presence’ in Socrates of the Ideas of Justice, Piety, and Man. The Ideas are therefore the immanent causes of particulars, each of which is the meeting ground of as many Ideas as there are predicables rightfully belonging to it. Thus much may be inferred from Republic v 476 A ff., not to mention other dialogues; but the difficulties attending such a theory of Causation, if it is strictly interpreted, are great and numerous, and in particular the immanence of the Ideas can hardly be reconciled with their self-existence and unity. Plato was well aware of this objection, at all events when he wrote the *Parmenides*¹ (see Parm. 130 E—132 E, and Waddell's edition of that dialogue pp. xliii f. and lxix), but in the Republic, whether because he had not yet realised the difficulty, or because he was occupied with other and more fruitful topics, he ignores it altogether. The more poetical and figurative conception of the Idea as a παράδειγμα, whereof the particular is an image or likeness or shadow, visible beauty, for example, being only, in the words of Shelley, the "shadow of Beauty unbeheld," is also found in the Republic, as in other dialogues, side by side with the doctrine of παρουσία, μέεξις, or κοινωνία. See on V 476 D and A. E. Taylor in Mind l.c. pp. 308—311. This view, like the other, is by no means free from philosophical difficulties, as has been pointed out by, among others, Waddell l.c. pp. li f., and Taylor l.c. pp. 307, 312, but the paradigmatic relation of the Idea to the particular is more in keeping with the Platonism of Books VI and VII than the theory of participation, and it is the form in which the relationship presented itself to Plato in the last of his great metaphysical dialogues, the Timaeus. Finally, it should be remarked that in applying his doctrine of causation to sensible or concrete numbers and numerical relations, concrete mathematical figures and the like, Plato introduced a fresh link between the Idea and the particular in the shape of τὰ μαθηματικά. See on this subject App. I to Book VII.

I pass now to the subject of dialectical method, as expounded in the Republic. Formally considered, it proceeds, like the Socratic cross-examination, by question and answer (534 D). Dialectic is above all things synoptical, striving everywhere to see the one in the many (531 D, 537 E, C). Hence the coordination of the Sciences is a good preparation for the higher study (ll. cc.: cf. also Zeller¹ II 1. p. 616 n. 1). This synoptical faculty is akin to the συναγωγή of the Phaedrus and other dialogues (see on 537 C), although the word συναγωγή does not occur with this meaning in the Republic. But whereas the dialectic of the Phaedrus includes the combination of particular sense-perceptions εἰς ἐν λογισμῷ ξυναιρούμενον (249 E, cf. 265 D), that of the Republic aims at combining different Ideas under yet higher and higher Ideas, and all of them finally under the Idea of the Good. Cf. [Archytas] in Mullach Frag. Phil. Gr. I p. 599 ὅστις ὄν ἀναλῦσαι οἷός τ' ἐντὶ πάντα τὰ γένηα ὑπὸ μίαν τε καὶ τὰν αὐτὰν ἀρχάν, καὶ πάλιν συνθεῖναι τε καὶ συναρθμήσασθαι, οὗτος δοκεῖ μοι καὶ σοφώτατος ἦμεν καὶ παναλαθέστατος, ἔτι δὲ καλὴν σκοπιὰν εἰρηκέναι, ἀφ' ἧς δυνατὸς ἐσσεῖται τὸν θεὸν κατοψεῖσθαι καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν τῇ συστοιχείᾳ καὶ τάξει τὰ ἐκείνῳ κατακεχωρισμένα, καὶ ταύτων τὰν ἀρματήλατον ὁδὸν ἐκπορισάμενος τῷ νόῳ κατ' εὐθείαν ὁρμαθῆμεν καὶ τελεοδρομάσαι τὰς ἀρχὰς τοῖς πέρασι συνάψας τε καὶ ἐπιγινούς, ὅτι ὁ θεὸς ἀρχὰ τε καὶ τέλος καὶ μέσον ἐντὶ πάντων τῶν κατὰ δίκαν τε καὶ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον περαινομένων. Neither in his ascent nor in his descent does the dialectician have anything to do with sense-perception, or 'particulars' in the ordinary acceptation of the term (511 B f.). It is clear therefore, as Oldenberg has pointed out¹, that the dialectic of Books VI and VII is a higher dialectic, to be compared in some respects with the intellectual discipline recommended in the Parmenides (135 C—136 E, especially 135 E οὐκ εἷας ἐν τοῖς ὀρωμένοις οὐδὲ περὶ ταῦτα τὴν πλάνην ἐπισκοπεῖν, ἀλλὰ περὶ ἐκείνα ἃ μάλιστα τις ἂν λόγῳ λάβοι καὶ εἶδῃ ἂν ἡγήσαιο εἶναι). In taking this view I do not mean to deny that dialectic in the Phaedrus embraces the higher as well as the lower branches of the study; but in the stricter dialectic of VI 510 B—511 B the lower variety is expressly excluded. Of διαίρεσις the Republic says comparatively little. There is a casual reference to the process in V 454 A, and it is of course represented in an idealized form by the descent of the dialectician from the Idea of the Good (511 B, C: cf. 534 B n.). But the full development of this side of Dialectic belongs to a later period of Plato's life, if, as is now widely believed, the Sophist and Politicus are later than the Republic. It should also be remarked that definition, which belongs to Dialectic (534 B) and depends on grasping the Essence of the object to be defined (533 B, 534 B: cf. 531 E), involves διαίρεσις in a certain sense as well as συναγωγή.

¹ I assume that the theory of Ideas which the Platonic Parmenides criticises is that which appears in the Republic and the Phaedo. The resemblance is so exact that I cannot see how we can escape from this assumption. Cf. Jackson in J. of Ph. XI p. 296. A different view is maintained by Taylor l.c. p. 317.

We have still to discuss the most serious difficulty in Plato's description of the dialectician's progress, viz. the ascent ἐξ ὑποθέσεως ἐπ' ἀρχὴν αὐνοπότεον (510 B, 511 B, 533 C). Socrates gives no precise explanation of this part of the subject, although it is not, in my opinion, this particular difficulty which makes him say that Glauco will be unable to follow him any farther (532 E).

The principal passages in other dialogues which appear to throw light on Plato's meaning are Men. 86 E ff. and Phaed. 100 A ff. In the Meno Socrates proposes ἐξ ὑποθέσεως σκοπεῖσθαι εἴτε διδασκόν ἐστιν (sc. ἡ ἀρετή) εἴτε ὁπωσοῦν, and proceeds as follows. We will, he says, assume (ὑποτίθεσθαι) that Virtue is Knowledge, and see what follows. On this assumption Meno at once admits that Virtue is teachable. Thereupon Socrates says we must examine his original ὑπόθεσις of Virtue, viz. that Virtue is Knowledge, and begins the examination by propounding a fresh ὑπόθεσις, viz. that Virtue is good. From this second ὑπόθεσις he arrives by a series of steps at the conclusion that Virtue is Knowledge and thus proves that Virtue can be taught. We may compare Aristotle's συλλογισμὸς ἐξ ὑποθέσεως, on which see Wallace Outlines of the Philosophy of Aristotle pp. 41 f., and Waitz on Arist. Analyt. Pr. A 23. 40^b 25 This method is parallel to that described in Book VI in so far as the original ὑπόθεσις is not left ἀκίνητος (533 C), but itself deduced from something higher. It is not parallel in so far as this 'higher something' is itself only a ὑπόθεσις and not an ἀρχὴ ἀνυπόθετος. Much the same is true of the well-known passage in the Phaedo. That which Socrates ὑποτίθεται is his conception or definition of αἰτία as the presence of the Idea in the particular thing making it what it is (100 B, C). From this he deduces the immortality of the Soul. So far, I agree, in the main, with Jackson (J. of Ph. x p. 149) and Archer-Hind that the δεύτερος πλοῦς of the Phaedo follows the same method as the διάνοια of Book VI, although, as already stated in Appendix I, διάνοια in the Republic is, I believe, occupied with τὰ μαθηματικά alone. But when in 101 D, E Plato writes ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἐκείνης αὐτῆς δέοι σε δίδομαι λόγον, ὥσταιώς ἂν διδοίης, ἄλλην αὖ ὑπόθεσιν ὑποθέμενος, ἥτις τῶν ἄνωθεν βελτίστη φαίνοιτο, ἕως ἐπὶ τι ἱκανὸν ἔλθοις, he has in mind a possible defence of the original ὑπόθεσις by deducing it, as in the Meno, from some ὑπόθεσις still higher, and the διάνοια of the Republic, quā διανοια, never defends its ὑποθέσεις at all (510 C, 533 C), not even by any other hypothesis. There is also in 107 B an express direction to examine the ὑποθέσεις themselves: τὰς ὑποθέσεις τὰς πρώτας, καὶ εἰ πισταὶ ὑμῖν εἰσὶν, ὅμως ἐπισκεπτέαι σαφέστερον· καὶ ἐὰν αὐτὰς ἱκανῶς διέλθῃτε, ὥς ἐγῶμαι, ἀκολουθήσετε τῷ λόγῳ, καθ' ὅσον δυνατόν μάλιστα· ἀνθρωπῶν ἐπακολουθήσαι· κὰν τοῦτο αὐτὸ σαφὲς γένηται, οὐδὲν ζητήσετε περαιτέρω. These two passages of the Phaedo therefore resemble the dialectic of the Republic inasmuch as they contemplate and prescribe an examination of the ὑποθέσεις with which we start. In the first, however, no hope is held out of ever rising above ὑποθέσεις, for ἱκανὸν τι is not the unhypothetical Idea, although it may very well happen in any given case to be a ὑπόθεσις, of Good. The exhortation in 107 B is different, and seems to hint at something like the dialectic of VI and VII, for the original ὑποθέσεις cannot be satisfactorily proved (κὰν τοῦτο αὐτὸ σαφὲς γένηται) except by connecting them with the Idea of Good, and this involves an exhaustive survey of the whole field of ροητά such as Plato sketches in the end of Book VI.

¹ De Plat. arte dialectica (1873) p. 48. Lutoslawski must himself have read this work very superficially before he could have described it as "very superficial" (Plato's Logic p. 21 n. 58). The judgment of Peipers, though he frequently disagrees with Oldenberg, is very different: "quae Herm. Oldenberg egregie disputat in commentatione de Platonis arte dialectica" (Ontol. Plat. p. 402 n.). So also is that of Zeller¹ II 1. pp. 619, 620 nm. et al. I am far from accepting the whole of Oldenberg's results, but his treatise is anything but superficial, and a large part of it is in my judgment true and admirable.

It appears, therefore, that the ὑποθέσεις of Dialectic are not, like those of Mathematics, immovable and fixed, and that we may be called upon to render an account of them, nay more, that it is our duty to submit them to examination ourselves. To this extent the Meno and Phaedo, taken together, are in agreement with the Republic on the nature of Dialectic. But by what means is the dialectician to scrutinize his ὑποθέσεις? In what way is he to ascend from ὑποθέσεις to the ἀνυπόθετος ἀρχή? The passages in the Republic which help us to answer these questions are VI 511 B τὰς ὑποθέσεις ποιοῦμενος οὐκ ἀρχάς, ἀλλὰ τῷ ὄντι ὑποθέσεις, οἷον ἐπιβάσεις τε καὶ ὁρμάς, VII 533 C ἡ διαλεκτικὴ μέθοδος μόνῃ ταύτῃ πορεύεται, τὰς ὑποθέσεις ἀναιροῦσα, ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὴν ἀρχήν, ἵνα βεβαιωσῇται, and 534 B, C ὅς ἂν μὴ ἔχῃ διορίσασθαι τῷ λόγῳ ἀπὸ τῶν ἄλλων πάντων ἀφελὼν τὴν τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἰδέαν, καὶ ὥσπερ ἐν μάχῃ διὰ πάντων ἐλέγχων διεξιὼν μὴ κατὰ δόξαν ἀλλὰ κατ' οὐσίαν προθυμούμενος ἐλέγχειν, ἐν πᾶσι τούτοις ἀπῴτι τῷ λόγῳ διαπορεύηται, οὔτε αὐτὸ τὸ ἀγαθὸν φήσεις εἶδέναι τὸν οὕτως ἔχοντα οὔτε ἄλλο ἀγαθὸν οὐδὲν κτλ. With the substance of these extracts the student should carefully compare the intellectual discipline recommended in the Parmenides (135 C—136 E) as an indispensable preliminary for the dialectical study of καλόν, δίκαιον, ἀγαθόν and the other Ideas, noting in particular 136 A—C and 136 E: Πῶς λέγεις; φαίται. Οἶον, ἔφη, εἰ βούλει περὶ ταύτης τῆς ὑποθέσεως ἢν Ζήνων ὑπέθετο, εἰ πολλά ἐστι, τί χρηὶ ξυμβαίνειν καὶ αὐτοῖς τοῖς πολλοῖς πρὸς αὐτὰ καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἐν καὶ τῷ ἐνὶ πρὸς τε αὐτὸ καὶ πρὸς τὰ πολλά· καὶ αὖ εἰ μὴ ἐστι πολλά, πάλιν σκοπεῖν τί ξυμβήσεται καὶ τῷ ἐνὶ καὶ τοῖς πολλοῖς καὶ πρὸς αὐτὰ καὶ πρὸς ἄλληλα· καὶ αὖθις αὖ ἔαν ὑποθῇ, εἰ ἔστιν ὁμοιότης ἢ εἰ μὴ ἐστι, τί ἐφ' ἑκατέρας τῆς ὑποθέσεως ξυμβήσεται καὶ αὐτοῖς τοῖς ὑποθεθεῖσι καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις καὶ πρὸς αὐτὰ καὶ πρὸς ἄλληλα. καὶ περὶ ἀνομοῖον ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος, καὶ περὶ κινήσεως καὶ στάσεως, καὶ περὶ γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς, καὶ περὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ εἶναι καὶ τοῦ μὴ εἶναι. καὶ ἐνὶ λόγῳ, περὶ οὗτου ἂν αἰεὶ ὑποθῇ ὡς ὄντος καὶ οὐκ ὄντος καὶ ὅτιον ἄλλο πάθος πάσχοντος, δεῖ σκοπεῖν τὰ ξυμβαίνοντα καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸ καὶ πρὸς ἐν ἑαστον τῶν ἄλλων, ὅτι ἂν προέλῃ, καὶ πρὸς πλείω καὶ πρὸς ἑμπαιτα ὡσαύτως· καὶ τὰλλα αὖ πρὸς αὐτὰ τε καὶ πρὸς ἄλλο ὃ τι ἂν προαιρῇ αἰεὶ, ἔαν τε ὡς ὃν ὑποθῇ ὃ ὑπετίθεσο, ἔαν τε ὡς μὴ ὄν, εἰ μέλλεις τελέως γυμνασάμενος κυρίως διώψεσθαι τὸ ἀληθές... ἀγνοοῦσι γὰρ οἱ πολλοὶ ὅτι ἀνευ ταύτης τῆς διὰ πάντων διεξόδου τε καὶ πλάνης ἀδύνατον ἐντυχόντα τῷ ἀληθεῖ νοῦν ἔχειν.

The key to the solution of the difficulty is furnished by the words ὑποθέσεις ἀναιρουῖσα 533 C, and διὰ πάντων ἐλέγχων διεξιὼν 534 C. In my notes on these two phrases I have tried to indicate the general character of the dialectician's ascent ἐξ ὑποθέσεως ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνυπόθετον. He begins by offering a ὑπόθεσις on the subject to be discussed, and then proceeds to test his ὑπόθεσις by the conclusions to which it leads. If these conclusions are untenable, the original ὑπόθεσις is cancelled or annulled (ἀναιρεῖται), and a new suggestion takes its place, only to suffer the same fate. The process is repeated again and again, until at last we reach an ἀρχή which will withstand every test (ὥσπερ ἐν μάχῃ διὰ πάντων ἐλέγχων διεξιὼν κτλ. 534 C). Thus each successive ὑπόθεσις serves as an additional step in the stair by which we ascend, and is useful to the dialectician just because he is willing to leave it and mount higher. Cf. Gomperz, Greek Thinkers, 1 pp. 303—306, where the scientific value and importance of this method is very clearly explained. In the completed Dialectic which Plato adumbrates in Books VI and VII, we are invited to suppose that the whole kingdom of knowables, in the spheres alike of Nature and of Man, has been surveyed and mapped out by this method, of which the intellectual γυμνασία of the Parmenides is a kind of example on a lower plane. The result is a number of true and irrefragable ἀρχαί, apprehended not only in their mutual coherence and interdependence, but also in their relationship to the supreme Idea, which is itself, when we have climbed to the summit, no longer a ὑπόθεσις, but an ἀρχή ἀνυπόθετος, because the exhaustive scrutiny of all νοητά has demonstrated that the Universe of thought and things is in reality nothing but the expression or embodiment of the Good. See on VI 510 B. If it be urged against Plato that we have no right to assert that the Universe and all its parts are only the expression of the Good unless and until we have found it to be so by such an exhaustive scrutiny as Plato describes, Plato might reply: 'True, we have not as yet complete scientific knowledge of this fact; but knowledge is not everything; we have ἀνάμνησις also.'

"Not in entire forgetfulness
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come From God, who is our home."

The progress of human knowledge from generation to generation will help to demonstrate the supremacy of the Good, of which, by virtue of the θεῖόν τι ἐν ἡμῖν, we are already well assured.

The later stages in the dialectician's journey belong to an ideal which human investigation can hardly hope to reach (vi 511 B n.), but, as I have hinted on 533 C, the general character of his progress may be illustrated from many Platonic dialogues. In the Laches, for example, we have several ὑποθέσεις of courage, each of which is treated as a stepping-stone—οἶον ἐπίβασίς τε καὶ ὁρμή—on the way to a better and truer conception of the virtue. The first definition given by Laches, that courage is καρτερία τις ψυχῆς, Socrates attacks with the elenchus and overthrows (192 C, D), but a new and better ὑπόθεσις rises on its ruins, viz. that courage is φρόνιμος καρτερία ψυχῆς (192 D). A further application of the Socratic weapon shews that this ὑπόθεσις must also be revised (192 E—193 D), and Nicias suggests a third, defining courage as τὴν τῶν δεινῶν καὶ θαρραλέων ἐπιστήμην καὶ ἐν πολέμῳ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν (195 A). In the sequel, this definition is widened into ἡ περὶ πάντων ἀγαθῶν τε καὶ κακῶν καὶ πάντως ἐχόντων ἐπιστήμη (199 C), whereby courage becomes, no longer a specific part of virtue, ἀλλὰ σύμπασα ἀρετή (199 E), and the unity of virtue is affirmed. The final definition is not refuted on its merits, although Socrates declares it to be inconsistent with the position already assigned to courage as one of the parts of virtue. It will be observed that each ὑπόθεσις owes something to its predecessor, that in the progress of the argument courage is brought into connexion with other ὑποθέσεις, such as τὸ δεινόν and τὸ θαρραλέον, and that the last ὑπόθεσις is wider and more comprehensive than any which has preceded. A cursory glance at the course of the argument in the Charmides and Euthyphro will provide many illustrations of the process which Plato calls τὸ ἀναρεῖν τὰς ὑποθέσεις, and a more careful analysis will reveal a gradual advance in both dialogues from the accidental and superficial to the essential and profound. See for the Euthyphro my edition of that dialogue pp. vii—xxii. These distinguishing characteristics of Plato's method are easiest to trace in his simpler and less elaborate dialogues, but nearly all his writings shew analogous features, and the Republic is itself a conspicuous example of the same method. It is not too much to say that the true unity of the Republic, as of many other dialogues of Plato, consists in a continuous ascent from stage to stage, each successive elevation not only revealing new and wider prospects, but also enabling us to modify, correct and enlarge our apprehension of that which we have seen before.

It lies beyond the scope of this Appendix to discuss the origin of Plato's dialectical method, and I must here content myself with saying that although it owes not a little to the Eleatics, still more to Socrates, and something perhaps to geometrical analysis, which Plato is said to have invented (see Hardie in Mind N.S. v p. 180), the full development of the method must be ascribed to Plato himself. Rightly understood and practised, the method is extraordinarily valuable and fruitful, not merely for purposes of education, but as a weapon of scientific discovery. Every teacher who is worthy of the name employs it to kindle and feed the love of knowledge in his pupils. It is the method which an editor of necessity adopts in endeavouring to explain and expound the text of an ancient writer. The conjectural emendations and interpretations by which his pathway is beset are all of them ὑποθέσεις of more or less value, and the very process of testing and rejecting these ὑποθέσεις frequently brings to light the true interpretation. An editor, in short, ἀναιρεῖ τὰς ὑποθέσεις, ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὴν ἀρχὴν πορευόμενος, ἵνα βεβαιώσῃται, and ought not to rest content until διὰ πάντων ἐλέγχων διεξιὼν—ἀπὸ τῷ λόγῳ διαπορεύεται (534 c). And that which takes place on a small scale in the exposition of an ancient text is reproduced on a larger scale in the history of investigation and discovery not only in the humanities, but also in natural science. Speaking of the part played by hypotheses in the progress of scientific discovery, Professor Rücker in his Presidential Address at the British Association, 1901, remarks: "The wraiths of phlogiston, caloric, luminiferous corpuscles, and a crowd of other phantoms haunt the investigator, and as the grim host vanishes into nothingness he cannot but wonder if his own conceptions of atoms and of the ether

'shall dissolve

And, like this unsubstantial pageant faded, Leave not a rack behind."

But though science, like Bunyan's hero, has sometimes to pass through the 'Valley of Humiliation,' the spectres which meet it there are not really dangerous if they are boldly faced. The fact that mistakes have been made, that theories have been propounded and for a time accepted, which later investigations have disproved, does not necessarily discredit the method adopted. For scientific theories, as in the world around us, there is a survival of the fittest, and Dr James Ward's unsympathetic account of the blunders of those whose work, after all, has shed glory on the 19th century, might, mutatis mutandis, stand for a description of the history of civilisation. "The story of the progress so far," he tells us, "is briefly this—divergence between theory and fact one part of the way, the wreckage of abandoned fictions for the rest, with an unattainable goal of phenomenal nihilism, and ultra-physical mechanism beyond" (James Ward, Naturalism and Agnosticism, Vol. 1 p. 154). "The path of progress," says Professor Karl Pearson, "is strewn with the wreck of nations. Traces are everywhere to be seen of the hecatombs of inferior races, and of victims who found not the narrow way to the greater perfection. Yet these dead peoples are, in very truth, the stepping-stones on which mankind has arisen to the higher intellectual and deeper emotional life of to-day" (Karl Pearson, National Life from the Standpoint of Science, p. 62). When hypotheses are mistaken for established and unquestionable truths, the love of knowledge gives place to the love of dogma, and progress is arrested. In Plato's way of thinking, the path of knowledge is and must be paved out of the ruins of generalisations, if we are to tread firmly on the road to

"That untravelled world whose margin fades For ever and for ever as we move."

IV.

VII 515 E. εἰ οὖν διαλέγεσθαι οἱοί τ' εἶναι πρὸς ἀλλήλους, οὐ ταῦτα ἡγεῖται τὰ παρίοντα αὐτοὺς νομίζειν ὀνομάζειν, ἄπερ ὁρῶεν; ταῖτά appears for ταῦτα in A and some other mss. Instead of παρίοντα, all the mss except Flor. T have παρόντα, while Iamblichus (Protrept. 15) and Proclus (in romp. 1 p. 293 Kroll) appear to have read ὄντα.

The following are the principal solutions which have been proposed.

(1) With ταῦτα—τὰ παρόντα. "Hoc rogat Socrates—an haec, quae viderent, tamquam res praesentes, non tamquam umbras appellare, de praesentibus, non de absentibus loqui sese opinaturi essent?" (Schneider). "Do you not suppose that they would believe that they were naming those things that they actually saw before them?" (J. and C.). This interpretation separates ταῦτα from τὰ παρόντα, and makes the whole force of τὰ παρόντα depend upon its antithesis ('non de absentibus'), which is not expressed, and difficult to supply. Other objections are urged by Vermehren Plat. Stud. p. 105. Prantl (after Schleiermacher) takes νομίζειν as "für üblich halten" (cf. Latw 637 E), translating "glaubst du nicht, dass sie es für üblich halten würden, eben die je anwesenden Dinge, welche sie sehen, mit Namen zu nennen?" (So also D. and V.) Prantl's view has been demolished by Schneider: "non hoc rogat Socrates, an nomina umbris imponenda existimaturi aut re vera imposituri essent, quippe quod citra errorem facere eis liceret." The progress of the argument, as well as the close parallelism with the next sentence, makes it clear that the prisoners are in error. The same criticism applies to the view of Ast, who reads ταῦτα—τὰ παρίοντα, and translates "Nonne censet eos res praeterlatas arbitrarios esse nominandas quas viderent?"

(2) With ταῖτά—τὰ παρίοντα (Hermann, Stallbaum). Stallbaum translates "nonne putas eas res, quae praeterveherentur, iisdem nominibus atque quae viderent nominare solituros esse?", explaining ταῖτά (predicative after ὀνομάζειν) ἄπερ ὁρῶεν as equivalent to ταῖτά τοῖτοισ ἄπερ ὁρῶεν. "Sententia igitur haec est: vinctos illos nonne putas nomina rerum, quas conspicerent (conspicere sibi viderentur) ad umbras illarum praetereuntes esse de more transluros?" But what objects at all except shadows can the prisoners see?

(3) Emendations. (a) Cobet (Mnem. xi p. 173 and *I. L.*² p. 531) proposes οὐ ταῦτα ἡγεῖται—τὰ παριόντα νομίζειν [ὀνομάζειν] ἅπερ ὀφείν. The word ὀνομάζειν is rejected also by Baiter, who further changes οὐ ταῦτα to οὐκ αὐτά, following Vermehren and Madvig: see below. Neither of these critics appears to have noticed that εἰ οὖν διαλέγεσθαι οἷοί τε εἶναι becomes altogether superfluous if ὀνομάζειν is omitted. For this reason Richards' insertion of καὶ between νομίζειν and ὀνομάζειν (Cl. Rev. viii p. 192) is preferable to the suggestion of Cobet. (b) Vermehren, in an elaborate and careful examination of the passage (Plat. Stud. pp. 103—106), argues that the sense required by the context is "dass die Höhlenbewohner die vorüberziehenden Schatten für die Gegenstände selbst nehmen und sie demgemäss benennen würden, gerade wie sie die vernommenen Töne vermöge des Widerhalls den Schattenbildern, nicht aber den sie erzeugenden Originalen zuschreiben würden." He therefore conjectures οὐκ αὐτά—τὰ παριόντα κτλ. "glaubst du nicht, dass sie in ihrer Lage die vorüberziehenden Gegenstände selbst zu benennen meinen würden, die sie—ihrer Meinung nach—sähen?" According to this view, τὰ παριόντα denotes the real παραφερόμενα: but how could the prisoners suppose themselves to be naming the real παραφερόμενα, of which, ex hypothesi, they know nothing whatever?

The interpretation given in the notes appears to me to give the sense required, without attributing to the prisoners any knowledge from which their situation excludes them. I have not seen it anywhere in print, but I am glad to say that Dr Jackson writes as follows: "So I have long taken this passage. I copy my old note. 'Read ταῦτα, retain ὀνομάζειν, and translate: Don't you think they would suppose the names which they used to belong to the passing objects which they saw before their eyes?'"

V.

VII 519 A, B. τοῦτο μέντοι ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ τῆς τοιαύτης φύσεως εἰ ἐκ παιδὸς εὐθὺς κοπτόμενον περιεκόπη τὰς τῆς γενέσεως ξιγγενεῖς ὥσπερ μολυβδαῖας, αἱ δὲ ἐδοδαῖς τε καὶ τοιούτων ἡδοναῖς τε καὶ λιχνείαις προσφυνεῖς γιγνόμεναι περικάτω στρέφουσι τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ὄψιν.

This passage has been strangely misunderstood by many editors and critics.

γενέσεως is taken as 'birth' by (among others) Schneider, Stallbaum, Jowett ('attached to them at their birth'—an impossible construction), although the correct translation (which has recently been reaffirmed by Seymour in Cl. Rev. x p. 325) was already given by Schleiermacher and afterwards by Krohn (Pl. St. p. 161). Others, such as Schneider and D. and V., make the weights adhere to the pleasures of eating etc. It is, however, obvious that they must adhere to that from which they are to be knocked off (περιεκόπη), and it is τὸ τῆς τοιαύτης φύσεως from which they have to be removed (κοπτόμενον περιεκόπη). Moreover x 611 E—612 A, quoted in the notes, conclusively disproves this view.

As regards the text, τὰ τῆς γενέσεως ξυγγενῇ is read by many editors on the authority of some inferior mss. To me the neuter appears a manifest 'correction,' and far less elegant and expressive than the feminine, which has the support (among other mss) of A, Π and q. See also on III 401 c. It is strictly true, according to Plato, that the leaden weights of appetite and self-indulgence are 'kindred with,' 'of the family of' γένεσις (see especially, in addition to the evidence adduced in the note, IX 585 b—586 b), so that the adjective ought to agree with μολυβδίδας.

Instead of the περὶ κάτω of the best mss, Hermann, who is followed by Burnet, reads κάτω, adopting a suggestion of Schneider's. Schneider himself, with Stallbaum and other editors, chose the reading of q (περὶ τὰ κάτω), which is unexceptionable in point of sense, and which I also once thought right. Longer reflection has however convinced me that Madvig is right in restoring περικάτω. The strongest evidence (other than that of the best mss) in its support is furnished by Photius (see note) and Plutarch. The latter certainly read περικάτω or περὶ κάτω (the reading of A): see de fac. quae in orb. lun. app. 943 D ἐνίας δὲ (sc. ψυχᾶς) καὶ τῶν ἐκεῖ περὶ κάτω τρεπομένας (v.l. περπομένας) οἷον εἰς βυθὸν αὐθις ὁρῶσι καταγινομένας, an obvious imitation of this passage of Plato. J. and C. object that περικάτω could only mean 'upside down.' Such a translation is of course ridiculous here, but it does in point of fact accurately represent the situation. The eye of the soul, according to Plato in this passage, naturally looks up; so that when forced to look down, it is itself, strictly speaking, turned 'upside down.' The fact is that περικάτω στρέφειν (τρέπειν) simply means 'turn round downwards,' and the translation 'upside down' is suitable only when it is applied to goblets (as in Strattis ap. Ath. XI 467 E) and similar objects which can themselves be said to have an 'up' and 'down,' or perhaps in cases like Lucian Adv. ind. 1 (where Cobet restores περικάτω). The word is discussed by Madvig Adv. Cr. I p. 27 and by Cobet Mn. N.S. XI p. 174 and V. L. p. 90. It is doubtless better (with Photius) to write περικάτω as one word, than (with A, Π, etc.) as two. The analogy of ὑποκάτω, ἐπάνω, ὑπεράνω etc. favours this accentuation: cf. Lobeck Phryn. p. 48. For other instances of prepositions combined with adverbs see Kühner-Gerth Gr. Gr. II I, pp. 538—540.

VI.

VII 521 c. τοῦτο δὴ, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐκ ὀστράκου ἂν εἴη περιστροφή, ἀλλὰ ψυχῆς περιαγωγή ἐκ νυκτερινῆς τιος ἡμέρας εἰς ἀληθινήν, τοῦ ὄντος οὖσαν ἐπάνοδον, ἣν δὴ φιλοσοφίαν ἀληθῆ φήσομεν εἶναι.

The proverb ὀστράκου περιστροφή was variously explained by the ancients as (1) ἐπὶ τῶν ταχέως τι ποιοῦντων: (2) ἐπὶ τῶν εὐμεταβόλων: (3) ἐπὶ τῶν ἐκ κρείττονων εἰς τὸ ἐναντίον μεταβαλλόντων: (4) ἐπὶ τῶν ἀθρόως καὶ ἀνελπίστως ὑφισταμένων: (5) ἐπὶ τῶν διὰ τάχους εἰς φυγὴν ὁρμῶντων or the like (Schol. l.c. and on ὀστράκου μεταπεσόντος in Phaedr. 241 b). See Leutsch und Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. I p. 285 f., II p. 84.

The last of these explanations touches on an essential feature of the game, which was itself also (according to Pollux ix 112 and the Scholiast on this sentence of the Republic) called ὀστράκου περιστροφή, but does not fully elucidate the meaning of the phrase when it is used as a proverb. None of the ancient interpretations is exactly suited to the present passage, and it is clear from their number and diversity that the phrase was not clearly understood. As the proverb is believed to have originated with Plato (Leutsch und Schneidewin l.c. i p. 285 n.), we are bound to interpret it as the context requires, and Schleiermacher's solution appears to me to come nearest to the truth: "hier ist mehr zu denken theils an die Flüchtigkeit, mit welcher solche Spiele überhaupt behandelt werden, theils an die Zufälligkeit, mit welcher die Scherbe auf diese oder jene Seite zu fallen scheint" (Translation of the Republic p. 577 n. 372). This view combines the first and second explanations, and is in no way invalidated by the criticisms of Schück (de Schol. ad Pl. civ. pertinentibus p. 31). Plato is perhaps aiming a taunt at the educational theory and practice of contemporary sophists (cf. 518 B n.).

The details of the game itself have been often discussed, and are now tolerably clear. See (besides Grasberger quoted in the notes) Blümner Privatalt. p. 298 and Förster in Rh. Mus. 1875, pp. 287 ff. The latter was, I believe, the first to point out the allusion in νυκτερινῆς τινος ἡμέρας to 'νὺξ ἡμέρα.'

I think that the placing of a comma after ἀληθινὴν restores sense to the latter part of the passage. The reading in the text has the support of A, II, and a great majority of MSS; and the comparison with 517 C seems to me conclusive in favour of the view taken in the notes. Hermann and others have pointed out that ἡμέραν should be supplied with ἀληθινὴν, but those who take this view have hitherto (with, so far as I know, the single exception of Jackson) connected τοῦ ὄντος with ἀληθινὴν (ἡμέραν). It was perhaps on this ground that Schneider peremptorily declined to admit such an explanation. In any case the emphatic opposition between νυκτερινῆς and ἀληθινὴν invites us to supply ἡμέραν, and the transition from the metaphor to its interpretation would be too abrupt if ἀληθινὴν were connected with ἐπάνοδον. οὔσαν is a further difficulty on this view; and Ξ accordingly omitted the word, while q boldly changes it to ιούσης. Schneider, with whom J. and C. are inclined to agree, joins ἀληθινὴν with ἐπάνοδον, and argues that οὔσαν is added partly on account of ὄντος, but more "ad augendam veritatis significationem." But, as J. and C. remark, οὔσαν still drags, "and ἐπάνοδον gives a feeble antithesis to ἡμέρας." The passage from the Laws (728 B) which Schneider quotes in support of his interpretation is not parallel.

Of emendations there has been no lack. ιούσης is adopted by Stephanus, Bekker, Ast and Stallbaum, the last of whom construes ιούσης ἐπάνοδον by 'adscendentis' and supplies ἡμέραν with ἀληθινὴν, as Schleiermacher also did. This yields a better sense than the old view, which connected ἀληθινὴν with ἐπάνοδον, but is harsh in point of syntax, and ιούσης has been demolished on its own merits by Schneider. Hermann read οὔσα ἐπάνοδος, quoting Iamblichus in Villosion's Anecd. ii p.

194, where οὔσα ἐπάνοδος (not ἐπάνοδος, as J. and C. assert) is found. But the περιαγωγή ψυχῆς is not itself the ἐπάνοδος, and οὔσα ἐπάνοδος drags unpleasantly.

Cobet's emendation, which is partially adopted by Baiter, changes οὔσαν to οὐσίαν, inserts καὶ before ἐκ νυκτερινῆς, and reads ἐπάνοδος for ἐπάνοδον. But, apart from other objections, τοῦ οὗτος οὐσίαν, in spite of Soph. 262 C, is extremely displeasing. Jowett and Campbell's otherwise excellent note appears to me fatal to their own as well as to every other solution proposed before they wrote, and overthrows all the emendations except ἄγονσα for οὔσαν, which I suggested in 1897. I take this opportunity of withdrawing so hasty a proposal, and restoring the text of the best mss., which I am glad to say that Jackson also defended when in a letter to me some years ago he remarked "I have been in the habit of putting a comma after ἀληθινήν, and otherwise keeping the reading of A."

VII.

VII 527 D. τὸ δ' ἔστιν οὐ πᾶν φαῦλον, ἀλλὰ χαλεπὸν πιστεῦσαι, ὅτι ἐν τοῦτοις τοῖς μαθήμασιν ἐκάστου ὄργανόν τι ψυχῆς ἐκκαθαίρεται τε καὶ ἀναζωπυρεῖται ἀπολλύμενον καὶ τυφλούμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἐπιτηδευμάτων, κρείττον ὢν σωθῆναι μυρίων ὀμμάτων· μόνῳ γὰρ αὐτῷ ἀλήθεια ὁράται.

This eloquent sentence was deservedly famous in antiquity, and is constantly quoted or alluded to by many authors: see the references in Ast, Schneider, Wex (Fleck. Jb. 1864 p. 381), and Hiller (on Theo Smyrn. 3).

An attempt has been made by Cobet (Mnem. xi p. 177) to remodel the text in accordance with Theo's citation, which is as follows: τὸ δ' ἔστιν οὐ πᾶν φαῦλοις, ἀλλὰ πᾶσι χαλεπὸν πιστευθῆναι, ὅτι ἐν τοῦτοις τοῖς μαθήμασιν ἐκάστου οἷον ὄργανοις τὸ ψυχῆς ἐκκαθαίρεται καὶ ἀναζωπυρεῖται ὅμμα τυφλούμενον καὶ ἀποσβεννύμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἐπιτηδευμάτων, κρείττον ὢν σωθῆναι μυρίων ὀμμάτων· μόνῳ γὰρ αὐτῷ ἀλήθεια ὁράται (ed. Hiller p. 3). Wex (l.c. 1863 pp. 692 ff.) had maintained, strangely enough, that ὄργανον ψυχῆς would mean something bodily, e.g. the bodily eye; and Cobet accordingly adopts Theo's version οἷον ὄργανοις—ὅμμα. Neither of these critics appears to have remembered ταύτην τὴν ἐνοῦσαν ἐκάστου δύναμιν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ τὸ ὄργανον ᾧ καταμανθάνει ἕκαστος in 518 C, a passage to which, as ἐκάστου shews, this sentence expressly refers. ὄργανον ψυχῆς was also, as Wex admits, the reading of Plutarch (Contr. Disp. viii 718 E). ἀποσβεννύμενον, which Cobet substitutes for ἀπολλύμενον, is in itself good, and may point to an early variant, but ἀπολλύμενον is supported by the evidence of Plutarch (l.c.) and Alcinous (Isag. c. 27).

Nothing could be a more instructive lesson on the almost utter worthlessness of early citations of Plato for determining the text of the Republic than to compare A's readings in this passage with its reproduction by Theo and Nicomachus (Intr. Ar. i 3. 7). Even the meanest and most corrupt of our mss is, from the literary point of view, superior; and there is not in these citations a single variant to which any of our mss here lends support.

VIII.

VII 528 c. ἐπεὶ καὶ νῦν ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν ἀτιμαζόμενα καὶ κολονόμενα, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν ζητοῦντων, λόγον οὐκ ἔχόντων καθ' ὃ τι χρήσιμα, ὁμῶς πρὸς ἅπαντα ταῦτα βία ὑπὸ χάριτος αὐξάνεται.

I have returned in this edition to the reading of the best mss, which is kept also by Schneider, Hermann, Stallbaum, and J. and C.

The explanation in the notes appears to me required by the grammatical construction, as well as suitable in point of meaning if we remember that the mode in which stereometricians 'dishonour' their subject has already been explained. The Many dishonour Stereometry negatively, ὅτι οὐδεμία πόλις ἐντίμως αὐτὰ ἔχει, and thereby negatively clip or curtail the study, for until it receives public support, it will not attain to its natural and proper growth. The students of stereometry dishonour and curtail their study positively by prosecuting it feebly and in a slight degree, because they do not know its real utility, and (as was said before) have no public encouragement to support them in so difficult a subject. The omission of μέν before τῶν πολλῶν was apparently a stumbling-block, for it is replaced in Ξ and some other mss of second-rate authority. See however 1340 D n. If ὑπὸ μὲν τῶν πολλῶν were read, we should, I think, expect another passive participle to be present in the balancing clause. As it is, δέ merely marks the formal contrast between οἱ πολλοί and οἱ ζητοῦντες.

Schneider understands ζητούμενα or the like after χρήσιμα, and takes ὑπὸ τῶν ζητούντων with αὐξάνεται. This explanation is too tortuous, nor is δέ accounted for by calling it "quasi primitivae orationis monumentum." Stallbaum's solution is in principle the same as Schneider's. According to the Oxford editors, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν ζητούντων "may depend on some general idea of disadvantage, e.g. κολονόμενα understood from the previous clause." The zeugma is however difficult, and ἀτιμαζόμενα καὶ κολονόμενα are just as true of the ζητοῦντες as of the πολλοί.

The following emendations have been proposed. (1) ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν ἀτιμαζόμενα καὶ κολονόμενα ὑπὸ τῶν ζητούντων ('dishonoured by the many and curtailed by students'). I formerly accepted this change, which is due to Voegelin, and has the support of Madvig and Baiter. The sense is excellent, but the intrusion of δέ into all the mss is very difficult to account for satisfactorily. (2) ὑπὸ—κολονόμενα, τῶν δὲ ζητούντων κτλ. (Cobet). This correction, which (with the addition of μέν before τῶν πολλῶν) commends itself to a reviewer of my Text of the Republic in Lit. Centralblatt 1898 pp. 296 f., is much too drastic. The same criticism applies to (3) Badham's ἀτιμαζόμενα, κολονόμενα δ' ὑπὸ κτλ., and also (4) to Liebhold's ὑπὸ μὲν τῶν πολλῶν—ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν ζητούντων <ἀμελοῦμενα> κτλ.

IX.

VII 529 C. καὶν ἐξ ὑπτίας νέων ἐν γῇ ἢ ἐν θαλάττῃ μαθάνῃ.

The ms tradition in this difficult passage points to the existence of two early variants, viz. ὑπτίας μέν and ὑπτίας νέων. The former is read by A, Cesenas M, and two other mss; probably also μὴν (Vind. B) is a corruption of μέν, and μὴ (Vind. E) of μὴν. ὑπτίας νέων has the authority of Π, q and other mss. ναίων and νεών, which some mss read, are corruptions of νέων.

No one, so far as I know, has defended μέν. For the obnoxious particle Madvig proposes ἦ, Richards θεώμενος or κείμενος, while J. J. Hartman ejects it altogether. None of these conjectures is in the least degree convincing. By far the best suggestion on these lines is Marin-din's ἐξυπτιασμένος for ἐξ ὑπτίας μέν (Cl. Rev. VIII p. 193 n.): cf. ἐξυπτιάζονται τὴν κεφαλὴν in Arist. ap. Athl. I 34 B and ἐξυπτιάζων ὄμμα (Schütz's conjecture for ὄσυμα) in Aesch. Sept. 577. The active is three times used by Lucian intransitively for throwing the neck or body back (Gall. 12, Heracl. 3, Adv. ind. 21), and once with εαυτόν in the same sense (Catapl. 16). But the accidental omission of -ος is not easy to explain in a ms of the ninth century or its progenitors, though natural enough at a later date (see Bast Comm. Pal. p. 772 and Tab. iv 18).

If μέν and νέων each contain an element of truth (a very improbable supposition), it may be thought that μένων is what Plato wrote. But the word is much too feeble and pointless.

The editors, except Baiter, unanimously and (I think) rightly, read νέων. A confirmation of this reading is supplied by Pollux VII 138 νεῖν δ' ἐξ ὑπτίας μάθημα κολυμβητῶν Ἀριστοφάνης εἶπε καὶ Πλάτων: for it is unlikely that Pollux is thinking of the more artificial passage in Phaedr. 264 A οὐδὲ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τελευτῆς ἀνάπαλιν διανεῖν ἐπιχειρεῖ τὸν λόγον. Schneider's translation "und wenn er auch auf dem Rücken schwimmen in Landes- oder in Meeresgewässern lernt" is in harmony with his note "in ea orbis terrarum parte, quae γῇ vocatur, non minus quam in altera natari potest. γῇ non idem est, quod χέρσος." But even if we allow that ἐν γῇ may bear this meaning, there must be some more specific reference, or else the phrase is pointless; for there is no object in swimming on one's back in a river with a view to watching the heavens, when the adjoining bank affords a more secure and steadfast post of observation. Stallbaum avoids the difficulty, merely translating "etiamsi (more urinatorum) resupinus natans in terra vel mari discat," with the note "dictio ἐξ ὑπτίας νεῖν vel διανεῖν ab arte urinatorum petita." J. and C. see in Plato's phrase "a piece of extravagance" and nothing more; but even the extravagance of Plato is never destitute of point. To understand νέων ἐν γῇ as no more than lying on the land (with some older translators, including Ficinus), and to transpose ἐν γῇ and ἐν θαλάττῃ (with q and Flor. U) are of course wholly illegitimate resources. I have sometimes suspected that ἐξ ὑπτίας νέων (ἐν γῇ) may be a slang phrase borrowed from the language of Greek athletics: sometimes it has seemed to me to refer to the story of Thales in the well (Theaet. 174 A and cf.

D. L. i 34). That it has some peculiar and specific meaning I am convinced; and the explanation offered in the notes appears to me far more probable than any other. The Aristophanic instance of ἐξ ὑπτίας νεῖν does not occur in any of the extant plays. It should be added that ἐπὶ γῆς μὴ πλεῖν was a Pythagorean σύμβολον (Clement Strom. v 5. 49 A Migne), but I do not think there is any allusion to the maxim here. See also my article in Cl. Rev. XIII p. 11.

X.

VII 529 C, D. ταῖτα μὲν τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ποικίλματα, ἐπείπερ ἐν ὁρατῷ πεποικιλταί, κάλλιστα μὲν ἡγείσθαι καὶ ἀκριβέστατα τῶν τοιούτων ἔχει, τῶν δὲ ἀληθινῶν πολὺ ἐνδοῦν, ἃς τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυτῆς ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἀριθμῷ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἀληθέσι σχήμασι φορὰς τε πρὸς ἄλληλα φέρεται καὶ τὰ ἐνόητα φέρει· ἃ δὲ λόγῳ μὲν καὶ διανοίᾳ ληπτὰ, ὅψει δ' οὐ.

This famous and difficult sentence has occasioned a vast amount of debate. I may refer in particular, besides the editors, to Schleiermacher in his Translation pp. 580 f., Steinhart Einleitung pp. 691 f., Susemihl Gen. Entw. II p. 209, Krohn Pl. St. pp. 170 ff., Cohen Ideenlehre u. die Mathematik pp. 22 ff., Richards Cl. Rev. VIII p. 194, Nettleship Lectures and Remains II p. 275 and Bosanquet Companion p. 290. Krohn's discussion, though not free from errors, is particularly able and suggestive.

A large majority of editors and critics approve the MS tradition, but there is no consensus of opinion as to the meaning among those who have seriously attempted to grapple with the unusual difficulties of the sentence.

On grammatical grounds, there should be no doubt that τῶν ἀληθινῶν means τῶν ἀληθινῶν ποικιλμάτων. It is difficult, if not impossible, to understand φορῶν after ἀληθινῶν (with Steinhart and Susemihl), or to take τῶν ἀληθινῶν absolutely in the sense of 'the true' sc. system, as Bosanquet desires to do. The accusative ἃς—φορὰς is believed by Schleiermacher and others to be equivalent to κατὰ τὰς φορὰς, but the construction, to say the least, is difficult and obscure. Schneider, who as usual is clear and precise, repeats ποικιλμάτων with ἀληθινῶν, and holds that ἃς—φορὰς κτλ. defines the true ποικίλματα "quasi dicat τῶν ἀληθινῶν ποικιλμάτων, τοῦτ' ἔστι τῶν φορῶν ἃς" etc. This view, which I have adopted in the notes, appears to me unquestionably correct.

Schneider interprets the whole passage as follows:—"quemadmodum—sensibilis coeli varietas eo efficitur, quod stellas in coelo conspicuas alias celerior, alias tardior motus per definita temporis spatia certasque figuras circumagit, qui motus est non verae, sed sensibilis celeritatis tarditatisque et per numeros atque figuras item sensibiles decurrit, ita veram varietatem vera celeritas et tarditas efficiunt eo, quod veras stellas secundum verum numerum verasque figuras movent, qui motus partim ipsarum est, quia celeritas et tarditas motu carere non possunt, partim ad res motas seu veras stellas pertinet, quae τὰ ἐνόητα dicuntur quia celeritas et tarditas cum eis sese coniungentes eas amplectuntur et continent." It will be observed that Schneider identifies τὰ ἐνόντα with 'verae stellae,' 'die intelligiblen Analogen' of the visible stars (Krohn), and τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης with 'vera celeritas et tarditas'; whereas, according to my interpretation, τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης represent the 'verae stellae,' and τὰ ἐνόντα the mathematical ὄντα which they contain, analogous to the sensible γιγνόμενα which are present in visible stars. Others, such as Steinhart and Susemihl, have actually recognised in τὰ ἐνόντα the visible stars themselves. To the latter view there are many objections, and it may be urged against both Schneider and Steinhart that neither intelligible nor visible stars can reasonably be said ἐνεῖναι τῷ ὄντι τάχει etc. τὰ ἐνόντα is a precise and definite expression which Plato ought not to have employed if he merely meant that 'celeritas et tarditas cum eis' (i.e. according to Schneider 'veris stellis') 'seae coniungentes eas amplectuntur et continent.' The meaning which I have given to τὰ ἐνόντα appears to me the only one which assigns its full and proper connotation to the word.

It has been thought by some critics that τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης are the self-existent Ideas of Speed and Slowness. Apart from other objections to this view (see Zeller¹ II 1, p. 697 n. 3), we must insist that the astronomer as such is not yet concerned with the Ideas at all, but only with τὰ μεταξύ i.e. τὰ μαθηματικά, which, though πολλά, are nevertheless both ὄντα (hence τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης) and αἰώια: see 527 B n., with App. I and Zeller¹ II 1, p. 701 n. 1 and Susemihl l.c. p. 209. The whole structure of the sentence in my opinion compels us to find the mathematical analogues of the visible stars not in τὰ ἐνόντα, but in τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης, and I have tried in the notes to indicate the reason which induced Plato to express his meaning in this particular way.

The text has of course often been called in question. The first to suspect corruption was apparently Ast, who suggested ὦν τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης <καὶ> ἐν κτλ., and Richards accepts the principle of this proposal, merely substituting οἷς for ὦν. I was myself once inclined to read ἂ ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ κτλ., omitting τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης as well as the final s of αἷς, but τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνότης is in all the mss and was read by Proclus (in Tim. 244 c and elsewhere), and it is hardly necessary to say that 'emendations' on passages of this kind are peculiarly liable to error. I see no good reason for doubting the accuracy of the mss.

XI.

VII 531 B. σὺν μὲν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοὺς χρηστοὺς λέγεις τοὺς ταῖς χορδαῖς πράγματα παρέχοντας καὶ βασανίζοντας, ἐπὶ τῶν κολλόπων στρεβλοῦντας ἵνα δὲ μὴ μακροτέρα ἡ εἰκὼν γίγνηται πλήκτρῳ τε πληγῶν γιγνομένων καὶ κατηγορίας πέρι καὶ ἐξαρινήσεως καὶ ἀλαζονείας χορδῶν, παύομαι τῆς εἰκόνης κτλ.

I take ἡ εἰκὼν with πέρι in the sense virtually of λέγουσα πέρι. This construction appears to be generally accepted, but there is considerable diversity of opinion as to the meaning of κατηγορίας κτλ. Many interpreters understand κατηγορίας as something which is done by the strings, and not by the musicians, in which case χορδῶν is a subjective genitive going with κατηγορίας as well as with the other two nouns. Grammatically, this view is defensible enough: but whom, and how, do the strings κατηγορεῖν? Is it the musician? If so, the tortured slave should 'accuse' the executioner, but he does not, although he may revile him. The slave upon the rack may denounce or accuse his accomplices, but the strings can hardly be said κατηγορεῖν in any sense analogous to this. Others, as for example Schneider, suppose that κατηγορία is a technical term in music ("hoc quoque artis vocabulum esse liquet"). For this idea there is no authority in any ancient writer, so far as I can discover. D. and V. translate "the peevishness, reserve and frowardness of the strings," but the word κατηγορίας does not mean peevishness, but 'accusation.' On the other hand the contrast between κατηγορίας and ἐξαρινήσεως is strongly in favour of holding that it is the musicians who accuse, and the strings that deny. Stallbaum and others think ἐξαρινήσεως means giving out no sound, and ἀλαζονείας 'nimis acute sonant.' This too is in my judgment far-fetched and weak. Plato's words should be taken in their full sense. The musician accuses the strings; the strings protest their innocence like an obstinate slave upon the rack. If more point is needed, we should remember that if the strings are innocent, the musician is guilty.

Jowett apparently makes κατηγορίας govern ἐξαρινήσεως: "they have a controversy with the strings and torture them: they accuse them of refusing to speak or of speaking too much." But the grammatical construction is harsh and the sense inadequate. The alternative view in J. and C. is in my opinion correct, except that ἀλαζονείας is rather 'effrontery,' 'swagger,' than 'exaggeration.'

XII.

VII 532 A. οὕτω καὶ ὅταν τις τῷ διαλέγεσθαι ἐπιχειρῇ ἄνευ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθήσεων διὰ τοῦ λόγου ἐπ' αὐτὸ ὃ ἔστιν ἕκαστον ὁρμᾶν, καὶ μὴ ἀποστῇ, πρὶν ἂν αὐτὸ ὃ ἔστιν ἀγαθὸν αὐτῇ νοήσῃ λάβῃ, ἐπ' αὐτῷ γίγνεται τῷ τοῦ νοητοῦ τέλει κτλ.

The ms reading ὁρμᾶ is retained by J. and C., as well as by Richter in Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 145. The Oxford editors treat ἄνευ—ἀποστῇ as explanatory of οὕτω—ἐπιχειρῇ, remarking, truly enough, that such an asyndeton is "not without parallel in Plato." But the objection is not so much to the asyndeton in itself, as to the misunderstanding which it would occasion. No one would readily imagine that ὁρμᾶ is a subjunctive dependent upon ὅταν: it would naturally be construed as an indicative, and the words ἄνευ—ὁρμᾶ would almost inevitably be taken as the apodosis corresponding to ὅταν—ἐπιχειρῇ. Richter is certainly wrong in supposing that ἂν can be understood before ἄνευ πασῶν κτλ. out of ὅταν.

Ast's emendation is in my opinion all but certain. Other proposals are (1) ἐπιχειρῇ, ἄνευ—ὁρμᾶ, καὶ εἰ μὴ ἀποστῇ κτλ. (Stephanus, with whom Hermann and Stallbaum, reading καὶ, virtually agree): (2) ἐπιχειρῶν, <ἀν> ἀνεν—ὄρμᾳ, καὶ μὴ ἀποστῇ (Baiter): (3) ἐπιχειρῶν for ἐπιχειρῶν (mentioned in J. and C.). The last conjecture is too drastic; of the others, (2) is better than (1), but neither is satisfactory. On the one hand, if ἀνεν—ὄρμᾳ is in the apodosis, it is too prominent, and looks too much like a definition of the dialectical method; on the other hand, Baiter's remedy seems to imply that it is or may be possible to attempt dialectic without dispensing with πάσαι αἱ ἀισθήσεις. Neither of these objections applies to Ast's conjecture, which is also more in harmony with the previous sentence than any other emendation.

XIII.

VII 532 B. C. ἡ δὲ γε, ἦν ὃ ἐγώ, λίσις τε ἀπὸ τῶν δεσμῶν καὶ μεταστροφή ἀπὸ τῶν σκιῶν ἐπὶ τὰ εἶδωλα καὶ τὸ φῶς καὶ ἐκ τοῦ καταγείου εἰς τὸν ἥλιον ἐπάροδος, καὶ ἐκεῖ πρὸς μὲν τὰ ζῶα τε καὶ φυτὰ καὶ τὸ τοῦ ἡλίου φῶς ἔτι ἀδυναμία βλέπειν, πρὸς δὲ τὰ ἐν ὕδασι φαντάσματα θεῖα καὶ σκιὰς τῶν ὄντων, ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰδῶλων σκιὰς δι' ἑτέρου τοιοῦτου φωτὸς ὡς πρὸς ἥλιον κρίνειν ἀποσκιαζομένης κτλ.

The reading ἐπ' ἀδυναμία has the support of the best mss and is retained by Schneider, Stallbaum, and J. and C., not to mention older editors.

According to Schneider's explanation (with which the Oxford editors agree), βλέπειν is a substantival infinitive, parallel to ἐπάροδος, and ἐπ' ἀδυναμία is adverbial ('with inability' or the like), while ἐπὶ δυνάμει βλέπειν (or something of the kind) is to be supplied with the contrasting clause. But ἐπ' ἀδυναμία, if taken adverbially with βλέπειν, is an extraordinary phrase, and none of the instances cited—chiefly from the tragedians—by Schneider and J. and C. is comparable to it. Stallbaum makes βλέπειν depend on ἀδυναμία ("bei dem Unvermögen hinzublicken nach" etc.), and supplies ἐπὶ δυνάμει to govern the βλέπειν which has to be supplied in the next clause. This explanation does more justice to the Greek, as far as ἐπ' ἀδυναμία is concerned, but 'bei dem Unvermögen' etc. could not be coupled with ἐπάροδος unless we admit an extremely offensive anacoluthon. Schneider appears to have felt that a nominative was needed, and would have liked to write ἀδυναμία (with ν and two other mss). This is also Herwerden's proposal, but ἔτι is a great improvement, and fitly reminds us of the continuity of the prisoner's progress. Other and older emendations, mentioned by Schneider, in which ἐπ' ἀδυναμία is retained, are none of them in the least degree probable, and it may now, I think, be taken as certain that Iamblichus was right.

The words ἐνταῦθα δὲ πρὸς φαντάσματα, which formerly appeared between φαντάσματα and θεῖα, were rightly rejected by Schneider. They occur in no ms except Ξ, which is the basis of the Aldine and Stephanus' text. ἐνταῦθα δὲ in this connexion could only mean the region of intelligibles, as Schneider points out; and the whole passage is plunged into confusion if these words are introduced. It is remarkable that Herwerden alone of recent critics has proposed this reinsertion, beguiled, perhaps, by the homoioteleuton, which Schneider thinks was a deliberate artifice of the forger ("quis non glossema ex male intellecto adverbio ἐκεῖ vel undelibet oriundum et de industria homoeoteleuton factam agnoscat?").

The adjective θεία has caused a great deal of discussion. I once unhappily proposed to read <καὶ ἐν τοῖς ὅσα πυκνά τε καὶ λ>εία, comparing VI 510A. The correct view was pointed out by Shorey in his severe though just denunciation of my remedy (Cl. Rev. iv p. 480). Schneider takes φαντάσματα θεία as virtually φαντάσματα θεοῦ, supposing that φαντάσματα of the sun alone are meant (cf. 516B), but this is scarcely adequate. Against Stallbaum, who (without quoting the Sophist) bracketed θεία, Richter (Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 145) rightly argued that the epithet was indispensable "um den Unterschied zu markieren zwischen den φαντάσματα und den im κατάγειον vorkommenden εἰδωλα." Ast's conjecture θέα is neat, and has won considerable favour (see E. J. Palmer in Cl. Rev. v p. 278 and Apelt in Fleck. Jb. 1891 p. 556, where Apelt makes the same proposal independently), while Madvig's ἄδεια has been deservedly ignored. I have no longer any doubt that the text is sound. Some may find a difficulty because the Sophist is now believed by many to be later than the Republic; but θεία in this sense may have been familiar in the Platonic school, and in any case (see note ad loc.) the meaning can be inferred from the context, even without the aid of the Sophist, whose theory of a θεία and an ἀνθρωπίνη εἰδωλοποιική may, if we think fit, be viewed as a further development of the expression in the Republic. There are also other traces in the Republic of doctrines supposed to be especially characteristic of the so-called 'dialectical dialogues': see App. VII to Book V. Finally, it should be noted that Herwerden's excision of σκιὰς after εἰδώλων is not only unnecessary but wrong, because ἀποσκιαζομένης would then be most naturally taken with σκιὰς τῶν ὄντων.

XIV.

VII 533 B. τόδε γοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὐδεὶς ἡμῶν ἀμφισβητήσει λέγουσιν, ὡς αὐτοῦ γε ἑκάστου πέρι, ὃ ἔστιν ἑκάστον, ἄλλη τις ἐπιχειρεῖ μέθοδος ὁδῶ περὶ παντὸς λαμβάνειν, ἀλλ' αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι πᾶσαι κτλ.

The ordinary explanation of this passage takes ὡς with ἀμφισβητήσει and not with λέγουσιν, interpreting ἄλλη as 'other than dialectic' (Schneider in Addit. p. 58, Stallbaum and J. and C.). But it is scarcely possible to separate ὡς from λέγουσιν, and for this reason J. J. Hartman (who understands ἄλλη in the same way as Schneider) cuts λέγουσιν out.

If λέγουσιν is retained, and connected, as it must be, with ὡς, either ἄλλη does not mean 'other than dialectic,' or else we must read <οὐκ> ἄλλη. The latter alternative was adopted by Stephanus, Ast, and Bekker, whose apparatus criticus stated by implication that οὐκ was actually written in Paris A. Recent editors have rightly rejected οὐκ after it was found to have no MS authority. It is clear, therefore, unless we resort to unjustifiable emendation or excision, that ἄλλη does not mean 'other than dialectic.' The only other possible explanations are (1) other than all the arts spoken of in ἄλλ' αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι—αὐτῶν, (2) that given in the notes. Against (1) it might be urged that ἄλλη does not easily look forward in a sentence of this kind, and (2) is in every way simpler and more natural, provided we observe that the stress falls on αἱ δὲ λοιπαί rather than on αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι πᾶσαι etc. ('while all the other arts—the remainder' etc.).

XV.

VII 533 c. οὐκοῦν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἡ διαλεκτικὴ μέθοδος μόνῃ ταύτῃ πορεύεται, τὰς ὑποθέσεις ἀναιροῦσα, ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὴν ἀρχήν, ἵνα βεβαιωσῇται.

The MSS without exception have ἀναιροῦσα, which a majority of editors retain. ἀνάγονσα was read by Canter (Stob. II p. 157), and is found as a correction in one MS of Stobaeus (Eccl. II 2. 1 Wachsmuth). I formerly printed ἀναφέρονσα, which Oldenberg (de Pl. arte dial. p. 38 n.) had already (as I have since found) mentioned as possible, though he himself preferred ἀνάγονσα. On an earlier occasion I conjectured ἀνοῦσα (Cl. Rev. IV p. 357), thinking of Symp. 211 B: cf. also Alcibiades Isag. 5 and 7. Schneider's ἀναιρόνσα is an excessively rare word, and has met with little favour from critics; but ἀνάγονσα has been approved by various writers, among others Oldenberg (l.c.) and Richards (Cl. Rev. VIII p. 194).

Further investigation into Plato's 'hypothetical method' has now convinced me that the reading and punctuation of Paris A represent the truth. See App. III, where the subject is discussed at length.

The expression τὰς ὑποθέσεις ἀναιροῦσα throws a much-needed light on the real nature of the process described here and in VI 511 B, VII 532 A. It is not, as has been asserted, inconsistent with the description of Book VI, for although we demolish our ὑποθέσεις and must do so if we are ever to rise above them, they are none the less τῷ ὄντι ὑποθέσεις, οἷον ἐπιβάσεις τε καὶ ὄρμαί, without which we cannot even make a start. The path of knowledge is strewn with the wrecks of hasty generalisations, which have served as stepping-stones to students in the very act of their demolition: and in this sense, if in no other, it is true that "Error in the round of time Still fathers Truth."

It is perhaps necessary briefly to advert to some erroneous interpretations of the authoritative text. Steinhart (Einleitung p. 693) translates "die Voraussetzungen aufhebend, um das Princip zu gewinnen," taking ἐπὶ with ἀναιροῦσα: but ἐπὶ cannot be separated from πορεύεται, and such a sense of ἐπὶ in this connexion is harsh and unnatural. Stallbaum's attempt to shew that ἀναιροῦσα ἐπὶ can mean 'taking up to' is unsuccessful, for all the parallels which he quotes are cases of ἀναφέρειν ἐπὶ. Finally Jowett and Campbell remark "The hypotheses are done away with; that is, when seen in their relation to the good they cease to be ὑποθέσεις": but ἀναιρεῖν cannot be thus pared down, and should be taken in its full force as explained in the note.

XVI.

VII 533 E. Οὐ γὰρ οὖν, ἔφη [ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν ἕξιν σαφηνεία λέγει ἐν ψυχῇ]. Ἀρέσκει οὖν κτλ.

The words within brackets are printed as they appear in A. II agrees, except that it has ἄλλο (corrected to ἀλλ' ὃ) and ἕξιν (sic). In q and Flor. U we find ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν λέξιν σαφηνεία (i.e. σαφηνεία) ὃ λέγοι ἐν ψυχῇ, and this reading is adopted by Bekker. There is also some slight authority (in addition to Π¹) for ἄλλο instead of ἀλλ' ὃ, for σαφηνείαν instead of σαφηνεία, and for λέγειν instead of λέγει.

Jowett and Campbell remain faithful in their allegiance to A, except that with q they insert ὃ before λέγει. "The words in the text," they remark, "are very possibly genuine and may be rendered—'we only require' (the verb is gathered from οὐ περὶ ὀνόματος ἀμφισβήτησις) 'an expression which may indicate with a clearness proportioned to the mental condition, that of which it speaks as existing in the mind. For example, διάνοια may not be a very clear or definite expression, but the state of mind which it expresses is also far from clear." But they do not explain how the words which I have italicised represent the Greek, and few will find themselves able to accept the translation which they offer.

The reading of q is carefully examined by Schneider, who justly characterises it in these words "sententia mihi tam absona videtur, ut eam vix interpolatori mediocri, nedum Platoni tribuere audeam."

The chief emendations are (1) ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν ἐξέτασιν σαφηνεία <ὃ> λέγεις ἐν ψυχῇ (Winckelmann), (2) ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν ἕξιν σαφηνείαν <ἄ> λέγει ἐν ψυχῇ <ἀρκέσει> (Hermann, and Badham, except that the latter writes ἔχει for λέγει, and begins the next sentence with Ἀρκέσει), (3) ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν ὄνομα δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν λέξεως σαφηνείαν <ὃ> λέγει (or ἂν λέγοι) ἐν ψυχῇ <ἀρκέσει> (Steinhart), (4) ἄλλο ἂν ὄνομα δηλοῖ πρὸς τὴν ἕξιν σαφηνεία, <ἄλλο> λέγοι ἂν ψυχῇ (Richter in Wetk. Jb. 1867, p. 146), (5) ἀλλ' ὃ—ἕξιν σαφηνεία, λέγ', εἰ ἐν ψυχῇ (Madvig, Baiter), (6) ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ τὴν ἕξιν <πὼς ἔχει> σαφηνείας <ἄ> λέγεις ἐν ψυχῇ (Bywater), (7) ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πὼς αὐτὴν ἔχειν σαφηνείας λέγεις ἐν ψυχῇ <ἀρκέσει>. Ἀρκέσει (or ἀρέσκει) γοῦν κτλ. (Richards), (8) ἀλλ' ὃ ἂν μόνον δηλοῖ πὼς τὴν ἕξιν σαφηνεία λέγειν ἐν ψυχῇ <ἀρκέσει; Ναί.> Ἀρκέσει κτλ. (Burnet).

Some of these conjectures are ingenious and scholarly, but none of them, nor any other which I can devise, is altogether satisfactory in point of sense, or diplomatically probable. (The last remark does not apply to Madvig's correction, which is easy enough, but κακὸν κακῶ ἰᾶται and does not attempt to cure πρὸς τὴν ἕξιν σαφηνεία at all.)

The independent reasons for holding the clause to be interpolated are:—(1) it is absent in Ξ , which the Aldine edition and Stephanus as usual follow: (2) “in Platonis dialogis quum negationi assensus per formulam οὐ γὰρ οὖν praeberetur, nusquam assentiens quicquam addit, quod ex contrario petitam negati descriptionem contineat idque per affirmationem cum particula ἀλλά definiat” (Schneider). Little weight need be attached to the first argument, in view of the general character of Ξ , but if (as I believe in opposition to Schanz Platocod. etc. p. 81) Ξ is sometimes independent of A, it is possible enough that the words were omitted in the MS (or MSS) from which Ξ was copied in this passage. The second consideration, which Schneider establishes by a vast number of instances, is extremely weighty.

As regards the origin of the gloss Schneider observes (Addit. p. 59) “ceterum primitivam formam et originem glossematis investigaturos contulisse iuvabit Platonis verba Leg. I p. 633 A: περὶ τῶν τῆς ἄλλης ἀρετῆς εἶτε μερῶν εἶτε ἅτ’ αὐτὰ καλεῖν χρεῖον ἐστι, δηλοῦντα μόνον ἃ λέγει, et haec Galeni Εἰσαγωγῆς διαλεκτικῆς p. 12: οὐδὲν γὰρ πρὸς τὸ παρὸν διαφέρει συμπεπλεγμένην λέγειν ἀποφατικὴν ἢ συμπλοκὴν ἀποφατικὴν, ἔχοντός γέ σου σκοπὸν ἐν ἀπόσει λέξει τὸ δηλοῦσαι τοῖς πέλας, ὃ τι περ ἂν αὐτὸς ἐνοῆς.” Cf. also Theaet. 177 D, E, Soph. 218 B, Hipp. Mai. 296 D. The sentence is evidently an attempt to say that we should be content if the words we use express our meaning clearly. In λέγει (and still more λέγεις) ἐν ψυχῇ we may detect an allusion to the Platonic theory of thought as the conversation of the soul (see on III 400 D) and perhaps also to the λόγος ἐνδιάθετος of the Stoics. On this account, and also because of ξέν, I am inclined to attribute the interpolation to some adherent of the Stoic school, of which, in point of style, it is not unworthy.

XVII.

VII 534 D. Ἀλλὰ μὴν τοὺς γε σαυτοῦ παῖδας, οὓς τῷ λόγῳ τρέφεις τε καὶ παιδεύεις, εἴ ποτε ἔργῳ τρέφῃς, οὐκ ἂν εἰσῆις, ὡς ἐγῶμαι, ἀλόγους ὄντας ὥσπερ γραμμάς, ἄρχοντας ἐν τῇ πόλει κυρίου τῶν μεγίστων εἶναι.

Schneider was the first to discover in this passage a punning reference to mathematical ἄλογοι γραμμαί, as defined by Euclid x Def. 5—11. The same explanation, although it did not commend itself to Stallbaum, is apparently accepted by the Oxford editors, who aptly quote Theaet. 146 A προθυμοῦμαι ἡμᾶς ποιῆσαι διαλέγεσθαι καὶ φίλους τε καὶ προσηγόρους ἀλλήλοις γέγεσθαι. It is to Theodorus the mathematician that these words are spoken, and Campbell is, I believe, right in thinking that προσηγόρους is quasi-mathematical: cf. VIII 546 B πάντα προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἀλλήλα ἀπέφηναν.

It is better, I think, and more pointed to connect ἀλόγους directly with γραμμάς (cf. 519 A τὰς τῆς γενέσεως ἐγγενεῖς ὥσπερ μολυβδαίας with note ad loc.), than to translate “incapable of reason, like irrational lines” (with Schneider and J. and C.). In order to extract this meaning from the Greek, we must understand γραμμάς as = ἀλόγους γραμμαί, which is doubtless possible, but less natural than the view given in the notes.

J. and C.'s translation also gives to ὥσπερ γραμμάς a certain otiose appearance, as if Plato had deliberately gone out of his way to drag in a mathematical allusion. On this account we may wonder that none of the Dutch critics has hitherto proposed, so far as I know, to excise ὥσπερ γραμμάς.

There is little to be said in favour of the non-mathematical interpretations, though perhaps the following contain an element of truth: "unvernünftig wie Figuren" (Schleiermacher), "unvernünftig wie todte Striche" (Prantl), "lineae penecillo praeformatae" (Stallbaum). γραμμάς has, I think, a non-mathematical as well as mathematical meaning in this place, and the former is fairly expressed by Prantl's "todte Striche." Ast thought of "literae s. scriptiones," remembering the well-known passage about dumb books in Phaedr. 275 ff.; but γραμμάς cannot be thus interpreted. Others have thought of pictures, as for example Stallbaum, who refers to Plut. Lycurg. 10. 3 ὥσπερ γραφήν ἄψυχον καὶ ἀκίνητον, and is inclined to read γραφάς instead of γραμμάς. The correction γεγραμμένους is suggested by Steinhart (Einleitung p. 694) and γράμμα or γράμματ' (with reference to v 472 D) by Apelt (Fleck. Jb. 1893 p. 556). The eccentric proposal ὡς Φρύγας Μιδας ἄρχοντας is due to Cornarius, who remarks "coniectura est nostra, qua falli possum: sed tolerari poterit donec rectior occurret" (Eclog. p. 101). Stallbaum's conjecture is neat and elegant, but the text is indubitably sound.

H.

I. Εἶεν· ταῦτα μὲν δὴ ὁμολόγηται, ὦ Γλαῦκων, τῇ μελλούσῃ

543 A—545 C Socrates now returns to the point at which the digression occupying Books V—VII began. There are, as we observed, four leading varieties of States and individuals, in addition to the perfect polity and perfect man. In order of merit they are (1) Timarchy, or the Cretan and Lacedaemonian State, (2) Oligarchy, (3) Democracy, (4) Tyranny. All other kinds of commonwealths, such as dynasties etc., lie somewhere between these primary and conspicuous varieties. Furthermore, inasmuch as the specific character of States is determined by that of individuals, there will be five leading types of individual character, embodied respectively in (1) the aristocratic, (2) the timarchical, (3) the oligarchical, (4) the democratical, (5) the tyrannical man. The first of these we have already described; but we must review the others also, in order that, by contrasting the best and worst, we may apprehend the relation between undiluted justice and undiluted injustice in respect of the happiness and misery of their possessors. As before, we will examine the commonwealths first, and afterwards the individuals.

543 A ff. The description of the philosopher and the philosophic city is at last complete, and the argument returns to the point at which the ‘digression’ began, viz. V 449 A: see note ad loc. Plato has already said repeatedly, and reminds us yet again in 544 A, that the aim of our whole investigation was to decide εἰ ὁ ἀριστος εὐδαιμονέστατος καὶ ὁ κάκιστος ἀθλιώτατος, ἢ ἄλλως ἔχου (cf. II 368 E, 369 A nn.). With the character of the perfect man we are now familiar, but we have still to discover and describe τὸν κάκιστον, in order that we may institute our comparison and pronounce our verdict. This is the task to which Plato addresses himself in VIII and IX (down to 576 B). The method which he follows resembles that adopted in II 369 B ff.—IV. In the first place, he retains throughout the former analogy between the Soul and the City, and his account of the imperfect man is in every instance preceded by an account of the imperfect State. Secondly, instead of going straight to the mark and giving us a single ready-made sketch of total and complete depravity, Plato draws an elaborate and quasi-historical picture of the gradual descent of the perfect State and the perfect Man through successive phases of ever-growing degeneration down to the lowest depth of wickedness and crime. In the same way, as Nettleship observes (Lect. and Rem. II p. 295), “in describing a perfect state, or certain steps in the process of forming a perfect state,” he sometimes wrote “as if one step of that process succeeded another in a historical order.” See on II 369 B, 372 D, 373 D et al. The question has often been discussed whether the sequence of polities in VIII and IX was intended to be really historical or not: see for example Zeller⁴ II pp. 923—925, Henkel Studien zur Gesch. d. Gr. Lehre v. Staat p. 56 and Krohn Pl. St. pp. 204 ff. Aristotle seems to have understood Plato’s account as an attempt to describe the actual facts of Greek history, and severely criticizes it from his usual standpoint in Pol. E 12. 1316^a 1—^b 27; but Plato himself must of course have known as well as Aristotle that the historical development of Greek constitutions did not by any means always correspond with his scheme. See Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 62—88 and Greenidge Gk Const. Hist. pp. 12—35. The fact is that Aristotle altogether ignores the real object of Plato, which is, as we have seen, to arrive at the worst State and the worst man, and treats him as if he had undertaken to exhibit a full ἄκρως οἰκεῖν πόλει κοινὰς μὲν γυναῖκας, κοινούς δὲ παῖδας εἶναι καὶ πᾶσαν παιδείαν, ὡσαύτως δὲ τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα κοινὰ ἐν πολέμῳ τε καὶ εἰρήνῃ, βασιλέας δὲ αὐτῶν εἶναι τοὺς ἐν φιλοσοφίᾳ τε καὶ 5 πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον γεγονότας ἀρίστους. Ὁμολόγηται, ἔφη. Καὶ μὴν καὶ τῷδε ξυνεχωρήσαμεν, ὥς ὅταν δὴ καταστῶσιν οἱ ἄρχοντες, Β ἄγοντες τοὺς στρατιώτας κατοικιοῦσιν εἰς οἰκίσεις οἷας προείπομεν, ἴδιον μὲν οὐδὲν οὐδενὶ ἐχούσας, κοινὰς δὲ πᾶσι. πρὸς δὲ ταῖς τοιαύταις οἰκίσεσι καὶ τὰς κτήσεις, εἰ μνημονεύεις, διωμολογησά- 10 μεθὰ που οἶαι ἔσονται αὐτοῖς. Ἀλλὰ μνημονεύω, ἔφη, ὅτι γε

and complete genealogical tree of all the changes good or bad which had ever taken place in Greek constitutional history. But Plato does not here profess to describe political advance, but only political decay; and even his theory of political decay is itself based upon a theory of psychological degeneration which justly and deliberately ignores, as irrelevant for our present purpose, the undoubted power of human character to improve as well as to deteriorate. The question, as Nettleship says, which Plato puts before himself is this: "The human soul being as we have described it, and having in it a certain capacity for evil as well as for good, what would it come to, and through what stages would it pass, if its capacity for evil were realized gradually but without any abatement? In actual human experience there is always some abatement; there are always counteracting circumstances which prevent any one tendency working itself out in isolation and unhindered; but the philosopher may, as Plato here does, work out the result of a single tendency logically. These books therefore put before us an ideal history of evil, as the previous books put before us an ideal history of good" (l. c. p. 295). The different stages in the decline of the individual soul are each reflected in the decline of the πολιτεία, which is still, as in II—VII, not 'a lifeless instrument, or dead machine,' but in the words of Isocrates, simply the soul of the State (ἔστι γὰρ ψυχὴ πόλεως οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἢ πολιτεία Areop. 14). But although Plato treats the whole question from a psychological rather than a historical standpoint, it is none the less true that the materials of his picture are taken from Greek political and social life. In Books VIII and IX of the Republic we have an extraordinarily vivid and life-like embodiment of the results of Plato's observation and experience of the Greek character, both private and public, in all its different phases, Lacedaemonian, oligarchical, democratical or Athenian, and tyrannical; and the student of Greek history, whether political, economical or social, will obtain a clearer idea of the inner life and animating spirit of Greek constitutions from Plato's description than from any other ancient source whatever. For the rest, it should be noted that Plato has given us in this part of the Republic the earliest attempt at a Philosophy of History, and founded the psychological interpretation of the State. Every political movement is, according to him, the expression of some particular psychological impulse or impulses, and the Constitution inevitably assumes different forms, according as one or another element or 'part' of soul obtains the mastery in the individual citizen. See on this subject Krohn Pl. St. pp. 199 ff., and Bluntschli Theory of the State pp. 76 f.

543 A 1 τῇ μελλούσῃ ἄκρως κτλ. Cf. Laws 739 C, D. The adverb ἄκρως is said by Herwerden (Ann. XIX p. 335) to be a ἀπαξ εἰρημένον in classical Greek. On the word βασιλέας Pfeleiderer (Zur Lösung etc. p. 73) bases a chorizontic argument; but see on IV 445 D. Plato's rulers may well be called 'Kings,' for Plato holds that there is no difference of principle between Kingship and Aristocracy: cf. VII 520 B with V 473 C, IX 587 B, and Henkel Stud. zur Gesch. d. Gr. Lehre vom Staat p. 57.

4 αὐτῶν. The genitive is partitive: 'and that those of their number are to be Kings who have shewn themselves best' etc. Jowett wrongly translates 'their kings.'

543 B 6 ξυνεχωρήσαμεν. III 415 D ff. 10 οἶαι. The reference is to III 416 D ff.

οὐδὲν οὐδένα ῥόμεθα δεῖν κεκτῆσθαι ὦν νῦν οἱ ἄλλοι, ὥσπερ δὲ ἀθλητὰς τε πολέμου καὶ φύλακας, μισθὸν τῆς φυλακῆς δεχομένους εἰς ἐνιαυτὸν τὴν εἰς ταῦτα τροφήν παρὰ τῶν ἄλλων, αὐτῶν τε δεῖν καὶ τῆς ἄλλης πόλεως ἐπιμελείσθαι. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη, λέγεις. ἀλλὰ γ' ἐπειδὴ τοῦτ' ἀπετελέσαμεν, ἀναμνησθῶμεν πόθεν δεῦρο ¹⁵ ἐξετραπόμεθα, ἵνα πάλιν τὴν αὐτὴν ἴωμεν. Οὐ χαλεπόν, ἔφη. σχεδὸν γάρ, καθάπερ νῦν, ὥς διεληλυθὼς περὶ τῆς πόλεως τοὺς λόγους ἐποιοῦ, λέγων, ὥς ἀγαθὴν μὲν τὴν τοιαύτην, οἷαν τότε διήλθες, τιθείης πόλιν καὶ ἄνδρα ¹ τὸν ἐκείνη ὅμοιον, καὶ ταῦτα, ὥς Liebholt's conjecture ὅτι κοιναί is an undeserved reflection on Glauco's powers of memory.

11 οἱ ἄλλοι. οἱ ἄνθρωποι, which I once suggested (Cl. Rev. IV p. 357), would be more exact, and ΑΛΛΟΙ and ΑΝΟΙ are pretty easily confused in uncial MSS (Cobet *V.L.*² p. 432: cf. Heindorf on Prot. 354 B). Owing to νῦν, οἱ ἄλλοι can only mean 'the rest of mankind,' and the Guardians are therefore virtually spoken of as a section of living men. This kind of looseness is not uncommon, though here it has no stylistic effect. An alternative view might be to understand οἱ ἄλλοι of the rest of the citizens (τῶν ἄλλων below) and νῦν as 'in point of fact' or 'in our present discussion'; but this explanation is much less satisfactory. ὥς, which some inferior MSS write for ὡς, does not remove the inaccuracy in οἱ ἄλλοι: nor is οἶον ἄλλοι in IV 419 A precisely parallel, though it supports the view that οἱ ἄλλοι means 'the rest of mankind.'

12 ἀθλητὰς—πολέμου. VII 521 D n.

543 C 13 εἰς ἐνιαυτόν. Nothing is to remain over at the end of the year (III 416 E).

εἰς ταῦτα: viz. εἰς τὰ τῆς φυλακῆς etc. For the use of the pronoun cf. VII 536 A and infra 558 E n n. Madvig's εἰς τακτά is unnecessary, and ταξαμένους in III 416 D means something quite different.

15 ἀλλὰ γ' ἐπειδὴ κτλ.: 'yes, but after we finished that subject, let us recall where we digressed to come here, that we may resume the old path.' "γε ad sequentia ἐπειδὴ τοῦτ' ἀπετελέσαμεν pertinet et priora recte quidem dicta a Glaucone, sed unum idque non leve reliquum esse significat, quod item sit in memoriam revocandum, ut relicta viam denuo capessere possint" (Schneider).

The MSS fluctuate between ἀλλὰ γ' (the reading of A), ἀλλ' ἄγ' and ἀλλ' ἄγε (II), the last of which readings is adopted by all editors except Schneider. ἀλλὰ γε, though rare, is, I believe, firmly established in Plato: see on I 331 B. It fits the situation in this passage exactly, whereas ἀλλ' ἄγε does not, if we translate ἐπειδὴ τοῦτ' ἀπετελέσαμεν correctly, and not (with D. and V., Jowett etc.) by 'now that we have concluded the subject.' τοῦτο is not Books V—VII, but the arrangements of the earlier city of II—IV, as described in 543 B, C: and ἀπετελέσαμεν is aorist, not perfect. ἀναμνησθῶμεν (as Schneider observes) is necessitated by ἵνα—ἴωμεν, otherwise Socrates might simply have said ἀλλὰ γ' ἐπειδὴ τοῦτ' ἀπετελέσαμεν, πόθεν δεῦρο ἐξετραπόμεθα; There is moreover no need for so vigorous an exhortation to exercise the memory as would be conveyed by ἀλλ' ἄγε ἀναμνησθῶμεν, especially as Glauco's recollection had left nothing to be desired in B and C above.

17 καθάπερ νῦν. νῦν refers to 541 B. ὥς διεληλυθὼς—πόλεως: "quasi disputatione de civitate absoluta" (Stallbaum): cf. v 450 A. The MSS vary between this reading, and ὥς διελήλυθας or διελήλυθας alone: but A (with which II² and several other MSS agree) is certainly right.

18 λέγων κτλ. V 449 A.

543 D 19 καὶ ταῦτα κτλ.: 'and that, too, though, as it seems, you could have told us of a still more beautiful city and man' viz. the city of the philosopher-king and the philosopher-king himself, afterwards described by Socrates in v 472 B—VII. The city of V—VII is spoken of as a different city from that of II—IV: see on ἐν μὲν τῇ προτέρᾳ ἐκλογῇ VII 536 C, II 372 D n., and Hirzel

20 ἔοικας, καλλίω ἔτι ἔχων εἰπεῖν πόλιν τε καὶ ἄνδρα. ἀλλ' | οὖν 54 δὴ τὰς ἄλλας ἡμαρτημένας ἔλεγες, εἰ αὕτη ὀρθή. τῶν δὲ λοιπῶν πολιτειῶν ἔφησθα, ὡς μνημονεύω, τέτταρα εἶδη εἶναι, ὧν καὶ πέρι λόγον ἄξιον εἶη ἔχειν καὶ ἰδεῖν αὐτῶν τὰ ἁμαρτήματα καὶ τοὺς 5 ἐκείναις αὐτοῖς ὁμοίους, ἵνα πάντας αὐτοὺς ἰδόντες καὶ ὁμολογησάμενοι τὸν ἄριστον καὶ τὸν κάκιστον ἄνδρα ἐπισκεψαίμεθα, εἰ ὁ ἄριστος εὐδαιμονέστατος καὶ ὁ κάκιστος ἀθλιώτατος ἢ ἄλλως ἔχοι· καὶ ἐμοῦ ἐρομένου, τίνας λέγοις τὰς τέτταρας πολιτείας, ¹ ἐν τούτῳ B ὑπέλαβε Πολέμαρχος τε καὶ Ἀδείμαντος, καὶ οὕτω δὴ σὺ ἀνα-10 λαβὼν τὸν λόγον δεῦρ' ἀφίξαι. Ὁρθότατα, εἶπον, ἐμνημόνευσας.
 Πάλιν τοίνυν, ὥσπερ παλαιστής, τὴν αὐτὴν λαβὴν παρέχε, καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἐμοῦ ἐρομένου πειρῶ εἰπεῖν, ἅπερ τότε ἐμελλες λέγειν.
 Ἐάνπερ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, δύνωμαι. Καὶ μὲν, ἦ δ' ὅς, ἐπιθυμῶ καὶ αὐτὸς ἀκούσαι, τίνας ἔλεγες τὰς τέτταρας πολιτείας. ¹ Οὐ χαλεπῶς, ἦι C 15 δ' ἐγώ, ἀκούσει. εἰσὶ γὰρ αἱ λέγω, αἵπερ καὶ ὀνόματα ἔχουσιν, ἦ τε ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν ἐπαινουμένη, ἡ Κρητικὴ τε καὶ Λακωνικὴ

Der Dialog pp. 235 ff. Jowett's translation "although, as now appears, you had more excellent things to relate both of State and man" is a defensible construction, but unnatural, and certainly not what Plato meant. The passage has been curiously misunderstood by some critics, through inattention to the force of the imperfect participle ἔχων. Herwerden, for example, actually proposes to insert <οὐ> before καλλίω. Schneider and Stallbaum translate the sentence correctly.

544 A 3 ἔφησθα κτλ. IV 445 C. On the pronouns ὧν—αὐτῶν see II 357 B n. Plato is very careful to make it clear that he does not profess, like Aristotle, to give a complete account of faulty States. From his watch-tower he can descry infinite varieties, but only four on which he need expatiate. We may take it that these are, in Plato's view, the four most conspicuous landmarks in the history of political degeneration, as well as the most important and clearly-outlined varieties of existing States. Cf. IV 445 C and infra 544 D ἥτις καὶ ἐν εἰδὲ διαφανεῖ τι νικεῖται.

5 ἵνα πάντας κτλ. reminds us of the thread which is the clue to the labyrinthine reasoning of the Republic: cf. 545 A, 548 D and II 368 E n.

7 ἔχοι. The optative, for which Ast and Stallbaum needlessly read ἔχει with Ξg and some other inferior MSS, is due to the oratio obliqua: cf. VII 515 D n.

8 ἐρομένου. V 449 A.

544 B II ὥσπερ παλαιστής. The Scholiast remarks ἔθος γὰρ τοῖσι, ὅταν πέσωσιν ὁμοῦ—πάλιν ἐγερθέντας ἐφ' ὁμοῖω συμπλακῆναι σχήματι, ὅπερ τὴν αὐτὴν εἶπε λαβὴν. Plato, as Stallbaum points out, uses the same figure in Phaedr. 236 B: cf. Phil. 13 D, Laws 682 E and ἀντιλαμβάνομενος VI 505 A n.

13 ἐπιθυμῶ—ἀκούσαι: 'I am desirous also on my own account to hear' sc. apart from the half-polemical motive suggested by the figure. Herwerden remarks "locus vix sanus," but it is sound enough, although the English translators ("I shall particularly wish" etc. Jowett) miss the meaning.

544 C 15 ἡ τε—ἐπαινουμένη. The Spartan constitution in its palmy days was widely praised for εὐνομία and discipline (pseudo-Archytas in Mullach Frag. Philos. Gr. I p. 560, Xen. Mem. III 5. 15 f., IV 4. 15, Plato Hipp. Mai. 283 E, 285 B, Laws 692 C and elsewhere), and became on this ground a sort of political ideal in the eyes of many Greeks: see for example Isocr. Panath. 108 ff. 200 ff. 216 ff. and the fragments of Critias' Λακεδαιμονίων πολιτεία in Müller Frag. Hist. Gr. II pp. 68 f. Cf. Noble Statistik Plat. pp. 108 ff. and Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 57 ff.

αὕτη· καὶ δευτέρα καὶ δευτέρως ἐπαινουμένη, καλουμένη δ' ὀλιγαρχία, συχνῶν γέμουσα κακῶν πολιτεία· ἥ τε ταύτη διάφορος καὶ ἐφεξῆς γιγνομένη δημοκρατία, καὶ ἡ γενναία δὴ τυραννὶς καὶ πασῶν τούτων διαφέρουσα, τέταρτόν τε καὶ ἔσχατον πόλεως 20
D νόσημα. ἥ τίνα ἄλλην ἔχεις ἰδέαν πολιτείας, ἥτις καὶ ἐν εἶδει διαφανεῖ τινι κεῖται; δυναστεία γὰρ καὶ ὠνηταὶ βασιλεῖαι καὶ

19. καὶ πασῶν Π: καὶ ἡ πασῶν A.

20. διαφέρουσα Ξ: διαφεύγουσα AΠq.

✓ 17 αὕτη: ista 'that of yours,' 'your Cretan and Lacedaemonian constitution.' On their connexion see Arist. Pol. B 10. 127^{1b} 22 ff. with Susemihl and Hicks's notes. It is, I think, fanciful to see in αὕτη an allusion to Glauco's sympathies for Sparta, in spite of 548 D below.

καὶ δευτέρως. Hermann prints his own conjecture ἡ δευτέρως, but the common confusion of καὶ and ἡ (Bast Comm. Pol. p. 815) is, I believe, later than the date of Paris A, and the text is free from objection: 'and second in order as in esteem, a constitution fraught with many evils, bearing the name of oligarchy.' δευτέρα agrees with πολιτεία, not with ὀλιγαρχία.

18 διάφορος: not of course 'different' (as Jowett), but 'antagonistic,' adversaria (Stallbaum). διάφορος 'different' gives a poor sense, and would take the genitive, which Ast erroneously proposed to read. Greek history furnished only too many proofs of the natural feud between democracy and oligarchy: see Greenidge Gk Const. Hist. pp. 208 ff. and Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II p. 285 n. 2.

19 ἐφεξῆς γιγνομένη. From this and other indications it would appear on a first perusal that the sequence of commonwealths in VIII and IX is intended by Plato to be not merely logical, but historical also; but there is no question that the political evolution of Greek constitutions was far more complex than would appear from Plato's description. See on 543 A. We must above all things remember that it is in order to furnish a picture of the worst city and the worst man that the whole of this enquiry is undertaken, and Plato is at liberty to adopt whatever mode of presentation is best adapted for the object which he has in view. The form which he does in point of fact select is that of a historical narrative (see on 543 A, 548 D), but the real order of the development which he describes is a 'logical order,' and is primarily determined by psychological, and not by historical considerations. Although there are many points of contact between the development of Greek constitutional history and Plato's arrangement, Plato here employs narration primarily and chiefly as a vehicle or instrument for expressing the results of psychological analysis, and not because he believes that political development always and inevitably follows the same lines. See also on 543 A and infra 544 D.

20 διαφέρουσα κτλ. The reading of Ξ—see cr. n.—is confirmed by v and two other MSS, as well as by Stobaeus (Flor. 43. 115) and Ficinus (ab his omnibus differens). All other MSS appear to have διαφεύγουσα. "Errori—occasionem pronuntiatio non absimilis dedisse videtur" (Schneider). The word does not mean 'differs' (as Jowett) but 'excels' (ironically, of course, like ἡ γενναία δὴ). Father Rickaby has suggested to me that we should read καὶ ἡ πασῶν τούτων διαφέρουσα, ἡ γενναία δὴ τυραννὶς, τέταρτον κτλ. The conjecture is an attractive one, both on other grounds and also because it enables us to retain the article which appears before πασῶν (see cr. n.) in A: but it is perhaps safer to follow Ξ.

21 νόσημα. Greek political theory regards tyrants as νοσήματα τῶν πόλεων (Isocr. Hel. 34: cf. Henkel l. c. p. 156).

ἡ τίνα. Ast and others write ἡ τίνα (with slight MS support), but τίνα is perfectly good: cf. IX 573 A.

ἐν εἶδει διαφανεῖ τινι. See on 544 A.

544 D 22 δυναστεία. δυναστεία is that form of polity in which the son succeeds the father καὶ ἀρχὴ μὴ ὁ νόμος ἀλλ' οἱ ἄρχοντες (Arist. Pol. Δ 5. 1292^b 5 ff.: cf. Laws 680 A, B). Such a πολιτεία might be good, but was of course generally bad: see Susemihl and Hicks on Arist. Pol. B 10. 1272^b 3. Examples are pro-τοιαῦταί τινες πολιτεῖαι μεταξύ τι τούτων πού εἰσιν, εὔροι δ' ἂν τις αὐτὰς οὐκ ἐλάττους περὶ τοὺς βαρβάρους ἢ τοὺς Ἕλληνας.

25 Πολλαὶ γοῦν καὶ ἄτοποι, ἔφη, λέγονται.

II. Οἷσθ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι καὶ ἀνθρώπων εἶδη τοσαῦτα ἀνάγκη τρόπων εἶναι, ὅσαπερ καὶ πολιτειῶν; ἢ οἷε ἐκ δρυὸς ποθεν ἢ ἐκ πέτρας τὰς πολιτείας γίγνεσθαι, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ ἐκ τῶν ἡθῶν τῶν ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν, ἃ ἂν ὥσπερ ῥέψαντα τάλλα ἐφελκύσῃται; E
30 Οὐδαμῶς ἔγωγ', ἔφη, ἄλλοθεν ἢ ἐντεῦθεν. Οὐκοῦν εἰ τὰ τῶν πόλεων πέντε, καὶ αἱ τῶν ἰδιωτῶν κατασκευαὶ τῆς ψυχῆς πέντε ἂν εἶεν. Τί μὴν; Τὸν μὲν δὴ τῇ ἀριστοκρατίᾳ ὅμοιον διεληλύθαμεν ἤδη, ὃν ἀγαθόν τε καὶ δίκαιον ὀρθῶς φαμέν εἶναι. | Διεληλύθαμεν. 545
Ἄρ' οὖν τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο διυτέον τοὺς χείρους, τὸν φιλόνομικόν τε καὶ φιλότιμον, κατὰ τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἐστῶτα πολιτείαν, καὶ ὀλιγαρχικὸν

28. ἡθῶν τῶν A²Π: ἡθῶν A¹.

33. ἡδὴ A²Π: δὴ A¹.

vided by Thessaly (Thuc. IV 78. 3) and (about 480 B.C.) Thebes (Thuc. III 62. 3: cf. Gilbert Griech. Staatsalt. II pp. 10, 46). See Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 124—126.

ὦνται βασιλεῖαι: like Carthage (Arist. I.c. II. 1273^a 36 with Susemihl and Hicks p. 349). Herwerden sins through ignorance when he proposes alphabet for ὦνται.

23 τοιαῦταί τινες: such as, for example, αἰσυμητεία, and the other specific varieties (as Aristotle reckons them) of Plato's typical πολιτεῖαι: see Pol. I, Δ, Z passim.

εὔροι δ' ἂν κτλ.: whereas Plato confines himself to Greek history throughout VIII and IX.

26 καὶ ἀνθρώπων κτλ. Cf. IV 445 C, and on the principle here laid down see IV 435 E u. The present passage is a clear and emphatic statement of the psychological basis on which Plato's philosophy of History rests. Political ἀδικία, like political δικαιοσύνη (IV 443 B u.), is after all no more than εἰδωλόν τι: injustice in the truest sense is στάσις within the individual soul (IV 444 B), and social and political wrong-doing is but its outward manifestation. The double genitive, which is easy enough (cf. E below and V 449 A u.), has led to the corruption τρόπον τινά in several MSS. Liebhold also suggests καὶ τρόπων instead of τρόπων. The expression εἶδη τρόπων ('specific characters') is treated as a single word, and should be repeated with πολιτειῶν: cf. IV 445 C ὅσοι πολιτειῶν τρόποι εἰσιν εἶδη ἔχοντες, τοσοῦτοι κινδυνεύουσι καὶ ψυχῆς τρόποι εἶναι (a passage which proves, I think, that Schneider and Stallbaum are wrong in supplying only εἶδη with ὅσαπερ κτλ.).

27 ἐκ δρυὸς κτλ. Hom. Od. XIX 162 f. ἀλλὰ καὶ ὥς μοι εἶπε τεὸν γένος, ὅππότεν ἐσσί: οὐ γὰρ ἀπὸ δρυὸς ἐσσι παλαιφάτου οὐδ' ἀπὸ πέτρης, i.e. you have a γένος (cf. Ap. 34 D) and are not miraculously sprung ἀγενεαλογήτως out of tree or stone, like the fabled men of old (see Preller-Robert Gr. Myth. p. 79 u. 4). In Plato the saying is used much like the German 'es ist doch nicht aus der Luft gefallen' (Schück de scholiis p. 32, where the proverb is illustrated).

544 E 29 ἃ ἂν κτλ. οἱ ἂν was read till Schneider on the authority of Ξ; but ἃ ἂν (AII and a large majority of MSS) is quite satisfactory. "Reipublicae formae eos dicuntur sequi mores, qui in quavis civitate veluti pondere praegravantes ad se suamque regionem attraxerint reliqua" (Schneider, comparing for ῥέψαντα Hdt. VII 139). The word ῥέψαντα (Ξ and some other MSS) is unattic (Lobeck Phryn. p. 738): Plato's form is ῥέντα e.g. VI 495 B.

33 ὀρθῶς is more naturally taken with φαμέν (Jowett etc.) than with the adjectives (as Schneider). We rightly call him 'good' etc., because he is ὅμοιος ἀριστοκρατίᾳ.

αὐ καὶ δημοκρατικὸν καὶ τὸν τυραννικόν, ἵνα τὸν ἀδικώτατον ἰδόντες ἀντιθῶμεν τῷ δικαιοτάτῳ καὶ ἡμῖν τελέα ἢ σκέψις ἦ, πῶς ποτὲ ἢ 5 ἄκρατος δικαιοσύνη πρὸς ἀδικίαν τὴν ἄκρατον ἔχει εὐδαιμονίας τε πέρι τοῦ ἔχοντος καὶ ἀθλιότητος, ἵνα ἡ Θρασυμάχῳ πειθόμενοι
 B διώκωμεν ἀδικίαν ἢ τῷ νῦν προφαινομένῳ λόγῳ δικαιοσύνην; Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, οὕτω ποιητέον. Ἄρ' οὖν, ὥσπερ ἡρξά-μεθα ἐν ταῖς πολιτείαις πρότερον σκοπεῖν τὰ ἥθη ἢ ἐν τοῖς ἰδιώταις, 10 ὡς ἐναργέστερον ὂν, καὶ νῦν οὕτω πρῶτον μὲν τὴν φιλότιμον σκεπτέον πολιτείαν· ὄνομα γὰρ οὐκ ἔχω λεγόμενον ἄλλο· ἢ 54F τιμοκρατίαν ἢ τιμαρχίαν αὐτὴν κλητέον· πρὸς δὲ ταύτην τὸν C τοιοῦτον ἄνδρα σκεψόμεθα, ἔπειτα ὀλιγαρχίαν καὶ ἄνδρα ὀλι-γαρχικόν, αὐθις δὲ εἰς δημοκρατίαν ἀποβλέψαντες θεασόμεθα 15

13. ταύτην A¹Π: ταύτη A².

545 A 4 ἵνα κτλ. See 544 A n.

545 B 9 ἡρξάμεθα. II 368 E n.

12 ὄνομα γὰρ κτλ.: 'for I have no other name in our language for it: we must call it either "timarchy" or "timocracy"' ("Ehrenherrschaft oder Ehrenobmacht" Schneider). Plato called the constitution in question φιλότιμος πολιτεία, which may be cumbersome, but is certainly Greek. If we want a single name, we must, he says, invent: and either τιμαρχία or τιμοκρατία will do. The Oxford editors erroneously suggest that ἡ—κλητέον is interrogative: nor is there any reason to suspect the text, as W. H. Thompson did. Both of Plato's coinages survived, but they never became popular, and were used in another sense from Plato's—τιμοκρατία with the meaning of the vox nihili τιμηματοκρατία or ἡ ἀπὸ τιμημάτων ἀρχή (Arist. Eth. Nic. VIII 12. 1160^a 36) and τιμαρχία for the Roman censorship (Stephanus-Hase Thes. s.v.).

13 πρὸς—ταύτην='ad hanc': cf. IX 577 B and Tim. 24 A τοὺς μὲν οὖν νόμους σκόπει πρὸς τοὺς τῆδε (Schneider).

545 C—547 C How does Timarchy arise out of Aristocracy? We may lay it down as a universal rule that constitutional change is originated by dissension within the governing class. Socrates invokes the Muses to tell 'how first sedition entered.' Like everything else, our perfect city is subject to Nature's universal law, that whatever is created perishes. Out of the elements of the number which expresses the shortest period of gestation in the human kind, Socrates builds up a 'geometrical number,' which he calls 'the lord of better and worse births.' When, through ignorance of these, couples are united inopportunely, as one day they will be, a degenerate race of offspring arises. The best of these in due course become rulers; but the mixture of races—golden, silver, copper, iron—waxes greater, and sedition is the result. The contending parties finally, by means of a compromise, effect the transition to Timarchy—a form of commonwealth standing midway between Aristocracy and Oligarchy.

545 C ff. I have discussed the famous 'Number of Plato' at length in Appendix I, and must refer the reader to that Appendix for a fuller justification of views which considerations of space preclude me from defending totis viribus throughout the notes. The connexion of the episode with the argument of the Republic may be expressed as follows. In accordance with the form of a historical narrative which he employs throughout these two books, Plato invites us to conceive of his perfect city as having actually existed long ago, just as in the Timaeus (23 C ff.) and Critias (109 B ff.) the Platonic Utopia appears as prehistoric Athens. In making this demand upon the imagination of his countrymen, Plato could count upon the support to be derived from the prevalence of the view that mankind had degenerated from an age of innocence and bliss in the far-distant past: see the references in my ἄνδρα δημοκρατικόν, τὸ δὲ τέταρτον εἰς τυραννουμένην πόλιν ἐλθόντες καὶ ἰδόντες, πάλιν εἰς τυραννικὴν ψυχὴν βλέποντες, πειρασόμεθα περὶ ὧν προϋθέμεθα ἱκανοὶ κριταὶ γενέσθαι; Κατὰ λόγον γέ τοι ἄν, ἔφη, οὕτω γίγνοιτο ἢ τε θέα καὶ ἡ κρίσις.

20 III. Φέρε τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πειρώμεθα λέγειν, τίνα τρόπον edition of the Protagoras p. xxiii and Rohde Griech. Roman pp. 216 ff. What, then, was the originating cause of degeneration? Plato finds the cause, not in anything peculiar to the Ideal city, but in a law which prevails throughout the whole of Nature—the law that everything created is doomed to decay. There cannot be any ἴδιος μεταβολή (to quote the phrase of Aristotle Pol. E 12. 1316^a 12) of a perfect City; for a city which carries within itself the seeds of decay is not perfect, but imperfect. In the sequel Plato first describes the manner in which degeneration begins to take effect (οὐ μόνον—δὲν 546 A, B), and afterwards proceeds to construct a Number which is the expression of that law of inevitable degeneration to which the Universe and all its parts are subject. The substance of what he has to say on the first head is that a psychologically inferior offspring gradually makes its appearance because children are sometimes begotten inopportunistly. It is noteworthy that here, as everywhere in Books VIII and IX, the decline of the constitution or soul of the State (543 A n.) is traced to the decline of the soul of the individual. In the words ἀνθρωπεῖω δὲ—τρίδος (546 B, C), Plato, copying the method of the Pythagoreans, and closely following their calculations, at all events in the first part of the reckoning, attempts to give an arithmetical expression to the Law of Change in that which he calls the γεωμετρικὸς ἀριθμός. According to the view which I have endeavoured to establish in Appendix I, the arithmetic, in which each of the factors and processes involved was full of significance to ancient speculators on the theory of numbers, may be thus expressed in modern arithmetical notation:

$$(1) \quad 3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216.$$

$$(2) \quad (3 \times 4 \times 5)^2 = 12,960,000 \\ = 3600^2 = 4800 \times 2700.$$

The first number, 216, is the shortest period of gestation in the human race expressed in days. In the second equation, the number 12,960,000 expresses, also in days, the duration of a Great Year in the life of the Universe. Expressed in years, the number is 36,000, if we count, as Plato here does, 360 days in the year. The two 'harmonies,' 3600² and 4800 × 2700, are the two cycles described in the Politicus, each of which is a Great Year. In the first ομοίτης prevails, in the second ἀνομοίτης: the World 'waxes' in the first, and 'waned' in the second, without, however, suffering dissolution. In what sense the whole number 36,000 years, which astronomers sometimes called the Platonicus annus in the middle ages, is at once the numerical Cause of Change, and the 'lord of better and worse births,' is pointed out in App. I, Pt ii § 7, and also in the notes on 546 C. How far Plato attached a serious value to his Number and the calculations from which he derives it, I have briefly discussed at the end of App. I, Pt ii. Here it must suffice to say that the episode, like many other passages in Plato, is half-serious, and half-playful. The setting of the whole is mythical, for it is only for literary and artistic purposes that Plato pictures his ideal city as historically true: and the meaning of the latter part of the Number is deciphered by the aid of one of Plato's myths. Moreover, the style of the whole passage, though extraordinarily rhetorical and highly-wrought, acquires a touch of fantastic humour from the bewildering parade of mathematical terms, at some of which even Plato's own contemporaries would probably have smiled. On its serious side, the Number affords an interesting example of the application of Number and Mathematics to explain the life of the Universe and Man; and, as I have said in the Appendix, finds its fittest apology in the saying θεὸς ἀεὶ γεωμετεῖ. It is of some importance in the history of philosophy because of its connexion with Pythagorean embryology and physics, and its employment by the Neoplatonists to justify the wildest astrological vagaries. The extreme difficulty of the Greek has made the Platonic

Δ τιμοκρατία γένοιτ' ἂν ἐξ ἀριστοκρατίας. ἡ τόδε μὲν ἰ ἀπλοῦν, ὅτι πᾶσα πολιτεία μεταβάλλει ἐξ αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἔχοντος τὰς ἀρχάς, ὅταν ἐν αὐτῷ τούτῳ στάσις ἐγγένηται· ὁμονοοῦντος δέ, καὶ πάνν ὀλίγον ἦ, ἀδύνατον κινήθηναι; Ἔστι γὰρ οὕτω. Πῶς οὖν δὴ, εἶπον, ὦ Γλαύκων, ἡ πόλις ἡμῖν κινήθήσεται, καὶ πῇ στασιάσουσιν οἱ ἐπί- 25 κουροι καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους τε καὶ πρὸς ἑαυτούς; ἡ βούλει, ὥσπερ "Ομηρος, εὐχόμεθα ταῖς Μούσαις εἰπεῖν ἡμῖν, ὅπως Ε δὴ πρῶτον στάσις ἔμπεσε, καὶ φῶμεν αὐτὰς ἰ τραγικῶς, ὡς πρὸς παῖδας ἡμᾶς παιζούσας καὶ ἐρεσχηλούσας, ὡς δὴ σπουδῇ 546 λεγούσας, ὑψηλολογουμένας λέγειν; Πῶς; Ὡδέ πως. | χαλεπὸν 30 μὲν κινήθηναι πόλιν οὕτω ξυστᾶσαν· ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ γενομένην παντὶ φθορά ἐστίν, οὐδ' ἡ τοιαύτη ξύστασις τὸν ἅπαντα μενεῖ χρόνον, ἀλλὰ λυθήσεται. λύσις δὲ ἦδε· οὐ μόνον φυτοῖς ἐγγείοις, ἀλλὰ

Number a favourite hunting-ground of successive generations of scholars, and the works which have been written on the subject, a few of which are mentioned in the Appendix, are very numerous.

545 D 21 ἀπλοῦν. See on I 351 A. For the statement itself cf. Laws 683 E ff. Aristotle, whose standpoint is historical rather than psychological, enumerates many and diverse causes of revolutionary change (Pol. E passim).

24 κινήθηναι: an ominous word, used here, as constantly throughout Greek literature, of constitutional changes for the worse.

27 ὅπως δὴ κτλ. An imitation of Hom. Il. XVI 112 f. ἔσπετε νῦν μοι, μούσαι—ὅππως δὴ πρῶτον πῦρ ἔμπεσε νηυσὶν Ἀχαιῶν. Homer appeals to the Muses at the turning-point of his narrative (see Leaf ad loc.); and Plato, like Milton ("Of man's first disobedience and the fruit Of that forbidden tree, sing heavenly Muse"), fitly invokes them at the commencement of his Epic of the Fall of Man. Cf. Tim. 27 C.

28 καὶ φῶμεν κτλ.: 'and shall we say that they speak in the lofty tragic vein, as if it were all earnest, whereas it is only the banter of the Muses playing with us as if we were little children?' Instead of φῶμεν, I once suggested θῶμεν (cf. Laws 654 A and 677 C), but φῶμεν, which is in all MSS, though less picturesque, may stand. Herwerden's excision of παιζούσας καὶ obliterates a tender touch; for there is of course a play on παῖδας (cf. VII 536 E η.). The remarks of Proclus in

Tim. 300 C ff. on the style of this and similar passages deserve to be quoted: ὁ δὲ χαρακτήρ τῶν λόγων ἐστὶν ἐνθουσιαστικός, διαλάμπων ταῖς νοεραῖς ἐπιβολαῖς, καθαρὸς τε καὶ σεμνὸς—ἐξηλλαγμένος τε καὶ ὑπερέχων τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἐννοιῶν, ἄβρὸς τε ὁμοῦ καὶ καταπληκτικός καὶ χαρίτων ἀνάμεστος κάλλους τε πλήρης καὶ σύντομος ἅμα καὶ ἀπηκριβωμένος. 'The Muses playing' warns us that there is an element of the mythical and fantastic in what follows, but by no means implies that it is fooling and nothing more. See on 545 C and App. I, Pt ii ad fin.

546 A 2 γενομένην κτλ. This is a universally recognised principle of ancient philosophy, alluded to again by Plato in Tim. 41 A. Cf. Arist. de cael. I 12. 282^b 8 τὸ γὰρ γενετὸν καὶ τὸ φθαρτὸν ἀκολουθοῦσιν ἀλλήλοις and ib. 10. 279^b 20 ἅπαντα γὰρ τὰ γινόμενα καὶ φθειρόμενα φαίνεται. That τὸ ἀγέννητον is ἀφθαρτον and τὸ ἀφθαρτον ἀγέννητον was also held (cf. Phaedr. 245 D, Arist. l. c. 282^a 30 ff., al.): hence Plato always regards the pre-existence and immortality of the soul as involving one another. γένεσις is here, as usual, σύγκρισις, and φθορά διάκρισις. The point of ἐπεὶ—ἐστίν is that the cause of decay is not contained in the ideal city itself—the city would be less than ideal if it were—but springs from a universal law of Nature, to which the city, like everything else, is necessarily subject: see on 545 C and App. I, Pt iii.

+ λύσις δὲ ἦδε κτλ. Here begins Plato's description of the mode of dissolution. οὐ μόνον—ἐναντίας, literally trans-

5 καὶ ἐν ἐπιγείοις ζώοις φορὰ καὶ ἀφορία ψυχῆς τε καὶ σωμάτων γίνονται, ὅταν περιτροπαὶ ἐκάστοις κύκλων περιφορὰς συνάπτωσι, βραχυβίοις μὲν βραχυπόρους, ἐναντίοις δὲ ἐναντίας· γένους δὲ ὑμετέρου εὐγονίας τε καὶ ἀφορίας, καίπερ ὄντες σοφοὶ οὐδ' ἡγε- B μόνως πόλεως ἐπαιδεύσασθε, οὐδὲν μᾶλλον λογισμῷ μετ' αἰσθήσεως 10 τεύξονται, ἀλλὰ πάρεισιν αὐτοὺς καὶ γεννήσουσι παῖδάς ποτε οὐ δέον. ἔστι δὲ θείῳ μὲν γεννητῷ περίοδος, ἣν ἀριθμὸς περιλαμ-βάνει τέλειος, ἀνθρωπείῳ δὲ ἐν ᾧ πρῶτῳ αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε

Fig. 1.

often as turnings-round join for each species' (of animals, plants etc.) 'circumferences of circles faring a short way for the short-lived, and the reverse for the reverse.' See Fig. 1. Suppose the revolution starts at the fixed point A. The circumference is joined as soon as the revolving wheel reaches A again, and at that point there is φορὰ ψυχῆς τε καὶ σώματος, if the seed was sown at A and has come safely to maturity. If the seed was not sown, or, though sown, did not take root or miscarried on the way, there is ἀφορία. The phrase is only a fantastic way of saying ὅταν περίοδοι ἐκάστοις ἀποτελεσθῶσιν. The περιφορὰ of a short-lived species is βραχύπορος and conversely, because short-lived creatures have short periods of gestation, and long-lived creatures long (Arist. de gen. an. IV 10. 777^a 31 ff., al. See App. I, Pt ii § 2). Soul, viewed merely as the vital principle, is one and the same in every organic creature: hence the singular ψυχῇ (App. I. c.). This explanation, so far as I know, is new, the περίοδος being generally supposed to be 'Umlaufszeit.' Cf. App. I. c. 546 A, B 7 γένους δὲ κτλ. The literal translation is: 'Now of your kind' (i.e. mankind: it is the Muses who are speaking), 'clever though the leaders of the city be whom you educated' (the middle of personal interest IV 421 E n.), 'none the more will they by calculation together with perception obtain' (lit. hit the obtaining of) 'good offspring and no offspring, but it will escape them, and the time will come when they will beget children wrongly or inopportunist' (cf. παρὰ καιρὸν 546 D). In arranging matters connected with marriages and the treatment of children etc., the rulers of our city employ both λογισμός and αἴσθησις. αἴσθησις helps them to decide what couples should be joined, what children should be reared etc.: by λογισμός they calculate what number of marriages they should permit ἵνα ὡς μάλιστα διασφύξωσι τὸν αὐτὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν ἀνδρῶν (V 460 A) etc.: see App. I, Pt ii § 2. But however well they use these instruments, the time will come when children are begotten οὐ δέον. The fault lies not with the rulers, but with the inevitable law of Change, which is beginning to affect our city together with the rest of the Universe. ἀφορίας is said, because the rulers must if possible make illicit unions unproductive (V 461 c). Possibly the εὐ of εὐγονίας may affect ἀφορίας also: cf. 555 A n. See also App. I. c.

11 ἔστι δὲ—τέλειος. 'For a divine creature, there is a period comprehended by a number which is final.' The 'divine creature' is the World: it is θεῖον, because it is a God, γεννητόν, because it is created (i.e. has been brought out of chaos into order). Cf. Tim. 30 A and Proclus in Tim. 89 D. With περιλαμβάνει cf. Theat. 148 A. The ἀριθμὸς τέλειος is the period expressing the gestation of the Universe, i.e. the time which its creation occupies. For the metaphor cf. the Orphic verses cited by Proclus in Tim. 94 B and 95 E. The number is a final or consummating number because it καὶ δυναστεύμεναι, τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὅρους λαβοῦσαι, ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ ἀυξόντων καὶ φθινόντων.

τελειοὶ τὴν γένεσιν: cf. Theol. Ar. p. 58 ed. Ast. Plato wisely leaves this number shrouded in silence and obscurity. See App. I, Pt ii § 3 for a full discussion of the sentence.

12 ἀνθρωπεῖ δὲ—ἀπέφηναν gives us the períodos or period of gestation for the human creature: 'and for a human creature the number is the first in which root-and-square increases, comprehending three distances and four limits, of elements that make like and unlike and wax and wane, render all things conversable and rational with one another.' The construction is ἀνθρωπεῖ δὲ <γεννητῷ ἔστιν ἀριθμὸς> ἐν ᾧ κτλ., and that is itself short for ἀνθρωπεῖ δὲ <γεννητῷ ἔστι περίοδος ἣν ἀριθμὸς περιλαμβάνει> ἐν ᾧ κτλ. The 'first' number is of course the first number after unity. αὐξήσεις 'increases' may in itself mean either 'additions' or 'multiplications.' δυνάμεναι refers to 'roots' (cf. Eucl. x def. 11), δυναστεύμεναι to 'squares' (Procl. in remp. comm. ed. Kroll II p. 36. 9—12 et al.), and 'root-and-square increases' means either 'additions of roots to squares' or 'multiplications of roots by squares.' τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις etc. shew that multiplications and not additions are meant. The three distances are μῆκος, πλάτος and βάθος, and the four ὅροι their attendant limits. Thus in Fig. 2 AB,

Fig. 2.

BC, CD are the three ἀποστάσεις, AB μῆκος, BC πλάτος, CD βάθος, and A, B, C, D the four ὅροι. Cf. Nic. Introd. Ar. p. 116 Ast εἴ τι γὰρ στερεόν ἐστιν, τὰς τρεῖς διαστάσεις—they are called ἀποστάσεις in Theol. Ar. p. 23—πάντως ἔχει, μῆκος, πλάτος καὶ βάθος· καὶ ἐμπαλιν εἴ τι ἔχει τὰς τρεῖς διαστάσεις, ἐκείνο πάντως στερεόν ἐστιν, ἄλλο δ' οὐδέν: also Iambl. in Nic. Introd. Ar. p. 93 Pistelli στερεὸς δὲ ἐστὶν ἀριθμὸς ὁ τρίτον διάστημα παρὰ τὰ ἐν ἐπιπέδοις δύο προσειληφώς, δηλονότι τετάρτου ὅρου προσγενομένου· ἐν γὰρ τέσσαρσιν ὅροις τὸ τριχῇ διαστατόν, Arist. Top. Z 5. 142^b 24f. and many other passages quoted in App. I, Pt i § 1. Consequently the arithmetical meaning of αὐξήσεις—λαβοῦσαι is merely 'root-and-square multiplications' i.e. 'multiplications of root by square,' in other words cubings (thus $w \times w^2 = w^3$, $x \times x^2 = x^3$, $y \times y^2 = y^3$), or κυβικαὶ αὐξήσεις, a phrase which itself might well have been employed by Plato, except that he has an object in drawing attention to the different stages in the process of augmentation (see App. I, Pt ii § 4); and partly also he wants the Muses to preserve their character as ὑψηλολογούμεναι. The period of human gestation is therefore the first number, in which 'cubings make everything ῥητὰ πρὸς ἄλλα'—but 'cubings of what? The answer is 'of elements which make like and unlike and wax and wane.' These elements are the numbers 3, 4 and 5, which measure the three sides of the Pythagorean ζωογονικὸν τρίγωνον (Procl. in remp. II p. 43. 10), the triangle which,

Fig. 3.

The Pythagorean triangle.

as we are informed by many authorities—Aristotle, Plutarch, Aristides Quintilianus, Proclus and others—Plato made use of in his Number. The antecedent of ὦν in ὦν ἐπίτριστος πυθμὴν περπάδι συνυγείς is ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων, and as ὦν ἐπίτριστος πυθμὴν means 'of which 4, 3,' Plato himself tells us two of the numbers, and the third is also readily suggested by περπάδι. 3, 4 and 5 are said to 'make like,' because, as we shall see, in the latter part of the Number, where the triangle fulfils its office as a κοσμικὸν τρίγωνον (Proclus l.c. II p. 45. 23), they produce the 'harmony' 3600², and square numbers are ὁμοιοί (Iambl. l.c. p. 82): they 'make unlike' because they produce the 'harmony' 4800 × 2700, and oblong numbers are ἀνόμοιοι (ib.): they are said to wax and wane in a figurative sense—to wax in the first harmony, which represents in a certain sense the waxing of the Universe, and to wane in the second, which represents its wane. As the elements out of which the Universe is formed, they may be said to grow with its growth, and decline with its decline. The words have also a further meaning as a description of 3, 4, 5 regarded as the ἀρχαί of everything which exists: see App. I, Pt ii § 5. Now the first number in which cubings of 3, 4 and 5 are present is $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216$, and Aristides Quintilianus, in the passage where he refers to Plato's number, speaking of the Pythagorean triangle, remarks ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ τῶν πλευρῶν ἐκάστην κατὰ βάθος αὐξήσαιμεν (βάθος γὰρ ἡ σώματος φύσις) ποιήσαιμεν ἂν τὸν διακόσια δεκάξ, ἰσαριθμον σύνεγγυς τῷ τῶν ἐπταμήνων (p. 151 Meibom). Aristotle also in Pol. E 12. 1316^a 5—8, according to Schneider's interpretation of his words, which I believe to be right, informs us that the whole number of this section is 216: see App. I, Pt iii. On πάντα—ἄλληλα see next note. In App. I, Pt ii § 4 I have fully treated of the meaning of all these calculations. The different mathematical terms are discussed in detail ib. Pt i § 1. My explanation of this passage is, as far as I can discover, new, except as regards αὐξήσεις—δυναστεύμεναι. Some other views are mentioned in App. I, Pt i § 1 ad fin. nn.

15 πάντα προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα ἀπέφηναν· ὦν ἐπίτριτος C

15 πάντα προσήγορα κτλ. Cf. Philol. Fr. 13 Mullach πάντα γνωστά καὶ ποτάγορα ἀλλήλοις—ἀπεργάζεται. The Pythagoreans asserted that the embryo develops according to the proportions of the ἁρμονία or musical scale. The first stage is complete in 6 days, the second in 8, and 8:6 is 'the fourth' (διὰ τεσσάρων). The third stage (making flesh) takes 9 days, and 9:6 is 'the fifth' (διὰ πέντε). In the next 12 days the body is formed: and 12:6 is the octave (διὰ πασών). Total 6+8+9+12=35, and 35 is a ἁρμονία (Plut. de anim. gen. in Tim. 1017 F). Now 216 = (6 × 35) + 6, so that 216 contains 6 ἁρμονίαι together with 6 times ἡ πάντων ἀρχή i.e. the unit (Excerpt. ex Nicom. in v. Jan's Mus. Script. Gr. p. 279), or if you like together with the marriage number 6. For the evidence and further details see App. I, Pt ii § 4.

546 C ὦν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν κτλ. In ἀνθρωπιῇ δέ—ἀπέφηναν the Pythagorean triangle was employed to construct the period of gestation for the microcosm or man: here it is used to construct two periods in the lifetime of the macrocosm or Universe, for that is what Plato means by the two 'harmonies.' The translation is: 'of which, 4, 3 married with 5, yields two harmonies when thrice increased, the one equal an equal number of times, so many times 100, the other of equal length one way, but oblong:—on the one side, of 100 squares of rational diameters of five diminished by one each, or if of irrational diameters, by two: on the other of one hundred cubes of three.' The antecedent of ὦν is ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων, which I have already interpreted as the numbers 3, 4, 5. Of these numbers (ὦν) the ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν i.e. 3, 4 (cf. Theo Smyrn. p. 80 ed. Hiller, Proclus l. c. 11 p. 37 ὁ ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν γ' καὶ δ'), is 'married' or 'coupled' with 5. That is to say, 3, 4, and 5 are multiplied together: whence we get $3 \times 4 \times 5 = 60$. 'Thrice increased' is 'three times multiplied by itself'; and 60 thrice increased is therefore $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60$. This sum, which is 12,960,000, yields two harmonies. One of the two harmonies is 'equal an equal number of times, viz. so many times 100,' in other words, it is a square (cf. Theat. 147 E) each of whose sides is a certain number of times 100 (for τοσαυτάκις cf. τοσοῦτον in Alc. I 108 E), viz. of course 36 times 100, for $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60 = 3600^2$. See Fig. 4.

Fig. 4.

The other harmony which $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60$ yields is a rectangle (with προμήκη cf.

πυθμὴν πεμπτάδι συζυγείς δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται τρίς αὐξηθεῖς, Theaet. 148 A), one of whose sides is one hundred cubes of 3, i.e. 2700, and the other the number which Plato describes in ἐκατὸν μὲν—δυσὶν. What is that number? ἀριθμοὶ ἀπὸ means 'cubes of' (cf. Procl. l. c. II p. 38. 9 et al.): the side in question is therefore '100 squares of'—what? Of the rational diameter of 5 etc. Now the 'rational diameter of 5' is the nearest rational number to the real diameter of a square whose side is 5 (Theo. l. c. pp. 43 ff. and other authorities). The real diameter of a square whose side is 5 is $\sqrt{50}$. See Fig. 5. $AC^2 = 5^2 + 5^2 = 50$ (by Pythagoras' famous εὕρημα Eucl. I 47): $\therefore AC = \sqrt{50}$. And the nearest rational number to $\sqrt{50}$ is 7: for $\sqrt{49} = 7$. Consequently 7 is 'the rational diameter' of 5. And 100 squares of 7 = $100 \times 49 = 4900$. But we are told to diminish the 100 squares by 1 each. Do so: $4900 - (1 \times 100) = 4800$. This side is therefore 4800. The words ἀρρήτων δὲ δυσὶν give us an alternative way of reaching the number 4800. The construction is <ἀπὸ> ἀρρήτων δὲ <διαμέτρων δεομένων> δυσὶν <ἐκάστων> = (or of 100) 'squares of irrational diameters of 5, wanting 2 each.' Now the irrational diameter of 5 is $\sqrt{50}$. Square this and it becomes 50. 100 squares of 50 = 5000. Subtract 2 from each square and you have $5000 - (2 \times 100) = 4800$. The two sides of the oblong are therefore

Fig. 5.

Fig. 6.

4800 and 2700 ('one hundred cubes of three'). The area is $4800 \times 2700 = 12,960,000$ which is $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60$. See Fig. 6. Thus the arithmetical meaning of this part of Plato's Number may be expressed by us as follows:

$$(3 \times 4 \times 5)^4 = 3600^2 = 4800 \times 2700.$$

In this explanation, which is defended at length in App. I, Pt i § 2, the most important novelty is my view of τρίς αὐξηθεῖς. Most, but not quite all, of the other expressions have been explained in the above way at one time or another, though never, as far as I have noticed, by any single critic. The meaning of ἐπίτριστος πυθμὴν was perfectly well known to ancient mathematicians: and Proclus fully understood the 'rational' and 'irrational' diameters of 5. The full explanation of ἐκατὸν μὲν—τριάδος is due to Barozzi, except that he did not multiply the sides. As regards τρίς αὐξηθεῖς, I believe that I have proved my view in App. I, Pt i § 2 and Pt iii. Here I will only say that just as in the increasing series 1, 60, 3600, 216000 the number 216000 or 60^3 is the 'third increase' (τρίτη αὐξή) of unity, so in the increasing series 60, 3600, 216000, 12960000, the number 12960000 or (as we express it, but as Plato, to whom 'power' means either 'square' or 'root,' never did or could express it, 60^4) is the third increase of 60.

16 συζυγείς. The metaphor is from marriage, and marriage, among the Pythagoreans, was usually expressed by multiplication. Thus 6, which is the product of the first male number 3 and the first female number 2, was called by them marriage. συζυγείσα also means 'multiplied with' in Proclus l. c. II p. 544 (App. I, Pt i § 2).

δύο ἁρμονίας. The square and oblong may be regarded as ἁρμονίαι because in them, as in the number 216 above, all things are προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἀλλήλα. Thus $12,960,000 = (35 + 1) \times 360,000$, so that, as 35 is a ἁρμονία, 12,960,000 contains the portentous number of 360,000 ἁρμονίαι πλὺς ($1 \times 360,000 =$) 360,000, each ἁρμονία thus having added to it, as before, the unit which is ἡ πάντων ἀρχή. The analogy between the Microcosm and the Macrocosm is thus preserved: see on πάντα—ῥητὰ 546 B τὴν μὲν ἴσην ἰσάκης, ἑκατὸν τοσαντάκης, τὴν δὲ ἰσομήκη μὲν τῇ, προμήκη δέ, ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ διαμέτρων ῥητῶν πεμπάδος, δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων, ἀρρήτων δὲ δυοῖν, ἑκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος. 20 ξύμπας δὲ οὗτος, ἀριθμὸς γεωμετρικός, τοιοῦτου κύριος, ἀμεινόνων τε καὶ χειρόνων γενέσεων, ἃς ὅταν ἀγνοήσαντες ὑμῖν¹ οἱ φύλακες D συνοικίζωσιν νύμφας νυμφίοις παρὰ καιρόν, οὐκ εὐφυνεῖς οὐδ' εὐ-

17. ἑκατὸν A²Ξ: ἑκάστον A¹Π q.

18. ἑκατὸν A²Π: ἑκάστον A¹.

above. So much for the arithmetical meaning of the term ἀρμονίας. In App. I, Pt ii § 5 I have given my reasons for connecting the two ἀρμονίαι with the myth of the Politicus. In that myth we are told how two cycles of equal and vast duration invariably succeed one another in the life of the Universe, a progressive and a retrogressive cycle. These two cycles are two Great Years, in the first of which ομοιότης prevails and the Universe is fresh and strong, while in the second, in which we are living now, ἀνομοιότης begins to assert itself and the Universe flags and wanes. Cf. 547 A n. Here the first ἀρμονία, which is a square and therefore ομοιον, represents the progressive cycle, the cycle of ομοιότης, and the second ἀρμονία, which is an oblong, and therefore ἀνόμοιον (see above on 546 B line 12), stands for the retrogressive cycle, the cycle of ἀνομοιότης. If this identification is, as I believe, correct, each ἀρμονία represents a Great Year. The area or number of each harmony, according to Plato, is 12,960,000, and as Plato elsewhere says that the Great Year is measured τῷ τοῦ ταύτου καὶ ὁμοίως ἴοντος κύκλῳ (Tim. 39 D), i.e. by the diurnal revolutions of the heavens, we may take this number as denoting days. Converted into years, on the astronomical calculation of 360 days to the year, followed by Plato here and elsewhere, the number becomes 36,000 years, which was known in Ptolemaic astronomy as the magnus Platonius annus. For the evidence on all these points, see App. I, Pt ii § 5, 6.

20 ξύμπας δὲ οὗτος κτλ. 'This whole number, a number measuring the earth, is lord of better and worse births.' On its arithmetical side, γεωμετρικός means only that the number is reached by means of γεωμετρία and expressed in geometrical figures: but I have no doubt that Plato meant the word to bear another and pro-founder meaning, suitable to the real import of the two harmonies whereof this is the number. The number is τῷ ὄντι γεωμετρικός, for it measures an aeon of the Universe, of which the Earth is part (cf. 555 A n. and VI 511 B n.): and indeed it is artistically right that the meaning of the two harmonies should be summed up at the climax of the whole in a single pregnant word. How do good and bad births depend upon this number? Because in the early days of our era, when God had but lately left the world, and ἀνομοιότης and ἀνωμαλία were young, Nature produced better children than οἱ οὖν βροτοὶ εἰσιν. Plato in fact invites us to think of his city as having existed soon after the change to the aeon in which we now live, just as throughout Book VIII and part of IX the Ideal City is figured in the past. For more on this subject see App. I, Pt ii §§ 5—7. I know not what others will think, but to me it seems that the extraordinary range and elevation of its central ideas make the Platonic number worthy even of a writer who is full of 'thoughts that wander through eternity.' The connexion between the Human Child and the Divine, the Microcosm and the Macrocosm, has played no small part in the history of human thought, and the story of a Great Year, with the hope which it affords of the ἀποκατάστασις of all things (Acts 3. 21), has been and is, in its religious setting, the solace and support of many a 'human child.'

546 D 22 παρὰ καιρόν: 'inopportunately,' 'improperly': cf. Pol. 277 A and οὐ δέον 546 B. The phrase does not, as I once thought, imply that Nature has appointed certain periodic times or seasons in the life of men and women when their union will produce good offspring, but refers to unions of wrong couples, superabundance of marriages, and the like: cf. v 459 E ff. The notion that the number of the Great Year is to be

τυχεῖς παῖδες ἔσονται· ὧν καταστήσονται μὲν τοὺς ἀρίστους οἱ πρότεροι, ὅμως δὲ ὄντες ἀνάξιοι, εἰς τὰς τῶν πατέρων αὐτῶν δυνάμεις ἐλθόντες, ἡμῶν πρῶτον ἄρξονται ἀμελεῖν φύλακες ὄντες, παρ' 25 ἑλάττων τοῦ δέοντος ἡγησάμενοι τὰ μουσικῆς, δεύτερον δὲ τὰ γυμναστικῆς· ὅθεν ἀμουνσότεροι γενήσονται ἡμῖν οἱ νέοι. ἐκ δὲ τούτων ἄρχοντες οὐ πῖνυ φυλακικοὶ καταστήσονται· πρὸς τὸ 17 δοκιμάζειν τὰ Ἡσιόδου | τε καὶ τὰ παρ' ὑμῖν γένη, χρυσοῦν τε καὶ ἀργυροῦν καὶ χαλκοῦν καὶ σιδηροῦν· ὁμοῦ δὲ μιγέντος σιδήρου ἀργύρῳ καὶ χαλκοῦ χρυσῷ ἀνομοιότης ἐγγενήσεται καὶ ἀνωμαλία

2. σιδήρου ἀργύρῳ II : σιδηροῦ ἀργυρῷ A.

used by the rulers as a means of determining at what time unions should take place, derives no support from the Greek, and ought not to be entertained. In point of fact, the number is not a nuptial but a secular number, being γεωμετρικὸς ὡς ἀληθὺς. The expression 'nuptial number' is not applied to it either by Plato or by Aristotle, and it is only in later writers that we meet with ὁ τοῦ λεγομένου γάμου τόπος (Nicom. Introd. Ar. p. 144 Ast), γαμήλιον διάγραμμα (Plut. de Is. et Os. 373 F) and γαμικὸς ἀριθμὸς (Iambl. in Nic. Ar. p. 82. 21 Pistelli).

23 καταστήσονται. The active καταστήσουσι, found in v and two other MSS of little moment, is read by Hermann. Some may prefer it because καταστήσονται is passive just below: but Plato is careless about matters of this kind, and it is better to follow the best MSS.

25 ἡμῶν κτλ.: 'us they will first begin to neglect when they are Guardians' (i.e. after they have come εἰς τὰς τῶν πατέρων δυνάμεις), 'setting too little store by music first, and second by gymnastic.' Political decay is constantly associated by Plato with neglect of 'Music': see on IV 424 C. In place of δεύτερον δὲ τὰ γυμναστικῆς, which is in all MSS, Baiter adopts Madvig's conjecture δεύτερά τε γυμναστικῆς. At first sight ὅθεν ἀμουνσότεροι—νέοι would seem to favour such an alteration, as well as the fact that in the city which comes next in order Gymnastic is more esteemed than Music (548 C). But πρῶτον after ἡμῶν supports the MS tradition, and the decline of the ideal city, which, as we have seen, arises from inevitable organic deterioration, shews itself in a general lowering of vital energy, rather than in the exaltation of any one pursuit at the expense of another. In the Spartan city Gymnastic ranks higher than Music, because Music has fallen from the high position which she formerly occupied, and not because Gymnastic stands higher than before.

27 ὅθεν—νέοι: 'and so our children will forget us.' The Muses are speaking, and the children of Plato's Muse may well be called the Muses' children. This is the force of ἡμῖν, which is the reading of A, Ξ and some other MSS: II and others have ὑμῖν. Schneider says "Μοῦσαις—ἀμουνσον γίγνεσθαι nullo modo tolerabile est." That is true, only ἡμῖν does not go with ἀμουνσότεροι, but is an ethic dative, and seems to me at least to be full of a strange beauty and pathos. As true Gymnastic educates the soul and not the body (III 410 C ff.), the neglect of Gymnastic in the ideal city itself contributes to ἀμουνσία.

547 A I τὰ παρ' ὑμῖν γένη. See III 415 A ff.

3 ἀνομοιότης καὶ ἀνωμαλία ἀνάρμοστος. We have already seen that as the second scroll of the World's life unfolds itself, ἀνομοιότης, ἀνωμαλία, and ἀναρμοστία, with their attendant retinue of sedition, strife and war, make their appearance and wax more and more aggressive, until at last, in the words of the Politicus, careful lest the world χεῖμασθῇς ὑπὸ παραχῆς διαλυθῇς εἰς τὸν τῆς ἀνομοιότητος ἄπειρον ὄντα τόπον δῦναι, God takes the helm again and κοσμεῖ τε καὶ ἐπανορθῶν ἀθάνατον αὐτὸν καὶ ἀγήρων ἀπεργάζεται (Pol. 273 D f.). See on 546 C and App. I, Pt ii § 5. The same insidious enemies, not from any fault of the rulers, but because the part must neces-ἀνάρμοστος, ἃ γενόμενα, οὐδ' ἂν ἐγγένηται, αἰεὶ τίκτει πόλεμον καὶ 5 ἔχθραν. ταύτης τοι γενεᾶς χρὴ φάναι εἶναι στάσιν, ὅπου ἂν γίγνηται αἰεὶ. Καὶ ὀρθῶς γ', ἔφη, αὐτὰς ἀποκρίνεσθαι φήσομεν.

 Καὶ γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀνάγκη Μούσας γε οὔσας. Τί οὖν, ἦ δ' ὅς, τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο¹ λέγουσιν αἱ Μοῦσαι; Στάσεως, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, γενομένης B εἰλκέτην ἄρα ἐκατέρω τῷ γενεῖ, τὸ μὲν σιδηροῦν καὶ χαλκοῦν ἐπὶ 10 χρηματισμὸν καὶ γῆς κτήσιν καὶ οἰκίας χρυσοῦ τε καὶ ἀργύρου, τῷ δ' αὖ, τὸ χρυσοῦν τε καὶ ἀργυροῦν, ἅτε οὐ πενομένῳ, ἀλλὰ φύσει ὄντε πλουσίῳ τὰς ψυχὰς, ἐπὶ τὴν ἀρετὴν καὶ τὴν ἀρχαίαν κατάστασιν ἡγέτην· βιαζομένων δὲ καὶ ἀντιτεινόντων ἀλλήλοις, εἰς μέσον ὡμολόγησαν γῆν μὲν καὶ οἰκίας κατανειμαμένους ἰδιώ-

6. φήσομεν A¹Π: φήσωμεν A². 9. τῷ γένει Π: τῷ γένει A¹: τῷ γένει A².
 10. χρυσοῦ A²Ξ: χρυσοῦ A¹Πγ. 11. τῷ δ' αὖ, τὸ Schneider: τῷ δ' αὖ τὸ (τὸ erasum) M: τὸ δ' αὖτὸ A²Ξ¹: τὸ δ' αὖ τὸ Π: τὸ δ' αὖ Ξ²γ. 11. ἀργυροῦν Ξ: ἀργύρεον A¹γ: ἀργύρουν ὄν corr. A²: ἀργύριον Π. 11, 12. πενομένων—πλουσίῳ A²Π: πενομένων—πλουσίῳ A¹.

sarily suffer with the whole, fasten both on the perfect individual and on the perfect State, and the fall of men and cities, which Plato describes in VIII and IX, is one long record of the triumphal progress of ἀνομοιότης, until at last she sits enthroned in the soul and city of the tyrant. The Platonic number is thus the setting in which Plato's 'Philosophy of History' is framed.

5 ταύτης τοι γενεᾶς. From Homer Il. VI 211 al. ταύτης τοι γενεῆς τε καὶ αἵματος εὐχομαι εἶναι. Plato means of course 'Such, as we must say, is the pedigree of Sedition, wheresoever she arises.' D. and V. are wholly wrong when they translate: "so that we may positively assert that the rise of such a generation will invariably be marked by divisions."

547 B 9 εἰλκέτην κτλ. The logical object of εἰλκέτην and ἡγέτην (in line 13) is τὴν πολιτείαν. For the omission of the object with ἔλκω and ἄγω cf. 560 B, X 604 A, 604 D et al. It is only another way of expressing oneself to say that the verbs are practically intransitive. The sedition which arises is not between rulers and ruled, but between the rulers among themselves, as is clear from 545 D and elsewhere: hence τὸ μὲν σιδηροῦν καὶ χαλκοῦν does not refer to the farmers and artisans, who probably possessed οἰκίας from the first (III 417 A n.), but to the section of the rulers who have become σιδηροῦν and χαλκοῦν by the intermixture of different breeds. Cf. the oracle foretelling the destruction of the city ὅταν αὐτὴν ὁ σίδηρος ἢ ὁ χαλκὸς φυλάξῃ (III 415 C). γῆς κτήσιν κτλ. means 'the possession of land and a private dwelling-place as well as of gold and silver,' all of which were forbidden to Plato's rulers. ἐγκτησις γῆς καὶ οἰκίας was a familiar expression to the Greeks, and one of the well-recognised privileges of μέτοικοι at Athens (Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II p. 295). On the reading χρυσοῦ see cr. n. It is usual to read χρυσοῦ, but ἀργύρου immediately following favours χρυσοῦ, whose authority is not much inferior to that of χρυσοῦ. Cf. χρυσόν τε καὶ ἀργυρόν 548 A. Herwerden, retaining χρυσοῦ, would write ἀργυροῦ instead of ἀργύρου with some MSS of little value: but the reading printed above has much more MS support. His further proposal ἐπὶ χρηματισμὸν χρυσοῦ τε καὶ ἀργυροῦ καὶ γῆς κτήσιν καὶ οἰκίας will not find favour among scholars.

12 φύσει—ψυχὰς. They are not rich in worldly possessions, but they have the true riches—the riches of the soul. Cf. the prayer of Socrates in Phaedr. 279 C πλούσιον δὲ νομίζομι τὸν σοφόν, and see also on III 416 E. The usual view, which makes τὰς ψυχὰς depend on ἡγέτην (Schneider, J. and C., D. and V., etc.) is surely wrong. Jowett from his translation appears to have caught the meaning.

14 εἰς μέσον ὡμολόγησαν κτλ. The σασθαι, τοὺς δὲ πρὶν φυλαττομένους ὑπ' αὐτῶν ὡς ἐλευθέρους, 15 φίλους τε καὶ τροφείας, δουλωσάμενοι τότε, περιοίκους τε καὶ οἰκέτας ἔχοντες, αὐτοὶ πολέμου τε καὶ φυλακῆς αὐτῶν ἐπιμελείσθαι. Δοκεῖ μοι, ἔφη, αὕτη ἡ μετάβασις ἐντεῦθεν γίγνεσθαι.

 Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐν μέσῳ τις ἂν εἴη ἀριστοκρατίας τε καὶ ὀλιγαρχίας αὕτη ἡ πολιτεία; Πάνν μὲν οὖν. 20

IV. Μεταβήσεται μὲν δὴ οὕτω· μεταβᾶσα δὲ πῶς οἰκήσει;
 ἡ φανερόν ὅτι τὰ μὲν μιμήσεται τὴν προτέραν πολιτείαν, τὰ δὲ τὴν ὀλιγαρχίαν, ἅτ' ἐν μέσῳ οὔσα, τὸ δέ τι καὶ αὐτῆς ἔξει ἴδιον; Οὕτως, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν τῷ μὲν τιμᾶν τοὺς ἄρχοντας καὶ γεωργίων ἀπέχεσθαι τὸ προπολεμῶν αὐτῆς καὶ χειροτεχνιῶν καὶ τοῦ ἄλλου 25 χρηματισμοῦ, ξυσσίτια δὲ κατεσκευάσθαι καὶ γυμναστικῆς τε καὶ change is effected, as in the case of the corresponding man (550 B), by a peaceful compromise. In the later stages of political decay, when ἀνομοίωτης has gathered strength, revolution is attended by civil war (557 A), and the tyrant wades through bloodshed to his throne (565 E ff.).

16 περιοίκους τε καὶ οἰκέτας. We meet with περίοικοι not only in Sparta, of which city Plato is chiefly thinking, but also in Crete, Thessaly and Argos: see Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II pp. 16, 74, 220. In each of these States there was also an inferior grade, in Sparta the Helots, in Crete the foikées of the Gortynian inscription, sometimes also spoken of as οἰκέται, in Thessaly the πενέσται, and in Argos the γυμνήτες or γυμνήσιοι (Gilbert l.c.). It is clear, I think, that in οἰκέτας Plato is thinking of this lowest order. The Spartan Helots had to perform the duties of domestic servants, as appears from Plut. Lyc. et Num. comp. 2. 4 ἦν ἡ περὶ τὰ χρήματα κατασκευὴ δεδομένη δούλοις καὶ Εἰλωσιν, ὥσπερ ἡ περὶ τὸ δείπνον καὶ ὄψον διακονία.

17 φυλακῆς αὐτῶν: the duty of watching and guarding—sensu inimico—the περίοικοι and οἰκέται. The institutions and history of Sparta are a sufficient commentary on the phrase.

19 οὐκοῦν—πολιτεία. Cf. 547 C n.

547 C—548 D So much for the origin of Timarchy. In character, it will resemble Aristocracy on the one hand, and Oligarchy on the other; partly also it will have peculiarities of its own. The aristocratic features of Timarchy are respect for the ruling class and so forth; its own distinctive peculiarity is the love of war and warlike matters; in cupidity and avarice it is like Oligarchy. On the whole Timarchy is a mixture of good and evil; but the one conspicuous feature of this polity is the love of victory and honour.

547 C Plato's description of 'timocracy' is, as he says himself, a sketch (548 D), but one in which hardly any feature of first-rate importance is wholly ignored. He regards 'timocracy' as primarily and essentially the political embodiment of θυμοειδές (548 C), and consequently a sort of half-way house between aristocracy and oligarchy, as θυμοειδές is between λογιστικόν and φιλοχρήματον. It is, however, at the same time a 'mixed' constitution (548 C n.), and partakes in the characteristics of both its neighbours. The portrait of timocracy is drawn in the main from Sparta, as the notes will shew, but it represents the Sparta of the fifth rather than of the fourth century, during which the oligarchical element in the Spartan constitution began to acquire an undue predominance, owing to the temptations of empire and other causes: cf. Isocr. de Pace 95—103. Plato's sketch may be filled in from the sources enumerated in Hermann-Thumser Gr. Staatsalt. pp. 176—191, 251—260. The student of Greek history and political science should read Aristotle's account of the Lacedaemonian and Cretan polities (Pol. B 9, 10) in connexion with Plato's description of the timarchical constitution and the timarchical man. See also Schoemann-Lipsius Griech. Alterthümer pp. 196—323.

547 D 24 γεωργίων—χρηματισμοῦ:

τῆς τοῦ πολέμου ἀγωνίας ἐπιμελεῖσθαι, πᾶσι τοῖς τοιούτοις τὴν προτέραν μιμήσεται; Ναί. Τῷ δέ γε φοβεῖσθαι τοὺς ἰσοφούς Ε ἐπὶ τὰς ἀρχὰς ἄγειν, ἅτε οὐκέτι κεκτημένη ἀπλοὺς τε καὶ ἀτενεῖς 30 τοὺς τοιούτους ἀνδρας ἀλλὰ μεικτοὺς, ἐπὶ δὲ θυμοειδεῖς τε καὶ ἀπλουστέρους ἀποκλίνειν, τοὺς πρὸς πόλεμον μᾶλλον πεφυκότας ἢ πρὸς εἰρήνην, | καὶ τοὺς περὶ ταῦτα δόλους τε καὶ μηχανὰς 54 ἐντίμως ἔχειν, καὶ πολεμοῦσα τὸν αἰὲ χρόνον διάγειν, αὐτὴ ἑαυτῆς αὐτὰ πολλὰ τῶν τοιούτων ἴδια ἔξει; Ναί. Ἐπιθυμηταὶ δέ γε, 29. κεκτημένη Bekker, fortasse secundum v: κεκτημένην A cum ceteris.

as in Sparta: see Xen. Rep. Lac. 7. 1—2 and other authorities in Hermann-Thumser l.c. p. 182 nn.

26 ξυσσίτια. Cf. Hermann-Thumser l.c. pp. 185—191. In Crete, the ξυσσίτια were maintained at the expense of the State; in Sparta, by the contributions of the ξυσσιτοί. The former arrangement of course prevailed in the ideal city (III 416 E), and as timarchy copies the ideal city in regard to ξυσσίτια (τὴν προτέραν μιμήσεται below), we may suppose that in the timarchical polity, as conceived by Plato, the Cretan method was observed. Cf. Arist. Pol. B 9. 1271^a 28 ff. and see also on 551 A, B.

28 τῷ δέ γε φοβεῖσθαι κτλ. The Spartans were notorious for their dislike and distrust of knowledge and intellectual cultivation: see Hipp. Mai. 285 B ff. and Arist. Pol. B 9. 1271^b 1 ff., with Susemihl and Hicks' notes. For the anacoluthon τῷ δέ γε—τὰ πολλὰ—ἔξει (548 A) cf. (with Schneider) Laus 931 C, 949 A.

547 E 29 κεκτημένη. See cr. n. Bekker's silence is often untrustworthy, and as he omitted A and E as well as v in the list of MSS which read κεκτημένην, it is doubtful if even v has the nominative here. κεκτημένην is however very awkward from its position between τὴν προτέραν μιμήσεται and πολεμοῦσα, and the error is so easy and common that I agree with Bekker and others in rejecting the accusative. See Introd. § 5. In illustration of what Plato says we may contrast Pausanias for example and Lysander with Brasidas and Callicratidas. The former were σοφοί but far from ἀπλοῖ: the latter θυμοειδεῖς and ἀπλούστεροι.

30 τοὺς τοιούτους: i.e. τοὺς σοφούς. With μεικτοὺς cf. 547 A.

31 ἀπλουστέρους = 'more single-minded.' Since they distrust σοφοί because their σοφοί are not ἀπλοῖ, it is natural enough that they should seek ἀπλούστεροι, and find them in θυμοειδεῖς, whose single all-engrossing idea is war (548 A) and φιλονικίαι (548 C). The text would hardly have been suspected if critics had grasped the meaning of ἀπλοῦς (see on I 351 A, II 370 B and IV 434 C). As it is, there is a host of superfluous conjectures: ἀλλοκωτέρους, αὐστηροὺς, αὐθαδεστέρους, ποικιλωτέρους (Ast), πολλαπλουστέρους (Stallbaum), ἀγχινοστέρους (Müller), ὑποαμνοστέρους (Herwerden), ἀμνοστέρους (Herwerden, Apelt, Richards). It should be remembered that the Spartans prided themselves upon τὸ ἀπλοῦν in the ordinary sense of the term.

548 A 2 ἐντίμως ἔχειν. See VII 528 B n. For the statement itself cf. for example Laus 630 D, 666 E στρατοπέδου—πολιτεῖαν ἔχετε and elsewhere, with Isocr. Archid. 81 and Arist. Pol. II 14. 1333^b 12 ff.

καὶ πολεμοῦσα κτλ. Isocrates says much the same of Sparta in Paneg. 128 and Philipp. 51: cf. also Laus 686 B. The description up to this point recalls to some extent the city of Books II—IV, minus the ἄρχοντες proper and some parts of the 'musical' education, and Plato may well have looked on the constitution of Lycurgus, from which he borrowed several features, as in some respects a kind of imperfect edition of his earlier καλλίπολις. See on this subject K. F. Hermann Die historischen Elemente d. plat. Staatsideals, in his Gesammelte Abhandlungen, pp. 132—159. Cf. also Laus 692 C, where the Lacedaemonian polity is called a παράδειγμα γεγονός. In what follows the strictly oligarchical features of the Spartan polity are described.

3 ἐπιθυμηταὶ δέ γε κτλ. Spartan avarice was the theme of universal com-ἦν δ' ἐγώ. χρημάτων οἱ τοιοῦτοι ἔσονται. ὥσπερ οἱ ἐν ταῖς ὀλιγαρχίαις, καὶ τιμώντες ἀγρίως ὑπὸ σκοτοῦ χρυσόν τε καὶ ἄργυρον, ἅτε κεκτημένοι ταμιεῖα καὶ οἰκείους θησαυρούς, οἱ θέμενοι ἂν αὐτὰ κρύψειαν, καὶ αὖ περιβόλους οἰκήσεων, ἀτεχνῶς νεοττίας ἰδίας, ἐν αἷς ἀναλίσκοντες γυναιξί τε καὶ οἷς ἐθέλοιεν ἄλλοις πολλὰ ἂν δαπανῶντο. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν καὶ φειδωλοὶ χρημάτων, ἅτε τιμώντες καὶ οὐ φανερώς κτώμενοι, φιλαναλωταὶ δὲ ἄλλοτρίων δι' ἐπιθυμίαν, καὶ λάθρα τὰς ἡδονὰς καρπούμενοι, ὥσπερ παῖδες πατέρα τὸν νόμον ἀποδιδράσκοντες, οὐχ ὑπὸ πειθοῦς, ἀλλ' ὑπὸ βίας πεπαιδευμένοι διὰ τὸ τῆς ἀληθινῆς Μούσης, τῆς μετὰ λόγων τε καὶ φιλοσοφίας, ἡμεληκέναι καὶ πρεσβυτέρως γυμναστικὴν μουσικῆς τετιμηκέναι. Παντάπασιν, ἔφη, λέγεις μεμιγμένην πολι-

10. οὐ II: erasum est in A.

ment: see the references collected by Susemihl and Hicks on Arist. Pol. B 9. 1271^b 16 with Eur. Andr. 451, Ar. Peace 622 ff. and Isocr. Bis. 20.

5 τιμώντες ἀγρίως: 'passionately adoring.' The adverb was unnecessarily suspected by Herwerden.

6 ταμιεῖα κτλ. In spite of the formal prohibition of gold and silver (Xen. Rep. Lac. 7. 6, Plut. Lyc. 9. 2, Lys. 17. 6), an immense amount of gold and silver money was accumulated in private hands throughout Laconia: cf. Alcib. 1 122 E χρυσίον δὲ καὶ ἀργύριον οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν πᾶσιν Ἑλλήσιν ὅσον ἐν Λακεδαίμονι ἰδίᾳ πολλὰς γὰρ ἤδη γενεὰς εἰσέρχεται μὲν αὐτόσε ἐξ ἀπάντων τῶν Ἑλλήνων, πολλάκις δὲ καὶ ἐκ τῶν βαρβάρων, ἐξέρχεται δὲ οὐδαμῶσε κτλ. and other authorities quoted in Hermann-Thumser p. 252 nn. or Gilbert Gk Const. Ant. E. T. pp. 12, 13.

οἰκείους—κρύψειαν refers specifically to the hoarding of specie as practised by Spartan citizens. It may be doubted whether the Thucydidean Pericles was justified even at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war in telling the Athenians that the Spartans possessed οὐτε ἰδίᾳ οὐτε ἐν κοινῷ χρήματα (I 141. 3), in spite of Xenophon Rep. Lac. 7. 6.

7 περιβόλους οἰκήσεων κτλ.: not 'walled houses' (D. and V.) but 'dwellings to encompass them withal, veritable private nests': cf. Theaet. 174 E σηκὸν ἐν ὀρει τὸ τεῖχος περιβεβλημένον and Crat. 400 C. The phrase has a poetical sound and may be taken from the drama, but is more likely to be one of Plato's own poetical flourishes. A Spartan husband could occasionally escape from the rigid discipline of camp-life and take shelter—this is the force of περιβόλους—in his domestic nest: see Plut. Lyc. 15. 4—7. Plato seems to imply that this arrangement encouraged habits of extravagance and luxuriousness in the wives as well as in the husbands: cf. Arist. Pol. B 9. 1269^b 22 ᾧσι γὰρ (the Spartan wives) ἀκολάστως πρὸς ἅπασαν ἀκολασίαν καὶ τρυφερῶς. Aristotle's remark is amply borne out by other evidence: see Hermann-Thumser l. c. p. 180 n. 5 and Newman on Arist. l. c.

548 B 8 οἷς ἐθέλοιεν ἄλλοις: masculine, not (as D. and V. translate), neuter. The reference is probably intended to include παιδικὰ as well as others. The Spartan's domestic nest was doubtless occasionally a nest of vice.

12 τὸν νόμον ἀποδιδράσκοντες. The expression is borrowed by Aristotle Pol. B 9. 1270^b 34, where see Newman's note.

13 τῆς ἀληθινῆς—φιλοσοφίας. Cf. the famous saying φιλοσοφία μεγίστη μουσική in Phaed. 61 A.

548 C 15 μεμιγμένην and μέμικται sound half-technical, and it is clear from Laws 712 D ff., 691 E, 693 D, Isocr. Nicoles 24 (with Areop. 61) and Arist. Pol. Δ 9. 1294^b 18 ff. that Greek political theorists were in the habit of viewing the Spartan constitution as a 'mixed polity,' although they did not always analyse the μῖξις in the same way: cf. Henkel Studien zur Gesch. d. Gr. Lehre v. Staat p. 62 nn. 35, 36, and Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 14, 19. The τείαν ἐκ κακοῦ τε καὶ ἀγαθοῦ. Μέμικται γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· διαφανέσ-τατον δ' ἐν αὐτῇ ἐστὶν ἓν τι μόνον ὑπὸ τοῦ θυμοειδούς κρατοῦντος, φιλονικίαι καὶ φιλοτιμίαι. Σφόδρα γε, ἦ δ' ὅς. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, αὕτη μὲν ἡ πολιτεία οὕτω γεγонуῖα καὶ τοιαύτη ἂν τις εἴη, ὡς 20 λόγῳ σχῆμα πολιτείας ὑπογράψαντα μὴ ἀκριβῶς ἀπεργάσασθαι D διὰ τὸ ἐξαρκεῖν μὲν ἰδεῖν καὶ ἐκ τῆς ὑπογραφῆς τὸν τε δικαιοτάτον καὶ τὸν ἀδικώτατον, ἀμήχανον δὲ μήκει ἔργον εἶναι πᾶσας μὲν πολιτείας, πάντα δὲ ἦθ' ἡ μὲν παρὰ τὸν διελθεῖν. Καὶ ὁρθῶς, ἔφη.

25 V. Τίς οὖν ὁ κατὰ ταύτην τὴν πολιτείαν ἀνὴρ; πῶς τε γενόμενος ποῖός τέ τις ὢν; Οἶμαι μὲν, ἔφη ὁ Ἀδείμαντος, ἐγγύς τι analysis which is attributed to Archytas may serve as a specimen: δει δὴ τὸν νόμον τὸν κάρρωνα καὶ τὰν πόλιν ἐκ πασῶν σύνθετον ἦμεν τὰν ἄλλαν πολιτείαν, καὶ ἔχεν τι δαμοκρατίας, ἔχεν τι ὀλιγαρχίας, ἔχεν τι βασιλείας καὶ ἀριστοκρατίας, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐν τῇ Λακεδαιμονίᾳ. τοὶ μὲν γὰρ βασιλεῖς τὰς μοναρχίας, τοὶ δὲ γέροντες τὰς ἀριστοκρατίας, τοὶ δὲ ἔφοροι τὰς ὀλιγαρχίας, ἱππαγρέται δὲ καὶ κόροι τὰς δαμοκρατίας (Stobaeus Flor. 43. 134). On mixed polities in ancient political science see Henkel l.c. pp. 85 ff., 102, 106 ff., 112, 115 and Greenidge Gr. Const. Hist. pp. 74—121.

17 ἓν τι μόνον. For τι μόνον Apelt conjectures τιμώμενον: but Plato expresses himself emphatically in case the oligarchical features of the Spartan polity should make us forget that after all it is and must be essentially θυμο-κρατία—the expression of θυμοειδές and not φιλοχρήματον (547 C n.).

18 φιλονικίαι κτλ. Cf. Plut. Ages. 5. 4. Plato is not thinking of 'divisions in Sparta between the partisans of the ephors and kings' (as J. and C. suppose), but of the passion ὑπεύροχον ἐμμέναι ἄλλων; for this and not 'quarrelsomeness' is the distinctive feature of timarchy. We are in danger of misconceiving the whole position of 'timarchy' and the 'timarchical' man if φιλονικός (or φιλονεικός) is connected with νεῖκος instead of with νίκη. On the spelling and derivation of the word see IX 581 B n.

54B D 21 διὰ τὸ ἐξαρκεῖν κτλ. See 544 A n. With ἀμήχανον δὲ κτλ. cf. IV 443 D, E n.

54B D—550 C. The character of the timarchical man is now described in close analogy with that of the timarchical State (548 D—549 B). In origin (continues Socrates) he was the son of a good father living in an ill-regulated city and abstaining from public life. Drawn by his father's precepts and example towards the higher life, and by maternal and other influences towards the lower, he finally surrendered himself to the dominion of the intermediate principle in the soul, and thus became timarchical.

25 πῶς τε γενόμενος: 'how did he arise?' Richards proposes γιγνόμενος: but the past tense is in harmony with ἔμπεσε 545 D, with εἰλάκην, ἠγέτην, ὠμολόγησαν 547 B, and indeed with the whole of Plato's exposition, which is deliberately arrayed in the vesture of a historical narrative or epic poem: see on 543 A, 544 C. It appears to be the custom to translate most of the aorists of this kind in Books VIII and IX by the present, but in some cases the effect is much more realistic and picturesque if we make them past, and I think that Plato intended some of these aorists to be understood in that way. The instances in point are 550 B ἦλθε, παρέδωκε, ἐγένετο, 550 E ἀπεργάσαντο, 551 B κατεστήσαντο, 555 D ἠνάγκασαν, 560 A—C ὑπεχώρησε, διεφθάρσαν, ἐξέπεσον, κατεκοσμήθη, ἐγένοντο, εἴλκυσαν, ἐνέτεκον, κατέλαβον, κατέσχον, 565 B ἔσχον, 566 E ἠλευθέρωσε, δένειμε. Except in 550 E, 551 B, 555 D, 565 B, and 566 E, in which the aorists are no doubt the so-called gnomic aorists "used in animated language to express general truths" (Goodwin MT. p. 53), each of these tenses is in my opinion correctly translated by a past in English. Plato of course repeatedly employs the

Ε αὐτὸν Γλαῦκωνος τοιούτῳ τείνειν ἕνεκά γε φιλονικίας. ¹ Ἰσως, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοῦτό γε· ἀλλὰ μοι δοκεῖ τάδε οὐ κατὰ τοῦτον πεφυκέναι. Τὰ ποῖα; Αὐθαδέστερόν τε δεῖ αὐτόν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, εἶναι καὶ ὑποαμουσώτερον, φιλόμουσον δέ, καὶ φιλήκοον μέν, ῥητορικὸν δ' οὐδα-
 49 μῶς. καὶ δούλοις | μέν τις ἂν ἄγριος εἴη ὁ τοιοῦτος, οὐ καταφρονῶν δούλων, ὥσπερ ὁ ἱκανῶς πεπαιδευμένος, ἐλευθέρους δὲ ἡμερος, ἀρχόντων δὲ σφόδρα ὑπήκοος, φίλαρχος δὲ καὶ φιλότιμος, οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ λέγειν ἀξιῶν ἄρχειν οὐδ' ἀπὸ τοιοῦτου οὐδενός, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ ἔργων τῶν τε πολεμικῶν καὶ τῶν περὶ τὰ πολεμικά, φιλογυμναστής τέ 5 τις ὢν καὶ φιλόθηρος. Ἔστι γάρ, ἔφη, τοῦτο τὸ ἦθος ἐκείνης τῆς πολιτείας. Οὐκοῦν καὶ χρημάτων, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὁ τοιοῦτος νέος Β μὲν ¹ ὢν καταφρονοῖ ἂν, ὅσω δὲ πρεσβύτερος γίγνοιτο, μᾶλλον αἰεὶ

1. τις ἂν ν: τισιν ΠΞq et fortasse A¹: τις A².

present also, not only where he is painting a scene (e.g. 549 B ff., 553 A ff., 555 C ff.), but also when he is describing the actual genesis of a particular sort of commonwealth or individual (e.g. 550 D, 551 A, B¹ al. and many instances of γίγνεται), and in such cases the appearance of historical narration is not preserved, for it would be pedantic to view all these presents as merely examples of the praesens historicum. See also on 549 C.

27 φιλονικίας: 'desire to excel.' The translations 'party-spirit' (D. and V.), 'spirit of contention' (Jowett) are misleading: see 548 C n. On Glauco's φιλονικία see Introd. § 2.

548 E 29 ὑποαμουσώτερον. It is unnecessary (with Herwerden) to add <μέν>, although ὑποαμουσώτερον is contrasted with φιλόμουσον: see on I 340 D.

30 φιλόμουσον. The 'timocratical' man has neglected τῆς ἀληθινῆς Μουσῆς τῆς μετὰ λόγων τε καὶ φιλοσοφίας (548 B), but he is nevertheless φιλόμουσος, though somewhat less so than Glauco, whom Socrates calls μουσικός in III 398 E. On the Spartan love of music cf. Plut. Lyc. 21 and other evidence in Hermann-Thumser l.c. p. 178 nn. 5, 6.

φιλήκοον κτλ. This characteristic of the Spartans is well illustrated by J. and C. from Hipp. Mai. 285 D ff.: Ἀλλὰ τί μὴν ἐστὶν ἃ ἡδέως σου ἀκροῶνται καὶ ἐπαινοῦσιν (sc. οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι);—Περὶ τῶν γενῶν—τῶν τε ἡρώων καὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, καὶ τῶν κατοικήσεων, ὥς τὸ ἀρχαῖον ἐκτίσθησαν αἱ πόλεις, καὶ συλλήβδην πάσης τῆς ἀρχαιολογίας ἥδιστα ἀκροῶνται. Schneider is mistaken in taking οὐδαμῶς with all three adjectives: it belongs only to ῥητορικόν. The carefully qualified expression ὑποαμουσώτερον would be inconsistent with calling the Spartan οὐδαμῶς φιλόμουσον: and φιλήκοον is not used as in VII 535 D, but rather as the antithesis to ῥητορικόν.

549 A I ἄγριος κτλ.: like the Spartans towards slaves and Helots: cf. Laws 777 A ff. and Gilbert Gk Const. Ant. E. T. pp. 32 ff.

οὐ καταφρονῶν κτλ. is a subtle psychological touch. Those who have no moral or intellectual right to 'despise' inferiors are apt to treat them harshly, in the vain effort to convince themselves of their own superiority. ὁ ἱκανῶς πεπαιδευμένος uses those below him "as creatures of another place" (All's well that ends well I 2. 41). Cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. IV 8. 1124^b 5. 20 and (for καταφρονῶν) Thuc. II 62. 4 αἰχμημα μὲν γὰρ καὶ ἀπὸ ἀμαθίας εὐτυχούς καὶ δειλῶ τι νικῆς ἐγγίγνεται, καταφρόνησις δὲ ὅς ἂν καὶ γνώμη πιστεύῃ τῶν ἐναντίων προέχειν.

3 οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ λέγειν κτλ. Cf. Prot. 342 E ff. The Spartans were men of deeds, not words.

5 φιλογυμναστής—φιλόθηρος: as in Sparta: see Hermann-Thumser l.c. p. 182 nn. 1, 2.

549 B 8 ὅσω δὲ πρεσβύτερος κτλ. The life of the timocratical man is an epitome of that of the State, in which, ἀσπάζοιτο ἂν τῷ τε μετέχειν τῆς τοῦ φιλοχρημάτου φύσεως καὶ 10 μὴ εἶναι εἰλικρινῆς πρὸς ἀρετὴν διὰ τὸ ἀπολειφθῆναι τοῦ ἀρίστου φύλακος; Τίνος; ἢ δ' ὅς ὁ Ἀδείμαντος. Λόγου, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μουσικῇ κεκραμένον· ὃς μόνος ἐγγενόμενος σωτὴρ ἀρετῆς διὰ βίου ἐνοικεῖ τῷ ἔχοντι. Καλῶς, ἔφη, λέγεις. Καὶ ἔστι μὲν γ', ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοιοῦτος ὁ τιμοκρατικὸς νεανίας, τῇ τοιαύτῃ πόλει ἐοικώς.

 15 Πάννυ μὲν οὖν. Γίγνεται δέ γ', εἶπον, ὁὗτος ᾧδὲ πως. ἐνίστε C πατρὸς ἀγαθοῦ ὧν νέος υἱὸς ἐν πόλει οἰκοῦντος οὐκ εὖ πολιτευομένη, φεύγοντος τῆς τε τιμᾶς καὶ ἀρχᾶς καὶ δίκας καὶ τὴν τοιαύτην πᾶσαν φιλοπραγμοσύνην καὶ ἐθέλοντος ἐλαττοῦσθαι, ὥστε πράγματα μὴ ἔχειν—Πῇ δὴ, ἔφη, γίγνεται; Ὅταν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρῶτον as actually happened at Sparta, the oligarchical element grows more and more powerful as time goes on (547 C n.).

11 Λόγου—κεκραμένον recalls the ἀληθινή Μοῦσα of 548 B.

12 σωτὴρ ἀρετῆς. Virtue is never secure unless it rests on knowledge, and can render a λόγος of itself: cf. VI 497 C and VII 531 E m.

549 C 15 ἐνίστε κτλ. Krohn finds a difficulty in οὐκ εὖ πολιτευομένη, for timarchy is a degeneration of the perfect city (Pl. St. pp. 208 ff., insufficiently refuted by Grimmelt de reip. Pl. comp. et univ. p. 71). But Plato is here speaking of the origin of the 'timarchical' man, not of the 'timarchical' State, and the ἀριστοκρατικός whose son becomes τιμοκρατικός may be found in any one of the degenerate commonwealths, although he will not rule except 'in his σὺν city,' i.e. aristocracy. We must beware of supposing that there is no remnant of good men in depraved States (cf. VI 492 E ff., 496 C ff., IX 591 E ff.). If Plato had here preserved the fiction of a historical narrative and made the τιμοκρατικός νεανίας the son of an ἀριστοκρατικός in his own ideal city, he could only have attributed his fall to the same law of natural degeneration which subverted the καλλίπολις (546 A ff.). As it is, the description is drawn from facts of daily experience and observation, and Plato, as is suggested by the Oxford editors, may well be thinking of some 'Laconizing youth of Athens,' perhaps of some member of the Socratic circle. We have already seen that Plato frequently deserts the epic or narrative form of exposition which he has chosen to express his views: see above on 548 D. I formerly printed a comma after πως and a full stop after ἔχειν, but now revert to Stallbaum's punctuation, because (1) the contrast with καὶ ἔστι μὲν γε κτλ. seems to require a fuller pause after πως, (2) ἐνίστε—ἔχειν does not explain the γένεσις of the τιμοκρατικός, as it ought to do, if γίγνεται—ἔχειν is all one sentence, (3) Adimantus' interruption πῇ δὴ—γίγνεται, which calls attention in a lively manner to the point which Plato wishes to emphasise, is most easily accounted for on the supposition that ἐνίστε κτλ. begins a separate sentence: cf. 567 E n. and Soph. O. C. 644 f., with Jebb's note. νέος υἱὸς is resumed in νέος (550 A), and has no other predicate except ἦλθε etc. in 550 B.

17 φεύγοντος κτλ. Cf. VI 496 C ff. and Theaet. 173 C ff. φοναρχία (if the word may be allowed) on the part of the best men was a growing evil in Athenian politics: see Hermann-Thumser l.c. p. 749 n. 4. In a bad State, according to Aristotle (Pol. I 4), the good man is apt to be a bad citizen.

549 C, D 19 ὅταν κτλ.: 'whenever, I continued, he listens in the first instance to his mother, who is annoyed because her husband has no place in the government and is on that account belittled among the other wives, and who also sees' etc. πρῶτον μὲν has nothing to do with ἔπειτα, but prepares us for καὶ οἱ οἰκέται κτλ. in 549 E. See also on 549 D. Krohn (Pl. St. p. 198) thinks the present sentence inconsistent with the position assigned to women in V; but actual wives ἐν πόλει οὐκ εὖ πολιτευομένη may be allowed to differ from the perfect products of an μὲν τῆς μητρὸς ἀκοῦη, ἀχθομένης ὅτι οὐ τῶν ἀρχόντων ἡ αὐτῇ ὁ 20 ἀνὴρ ἐστίν, καὶ ἐλαττουμένης διὰ ταῦτα ἐν ταῖς ἄλλαις γυναιξίν, ἔπειτα ὀρώσης μὴ σφόδρα περὶ χρήματα σπουδάζοντα μηδὲ μαχόμενον καὶ λοιδορούμενον ἰδίᾳ τε ἐν δικαστηρίοις καὶ δημοσίᾳ, ἀλλὰ ῥαθύμως πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα φέροντα, καὶ ἑαυτῷ μὲν τὸν νοῦν προσέχοντα αἰεὶ αἰσθάνηται, ἑαυτὴν δὲ μήτε πᾶν τιμῶντα μήτε 25 ἀτιμάζοντα, ἐξ ἀπάντων τούτων ἀχθομένης τε καὶ λεγούσης. ὥς ἄνδρὸς τε αὐτῷ ὁ πατήρ καὶ λίαν ἀνειμένος, καὶ ἄλλα δὴ ὅσα καὶ οἷα φιλοῦσιν ἡ αἱ γυναῖκες περὶ τῶν τοιούτων ὑμνεῖν—Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη ὁ Ἀδείμαντος, πολλά τε καὶ ὅμοια ἑαυταῖς. Οἶσθα οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι καὶ οἱ οἰκέται τῶν τοιούτων ἐνίοτε λάθρα πρὸς τοὺς ὑεῖς 30 τοιαῦτα λέγουσιν, οἱ δοκοῦντες εὖνοι εἶναι, καὶ ἐάν τινα ἴδωσιν ἢ ὀφείλοντα χρήματα. ὧ μὴ ἐπεξέρχεται ὁ πατήρ, ἢ τι ἄλλο ἀδικοῦντα, διακελεύονται, ὅπως ἐπειδὴν ἀνὴρ γένηται, τιμωρήσεται ideal city. Plato's description is as realistic as anything could well be: he speaks as though ξυνωκηκῶς ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ καὶ παραγεγονῶς ἐν ταῖς κατ' οἰκίαν πράξεσιν (IX 577 A). Socrates and his relations with Xanthippe possibly furnished some details of the picture (so also Müller on p. 749 of his Translation).

549 D 23 λοιδορούμενον is certainly middle, not passive, as Ast imagined: cf. VI 500 B.

ἐν δικαστηρίοις. The opposition between ἰδία and δημόσια δίκαι (cf. Latous 957 A) is not to the point here, as Vermehren remarks (Plat. Stud. p. 107), but we should not, with that critic, expunge ἐν δικαστηρίοις. The expression ἰδίᾳ ἐν δικαστηρίοις refers to ἰδία δίκαι: and δημοσίᾳ to other public gatherings, as e.g. the assembly: cf. Theaet. 174 C ὅταν ἐν δικαστηρίοις ἢ που ἄλλοι ἀναγκασθῇ κτλ.

24 ῥαθύμως κτλ.: 'indifferent to everything of the sort': cf. Xen. Mem. II 9. 1, Theaet. 173 C, D and (for the vague use of τὰ τοιαῦτα) VII 536 A.

25 αἰσθάνηται is usually explained as i.e. anacoluthon for αἰστανόμενης: but no parallels have been cited, nor are the anacolutha by which Engelhardt (Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 42) illustrates the sentence in any degree comparable. The sense compels us to regard the subject of αἰσθάνηται as the mother, but grammatically it can only, as with ἀκοῦη, be the son. I formerly placed αἰσθάνηται after ἀχθο- μένης τε: Richards excises it altogether. Neither solution is perfectly satisfactory; and it is possible that the sentence by some accident or other was imperfectly revised by Plato. The grammatical structure of this chapter from ἐνίοτε πατρός down to ἐπαινουμένους (550 A) is considerably freer than is usual even with Plato, and there are other passages in Book VIII which seem to stand in need of revision: cf. 558 A n. Nothing is easier than to 'emend' them all in accordance with our grammatical rules, but such emendations involve so great a departure from the MSS that they lack every element of probability, and as it is possible that the fault is Plato's, it is safer for us to adhere to the MSS. Nearly all the greatest writers occasionally offend against the rules by which we seek to bind them. See the excellent remarks of Longinus on the subject of correctness versus fire in composition (περὶ ὑψους 33—36).

27 ἀνάνδρος—καὶ λίαν ἀνειμένος rings poetical. The rhythm may be intentional, to suit ὑμνεῖν: or Plato may have taken the words from a tragedian. Such a line as ἀνάνδρος ἐστὶ καὶ λίαν ἀνειμένος might well have been applied by Zethus to Amphion in Euripides' Antiope, which was in effect a comparison between the πρακτικὸς and the θεωρητικὸς βίος: see Gorg. 485 E ff. and Eur. Frag. 187 Dind. Cf. also VI 494 D n.

πάντας τοὺς | τοιοῦτους καὶ ἀνὴρ μᾶλλον ἔσται τοῦ πατρὸς. καὶ 550
 ἐξίων ἕτερα τοιαῦτα ἀκούει καὶ ὄρᾳ, τοὺς μὲν τὰ αὐτῶν πράττοντας ἐν τῇ πόλει ἡλιθίους τε καλουμένους καὶ ἐν σμικρῷ λόγῳ ὄντας, τοὺς δὲ μὴ τὰ αὐτῶν τιμωμένους τε καὶ ἐπαινουμένους. τότε δὴ ὁ 5 νέος πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα ἀκούων τε καὶ ὄρων, καὶ αὐ τοὺς τοῦ πατρὸς λόγους ἀκούων τε καὶ ὄρων τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα αὐτοῦ ἐγγύθεν παρὰ τὰ τῶν ἄλλων, ἐλκόμενος ὑπ' ἀμφοτέρων τούτων, τοῦ μὲν πατρὸς αὐτοῦ ἡ τὸ λογιστικὸν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἄρδοντός τε καὶ αὔξοντος, τῶν δὲ B ἄλλων τό τε ἐπιθυμητικὸν καὶ τὸ θυμοειδές, διὰ τὸ μὴ κακοῦ ἀνδρὸς 10 εἶναι τὴν φύσιν, ὁμιλίαις δὲ ταῖς τῶν ἄλλων κακαῖς κεχρησθαι, εἰς τὸ μέσον ἐλκόμενος ὑπ' ἀμφοτέρων τούτων ἦλθε, καὶ τὴν ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἀρχὴν παρέδωκε τῷ μέσῳ τε καὶ φιλονίκῳ καὶ θυμοειδεῖ, καὶ ἐγένετο ὑψηλόφρων τε καὶ φιλότιμος ἀνὴρ. Κομιδῇ μοι, ἔφη, δοκεῖς τὴν τούτου γένεσιν διεληλυθέναι. Ἐχομεν ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, C 15 τὴν τε δευτέραν πολιτείαν καὶ τὸν δεύτερον ἀνδρα. Ἐχομεν, ἔφη.

VI. Οὐκοῦν μετὰ τοῦτο, τὸ τοῦ Λίσχυλου, λέγωμεν ἄλλον

2. ἀκούει Ξ: ἀκούη AΠγ.

5. αὐ τοὺς Ξ: αὐτοὺς A¹Π: αὐτοὺς τοὺς A²: αὐ γ.

550 A 2 ἀκούει. See cr. n. If we retain ἀκούη, ὅταν must be carried on from 549 C, in spite of the intervening sentences in 549 E. In that case we should regard Socrates' description (549 C—550 B) as virtually a single sentence ἐνίοτε—ἔχειν, ὅταν—ὑμνεῖν, καὶ ἐξίων—ἐπαινουμένους, τότε δὴ—ἀνὴρ, and ignore Adimantus' replies, as well as οἰσθα οὖν—πατρός (549 E). But although ὅταν sometimes extends its influence in this way (VII 540 D—541 A), the interposition of 549 E makes it very difficult to retain the subjunctive here, and I therefore agree with other editors in holding the sentence to be independent. Cf. 553 B n.

6 παρὰ τὰ τῶν ἄλλων. Others know his father πόρρωθεν: the son sees him near at hand, comparing his ways of life with those of other men—and consequently understands and appreciates his father more. J. and C. wrongly translate "having a nearer view of his father's ways than of the ways of others."

7 ἐλκόμενος κτλ. describes the στάσις in the soul. Cf. 545 C, D.

550 B 8 ἄρδοντος. The metaphor is common: cf. x 606 D and Euthyph. 2 D with my note ad loc. So also in Cor. I 3. 6 ἐγὼ ἐφύτευσα, Ἀπόλλως ἐπότισεν.

9 διὰ τὸ κτλ.: 'because he is not naturally a bad man,' lit. 'his nature is not that of a bad man': not 'because he is by birth the son of no bad man.'

10 εἰς τὸ μέσον—ἦλθε κτλ. A compromise is effected, reminding us of the compromise which converted the aristocratic State into τιμαρχία: cf. 547 B εἰς μέσον ὡμολόγησαν κτλ. The aorists ἦλθε, παρέδωκε etc. are past, and should be so translated: see on 548 D.

14 ἔχομεν ἄρα κτλ. Richards thinks this sentence interrogative; but ἄρα rather points the other way.

550 C—551 C Next in order comes Oligarchy or Plutocracy. The change originates in the growth of avarice and cupidity within the timarchical State; it is completed as soon as a property qualification for the holding of office has been established by law.

550 C 16 οὐκοῦν μετὰ τοῦτο κτλ. As θυμοειδές in Timarchy superseded λογιστικόν, so in Oligarchy φιλοχρημάτων supersedes θυμοειδές. The lower 'parts' of soul assert the mastery in turn, as the scale of commonwealth descends (cf. 553 D and 547 C n.); and the continuity is unbroken, for the element of φιλοχρημάτων already displayed an ominous activity in the Spartan State, although it had not yet attained the ἄλλη πρὸς πόλει τεταγμένον, μᾶλλον δὲ κατὰ τὴν ὑπόθεσιν προτέρα τὴν πόλιν; Πάνν μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Εἴη δέ γ' ἂν, ὡς ἐγὼμαι, ὀλιγαρχία ἢ μετὰ τὴν τοιαύτην πολιτείαν. Λέγεις δέ, ἢ δ' ὅς, τὴν ποίαν κατάστασιν ὀλιγαρχίαν; Τὴν ἀπὸ τιμημάτων, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, 20 D πολιτείαν, ἐν ἣ οἱ μὲν πλούσιοι ἄρχουσιν, πέννητι δὲ οὐ μέτεστιν ἀρχῆς. Μανθάνω, ἢ δ' ὅς. Οὐκοῦν ὡς μεταβαίνει πρῶτον ἐκ τῆς τιμαρχίας εἰς τὴν ὀλιγαρχίαν, ῥητέον; Ναί. Καὶ μήν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ τυφλῷ γε δῆλον, ὡς μεταβαίνει. Πῶς; Τὸ ταμιεῖον, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἐκεῖνο ἐκάστῳ χρυσίου πληροῦμενον ἀπόλλυσι τὴν τοιαύτην 25 πολιτείαν. πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ δαπάνας αὐτοῖς ἐξευρίσκουσιν, καὶ E τοὺς νόμους ἐπὶ τοῦτο παράγουσιν, ἀπειθῶντες αὐτοὶ τε καὶ γυναῖκες αὐτῶν. Εἰκός, ἔφη. Ἐπειτά γε, οἶμαι, ἄλλος ἄλλον ὁρῶν καὶ εἰς ζῆλον ἰὼν τὸ πλῆθος τοιοῦτον αὐτῶν ἀπειργάσαντο.

19. τοιαύτην Π et in marg. A²: om. A¹.

28. αὐτῶν Π: αὐτῷ A.

sovereign place. Plato's description of Greek oligarchies, if we judge it by the facts of history, probably lays rather too much emphasis on τὸ φιλοχρήματον: but it is certainly true that the pursuit of riches was the characteristic feature of ancient oligarchy. See on the whole subject Whibley Greek Oligarchies, and Newman The Politics of Aristotle IV pp. xxi—xxxvi, and compare the account which Aristotle gives of the causes producing revolution in what he calls 'aristocracies' (Pol. E 7).

τὸ τοῦ Αἰσχύλου. The line is a playful adaptation from Sept. 451 λέγ' ἄλλον ἄλλαις ἐν πύλαις εἰληχότα and 570 Ὀμολώσιν δὲ πρὸς πύλαις τεταγμένους. There is no good reason for holding (with Herwerden) that Plato is quoting from one of Aeschylus' lost plays.

17 τὴν ὑπόθεσιν. See 545 B ff.

20 τὴν ἀπὸ τιμημάτων. By Herodotus (III 81) ὀλιγαρχία is used in its strictly etymological sense; and Socrates' own name for that which Plato calls 'oligarchy' was πλουτοκρατία (Mem. IV 6. 12). The establishment of a property qualification for full citizenship was the central feature in the programme of the Athenian oligarchical party from 412 B.C. onwards: see (for 411) Thuc. VIII 65. 3, 97. 1 and (for 404) Xen. Hell. II 3. 48, with Hermann-Thumser l.c. pp. 724—734. It is therefore natural enough that Plato should define oligarchy as he does, especially as in his younger days, both personally and through his friends, he was himself connected with the Athenian oligarchical faction (Grote VIII p. 30). The term 'oligarchy' retained its Platonic sense after Plato (cf. e.g. Arist. Pol. I 8. 1280^a 1 f. ἀναγκαῖον μὲν, ὅπου ἂν ἀρχῶσι διὰ πλοῦτον ἂν τ' ἐλάττους ἂν τε πλείους, εἶναι ταύτην ὀλιγαρχίαν κτλ.), though Aristotle recognises also the wider meaning, e.g. in Pol. Z 2. 1317^b 39 ὀλιγαρχία καὶ γένει καὶ πλούτῳ καὶ παιδείᾳ ὀρίζεται. See especially Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 15—22.

550 D 22 ὡς μεταβαίνει. The leading features in Plato's narrative are probably taken from the history of Sparta, which had degenerated during his lifetime from a 'timarchy' to what was virtually an oligarchical polity: cf. Nohle die Staatslehre Pl. p. 106 and Hermann-Thumser l.c. p. 258. Others have referred to the Solonian constitution and the oligarchical revolutions at Athens in 411 and 404. In neither of these instances was the previous government timarchical, for the rule of the Eupatrids had become an oppressive oligarchy by the time of Solon (Holm Gk Hist. E. T. I p. 389); but it is likely enough that Plato was thinking of these among other oligarchies and oligarchical movements in some parts of his descriptions: see 551 B n.

24 τὸ ταμιεῖον—ἐκεῖνο. 548 A n. The oracle spoke truly ἡ φιλοχρηματία Σπάρταν ὀλεῖ, ἄλλο δὲ οὐδέν (Tyrtaeus 3. 1).

28 γυναῖκες. See on 548 A.

550 E 29 ἀπειργάσαντο. On the

- 30 Εἰκός. Τοῦντεῦθεν τοῖνυν, εἶπον, προϊόντες εἰς τὸ πρόσθεν τοῦ χρηματίζεσθαι, ὅσῳ ἂν τοῦτο τιμιώτερον ἡγῶνται, τοσούτῳ ἀρετὴν ἀτιμωτέραν. ἢ οὐχ οὕτω πλούτου ἀρετὴ διέστηκεν, ὥσπερ ἐν πλάστιγγι ζυγοῦ κειμένου ἐκατέρου ἀεὶ τοῖναντίον ῥέποντε; Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Τιμωμένου δὴ | πλούτου ἐν πόλει καὶ τῶν πλουσίων 551 ἀτιμωτέρα ἀρετὴ τε καὶ οἱ ἀγαθοί. Δῆλον. Ἀσκεῖται δὴ τὸ ἀεὶ τιμώμενον, ἀμελεῖται δὲ τὸ ἀτιμαζόμενον. Οὕτω. Ἀντὶ δὴ φιλο-νίκων καὶ φιλοτίμων ἀνδρῶν φιλοχρηματισταὶ καὶ φιλοχρήματοι 5 τελευτῶντες ἐγένοντο, καὶ τὸν μὲν πλούσιον ἐπαινοῦσιν τε καὶ θαυμάζουσι καὶ εἰς τὰς ἀρχὰς ἄγουσι, τὸν δὲ πένητα ἀτιμάζουσι. Πάνυ γε. Οὐκοῦν τότε δὴ νόμοι τίθενται ὅρον πολιτείας ὀλιγαρχικῆς, ταξάμενοι πλῆθος χρημάτων, οὗ μὲν μᾶλλον ὀλιγαρχία B πλέον, οὗ δ' ἥττοι, ἔλαττοι, προειπόντες ἀρχῶν μὴ μετέχειν, ᾧ ἂν tense see 548 D n. A few MSS read ἀπειργάσατο: but ἄλλος ἄλλος is in partitive apposition to the plural subject, according to the regular idiom: cf. II 369 B, C, IX 581 C n.

32 ἢ οὐχ κτλ. Cf. 555 C and especially Latw 743 A ff. ἀγαθὸν δὲ ὄντα διαφερόντως καὶ πλούσιον εἶναι διαφερόντως ἀδύνατον ('how hardly shall a rich man' etc.). Other parallels are quoted by Spiess Logos Spermatikos p. 74. Cf. also III 416 E n.

ὥσπερ κτλ.: 'as it were inclining always in opposite directions when each is placed in the scale of a balance.' As the scale containing virtue rises, that containing riches falls, and vice versa. Cf. Hom. Il. xxii 209 ff. Madvig's κείμενον ἐκάτερον, though adopted even by J. and C., is questionable Greek, and certainly no improvement. ὥσπερ should be taken with ῥέποντε "quasi non πλούτου ἀρετὴ διέστηκεν, sed πλούτος καὶ ἀρετὴ διεστέκατον praecessisset" (Schneider). There is a kindred figure in 544 E above: ἃ ἂν ὥσπερ ῥέψαντα τὰλλα ἐφελεύσεται. Ξ and some other inferior MSS have the obvious 'correction' ῥέποντος. Other conjectures are ῥέπουσα (Liebhöhl) and ἂν ῥέπουσα (Price), but neither could ever have been changed to ῥέποντε.

551 A 4 φιλοχρηματισταὶ κτλ. Although Aristotle (Pol. E 12. 1316^a 39 ff.) pronounces it ἀποπικόν to think that oligarchy arises ὅτι φιλοχρήματοι καὶ χρηματισταὶ οἱ ἐν ταῖς ἀρχαῖς, there is no doubt that the special oligarchy which Plato probably has in view, viz. Sparta in the fourth century B.C., became to all intents and purposes an oligarchy chiefly from this cause, as in fact Aristotle himself recognises ib. 7. 1307^a 34 ff.: cf. also B 9. 1270^a 14 ff. It should also be remembered that Plato's selection of the αἰτία τῆς φθορᾶς is primarily determined by his psychological standpoint: see on 543 A.

5 ἐγένοντο. See 548 D n.

7 νόμον τίθενται κτλ. In Sparta, apparently, matters never went so far as this, although those who were unable to make the statutory contribution to the public mess forfeited their citizenship, according to the laws of Lycurgus, and later abuses swelled the ranks of the ὑπομειλόμενος from this cause: see Arist. Pol. B 9. 1271^a 34 and Hermann-Thumser l.c. pp. 258—260 nn. 'The minimum amount of property qualifying for privilege in an oligarchy' was of course different in different oligarchical States: cf. Whibley Gk Olig. p. 22.

551 B 8 οὗ μὲν μᾶλλον κτλ. See again Whibley l.c. pp. 126—132. As an example of a moderate oligarchy (in the Platonic sense) we may take the Solonian constitution, which was, broadly speaking, the ideal of the moderate oligarchs at Athens towards the end of the fifth century (Beloch Att. Pol. p. 74: cf. Thuc. VIII 97. 2), and is commended by Plato in Latw 698 B ff.

μὴ ἢ οὐσία εἰς τὸ ταχθὲν τίμημα, ταῦτα δὲ ἢ βία μεθ' ὅπλων 10 διαπράττονται, ἢ καὶ πρὸ τούτου φοβήσαντες κατεστήσαντο τὴν τοιαύτην πολιτείαν. ἢ οὐχ οὕτως; Οὕτω μὲν οὖν. Ἡ μὲν δὴ κατάστασις, ὥς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, αὕτη. Ναί, ἔφη· ἀλλὰ τίς δὴ ὁ τρόπος τῆς πολιτείας; καὶ ποῖά ἐστιν ἃ ἔφαμεν αὐτὴν ἁμαρτήματα C¹ ἔχειν;

15

VII. Πρῶτον μὲν, ἔφη, τοῦτο αὐτό, ὅρος αὐτῆς οἷός ἐστιν.
 ἄθρει γάρ, εἰ νεῶν οὕτω τις ποιοῖτο κυβερνήτας, ἀπὸ τιμημάτων, τῷ δὲ πένητι, εἰ καὶ κυβερνητικώτερος εἴη, μὴ ἐπιτρέπτοι. Πονηράν,

10. ἢ II: ἢ A.

10 ἢ βία κτλ. "To an Athenian, as to ourselves, this would naturally suggest a revolution against a democratic system such as took place at the establishment of the Four Hundred in 411 B.C., or of the Thirty in 404 B.C., and constantly throughout Greece during the Peloponnesian war" (Bosanquet). The remark applies with equal force to πρὸ τούτου φοβήσαντες (cf. Thuc. VIII 66. 2), and it can scarcely be doubted that the familiar struggles of oligarchy against democracy in his own as well as other times supplied Plato with this detail of the picture. But the employment of force would be equally necessary in order to transform a timarchy into an oligarchy, owing to the opposition to be apprehended from the impoverished and relatively poorer sections of the timarchs, who would under an oligarchy be formally and for ever excluded from office. The conspiracy of Cinadon partly illustrates Plato's point; for it was supported by ὑπομειλόμενοι, and suppressed by force (Xen. Hell. III 3. 4—II with Grote IX pp. 70ff.). Krohn (Pl. St. p. 211) asserts that Plato has already forgotten 545 C, D, where constitutional change was said to originate from στάσις in the ruling class. But the struggle between those timarchs who have, and those who have not, the proposed τίμημα, is in reality στάσις between the rulers, for until timarchy is abrogated by law, the poor, if otherwise qualified, are de iure rulers as well as the rich. In Sparta it would be otherwise, because those who failed to pay their contributions to the ἐυσίστρια ceased ipso facto to be rulers; only Plato's timarchy is not in this particular a copy of Sparta, but rather resembles Crete (547 D, 551 A nm.). See also on 545 C.

11 κατεστήσαντο κτλ. For the aorist

cf. 548 D n. ὥς ἔπος εἰπεῖν is illustrated on I 341 B. ἔφαμεν refers to 544 C.

551 C—553 A. There are many grievous faults in the oligarchical city. It makes wealth instead of knowledge the qualification for ruling, is divided against itself, incapable, in all probability, of waging war, and false to our principle of 'one man, one work.' Worst of all, Oligarchy is the first constitution which permits a man to dispose of all his property by sale. From this cause springs up a large impoverished class resembling drones, some stingless and others stinging. The former are only poor, but the latter are criminals who have to be repressed by force.

551 C 16 πρῶτον μὲν: sc. ἀμαρτημά (ἐστιν).

ὅρος—ἐστιν: 'terminus eius qualis sit.' ὅρος is the limit or defining mark which separates it from all the other πολιτεῖαι: cf. I 331 D. Few will approve of Badham's conjecture τοῦτο αὐτὸ ὅρας αὐτῆς οἶόν ἐστιν, especially as ὅρος echoes ὅρον in 551 A. οἶός ἐστιν, ἄθρει· εἰ γὰρ νεῶν κτλ. (Liebhold) is scarcely less unhappy. The text is above suspicion.

17 εἰ νεῶν κτλ. The illustration is a favourite one both with Socrates and Plato: cf. Xen. Mem. III 9. 11 and supra VI 488 A ff. nm. There is probably no aposiopesis after ἐπιτρέπτοι: we should translate 'Just consider if one were to choose pilots on the census principle and refuse to let a poor man steer though better qualified!'

18 πονηράν κτλ. "Adimantus quasi non videre, sed quid videat renuntiare iussus, πονηράν, inquit, τὴν ναυτίλιαν αὐτοὺς ναυτίλλεσθαι sc. ὁρῶ" (Schneider). Cf. VII 535 C n. This explanation is, I think, easier than that of Stallbaum, who prints ἄθρει γάρ· εἰ νεῶν κτλ., understand-ἢ δ' ὅς, τὴν ναυτιλίαν αὐτοὺς ναυτίλλεσθαι. Οὐκοῦν καὶ περὶ 20 ἄλλου οὕτως ὅτουοὺν ἀρχῆς; Οἶμαι ἔγωγε. Πλὴν πόλεως; ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἢ καὶ πόλεως πέρι; Πολύ γ', ἔφη, μάλιστα, ὅσω χαλεπωτάτη καὶ μεγίστη ἡ ἀρχή. 'Εν μὲν δὴ τοῦτο τοσοῦτον ὀλιγαρχία ἂν D ἔχοι ἀμάρτημα. Φαίνεται. Τί δέ; τόδε ἤρά τι τούτου ἔλαττον; Τὸ ποῖον; Τὸ μὴ μίαν ἀλλὰ δύο ἀνάγκη εἶναι τὴν τοιαύτην πόλιν, 25 τὴν μὲν πενήτων, τὴν δὲ πλουσίων, οἰκοῦντας ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ, αἰεὶ ἐπιβουλευόντας ἀλλήλοις. Οὐδὲν μὰ Δί', ἔφη, ἔλαττον. 'Αλλὰ μὴν οὐδὲ τόδε καλόν, τὸ ἀδυνάτους εἶναι ἴσως πόλεμόν τινα πολεμεῖν διὰ τὸ ἀναγκάζεσθαι ἢ χρωμένους τῷ πλήθει ὥπλισμένῳ δεδιέναι μᾶλλον ἢ τοὺς πολεμίους, ἢ μὴ χρωμένους ὡς ἀληθῶς E 30 ὀλιγαρχικοὺς φανῆναι ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ μάχεσθαι, καὶ ἅμα χρήματα μὴ

19. ναυτιλίαν A²Ξγ: ναυτηλίαν (sic) A¹Π. ὅτουοὺν ἢ τινος AΠΞγ. 24. ἀνάγκη Ast: ἀνάγκη codd.
 ἀλλὰ μὴν οὐδὲ A¹: καὶ μὴν οὐδὲ τόδε A².

20. ὅτουοὺν vertit Ficinus:
 27. Ita II:

ing (after ἐπιτρέποι) τί λέγοις ἂν περὶ τούτου; or the like, and λέγοιμι ἂν to govern the accusative with infinitive. J. and C.'s solution is in principle the same as Stallbaum's. The text may be corrupt, but no convincing emendation has hitherto been offered. The different proposals are εἰκός (Ast, Richards) and ἂν εἴη δέος (Lieb-hold) for ἦ δ' ὅς: <φαῖν ἂν> added after ἦ δ' ὅς (Stephanus): πονηρὰ εἴη ἂν ναυτιλία αὐτοῖς ναυτίλλεσθαι (Ast): πονηράν <ἀνάκη> κτλ. Richards—but it would surely be better to add the word after ναυτιλίαν.
 I have sometimes fancied that Plato wrote πονηράν, ἦ δ' ὅς, τὴν ναυτιλίαν αὐτοῖς ναυτίλλεσθαι, taking the accusative as in apposition to the previous sentence (cf. in some respects Hipp. Mai. 291 E and infra 567 C); but, for a reason to be mentioned presently on 551 D, perhaps ναυτιλίαν <ἀνάγκη> is right.

19. περὶ ἄλλου κτλ. See cr. n. ἢ τινος is retained by Schneider, who takes it as neuter, and ὅτουοὺν as masculine.
 The words can hardly be anything except a gloss or variant on ὅτουοὺν: the corrections ἡστίος or ἡστινοσοῦν (Ast) are much less easy and probable. περὶ governs ἀρχῆς, on which ἄλλου ὅτουοὺν, which is neuter, depends. Cobet's περὶ ἄλλης οὕτως ὅτουοὺν ἀρχῆς ('about any other ἀρχή whatsoever') does not suit with πλὴν πόλεως (i.e. ἄλλου—not ἄλλης —ὅτουοὺν πλὴν πόλεως).

551 D 24. μὴ μίαν κτλ. Aristotle

(Pol. E 12. 1316^b 6 ff.) urges that this is equally true of all States where inequality of property prevails: but Plato would not allow that it is true of his ideal city, or even of timarchy except in so far as timarchy is itself oligarchical (548 A). ἀνάγκη. See cr. n. The word could be dispensed with here, and, as all those MSS which are in the habit of writing the iota subscript at all regularly appear to have the nominative and not the dative, it is possible, and even perhaps probable, that this is the ἀνάγκη which Richards desiderated in 551 C: see note ad loc.

27. τὸ ἀδυνάτους κτλ. The sense of course is 'to be—probably—unable' i.e.
 'that they are in all probability unable.'
 Richard says ἴσως is 'feeble': to me it seems exactly the right word in the right place. The conjectures σῶς (Badham) and ἰσχυρῶς (Richards) are each of them for different reasons very unpleasing, and even if the passage were corrupt ἰσχυρῶς is far too violent a change to deserve consideration.

28. χρωμένους κτλ. In illustration the Oxford editors cite Thuc. III 27.
 The Spartans in particular had regularly to arm and employ the πλῆθος, both Perioeci and Helots, in their wars (see e.g. Thuc. VII 19. 3), and were consequently sometimes exposed to grave dangers (Thuc. IV 80).

551 E 29. ὡς ἀληθῶς ὀλιγαρχικοὺς:
 'literally olig-archical or masters of few' ἐθέλειν εἰσφέρειν, ἢτε φιλοχρημάτους. Οὐ καλόν. Τί δέ; ὁ πάλαι ἐλοιδοροῦμεν, τὸ πολυπραγμονεῖν γεωργοῦντας καὶ χρηματιζο-52 μένους | καὶ πολεμοῦντας ἡμα τοὺς αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ τοιαύτῃ πολιτείᾳ, ἣ δοκεῖ ὀρθῶς ἔχειν; Οὐδ' ὅπωςτιοῦν. "Ορα δὴ, τούτων πάντων τῶν κακῶν εἰ τόδε μέγιστον αὕτη πρώτη παραδέχεται. Τὸ ποῖον; Τὸ ἐξεῖναι πάντα τὰ αὐτοῦ ἀποδόσθαι καὶ ἄλλῳ κτήσασθαι τὰ τούτου, καὶ ἀποδόμενον οἰκεῖν ἐν τῇ πόλει μηδὲν ὄντα τῶν τῆς 5 πόλεως μερῶν, μήτε χρηματιστὴν μήτε δημιουργὸν μήτε ἱππέα B μήτε ὀπλίτην, ἀλλὰ πένητα καὶ ἄπορον κεκλημένον. Ἰ. Πρώτη, ἔφη.

 οὐκ οὐκ διακωλύεται γε ἐν ταῖς ὀλιγαρχουμέναις τὸ τοιοῦτον· οὐ γὰρ ἂν οἱ μὲν ὑπὲρ πλουτοὶ ἦσαν, οἱ δὲ παντάπασιν πένητες. Ὅρθως.
 τότε δὲ ἄθρει· ἦρα ὅτε πλούσιος ὢν ἀνήλυσκεν ὁ τοιοῦτος, μᾶλλον 10 τι τότ' ἦν ὄφελος τῇ πόλει εἰς ἢ νῦν δὴ ἐλέγομεν; ἢ ἐδόκει μὲν τῶν ἀρχόντων εἶναι, τῇ δὲ ἀληθείᾳ οὔτε ἀρχῶν οὔτε ὑπηρέτης ἦν αὐτῆς, ἀλλὰ τῶν ἐτοιμῶν ἀναλωτῆς; Οὕτως, ἔφη· ἐδόκει, ἦν δὲ οὐδὲν
 C ἄλλο ἢ ἀναλωτῆς. Βούλει οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, φῶμεν αὐτόν, ὥς (Herren von wenigen, Schneider). Cf. ὀλιγαρχικῶς 555 A n. and (for ὡς ἀληθῶς) VI 511 B n. Jowett's translation "few to fight as they are few to rule" does not bring out the peculiar force of ὀλιγαρχικοῦς here.

31 φιλοχρημάτους: with emphasis on φιλο- (Schneider, who compares 568 B for αἶτε without the copula). The sentiment is illustrated by Bosanquet from Arist. Pol. B 9. 1271^b 13 εἰσφέρουσι τε κακῶς (of the Spartans): cf. also infra 554 E f. and Theophr. Char. 26, where the ὀλιγαρχικός cries πότε πανσόμεθα ὑπὸ λειτουργῶν καὶ τριηραρχῶν ἀπολλύμενοι; and more in Hermann-Thumser l. c. p. 685 n. 1.

πάλαι. IV 434 A ff.

552 A 4 τὸ ἐξεῖναι κτλ. According to some ancient authorities (cited in Hermann-Thumser l. c. pp. 186 f.), the constitution of Lycurgus absolutely forbade the alienation of a certain minimum of the original κλήρος, called the ἀρχαία μοῖρα. The evidence of Plato does not go far, but so far as it does go, it supports this view; for he says that oligarchy is the first polity which permits a citizen πάντα τὰ αὐτοῦ ἀποδιδόναι: cf. also Latius 744 D. Aristotle says nothing of the ἀρχαία μοῖρα, and states that a Spartan might legally part with his estate by gift or bequest, although to sell it was οὐ καλόν (Pol. B 9. 1270^a 19 ff.). The conflict of evidence is discussed by Newman and Susemihl on Arist. l. c.: see also on the other side Hermann-Thumser l. c. pp. 259 f. In many Greek States besides Sparta it was either illegal, or at least dishonourable, to dispose of the 'ancient lot': see Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 113—115.

552 B 8 οὐκ οὐκ κτλ. Schneider was the first to give this sentence to Adimantus, and ὀρθῶς to Socrates, "qui quum paucorum gubernationem primant illud vitium recipere persuasum haberet eamque sententiam verbis ὅρα δὴ etc. aperte demonstrasset, suffragante Adimanto rursus in dubium sine causa rem vocare non debebat." Cf. 554 B. Baiter and others ought not to have reverted to the old arrangement. For οὐκ οὐκ—γε see Neil's edition of the Knights of Aristophanes p. 195.

11 εἰς ἃ: i.e. for χρηματισμός, δημιουργία and the other purposes specified in 552 A.

13 ἐδόκει: sc. ἄλλο τι ἢ ἀναλωτῆς (Schneider). This explanation, which is, I think, neater and more pointed than to supply τῶν ἀρχόντων, makes ἦν—ἀναλωτῆς indispensable. Herwerden was wrong in any case when he bracketed these words.

- 15 ἐν κηρίῳ κηφήν ἐγγίγνεται, σμήνους νόσημα, οὕτω καὶ τὸν τοιοῦτον ἐν οἰκίᾳ κηφήνα ἐγγίγνεσθαι, νόσημα πόλεως; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, ὦ Σώκρατες. Οὐκοῦν, ὦ Ἀδείμαντε, τοὺς μὲν πτηνοὺς κηφήνας πάντας ἀκέντρους ὁ θεὸς πεποίηκεν, τοὺς δὲ πεζοὺς τούτους ἐνίοις μὲν αὐτῶν ἀκέντρους, ἐνίοις δὲ δεινὰ κέντρα ἔχοντας; καὶ ἐκ μὲν 20 τῶν ἀκέντρων πτωχοὶ πρὸς τὸ γῆρας τελευτῶσιν, ἑκ δὲ τῶν D κεκεντρωμένων πάντες ὅσοι κέκληνται κακοῦργοι; Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη. Δῆλον ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐν πόλει, οὐ ἂν ἴδῃς πτωχοὺς, ὅτι εἰσὶ που ἐν τούτῳ τῷ τόπῳ ἀποκεκρυσμένοι κλέπται τε καὶ βαλλαντιοτόμοι καὶ ιεροσύλοι καὶ πάντων τῶν τοιούτων κακῶν δημιουργοί.
25 Δῆλον, ἔφη. Τί οὖν; ἐν ταῖς ὀλιγαρχουμέναις πόλεσι πτωχοὺς οὐχ ὁρᾷς ἐνόντας; Ὀλίγου γ', ἔφη, πάντας τοὺς ἐκτὸς τῶν ἀρχόντων. Μὴ οὖν οἰώμεθα, ἔφη, ἐγώ, καὶ κακοῦρους πολλοὺς ἐν E αὐταῖς εἶναι κέντρα ἔχοντας, οὓς ἐπιμελεία βία κατέχουσιν αἱ

25. δῆλον, ἔφη II: om. A.

27. οἰώμεθα A²Ξ: οἰόμεθα A¹Πg.

552 C 15 ἐν κηρίῳ: not 'in the hive' (as D. and V.), but 'in a cell.' The drone-cell in which the drone is produced stands to the whole hive as the οἰκία to the πόλις. For κηρίον in this sense, see Bonitz Ind. Arist. s.v.

τὸν τοιοῦτον — κηφήνα. The comparison is frequent in Greek literature from Hesiod onwards (OD. 304 ff.): see Ruhnken on Tim. Lex. s.v. κηφήνησσι κοθοῦροιςι and Blaydes on Ar. Wasps 1114. "We would purge the land of the drones, that rob the bee of her honey" (Pericles Prince of Tyre II i. 50).

20 τελευτῶσιν: i.q. τελευτώντες εἰσιν. 'To the stingless belong those who die paupers in their old age.' πρὸς τὸ γῆρας is adverbial as in VI 498 A. Stallbaum and others understand τελευτῶσιν as only 'tandem fiunt'; but the other view—Schneider's—is better and more natural: cf. II 372 D γηραιοὶ τελευτώντες and Sympr. 179 E.

552 D 21 πάντες: sc. εἰσὶν (understood from τελευτῶσιν) rather than γίγνονται (as J. and C. explain).

22 ἐν πόλει κτλ. Compare the melancholy picture of Athens in Isocrates Areop. 83 τότε μὲν οὐδεὶς ἦν τῶν πολιτῶν ἐνδεὴς τῶν ἀναγκαίων, οὐδὲ προσαιτῶν τοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας τὴν πόλιν κατήσχυε, νῦν δὲ πλείους εἰσὶν οἱ σπανίζοντες τῶν ἐχόντων οἷς ἀξίων ἐστί πολλὴν συγγνώμην ἔχειν, εἰ μὴδὲν τῶν κοινῶν φροντίζουσιν ἀλλὰ τούτο σκοποῦσιν, ὁπόθεν τὴν αἰε παρούσαν ἡμέραν διάξουσιν. The Areopagiticus was published about 354 B.C.

26 ὀλίγου γε—ἀρχόντων. Plato's description may be illustrated from the state of Athens just before Solon's legislation: see Solon Fr. 36 ed. Bergk = Arist. Ath. Pol. 12. 4. The words χρησμών λέγοντας (in line 9 of the fragment) are certainly not, as some have thought, a corruption of χρεῖους φυγόντας (as in Aristotle's text), but point to a different recension. χρησμών λέγοντας 'gathering alms' has been suggested (cf. χρήζω, χρημοσύνη), and may I think be the original from which the first of the two variants comes.

27 μὴ οὖν οἰώμεθα: 'are we, then, not to suppose?' μὴ is not 'num.', but the negative and goes with οἰώμεθα: cf. I 337 B μὴ ἀποκρίνωμαι ὧν προεῖπες μηδέν; and infra 554 B with other examples cited by Stallbaum: see also Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 187. The positive counterpart of this idiom is οἰώμεθα or βούλει οἰώμεθα: and the negative is due to the jussive idea on which the subjunctive logically depends. οἰώμεθα (see cr. II.) is retained by Schneider and others, μὴ being construed as 'num.' But 'we do not, then, suppose, do we,' overdoes the irony, and Stallbaum's explanation is better in every way. On the interchange of ο and ω in Paris A see Introd. § 5.

552 E 28 ἐπιμελεία = 'deliberately,' 'consulto,' is a rare but well-established adverb: see Xen. Cyr. V 3. 47, Mag. Eq.

ἀρχαί; Οἴώμεθα μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ δι' ἀπαιδευσίαν καὶ κακὴν τροφὴν καὶ κατάστασιν τῆς πολιτείας φήσομεν τοὺς τοιού- 30 τους αὐτόθι ἐγγίγνεσθαι; Φήσομεν. Ἄλλ' οὖν δὴ τοιαύτη γέ τις ἂν εἴη ἡ ὀλιγαρχουμένη πόλις καὶ τοσαῦτα κακὰ ἔχουσα, ἴσως δὲ καὶ πλείω. Σχεδόν τι, ἔφη. Ἀπειργάσθω δὴ ἡμῖν καὶ αὕτη, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἡ πολιτεία, ἣν ὀλιγαρχίαν καλοῦσιν, ἐκ τιμημάτων ἔχουσα τοὺς ἄρχοντας· τὸν δὲ ταύτῃ ὅμοιον μετὰ ταῦτα σκοπῶμεν, ὥς τε γίγνεται οἷός τε γενόμενος ἔστιν. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

VIII. Ἄρ' οὖν ὧδε μάλιστα εἰς ὀλιγαρχικὸν ἐκ τοῦ τιμοκρα- 5 τικοῦ ἐκείνου μεταβάλλει; Πῶς; Ὅταν αὐτοῦ παῖς γενόμενος τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ζηλοῖ τε τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὰ ἐκείνου ἵχνη διώκη, ἔπειτα αὐτὸν ἴδῃ ἐξαίφνης πταίσαντα ὥσπερ πρὸς ἔρματι πρὸς τῇ

29. οἴώμεθα A²: οἰόμεθα A¹ΠΞγ.

5. εἰς A²Π: om. A¹.

7. 9 and cf. κατ' ἐπιμέλειαν in Hell. IV 4. 8. The magistrates resign themselves to the presence of these κακοῦργοι, and instead of removing the cause—ἀπαιδευσία καὶ κακὴ τροφή καὶ κατάστασις τῆς πολιτείας—as they should do, they 'deliberately hold them down by force.' Plato emphatically believed that 'force is no remedy.' Cf. the corresponding account of the oligarchical man in 554 C, D κατέχει ἄλλας κακὰς ἐπιθυμίας ἐνούσας, οὐ πείθων ὅτι οὐκ ἄμεινον, οὐδ' ἡμερῶν λόγῳ, ἀλλ' ἀνάγκη καὶ φόβῳ κτλ. Schneider's translation 'carefully' (sorgfältig) is inaccurate; but he was right in holding that ἐπιμελεία and not βία (as J. and C. suppose) is the adverb. We certainly cannot understand ἐπιμελεία as = ὑπὸ τῆς ἄλλης ἐπιμελείας in spite of 554 C. The suggestions καὶ βία (Stephanus) and [ἐπιμελεία] βία (J. J. Hartman) are superfluous.

29 ἀπαιδευσίαν. ἀπαιδευσία is a feature of the oligarchical State and man: cf. 554 B, 559 D.

553 A—553 E The oligarchical man is the son of a timarchical father, whose fortunes have been shipwrecked by an unjust condemnation. Profiting by his father's example, the son deposes the love of honour from its sovereign place, and enthrones desire and avarice within his heart. The amassing of wealth is henceforward his one consuming passion.

553 A 6 ὅταν κτλ. Plato (as suggested by Hermann Gesch. Abhandl. pp. 155 ff.) may have in view some of the generation of Athenian oligarchs who succeeded to the political party of Cimon; for Cimon was τιμοκρατικός rather than ὀλιγαρχικός (cf. V 470 C n.). The description of the progress of individual degeneration from the aristocrat down to the tyrant constantly reflects Plato's own experience of Athenian society and domestic life: cf. 549 C, D nn. Abundant materials for the picture were doubtless ready at hand in the παντοδαποὶ ἀνθρωποι (557 C) of the 'bazaar of politics' (557 D). For the construction of this sentence cf. 549 C—550 A n. We ought not to understand μεταβάλλει before ὅταν, for the μεταβολή does not take place until 553 C, and ἄρ' οὐκ—παραζωννύντα is the only apodosis which Plato thinks it necessary to provide.

8 πταίσαντα κτλ. For the figure cf. Aesch. Ag. 1006 and Eum. 554—565.

553 B ὥσπερ πρὸς ἔρματι κτλ. In some other examples of this idiom (III 414 E, VII 520 E, supra 545 E, IX 573 E et al.) only the first preposition is expressed; but in Euthyph. 2 C, Phaedr. 255 D and Phaed. 67 D (according to Ven. T) we find as here both prepositions. Cobet is not justified in excising the second preposition either here or elsewhere (*V. L.*² pp. 54, 164 ff., 532); for while ὥσπερ πρὸς ἔρματι πρὸς τῇ πόλει (for example) is only a similitude, in ὥσπερ πρὸς ἔρματι τῇ πόλει the connexion is much closer, amounting almost to identification: see my note on Euthyph. l. c. and cf. Braun de Hyperb. Plat. II p. 9.

πόλει, καὶ ἐκχέαντα τά τε αὐτοῦ καὶ ἑαυτόν, ἢ στρατηγήσαντα ἢ 10 τιν' ἄλλην μεγάλην ἀρχὴν ἄρξαντα, εἶτα, εἰς δικαστήριον ἐμπεσόντα, βλαπτόμενον ὑπὸ συκοφαντῶν ἢ ἀποθανόντα ἢ ἐκπεσόντα ἢ ἀτιμω-θέντα καὶ τὴν οὐσίαν ἵπασαν ἀποβαλόντα—Εἰκός γ', ἔφη. Ἴδων δέ γε, ὦ φίλε, ταῦτα καὶ παθὼν καὶ ἀπολέσας τὰ ὄντα δείσας, οἶμαι, εὐθὺς ἐπὶ κεφαλὴν ὠθεῖ ἐκ τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ ἐν τῇ ἑαυτοῦ 15 ψυχῇ φιλοτιμίαν τε καὶ τὸ θυμοειδὲς ἐκείνο, καὶ ταπεινωθεὶς ὑπὸ πενίας πρὸς χρηματισμὸν τραπόμενος γλίσχρως καὶ κατὰ σμικρὸν φειδόμενος καὶ ἐργαζόμενος χρήματα ξυλλέγεται. ἄρ' οὐκ οἶε τὸν τοιοῦτον τότε εἰς μὲν τὸν θρόνον ἐκείνον τὸ ἐπιθυμητικὸν τε καὶ φιλοχρήματον ἐγκαθίζειν καὶ μέγαν βασιλέα ποιεῖν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, 20 τιάρας τε καὶ στρεπτοὺς καὶ ἀκινάκας παραζωννύντα; "Εγὼ γ', ἔφη. Τὸ δέ γε, οἶμαι, λογιστικὸν τε καὶ θυμοειδὲς ἡ χαμαὶ ἔνθεν D καὶ ἔνθεν παρακαθίσας ὑπ' ἐκείνῳ καὶ καταδουλωσάμενος, τὸ μὲν οὐδὲν ἄλλο εἰ λογίεσθαι οὐδὲ σκοπεῖν ἄλλ' ἢ ὑπόθεν ἐξ ἐλαττόνων

9. ἢ τιν' Ξq: ἢ τὴν AΠ.
 18. τὸ Ξq: τὸν AΠ.

17. ξυλλέγεται Ξq²: ξυλλέγεται AΠq¹.

9 ἢ στρατηγήσαντα κτλ. The words ἢ στρατηγήσαντα—ἀποβαλόντα interpret the figure in ἐξαίφνης παίσαντα—ἑαυτόν: 'having either been a Strategus or held some other high office, and then, when brought to trial, been either put to death, or banished, or disfranchised and deprived of all his property, by the damaging evidence of lying informers.' βλαπτόμενον ὑπὸ συκοφαντῶν might be taken as subordinate to ἐμπεσόντα, but πρὸς πόλει παίσαντα seems rather to imply that the prosecution is not wholly vexatious, although the evidence turns out to be so. Some misfortune, such as happened for example at the battle of Arginusae (Xen. Hell. 1 6. 33 ff., 7. 4 ff., with Grote VII pp. 411 ff.), arouses a great wave of popular feeling, in consequence of which the general is put upon his trial, and συκοφάνται manage to secure his condemnation (cf. Xen. l.c. 1 7. 11). Badham and Cobet ignominiously expel βλαπτόμενον, apparently for no better reason than that ἐμπεσόντα can be followed by ὑπὸ of the agent (Cobet N. L. p. 752, *V. L.*² p. 54). If the passage is taken as I take it, βλαπτόμενον cannot be cancelled without grave inconvenience; and even if βλαπτόμενον ὑπὸ συκοφαντῶν be construed with ἐμπεσόντα, its excision is unnecessary. On the mischief wrought by συκοφάνται in Athens see Hermann-Thumser Gr. Staatsalt. p. 686 nn. 2—4.

553 C 17 ξυλλέγεται. See cr. n. and 550 A, 553 A nn. ξυλλέγεται is impossible after ὠθεῖ, and ὠθῇ would be very awkward.

20 τιάρας κτλ.: symbols of Oriental sovereignty—note μέγαν βασιλέα—and distinction: see Dict. Ant. s.vv. and Schück de Scholiis p. 32.

553 D 21 χαμαὶ—παρακαθίσας. Plato makes them squat like servile Oriental courtiers. The picture expresses with admirable clearness the psychological basis of Plato's sequence of politics: see on 547 C and 550 C, and compare the lines of Milton Paradise Lost IX 1127 ff. "Understanding ruled not, and the will Heard not her lore; both in subjection now To sensual appetite, who from beneath Usurping, over sovran reason claimed Superior sway." The poet Gray's note, though not, I think, correct, is worthy of quotation: "An allusion to those statues or bas-reliefs where some king, or conqueror, is represented with captive nations in chains sitting at his feet; as in that erected to the honour of Justinian, in the Hippodrome at Constantinople."

22 καὶ καταδουλωσάμενος is excised by J. J. Hartmann: but see V 451 B nn.

χρημάτων πλείω ἔσται, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ θαυμάζειν καὶ τιμᾶν μηδὲν ἄλλο ἢ πλουτέον τε καὶ πλουσίους, καὶ φιλοτιμείσθαι μηδ' ἐφ' ἐνὶ ἄλλῳ 25 ἢ ἐπὶ χρημάτων κτήσεται καὶ εἰάν τι ἄλλο εἰς τοῦτο φέρῃ. Οὐκ ἔστ' ἄλλη, ἔφη, μεταβολὴ οὕτω ταχεῖά τε καὶ ἰσχυρά ἐκ φιλοτίμου γένου εἰς φιλοχρήματον. Ἄρ' οὖν οὗτος, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὀλιγαρχικός ἐστιν; Ἡ γοῦν μεταβολὴ αὐτοῦ ἐξ ὁμοίου ἀνδρός ἐστι τῇ πολιτείᾳ, ἐξ ἧς ἢ ὀλιγαρχία μετέστη. Σκοπῶμεν δὴ εἰ ὅμοιος ἂν εἴη. | Σκοπῶμεν. 30

IX. Οὐκοῦν πρότερον μὲν τῷ χρήματα περὶ πλείστου ποιεῖσθαι ὅμοιος ἂν εἴη; Πῶς δ' οὐ; Καὶ μὴν τῷ γε φειδωλὸς εἶναι καὶ ἐργάτης, τὰς ἀναγκαίους ἐπιθυμίας μόνον τῶν παρ' αὐτῷ ἀποπιμ-πλᾶς, τὰ δὲ ἄλλα ἀναλώματα μὴ παρεχόμενος, ἀλλὰ δουλούμενος 5 τὰς ἄλλας ἐπιθυμίας ὡς ματαίους. Πάνν μὲν οὖν. Αἰχμηρὸς γέτις, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὢν καὶ ἀπὸ παιτὸς περιουσίαν ποιούμενος, θησαυρο-ποιὸς ἀνὴρ· οὓς δὴ | καὶ ἐπαινεῖ τὸ πλήθος. ἢ οὐχ οὗτος ἂν εἴη ὁ τῇ τοιαύτῃ πολιτείᾳ ὅμοιος; Ἐμοὶ γοῦν, ἔφη, δοκεῖ· χρήματα γοῦν μάλιστα ἔντιμα τῇ τε πόλει καὶ παρὰ τῷ τοιούτῳ. Οὐ γάρ, 10 οἶμαι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, παιδεῖα ὁ τοιοῦτος προσέσχηκεν. Οὐ δοκῶ, ἔφη· οὐ γὰρ ἂν τυφλὸν ἡγεμόνα τοῦ χοροῦ ἐστήσατο καὶ ἐτίμα μάλιστα.

12. Ita Schneider. ἐστήσατο. Καὶ ἔτι μάλιστα εὖ A.

24 μηδέν is written rather than οὐδέν owing to the infinitives θαυμάζειν καὶ τιμᾶν.

27 ἄλλῃ: i.e. other than you have just described. Jowett's translation "Of all changes, he said, there is none so speedy or so sure as the conversion of the ambitious youth into the avaricious one" is quite wrong.

553 E 30 εἴη. Stallbaum and some others place a mark of interrogation after εἴη: "quod ego non penitus ineptum, sed inter proxime praecedentem et proxime sequentem interrogationem minus aptum existimo" (Schneider). Cf. 550 C.

554 A—555 B In character, the oligarchical man resembles the oligarchical State. He gratifies his 'necessary' desires and no others. He is avaricious, niggardly, sordid, and the blind god of wealth is leader of the chorus of his soul. From time to time, as opportunity offers, the drone-like desires within him assert themselves, but for the most part he forcibly represses them through fear of consequences. Thus, although his soul is a prey to sedition, his better desires generally prevail over those which are worse. In public competitions he is usually content to be beaten and save his money.

554 A 4 ἐργάτης: not simply 'hard-working' (D. and V.), but with reference to illiberalis labor.

ἀναγκαῖους. This form of the feminine recurs in IV 425 D, supra 558 D, 559 A, 561 A (ter) and IX 572 C; but in 558 D we have ἀναγκαῖαι, and ἀναγκαῖα in 559 B, C. See Schneider on IV 425 D. There is no justification for making ἀναγκαῖος consistently an adjective of either two or three terminations (as suggested by Richards). The full meaning of ἀναγκαῖοι ἐπιθυμῖαι is explained in 558 D ff.

5 τὰ ἄλλα ἀναλώματα "sunt pecuniae in cetera impendendae, quas hic negatur παρέχεται, de suis praebere" (Schneider). With ἄλλα cf. ἄλλῃς 554 C, and with παρεχόμενος IV 421 D n. The translation 'not affording or allowing himself' (J. and C.) is inaccurate. παραδεχόμενος, which was read, with slight MS authority, before Bekker, has been rightly discarded by later editors.

8 οὓς δῆ. For the plural cf. (with Stallbaum) Latius 908 D and Eur. Hel. 440 "Ἕλλην πεφυκώς, οἷσιν οὐκ ἐπιστροφάει. See also on I 347 A.

554 B 12 τυφλὸν κτλ. τὸν Πλοῦτον,

Εὐ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. τόδε δὲ σκόπει. κηφηνώδεις ἐπιθυμίας ἐν αὐτῷ διὰ τὴν ἀπαιδευσίαν μὴ φῶμεν ἐγγίγνεσθαι, τὰς μὲν πτωχικάς, τὰς C 15 δὲ κακούργους, κατεχομένας βία ὑπὸ τῆς ἄλλης ἐπιμελείας; Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Οἴσθα οὖν, εἶπον, οἱ ἀποβλέψας κατόψει αὐτῶν τὰς κακουργίας; Ποί; ἔφη. Εἰς τὰς τῶν ὀρφανῶν ἐπιτροπεύσεις καὶ εἴ ποῦ τι αὐτοῖς τοιοῦτον ξυμβαίνει, ὥστε πολλῆς ἐξουσίας λαβέ-20 σθαι τοῦ ἀδικεῖν. Ἀληθῆ. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ τούτῳ δῆλον, ὅτι ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ξυμβολαίοις ὁ τοιοῦτος, ἐν οἷς εὐδοκιμεῖ δοκῶν δίκαιος εἶναι, ἐπιεικεῖ τι ἐαυτοῦ βία κατέχει ἄλλας ¹ κακὰς ἐπιθυμίας ἐνούσας, D οὐ πείθων, ὅτι οὐκ ἄμεινον, οὐδ' ἡμερῶν λόγῳ, ἀλλ' ἀνάγκῃ καὶ φόβῳ, περὶ τῆς ἄλλης οὐσίας τρέμων; Καὶ πάνυ γ', ἔφη. Καὶ νῆ Δία, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ φίλε, τοῖς πολλοῖς γε αὐτῶν εὐρήσεις, ὅταν 25 δὲρ τὰλλότρια ἀναλίσκειν, τὰς τοῦ κηφήνος ξυγγενεῖς ἐνούσας

24. εὐρήσεις A¹Π: ἐνευρήσεις A².

οἶμαι, φησὶν says a Scholiast in the margin of A. See Blaydes on Ar. Plut. 90. Hirmer (Enst. u. Kompr. d. Pl. Pol. p. 658 n.) doubts whether the god of Wealth is represented as blind earlier than Aristophanes; but a σκόλιον of Timocreon began ὡφελὲν σ' ὦ τυφλὲ Πλούτε (Schol. on Ar. Ach. 532). With the figure in τοῦ χοροῦ cf. VI 490 c and infra 560 E.

ἐτίμα μάλιστα. See cr. n. Schneider's admirable emendation is now universally accepted: cf. μάλιστα ἐντιμα above and τιμᾶν μηδὲν ἄλλο ἢ πλούτον 553 D. On the corruption see Introd. § 5.

13 κηφηνώδεις κτλ. As oligarchy has 'drones' (552 C), so the oligarchical man has 'drone desires.' The parallel is worked out with unusual completeness, even for Plato: see on 555 A.

14 μὴ φῶμεν. 552 D n.

554 C 15 κατεχομένας κτλ. Cf. 552 E. ἄλλης = περὶ τὰ ἄλλα: cf. ἄλλα in 554 A. The translation—his general habit of carefulness' (J. and C.) is scarcely right: cf. περὶ τῆς ἄλλης οὐσίας τρέμων in D below.

16 αὐτῶν: not κηφηνωδῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν, but the plural masculine, in spite of αὐτῷ above (I 347 A n.).

18 ὥστε πολλῆς κτλ. See II 359 B n. Socrates would say that the picture which Glauco there draws is only too true of the oligarchical man.

19 τούτῳ δῆλον: 'clear by this,' 'clear from this,' as in Eur. Hipp. 627 τούτῳ δὲ δῆλον and Ar. Plut. 587 (τούτῳ δηλοῖ). Stallbaum reads τοῦτο with Ξ and a majority of the inferior MSS; but there is no reason for deserting A and Π. The antecedent to τούτῳ is contained in οἴσθ' οὖν—ἀδικεῖν. From the fact that such a person κακουργεῖ when he gets the chance, it is clear (says Socrates) that when he εὐδοκιμεῖ δοκῶν δίκαιος εἶναι, he achieves this result only by doing violence to himself.

21 ἐπιεικεῖ κτλ.: 'by a sort of virtuous self-constraint' not (as Campbell) 'by some virtuous element in himself he forcibly restrains.' βία is a verbal noun as in βία τῶν ἐχθρῶν (566 A) and the like. τιμι qualifies ἐπιεικής: there is no real ἐπιεικεία in this sort of thing: cf. Phaed. 69 A ff.

554 D 24 εὐρήσεις: see cr. n. The addition of ἐν above the line by A² is hardly sufficient to justify ἐνευρήσεις, especially as εὐρήσεις has much more support from the other MSS. ἐνευρίσκω has not yet been proved classical (see Jebb on Soph. Aj. 1144), and Schneider afterwards (Addit. p. 65) retracted his defence of it here. The distance of τοῖς πολλοῖς from ἐνούσας ἐπιθυμίας is no real difficulty, especially after ἐπιθυμίας ἐνούσας just above.

25 τὰς τοῦ κηφήνος ξυγγενεῖς κτλ. Cf. VII 519 B, C n. For ἀστασίαστος see on 545 C. διπλοῦς: like the oligarchical State, which is 'not one, but two' (551 D).

ἐπιθυμίας. Καὶ μάλα, ἡ δ' ὅς, σφόδρα. Οὐκ ἄρ' ἂν εἴη ἀσταςίαςτος ὁ τοιοῦτος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, οὐδὲ εἰς ἀλλὰ διπλοῦς τις, ἐπιθυμίας δὲ ἐπιθυμιῶν ὡς τὸ ἰ πολλὴν κρατούσας ἂν ἔχοι βελτίους χειρόνων.
 "Ἔστιν οὕτω. Διὰ ταῦτα δὴ, οἶμαι, εὐσχημονέστερος ἂν πολλῶν ὁ τοιοῦτος εἴη· ὁμοιοποιητικῆς δὲ καὶ ἡρμοσμένης τῆς ψυχῆς ἀληθῆς 30 ἀρετῇ πόρρω ποι ἐκφεύγοι ἂν αὐτόν. Δοκεῖ μοι. Καὶ μὴν ἀντα-5 γωνιστῆς γε ἰδίᾳ ἐν πόλει ὁ φειδωλὸς ἢ φαῦλος ἢ τινος νίκης ἢ ἄλλης φιλοτιμίας τῶν καλῶν, χρήματά τε οὐκ ἐθέλων εὐδοξίας ἕνεκα καὶ τῶν τοιούτων ἀγώνων ἀναλίσκειν, δεδιὼς τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τὰς ἀναλωτικὰς ἐγείρειν καὶ ξυμπααρακαλεῖν ἐπὶ ξυμμαχίαν τε καὶ φιλονικίαν, ὀλίγοις τισὶν ἑαυτοῦ πολεμῶν ὀλιγαρχικῶς τὰ πολλὰ 5 ἡττᾶται καὶ πλουτεῖ. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. "Ἔτι οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀπιστοῦμεν, μὴ κατὰ τὴν ὀλιγαρχουμένην πόλιν ὁμοιότητι τὸν
 B φειδωλὸν τε καὶ χρηματιστὴν ἰ τετάχθαι; Οὐδαμῶς, ἔφη.

7. μὴ A²Π: om. A¹.

554 E 30 ἡρμοσμένης τῆς ψυχῆς. Richards would omit τῆς, but the article (which is in all MSS), implies, I think, that such a soul exists and has already been described, as it has in ἕνα γενόμενον ἕκ πολλῶν, σῶφρονα καὶ ἡρμοσμένον IV 443 D, E.

31 ἀνταγωνιστῆς γε κτλ. See on 551 E. Sussehl Gen. Entw. II p. 232 reminds us of the disinclination on the part of rich Athenians to undertake λειτουργίαι: see Hermann-Thumser l.c. pp. 687 ff.

555 A 2 τῶν καλῶν: sc. φιλοτιμιῶν. In χρήματά τε the τε connects its own with the preceding clause, and does not here mean 'both.' τοιούτων: i.e. εὐδόξων. This interpretation is more idiomatic and forcible than to refer τοιούτων to φιλοτιμίας κτλ.

5 φιλονικίαν κτλ. The ὀλιγαρχικός, when competing for νίκη, is a φαῦλος ἀνταγωνιστῆς, because he is afraid to summon his ἀναλωτικὰ ἐπιθυμίαι 'to fight and strive for victory along with him,' precisely as the oligarchical city was afraid to arm the πλῆθος (551 D n.). And just as the oligarchs found themselves ὡς ἀληθῶς ὀλιγ-αρχικοὶ ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ μάχεσθαι (551 E), so the ὀλιγαρχικός ἀνὴρ, 'true to his name of olig-arch' (ὀλιγαρχικῶς), 'employs but few of his forces in the war, and is usually beaten and keeps his money' ('loses the prize and saves his money' Jowett). The force of ξυμ- in ξυμμαχίαν may perhaps extend to φιλονικίαν (cf. 546 A n.), which must not be translated 'rivalry' (with D. and V.): see on IX 581 B. ἡττᾶται καὶ πλουτεῖ has an epigrammatic effect somewhat like Juvenal's "probitas laudatur et alget."

7 ὁμοιότητι = 'in virtue of similarity': cf. IX 576 C. Baier and others would expunge the word in both places as an 'inutile glossema,' and it is true that the meaning could be apprehended without ὁμοιότητι, as in 561 E—562 A. There are, however, many principles (e.g. ἀνομοιότης etc.) on which things can be τεταγμένα κατ' ἄλληλα 'ranged over against one another,' and it is right that in summing up, Plato should emphasise the principle which has determined the form of his exposition from σκοπῶμεν δὴ εἰ ὅμοιοι ἂν εἴη (554 A) onwards: see 554 B, D, E n. For the dative cf. IX 575 C n.

555 B—557 A Oligarchy is succeeded by Democracy. As dissipated young men in an oligarchical government are permitted and even encouraged to squander their property, a large impoverished class of 'stinging drones' makes its appearance in the city. The rulers take no steps to remedy an evil which increases their own fortunes, and become luxurious and effeminate. In seasons of stress and common danger, the poor discover their own

X. Δημοκρατίαν δὴ. ὡς ἔοικε, μετὰ τοῦτο σκεπτέον, τίνα τε 10 γίγνεται τρόπον γενομένην τε ποῖόν τινα ἔχει, ἵν' αὖ τὸν τοῦ τοιούτου ἀνδρὸς τρόπον γνόντες παραστησώμεθ' αὐτὸν εἰς κρίσιν. Ὅμοίως γοῦν ἂν, ἔφη, ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς πορευοίμεθα. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μεταβάλλει μὲν τρόπον τινὰ τοιόνδε ἐξ ὀλιγαρχίας εἰς δημοκρατίαν, δι' 15 γίγνεσθαι; Πῶς δὴ; ¹ Ἄτε, οἶμαι, ἄρχοντες ἐν αὐτῇ οἱ ἄρχοντες C διὰ τὸ πολλὰ κεκτῆσθαι, οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν εἵργειν νόμῳ τῶν νέων ὅσοι ἂν ἀκόλαστοι γίγνωνται, μὴ ἐξεῖναι αὐτοῖς ἀναλίσκειν τε καὶ ἀπολλύναι τὰ αὐτῶν, ἵνα ὠνούμενοι τὰ τῶν τοιούτων καὶ εἰσδανεί-ζοντες ἔτι πλουσιώτεροι καὶ ἐντιμότεροι γίγνωνται. Παντός γε 20 μᾶλλον. Οὐκοῦν δῆλον ἤδη τοῦτο ἐν πόλει, ὅτι πλούτου τιμᾶν καὶ σωφροσύνην ἅμα ἰκανῶς κτᾶσθαι ἐν τοῖς πολίταις ἀδύνατον, ¹ ἀλλ' D ἀνάγκη ἢ τοῦ ἐτέρου ἀμελεῖν ἢ τοῦ ἐτέρου; Ἐπιεικῶς, ἔφη, δῆλον.
 Παραμελοῦντες δὴ ἐν ταῖς ὀλιγαρχίαις καὶ ἐφίεντες ἀκολασταίνειν οὐκ ἀγενεῖς ἐνίοτε ἀνθρώπους πένητας ἠνάγκασαν γενέσθαι.

18. εἰσδανείζοντες A¹Π: δανείζοντες A².

strength and the weakness of the rich, and thereafter it needs but a little impulse to overthrow the rotten fabric. Democracy is established as soon as the introduction of the lot affirms the principle of equality.

555 B 9 δημοκρατίαν δὴ κτλ. We have seen that the dominant feature in the oligarchical State is τὸ φιλοχρήματον, and the present chapter describes how in process of time the polity itself is inevitably overthrown by that very principle. The incidents which prove the immediate cause of revolution are such as may frequently have happened in Greek history: see 556 C, D, E and 557 A nm. It is instructive to compare with this chapter Aristotle's a posteriori analysis of the causes of revolution in oligarchical cities (Pol. E 6). On the psychological basis of democracy see 557 A n.

11 παραστησώμεθα κτλ. For the use of παραστήσασθαι Schneider refers to II 360 E, 361 B and Lucian Icarom. 17, ὥσπερ ἂν εἴ τις παραστησάμενος πολλοὺς χορευτὰς—ἐπειτα προστάξει κτλ.

ὁμοίως κτλ. See 543 A n. μεταβάλλει= 'it changes,' viz. the πολιτεία. The verb is scarcely impersonal, as the English translators appear to suppose.

14 προκειμένου κτλ. προκειμένου is not 'publicly acknowledged' (D. and V.), but 'propositus,' as in τὸ τέλος τὸ προκει-μενον. δεῖν (wrongly rejected by J. J. Hartman) 'resumes the notion of προκειμένου' (J. and C.). Similar pleonasms occur in Crit. 44 C, Gorg. 500 C and elsewhere: cf. also ἐξεῖναι in C below and VII 535 A n.

555 C 15 ἄτε—ἄρχοντες κτλ. As in timarchy (550 D ff.), so in oligarchy, it is the love of money which sows the seeds of party strife and political degeneration. Cf. generally 552 A n. and Aristotle Pol. E 6. 1305^b 39 ff., with his criticism of Plato ibid. 12. 1316^b 15 ff.

18 εἰσδανείζοντες: i.e. 'lending money on the security of' (els). The τὰ τῶν τοιούτων should be taken with the els of εἰσδανείζοντες as well as with ὠνούμενοι: cf. Arist. Pol. Z 4. 1319^a 13 δανείζειν εἰς τι μέρος τῆς ὑπαρχούσης ἐκάστῳ γῆς and Dem. in Aphob. 128. The word εἰσδανέζω is a ἅπαξ ἐρημένον, but we certainly ought not to substitute ἐκδανείζοντες (suggested by Stephanus) or προσδανείζοντες (with Richards).

20 δῆλον ἤδη τοῦτο κτλ. See 550 E n.

555 D 24 οὐκ ἀγενεῖς κτλ. = 'of no common stamp' etc. (von nicht gemeiner Art, Schneider), not simply 'of noble birth' (as D. and V.). Catiline would

Μάλα γε. Κάθηνται δὴ, οἶμαι, οὗτοι ἐν τῇ πόλει κεκεντρωμένοι 25 τε καὶ ἐξωπλισμένοι, οἱ μὲν ὀφείλοντες χρέα, οἱ δὲ ἄτιμοι γεγονότες, οἱ δὲ ἀμφότερα, μισοῦντές τε καὶ ἐπιβουλεύοντες τοῖς κτησαμένοις E τὰ αὐτῶν καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις, νεωτερισμοῦ ἐρῶντες. ¹ Ἔστι ταῦτα.
 Οἱ δὲ δὴ χρηματισταὶ ἐγκύψαντες οὐδὲ δοκοῦντες τούτους ὀρᾶν, τῶν λοιπῶν τὸν αἰὲ ὑπεῖκοντα ἐνιέντες ἀργύριον τιτρώσκοντες καὶ 30 56 τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκγόνους τόκους πολλαπλασίους κομιζόμενοι | πολὺν τὸν κηφῆνα καὶ πτωχὸν ἐμποιοῦσι τῇ πόλει. Πῶς γάρ, ἔφη, οὐ πολὺν; Οὔτε γ' ἐκείνη, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ τοιοῦτον κακὸν ἐκκαόμενον ἐθέλουσιν ἀποσβεννύναι, εἵργοντες τὰ αὐτοῦ ὅπῃ τις βούλεται τρέπειν, οὔτε τῇδε, ἣ αὖ κατὰ ἕτερον νόμον τὰ τοιαῦτα λύεται. 5 Κατὰ δὴ τίνα; Ὅς μετ' ἐκείνόν ἐστι δεύτερος καὶ ἀναγκάζων ἀρετῆς ἐπιμελεῖσθαι τοὺς πολίτας. ἐὰν γὰρ ἐπὶ τῷ αὐτοῦ κινδύνῳ B τὰ πολλά τις τῶν ἐκουσίῳ ξυμβολαίων ¹ προστάτῃ ξυμβάλλειν, χρηματίζονται μὲν αὖ ἥττον ἀναιδῶς ἐν τῇ πόλει, ἐλάττω δ' ἐν αὐτῇ φύοιτο τῶν τοιούτων κακῶν, οἷον νῦν δὴ εἵπομεν. Καὶ πολὺ 10 have seemed to Plato a case in point (cf. Sallust Cat. 5), and the Catilinarian conspiracy illustrates not inaptly the description which follows (555 D, E). The aorist ἠγάγκασαν is gnomic, as appears from the plural ἐν ταῖς ὀλιγαρχίαις.

25 κεκεντρωμένοι κτλ. See 552 C, D iii. ἐξωπλισμένοι does little more than explain the metaphor, more Platonico: see on V 451 B and cf. καὶ πτωχὸν (wrongly discarded by J. J. Hartman) in 556 A below.

555 E 29 ἐγκύψαντες. τοιαῦτα γὰρ τὰ τῶν ἀγαν φροντιζόντων καὶ περὶ τὴν διάνοιαν ἐχόντων σχήματα (Schol. on Ar. Clouds 191). A comparison with IX 586 A κάτω αἰὲ βλέποντες καὶ κεκυφότες εἰς γῆν suggests that the stoop of the χρηματιστῆς in reality betrays the inherent earthliness of his soul: see on VII 519 A, B and cf. Dante Purg. 19. 70—72.

31 τοῦ πατρὸς κτλ. Cf. VI 507 A n. τόκους is bracketed by Herwerden, but τὸν τόκον τε καὶ ἐκγονον (l.c.) supports it.

556 A 3 οὔτε γε κτλ. καὶ appears before οὔτε in IΞ 9 and a majority of MSS, but the reading of A is, I now think, right. We should translate 'At all events, said I, they are unwilling to extinguish this kind of mischief when it is beginning to break into a flame, either by preventing' etc. If they quenched it in its earlier stages, then the πτωχοὶ would not be πολλοί: and πολὺν bears the emphasis in both the previous sentences. For this use of γε see 559 B n., and cf. IX 581 C and (with Schneider) Isocr. Paneg. 153. With ἐκκαόμενον cf. Ar. Peace 1132. D. and V. understand the word of 'cauterizing,' wrongly, as ἀποσβεννύναι shews.

4 ὅπῃ. I formerly, with two inferior MSS, Bekker and Ast, read ὅποι, which is certainly more exact: see the examples cited by Blaydes on Ar. Clouds 858 τὰς δ' ἐμβάδας ποῖ τέτροφας; The verb βούλεται is however treated as more than a mere auxiliary, and the relative accommodated to it by a species of attraction, even at the cost of sacrificing something of the peculiar force of τρέπειν. Translate 'to dispose of one's property as one likes.'

5 ἕτερον νόμον. Plato's language here and in ὅς μετ' ἐκείνόν ἐστι δεύτερος seems to imply that such a law would not be altogether a novelty in Greece. According to Theophrastus (Frag. 97. 5 Wimmer=Stob. Flor. 44. 22), it found a place among the laws of Charondas: ἐὰν δέ τις πιστεύσῃ, μὴ εἶναι δίκην· αὐτὸν γὰρ αἴτιον εἶναι τῆς ἀδικίας. Plato makes a similar provision in Latws 742 C, 849 E, 915 E.

γε, ἡ δ' ὅς. Νῦν δέ γ', ἔφην ἐγά, διὰ πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα τοὺς μὲν δὴ ἀρχομένους οὕτω διατιθέασιν ἐν τῇ πόλει οἱ ἄρχοντες· σφᾶς δὲ αὐτοὺς καὶ τοὺς αὐτῶν ἄρ' οὐ τρυφῶντας μὲν τοὺς νέους καὶ ἀπόνους καὶ πρὸς τὰ τοῦ σώματος καὶ πρὸς τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς, μαλακοὺς δὲ
 15 καρτερεῖν πρὸς ἡδονάς τε καὶ λύπας καὶ ἀργούς; Τί μὴν; Αὐτοὺς C δὲ πλὴν χρηματισμοῦ τῶν ἄλλων ἡμεληκότας, καὶ οὐδὲν πλείω ἐπιμέλειαν πεποιημένους ἀρετῆς ἢ τοὺς πένητας; Οὐ γὰρ οὖν. Οὕτω δὴ παρεσκευασμένοι ὅταν παραβάλλωσιν ἀλλήλοις οἱ τε ἄρχοντες καὶ οἱ ἀρχόμενοι ἢ ἐν ὁδῶν πορείαις ἢ ἐν ἄλλαις τισὶ
 20 κοινωνίαις, ἢ κατὰ θεωρίας ἢ κατὰ στρατείας, ἢ ξύμπλοι γιγνόμενοι ἢ συστρατιῶται, ἢ καὶ ἐν αὐτοῖς τοῖς κινδύνοις ἀλλήλους θεώμενοι D μηδαμῇ ταύτῃ καταφρονῶνται οἱ πένητες ὑπὸ τῶν πλουσίων, ἀλλὰ πολλάκις ἰσχνὸς ἀνὴρ πένης, ἡλιωμένος, παραταχθεὶς ἐν μάχῃ πλουσίῳ ἐσκιατροφηκότι, πολλὰς ἔχοντι σάρκας ἀλλοτρίας, ἴδη

556 B 11 τοὺς μὲν δὴ κτλ. μὲν balances δέ after σφᾶς, and should not be taken with δὴ in the ordinary sense of the collocation μὲν δὴ: so that there is no reason to omit δὴ (with Ξ and two other mss) on the ground that μὲν δὴ comes too late in the sentence. δὴ "priori membro dilatando inservit et vinculi per μὲν injecti nexum relaxans alterum membrum ut nova interrogatione instructum minus miremur efficit" (Schneider, comparing Laetus 751 E).

13 ἄρ' οὐ τρυφῶντας κτλ. Note the usual Platonic chiasmus.

556 C, D 18 παραβάλλωσιν: 'come alongside,' originally perhaps a nautical expression (J. and C.), as in Arist. de gen. anim. III 11. 763^a 31. The usage occurs again in Lys. 203 B, and tolerably often in Aristotle.

21 ἡ καὶ κτλ. ὅταν extends its influence to καταφρονῶνται and ἴδη. On θεώμενοι κτλ. Schneider remarks "post verba ἀλλήλους θεώμενοι expectabatur μηδαμῇ ὡς πρότερον περὶ ἀλλήλων διανοῶνται, vel tale quid, quod ad utroque se invicem conspicientes pertineret; cuius loco statim divisione facta quid iam de pauperibus divites, de divitibus pauperes sentiant, infertur. Cuius non insequentiae, sed breviloquentiae significandae causa supra post θεώμενοι comma—sustuli." The effect is analogous to that produced by so-called partitive apposition (IV 431 A n.), of which idiom a somewhat similar extension occurs in V 405 C, where see note. Richards suspects corruption, proposing to read either (1) θεωμένων and perhaps also ἡ καὶν or ἡ καὶ <ἐάν> instead of ἡ καὶ, or (2) simply to insert καὶ before μηδαμῇ. The second proposal is neat and scholarly; but καὶ was unlikely to disappear, and Plato's rapidity of thought and style renders him particularly liable to grammatical and other irregularities in his more spirited and dramatic passages: cf. VI 488 C, D, VII 531 A, and infra 558 A. See also on 549 D above.

556 D 22 ταύτῃ is emphatic, implying that it is otherwise when danger does not threaten.

24 πολλὰς κτλ.: 'with quantities of alien fat about him' (viel fremdes Fleisch an sich habend, Schneider), 'cumbered with much fat.' παχεῖς 'bloated' was, it may be remembered, a nickname for oligarchs: see Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II p. 275 n. 2 and Neil's edition of Ar. Knights App. II p. 209. ἀλλοτρίας is 'not his own,' i.e. no real part of him, and hence useless, superfluous. As Graser points out (Spec. advers. in serm. Pl. p. 91), it is Homer's γλαυμοῖσιν ἀλλοτρίοισι (Od. XX 347) which is the source of this and other kindred uses of ἀλλοτρίος, e.g. Thuc. I 70. 6 and Isocr. Paneg. 86. Hermann thinks the meaning is that he has grown fat at the expense of others, like the drone. This explanation is less pointed, and the drone represents not the rich oligarch, but the πτωχὸς (555 E). With the feeling of this passage cf. Plut. Aporrh.

ἄσθματός τε καὶ ὑπορίας μεστόν, ἀρ' οἶε αὐτὸν οἷχ ἡγεῖσθαι κακία 25 τῇ σφετέρᾳ πλουτεῖν τοὺς τοιούτους, καὶ ἄλλον ἄλλῃ παραγγέλλειν, ὅταν ἰδία ξυγγίγνωνται, ὅτι ἄνδρες ἡμέτεροι·¹ εἰσὶ γὰρ οὐδέν; Εὐ οἶδα μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, ἔγωγε, ὅτι οὕτω ποιοῦσιν. Οὐκοῦν ὥσπερ σώμα νοσῶδες μικρᾷς ῥοπῆς ἔξωθεν δεῖται προσλαβέσθαι πρὸς τὸ κάμνειν, ἐνίοτε δὲ καὶ ἄνευ τῶν ἔξω στασιάζει αὐτὸ αὐτῷ, οὕτω δὲ καὶ ἡ 30 κατὰ ταῦτὰ ἐκείνῃ διακειμένη πόλις ἀπὸ σμικρᾷς προφύσεως, ἔξωθεν ἐπαγομένων ἢ τῶν ἐτέρων ἐξ ὀλιγαρχουμένης πόλεως συμμαχίαν ἢ τῶν ἐτέρων ἐκ δημοκρατουμένης. νοσεῖ τε καὶ αὕτῃ αὕτῃ 37 μάχεται, ἐνίοτε δὲ καὶ ἄνευ τῶν ἔξω στασιάζει; | Καὶ σφόδρα γε.
 Δημοκρατία δὴ, οἶμαι, γίγνεται, ὅταν οἱ πένητες νικήσαντες τοὺς μὲν ἀποκτείνωσι τῶν ἐτέρων, τοὺς δὲ ἐκβαίλωσι, τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς ἐξ ἴσου μεταδῶσι πολιτείας τε καὶ ἀρχῶν καὶ ὥς τὸ πολὺ ἀπὸ κλήρων

32. ἐπαγομένων—συμμαχίαν II et in marg. A²: om. A¹. νοήσει A¹.

33. νοσεῖ A²Π:

Reg. et Imp. 192 D τοῖς πολυσάρκοις ἐπολέμει ('Επαμεινώνδας) καὶ τινα τοιοῦτον ἀπῆλассε τῆς στρατιᾶς, εἰπὼν ὅτι μόλις αὐτοῦ σκέπουνσι τὴν γαστέρα ἀσπίδες τρεῖς ἢ τέσσαρες.

27 ἄνδρες—οὐδέν. 'We have them at our mercy: for they're good for nothing.' ἄνδρες ἡμέτεροι is virtually an exhortation to rise in revolt: hence παραγγέλλειν. The omission of the article heightens the dramatic effect: cf. x 617 D. ἡμέτεροι has a colloquial ring ('they are ours'). A kindred meaning, but without any colloquial touch, appears in Xen.
Cyr. II 3. 2 (quoted by Schneider Addit.
 p. 65) ἦν μὲν ἡμεῖς νικῶμεν—δῆλον ὅτι οἱ τε πολέμοι ἡμέτεροι καὶ τὰ τῶν πολεμίων ἀγαθὰ πάντα: cf. also VII 5. 73. This interpretation, which Schneider finally suggested, has the support of A, II and other MSS. Baiter's ἄνδρες ἡμέτεροι εἰσὶ παρ' οὐδέν has found considerable favour, and gives a fair sense, but παρ' οὐδέν (for which see Jebb on Soph. Ant. 466) appears to me unpleasantly weak. ἄνδρες ἡμέτεροι εἰσιν οὐδέν (q and others) is intrinsically better (cf. 562 D), and may be right, but the intrusion of γάρ in the best MSS remains a difficulty, and παραγγέλλειν (as in Baiter's reading) is shorn perhaps of its full force. It is on the whole easier, I think, to understand ἡμέτεροι as I do than to explain the insertion of γάρ in our two oldest and best MSS.

556 E 28 οὐκοῦν ὥσπερ κτλ. Cf.

Soph. O. T. 961 σμικρὰ παλαιὰ σώματ' εὐνάζει ῥοπή. The Platonic simile is imitated by Arist. Pol. Z 6. 1320^b 33 ff. and may also, as Stallbaum thinks, have been in Demosthenes' mind when he wrote Ol. II 21.

32 ἔξωθεν ἐπαγομένων κτλ. A familiar feature in the history of Greek revolutions: cf. Whibley Gk Olig. p. 52 and (for examples) Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II passim.

557 A 4 καὶ ὥς τὸ πολὺ κτλ.: 'and the magistracies in the city are for the most part given by lot.' These words, which depend, of course, on ὅταν, explain ἐξ ἴσου—ἀρχῶν, and should be taken in close connexion with that clause, as Ast long ago pointed out. The difference in tense (μεταδῶσι but γίγνωνται), no less than the meaning, clearly indicates that the two clauses do not express two separate and distinct acts. It is by means of the lot that ἰσότης is secured; and hence democracy is not established until offices are assigned thereby: cf.
Hdt. III 80 πάλῃ μὲν ἀρχὰς ἀρχεῖ and Arist. Rhet. I 8. 1365^b 32 δημοκρατία μὲν πολιτεία ἐν ᾗ κλήρω διανέμονται τὰς ἀρχὰς, with Whibley Gk Olig. p. 35 and Greenidge Gk Const. Hist. pp. 139 ff. The clause was, strangely enough, condemned by Hermann. Plato was not likely to omit all mention of the most characteristic and necessary factor in the establishment of a democracy, especially as he

5 αἱ ἀρχαὶ ἐν αὐτῇ γίνωνται. Ἔστι γάρ, ἔφη, αὕτη ἡ κατάστασις δημοκρατίας, εἴαν τε καὶ δι' ὅπλων γένηται εἴαν τε καὶ διὰ φόβου ὑπεξελθόντων τῶν ἐτέρων.

XI. Τίνα δὴ οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὗτοι τρόπον οἰκοῦσι; καὶ ποία τις ἡ τοιαύτη¹ αὐτοπολιτεία; δῆλον γὰρ ὅτι ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνὴρ B 10 δημοκρατικός τις ἀναφανήσεται. Δῆλον, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν πρῶτον μὲν δὴ ἐλεύθεροι, καὶ ἐλευθερίας ἡ πόλις μεστή καὶ παρρησίας

6. φόβον A²Ξγ: φόβων A¹Π.

introduces the same feature in describing the democratical man (561 B ὥσπερ λαχούσῃ). J. and C., with Schneider and others, read γίνονται, for which there is very little MS support, remarking that 'the subjunctive is inexact, because any words dependent on ὅταν should describe a characteristic of the origin of democracy, not merely a characteristic of democracy.' The fact is that the words do explain the origin of democracy by explaining ἐξ ἴσου μεταδῶσι κτλ., where the aorist is rightly used of the act by which democracy is established; whereas if we read γίνονται the clause must be taken by itself, and then it can only express a characteristic of democracy after that constitution is in force, so that its proper place would be in the next chapter. It should be observed that in no ancient democracy that we know of was the lot employed in electing to all magistracies: see Gilbert l.c. II p. 318. For this reason Plato writes ὥς τὸ πολὺ.

557 A—558 C The peculiar characteristics of Democracy are liberty and licence. It is of all governments the most manifold and many-coloured, resembling a bazaar of constitutions rather than a single polity. In a democratic city the individual is free to adopt his own policy independently of the State. Little trouble is taken to execute judicial sentences. The people are indulgent to educational defects in their leaders and require nothing beyond a profession of loyalty to the masses. Truly a delightful constitution, full of anarchy and colour, distributing a species of equality to equal and unequal alike!

557 A 8 τίνα δὴ οὖν κτλ. The psychological principle of Democracy, as well as of Oligarchy, is τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν. But whereas in Oligarchy everything was subjected to the dominion of one particular desire, viz. the desire of wealth (550 C η.), Democracy, on the other hand, is the political embodiment of absolute freedom and equality among all desires, unnecessary as well as necessary: see on 558 C ff. The materials for Plato's picture of democracy are of course taken from Athens more than any other single city. It is an extraordinarily vivid sketch; and indeed Plato's whole account of democracy and the democratical man (557 A—565 C), in spite of manifest exaggerations, brings Athens nearer to us than almost any monument of ancient literature, Aristophanes alone excepted. We can see that Plato was fully alive to the wonderful variety and colour of Athenian life; but even on this ground democracy did not appear to him worthy of praise. Multiplicity and variety are the offspring of that fatal ἀνομοιότης which works ruin alike in the city and the soul (547 A η.). In other respects, Plato represents democracy as a land of Hedonism, peopled by Anarchy and Waywardness, and darkened by the shadow of the Tyranny to which it must at last succumb. Nearly all the greatest writers of Greek antiquity were on the whole unfavourable to democracy, except of course the Orators: and least of all in Plato could democracy expect a champion. For the other side of the picture, we should of course take Pericles' speech in Thuc. II 35 ff. See Neil's Knights of Aristophanes pp. vii ff.

557 B 9 δῆλον γὰρ κτλ. It is the ἀνὴρ rather than the πολιτεία which is the ultimate object of our search; but as the ἀνὴρ in a democracy will be δημοκρατικός τις, we cannot understand him until we understand δημοκρατία. Hence the question ποία τις—πολιτεία. Cf. 545 B, C.

II ἐλευθερίας. Ἐλευθερία was the fundamental ὑπόθεσις of ancient democracy: ὑπόθεσις μὲν οὖν τῆς δημοκρατικῆς πολιτείας ἐλευθερία, says Aristotle Pol. II 2. 1317^a 40. Cf. 562 B. It involves, according to Aristotle l.c., two ideas, viz. (1) τὸ ἐν γίγνεται, καὶ ἐξουσία ἐν αὐτῇ ποιεῖν ὃ τί τις βούλεται; Λέγεται γε δὴ ἔφη. "Οπου δέ γε ἐξουσία, δηλονότι ἰδίαν ἕκαστος ἂν κατασκευῇ τοῦ αὐτοῦ βίου κατασκευάζοιτο ἐν αὐτῇ, ἥτις ἕκαστον ἀρέσκοι. Δηλονότι. Παντοδαποὶ δὴ ἂν οἶμαι, ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ πολιτείᾳ 15 μάλιστα ἐγγίγνυντο ἄνθρωποι. Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Κινδυνεύει, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καλλίστη αὕτη τῶν πολιτειῶν εἶναι. ὥσπερ ἰμάτιον ποικίλον πᾶσιν ἄνθεσι πεποικιλμένον, οὕτω καὶ αὕτη πᾶσιν ἡθεσιν πεποικιλμένη καλλίστη ἂν φαίνοιτο. καὶ ἴσως μὲν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ταύτην, ὥσπερ οἱ παῖδες τε καὶ αἱ γυναῖκες τὰ ποικίλα θεώ- 20 μνοι, καλλίστην ἂν πολλοὶ κρίνειαν. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Καὶ ἔστιν γε, ὦ μακάριε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐπιτήδειον ζητεῖν ἐν αὐτῇ πολιτείαν. Τί δὴ; "Οτι πάντα γένη πολιτειῶν ἔχει διὰ τὴν ἐξουσίαν, καὶ κινδυνεύει τῷ βουλομένῳ πόλιν κατασκευάζειν, ὃ νῦν δὴ ἡμεῖς ἐποιοῦμεν, ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι εἰς δημοκρατουμένην 25 ἐλθόντι πόλιν, ὃς ἂν αὐτὸν ἀρέσκη τρόπος, τοῦτον ἐκλέξασθαι, ὥσπερ εἰς παντοπῶλιον ἀφικομένῳ πολιτειῶν, καὶ ἐκλεξαμένῳ οὕτω κατοικίξειν. Ἴσως γοῦν, ἔφη, οὐκ ἂν ἀποροῖ παραδειγμάμέρει ἀρχεσθαι καὶ ἀρχεῖν, (2) τὸ ζῆν ὡς βούλεται τις (ib. 1317^b 11). Throughout this chapter Plato illustrates the second of these characteristics. Cf. Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 33—35.

παρρησία and ἐξουσία are democratical watchwords; see e.g. Gorg. 461 E, Eur. Hipp. 422, Ion 671 ff., and Thuc. VII 69 (τῆς—ἀνεπιτάκτου πᾶσιν ἐς τὴν δίαίταν ἐξουσίας) with II 37. 2 and infra 557 D, 563 E, Arist. Pol. Z 4. 1318^b 39 al.

557 C 17 ὥσπερ ἰμάτιον κτλ. For the asyndeton cf. VI 497 B n. ποικίλον = 'many-coloured' is cancelled by Herwerden and J. J. Hartman. The word is in every MS and thoroughly harmonises with Plato's characteristic fullness of style: 'like a many-coloured garment, diversified with every shade of colour.' In itself it is the antithesis of ἀπλοῦς, and symbolical of kaleidoscopic diversity and changefulness, just as in recent years we have heard the expression 'Joseph's coat of many colours' applied to a versatile and distinguished statesman. See also on 561 E. ἄνθεσι is not 'flowers' (as seems to be generally supposed), but 'dyes,' 'colours' (IV 429 D n.): nor need πεποικιλμένη be understood of embroidery: for ποικίλλειν means no more than 'to diversify with colours' and implies nothing whatever as to the process: cf. II 378 C. On the verbal play in ἄνθεσι—ἡθεσι see III 406 B n. For ἦν δ' ἐγώ repeated cf. VII 522 A n.

557 D 23 πάντα γένη κτλ. Cf. Laws 681 D πολιτείας σχῆμα—ἐν ᾧ δὴ πάντα εἶδη καὶ παθήματα πολιτειῶν καὶ ἅμα πόλεων συμπίπτει γίγνεσθαι. On ἐξουσίαν see 557 B n.

26 τοῦτον ἐκλέξασθαι κτλ. Pericles (Thuc. II 37. 1) regarded the Athenian constitution as a παράδειγμα: Plato humorously describes it as a motley aggregate of παραδείγματα. Democracy is πόλεις παμπολλαί, ἀλλ' οὐ πόλις, the different varieties of individuals living in it representing so many different constitutions. In view of 561 C we may even go farther, and say that every democratical individual is himself a kaleidoscopic succession of polities—χαμαιλέον τις καὶ σαθρῶς ἰδρυμένος (ap. Arist. Eth. Nic. I II. 1100^b 6). Hence, as Plato would hold, the waywardness and instability of democratic policy, constantly reversing to-morrow what it decrees to-day. See Thuc. I 44, II 65, III 36 ff., IV 28 and VIII 1. Democracy in fact, from Plato's point of view, is the political expression of monochronous Hedonism: cf. 558 A and 561 C n.

των. Τὸ δὲ μηδεμίαν ἀνάγκην, εἶπον, εἶναι ἄρχειν ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ 30 πόλει, μηδ' ἂν ᾗς ἱκανὸς ἄρχειν, μηδὲ αὖ ἄρχεσθαι, εἰ μὴ βούλῃ, μηδὲ πολεμεῖν πολεμούντων, μηδὲ εἰρήνην ἄγειν τῶν ἄλλων ἀγόν-των, εἰ μὴ ἐπιθυμῇς εἰρήνης, μηδὲ αὖ, εἰ μὴ τις ἄρχειν νόμος σε διακωλύῃ ἢ δικάζειν, μηδὲν ἦττον καὶ ἄρχειν καὶ δικάζειν, εἰ μὴ αὐτῷ σοι ἐπὶ, | ἄρ' οὐ θεσπεσία καὶ ἡδεῖα ἢ τοιαύτη διαγωγὴ ἐν 558 τῷ παραυτίκα; Ἰσως, ἔφη, ἐν γε τούτῳ. Τί δέ; ἢ πραότης ἐνίων τῶν δικασθέντων οὐ κομφή; ἢ οὐπω εἶδες ἐν τοιαύτῃ πολιτείᾳ, ἀνθρώπων καταψηφισθέντων θανάτου ἢ φυγῆς, οὐδὲν ἦττον αὐτῶν

32. ἐπιθυμῇς g: ἐπιθυμῇ ΑΠΞ¹: ἐπιθυμεῖ Ξ². 33. ἄρχειν καὶ δικάζειν Ξ*g*: ἀρχῆς καὶ δικάζεις Α¹Π²: ἀρχης καὶ δικάζεις Α²: ἀρχῆς (sic) καὶ δικάζεις Π¹.
 1. τοιαύτη Π: αὐτὴ Α.

557 E 29 ἀνάγκην. The Athenians gloried in their ἀνεμμένη δίατα. See Thuc. II 39. 1 and Laws 642 C μῦνοι γὰρ ἄνευ ἀνάγκης, αὐτοφυῶς, θέλα μοῖρα, ἀληθῶς καὶ οὐ τι πλαστῶς εἰσιν ἀγαθοί.

32 μηδὲ αὖ—δικάζειν: 'nor again, if any law prevents you from being a magistrate or judge—actually to be both magistrate and judge in spite of the law, if you take it into your own head to be so.' The grammatical construction would naturally be μηδὲ αὖ (ἀνάγκην εἶναι)—μηδὲν ἦττον καὶ ἄρχειν καὶ δικάζειν κτλ. This could only mean 'nor any necessity compelling you to act as magistrate or judge if a law forbids you,' etc. i.e. 'you are not even compelled to follow your own inclination when it goes against the law.' The sentiment is intelligible, but too extravagant and subtle a piece of satire even for so highly coloured a passage as the present. As it is, Plato starts as if he would write 'nor again—to refrain from being a magistrate or judge,' but by a dramatic anacoluthon expresses the last part of his sentence in a positive form. μηδὲν ἦττον and the emphatic καὶ—καὶ make it easy to catch the meaning. The corruptions in A II (see cr. n.) and some other MSS are probably due to assimilation.

558 A 1 θεσπεσία καὶ ἡδεῖα is almost a hendiadys: cf. IV 429 E n. Democracy is political hedonism: see on 561 C. Hermann's θεσπεσία ὡς ἡδεῖα is inelegant and even questionable Greek: nor does θεσπεσία καὶ θέλα (Stallbaum) merit praise.

2 τί δέ; ἢ πραότης κτλ.: 'And is not the perfect good temper of some who have been tried exquisite? or have you never seen in such a State, when people have been condemned to death or exile, how none the less they remain and roam about in public, and the culprit saunters round as though unheeded and unseen like some spirit from another world?' They bear the State no malice, and shew their good temper by stopping where they are—for the sentence remains unexecuted. See also App. II.

3 δικασθέντων has been thought to be neuter (Weil Rev. d. Phil. VIII pp. 171 ff.); but although the usage of the word in other passages of Plato (Critias 120 C, Laws 867 E, infra X 614 D, Crit. 50 B, Gorg. 523 C and elsewhere) favours this view, it yields no satisfactory sense, and πραότης is an attribute of persons rather than of things. The perfect passive—it is not the middle—of δικάζω is similarly used of persons in Lysias 21. 18 ἀσχαρὰς δίκας δεδίκασμαι. The circumstances of Socrates' own imprisonment after his condemnation illustrate, though only imperfectly, what is said here, for the Athenians were not careful to prevent him from escaping: see Crit. passim and my Introduction to that dialogue pp. ix f.

4 ἀνθρώπων κτλ. The construction is extremely irregular. Perhaps the simplest and least unsatisfactory solution is to make καταψηφισθέντων a genitive absolute and regard μενόντων etc. as attracted by ἀνθρώπων καταψηφισθέντων (so also J. and C.). See App. II.

θανάτου ἢ φυγῆς κτλ. For the genitive Kühner (Gr. Gr. II p. 332) compares θανάτου κρίνεσθαι, ὑπάγεσθαι and the like, in which δική is probably understood. The genitive of the penalty seems not to occur elsewhere with καταψηφίμεινόντων τε καὶ ἀναστρεφόμενων ἐν μέσῳ, καὶ ὥς οὔτε φροντίζοντος 5 οὔτε ὀρώντος οὐδενὸς περινοστεῖ ὥσπερ ἥρως; Καὶ πολλοὺς γ', B ἔφη. Ἡ δὲ συγγνώμη καὶ οὐδ' ὅπωςτιοῦν σμικρολογία αὐτῆς, ἀλλὰ καταφρόνησις ὧν ἡμεῖς ἐλέγομεν σεμνύνοντες, ὅτε τὴν πόλιν φκίζομεν, ὥς εἰ μὴ τις ὑπερβεβλημένην φύσιν ἔχοι, οὔποτ' αἶν γένοιτο ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός, εἰ μὴ παῖς ὧν εὐθὺς παῖζοι ἐν καλοῖς καὶ ἐπιτηδεύοι τὰ τοιαῦτα πάντα, ὥς μεγαλοπρεπῶς καταπατήσας ἅπαντα ταῦτα οὐδὲν φροντίζει, ἐξ ὁποίων αἶν τις ἐπιτηδευμάτων ἐπὶ τὰ πολιτικά ἰὼν πράττη, ἀλλὰ τιμᾷ, ἐὰν φῇ μόνον εὖνους εἶναι

II. καταπατήσας' q²: καταπατήσας ΑΠΞ q¹.

12. ταῦτα Π: αὐτὰ Α.

ζεσθαι, and we should perhaps read θάνατον ἢ φυγὴν. The pronoun αὐτῶν is half pleonastic: cf. IV 428 A n.

5 καὶ ὥς κτλ. The change from plural to singular (cf. I 347 A n.) "rem magis insignem et imaginem evidentiorē reddit" (Schneider). The same effect is produced by making the clause independent—a common transition, for examples of which see Engelhardt Anac.
Pl. Spec. III pp. 41—43.

6 περινοστεῖ κτλ.: i.e. ἀπὸ τόπου εἰς τόπον μεταβαίνει κτλ. (Schol. on Ar. Plut.
121). The word has a contemptuous ring—a rolling stone gathers no moss—and suggests a vagrant or loafer. Cf. Ar.
I.c. and ib. 494 ἦν γὰρ ὁ Πλούτος νυνὶ βλέψῃ καὶ μὴ τυφλὸς ὧν περινοστή, with Lucian Tim. 24 ἄνω καὶ κάτω πλανῶ-μαι περινοστῶν. The comparison ὥσπερ ἥρως is suggested by ὀρώντος οὐδενός.
They excite no more notice and remark than an invisible ἥρως or circumambient spirit of one who has joined the happy or unhappy dead: see Rohde *Psyche*² I pp. 146 ff. and especially p. 182 nn., or Roscher Lex. d. Myth. s.v. Heros.
Weil (Rev. d. Phil. VIII pp. 171 ff.) seems to think there is a specific reference to such an invisible hero as sometimes rendered service in battle (cf. Paus. III 19. 12 with Frazer's note, and Hdt. VIII 64); but Plato's language is quite general.
The meaning cannot be 'parades like a hero' (as Jowett translates), for ἥρως is not thus used in Greek, and a parading hero always excites popular attention.
J. and C. think 'there is an implied allusion to the νόστοι. "He is welcomed wherever he goes like one of the heroes returning from the siege of Troy".' But what of οὔτε φροντίζοντος οὔτε ὀρώντος οὐδενός? It may be noted that the superstition of which Plato here avails himself was widely prevalent in Greece as elsewhere. Hence some of the Pythagoreans asserted ψυχὴν εἶναι τὰ ἐν τῷ αἵρῳ ἑύσματα (Arist. de An. I 2. 404^a 18), and commanded τὰ πίπτοντα ἀπὸ τῆς τραπέζης μὴ ἀναιρεῖσθαι (Mullach Fr. Phil. Gr. I p. 507)—a precept on which Diogenes Laertius remarks 'Ἀριστοφάνης δὲ τῶν ἡρώων φησὶν εἶναι τὰ πίπτοντα (VIII 34).

The famous passage in Cor. I 11. 10 looks like a relic of some similar idea. Cf.
also Phaed. 81 c, Zeller⁵ I p. 452 nn., Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 320 n. 1, 346 ff. nn., 361 nn., and Dieterich Nekyia pp. 88 f.
nn. For other views on the whole of this difficult sentence see App. II.

καὶ πολλοὺς γε. The reply differs somewhat in form from the question: cf.
V 465 E n. It is difficult not to believe that Plato is exaggerating, although the frequency of the δίκη ἐξούλης in Athens shews that in civil cases at all events it was often far from easy to enforce the verdict.

7 συγγνώμη: 'considerateness,' viz.
in making allowance for want of education in their demagogues, as the rest of the sentence shews. The irony is of the truly Platonic kind. Jowett's "forgiving spirit" misses the point.

558 B σμικρολογία κτλ.: 'haggling about trifles' etc., like education, forsooth! ἐλέγομεν refers to IV 424 E ff. and VI 492 E.

II καταπατήσασα κτλ. Cf. Gorg.
484 A. The reading αὐτὰ for ταῦτα—see cr. n.—is intrinsically weak, and has no MS support except A. On ἐξ ὁποίων κτλ. see VI 488 B n.

τῷ ἢ πλήθει. Πάνν γ', ἔφη, γενναία. Ταῦτά τε δὴ, ἔφην, ἔχοι ἂν C 15 καὶ τούτων ἄλλα ἀδελφὰ δημοκρατία, καὶ εἴη, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἡδεῖα πολιτεία καὶ ἄναρχος καὶ ποικίλη, ἰσότητά τινα ὁμοίως ἴσοις τε καὶ ἀνίσοις διανεμόνσα. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη, γνώριμα λέγεις.

XII. Ἄθρει δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τίς ὁ τοιοῦτος ἰδίᾳ. ἡ πρῶτον σκεπτέον, ὥσπερ τὴν πολιτείαν ἐσκεψάμεθα, τίνα τρόπον γίγνεται; 20 Ναί, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐχ ᾧδε; τοῦ φειδωλοῦ ἐκείνου καὶ ὀλιγαρχικοῦ ἢ γένοιτ' ἂν, οἶμαι, ὅς ὑπὸ τῷ πατρὶ τεθραμμένος ἐν τοῖς D ἐκείνου ἦθεσι. Τί γὰρ οὐ; Βία δὴ καὶ οὗτος ἄρχων τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ ἡδονῶν, ὅσαι ἀναλωτικαὶ μὲν, χρηματιστικαὶ δὲ μή· αἱ δὴ οὐκ ἀναγκαῖαι κέκληνται. Δῆλον, ἔφη. Βούλει οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἵνα μὴ 25 σκοτεινῶς διαλεγώμεθα, πρῶτον ὀρισώμεθα τὰς τε ἀναγκαίους ἐπιθυμίας καὶ τὰς μή; Βούλομαι, ἦ δ' ὅς. Οὐκοῦν ἅς τε οὐκ ἂν οἰοί τ' εἶμεν ἀποτρέψαι, δικαίως ἂν ἀναγκαῖαι καλοῦντο, καὶ ὅσαι ἢ ἀποτελούμεναι ὠφελούσιν ἡμᾶς; τούτων γὰρ ἀμφοτέρων E

14. γενναία Ξ9²: γενναῖα ΑΠ9¹. ταῦτά II: ταῦτατά (sic) A. 25. ὀρισώ-μεθα Α2Π: ὀρισώμεθα Α¹. 27. ἂν ἀναγκαῖαι M Vind. E: ἀναγκαῖαι ΑΠΞ9.

558 C 14 γενναία. γενναῖα—see cr. n.—is much less elegant, in spite of the exclamatory anacoluthon ὡς μεγαλο-πρεπῶς κτλ. See on V 465 E. Apelt strangely suggests ἔφη. Γενναῖα ταῦτά τε κτλ. (Fleck. 76. for 1893, p. 556).

15 ἄλλα ἀδελφὰ. It is remarkable that Plato says nothing of ψηφίσματα, which were regarded as an essential feature of advanced democracy: see Arist.
 Pol. Δ 4. 1292^a 19 and Gilbert Beitr. zur innern Gesch. Ath. etc. pp. 79 ff.

ἡδεῖα κτλ. True political equality, according to Plato, is γεωμετρικὴ ἰσότης, which τῷ μὲν—μείζονι πλείω, τῷ δ' ἐλάτ-τονι μικρότερα νέμει (Lazus 757 C and Gorg. 508 A): ἀριθμητικὴ ἰσότης, which is the democratic principle, is a spurious kind of equality, not κατὰ φύσιν: τοῖς γὰρ ἀνίσοις τὰ ἴσα ἄνισα γίγνεται ἂν, εἰ μὴ τυγχάνοι τοῦ μέτρου (Lazus 757 A). Cf. Isocr.
 Nicocles 14 and Arist. Pol. Γ 9. 1280^a 11 ff., with other passages cited by Henkel
 Gr. Lehre vom Staat p. 154 n. 63.

558 C—559 D We cannot describe the origin of the democratical man, until we explain what we mean by 'necessary' and 'unnecessary' desires. Desires which cannot be eradicated, and desires which we gratify with advantage to ourselves, are called 'necessary': those of the opposite kind are 'unnecessary.' The oligarchical man is ruled by the former; the latter sway the drone.

558 D 22 βία δὴ κτλ. The description is interrupted by the digression on Desire:
 hence the anacoluthon.

23 οὐκ ἀναγκαῖαι. See 554 A n.

24 ἵνα μὴ σκοτεινῶς κτλ. It becomes important at this stage to investigate the subject of the Desires, because τὸ ἐπιθυ-μητικόν in the widest sense is the psychological basis of the democratical as well as of the oligarchical character. Plato's complete classification distinguishes between (1) necessary desires, (2) not-necessary,
 (3) not-necessary and παράνομοι (IX 571 B).
 The ὀλιγαρχικὸς is the embodiment of (1):
 the δημοκρατικὸς of (1) and (2) equally (561 A ff.): the τυραννικὸς of (3). Cf. IX 571 A n. If we translate παράνομοι by 'unnatural' (as in view of IX 571 C ff. we are justified in doing: cf. IX 571 B n.), Plato's account becomes almost identical with that of Epicurus, who classified Desires as (1) natural and necessary, (2) natural and not-necessary, (3) neither natural nor necessary. For the authorities see Usener Epicurea pp. 78, 294.
 Cf. also Athen. XII 511 E.

27 ἂν. See cr. n., and for the loss of ἂν before ἀναγκαῖαι IV 437 B n.

28 ὅσαι—ἡμᾶς. As Aristotle would say, those also are ἀναγκαῖαι ὧν ἄνευ ἐφίεσθαι ἡμῶν τῇ φύσει ἀνάγκη. ἢ οὐ; Καὶ μάλιστα. Δικαίως 9 δὴ | τοῦτο ἐπ' αὐταῖς ἐροῦμεν, τὸ ἀναγκαῖον. Δικαίως. Τί δέ; 30 ἄς γέ τις ἀπαλλάξειεν ἄν, εἰ μελετῶ ἐκ νέου, καὶ πρὸς οὐδὲν ἀγαθὸν ἐνοῦσαι δρῶσιν, αἱ δὲ καὶ τοῦναντίον, πάσας ταύτας εἰ μὴ ἀναγκαίους φαῖμεν εἶναι, ἄρ' οὐ καλῶς ἂν λέγοιμεν; Καλῶς μὲν οὖν. Προελώμεθα δὴ τι παράδειγμα ἐκατέρων, αἵ εἰσιν, ἵνα τύπω 5 λάβωμεν αὐτάς; Οὐκοῦν χρή. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐχ ἡ τοῦ φαγεῖν μέχρι 3 ὑγιείας τε καὶ εὐεξίας καὶ αὐτοῦ σίτου τε καὶ ὄψου ἀναγκαῖος ἂν εἴη; Οἶμαι. Ἡ μὲν γέ που τοῦ σίτου κατ' ἀμφότερα ἀναγκαῖα, 7 ἢ τε ὠφέλιμος ἢ τε παῦσαι ζῶντα δυνατή. Ναί. Ἡ δὲ ὄψου, εἴ πῇ τινα ὠφελίαν πρὸς εὐεξίαν παρέχεται. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν. Τί δέ; 10 ἢ πέρα τούτων καὶ ἀλλοίων ἐδεσμάτων ἢ τοιούτων ἐπιθυμία, δυνατὴ δὲ κολαζομένη ἐκ νέων καὶ παιδευομένη ἐκ τῶν πολλῶν ἀπαλλάτ-τεσθαι, καὶ βλαβερὰ μὲν σώματι, βλαβερὰ δὲ ψυχῇ πρὸς τε 1 φρόνησιν καὶ τὸ σωφρονεῖν, ἄρα γε ὀρθῶς οὐκ ἀναγκαῖα ἂν καλοῖτο; Ὅρθότατα μὲν οὖν. Οὐκοῦν καὶ ἀναλωτικὰς φῶμεν 15

11. ἢ II: ἢ A.

τὸ ἀγαθὸν μὴ ἐνδέχεται ἢ εἶναι ἢ γενέσθαι (Met. Δ 5. 1015^a 22).

558 E τούτων—ἀνάγκη justifies the appellation ἀναγκαῖα. The pronoun τούτων is used somewhat vaguely, and denotes not the desires themselves, but their objects. Cf. 543 C n.

29 τῇ φύσει. It follows that no desires which are necessary can be unnatural: see Epicurus referred to on 558 D.

559 A 2 καὶ πρὸς: 'and which moreover' ("idem est quod καὶ προσέτι, ac praeterea, atque insuper" Stallbaum).
 Two kinds of necessary desires were distinguished viz. (1) ἄς—ἀποτρέψαι, (2) ὅσαι—ἡμᾶς. Corresponding to this, which is not of course a mutually exclusive, division, Plato emphasises two distinct features of unnecessary desires: so that καὶ πρὸς ('and which moreover,' or according to the Greek idiom, 'and these moreover': see on II 357 B) is altogether appropriate. Cf. (with Stallbaum) Euthyd. 208 D and Blaydes on Ar. Knights 578. Schneider takes πρὸς οὐδὲν together ("nullius rei habita ratione"), but οὐδὲν cannot easily be separated from ἀγαθόν, unless we read <οὐδὲν> πρὸς οὐδὲν ἀγα-θόν, as I formerly suggested. I have no longer any doubt that Stallbaum's view is right. Ast's conjecture πρὸς οὐδὲν' is refuted by Schneider.

7 αὐτοῦ σίτου: 'merely of food,' as opposed to e.g. pleasant food, sweet food (τῶν τοιῶνδε σιτίων in Epicurus: Usener Epic. p. 295). See in particular IV 437 D —439 A nn.

559 B 8 ἢ μὲν γε κτλ. On γε see 556 A n. and Neil's Appendix on γε in his edition of Ar. Knights p. 192. The words ἢ τε—δυνατὴ should be explained as follows. Hunger, which is the desire of σίτος, 'is capable of putting an end to life': i.e. it must be gratified (οὐκ ἂν οἶοί τ' εἶμεν ἀποτρέψαι 558 D), or else we die.
 On this ground, and also because it is ὠφέλιμος (i.e. ἀποτελουμένη ὠφελεῖ ἡμᾶς 558 E), we pronounce it an ἀναγκαῖα ἐπι-θυμία. The Greek is terse but not obscure. With παῦσαι ζῶντα cf. Gorg.
 523 C, D and Menex. 241 E. Jowett thinks the expression 'very strange' for ἀποκτιν-νύναι. It is strictly accurate: the sword kills, but hunger παύει ζῶντα: we merely 'cease to live.' Other views on this passage are discussed in App. III.

11 ἀλλοίων—ἢ τοιούτων: "alius generis—quam quales modo diximus" (Stallbaum).

εἶναι ταύτας, ἐκείνας δὲ χρηματιστικὰς διὰ τὸ χρησίμους πρὸς τὰ ἔργα εἶναι; Τί μὴν; Οὕτω δὴ καὶ περὶ ἀφροδισίων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων φήσομεν. Οὕτω. Ἄρ' οὖν καὶ ὃν νῦν δὴ κηφήνα ὠνομάζομεν, τοῦτον ἐλέγομεν τὸν τῶν τοιούτων ἡδονῶν καὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν 20 γέμοντα καὶ ἀρχόμενον ὑπὸ τῶν μὴ ἀναγκαίων, τὸν δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν ἀναγκαίων φειδωλόν¹ τε καὶ ὀλιγαρχικόν; Ἄλλὰ τί μὴν; D

XIII. Πάλιν τοίνυν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, λέγωμεν, ὡς ἐξ ὀλιγαρχικοῦ δημοκρατικὸς γίγνεται. φαίνεται δέ μοι τά γε πολλὰ ὧδε γίγνεσθαι. Πῶς; "Οταν νέος τεθραμμένος ὡς νῦν δὴ ἐλέγομεν, ἀπαι-25 δεύτως τε καὶ φειδωλῶς, γεύσῃται κηφήνων μέλιτος καὶ ξυγγένηται αἰθῶσι θηροῖ καὶ δεινοῖς, παντοδαπὰς ἡδονὰς καὶ ποικίλας καὶ παντοίως ἐχούσας δυναμένοις σκευάζειν, ἐνταυθὰ που οἷον εἶναι

559 C 16 χρηματιστικὰς—χρησίμους: 'money-making or productive, because useful in production.' Plato more suo σοφίζεται περὶ τὸ ὄνομα (VI 509 D II.).

17 οὕτω δῆ: they also are ἀναλωτικά. Epicurus I.c. describes ἡ τῶν ἀφροδισίων ἐπιθυμία as φυσικὴ μὲν, οὐκ ἀναγκαία δέ.

18 νῦν δῆ. 552 C ff., 555 E ff.

559 D—562 A Let us now return and explain the genesis of the democratical man. An oligarchical father has a son, whom he brings up on narrow and parsimonious principles. The young man tastes the 'honey of drones,' and sedition is engendered within his soul. A struggle ensues, and after perhaps a temporary check the unnecessary desires prevail; but with the help of fortune and advancing years a sort of equality of all desires is finally established; and the man becomes an impartial devotee of pleasure in all its forms—a beautiful and many-coloured creature, 'everything by starts and nothing long.'

22 πάλιν τοίνυν κτλ. Plato's description of the genesis of the democratical man is one of the most royal and magnificent pieces of writing in the whole range of literature, whether ancient or modern. Throughout most of this chapter, in the words of Longinus, the style πλουσιώτατα καθάπερ τι πέλαγος εἰς ἀναπεπταμένον κέχυται—μέγεθος (περὶ ὕψους 12. 2), and no better example will ever be discovered of that full tide of lofty thoughts and images and words—a tide 'too full for sound and foam'—in which the author of the treatise On the Sublime places the essence of ὕψος. We owe to Longinus what is by far the best appreciation of Plato's hierophantic vein: see especially cc. 33—36, where we can hear more than a mere echo of that sublimity which is itself, according to Longinus, the 'echo of high-mindedness' (ὕψος μεγαλοφροσύνης ἀπήχημα ib. 9. 2). For a very different estimate the student may be referred to Dionysius of Halicarnassus (ad Cn. Pomp. Gem. 753—765 Reiske), whose pedantic criticisms make it tolerably plain that a study of the Attic orators does not qualify a man to sit in judgment upon Plato. The present episode is hardly less remarkable for psychological insight than for elevation of style, and the description of the democratic man as the chameleon of human society paints him for all time (561 C ff.). As a representation of actual fact, the picture is doubtless somewhat exaggerated, as usual; but it is extraordinarily vivid and powerful, and shews that the Platonic analogy between the individual and the State may prove in the hands of a master an admirable clue whereby to unravel the workings of the human soul in the individual as well as in the State.

559 D 24 νῦν δῆ κτλ. See 558 C, D. With ἀπαιδεύτως cf. 552 E II.

25 κηφήνων κτλ. It is clear from the summary of this passage in IX 572 C συγγενόμενος δὲ κομψοτέρους ἀνδράσι καὶ μεστοῖς ὧν ἄρτι διήλθομεν ἐπιθυμιῶν that κηφήνων and αἰθῶσι θηροῖ καὶ δεινοῖς refer to human drones, and not to the κηφηνῶδεις ἐπιθυμίαι in the young man's heart. αἰθῶσι 'furious,' 'wild' (Jebb on Soph. Ajax 221) shews that the drones are of the 'stinging' order (552 C ff., 555 D ff.).

ἀρχὴν αὐτῷ μεταβολῆς ¹ ὀλιγαρχίας τῆς ἐν ἑαυτῷ εἰς δημοκρατίαν. Πολλὴ ἀνάγκη, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν ὥσπερ ἡ πόλις μετέβαλλε βοηθησάσης τῷ ἐτέρῳ μέρει ξυμμαχίας ἔξωθεν, ὁμοίως ὁμοίῳ, οὕτω καὶ ³⁰ ὁ νεανίας μεταβάλλει βοηθοῦντος αὐ εἰδους ἐπιθυμιῶν ἔξωθεν τῷ ἐτέρῳ τῶν παρ' ἐκείνῳ, ξυγγενοῦς τε καὶ ὁμοίου; Παντάπασιν μὲν οὖν. Καὶ εἰ μὲν, οἶμαι, ἀντιβοηθήσῃ τις τῷ ἐν ἑαυτῷ ὀλιγαρχικῷ ξυμμαχία, ἢ ποθεν παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἢ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων οἰκείων, | νοουθετοῦντων τε καὶ κακιζόντων, στάσις δὴ καὶ ἀντί- ³⁵ στασις καὶ μάχη ἐν αὐτῷ πρὸς αὐτὸν τότε γίγνεται. Τί μὲν; Καὶ ποτὲ μὲν, οἶμαι, τὸ δημοκρατικὸν ὑπεχώρησε τῷ ὀλιγαρχικῷ, καὶ τινες τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν αἱ μὲν διεφθάρησαν, αἱ δὲ καὶ ἐξέπεσον, αἰδοῦς τινὸς ἐγγενομένης ἐν τῇ τοῦ νέου ψυχῇ, καὶ κατεκοσμήθη ⁵ πάλιν. Γίγνεται γὰρ ἐνίοτε, ἔφη. Αὐθις δέ, οἶμαι, τῶν ἐκπεσού-

28. ὀλιγαρχίας—δημοκρατίαν nos: ὀλιγαρχικῆς—δημοκρατικὴν codd. 29. ἔφη Π et in marg. A²: om. A¹. μετέβαλλε A¹Π: μεταβάλλει corr. A².

559 E 28 ὀλιγαρχίας—δημοκρατίαν. See cr. n. Schneider defends the MSS by explaining μεταβολή ὀλιγαρχική as “ea quae ad ὀλιγαρχίαν pertinet eamque efficit,” and referring τῆς ἐν ἑαυτῷ “ad ipsam ὀλιγαρχίαν in adjectivo latenter.” δημοκρατικὴν he thinks is written for δημοκρατίαν by a sort of attraction. This explanation is much too difficult and obscure. Nor can ὀλιγαρχικῆς by itself stand for ὀλιγαρχικῆς πολιτείας, at all events in this connexion. The MS reading can only mean ‘of the oligarchical change within himself into a democratical,’ an expression which bears no sense. I formerly wrote ὀλιγαρχικοῦ τοῦ—δημοκρατικόν, comparing 559 E, 560 A; but it may fairly be objected that the ‘oligarchical element’ within the man does not change into a democratical: it is the government that changes. For this reason I now prefer my old suggestion (Cl. Rev. IV p. 357), although the corruption of ὀλιγαρχικοῦ—δημοκρατικόν is perhaps somewhat easier to explain. For the combination of genitives cf. V 449 A n. An alternative solution would be to insert πολιτείας after ἑαυτῷ. This gives excellent sense, but it is difficult to assign a plausible reason for the loss of πολιτείας in all our MSS. I am unable to resist the conclusion that the text is corrupt, otherwise I should not venture to make any alteration. If Plato did not write the passage as it is printed above, there can be little doubt that πολιτείας has accidentally disappeared.

29 μετέβαλλε κτλ. See 556 E. τῷ ἐτέρῳ τῶν means of course τῷ ἐτέρῳ εἰδὲι τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν.

33 τῷ ἐν ἑαυτῷ ὀλιγαρχικῷ: ‘the oligarchical element within one.’ ἑαυτῷ is ‘oneself’: cf. III 407 C μελέτας πρὸς ἑαυτόν. ἐν αὐτῷ, which Ast adopted (after Stephanus), would be easier; but I think Plato means to suggest that the oligarchical element present in this νεανίας is a universal feature of the human race. J. and C. think ἐκείνῳ and ἑαυτῷ may have changed places—a conjecture which is surely too bold. Schneider, taking ἑαυτῷ as ‘himself’ and not ‘oneself,’ compares ἐν αὐτῷ πρὸς αὐτόν below and αὐτῷ—ἐν ἑαυτῷ in 559 D, E; but here there is nothing corresponding to the αὐτῷ in each of these passages, and ἑαυτῷ cannot therefore be translated in Schneider’s way.

560 A I στάσις κτλ. Cf. 556 E, 557 A. On the tense of ὑπεχώρησε and the other aorists throughout this passage see 548 D n.

4 τινες—αἱ μὲν κτλ. Cf. IV 431 A n. The words διεφθάρησαν—ἐξέπεσον correspond to ἀποκτείνωσι—ἐκβάλλωσι in 557 A. Madvig’s διετράπησαν is an unlucky venture.

σὼν ἐπιθυμιῶν ἄλλαι ὑποτρεφόμεναι ξυγγενεῖς δι' ἀνεπιστημοσύνην ἢ τροφῆς πατρὸς πολλαὶ τε καὶ ἰσχυραὶ ἐγένοντο. Φιλεῖ Β γοῦν, ἔφη, οὕτω γίγνεσθαι. Οὐκοῦν εἴλκυσάν τε πρὸς τὰς αὐτὰς 10 ὁμιλίας, καὶ λάθρα ξυγγιγνόμεναι πλήθος ἐνέτεκον. Τί μὴν; Τελευτῶσαι δὴ, οἶμαι, κατέλαβον τὴν τοῦ νέου τῆς ψυχῆς ἀκρό-πολιν, αἰσθόμεναι κενὴν μαθημάτων τε καὶ ἐπιτηδευμάτων καλῶν καὶ λόγων ἀληθῶν, οἳ δὴ ἄριστοι φρουροὶ τε καὶ φύλακες ἐν ἀνδρῶν ἢ θεοφιλῶν εἰσι διανοαῖς. Καὶ πολὺ γ', ἔφη. Ψευδεῖς δὲ Γ 15 καὶ ἀλαζόνες, οἶμαι, λόγοι τε καὶ δόξαι ἀντ' ἐκείνων ἀναδραμόντες κατέσχον τὸν αὐτὸν τόπον τοῦ τοιούτου. Σφόδρα γ', ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ πάλιν τε εἰς ἐκείνους τοὺς Λωτοφάγους ἐλθὼν φανερώς κατοικεῖ, καὶ ἐὰν παρ' οἰκείων τις βοήθεια τῷ φειδωλῷ αὐτοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀφικνῆται, κλήσαντες οἱ ἀλαζόνες λόγοι ἐκείνοι τὰς τοῦ 20 βασιλικοῦ τείχους ἐν αὐτῷ πύλας οὔτε αὐτὴν τὴν ξυμμαχίαν ἢ παριάσιν οὔτε πρέσβεις πρεσβυτέρων λόγους ἰδιωτῶν εἰσδέχονται, Δ

7 ἀνεπιστημοσύνην — πατρός: the father is himself ἀπαίδευτος (552 E n.), and the ἀπαίδευτος cannot παιδεύειν. On the genitives see V 449 A n.

560 B 9 τὰς αὐτὰς ὁμιλίας κτλ. The reference in τὰς αὐτὰς is to ξυγγένηται—δεινοῖς 559 D. Ast's conjecture τὰς αὐταῖς ὁμιλίαις is wrong in point of sense. λάθρα ξυγγιγνόμεναι: viz. with the desires of the 'drones': see 559 D.

13 ἐν ἀνδρῶν κτλ. The stately cadence is worthy of the theme: cf. τὴν—τέλεισι 560 E, and see the remarks of Longinus on rhythm and the arrangement of words as an element of ὕψος (περὶ ὕψους 39 ff.).

560 C 15 ἀναδραμόντες κατέσχον: 'ran up and seized.' ἀναδραμόντες preserves the metaphor in ἀκρόπολιν (560 B).

17 εἰς—Λωτοφάγους: 'to those Lotos-eaters' land.' ἐκείνους refers to κηφὴν 559 D. The figure is strikingly appropriate, for the lotos-flower of sensual indulgence makes man, who is an οὐράνιον φυτόν (Clem. Alex. Cohort. ad Gent. 96 A ed. Migne, following Plato Tim. 90 A), forget 'the imperial palace whence he came.' Cf. VII 519 A, B n., and (for Λωτοφάγοι) Luc. Sal. 2-4, Anth. Pal. XV 12. 8 μισῶ Λωτοφάγων γλυκερὴν λιπαρὴν ἰδωδὴν (with reference to Epicureanism).

φανερῶς κατοικεῖ: no longer λάθρα (560 B). He glories in his shame. Herwerden's κατοικεῖ < ἐκεῖ > in place of κατοικεῖ is wholly unnecessary and spoils the rhythm.

19 τοῦ βασιλικοῦ τείχους: i.e. the wall enclosing the ἀκρόπολις (560 B), where the soul's king or ruling power inhabits.

560 D 21 οὔτε πρέσβεις κτλ.: 'nor admit an embassy of wise words spoken by private persons of maturer years.' The contrast is between the ξυμμαχία itself, consisting of the λόγοι of οἰκείοι, and 'ambassador-words' of ἰδιῶται, i.e. men who take no part in public or official life. Their representations would serve as ambassadors to those of the οἰκείοι, whether the οἰκείοι inspire them or not. It has often been pointed out that Plato is thinking of Alcibiades in various parts of this description (see e.g. Steinhart Einleitung pp. 239, 698 n. 238), Susemihl Gen. Entw. II p. 233 and Herwerden Mnem. XIX p. 337); and here, I believe, he has in mind the efforts of Socrates to reclaim him. Cf. VI 494 D n. and especially Symp. 215 D ff. For πρεσβύτερος with reference to Socrates see ἀγαθοῖς καὶ πρεσβυτέροις III 409 C n.; and for ἰδιώτης as applied to him, Apol. 32 E—33 B. The order and rhythm, as in ἐν ἀνδρῶν θεοφιλῶν εἰσι διανοαῖς above, is in keeping with the stately and sonorous eloquence of the whole passage: cf. IX 573 D. On Badham's conjecture δι' ὧτων for ἰδιωτῶν see App. IV.

αὐτοί τε κρατοῦσι μαχόμενοι, καὶ τὴν μὲν αἰδῶ ἡλιθιότητα ὀνομά-ζοντες ὠθοῦσιν ἔξω ἀτίμως φυγάδα, σωφροσύνην δὲ ἀνανδρίαν καλοῦντές τε καὶ προπηλακίζοντες ἐκβάλλουσι, μετρίότητα δὲ καὶ κοσμίαν δαπάνην ὡς ἀγροικίαν καὶ ἀνελευθερίαν οὔσαν πείθοντες 25 ὑπερορίζουσι μετα πολλῶν καὶ ἀνωφελῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν; Σφόδρα γε.
 Τούτων δέ γέ που κειώσαντες καὶ καθήραντες τὴν τοῦ κατεχο-μένου¹ τε ὑπ' αὐτῶν καὶ τελουμένου ψυχὴν μεγάλοισι τέλεσι, τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο ἤδη ὕβριν καὶ ἀναρχίαν καὶ ἀσωτίαν καὶ ἀναίδειαν λαμπρὰς μετὰ πολλοῦ χοροῦ κατὰγουσιν ἐστεφανωμένας, ἐγκωμιά- 30 ζοντες καὶ ὑποκοριζόμενοι, ὕβριν μὲν εὐπαιδευσίαν καλοῦντες, ἀναρχίαν δὲ ἐλευθερίαν, ἀσωτίαν δὲ μεγαλοπρέπειαν, ἀναίδειαν δὲ ἀνδρείαν. | ἄρ' οὐχ οὕτω πως, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, νέος ὢν μεταβάλλει ἐκ τοῦ ἐν ἀναγκαίοις ἐπιθυμίαις τρεφόμενου τὴν τῶν μὴ ἀναγκαίων καὶ ἀνωφελῶν ἡδονῶν ἐλευθέρωσίν τε καὶ ἄνεσιν; Καὶ μάλα γε, ἦ δ' ὅς, ἐναργῶς. Ζῆ δὴ, οἶμαι, μετὰ ταῦτα ὁ τοιοῦτος οὐδὲν μᾶλλον εἰς ἀναγκαίους ἢ μὴ ἀναγκαίους ἡδονὰς ἀναλίσκων καὶ 5 χρήματα καὶ πόνους καὶ διατριβάς· ἄλλ' ἐὰν εὐτυχῆς ἦ καὶ μὴ πέρα ἐκβακχευθῇ, ἀλλὰ τι καὶ πρεσβύτερος γεινόμενος τοῦ πολλοῦ²

22 μαχόμενοι: viz. with τὸ φειδῶλον (560 c).

αἰδῶ. See 560 A. With what follows cf. Thuc. III 82. 4 ff. and Isocr. Areop. 20, Panath. 131 (Dümmler's Chron. Beiträge pp. 15 ff.).

23 σωφροσύνην κτλ. Thuc. l.c. τὸ δὲ σῶφρον τοῦ ἀνάνδρου πρόσχημα. Cf. Eur. Phoen. 509 ἀνανδρία γὰρ τὸ πλέον ὅστις ἀπολέσας | τοῖλασσον ἔλαβε. It is probable that Plato had Thucydides in his mind: see Susemihl Gen. Entw. II p. 234.

26 μετὰ: 'with the aid of' (in Vereinigung mit, Schneider).

27 καθήραντες κτλ. The imagery is borrowed from the Eleusinian rites. On the first day of the Greater Mysteries, which was called ἄλαδε μύσται, took place the cleansing of the μύσται in the sea: cf. Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Ath. p. 207 n. 2. κατεχομένου is used as in Men. 99 ὁ κατεχομένους ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ.

560 E 28 μεγάλοισι τέλεσι κτλ. The archaic termination in μεγάλοισι adds solemnity: see on I 330 B. λαμπράς = 'in a blaze of light.' Plato's language would suggest to an Athenian the brilliant scene on the evening of the Iacchus-day, when the 'procession following the figure of Iacchus transformed itself into a λαμπαδηφορία' (Mommsen l.c. p. 229): cf. Ar. Frogs 340 ff. ἔγειρε φλογέας λαμπάδας ἐν χερσὶ τινάσσων 'Iacch', ὦ 'Iacche. The exiled ὕβρις etc. are conducted home like Iacchus to Eleusis. In χοροῦ there is an allusion to the χορὸς μυστῶν.

32 μεγαλοπρέπειαν. See on VI 486 A. 561 A 2 τοῦ—τρεφόμενου. Masculine, not neuter.

τὴν—ἄνεσιν. I formerly read εἰς τὴν (with ΠΞ and many other mss) instead of τὴν, but now believe that A is right. "Non est idem, εἰς δημοκρατικὸν μεταβάλλειν, et τὴν—ἐλευθέρωσιν μεταβάλλειν. Hoc prius, illud posterius, haec via, ille finis est" (Schneider). If Plato had written εἰς, it should have been followed by an accusative masculine, contrasting with ἐκ τοῦ—τρεφόμενου, as in 553 A εἰς ὀλιγαρχικὸν ἐκ τοῦ τιμοκρατικοῦ ἐκείνου μεταβάλλει. For the use of μεταβάλλει cf. (with Schneider) IV 424 C et al. With the force of ἄνεσιν cf. IX 575 A (ἀνεθέντα) and 590 A.

6 εὐτυχῆς ἦ = 'if he is fortunate' is much better than εὐτυχῆσῃ (Cobet), which would mean 'if he becomes fortunate.' Cf. IX 578 C n.

7 ἀλλά τι κτλ.: 'but, owing also in some measure to the influence of years, θορύβου παρελθόντος μέρη τε καταδέξεται τῶν ἐκπεσόντων καὶ B τοῖς ἐπεισελθοῦσι μὴ ὅλον ἑαυτὸν ἐνδῶ, εἰς ἴσον δὴ τι καταστήσας 10 τὰς ἡδονὰς διάγει, τῇ παραπιπτούσῃ αἰὲ ὥσπερ λαχούσῃ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἀρχὴν παραδιδούς, ἕως ἂν πληρωθῇ, καὶ αὖθις ἄλλῃ, οὐδεμίαν ἀτιμάζων, ἀλλ' ἐξ ἴσου τρέφων. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν. Καὶ λόγον γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀληθῇ οὐ προσδεχόμενος οὐδὲ παριείς εἰς τὸ φρούριον, εἴαν τις λέγῃ, ὡς αἱ μὲν εἰσι τῶν ἰ καλῶν τε καὶ ἀγαθῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν C 15 ἡδοναί, αἱ δὲ τῶν πονηρῶν, καὶ τὰς μὲν χρὴ ἐπιτηδεύειν καὶ τιμᾶν, τὰς δὲ κολάζειν τε καὶ δουλοῦσθαι· ἀλλ' ἐν πᾶσι τούτοις ἀνανεύει τε καὶ ὁμοίας φησὶν ἀπάσας εἶναι καὶ τιμητέας ἐξ ἴσου Σφόδρα γάρ, ἔφη, οὕτω διακείμενος τοῦτο δρᾷ. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ διαζῇ τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν οὕτω χαριζόμενος τῇ προσπιπτούσῃ ἐπι-20 θυμίᾳ, τοτὲ μὲν μεθύων καὶ καταυλούμενος, αὖθις δὲ ὑδροποτῶν καὶ κατισχυαίνόμενος, ἰ τοτὲ δ' αὖ γυμναζόμενος, ἔστιν δ' ὅτε ἀργῶν D καὶ πάντων ἀμελῶν, τοτὲ δ' ὡς ἐν φιλοσοφίᾳ διατρίβων· πολλάκις δὲ πολιτεύεται, καὶ ἀναπηδῶν ὅ τι ἂν τύχῃ λέγει τε καὶ πράττει· καὶν ποτέ τινας πολεμικοὺς ζηλώσῃ, ταύτῃ φέρεται, ἢ χρηματι-25 στικούς, ἐπὶ τοῦτ' αὖ. καὶ οὔτε τις τάξις οὔτε ἀνάγκη ἔπεστιν αὐτοῦ τῷ βίῳ, ἀλλ' ἡδὺν τε δὴ καὶ ἐλευθέριον καὶ μακάριον καλῶν τὸν βίον τοῦτον χρῆται αὐτῷ διὰ παντός. Παντάπασι, ἢ δ' ὅς, E διελέλυθας βίον ἰσονομικοῦ τινὸς ἀνδρός. Οἶμαι δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ,

9. εἰσὶν ἑαυτῷ ΑΠ.

20. τοτὲ Π: τὸ Α.

when the tumult of the soul has mostly passed' etc. Cf. I 329 C. Plato means that good fortune does something, and growing age the rest.

561 B 9 εἰς ἴσον κτλ. Pleasures are regarded by the δημοκρατικός ἀνὴρ as individual men are regarded by the δημοκρατικὴ πολιτεία (557 A, 558 C nm.): they are all equal. For ὥσπερ λαχούσῃ see on 557 A. ἕως ἂν πληρωθῇ means 'till he' (not 'it,' as D. and V. etc.) 'is filled.' Sensual pleasures πληροῦσι because they are πληρώσεις: cf. Phil. 35 Dff. This is the χαράδριον βίος so powerfully described in Gorg. 493 A—494 D.

13 τὸ φρούριον κτλ. The φρούριον is the ἀκρόπολις of 560 B. With εἴαν τις λέγῃ κτλ. cf. Gorg. 495 A ff.

561 C 19 διαζῇ κτλ. The δημοκρατικός, like the State of which he is the counterpart, is a living example of the Cyrenaic cult of μονόχρονος ἡδονῆς: see 557 A, D, nm. and RP.⁷ 207 B, 211. Stein-hart (Einführung p. 698 n. 239) with much probability thinks that the portrait is drawn from Alcibiades, whose ἦθος (says Plut. Alc. 2. 1) πολλὰς—ἀνομοιότητας καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸ μεταβολὰς ἐπέδειξετο. Cf. Eur. Hipp. 1115—1117 ῥάδια δ' ἦθεα τὸν αἶον ἑταβαλλομένα χρόνον αἰεὶ βίον ξυνευτυχοῖν, and (with Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 311 n.) the striking parallel in Dryden's Abraham and Achitophel 545 ff. On ἀνομοιότης as marking decay in men and cities see 547 A, 557 A nm.

561 D 25 οὔτε τις τάξις κτλ. "The absence of principle, he, like the democratic state, makes into a principle" (Nettleship l.c. II p. 310). On οὔτε ἀνάγκη see 557 E n., and on ἡδὺν 561 C n.

561 E 28 ἰσονομικοῦ: 'to whom all laws are equal.' 'Equal laws' (ἰσονομία) was the proud claim of democracy (Hdt. III 80, Bergk Poet. Lyr. Gr. III Scol. 12). The δημοκρατικός practises what he preaches ὡς ἀληθῶς—by impartially ignor-

καὶ παντοδαπὸν τε καὶ πλείστων ἡθῶν μεστόν, καὶ τὸν καλὸν τε καὶ ποικίλον, ὥσπερ ἐκείνην τὴν πόλιν, τοῦτον τὸν ἄνδρα εἶναι, ὃν πολλοὶ ἂν καὶ πολλὰ ζηλώσειαν τοῦ βίου, παραδείγματα πολιτειῶν τε καὶ τρόπων πλείστα ἐν αὐτῷ ἔχοντα. Οὗτος γάρ, ἔφη, ἔστιν. Τί οὖν; τετάχθω ἡμῖν κατὰ | δημοκρατίαν ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνὴρ, ὡς δημοκρατικὸς ὁρθῶς ἂν προσαγορευόμενος; Τετάχθω, ἔφη.

XIV. Ἡ καλλίστη δὴ, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, πολιτεία τε καὶ ὁ κάλλιστος ἀνὴρ λοιπὰ ἂν ἡμῖν εἴη διελθεῖν, τυραννίς τε καὶ τύραννος. Κομιδῇ γ', ἔφη. Φέρε δὴ, τίς τρόπος τυραννίδος, ᾧ φίλε ἐταῖρε, γίγνεται; 5 ὅτι μὲν γὰρ ἐκ δημοκρατίας μεταβάλλει, σχεδὸν δῆλον. Δῆλον.

32. οὗτος A² q¹: οὗτος (sic) II: οὔτω vel οὕτως Ξ q² et fortasse A¹.

ing every law! For the etymological figure cf. II 376 B n.

29 παντοδαπὸν τε καὶ — μεστόν. Richards proposes to write the genitive, remarking "surely the words are parallel to ἰσονομικοῦ." Logically they are, but grammatically they need not be, for the life of an ἰσονομικὸς ἀνὴρ is of course ἰσονομικός. With πλείστων ἡθῶν cf. πᾶσιν ἡθεσι πεποικιλμένη 557 C.

καὶ τὸν καλὸν τε κτλ. lit.: 'and that this man is the beautiful and many-coloured man, as the city described above' (was the beautiful and many-coloured city). "Sunt diversa hominum et civitatum genera, unum simplex ac rectum, alterum duplex, aliud multiplex et varium. Qui primo accensus est, ὁ ἀπλοῦς, qui alteri, ὁ διπλοῦς, hic vero ὁ καλὸς τε καὶ ποικίλος audit" (Schneider). Thus understood the article is strictly to the point, and there is no reason for writing τῶν καλῶν τε καὶ ποικίλων with Vind. B and W. H. Thompson. On ποικίλον see 557 C n. It is worthy of remark that Clement interprets Joseph's 'coat of many colours' in the Old Testament as symbolical of desire: εἴη δ' ἂν ἐπιθυμία ποικίλον ἐνδύμα (Strom. v 8. 84 C ed. Migne).

30 ἐκείνην τὴν πόλιν. See 557 C, with which and 557 D the words ὃν πολλοὶ κτλ. are also in close correspondence.

562 A—563 E It remains to describe tyranny and the tyrannical man. As oligarchy was overthrown by the insatiate pursuit of wealth, so democracy begins to change to tyranny, when evil cup-bearers provide the wine of Freedom in excessive draughts. Anarchy under the name of Freedom infects every department of life—political, domestic, educational, and social: the very dogs and beasts of burden become tainted with the prevailing vice. In the final stage no regard whatever is paid to laws, whether written or unwritten.

562 A ff. 3 ἡ καλλίστη κτλ. As Oligarchy fell a victim to the excessive pursuit of its ideal, viz. Wealth, so also the extravagant devotion to liberty and equality subverts in course of time the democratic State. In 562 A—565 D Plato puts before us the different stages in the fall of democracy: cf. Arist. Pol. Δ 4 1291^b 30—1292^a 38, where the various εἶδη τῆς δημοκρατίας are distinguished, and Newman The Politics of Aristotle IV pp. xxxvi—lxi. Plato's description, as usual, can be illustrated in many places from Greek and especially Athenian political and social life: see 562 D, E, 563 B, C, D al. nn.

562 A 5 γίγνεται = 'prodit,' 'quaerentibus se offert' (Schneider). Cf. III 412 C οἱ δὲ γεωργῶν ἄριστοι ἄρ' οὐ γεωργικώτατοι γίγνονται, Euthyd. 298 E ὥστε σὸς πατήρ γίγνεται ὁ κύων καὶ σὺ κυναρίων ἀδελφός, infra 566 A, IX 576 B and Prot. 325 B with my note ad loc. 'What,' asks Socrates, 'do we find to be the character of tyranny? As for its origin, it is pretty obvious that tyranny comes from democracy.' For the order of questions cf. 558 C. The words ὅτι μὲν γὰρ κτλ., when taken in connexion with the preceding question, seem at first sight to suggest that the μεταβολή will not be described: but cf. v 466 D, where μὲν γὰρ is used in exactly the same way, and followed by a full account of the topic to which its clause refers. See also App. V.

Ἄρ' οὖν τρόπον τινὰ τὸν αὐτὸν ἔκ τε ὀλιγαρχίας δημοκρατία γίγνεται καὶ ἐκ δημοκρατίας ἑ τυραννίς; Πῶς; Ὁ προὔθεντο, B ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀγαθόν, καὶ δι' ὃ ἡ ὀλιγαρχία καθίστατο—τοῦτο δ' ἦν 10 πλοῦτος· ἡ γάρ; Ναί. Ἡ πλούτου τοίνυν ἀπληστία καὶ ἡ τῶν ἄλλων ἀμέλεια διὰ χρηματισμὸν αὐτὴν ἀπώλλυ. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν καὶ ὁ δημοκρατία ὀρίζεται ἀγαθόν, ἡ τούτου ἀπληστία καὶ ταύτην καταλύει; Λέγεις δ' αὐτὴν τί ὀρίζεσθαι; Τὴν ἐλευθερίαν, εἶπον. τοῦτο γάρ που ἐν δημοκρατουμένῃ πόλει ἀκούσαις ἂν ὡς C 15 ἔχει τε κάλλιστον καὶ διὰ ταῦτα ἐν μόνῃ ταύτῃ ἄξιον οἰκεῖν ὅστις φύσει ἐλεύθερος. Λέγεται γὰρ δὴ, ἔφη, καὶ πολὺ τοῦτο τὸ ῥῆμα. Ἄρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅπερ ἦα νῦν δὴ ἐρῶν, ἡ τοῦ τοιούτου ἀπληστία καὶ ἡ τῶν ἄλλων ἀμέλεια καὶ ταύτην τὴν πολιτείαν μεθίστησιν τε καὶ παρασκευάζει τυραννίδος δεσθῆναι; Πῶς; ἔφη. Ὅταν, οἶμαι, 20 δημοκρατουμένη πόλις ἐλευθερίας διψήσασα κακῶν οἰνοχῶν προ- στατούντων τύχῃ, καὶ πορρωτέρω τοῦ δέοντος ἀκράτου αὐτῆς D μεθυσθῇ, τοὺς ἄρχοντας δὴ, ἂν μὴ πάνυ πρᾶοι ὥσι καὶ πολλήν

9. δ nos: οὐ codd.

ἡ Π: om. A.

10. πλοῦτος unus omnium codicum Vind. F: ὑπέρπλοτος AΠq: γίνεσθαι ὑπέρπλοτος E.

11. χρημα-

τισμὸν AΠ: χρηματισμῶν corr. A².

7 ἄρ' οὖν κτλ. begins a long description of the τρόπος τῆς γενέσεως: the τρόπος τῆς πολιτείας is not described till 566 D ff. Here again the situation in v 466 D is nearly, though not quite, analogous: see note ad loc. For other views on this passage consult App. V.

562 B 8 προὔθεντο: sc. the citizens of the oligarchical State. Stallbaum reads προὔθετο, on inferior MS authority; but the plural is easy enough: cf. 550 D.

9 καὶ δι' ὃ κτλ. explains and amplifies δ—ἀγαθόν. Wealth is the cause of oligarchy, that 'on account of' which it was established: cf. 550 D ff., 551 C, 555 B (τοῦ προκειμένου ἀγαθοῦ). The reading δι' οὐ (see cr. n.) would make wealth the means or instrument in producing the result, and this it was not, except in the loose sense in which the προκειμένου ἀγαθόν is also a means. I formerly conjectured δι' ὃ αὐ (Cl. Rev. IV p. 357), but αὐ is unsuitable. For the corruption in the MSS see note on διὰ τοῦτο X 610 D. Jowett wrongly translates καθίστατο by 'was maintained.'

10 πλοῦτος. See cr. n. The majority of editors reject ὑπέρπλοτος: rightly, for the word is not used except as an adjective. A host of emendations has been suggested, ὁ πέρα πλοῦτος (Richter Fleck. 7b. 1867 p. 146), ὑπέρπλοτος <πλοῦτος> (Stallbaum), ὑπέρ πλούτου (Madvig—but the use of ὑπέρ is not above suspicion), που πλοῦτος (Campbell), ὑπερπλοτεῖν (apud J. and C.), εἶπερ τι, πλοῦτος (Apelt Berl. Phil. Woch. 1895 p. 968). Stephanus' conjecture γίνεσθαι ὑπέρπλοτον was adopted by Ast. The expression ὑπέρπλοτος πλοῦτος occurs in Joan. Damasc. III 733 A ed. Migne, but in a highly rhetorical passage and without any reference to Plato. It is probably best to read πλοῦτος, with Schneider and Hermann. ὑπέρπλοτος may have originally been a marginal note intended to recall ὑπέρπλοτοι in 552 B.

11 ἀπώλλυ. 555 C—557 A.

13 ἐλευθερίαν. See 557 B n.

562 C 14 ἀκούσαις—ἐλεύθερος rings like an echo from some of the panegyrists of Athens: cf. Eur. Ion 669—675 with Menex. 239 A ff. and Thuc. II 37. 2.

15 ἔχει—κάλλιστον (sc. ἡ δημοκρατουμένη πόλις) = 'is its fairest possession,' not 'it has this in the highest perfection' (as suggested in J. and C.).

20 προστατούντων. See on 565 C.

562 D 22 ἂν μὴ—ὀλιγαρχικούς. For a striking example see the account παρέχωσι τὴν ἐλευθερίαν, κολάζει αἰτιωμένη ὥς μιαρούς τε καὶ ὀλιγαρχικούς. Δρῶσιν γάρ, ἔφη, τοῦτο. Τοὺς δέ γε, εἶπον, τῶν ἀρχόντων κατηκούς προπηλακίζει ὥς ἐθελοδούλους τε καὶ οὐδὲν 25 ὄντας, τοὺς δὲ ἄρχοντας μὲν ἀρχομένοις, ἀρχομένους δὲ ἀρχουσιν ὁμοίους ἰδίᾳ τε καὶ δημοσίᾳ ἐπαινεῖ τε καὶ τιμᾷ. ἄρ' οὐκ ἀνάγκη ἐν τοιαύτῃ¹ πόλει ἐπὶ πᾶν τὸ τῆς ἐλευθερίας ἵεναι; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Καὶ καταδύεσθαι γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ φίλε, εἰς τε τὰς ἰδίας οἰκίας καὶ τελευτᾶν μέχρι τῶν θηρίων τὴν ἀναρχίαν ἐμφυομένην. Πῶς, ἦ δ' 30 ὅς, τὸ τοιοῦτον λέγομεν; Οἶον, ἔφην, πατέρα μὲν ἐθίζεσθαι παιδί ὁμοιον γίγνεσθαι καὶ φοβεῖσθαι τοὺς ὑεῖς, ὕον δὲ πατρί, καὶ μήτε αἰσχύνεσθαι μήτε δεδιέναι τοὺς γονέας, ἵνα δὴ ἐλεύθερος ᾦ· μέτοικον δὲ ἀστῶ καὶ ἀστὸν μετοίκῳ ἐξισοῦσθαι, καὶ ξένον ὡσαύτως. Γίγνεται γὰρ οὕτως, ἔφη. Ταῦτά τε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ σμικρὰ τοιῆδε ἄλλα γίγνεται· διδάσκαλός τε ἐν τῷ τοιούτῳ φοιτητὰς φοβεῖται καὶ θωπεύει, φοιτηταί τε διδασκάλων ὀλιγοροῦσιν, οὕτω δὲ καὶ παιδαγωγῶν· καὶ ὅλως οἱ μὲν νέοι πρεσβυτέροις ἀπεικάζονται καὶ 5 διαμιλλῶνται καὶ ἐν λόγοις καὶ ἐν ἔργοις, οἱ δὲ γέροντες ξυγκαθιέν- B τες τοῖς νέοις εὐτραπείας τε καὶ χαριεντισμοῦ¹ ἐμπίμπλυνται, μιμούμενοι τοὺς νέους, ἵνα δὴ μὴ δοκῶσιν ἀηδεῖς εἶναι μηδὲ δεσποτικοί. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Τὸ δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἔσχατον, ὦ φίλε, τῆς ἐλευθερίας τοῦ πλήθους, ὅσον γίγνεται ἐν τῇ τοιαύτῃ 10 πόλει, ὅταν δὴ οἱ ἐωνημένοι καὶ αἱ ἐωνημέναι μηδὲν ἡττον ἐλεύθεροι ᾧσι τῶν πριαμένων. ἐν γυναιξὶ δὲ πρὸς ἄνδρας καὶ ἀνδράσι πρὸς of the proceedings after Arginusae in Xen. Hell. I 7. 12—15.

562 E 30 μέχρι τῶν θηρίων. See on 563 C, D.

31 πατέρα μὲν κτλ. Cf. Laus 701 B, [Xen.] Rep. Ath. I 8—12 and Mem. III 5. 15, 16 (Hermann Gesch. u. System d. Pl. Phil. p. 91).

563 A 6 ξυγκαθιέντες. V 467 B n.

563 B 9 τὸ δέ γε κτλ. 'But the extremest amount of freedom which appears in such a city is when' etc.: lit. 'the extreme of the amount of freedom' etc. τὸ—ἔσχατον is the subject to something like ἐστὶν or γίγνεται understood: cf. such idioms as οὐ τοι ἔνεκα ἡρόμην—ὅτι κτλ. I 330 B, where see note. 'The sentence is not exclamatory, as some have supposed. With πλήθους ἐλευθερίας cf. πολλήν—τὴν ἐλευθερίαν 562 D, and (for πλήθος) IX 591 E (πλήθος οὐσίας), Laus XI 913 D, Theaet. 158 D (πλήθος χρόνου) and Dem. Phil. IV 2. This explanation is that of Schneider, and indubitably right. The English editors and translators make τοῦ πλήθους depend on ἐλευθερίας: but "servi servaeque non sunt pars τοῦ πλήθους," and ὅσον—πόλει is not easily either separated from πλήθους or connected with ἔσχατον.

11 ὅταν—πριαμένων. Cf. [Xen.] Rep. Ath. I. 10 ff. τῶν δούλων δ' αὖ καὶ τῶν μετοίκων πλείστη ἐστὶν Ἀθήνησιν ἀκολασία, καὶ οὔτε πατάξαι ἔξεστιν αὐτόθι, οὔτε ὑπεκστήσεται σοὶ ὁ δοῦλος κτλ. In Arist. Pol. E II. 1313^b 35 δούλων ἀνεστὶς is said to be a symptom of extreme democracy.

12 ἐν γυναιξὶ κτλ. Arist. l.c. goes farther and speaks of a γυναικοκρατία περὶ τὰς οἰκίας. A German critic characteristically sees an 'admirable' illustration of Plato's remarks in the social life "jenes transatlantischen Staatvereins" (Steinhart Einleitung p. 243). Some have accused γυναῖκας ὅση ἡ ἰσονομία καὶ ἐλευθερία γίγνεται, ὀλίγου ἐπελαθόμεθ' εἰπεῖν. Οὐκοῦν κατ' Αἰσχύλον, ἔφη, ἑροῦμεν ὅ τι νῦν ἦλθ' C 15 ἐπὶ στόμα; Πάνυ γε, εἶπον. καὶ ἔγωγε οὕτω λέγω. τὸ μὲν γὰρ τῶν θηρίων τῶν ὑπὸ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ὅσῳ ἐλευθερώτερα ἐστὶν ἐνταῦθα ἢ ἐν ἄλλῃ, οὐκ ἂν τις πείθοιτο ἄπειρος. ἀτεχνῶς γὰρ αἱ τε κύνες κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν οἰαίπερ αἱ δέσπονται, γίγνονται τε δὴ καὶ ἵπποι καὶ ὄνοι πάνυ ἐλευθέρως καὶ σεμνῶς εἰθισμένοι πορεύεσ-20 θαι, κατὰ τὰς ὁδοὺς ἐμβάλλοντες τῷ ἀεὶ ἀπαντῶντι, ἐὰν μὴ ἐξίς-

Plato of already forgetting the liberalism of Book v (Krohn Pl. St. p. 214): but an ideal city is one thing, and a lawless democracy another; and corruptio optimi, in the relations between the sexes, as in other cases, may well be peissima.

563 C 14 ὅ τι νῦν—στόμα: "what rose to our lips just now, whatever it be," as Aeschylus observes." See Aesch. Frags. 337 Dindorf=334 Nauck. The reference in νῦν, which here as in some other places (III 414 B n.) has the meaning of 'just now,' is to 562 E καὶ τελευτᾶν μέχρι τῶν θηρίων τὴν ἀναρχίαν ἐμφυμένην. Nauck restores the fragment of Aeschylus in the form ὅτι νῦν ἦλθ' ἐπὶ στόμα: but the enclitic is unpleasing, and as ὅτι is absent from the other two places where the quotation occurs (Plut. Amat. 763 B, Them. Or. IV 52 B) Aeschylus probably wrote νῦν γὰρ ἦλθ' ἐπὶ στόμα ('just come to my lips') or something of the sort. With the general sense cf. III 394 D. Similar expressions in Greek literature are collected by Schaefer on Dion. Hal. de comp. verb. pp. 12, 13. Jackson ingeniously proposes to connect the present passage with Arist. Eth. Nic. III 2. 1111^a 9 ff., where he conjectures οἷον λέγοντές φασιν ἐκπεσεῖν αὐτοὺς ἃ (for ἡ) οὐκ εἰδέναι ὅτι ἀπόρητα ἦν, ὥσπερ Αἰσχύλος τὰ μυστικά (Proceedings of the Camb. Phil. Soc. XIII 8 and Journal of Philology XXVII p. 159 f.). "Is it possible" he asks "that the phrase ἦλθ' ἐπὶ στόμα is a proverbial survival of the plea urged by Aeschylus in plain prose on the occasion referred to in the Ethics?" I think an Athenian speaking in plain prose would have said ἦλθεν ἐπὶ στόμα or ἐπὶ τὸ στόμα, not ἦλθ' ἐπὶ στόμα. The elision is tragic.

15 οὕτω: i.e. in the spirit of the Aeschylean phrase: the idea occurred to me, and it shall out, though never so extravagant and absurd!

16 ἐλευθερώτερα. For the concord cf.

Phil. 45 E and Lawes 657 D (Ast).

18 τὴν παροιμίαν. The proverb was οἷαπερ ἡ δέσποινα, τοῖα χά κύων (Schol.), and meant ὅτι ὅποια δέσποινα, τοιαύτη καὶ ἡ θεραπαινὶς 'like mistress, like maid.' Plato takes κύων literally: hence ἀτεχνῶς. See Leutsch und Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. II p. 44. The traveller in modern Greece will remember the 'democratic dogs' of Peloponnesian villages.

γίγνονται τε δὴ κτλ.: 'aye, and there arise both horses and asses' etc. This explanation—Jowett's—catches the mock-heroic humour of the passage and is at the same time easier grammatically than to supply, with Schneider, οἷοιπερ οἱ δέσποται or, with Campbell, ἐλεύθεροι or the like. There is no ground for suspecting the text as some have done. Plato's humorous description brings vividly before us the anarchical condition of the Athenian streets. Foot-passengers have a poor time of it where the very beasts of burden forsooth are tainted with the spirit of democracy! "The regulation of traffic," remarks Bosanquet, perhaps a little sententiously, "is in some degree a real test of social order." No doubt this is what Plato means.

20 ἐμβάλλοντες κτλ. See the amusing and characteristic anecdote about Alcibiades' childhood in Plut. Alc. 2. 4 μικρὸς ὢν ἔπαιεν ἀστραγάλοις ἐν τῷ στενωπῷ, τῆς δὲ βολῆς καθηκούσης εἰς αὐτὸν ἀμαξοφωτίων ἐπήει. πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ἐκέλευε περιμέναι τὸν ἀγόντα τὸ ζεύγος· ὑπέπιπτε γὰρ ἡ βολὴ τῇ παρόδῳ τῆς ἀμάξης· μὴ πειθομένου δὲ δι' ἀγοικίαν, ἀλλ' ἐπάγοντος, οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι παῖδες διέσχον, ὁ δ' Ἀλκιβιάδης καταβαλὼν ἐπὶ στόμα πρὸ τοῦ ζεύγους καὶ παρατείνας ἑαυτὸν ἐκέλευεν οὕτως, εἰ βούλεται, διεξελθεῖν, ὥστε τὸν μὲν ἀνθρώπον ἀνακρούσαι τὸ ζεύγος ὀπίσω δεισαντα, τοὺς δ' ἰδόντας ἐκπλαγῆναι καὶ μετὰ βοῆς συνδραμεῖν πρὸς αὐτόν.

τηται· καὶ τᾶλλα πάντα οὕτως ἑμεστὰ ἐλευθερίας γίγνεται. Τὸ ἐμόν γ', ἔφη, ἐμοὶ λέγεις ὄναρ· αὐτὸς γὰρ εἰς ἀγρὸν πορευόμενος θαμὰ αὐτὸ πάσχω. Τὸ δὲ δὴ κεφάλαιον, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, πάντων τούτων ξυνηθροισμένων ἐννοεῖς, ὥς ἀπαλὴν τὴν ψυχὴν τῶν πολιτῶν ποιεῖ, ὥστε καὶν ὅτιοῦν δουλείας τις προσφέρηται, ἀνανακτεῖν καὶ μὴ 25 ἀνέχεσθαι; τελευτῶντες γάρ που οἶσθ' ὅτι οὐδὲ τῶν νόμων φρον- τίζουσιν γεγραμμένων ἢ ἀγράφων, ἵνα δὴ μηδαμῇ μηδεὶς αὐτοῖς ἢ δεσπότης. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη, οἶδα.

563 D 21 τὸ ἐμόν γ'—ὄναρ is manifestly proverbial (Schneider). For ὄναρ cf. Charm. 173 A ἄκουε δὴ—τὸ ἐμόν ὄναρ and Theaet. 201 E.

22 αὐτὸς γὰρ κτλ. 'I frequently experience what you describe when I am on my way to the country,' sc. through the congested streets of Athens. Jowett's 'when I take a country walk' is hardly accurate. The present πορευόμενος should be taken in its full force.

25 καὶν ὅτιοῦν κτλ. If the middle is to be pressed, we must translate: 'if any man applies to himself the very least degree of slavery' etc. That is to say, they are so sensitive that they cannot bear to see any one making himself even a willing slave. In the sacred name of Freedom, Democracy, which is now on the verge of Tyranny, puts freedom down. The sentiment is perhaps a little exaggerated, but otherwise suitable enough; only we should rather have expected Plato to express this meaning by αὐτὸς αὐτῷ προσφέρειν. If there were any well-authenticated examples of the middle of προσφέρειν used for the active, it would be better to construe προσφέρηται as if it were προσφέρειν, and suppose that the slavery is applied to others: but the instances of προσφέρεσθαι=προσφέρειν in Stephanus-Hase s.v. are either dubious or from late authors. The syllable -ται at the end of a line is sometimes abbreviated in uncial MSS (see Bond and Thompson Public. of the Pal. Soc. I Plate 106), and this fact lends additional plausibility to W. H. Thompson's conjecture, that we should write προσφέρειν for προσφέρηται. I once proposed τισί, and the proposal is approved by a critic in Hermathena XXIV p. 252. The citizens become so sensitive that the least degree of pressure applied to any section of them rouses them all. Meantime, as neither of these conjectures is quite convincing, οὐδὲ τῶν νόμων κτλ. Cf. Laws 701 B and Xen. Hell. I 7. 12 ff. Such a democracy works by means of ψήφισματα rather than laws, and is ἀνόλογον τῶν μοναρχῶν τῇ τυραννίδι (Arist. l.c. Cf. also Gilbert Beiträge zur inn. Gesch. Athens pp. 79 ff.).

I have retained the MS reading pro tempore, although I think Thompson's conjecture represents what Plato meant to say.

26 τελευτῶντες γὰρ κτλ. There is steady deterioration; and the last stage of democracy is the worst. Aristotle holds the same opinion: see Pol. Δ 6. 1293^a 1 ἡ τελευταία τοῖς χρόνοις ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι γεγενημένη along with 1291^b 30—1292^a 37.

563 E—566 D Such is the seed which develops into Tyranny, excessive freedom generating excessive servitude, in accordance with a common law. The drones wax more numerous and violent, and ruin the democracy in course of time as once they ruined oligarchy. A democratical State contains three classes of citizens (1) the drones, stinging as well as stingless, (2) the rich who serve as drones' provender, (3) the Demos, with whom the sovereignty lies. The most active members of the drone-fraternity become leaders of the Demos against the rich. By dint of extortion and calumny the propertied classes are at last compelled in self-defence to form an oligarchical party. Hence arise impeachments etc., and the people range themselves under a single Champion. As in the fable he who tasted human flesh became a wolf, so this Champion of the People, as soon as he spills the blood of fellow-citizens, is doomed to become a tyrant. Civil war begins; the Champion is either driven from the city, and returns a full-fledged tyrant, or receives a body-guard to protect him from secret assaults, and thus achieves his end.

XV. Αὕτη μὲν τοίνυν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ φίλε, ἡ ἀρχὴ οὕτως καλὴ 30 καὶ νεανικὴ, ὅθεν τυραννὶς φύεται, ὡς ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ. Νεανικὴ δῆτα, ἔφη· ἀλλὰ τί τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο; Ταυτόν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ὅπερ ἐν τῇ ὀλιγαρχίᾳ νόσημα ἐγγενόμενον ἀπώλεσεν αὐτήν, τοῦτο καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ πλέον τε καὶ ἰσχυρότερον ἐκ τῆς ἐξουσίας ἐγγενόμενον καταδουλοῦται δημοκρατίαν. καὶ τῷ ὄντι τὸ ἄγαν τι ποιεῖν μεγάλην 35 φιλεῖ εἰς τὸναντίον μεταβολὴν ἀνταποδιδόναι, ἐν ὧραις τε καὶ ἐν | φυτοῖς καὶ ἐν σώμασιν, καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐν πολιτείαις οὐχ 564 ἥκιστα. Εἰκός, ἔφη. Ἡ γὰρ ἄγαν ἐλευθερία ἔοικεν οὐκ εἰς ἄλλο τι ἢ εἰς ἄγαν δουλείαν μεταβάλλειν καὶ ἰδιώτῃ καὶ πόλει. Εἰκός
 γάρ. Εἰκότως τοίνυν, εἶπον, οὐκ ἐξ ἄλλης πολιτείας τυραννὶς 5 καθίσταται ἢ ἐκ δημοκρατίας, ἐξ οἷμαι τῆς ἀκροτάτης ἐλευθερίας δουλεία πλείστη τε καὶ ἀγριωτάτη. Ἐχει γάρ, ἔφη, λόγον. Ἄλλ' οὐ τοῦτ', οἷμαι, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἡρώτας, ἀλλὰ ποῖον νόσημα ἐν ὀλιγαρχίᾳ

I. καὶ δὴ καὶ II: καὶ A.

563 E ff. 29 αὕτη μὲν τοίνυν κτλ. In his account of the genesis of tyranny, as in his description of the tyrant himself, Plato has borrowed several features from the career of the most conspicuous tyrant of his own age, Dionysius I of Syracuse. See on 564 A, and for other historical references 566 B al.

καλὴ καὶ νεανική: 'fair and proud.' For νεανική cf. IV 425 C.

32 νόσημα: viz. the drones, as explained in 564 B (ἐκεῖνο τοίνυν κτλ.).

33 ἐξουσίας κτλ. See on 557 B. For τῷ ὄντι cf. VI 497 D n.

564 A I καὶ δὴ καὶ κτλ. See cr. n. The omission of καὶ δὴ was a natural slip, and a majority of MSS agree with II. For καὶ δὴ καὶ with οὐχ ἥκιστα following cf. (with Schneider) Soph. 216 B. The present passage brings out very clearly Plato's conception of the State as a living organism and no mere 'dead machine.' See on this subject Bluntschli Theory of the State E. T. pp. 18—24 and cf. 543 A n.

3 ἄγαν δουλείαν. For the omission of the article cf. IV 434 C n. We certainly should not read, with Schaefer, τὴν ἄγαν, or delete ἄγαν with Cobet.

4 οὐκ ἐξ ἄλλης κτλ. In early times, according to Aristotle (Pol. E 5. 1305^a 7 ff.) democracies used to give rise to tyrannies. The tyranny of Dionysius I of Syracuse is a notorious illustration from later history (see Grote c. 81). But tyranny had other origins as well: it constantly appeared for example during the transition from Aristocracy to an oligarchical form of government (Whibley Gk Olig. pp. 72—83). Plato deliberately selects that particular origin which accords with his psychological standpoint. In the decline of an individual soul, 'lawless' or unnatural (παράνομοι) desires succeed the λονομία in which all desires are treated as equal. Hence tyranny, which is only the political expression of unnatural desire, succeeds democracy in the fall of a State. Granted that Plato thought Athens was still degenerating, he must certainly have expected her, unless the process of decay should be arrested, to end in a tyranny. See also on IX 576 B. With the position of οἷμαι cf. 568 C and other examples in Braun de hyperb. Plat. II p. 12.

5 ἀκροτάτης. Herwerden (with Flor. T) conjectures ἀκρατοτάτης: but ἀκράτος does not easily admit the superlative, and the word is less suitable here than in the elaborate similitude about the wine of freedom 562 D. For the superlative of ἀκρος cf. V 459 E al.

7 ἡρώτας: 'you were asking about' (doch wohl nicht danach fragtest du, Schneider), viz. when you said τί τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο; (563 E). Cf. Crat. 407 C τὸν Ἄρη ἐρώτα ('ask about Ares'). καὶ τῷ ὄντι—ἀγριωτάτῃ (563 E—564 A) is a digression, and Adimantus' question is τε φνόμενον ταῦτόν καὶ ἐν δημοκρατίᾳ δουλοῦται αὐτήν. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη, λέγεις. Ἐκεῖνο τοίνυν, ἔφη, ἔλεγον τὸ τῶν ἀργῶν τε καὶ δαπανηρῶν ἀνδρῶν γένος, τὸ μὲν ἀνδρείοτατον ἡγοῦμενον αὐτῶν, τὸ 10 δ' ἀνανδρότερον ἐπόμενον· οὓς δὴ ἀφωμοιοῦμεν κηφῆσι, τοὺς μὲν κέντρα ἔχουσι, τοὺς δὲ ἀκέντροις. Καὶ ὀρθῶς γ', ἔφη. Τούτῳ τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ταραττετον ἐν πάσῃ πολιτείᾳ ἐγγιγνομένῳ, οἷον περὶ σῶμα φλέγμα τε καὶ χολή· ὃ δὴ καὶ δεῖ τὸν ἀγαθὸν ἰατρόν τε καὶ νομοθέτην πόλεως μὴ ἦττον ἢ σοφὸν μελιττουργὸν πόρρωθεν 15 εὐλαβεῖσθαι, μάλιστα μὲν ὅπως μὴ ἐγγενήσεσθον, ἀν δὲ ἐγγενήσθον, ὅπως ὅ τι τάχιστα ξὺν αὐτοῖσι τοῖς κηρίοις ἐκτετμήσεσθον. Ναὶ μὰ Δία, ἦ δ' ὅς, παντάπασί γε. Ὡδε τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λάβωμεν, ἵν' εὐκρινέστερον ἴδωμεν ὃ βουλόμεθα. Πῶς; Τριχῇ διαστησώμεθα τῷ λόγῳ δημοκρατουμένην πόλιν, ὥσπερ οὖν καὶ ἔχει. ἐν 20 μὲν γάρ που τὸ τοιοῦτον ἡ γένος ἐν αὐτῇ ἐμφύεται δι' ἐξουσίαν οὐκ ἔλαττον ἢ ἐν τῇ ὀλιγαρχουμένῃ. Ἔστιν οὕτω. Πολὺν δέ γε δριμύτερον ἐν ταύτῃ ἢ ἐν ἐκείνῃ. Πῶς; Ἐκεῖ μὲν διὰ τὸ μὴ ἐντιμον εἶναι, ἀλλ' ἀπελαύνεσθαι τῶν ἀρχῶν, ἀγύμναστον καὶ οὐκ

11. ἀφωμοιοῦμεν Ξq^2 : ἀφομοιοῦμεν AII q^1 .
 17. ἐκτετμήσεσθον A² cum v aliisque: ἐκτετμήσθον A¹ΠΞ q .

15. μελιττουργὸν A²Π: μελι-not answered until Socrates specifies what particular νόημα was meant by the allusion in 563 E. J. and C. erroneously refer ἡρώτας to πῶς—τὸ τοιοῦτον λέγομεν; (562 E).

564 B 9 ἐκεῖνο κτλ. 'Well then,' said I, 'I was referring to yon class' etc. ἐκεῖνο = 'already-mentioned' (in 552 C and later). On τὸ μὲν—ἐπόμενον see 564 D n.

11 ἀφωμοιοῦμεν. See cr. n. The present is less suitable, especially with δῆ (= ut scis, Schneider). For the error see Introd. § 5.

13 ταραττετον κτλ. ταραττετον is used absolutely as in Hierp. Min. 373 B Σωκράτης—ἀεὶ ταραττει ἐν τοῖς λόγοις. On φλέγμα τε καὶ χολή the Oxford editors refer to Arist. Probl. I 29. 862^b 27 τῶν κατὰ τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἡ χολή μὲν ἐστὶ θερμὴ, τὸ δὲ φλέγμα ψυχρὸν, and rightly hold that 'the hot humour answers to the stinging, the cold to the stingless drones.' Cf. Tim. 85 D ff.

564 C 15 μελιττουργόν is the reading of Ξq M as well as Π (see cr. n.), and is elsewhere better attested than μελιουργόν, which "api magis quam homini convenit" (Schneider).

17 ξὺν has been suspected by W. H. Thompson and Herwerden; but the preposition is occasionally found with this idiom both in poetry and prose (Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 356 and Lina de praepr. usu Plat. p. 33). The half-poetic ξὺν (see on IV 424 E and VII 518 C) suits well with the archaic form αὐτοῖσι (I 330 B n.).

19 τριχῇ διαστησώμεθα. With what follows cf. Eur. Suipr. 238—245 τρεῖς γὰρ πολιτῶν μερίδες· οἱ μὲν ὀλβιοὶ | ἀνωφελεῖς τε πλειόνων τ' ἐρώσ' ἀεὶ· | οἱ δ' οὐκ ἔχοντες καὶ σπανίζοντες βίον | δεινοί, νέμοντες τῷ φθόνῳ πλέον μέρος, | ἐς τοὺς ἔχοντας κέντρ' ἀφιᾶσιν κακά, | γλώσσαις πονηρῶν προστατῶν φηλοῦμενοι· | τριῶν δὲ μοιρῶν ἡ ὕμνω μέσῳ σφίξει πόλεις | κόσμον φυλάσσουσ' ὄντιν' ἂν τάξῃ πόλις. Plato is thinking primarily of course of Athens. See also Arist. Pol. Δ II. 1295^b 1 ff. and (on the whole subject) Whibley Pol. Parties in Athens pp. 35 ff. and Beloch Att. Pol. pp. 1—19.

21 τὸ τοιοῦτον γένος: viz. the drones.

564 D ἐξουσίαν. See on 557 B.

- 25 ἔρρωμένον γίγνεται, ἐν δημοκρατίᾳ δὲ τοῦτό που τὸ προεστὸς αὐτῆς ἐκτὸς ὀλίγων, καὶ τὸ μὲν δριμύτατον αὐτοῦ λέγει τε καὶ πράττει, τὸ δ' ἄλλο περὶ τὰ βήματα προσίζον βομβεῖ τε καὶ οὐκ ἀνέχεται τοῦ ἄλλα¹ λέγοντος, ὥστε πάντα ὑπὸ τοῦ τοιοῦτου διοικεῖται ἐν Ε τῇ τοιαύτῃ πολιτείᾳ χωρὶς τινων ὀλίγων. Μάλα γε, ἡ δ' ὅς.
- 30 Ἄλλο τοίνυν τοιόνδε αἰεὶ ἀποκρίνεται ἐκ τοῦ πλήθους. Τὸ ποῖον; Χρηματιζομένων που πάντων οἱ κοσμιώτατοι φύσει ὥς τὸ πολὺ πλουσιώτατοι γίγνονται. Εἰκός. Πλείστον δὴ, οἶμαι, τοῖς κηφῆσι μέλι, καὶ εὐπορώτατον ἐντεῦθεν βλῖττειν. Πῶς γὰρ ἄν, ἔφη, παρὰ

25. προεστὸς Π et nisi fallor A¹: προεστὼς A². AIP: βλῦττει Π²Ξ q.

33. βλῖττειν nos: βλῖττει

25 προεστὸς refers not only to the εἰς προστάτης τοῦ δήμου (565 c n.), but to δημαγωγοί in general and all who lead the people whether as orators or as officers (λέγει τε καὶ πράττει).

26 ἐκτὸς ὀλίγων. The leaders in a democracy, says Plato, belong to the class of drones—with a few exceptions. Pericles, for example, was an illustrious exception (Thuc. II 65, 8, 9 and Xen. Symp. 8, 39); and so, according even to Plato himself, was Aristides (Gorg. 526 b). Plato's general attitude towards Athenian demagogues has often been censured; but nearly all the greatest writers of antiquity, except the orators, pronounce the same verdict.

τὸ μὲν δριμύτατον—βομβεῖ. Cf. Dem. Ol. II 29 πολιτεύεσθε κατὰ συμμορίας. βήτωρ ἡγέμων ἐκατέρων, καὶ στρατηγὸς ὑπὸ τούτῳ, καὶ οἱ βοηθούμενοι τριακῶσιοι. οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι προσενέμνησθε οἱ μὲν ὡς τούτους, οἱ δὲ ὡς ἐκείνους. προσίζον (used of a bee alighting in Arist. Hist. An. VIII II. 596^b 15) and βομβεῖ keep up the figure.

28 τοῦ ἄλλα λέγοντος. Vermehren proposes του, comparing v 479 A οὐδαμῇ ἀνεχόμενος ἂν τις—φη and ix 579 A. If Plato had wished to say 'any one,' he would, I think, have written οὐδενός: του is too weak. The article is generic.

564 E 28 τοῦ τοιοῦτου: the class of drones in general, not simply τὸ δριμύτατον αὐτοῦ. Cf. τὸ τοιοῦτον γένος in C above.

29 χωρὶς τινων ὀλίγων is neuter and should be taken with πάντα. The different liturgies etc. would scarcely be performed by the drones; and some departments of civic administration might be in the hands of the few exceptions noted above (ἐκτὸς ὀλίγων D).

30 τοίνυν is 'also': see I 339 E n.

31 χρηματιζομένων κτλ.: 'if all are engaged in making money' etc. πάντων is the whole of which οἱ κοσμιώτατοι form a part; not 'all the citizens of a democracy,' for the aim of democracy is not πλοῦτος but ἐλευθερία, and the drones at least are not engaged in money-making.

32 πλείστον δὴ κτλ.: 'thus, I imagine, there is plenty of honey for the drones, and it is most easy to squeeze honey from this source.' My correction βλῖττειν for βλῖττει (see c. n.) is regarded as certain by a reviewer of my Text of the Republic in Hermathena XXIV p. 252. βλῖττει is retained by J. and C.; but there is no authority for the intransitive use of the verb, and βλῖσειν in the very next sentence! is active. Schneider reads βλῦττει, which would be a ἀπαξ εἰρημένον. Ruhnken's βλῖττεται is unexceptionable in point of sense, and has found much favour. The author of this emendation claims (in his note on Tim. Lex. s.v. βλῖττειν) that it is confirmed "cum Scholiastae, tum Codicis Parisini auctoritate." But the Paris MSS have all either βλῖττει or βλῦττει; and Bekker's collation of the Scholium is βλῖττει· ἀφαιρεῖ (not ἀφαιρεῖται) τὸ μέλι ἀπὸ τῶν κηρίων. Moreover, although the syllable ται was sometimes abbreviated in uncial MSS (see on 563 D), it is easier to suppose that the horizontal stroke for final ν was here accidentally omitted, as constantly in the Republic: see Introd. § 5. For the sense cf. I 343 A n. and on the word βλῖττειν (i.e. *μ(β)λῖττειν from μέλι) Blaydes on Ar. Knights 794.

γε τῶν σμικρὰ ἐχόντων τις βλίσσειεν; Πλούσιοι δὴ, οἶμαι, οἱ τοιοῦτοι καλοῦνται, κηφήνων βοτάνη. Σχεδόν τι, ἔφη.

35

XVI. Δῆμος δ' ἂν εἴη | τρίτον γένος, ὅσοι αὐτουργοί τε καὶ ἀπράγμονες, οὐ πάνυ πολλὰ κεκτημένοι· ὁ δὲ πλεῖστόν τε καὶ κυριώτατον ἐν δημοκρατίᾳ, ὅταν περ ἀθροισθῇ. "Εστὶν γάρ, ἔφη· ἀλλ' οὐ θαμὰ ἐθέλει ποιεῖν τοῦτο, εἰ μὴ μέλιτός τι μεταλαμβάνῃ. Οὐκοῦν μεταλαμβάνει, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, αἰεὶ, καθ' ὅσον δύνανται οἱ προεστῶτες, τοὺς ἔχοντας τὴν οὐσίαν ἀφαιρούμενοι, διανέμοντες τῷ δήμῳ τὸ πλεῖστον αὐτοὶ ἔχειν. Μεταλαμβάνει γὰρ ὁ οὖν, ἡ δ' ὅς, οὕτως.
Ἀναγκάζονται δὴ, οἶμαι, ἀμύνεσθαι, λέγοντές τε ἐν τῷ δήμῳ καὶ πράττοντες ὅπῃ δύνανται, οὗτοι ὧν ἀφαιρῶνται. Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Λίτιαν δὲ ἔσχον ὑπὸ τῶν ἐτέρων, κἂν μὴ ἐπιθυμῶσι νεωτερίζειν, ὥς ἐπιβουλεύουσι τῷ δήμῳ καὶ εἰσὶν ὀλιγαρχικοί. Τί μὲν; Οὐκοῦν καὶ τελευτώντες, ἐπειδὴν ὀρώσι τὸν δῆμον οὐχ ἐκόντα ἀλλ'

34. βλίσσειε (sic) m: βλίσσειεν A: βλίσσειε Ξq: βλίσσειεν ut videtur Π¹: βλίσσειεν Π².

34 πλούσιοι—καλοῦνται. The oligarchs were frequently called πλούσιοι, κτηματικοί and the like: see Whibley Pol. Part. in Ath. p. 48 and Beloch Att. Pol. p. 2.

35 κηφήνων βοτάνη has a proverbial ring: cf. the proverb κηφήνες μόχθους ἄλλων κατέδονται (Leutsch u. Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. II p. 179). The same expression, as Schneider points out Addit. p. 69, is used by Plut. Mor. 42 A with a different meaning.

565 A 3 κυριώτατον. In a democracy the sovereignty lies with the δῆμος in its assemblies.

4 οὐ θαμὰ κτλ. Under the earliest and best form of democratic government, according to Aristotle, the δῆμος consists chiefly of farmers, and ἐκκλησιασταί are infrequent, for διὰ τὸ ἐσπάρθαι κατὰ τὴν χώραν οὐτ' ἀπαντῶσιν οὐθ' ὁμοίως δέονται τῆς συνόδου ταύτης (Pol. Z 4. 1319^a 30 ff., 3. 1318^b 11, and Δ 5. 1292^b 27). It is a later and degenerate phase when assemblies are multiplied by the payment of ἐκκλησιαστικὸς μισθός and other forms of 'honey' (ib. Δ 6. 1293^a 1 ff.). Plato in this passage contributes some hints towards a historical analysis of the evolution of Greek democracy such as we find in Aristotle.

ἐὰν μὴ—μεταλαμβάνῃ. Cf. Ar. Peace 632—643. There is little doubt that the compulsory migration of Athenian farmers into Athens at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war had a decisive effect on the course of Athenian democracy: cf. Thuc. II 14 and 16 and Gilbert Beiträge etc. pp. 98 ff.

6 τοὺς ἔχοντας κτλ. On the oppression of the rich in Athens see Hermann-Thumser Gr. Staatsalt. pp. 688 ff., 747.

διανέμοντες κτλ.: 'while dividing it among the people to retain the lion's share themselves.' The epigram is spoiled if (with Cobet) we read <ὀλίγα> διανέμοντες. For the sentiment cf. Dem. Ol. III 31, Ar. Peace l.c., Knights 46 ff., 792 ff., 1218 ff. and (with J. and C.) Wasps 655—679.

565 B 7 οὕτως: emphatic, 'with that proviso' (D. and V.).

9 πράττοντες is quite satisfactory: cf. λέγει τε καὶ πράττει 564 D. Richter should not have proposed ταραττοντες.

ὅπῃ δύνανται κτλ.: 'in any way they can.' Their opportunities of public action in self-defence are limited; hence they form e.g. secret associations and the like. On the tense of ἔσχον see 548 D n., and for the statement itself (αἰτίαν—ὀλιγαρχικοί) many passages in Aristophanes, e.g. Wasps 488 ff. and others quoted by Whibley Pol. Part. in Athens p. 65 n. 3.

ἀγνοήσαντά τε καὶ ἐξαπατηθέντα ὑπὸ τῶν διαβαλλόντων ἐπιχει-ρούντα· σφᾶς ἀδικεῖν, τότε ἤδη, εἴτε βούλονται εἴτε μὴ, ὡς ἀληθῶς C 15 ὀλιγαρχικοὶ γίνονται, οὐχ ἐκόντες, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦτο τὸ κακὸν ἐκείνος ὁ κηφὴν ἐντίκει κεντῶν αὐτούς. Κομιδῇ μὲν οὖν. Εἰσαγγελλῖαι δὴ καὶ κρίσεις καὶ ἀγῶνες περὶ ἀλλήλων γίνονται. Καὶ μάλα. Οὐκοῦν ἓνα τινὰ αἰεὶ δῆμος εἴωθεν διαφερόντως προϊστασθαι ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τοῦτον τρέφειν τε καὶ αὔξειν μέγαν; Εἴωθε γάρ. Τοῦτο 20 μὲν ἄρα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, δῆλον, ὅτι, ὅταν περ φύηται τύραννος, ἐκ D προστατικῆς ρίζης καὶ οὐκ ἄλλοθεν ἐκβλαστάνει. Καὶ μάλα δῆλον. Τίς ἀρχὴ οὖν μεταβολῆς ἐκ προστάτου ἐπὶ τύραννον; ἢ δῆλον ὅτι ἐπειδὰν ταῦτον ἄρξηται δρᾶν ὁ προστάτης τῷ ἐν τῷ μύθῳ, ὃς περὶ τὸ ἐν Ἀρκαδίᾳ τὸ τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Λυκαίου ἱερὸν λέγε-

565 C 14 τότε ἤδη—οὐχ ἐκόντες. Isocrates makes a similar complaint (Antid. 318): οὐ τοὺς μὲν ἐνδοξοτάτους τῶν πολιτῶν καὶ μάλιστα δυναμένους ποιῆσαι τι τὴν πόλιν ἀγαθόν, ὀλιγαρχίαν οὐκ ἐκόντες καὶ λακωνισμὸν, οὐ πρότερον ἐπαύσαντο (sc. οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν) πρὶν ἢ ἀγκασάν ὁμοίους γενέσθαι ταῖς αἰτίαις ταῖς λεγομέναις περὶ αὐτῶν; Cf. also Arist. Pol. E 5. 1304^b 21 ff. Observe how Plato now begins to insist on the inevitable necessity which dogs the footsteps of political decay: see on 566 A and 567 C.

16 εἰσαγγελλῖαι: 'impeachments,' as e.g. for κατάλυσιν τοῦ δήμου. On eisan-gelia in Attic legal procedure see Hager Dict. Ant. s.v. and Meier u. Schömann Att. Proc. I pp. 312—335.

17 ἀγῶνες περὶ ἀλλήλων: 'trials of one another' (Jowett): lit. 'trials about one another,' i.e. trials in which the individuals chiefly concerned, viz. the defendants, belong to one or other of the two parties in the State. ἀλλήλων by itself would be better suited to the words εἰσαγγελλῖαι καὶ κρίσεις, but ἀγῶνες ἀλλήλων is too harsh an expression, and that, I think, is why Plato writes ἀγῶνες περὶ ἀλλήλων. This explanation is in my opinion better than to translate "Pro-cesse um Leben und Tod" (Schneider: cf. ἀγῶνας—περὶ σφῶν αὐτῶν Hdt. VIII 102). Some may think that ἀλλήλους should replace ἀλλήλων: but περὶ with the accusative would not express a close enough connexion in this passage.

18 οὐκοῦν κτλ. So in Ar. Knight's 1127 Demos says βούλομαι τρέφειν ἓνα προστάτην. The προστάτης τοῦ δήμου in Athens was simply "the leading demagogue, who acted as guardian and representative of the demos, as the ordinary προστάτης did of the metoec" (Whibley Pol. Part. in Ath. p. 51). He was not a magistrate, although his position was recognised and much sought after. Pericles was certainly προστάτης, and, among his successors, apparently Cleon and others. For the authorities see Whibley l.c. and Gilbert Beiträge etc. pp. 78 ff. For ἓνα τινὰ Cobet substitutes ἓνα γέ τινα, without sufficient reason: cf. VI 494 D n. To my mind the emphasis on ἓνα is much stronger without γε: and Plato clearly intends to emphasise that word, for it is by the rise of a single champion that tyranny is caused.

565 D 20 ἐκ προστατικῆς ρίζης κτλ. Arist. Pol. E 10. 1310^b 14 ff. σχεδὸν γὰρ οἱ πλείστοι τῶν τυράννων γεγόνασιν ἐκ δημαγωγῶν ὡς εἰπεῖν, πιστευθέντες ἐκ τοῦ διαβάλλειν τοὺς γνωρίμους. This was especially true of earlier times, when the orator also held military command (ib. 5. 1305^a 7 ff.). See Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II pp. 280 ff.

21 καὶ οὐκ ἄλλοθεν. If we treat this sentence as a statement of historical fact, Plato expresses himself too strongly; for tyranny sometimes arose in other ways. See however on 564 A and 543 A, 544 C nn.

23 τῷ μύθῳ. See [Hecat.] Frag. 375 in Müller Frag. Hist. Gr. I p. 31 and Paus. VIII 2. 6. In his note on the latter passage, Frazer collects the ancient legends about werewolves. For the later history of the superstition consult McLennan's ται; Τίς; ἔφη. Ὡς ἄρα ὁ γευσάμενος τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου σπλάγχ- 25 νου, ἐν ἄλλοις ἄλλων ἱερείων ἐνὸς ἐγκατατετμημένου, ἀνάγκη δὴ τοῦτω λύκῳ γενέσθαι. ἢ οὐκ ἀκήκοας τὸν λόγον; Ἐγώ γε. Ἄρ' 30 οὖν οὕτω καὶ ὃς ἂν δήμου προεστώς, λαβὼν σφόδρα πειθόμενον ὄχλον, μὴ ἀπόσχηται ἐμφυλίου αἵματος, ἀλλ' ἀδίκως ἐπαιτιώμενος, οἷα δὴ φιλοῦσιν, εἰς δικαστήρια ἄγων μαιφονῇ, βίον ἀνδρὸς ἀφανί- 30 ζων, γλώττη τε καὶ στόματι ἀνοσίφω γεύομενος φόνου ξυγγενοῦς, καὶ ἀνδρηλατῇ καὶ ἀποκτινύῃ | καὶ ὑποσημαίνῃ χρεῶν τε ἀποκοπὰς καὶ γῆς ἀναδασμόν, ἄρα τῷ τοιούτῳ ἀνάγκη δὴ τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο καὶ εἴρμαρται ἢ ἀπολωλέναι ὑπὸ τῶν ἐχθρῶν ἢ τυραννεῖν καὶ λύκῳ ἐξ ἀνθρώπου γενέσθαι; Πολλὴ ἀνάγκη, ἔφη. Οὗτος δὲ, ἔφην, ὁ

28. προεστὼς Ξγ: προεστὼς Α: προσετώς (sic) Π.

article Lycanthropy in Enc. Brit. ed. 9, and for parallels in non-classical mythologies Tylor *Prim. Culture*² I pp. 308—315.

26 ἐνός is bracketed by Herwerden; but τοῦ in τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου σπλάγχχνου proves it genuine. But for ἐνός Plato must have written τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου σπλάγχχνου <τοῦ> ἐν ἄλλοις κτλ. The were-wolf superstition was similarly associated with cannibalism in some of its later European forms (McLennan l.c.).

ἀνάγκη δὴ κτλ. The anacoluthon is illustrated by Engelhardt Spec. Anac. Pl. III p. 40.

565 E 29 ἐμφυλίου αἵματος. Cf. Pind. Pyth. II 32 ἐμφύλιον αἶμα πρῶ-τιστος οὐκ ἄτερ τέχνας ἐπέμψε θνατοῖς. The style rises into poetry as usual in passages of solemn import and sustained emotion; cf. 560 B, D nn.

30 ἀνδρός is poetic for ἀνθρώπου: cf. Aesch. Ag. 1020 f. ἀνδρὸς μέλαν αἶμα τίς ἂν πάλιν ἁγκαλέσαιτ' ἐπαείδων; and often in Pindar (Ol. I 35, 66 etc.).

31 γλώττη τε καὶ—ξυγγενοῦς. The blood of fellow-citizens is kindred blood: for all are sons of the same fatherland. 'The unholy tongue and lips' is an eloquent amplification of γεύομενος, in harmony with the story to which Plato has referred in D above. J. and C. seem to me to mar the effect of Plato's eloquence by remarking that "the tongue and lips which make the slanderous accusation are vividly imagined as actually tasting blood."

32 ἀνδρηλατῇ κτλ. Cf. Gorg. 466 C τί δέ; οὐχ ὥσπερ οἱ τύραννοι ἀποκτινύασι τε (sc. οἱ ῥήτορες) δὲ ἂν βούλωνται, καὶ ἀφαιροῦνται χρήματα καὶ ἐκβάλλουσιν ἐκ τῶν πόλεων δὲ ἂν δοκῇ αὐτοῖς; Νῆ τὸν κύνα. The unscrupulous mob-orator is a budding tyrant.

566 A I ὑποσημαίνῃ: 'hints at.' χρεῶν—ἀναδασμόν: phrases ominous of revolution to a Greek ear: see Laus 684 E, [Dem.] 24. 149 ψηφιοῦμαι—οὐδὲ τῶν χρεῶν τῶν ἰδίων ἀποκοπὰς οὐδὲ γῆς ἀναδασμόν τῆς Ἀθηναίων οὐδ' οἰκιῶν (in the Heliastic oath), Isocr. Panath. 259, Arist. Pol. E 5. 1305^a 5 al. and Sandys on Ath. Pol. 6. I. Cf. also Gilbert Gr. Staatsalt. II p. 279.

2 ἀνάγκη—καὶ εἴρμαρται κτλ. Once more Necessity rings her knell (565 C n.): the instinct of self-preservation makes the final stage inevitable. For the same reason Xenophon remarks (Hier. 7. 12, 13) that a tyrant never dare lay down his power: cf. also Periander in D. L. I 97 and the pathetic saying καλὸν μὲν εἶναι τὴν τυραννίδα χωρίον, οὐκ ἔχειν δὲ ἀπόβασιν (Plut. Sol. 14. 10). See also on 545 C and 547 A.

4 οὗτος κτλ. 'This then,' said I, 'is the man who is guilty of sedition against the holders of property.' γίγνεται is not 'becomes' ('the leader of the faction against the rich becomes that person' J. and C.), but 'turns out to be,' 'is' sc. in our argument or picture: cf. 562 A n. οὗτος γίγνεται is similarly used at the end of the picture of the tyrannical man in IX 576 B. Schneider seems to suppose that στασιάζων refers to civil war ('vim et arma civilia') such as is described in what follows, but the incidents just enumerated

5 στασιάζων γίγνεται πρὸς τοὺς ἔχοντας τὰς οὐσίας. Οὗτος. Ἄρ' οὖν ἐκπεσὼν μὲν καὶ κατελθὼν βία τῶν ἐχθρῶν τύραννος ἀπειργασμένος κατέρχεται; Δῆλον. Ἐὰν δὲ ἀδύνατοι ἐκβάλλειν αὐτὸν ὧσιν ἢ ἂποκτείνειν διαβάλλοντες τῇ πόλει, βιαίῳ δὲ θανάτῳ B ἐπιβουλεύουσιν ἀποκτινύναι λάθρα. Φιλεῖ γοῦν, ἢ δ' ὅς, οὕτω 10 γίγνεσθαι. Τὸ δὲ τυραννικὸν αἴτημα τὸ πολυθρῦλητον ἐπὶ τούτῳ πάντες οἱ εἰς τοῦτο προβεβηκότες ἐξευρίσκουσιν, αἰτεῖν τὸν δῆμον φύλακάς τινας τοῦ σώματος, ἵνα σῶς αὐτοῖς ἢ ὁ τοῦ δήμου βοηθός. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Διδόασι δὴ, οἶμαι, δείσαντες μὲν ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου, θαρρήσαντες δὲ ὑπὲρ ἑαυτῶν. Καὶ ἡ μάλα. Οὐκοῦν τοῦτο ὅταν C 15 ἴδῃ ἀνὴρ χρήματα ἔχων καὶ μετὰ τῶν χρημάτων αἰτίαν μισόδημος εἶναι, τότε δὴ οὗτος, ὃ ἑταῖρε, κατὰ τὸν Κροίσῳ γενόμενον χρησμὸν πολυψήφιδά παρ' Ἑρμον φεύγει, οὐδὲ μένει, οὐδ' αἰδεῖται κακὸς εἶναι.

20 Οὐ γὰρ ἄν, ἔφη, δεύτερον αὖθις αἰδεσθείη. Ὁ δέ γε, οἶμαι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καταληφθεὶς θανάτῳ δίδοται. Ἀνάγκη. Ὁ δὲ δὴ προστάτης ἐκείνος αὐτὸς δῆλον δὴ ὅτι μέγας μεγαλωστί ὡς κείται, ἀλλὰ D καταβαλὼν ἄλλους πολλοὺς ἔστηκεν ἐν τῷ δίφρῳ τῆς πόλεως,

23. καταβαλὼν A²Π: καβαλὼν (sic) A¹.

would certainly be called στάσις by a Greek, and οὗτος δὴ—γίγνεται points backward rather than forward, as is clear both from δῆ and from Adimantus' reply.

6 ἐκπεσὼν κτλ. He is transformed into a full and finished tyrant in one of two ways: either by being expelled (in course of the στάσις) and returning βία τῶν ἐχθρῶν, or else in the way described in ἐὰν δὲ—ἀποτελεσμένος (D). Pisistratus is not a perfect example to illustrate ἐκπεσὼν etc., for he had made himself a tyrant before he was expelled (Arist. Ath. Pol. 14. 3).

566 B 8 διαβάλλοντες τῇ πόλει: 'by setting the citizens against him' (J. and C.) rather than 'by accusing him to the State' (D. and V.). Cf. VI 498 C and Phaed. 67 E.

βιαίῳ—λάθρα. Cf. Thuc. VIII 65. 2.

10 αἴτημα τὸ πολυθρῦλητον: as in the case of Theagenes of Megara, Pisistratus, and Dionysius of Syracuse: see Arist. Rhet. I 2. 1357^b 30—33 with Cope ad loc., and (for Dionysius) Grote X pp. 202 ff. and Freeman's Sicily III p. 558.

Gilbert (Gr. Staatsalt. II p. 281 n. 1) remarks that the body-guard plays a part in the genesis of nearly every Tyrannis.

566 C, D 14 θαρρήσαντες—ἑαυτῶν. Cf. Solon Frag. 11. 5—8 Bergk.

16 τὸν Κροίσῳ κτλ. See Hdt. I 55.

20 αἰδεσθείη κτλ. Liebhold's conjecture οἰκισθείη is of course absurd. The expression θανάτῳ δίδοναι is paullo exquisitius dictum, resembling our phrase 'is done to death': cf. (with Stallbaum) IX 571 E, 574 C and Phaedr. 254 E (ὁδὸναις ἔδωκεν, imitated from Homer Od. XVII 567).

22 μέγας μεγαλωστί. II. XVI 776.

23 ἐν τῷ δίφρῳ κτλ. The figure—a common one—is of course suggested by the Homeric allusion. Cebriones ἀρνευτῆρι ἐοικώς | κάππεο' ἀπ' εὐεργέος δίφρου (ib. 743). Not so the προστάτης: he fells others, but himself (αὐτὸς) ἔστηκεν ἐν τῷ δίφρῳ τῆς πόλεως.

566 D—569 C The tyrant begins his reign with popular measures, but as soon as his position is secure, he impoverishes and oppresses the citizens by a continual τύραννος ἀντὶ προστάτου ἀποτετελεσμένος. Τί δ' οὐ μέλλει; ἔφη.

25

XVII. Διέλθωμεν δὴ τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τοῦ τε ἀνδρὸς καὶ τῆς πόλεως, ἐν ἧ ἂν ὁ τοιοῦτος βροτὸς ἐγγένηται; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, διέλθωμεν. Ἄρ' οὖν, εἶπον, οὐ ταῖς μὲν πρώταις ἡμέραις τε καὶ χρόνῳ προσγελᾷ τε καὶ ἀσπάζεται πάντας, ᾧ ἂν περιτυγχάνῃ, καὶ οὔτε τύραννός ἢ φησιν εἶναι ὑπισχνεῖται τε 30 πολλὰ καὶ ἰδία καὶ δημοσία, χρεῶν τε ἡλευθέρωσε καὶ γῆν διένειμεν δῆμῳ τε καὶ τοῖς περὶ ἑαυτὸν, καὶ πᾶσιν ἰλεώς τε καὶ πρᾶος εἶναι προσποιεῖται; Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη. "Ὅταν δέ γε, οἶμαι, πρὸς τοὺς ἔξω ἐχθροὺς τοῖς μὲν καταλλαγῇ, τοὺς δὲ καὶ διαφθεῖρῃ, καὶ ἡσυχία ἐκείνων γένηται, πρῶτον μὲν πολέμους τινὰς αἰεὶ κινεῖ, ἵν' ἐν χρεῖα 35

24. μέλλει A¹Π: μέλει A².

succession of wars. All who expostulate, he 'removes': it is a sad necessity of his situation that he should purge the city of wealth and virtue. To provide against his growing unpopularity, he must increase his standing army by enlisting foreign mercenaries and the slaves of private citizens. These are his 'new citizens' forsooth! Euripides and other tragedians praise tyranny and its retinue: that is why we exclude them from our city. The higher they climb the hill of commonwealths, the more the honour paid to poets flags. As for the tyrant, after exhausting the property of temples and the proscribed, he will compel the Demos that begat him to support his rabble rout. All remonstrance is in vain. The Demos now learns what slavery means—slavery in its most cruel form, where slaves are masters.

566 D ff. 26 διέλθωμεν δὴ κτλ. Throughout the whole of this picture, it is tolerably clear that Plato has Dionysius the first of Syracuse in his mind: see on 566 E, 567 B, E, 568 A, D. The reader should compare Aristotle's brief account of the three kinds of Tyranny in Pol. Δ 10. 1295^a 1—24. That which Plato describes is of course the worst variety ἥτις ἀνυπεύθυνος ἄρχει τῶν ὁμοίων καὶ βελτιόνων πάντων πρὸς τὸ σφέτερον αὐτῆς συμφέρον, ἀλλὰ μὴ πρὸς τὸ τῶν ἀρχομένων (ib. 20—22).

27 βροτός: 'creature' (Jowett). The tyrant is something less than human.

29 πάντας ᾧ ἂν κτλ. For the grammatical concord cf. IV 426 C n. The sense is well illustrated by Stallbaum from

Eur. I. A. 337—342, where Menelaus says to Agamemnon: οἷσθ' ὅτ' ἐσπούδαζες ἄρχειν Δαναΐδας πρὸς Ἴλιον |—ὡς ταπεινὸς ἦσθα, πάσης δεξιᾶς προσθυγάνων, | καὶ θύρας ἔχων ἀκλήστους τῷ θέλοντι δημοτῶν, | καὶ διδοὺς πρόσρησιν ἐξῆς πᾶσι, καὶ μήτις θέλοι, | τοῖς τρόποις ζητῶν πρίσθαι τὸ φιλότιμον ἐκ μέσου; On οὔτε followed by τε (neque—et) where the stress falls on the affirmative clause (non modo non—sed etiam) see IV 430 B n.

566 E 31 ἡλευθέρωσε—διένειμεν: fulfilling the hopes held out by him as προστάτης (566 A n.). A redistribution of landed property was one of Dionysius' earliest measures after he had established himself in the tyranny (Grote x pp. 221 ff.). As Mr Giles points out, such a step would tend to keep up the enthusiasm of the πλῆθος, especially when the tyrant succeeded to an oligarchy which had added field to field by lending on mortgage to the small farmers and selling them up after a bad year. It would be easy enough to carry out, because the tyrant's opponents would have fled the country: cf. 566 C. For the aorists see 548 D n.

33 πρὸς τοὺς ἔξω ἐχθροὺς κτλ.: 'in his relations to foreign enemies' etc. With the construction of τοῖς μὲν κτλ. cf. IX 591 E—592 A ἀλλὰ μὴν καὶ τιμᾶς γε—τῶν μὲν μεθέξει καὶ γεύσεται ἐκόν, ἃς ἂν ἡγήται ἀμείνω αὐτὸν ποιήσειν, ἃς δ' ἂν λύσειν τὴν ὑπάρχουσαν ξυν, φεύξεται ἰδίᾳ καὶ δημοσίᾳ. In both cases the idiom resembles so-called partitive apposition, for which see IV 431 A n.

35 πολέμους τινὰς κτλ. Cf. Arist. Pol.

ἡγεμόνος ὁ δῆμος ἦ. Εἰκός γε. | Οὐκοῦν καὶ ἵνα χρήματα εἰσφέ- 567
 ροντες πένητες γιγνόμενοι πρὸς τῷ καθ' ἡμέραν ἀναγκάζονται εἶναι καὶ ἦττον αὐτῷ ἐπιβουλεύωσι; Δῆλον. Καὶ ἂν γέ τινας, οἶμαι, ὑποπτεῦν ἐλεύθερα φρονήματα ἔχοντας μὴ ἐπιτρέψειν αὐτῷ ἄρχειν; 5 ὅπως ἂν τούτους μετὰ προφάσεως ἀπολλύῃ ἐνδούς τοῖς πολεμίοις;
 τούτων πάντων ἕνεκα τυράννῳ ἀεὶ ἀνάγκη πόλεμον ταραττεῖν; Ἀνάγκη. Ταῦτα δὴ ποιοῦντα ἔτοιμον μᾶλλον ἀπεχθάνεσθαι τοῖς B πολίταις; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Οὐκοῦν καὶ τινας τῶν ξυγκαταστησάντων καὶ ἐν δυνάμει ὄντων παρρησιάζεσθαι καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ πρὸς 10 ἀλλήλους, ἐπιπλήττοντας τοῖς γιγνομένοις, οἳ ἂν τυγχάνωσιν ἀνδρικώτατοι ὄντες; Εἰκός γε. Ὑπεξαίρειν δὲ τούτους πάντας δεῖ τὸν τύραννον, εἰ μέλλει ἄρξειν, ἕως ἂν μήτε φίλων μήτ' ἐχθρῶν λίπη μηδένα ὅτου τι ὄφελος. Δῆλον. Ὅξέως ἄρα δεῖ ὁρᾶν αὐτόν, τίς ἀνδρείος, τίς μεγαλόφρων, τίς φρόνιμος, τίς πλούσιος· καὶ C 15 οὕτως εὐδαίμων ἐστίν, ὥστε τοῦτοις ἅπασιν ἀνάγκη αὐτῷ, εἴτε βούλεται εἴτε μή, πολεμῖν εἶναι καὶ ἐπιβουλεύειν, ἕως ἂν καθήρῃ τὴν πόλιν. Καλὸν γε, ἔφη, καθαρμόν. Ναί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸν ἐναντίον ἢ οἱ ἱατροὶ τὰ σώματα· οἱ μὲν γὰρ τὸ χεῖριστον ἀφαι-ροῦντες λείπουσι τὸ βέλτιστον, ὁ δὲ τοῖναντίον. Ὡς ἔοικε γάρ, 20 αὐτῷ, ἔφη, ἀνάγκη, εἴπερ ἄρξει.

2. τῷ Ξγ: τὸ A¹Π: τῷ (sic) A².

11. ὑπεξαίρειν Π: ὑπεξαίρειν A.

13. αὐτόν A¹Π: ἀτόν A².

Ε 11. 131³ 28 ff. ἔστι δὲ καὶ πολεμοποιὸς ὁ τύραννος, ὅπως δὴ ἀσχοιοὶ τε ὥσι καὶ ἡγεμόνος ἐν χρεῖα διατελῶσιν ὄντες. The history of Dionysius the elder is again in point: see Grote X pp. 224—331.

567 A 1 οὐκοῦν καὶ κτλ. Arist. Pol. l.c. 1313^b 18 ff. καὶ τὸ πένητας ποιεῖν τοὺς ἀρχομένους τυραννικὸν ὅπως—πρὸς τῷ καθ' ἡμέραν ὄντες ἀσχοιοὶ ὥσιν ἐπιβουλεύειν—καὶ ἡ εἰσφορὰ τῶν τελῶν, ὅσον ἐν Συρακούσαις· ἐν πέντε γὰρ ἔτεσιν ἐπὶ Διονυσίου τὴν οὐσίαν ἅπασαν εἰσενηνοχέαν συνέβαινεν. Cf. Grote l.c. p. 233.

2 πρὸς τῷ. A majority of Mss have πρὸς τῷ, which is also the older reading (see cr. n.); but εἰμι πρὸς τι in this sense lacks authority, and is inherently improbable. Cf. Phaedr. 249 D and IX 585 A, X 604 C, D n.

5 ὅπως—πολεμίοις: sc. πολέμους τινὰς ἀεὶ κινεῖ as before. ἔτοιμον in line 7 is impersonal—a rare usage, for which cf. Epp. 7. 333 A and Eur. H. F. 86.

567 B 11 ὑπεξαίρειν. For the corruption ὑπεξαίρειν (cr. n.) cf. Xen. Hiero 5. 2 ὅταν δὲ τοὺς τοιούτους—ὑπεξαίρωνται (J. G. Schneider's conjecture for ὑπεξαίρωνται of the Mss). On this passage the poet Gray remarks: "Compare this description with the Hiero of Xenophon: it is in almost every step a picture of the politicks and way of life of the elder Dionysius."

12 ἕως ἂν μήτε φίλων κτλ. There is no solitude or desolation like the tyrant's: for he is the enemy of the whole human race. See the passages quoted by Nägelsbach Nachkom. Theol. p. 304.

567 C 17 καλὸν γε—καθαρμόν. Cf. VII 540 E n. The famous anecdote of Thrasybulus and Periander (Hdt. V 92: cf. Arist. Pol. Γ 13. 1284^a 26 ff., E 10. 1311^a 20 ff., also Eur. Syrph. 445—449, where the poet borrows his imagery from the same story) is one instance out of many in Greek history: see Greenidge Gk Const. H. pp. 31 ff.

20 ἀνάγκη: sc. ἐστίν. J. and C. strangely say that "ἀνάγκη is the subject

XVIII. Ἐν μακαρίᾳ ἄρα, εἶπον ἐγώ, ἀνάγκη δέδεσται, ἢ προστάττει αὐτῷ ἢ μετὰ φαίλων τῶν πολλῶν οἰκεῖν καὶ ὑπὸ τούτων μισούμενον ἢ μὴ ζῆν. Ἐν τοιαύτῃ, ἢ δ' ὅς. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐχὶ ὅσῳ ἂν μᾶλλον τοῖς πολίταις ἀπεχθάνηται ταῦτα δρῶν, τοσούτῳ πλειόνων καὶ πιστοτέρων δορυφόρων δεήσεται; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; 25 Τίνες οὖν οἱ πιστοί, καὶ πόθεν αὐτοὺς μεταπέμψεται; Αὐτόματοι, ἔφη, πολλοὶ ἥξουσιν πετόμενοι, ἐὰν τὸν μισθὸν διδῶ. Κηφήνας, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, νῆ τὸν κύνα, δοκεῖς αὐτὸν τινὰς μοι λέγειν ἢ ξενικούς τε καὶ παντοδαπούς. Ἀληθῆ γάρ, ἔφη, δοκῶ σοι. Τί δέ; αὐτόθεν ἄρ' οὐκ ἂν ἐθελήσειεν—Πῶς; Τοὺς δούλους ἀφελόμενος τοὺς πολίτας. 30 ἐλευθερώσας, τῶν περὶ ἑαυτὸν δορυφόρων ποιήσασθαι; Σφόδρα γ', ἔφη· ἐπεὶ τοὶ καὶ πιστότατοι αὐτῷ οὗτοί εἰσιν. Ἡ μακάριον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λέγεις τυράννου χρῆμα, εἰ τοιούτοις φίλοις τε καὶ | πιστοῖς ἀνδράσι χρῆται τοὺς προτέρους ἐκείνους ἀπολέσας. Ἀλλὰ μὴν, ἔφη, τοιούτοις γε χρῆται. Καὶ θαυμάζουσι δὴ, εἶπον, οὗτοι οἱ ἐταῖροι αὐτόν, καὶ ξύνεισιν οἱ νέοι πολῖται, οἱ δ' ἐπεικεῖς μισοῦσί of ἔοικε." For αὐτῷ ἀνάγκη cf. 568 E and IX 579 A. On the force of ἀνάγκη here and just below see 565 C, 566 A iii.

21. μακαρία A²Π: μακαρία A¹. ἀνάγκη Π: ἀνάγκη A. 29. τί δέ (nullo interrogationis signo) γ: τίς δέ ΑΠΞ.

567 D 27 ἥξουσιν πετόμενοι: 'will wing their way.' πετόμενοι leads up to κηφήνας.

τόν μισθόν: 'the pay,' i.e. 'the necessary pay' (J. and C.). W. H. Thompson would omit τόν or replace it by μόνον: but insufficient pay would not attract mercenaries.

567 E 28 ξενικούς—παντοδαπούς. The body-guard of foreign mercenaries was a familiar feature in Greek tyrannies: see Xen. Hiero 5. 3 and (for Dionysius in particular) Grote x p. 221.

29 τί δέ;—ποιήσασθαι; The words from αὐτόθεν to ποιήσασθαι form a single sentence, πῶς being neglected: cf. πῇ δῆ—γίγνεται in 549 C, where see note and Jebb quoted ad loc. αὐτόθεν by its emphatic position already suggests what Socrates is about to say; and Adimantus' interruption, besides its stylistic effect, expresses the anxiety and horror with which the bare idea of such a proceeding would inspire a Greek. "Slaves were normally of non-Greek race; so this is what enlisting a band of negroes would be in the United States to-day" (Bosanquet). The best MSS read τίς δέ αὐτόθεν κτλ., but τίς is indefensible, and retained by no editor. Schneider's τοὺς δέ αὐτόθεν (with several MSS of inferior authority) seems to me grammatically awkward, as well as lifeless and dull. In Richards' proposal τί δέ; αὐτόθεν ἄρ' οὐκ ἂν ἐθελήσειέ πως τοὺς δούλους etc., the enclitic πως is singularly weak. J. and C., who print, with Hermann and Stallbaum, τί δέ; αὐτόθεν—ἐθελήσειε; and a full-stop after ποιήσασθαι, supply "some general notion such as λαβεῖν or ποιήσασθαι" with ἐθελήσειεν "from μεταπέμψεται in the previous sentence"—surely an impossible solution. The punctuation in the text removes, I think, all difficulty, if the words are taken as I take them.

30 τοὺς δούλους κτλ. As Dionysius, for example, did (Grote x p. 221 and Freeman's Sicily IV p. 13).

568 A 4 οἱ νέοι πολῖται: 'the new citizens,' viz. these quondam slaves etc., not (as D. and V.) 'the young citizens.' It is, in view, for example, of νέους ἐταίρους 'new friends' IX 575 D, quite unnecessary to read οἱ νεοπολῖται (apparently with Pollux III 56: cf. also id. IX 26), although according to Diodorus XIV 7 Dionysius called his body-guard of emancipated slaves νεοπολῖται. See Freeman's Sicily I c.

5 τε καὶ φεύγουσι; Τί δ' οὐ μέλλουσιν; Οὐκ ἐτός, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἢ τε τραγωδία ὅλως σοφὸν δοκεῖ εἶναι καὶ ὁ Εὐριπίδης διαφέρων ἐν αὐτῇ. Τί δὴ; "Οτι καὶ τοῦτο πυκνῆς διανοίας ἐχόμενον ἐφθέγγατο, ὥς ἄρα σοφοὶ τύραννοί ¹ εἰσι τῶν σοφῶν συνουσία. καὶ Β
 10 ἰσόθεόν γ', ἔφη, τὴν τυραννίδα ἐγκωμιάζει, καὶ ἕτερα πολλά, καὶ οὗτος καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι ποιηταί. Τοιγάρτοι, ἔφην, ἅτε σοφοὶ ὄντες οἱ τῆς τραγωδίας ποιηταὶ συγγιγνώσκουσιν ἡμῖν τε καὶ ἐκείνοις, ὅσοι ἡμῶν ἐγγὺς πολιτεύονται, ὅτι αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν πολιτείαν οὐ παραδε-
 15 σιν ὅσοιπέρ γε ¹ αὐτῶν κομψοί. Εἰς δέ γε, οἶμαι, τὰς ἄλλας περι- C

15. περιύβτες A²Ξ q: περιύβτες A¹II.

5 οὐκ ἐτός κτλ. A highly ironical and sarcastic sentence. It is not without reason that tragedy 'in general' (ὅλως is not 'on the whole' as D. and V. render) is thought σοφόν, and Euripides a master-tragedian (Euripides was notoriously 'σοφός'—see Blaydes on Ar. Clouds 1378): for he gave utterance inter alia to this sapient remark (for ἐφθέγγατο of an oracular, would-be-profound observation, see on VI 505 C): σοφοὶ τύραννοι τῶν σοφῶν συνουσία, in which by 'τῶν σοφῶν' he meant of course οἱς ζύνεστιν (ὁ τύραννος), the associates of the tyrant, i.e., as we have seen, a rabble of emancipated slaves and foreign mercenaries. In τραγωδία—σοφὸν δοκεῖ εἶναι Plato is also perhaps scoffing at the constant use of σοφός in tragedy, especially by Euripides: σοφός is, no doubt, that σοφόν says! None but a σοφός could have written σοφοὶ τύραννοι τῶν σοφῶν συνουσία. The poet of course really meant that tyrants gain wisdom from the wise men who throng the 'rich man's courts' (VI 489 B n.); but Plato maliciously twists the words into a compliment to tyrants and their rabble rout, and makes them a reason for tabooing tragic poets as τυραννίδος ὑμνητάς (B). Cobet would omit τοὺς before σοφούς: but the article is necessary because τοὺς σοφούς represents τῶν σοφῶν of the quotation. As regards the verse itself, it was Sophocles (in his Αἴας ὁ Δοκρὸς), and not Euripides, who was the author: see the references in Schneider, with Blaydes on Ar. Thesm. 21, Frag. 311 and Dindorf on Soph. Frag. 12 = Nauck Frag. 13. Plato's error is repeated in Theag. 125 B, and the Scholiast on Ar. Thesm. l.c. remarks that Aristophanes and Antisthenes made the same mistake, suggesting that either Aristophanes misled the others (so also Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. d. pl. Pol. p. 658 n. 2), or that the two tragedians wrote the same line independently (so Schneider also thinks). The latter supposition is unlikely. Perhaps the reduplication of the cant Euripidean σοφός is responsible for a kind of error which was easier in antiquity than it would be now. There is little to be said in favour of Dümmler's conjecture (Akadem. p. 16), that Antisthenes had quoted the line as from Euripides in an attack on Plato for associating with tyrants (Dionysius I and II), and that Plato, in his hurry to reply, forgets to rectify his assailant's error. Still less should we suppose that Plato's perverse exegesis is meant to caricature Antisthenes' way of expounding poetry.

568 B 10 ἰσόθεόν γε κτλ. Eur. Troad. 1169 τῆς ἰσοθέου τυραννίδος. Isocrates ad Nic. 5 appears to allude to the same verse (Dümmler Chronol. Beiträge p. 32).

ἕτερα πολλά: e.g. Phoen. 524 f., Fragg. 252, 336 Dindorf. In point of fact, however, Euripides blames tyranny at least as often as he praises it: see e.g. Ion 621 ff., Suppl. 429 ff., Fragg. 277, 288, 608 and other passages in Stob. Flor. 49. The elder Dionysius himself had the effrontery or candour to write the line ἡ γὰρ τυραννὶς ἀδικίας μήτηρ ἔφην (Stob. Flor. 49. 9, quoted in Freeman's Sicily IV p. 7 n. 1).

13 παραδεχόμεθα: not παραδεχόμεθα (as Stephanus suggested), in spite of the present συγγιγνώσκουσιν, for "civitas ipsa ιόντες πόλεις, ξυλλέγοντες τοὺς ὄχλους καλὰς φωνὰς καὶ μεγάλας καὶ πιθανὰς μισθωσάμενοι, εἰς τυραννίδας τε καὶ δημοκρατίας ἔλκουσι τὰς πολιτείας. Μάλα γε. Οὐκοῦν καὶ προσέτι τούτων μισθοὺς λαμβάνουσι καὶ τιμῶνται, μάλιστα μὲν, ὥσπερ τὸ εἶκος, ὑπὸ τυράννων, δεύτερον δὲ ὑπὸ δημοκρατίας· ὅσῳ δ' ἂν ἀνωτέρω²⁰ ἴωσιν πρὸς τὸ ἀναντες τῶν πολιτειῶν, μᾶλλον ἀπαγορεύει αὐτῶν ἢ τιμὴν, ὥσπερ ὑπὸ ἀσθματος ἀδυνατοῦσα πορεύεσθαι. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν.

XIX. Ἀλλὰ δὴ, εἶπον, ἐνταῦθα μὲν ἐξέβημεν· λέγωμεν δὲ πάλιν ἐκεῖνο τὸ τοῦ τυράννου στρατόπεδον, τὸ καλόν τε καὶ πολὺ²⁵ καὶ ποικίλον καὶ οὐδέποτε ταῦτόν, πόθεν θρέψεται. Δῆλον, ἔφη, ὅτι, εἴαν τε ἱερὰ χρήματα ἧ ἐν τῇ πόλει, ταῦτα ἀναλώσει, ὅποι ποτὲ ἂν αἰεὶ ἐξαρκῇ, <καὶ> τὰ τῶν ἀπολομένων, ἐλάττους εἰσφοράς

22. ὥσπερ Π: ἢ ὥσπερ Α. 28. <καὶ> Baiter: om. codd. ἀπολομένων g et corr. Α': ἀποδομένων Α¹ΠΞ.

nondum exstitit, sed veniam iam nunc sibi dari sperat Socrates" (Schneider).

568 C 16 καλὰς φωνὰς κτλ. τὰς τῶν ὑποκριτῶν (Schol.). With this whole sentence should be compared Laus 817 C, where Plato addresses tragic poets in these words: μὴ δὴ δόξητε ἡμᾶς ῥαδίως γε οὕτως ὑμᾶς ποτε παρ' ἡμῖν ἐάσειν σκηνὰς τε πῆξαντας κατ' ἀγορὰν καὶ καλλιφώνους ὑποκριτὰς εἰσαγαγομένους, μέizon φθεγγόμενους ἡμῶν, ἐπιτρέψειν ὑμῖν δημηγορεῖν πρὸς παῖδας τε καὶ γυναῖκας καὶ τὸν πολλὸν ὄχλον κτλ.

17 τυραννίδας τε καὶ δημοκρατίας. Democracy is next door to tyranny: in fact, ἡ δημοκρατία ἡ τελευταία τυραννὶς ἐστίν (Arist. Pol. E 10. 1312^b 5). Attic tragedy, of course, praises Democracy more often than Tyranny. On the political influence of poetry see Laus 817 C ff., Gorg. 501 E ff. and other passages in Reber Platon u. die Poesie pp. 55—59.

19 μισθοὺς κτλ. We may recall Pindar's ἀργυρωθεῖσα πρόσωπα μαλθακόφωνοι αἰοδαί (Isthm. 2. 8).

τιμῶνται κτλ. "For good and evil," says Bosanquet, "Plato's assertion is true on the whole." But as far as concerns Greece, at any rate, we may doubt whether tragic poets were not more honoured in the democracy of Athens than in imperial courts.

20 ὑπὸ τυράννων: e.g. Hiero, Archelaus, and such like patrons of poetry and the drama.

ὅσῳ δ' ἂν κτλ. The honour paid to Poetry varies inversely with the merit of the constitution. This is perhaps the severest thing which Plato has yet said against Poetry. The striking metaphor in ὥσπερ ὑπὸ ἀσθματος κτλ. is curiously like Dante, as Bosanquet points out.

568 D 26 θρέψεται. Is the verb middle or passive? It is passive in E below, but that does not decide the question: see on 546 D. If we confine our attention to the single sentence λέγωμεν—θρέψεται, the verb is most readily understood as passive; but ἀναλώσει in the next sentence favours the view that it is middle. On the whole, I prefer the passive. It is easy to supply the subject of ἀναλώσει from τοῦ τυράννου.

27 εἴαν τε ἱερὰ κτλ. The elder Dionysius in particular greatly shocked the conscience of Hellas by plundering temples: see Grote x pp. 300, 302 n. 3.

28 <καὶ> τὰ τῶν ἀπολομένων: 'and the property of his victims': cf. ἀπολλύη 567 A, ἀπολέσας 568 A, as well as the καθαρός of 567 B, C. ἀπολομένων is itself so used in Laus 628 B. In the indictment of Dionysius I by the Syracusan knight Theodorus (Diodor. xiv 65) occur the words οὗτος δὲ τὰ μὲν ἱερὰ σιλήσας, τοὺς δὲ τῶν ἰδιωτῶν πλούτους ἅμα ταῖς τῶν κεκτημένων ψυχαῖς ἀφελόμενος τοὺς οἰκέτας μισθοδοτεῖ κατὰ τῆς τῶν δεσποτῶν δουλείας. The sentence exactly illustrates what Plato here says. On the text and other views of this passage see App. VI.

ἀναγκάζων τὸν δῆμον εἰσφέρειν. ¹ Τί δ' ὅταν δὴ ταῦτα ἐπιλίπη; E ³⁰ Δῆλον, ἔφη, ὅτι ἐκ τῶν πατρῶν θρέψεται αὐτός τε καὶ οἱ συμπίται τε καὶ ἐταῖροι καὶ ἐταῖραι. Μανθάνω, ἔφην ἐγώ· ὅτι ὁ δῆμος, ὁ γεννήσας τὸν τύραννον, θρέψει αὐτόν τε καὶ ἐταίρους. Πολλή αὐτῷ, ἔφη, ἀνάγκη. Πῶς δὲ λέγεις, εἶπον, ἐάν τι ἀγανακτῇ τε καὶ ³⁵ ἀλλὰ τούναντίον ὑπὸ ὑέος πατέρα, οὔτε τούτου αἰτὸν ἔνεκα | ἐγέννησέν τε καὶ κατέστησεν, ἵνα, ἐπειδὴ μέγας γένοιτο, τότε 56
 αὐτὸς δουλεύων τοῖς αὐτοῦ δούλοις τρέφοι ἐκείνόν τε καὶ τοὺς δούλους μετὰ ξυγκλύδων ἄλλων, ἀλλ' ἵνα ἀπὸ τῶν πλουσίων τε καὶ καλῶν κάγαθων λεγομένων ἐν τῇ πόλει ἐλευθερωθεῖ ἐκείνου ⁵ προστάντος, καὶ νῦν κελεύει ἀπιέναι ἐκ τῆς πόλεως αὐτόν τε καὶ τοὺς ἐταίρους, ὥσπερ πατήρ ὑὸν ἐξ οἰκίας μετὰ ὀχληρῶν συμποτῶν ἐξελαύνων; Γινώσεται γε, νῆ Δία, ἡ δ' ὅς, τότ' ἦδη ὁ δῆμος, ¹ οἶος B | οἶον θρέμμα γεννῶν ἡσπάζετό τε καὶ ἠῦξεν, καὶ ὅτι ἀσθενέστερος ὢν ἰσχυροτέρους ἐξελαύνει. Πῶς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λέγεις; τολμήσει τὸν ¹⁰ πατέρα βιάζεσθαι, καὶ μὴ πείθεται, τύπτειν ὁ τύραννος; Ναί,

29. ἐπιλίπη E q: ἐπιλείπη AII.

31. ἔφην ἐγώ nos: ἔφην δ' ἐγώ A¹II: ἔφην ἦν δ' ἐγώ q.

τέρους A.

33. ἐάν τι q: ἐάν τε AIIΞ.

30. συμπίται II: συμπο.ται (sic) A.

32. ἐταίρους II:

3. ἀπὸ q: ὑπὸ AIIΞ.

568 E 29 δῆ. Badham suggests ἦδη, needlessly: cf. IX 573 E and 574 C (Baier).

ἐπιλίπη κτλ. ἐπιλείπη (see cr. n.) is retained by Hermann, but the aorist, which nearly all the MSS read, is no less necessary here than in I 340 E, IX 573 E and X 601 B. Cf. Heller Curae Criticae pp. 3 ff. On τῶν πατρῶν see IX 574 A n.

31 μανθάνω—ὅτι. A comparison with 584 A line 8 and with 496 A line 8 (see cr. n. ad loc.) shews that ἔφην ἐγώ, and not ἦν δ' ἐγώ is in all probability the right reading in this place. ὅτι = (you say so) 'because,' not 'that': see on I 332 A.

33 πῶς δὲ λέγεις κτλ. 'And how say you,' quoth I, 'if the Demos be somewhat wroth,' etc. I formerly read πῶς λέγεις with Ξ and some other inferior MSS, but now revert to the best supported reading, except that, with q, I print ἐάν τι for ἐάν τε (see cr. n.). If we read πῶς λέγεις, we must take the words as referring to πολλὴ αὐτῷ—ἀνάγκη: if πῶς δὲ λέγεις, the reference will be to the words which follow εἶπον, and πῶς δὲ λέγεις will then invite the reply which Adimantus gives below, viz. γινώσεται γε—ἐξελαύνει. It seems to me better in every way to make the question refer to the new point which is about to be raised by Socrates; for the statement that the Demos will have to support the tyrant is already complete, and needs neither further elucidation nor any expression of surprise. A majority of editors read ἐάν δέ for ἐάν τε. I think that τε must be wrong in any case, unless (with Schneider) we postulate an awkward anacoluthon, as though Socrates meant to add ἐάν τε μή. The reading of τι for τε enables us to retain πῶς δὲ λέγεις, and refer the question to what follows: for which reasons I now follow q.

569 A 3 ἀπὸ is read by Flor. U and V as well as q. Schneider alone retains ὑπό, but ἐλευθεροῦσθαι ὑπό means only 'be freed by.' It is better to write ἀπό than (with Baier) to excise the preposition. For the corruption see Bast Comment. Pal. p. 794.

4 καλῶν κάγαθῶν. See on VI 489 E.

5 κελεύει. Baier's conjecture κελεύη is a curious error. κελεύει depends of course on ὅτι: in oratio recta the δῆμος would say κελεύω σε ἀπιέναι. Cf. διακελεύονται in X 614 D and note ad loc.

ἔφη, ἀφελόμενός γε τὰ ὄπλα. Πατραλοίαν, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, λέγεις τύραννον καὶ χαλεπὸν γηροτρόφον, καὶ ὡς ἔοικε τοῦτο δὴ ὁμολογουμένην ἂν ἤδη τυραννὶς εἴη, καί. τὸ λεγόμενον, ὁ δῆμος φεύγων ἂν καπνὸν δουλείας ἐλευθέρων εἰς πῦρ¹ δούλων δεσποτείας ἂν ἐμπεπτωκὼς εἴη, ἀντὶ τῆς πολλῆς ἐκείνης καὶ ἀκαίρου ἐλευθερίας τὴν χαλεπωτάτην¹⁵ τε καὶ πικροτάτην δούλων δουλείαν μεταμπίσχόμενος. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη, ταῦτα οὕτω γίγνεται. Τί οὖν; εἶπον· οὐκ ἐμμελῶς ἡμῖν εἰρήσεται, ἐὰν φῶμεν ἱκανῶς διεληλυθέναι, ὡς μεταβαίνει τυραννὶς ἐκ δημοκρατίας γενομένη τε οἷα ἐστίν; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν ἱκανῶς, ἔφη.

τέλος πολιτείας Η'.

569 B 13 τὸ λεγόμενον. τὸν καπνὸν φεύγων εἰς τὸ πῦρ ἐνέπεσον. ἐπὶ τῶν τὰ μικρὰ τῶν δεινῶν φειγόντων, καὶ εἰς μείζονα δεινὰ ἐμπίπτόντων. (Diogen. VIII 45 in Deutsch u. Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. I p. 314, where the other authorities are also cited.)

φεύγων κτλ.: 'in trying to escape the smoke of servitude to free men will have fallen into the fire of the masterdom of slaves.' Herwerden proposes to excise ἐλευθέρων and δούλων (both here and in C below). It is difficult to believe that he had read 567 E and 569 A (δουλεύων τοῖς αὐτοῦ δούλοις) before making this audacious suggestion. The chiasmus δουλείας ἐλευθέρων—δούλων δεσποτείας is in Plato's finest style.

569 C 15 ἀκαίρου. ἀκράτου (Herwerden: cf. 562 D) would be grossly incongruous with μεταμπίσχόμενος, and is otherwise less suitable here than ἀκαίρου.

16 δούλων is emphatic: 'the most galling form of slavery' is slavery to slaves (J. and C.). Cf. 567 E n.

APPENDICES TO BOOK VIII.

I.

THE NUMBER.

The famous Number of Plato is notoriously the most difficult passage in his writings. The difficulty lies in the Greek, and not in the calculations, which are, as will be seen, extraordinarily simple, and can be understood by any one who has a rudimentary acquaintance with the multiplication table, and is willing to believe a single proposition of Euclid, viz. 1 47. I have explained my conception of the passage as a whole in the note on 545 c: and in this Appendix I propose to investigate and illustrate the entire section in detail with a view to justifying the explanations which I have given throughout the notes.

The literature of the subject is immense. Many of the passages relating to the Number in ancient authors have been collected by Schneider, who has also made a digest of the leading publications on the subject from the revival of learning down to 1830 (Platonis Opera Græce III pp. i—lxxxviii). For more information on the literature between 1830 and 1881 reference may be made to Dupuis Le nombre géométrique de Platon, Paris 1881. In addition to the commentators on the Republic and on Aristotle Pol. E 12. 1316^a 4 ff., to Proclus in Kroll's Procli in Pl. remp. comm. II pp. 1—80, and to the summary of earlier opinions contained in Schneider's edition, I have found some of the following discussions interesting and occasionally suggestive: Monro, Journal of Philology VIII pp. 275—289, and Classical Review VI pp. 152—156, 242—244: Gow, Journal of Philology XII pp. 91 ff., and Academy no. 522: Hultsch, Zeitschrift für Mathematik und Physik XXVII, Historisch-literarische Abtheilung, pp. 41—60, de numero Platonis a Proclo enarrato disputatio in Schoell's Procli commentariorum in remp. Platonis partes ineditae pp. 140—148, and Exkurs zu Μέλισσα ΑΕ in Kroll's Procli in Pl. remp. commentarii II pp. 400—415: Rettig, Proleg. in remp. pp. 315 ff.: Donaldson in the Proceedings of the Philological Society I pp. 81 ff.: Martin in the Revue Archéologique XIII pp. 257 ff.: Dupuis Le Nombre Géométrique de Platon, Interprétation Nouvelle, Paris 1881, Seconde Interprétation, Paris 1882, and Mémoire Définitif in his edition of Theo Smyrnaeus pp. 365—400: Tannery in the Revue Philosophique I pp. 170 ff., XIII pp. 210 ff., XV pp. 567 ff.: Demme in the Zeitschrift für Math. und Phys. XXXII, Historisch-literarische Abth. pp. 81—99 and 121—132: Albert Die Platonische Zahl und Einige Conjecturen zu Platon etc.: Jowett in The Republic of Plato translated, 1888, pp. cxxx ff., and Zeller¹ II 1, pp. 857—860 n.

It should be mentioned that this Appendix is in a few passages identical with the treatise on The Number of Plato which I published in 1891. During the eleven years which have elapsed since my earlier publication, my views have been considerably modified, especially as regards the interpretation of the words τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις—φθινόντων and the philosophical significance of the latter part of the Number; and the explanations contained in this Appendix are those which I now believe to be right. I may perhaps be allowed to express my obligations to those scholars who have supplied me with criticisms, whether written or printed, on my former work. The Provost of Oriel's discussions on my Number of Plato in the Classical Review have been constantly before me while engaged upon this subject. Some of his objections to my earlier theory were sound: others, and these the most important, I believe that I have refuted in the course of the present discussion. I am wholly unable to acquiesce in the præiudicata opinio that "there is no complete solution because there was no consistent meaning in Plato's mind" (J. of Ph. VIII p. 285), but my revised explanation owes something to Mr Monro's resolute and sturdy application of the 'negative arm of the elenchus,' and I am not less grateful to him for the opportunity which he has given me of shewing (in Parts ii and iii of this Appendix) that the incomplete solution which he himself suggests is one which cannot be attributed either to Plato or Aristotle, without infringing, as it seems to me, the laws alike of logic, arithmetic and Greek¹.

It will be convenient to quote the passage in full and also, for the sake of facilitating reference, to divide the words with which we are more immediately concerned into five sections, A, B, C, D, E.

¹ Mr Archer-Hind's criticisms in the Cambridge Review for Jan. 28, 1892, have also affected my view on the meaning of the two ἀρμονίαι: and I now also agree with him in his suggestion that συζυγείς in ἐπίτριστος πύθμην πεμπάδι συζυγείς invites us to multiply together the three numbers 3, 4 and 5. The review by Hultsch in Berl. Phil. Woch. 1892 pp. 1256 ff. may also be mentioned. Hultsch agrees with me in making the two numbers 216 and 12,960,000: he was also the first, so far as I know, to see that the sides of the ἀρμονίαι should be multiplied and not added, and that the rectangle is equal to the square: but in other respects his proposed solution is almost entirely different from mine. It is due to Hultsch and to the reader, that I should give the two solutions side by side, and I now do so.

A. Hultsch's Solution.

(1) $2^3 \times 3^3 = 216$ (so also Schneider)

(2) $(3 + 4 + 5) 3 = 36,$ and 36 by somehow or other developing out of itself a square number multiplied by 100, becomes 3600^2 , which is the first harmony. The second is the rectangle whose sides are

(1) $100 \times 7\sqrt{7-\frac{1}{4}}$ and (2) $100 \times 3^3\sqrt{7-\frac{1}{4}}.$

For further information the reader should consult Hultsch's article in Zeitschrift f. Math. etc. l.c.

B. The solution now proposed.

(1) $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216,$

(2) $(3 \times 4 \times 5)^2 = 3600^2 = 4800 \times 2700.$

In the interpretation of Plato's Greek I am seldom if ever able to agree with Hultsch.

Φέρε τοῖνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πειρώμεθα λέγειν, τίνα τρόπον τιμοκρατία γένοιτ' 545 ἂν ἐξ ἀριστοκρατίας. ἡ τὸδε μὲν¹ ἀπλοῦν, ὅτι πᾶσα πολιτεία μεταβάλλει 545 ἐξ αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἔχοντος τὰς ἀρχάς, ὅταν ἐν αὐτῷ τούτῳ στάσις ἐγγένηται· ὁμο-ροῦντος δέ, καὶ πᾶν ὀλίγον ἢ, ἀδύνατον κινηθῆναι; Ἔστι γὰρ οὕτω. Πῶς οὖν δῆ, εἶπον, ὦ Γλαῦκων, ἡ πόλις ἡμῖν κινηθήσεται, καὶ πῇ στασιάσουσιν οἱ ἐπικούροι καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους τε καὶ πρὸς ἑαυτούς, ἡ βούλει, ὥσπερ Ὅμηρος, εὐχόμεθα ταῖς Μούσαις εἰπεῖν ἡμῖν, ὅπως δὴ πρῶτον στάσις ἔμπρσσε, καὶ φῶμεν αὐτὺς¹ τραγικῶς, ὡς πρὸς παῖδας ἡμᾶς παιζούσας καὶ 545 ἔρσεσχιλούσας, ὡς δὴ σπουδῇ λεγούσας, ὑψηλολογουμένας λέγειν; Πῶς; Ὡδέ 546
 πως. | χαλεπὸν μὲν κινηθῆναι πόλιν οὕτω ξυστᾶσαν· ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ γενομένων 546 παιτὶ φθορά ἐστίν, οὐδ' ἡ τοιαύτη ξύστασις τὸν ἅπαντα μενεῖ χρόνον, ἀλλὰ λυθήσεται. λύσις δέ ἥδε· οὐ μόνον φυτοῖς ἐγγείοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν ἐπιγείοις ζῷοις φορὰ καὶ ἀφορία ψυχῆς τε καὶ σωμάτων γίνονται, ὅταν περιτροπαὶ ἐκάστοις κύκλων περιφορὰς συνάπτωσι, βραχυβίοις μὲν βραχυτόρους, ἐναν- 546 τίοις δὲ ἐναντίας· γένους δὲ ἑμετέρου εὐγονίας τε καὶ ἀφορίας, καίπερ¹ ὄντες 546 σοφοὶ οὓς ἡγεμόνας πόλεως ἐπαιδεύσασθε, οὐδὲν μᾶλλον λογισμῷ μετ' αἰσθήσεως τεύξονται, ἀλλὰ πάρεσιν αὐτοῖς καὶ γεννήσουσι παῖδας ποτε οὐ
 A δέον. | ἔστι δὲ θείῳ μὲν γεννητῷ περίοδος, ἦν ἀριθμὸς περιλαμβάνει τέλειος, |
 B ἀνθρωπείῳ δὲ ἐν ᾧ πρώτῳ αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστευόμεναι, τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὅρους λαβοῦσαι, ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ 546 αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων, πάντα προσήγορα καὶ¹ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα ἀπέ- 546
 C φηναν· | ὧν ἐπίτριστος πυθμὴν πεμπάδι συζυγείας δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται τρίς
 D, E αὐξηθεῖς, | τὴν μὲν ἴσῃν ἰσάκεις, ἑκατὸν τοσαυτάκις, | τὴν δὲ ἰσομήκῃ μὲν τῇ, προμήκῃ δέ, ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ διαμέτρων ῥητῶν πεμπάδος, δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων, ἀρρήτων δὲ δυοῖν, ἑκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος. | ἔμυπας δὲ οὗτος, ἀριθμὸς γεωμετρικός, τοιοῦτον κύριος, ἀμεινόνων τε καὶ χειρόνων γενέσεων, ἃς ὅταν ἀγνοήσαντες ἡμῖν¹ οἱ φύλακες συνοικίζωμεν νύμφας νυμφίοις παρὰ 546 καιρόν, οὐκ εὐφυνεῖς οὐδ' εὐτυχεῖς παῖδες ἔσονται.

For the sake of clearness I will endeavour as far as possible to confine myself in the first instance to the elucidation of the numbers and numerical processes, reserving the question of the philosophical significance of the Platonic Number for separate treatment in Part ii of this Appendix. But as it is impossible thoroughly to grasp the numbers apart from their meaning, or their meaning apart from the numbers, I may perhaps be allowed to suggest that the student, after he has read a section in Part i, before going on to the succeeding section, should glance at the corresponding division of Part ii. I have added a third Part by way of epilogue, in which Aristotle's criticism of the Platonic Number is fully discussed.

Before we embark on our task, it is desirable to allude to the evidence which there is for believing that Plato made use of the Pythagorean triangle in his Number. The triangle in question, as is well known¹, is the right-angled triangle whose sides are 3 and 4, whose hypotenuse² is consequently 5, and whose area³ is $\frac{4 \times 3}{2} = 6$. See Fig. 1.

¹ See Gow, History of Greek Mathematics, p. 155.

² By Euclid I 47—a proposition which is said to have been discovered by Py-thagoras, and which was certainly familiar to Plato: see Tim. 54 B.

³ $\triangle ABC$, the right-angled triangle in which $AC=3$, and $AB=4$, is half the

It will be shewn in Part iii that Aristotle regards the Pythagorean triangle as the basis of the number in the section which I have called B. Besides Aristotle we have the testimony of at least three authors (cited by Schneider¹), viz. Plutarch (de Is. et Os. 373 F), where he says τῶν τριγώνων τὸ κάλλιστον—ὃ καὶ Πλάτων ἐν τῇ πολιτείᾳ δοκεῖ προσκεχρῆσθαι, τὸ γαμήλιον διάγραμμα συντάττων. ἔχει δὲ ἐκείνο τὸ τρίγωνον τριῶν τὴν πρὸς ὀρθάς, καὶ τεττάρων τὴν βάσιν καὶ πέντε τὴν ὑποτείνουσαν ἴσον ταῖς περιεχοίταις διυαμένῃν: Proclus (in Euclid. p. 428, ed. Friedlein) in these words: τὸ ἐν πολιτείᾳ τρίγωνον, οὗ τὴν ὀρθὴν περιέχουσιν ὁ τε τρία (sc. ἀριθμός) καὶ ὁ τέσσαρα: and Aristides Quintilianus, who (De Musica, ed. Meibom p. 152 = Jahn p. 90) remarks: αἱ δὲ τὴν ὀρθὴν περιέχουσαι δηλοῦσι τὸν ἐπίτριτον. τοῦτο δὲ καὶ Πλάτων φησὶν ἐπίτριτον πυθμένα πεμπάδι συνζυγέτα. To this testimony may now be added Proclus and the authorities whom he quotes in his commentary on the Platonic Number (ed. Kroll II pp. 1 ff.), in the course of which constant reference is made to the wonderful properties of this κοσμητὸν τρίγωνον, as it was sometimes called (ib. 45. 23).

FIG. I. The Pythagorean Triangle.

PART I.

THE ARITHMETICAL SOLUTION².

I will take the four divisions B, C, D, E in the order in which they occur. The division which I call A involves no arithmetical calculations, and will be better discussed in Part ii.

§ I.

ἀνθρωπείῳ δὲ—ἀπέφηναν.

It may be well to give at the outset a translation of this passage. 'But the number of a human creature is the first number in which root and square increases, having received three distances and four limits. of elements that make both like and unlike and wax and wane, render all things conversable and rational with one another.'

The construction of the words ἀνθρωπείῳ—πρώτῳ is ἀνθρωπείῳ δὲ <γεννητῷ ἔστιν ἀριθμός> ἐν ᾧ πρώτῳ, which is itself an abbreviated expression for ἀνθρωπείῳ δὲ <γεννητῷ ἔστι περίοδος ἣν ἀριθμός περιλαμβάνει> ἐν ᾧ πρώτῳ, as a glance at the preceding clause will shew.

The meaning is: 'while the number of a human creature is the first rectangle $ABDC$, i.e. it is $\frac{4 \times 3}{2} = 6$. Cf.

Theol. Ar. p. 39 ed. Ast, where in a description of the Pythagorean triangle it is expressly pointed out that the area is 6. So also in Proclus in remp. II p. 42 ed.

Kroll.

¹ I.e. p. xxxii. Cf. also Iamblichus, Vit. Pythag. § 131.

² A brief summary of the results of Part i has already been published by me in Cl. Rev. XVI pp. 17—23.

number in which,' and 'the first number' signifies of course the first number which satisfies the conditions about to be described. In the notes on 546 A f., as well as in Pt ii § 3, I have shewn that by 'period' Plato means 'period of gestation': so that the 'number of a human creature' must be a number which measures the time during which the human creature is in the womb. It will be well to bear this in mind throughout the calculations which follow.

I proceed to explain αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστεύμεναι.

The word αὐξήσεις means 'increases,' and in its arithmetical signification must denote either 'additions' or 'multiplications'. Which of these two meanings the word bears here, Plato himself, as we shall presently see, informs us by means of the clause τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὁρους λαβοῦσαι.

What is the meaning of δυνάμεναι? It is clear from more than one passage in Plato that the mathematical sense of δύνασθαι 'be equal when squared to,' i.e. 'be the square root of,' was not yet fully and firmly established in his day. In Theaetetus 147 E—τὸν ἀριθμὸν πάντα δίχα διελάβομεν· τὸν μὲν δυνάμενον ἴσον ἰσάκεις γίνεσθαι τῷ τετραγώνῳ τὸ σχῆμα ἀπικάσαντες τετράγωνόν τε καὶ ἰσόπλευρον προσείπομεν—it is a square number which is said to be δυνάμενος (viz. ἴσος ἰσάκεις γίνεσθαι), while in 148 B—ὅσαι μὲν γραμμαὶ τὸν ἰσόπλευρον καὶ ἐπίπεδον ἀριθμὸν τετραγωνίζουσι, μῆκος ὀρισάμεθα, ὅσαι δὲ τὸν ἑτερομήκη, δυνάμεις², ὥς μήκει μὲν οὐ ἐνμμέτρους ἐκείναις, τοῖς δ' ἐπίπεδοις ἃ δύνανται—it is the roots which are δυνάμενα (sc. to produce squares), as in Euclid x def. II καὶ αἱ δυνάμεναι αὐτὰ ἄλογοι. But on comparing these two passages from Plato, we note that, while δυνάμενον is not used absolutely in the sense of a square, but requires to be further explained (viz. by the words ἴσος ἰσάκεις γίνεσθαι), δύνανται, where it is used absolutely, means 'are the roots of.' We infer that δυνάμεναι in our passage refers to roots and not to squares. Our inference will be confirmed as we proceed.

We have next to deal with the word δυναστεύμεναι. It is fortunate that Proclus³ should have expressly alluded to this part of Plato's Number. At the outset of his commentary on the first book of Euclid he endeavours to shew that the ἀρχαί of the Universe of things—τῶν ὄντων ἀπάντων—are also the ἀρχαί of Mathematics. One of his examples, that from δυνάμεις, is as follows⁴: καὶ ὅσα κατὰ τὰς δυνάμεις ἀναφαίνεται πᾶσιν ὁμοίως προσήκει τοῖς μαθήμασι, τῶν μὲν δυναμένων, τῶν δὲ δυναστευομένων. ἃ δὲ καὶ ὁ ἐν πολιτείᾳ Σωκράτης ταῖς μοῦσαις ὑψηλολογονόμεναις ἀνέθηκεν, τὰ κοινὰ πάντων τῶν μαθηματικῶν λόγων ἐν πέρασιν ὀρισμένοις περιλαβὼν καὶ προστησάμενος ἐν τοῖς εἰρημένοις

¹ For the meaning 'multiplications' cf. Theol. Ar. p. 39 Ast ὁ λε' ἐξάδι αὐξηθέν ἐπάμνηον χρόνον ἀποτελεῖ τὸν τῶν σί' ἡμερῶν and Nicom. Introduct. Ar. p. 127 Ast.

² The word δυνάμεις is here confined to irrational roots, but this is a limitation introduced by Theaetetus. Theaetetus in fact proposes to confine the word δυνάμεις to surds, and to use μῆκος for the rational roots. The usual meaning of δυνάμεις in Plato's mathematics is 'second increase': cf. Gow Gk Math. p. 78 n. 1.

³ In Euclid ed. Friedlein, p. 8.

⁴ In Eucl. l.c.

ἀριθμοῖς, ἀφ' ὧν δὴ καὶ τὰ μέτρα τῆς τε εὐγονίας καὶ τῆς ἐναντίας πρὸς ταύτην ἀγονίας καταφαίνεται. The first sentence means that 'powers' play a part in every department of Mathematics as well as in Nature and in Life—'some having power, while others are subject to power.' For example 3 is δυνάμενος, because it has power (viz. over 9—to make 9): 9 is δυναστεύμενος, because it is subject to power (viz. of 3—to be made by 3). It will not be denied that δυναστεύομαι is intended by Proclus as the passive of δύναμαι¹. Now δύναιται, said of a root, means δύναιται τετράγωνον ποιεῖν. The passive of this, said of a square number, is δύναιται τετράγωνος γίνεσθαι (δύναιται ἴσος ἑαυτῆς γίνεσθαι in Theaet. 147 E). In the case of the active, it was found possible to drop τετράγωνον ποιεῖν: but if, in the passive, τετράγωνος γίνεσθαι is discarded, at least the passivity must not be. For this reason δύναιται becomes δυναστεύεται.

We may therefore take it that δυναστεύομαι in our passage refers to squares. But before interpreting the expression as a whole, it is necessary to discuss a passage of Alexander Aphrodisiensis, which has not unnaturally been quoted² in connexion with section B, since it seems to be the only other passage besides those already quoted in which δυναστεύεται occurs in mathematical surroundings. The words are³: ἀνικίαν δέ φασιν ὑπὸ τῶν Πυθαγορείων λέγεσθαι τὴν πεντάδα, τοῦτο δὲ ὅτι τῶν ὀρθογωνίων τριγώνων τῶν ἔχοντων ῥητὰς τὰς πλευρὰς πρῶτόν ἐστι τῶν περιεχουσῶν ὀρθὴν γωνίαν πλευρῶν ἢ μὲν τριῶν ἢ δὲ τεττάρων, ἢ δὲ ὑποτείνουσα πέντε. ἐπεὶ τοίνυν ἡ ὑποτείνουσα ἴσον δύναιται ἀμφοτέροις ἅμα, διὰ τοῦτο ἡ μὲν δυναμένη καλεῖται, αἱ δὲ δυναστεύομαι, καὶ ἔστι πέντε. τὴν τε πεντάδα ἀνικίαν ἔλεγον ὡς μὴ νικημένην ἀλλ' ἀήττητον καὶ κρατοῦσαν.

The general drift of the passage is that the Pythagoreans called the number 5 'Invincibility,' because it is the hypotenuse of the first right-angled triangle with rational sides—the one 3, the other 4. As the hypotenuse is *equally powerful*⁴ with both the other sides, it is called δυναμένη, the others δυναστεύομαι. It is ἀνικία, because it remains unconquered and prevails.

δυναμένη here means 'powerful,' 'prevailing': δυναστεύομαι 'subject to power,' 'prevailed against.' Our sympathies being with the hypotenuse, because the odds are against him, we call him conqueror even although the battle is a drawn one. The only bearing of the passage on our text is this: it uses δυναστευομένη as a passive of δυναμένη. But whereas, in Proclus, δυναστεύομενα includes 'what can be produced by roots' (i.e. squares), and δυνάμενα 'what can produce squares' (i.e. roots), here δυναμένη means 'equal, or rather greater in power' (viz. the hypotenuse), and δυναστεύομαι 'prevailed against' (viz. the sides). It is evident that the words are used by Alexander

¹ Cf. also Proclus in remp. II p. 36 τὸ γὰρ δυνάμενον πᾶν πρὸς τὸ δυναστεύομενον ἀποδίδεται, and ib. p. 5 δύνανται μὲν γὰρ οἱ πλευρικοί (sc. ἀριθμοί), δυναστεύονται δὲ οἱ ἐκ τούτων. The use of the passive is like that in τιμοκρατεῖσθαι, δημοκρατεῖσθαι, regnor and the like.

² See e.g. Zeller⁴ II i, p. 858 n., Zeller⁵ I p. 400 n. 1, and Susemihl Aristoteles' Politik II p. 374.

³ In Arist. Met. A 8. 990^a 23.

⁴ Being equal when squared to the sum of the squares of the other two sides.

less in a technical, than in a metaphorical sense, and with no reference to their occurrence in the Platonic Number—to which indeed he makes no reference at all. The interpretation of δυναστεύομεναι in Plato should be deduced not from Alexander, but from an examination of the passage of Proclus in the light of Theaet. 147 E ff.

We are now in a position to interpret the highly elaborate and fantastic expression αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναί τε καὶ δυναστεύομεναι. The literal translation is 'root and square increases' or 'increasings,' and the correlation of meaning between the words δυνάμειναι and δυναστεύομεναι—*τὸ γὰρ δυνάμειναι πᾶν πρὸς τὸ δυναστεύομενον ἀποδίδεται*²—requires us to suppose that in a 'root and square increase' the 'root' in question is the root of the 'square' in question, and the 'square' in question the square of the 'root' in question. When for example x is the 'root,' the 'square' will be x^2 , and where the 'square' is x^2 , the 'root' will be x . What then is the meaning of a 'root and square increase'? If αὐξήσεις means 'addition' it will be $x + x^2$, if 'multiplication,' $x \times x^2$. And the plural 'root and square increases' will refer to more than one instance of the same process, i.e. for example either (1) to $x + x^2$, $y + y^2$, $z + z^2$ or (2) to $x \times x^2$, $y \times y^2$, $z \times z^2$. Whether the αὐξήσεις mean processes of addition or processes of multiplication will presently be seen: meantime it should be noted that the awkwardness of the English expression 'root and square increases' is escaped by the Greek idiom, because δυνάμειναι and δυναστεύομεναι are participial adjectives³.

I come now to τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὅρους λαβοῦσαι. The literal translation is 'having received three distances, and four limits.' and the meaning will appear from a glance at the following passages.

In Nicomachus Introd. Ar. pp. 143 f. ed. Ast we read τὰ μὲν στερεὰ

¹ I have treated the words of Alexander seriously, because there is no a priori reason why the Pythagoreans should not have called 5 ἀνκία, or indeed almost anything else in heaven or earth, as readers of the Theologumena Arithmetica and other similar treatises will readily admit. But so much confusion has elsewhere arisen from the similarity of vowel in νεικ- and νικ- (see on IX 581 B) that I should not be surprised if ἀνικία and not ἀνκία was in reality the original form: see Theol. Ar. p. 26 ed. Ast: καὶ ἀνικίαν προσηγόρευον τὴν πεμπάδα, οὐ μόνον, ἐπειδὴ τὸ πέμπτον καὶ κατ' αὐτὸ τεταγμένον στοιχείον, ὁ αἰθέρ, κατὰ ταῦτά καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχων διατελεῖ, νείκους καὶ μεταβολῆς ἐν τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτὸν ὑπαρχόντων ἀπὸ σελήνης μέχρι γῆς, ἀλλ' ὅτι τὰ πρῶτα διαφέροντα καὶ οὐχ ὅμοια τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ δύο εἶδη, ἄρτιον καὶ περιττόν, αὐτὸς ὡσανεὶ ἐφίλιωσε καὶ συνήρτησε κτλ. Megillus is quoted to the same effect a few lines lower down, and Ast in his note adds further references. Zeller⁵ I p. 400 n. 1 regards ἀνκία as more original than ἀνικία.

² Proclus in remp. II p. 36.

³ As it will shortly be found that αὐξήσεις refers to multiplications, I may remark here that Schneider and Donaldson so far agree with me in explaining αὐξήσεις δυναμένη τε καὶ δυναστευομένη as "incrementum per multiplicationem radices seu lateris et quadrati mutuum factum" (Schneider l.c. III p. xx). But Schneider is mistaken when he makes the whole expression αὐξήσεις—δυναστευομένη equivalent to actual or concrete cubes: "hoc loco numeros per eiusmodi αὐξήσεις effectos αὐξήσεις obscurius dici intelligitur: ii vero cubi sunt." The Greek word αὐξήσεις means 'actio ipsa augendi,' as Schneider himself remarks, and, as will presently appear, there is no occasion to interpret it as anything else. It is of course obvious that the words αὐξήσεις—δυναστευομένη are to some extent deliberately and intentionally fantastic: the Muses, we remember, ὑψηλολογοῦνται: but there is also a touch of serious import in the structure of the phrase. See Part ii § 4.

διαστήματα λέγεται τριχῇ διαστατά, τὰ δὲ ἐπίπεδα διχῇ... ταῦτα δὲ τῆς οἰκείας σαφηνείας ἐπιλήφεται ἐν τῇ Πλατωνικῇ συναναγνώσει κατὰ τὸν τοῦ λεγομένου γάμου τόπον ἐν τῇ Πολιτείᾳ ἀπὸ προσώπου τῶν Μουσῶν παρειαγομένον. There are many other statements to the same effect not only in Nicomachus, but also in the Theologumena Arithmetica, in Theo of Smyrna, and in Iamblichus' commentary on the work of Nicomachus. The distances are sometimes called διαστήματα, sometimes διαστάσεις, and in at least one passage ἀποστάσεις, as in Plato. The fullest explanation of the matter is in the Introd. Ar. p. 116: πρῶτον δὲ διάστημα γραμμῇ λέγεται· γραμμῇ γάρ ἐστι τὸ ἐφ' ἐν διαστατόν· δύο δὲ διαστήματα ἐπιφάνεια· ἐπιφάνεια γάρ ἐστι τὸ διχῇ διαστατόν· τρία δὲ διαστήματα στερεόν· στερεόν γάρ ἐστι τὸ τριχῇ διαστατόν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδαμῶς ἐπινοεῖν στερεόν, ὃ πλείονων τέτειχε διαστημάτων ἢ τριῶν, μήκους, πλάτους καὶ βάθους... εἴ τι γὰρ στερεόν ἐστιν, τὰς τρεῖς διαστάσεις πάντως ἔχει, μήκος, πλάτος καὶ βάθος· καὶ ἔμπανιν εἴ τι ἔχει τὰς τρεῖς διαστάσεις, ἐκείνο πάντως στερεόν ἐστιν, ἄλλο δ' οὐδέν. Compare also pp. 117, 123, 128, and Theol. Ar. p. 38, in each of which places διαστάσεις is used with this meaning. Theo pp. 24 f. ed. Hiller τῶν δὲ συνθέτων (sc. ἀριθμῶν) τοὺς μὲν ὑπὸ δίο ἀριθμῶν περιεχομένους καλοῦσιν ἐπιπέδους, ὡς κατὰ δύο διαστάσεις θεωρουμένους καὶ οἷον ὑπὸ μήκους καὶ πλάτους περιεχομένους, τοὺς δὲ ὑπὸ τριῶν στερεούς, ὡς καὶ τὴν τρίτην διάστασιν προσειληφότας, Theol. Ar. p. 48, Nicomachus l.c. p. 136 οἱ κύβοι τριχῇ διαστατοὶ ὄντες and Iamblichus l.c. p. 58. In Theol. Ar. p. 23, the author, in speaking of the number 4, which according to the Pythagoreans πρώτη ἔδειξε τὴν τοῦ στερεοῦ φύσιν· σημεῖον γάρ· εἴτα γραμμῇ, εἴτα ἐπιφάνειᾳ, εἴτα στερεόν, εἴτα σῶμα, remarks τὰς—πᾶσας ἀποστάσεις ἦτοι τὰς τρεῖς ἀπέστη, ὧν περαιτέρω οὐκέτι εἰσίν. Finally, we may refer to Simplicius in physica IV 1, p. 531. 9 ed. Diels σῶμα—τὸ τὰς τρεῖς ἔχον διαστάσεις and ibid. p. 634. 11 ff., to Aristotle Thp. Z 5. 142^b 24 ὁ τοῦ σώματος ὁρισμός, τὸ ἔχον τρεῖς διαστάσεις, Ph. IV 1. 209^a 4 ff. διαστήματα μὲν ὅν ἔχει (sc. ὁ τόπος) τρία, μήκος καὶ πλάτος καὶ βάθος, οἷς ὀρίζεται σῶμα πᾶν and other passages cited by Bonitz in the Index Arist. s.v. διαστάσεις, and also to Plato himself, who in Latw 894 a has the following sentence: γίνεταί δὴ πάντων γένεσις, ἡνίκα ἂν τί πάθος ᾗ; δῆλον ὡς ὅταν ἀρχὴ λαβοῦσα αὔξην εἰς τὴν δευτέραν ἔλθῃ μετὰ βασιιν καὶ ἀπὸ ταύτης εἰς τὴν πλησίον, καὶ μέχρι τριῶν ἐλθοῦσα αἰσθησιν σχῇ τοῖς αἰσθανομένοις.

From these passages it is clear that the three ἀποστάσεις of which Plato speaks are μήκος, πλάτος and βάθος. What then ought we to understand by the four ὅροι? In Theol. Ar. p. 16 Ast we find the words τὸ ἐξ ὕλης καὶ εἶδους αἰσθητόν, ὃ ἐστὶν ἀποτέλεσμα τριχῇ διαστατόν, ἐν τέτταρσιν ὅροις ἐστίν, and in Iambl. in Nic. p. 93 Pistelli στερεὸς δὲ ἐστὶν ἀριθμὸς ὁ τρίτον διάστημα παρὰ τὰ ἐν ἐπιπέδοις δύο προσειληφώς, δηλοῦσι τετάρτου ὅρου προσγενομένου· ἐν γὰρ τέσσαρσιν

¹ The reader will observe that Nicomachus had the Platonic number in his mind when he wrote these words. Cf. Mr. Monro in J. of Ph. VIII p. 276 "The Pythagorean writer Nicomachus says (Introd. Arithm. p. 143) that solid figures are called τριχῇ διαστατά, plane figures διχῇ διαστατά, and that this receives full light from the Κεφάλαια of Plato, κατὰ τὸν τοῦ λεγομένου γάμου τόπον."

ὅροις τὸ τριχῇ διαστατόν. The meaning will be easily apprehended from the accompanying figure of a στερεὸς ἀριθμός (Fig. 2), which I borrow from Theo p. 42 ed. Hiller. AB is the μῆκος, BC the πλάτος, CD the βάθος (or ὑψος or πάχος, as it was sometimes called: see Nicom. l.c. p. 123), and the points A, B, C, D are the four ὅροι (αἱ στιγμαὶ τῶν μεγεθῶν ὅροι Arist. Met. N 5. 1092^b 9): ἐν γὰρ τέσσαρσιν ὅροις τὸ τριχῇ διαστατόν, as Iamblichus observes.

FIG. 2.

From these and other passages to the same effect, I conclude that the three ἀποστάσεις and four ὅροι are μῆκος, πλάτος, and βάθος, with their attendant limits, that consequently αὐξήσεις refers to multiplications and not to additions, and that the whole expression αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστεύμεναι, τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὅρους λαβοῦσαι i.e. 'root and square increases comprehending¹ three distances and four limits' means cubings and nothing more.

The περίοδος of the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν is accordingly the first number in which cubings make everything conversable and rational with itself: but what are the numbers to be cubed?

Let us examine the phrase ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων.

In point of construction the genitives might depend, so far as the Greek is concerned, either on (1) ὅρους, or (2) on ἀποστάσεις and ὅρους combined, or (3) upon αὐξήσεις. Other possibility there is none. As far as concerns the sense, we observe that whereas the meaning of ἀποστάσεις and ὅρους is complete—for μῆκος, πλάτος and βάθος, with their four ὅροι, demand no further specification—that of αὐξήσεις is incomplete, because 'increasings' necessarily imply something to be increased. Now we have not yet been informed what we are invited to increase: and we are therefore compelled to suppose that the information is contained or concealed in ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων. I therefore believe that the genitives depend on αὐξήσεις.

In point of grammatical gender the genitives can only be neuter. ὁμοιούντων, for example, is the genitive of ὁμοιούντα i.e. τὰ ὁμοιούντα, the article being dispensed with in accordance with Plato's frequent practice in passages of real or affected elevation². But as Plato is trying to reach a certain number ('the first number in which' etc.), the

¹ λαβοῦσαι is literally 'having received.' The completed process ἔχει τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, 'has three distances' or as we should say 'dimensions': and as each successive ἀπόστασις is acquired, the process itself is said λαμβάνειν ἀπόστασιν. The usage is like that of (προσ)εληφώς in Iamblichus in Nic. p. 93 (quoted above): cf. also Theo p. 24 and Nicom. l.c. pp. 123, 127.

² It is the Muses who are speaking, and the article was rarer in their language, as the usage of poetry attests. The intransitive use of αἰξω—tolerably common in Aristotle and later Greek, after poetical words and idioms began to be freely admitted into prose—has a similar stylistic effect. We are bound to suppose that αὐξόντων and φθινόντων are opposed to one another no less than ὁμοιούντων and ἀνομοιούντων, and therefore as φθινόντων is intransitive, αὐξόντων must be intransitive too.

objects which are subjected to the processes of cubing cannot themselves be anything but numbers: so that for practical purposes we may regard ὁμοιούντων etc. as ὁμοιούντων ἀριθμῶν etc.

It is clear, therefore, that ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων stands for the numbers which we have to cube. What then are the numbers that 'make like and unlike, wax and wane'? The Muses are evidently teasing, and we must be patient with them till they choose to tell us.

Let us look a little farther on. The next half of this sentence begins with ὧν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν, and ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν, as will presently be shewn (§ 2), means the numbers 4, 3. Now if we take the expression 'of which, 4, 3' in its simplest and most natural signification, it means 'of which numbers, the numbers 4, 3,' so that the antecedent to ὧν will be some numbers, two of which are the numbers 4 and 3.

Now what is the grammatical antecedent to ὧν? The possibilities—I use the word in a generous sense—are (1) αὐξήσεις—δυναστευόμεναι, (2) τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις and τέτταρας δὲ ὅρους, either or both, (3) πάντα, (4) ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων.

It will be agreed that (2) is scarcely possible, and also, I think, that (3) is unlikely. On grounds of sense neither the first nor the second alternative is suitable. The antecedent to ὧν, on the most natural and simple translation of ὧν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν, must be, as I have said, 'some numbers, two of which are the numbers 4 and 3.' Now αὐξήσεις are not 'numbers,' but (as Schneider remarks) 'actiones augendi,' and the three ἀποστάσεις and four ὅροι are only μῆκος, πλάτος and βάθος with their limits. As for πάντα, so comprehensive a word might certainly include numbers, and numbers, too, in which 4 and 3 are present: but it will be shewn in Part ii § 4 that πάντα has not in point of fact the meaning required, but another and very different meaning.

We conclude therefore that the grammatical antecedent to ὧν is ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων, and I think no one will deny that the relative is most obviously and naturally connected with these words. It follows that ὁμοιούντων—φθινόντων are 'some numbers, two of which are the numbers 4 and 3.' We have thus obtained two of the numbers which are to be cubed, viz. 4 and 3. It is however clear from the partitive genitive ὧν that 4 and 3 are not the only numbers: there must be at least one more. What the missing number is, Plato does not tell us, but as the numbers 4 and 3 are 'married with 5' (πεμπάδι συζυγείς) in the second half of this sentence, and as we are so frequently warned by the ancients of the presence of the Pythagorean triangle throughout this passage, we may fairly suppose that the number we are looking for is the number of the hypotenuse, viz. 5. That this supposition is right, the sequel will shew.

There remains the question 'Why are the numbers 3, 4, and 5 said to make like and unlike, wax and wane?' The full explanation of these words belongs to Part ii, and will be given there. But ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων has also an arithmetical meaning in the Platonic number, in addition to its real or philosophical significance, and that meaning should here be explained. The numbers 3, 4, and 5 are said to 'make like and unlike' both for other reasons, as will afterwards be pointed out, and also in view of the use which is presently made of them to construct the two harmonies in the latter half of the number. It will be shewn in § 2 that these harmonies are built up out of the numbers 3, 4, and 5, by multiplying them together, and then multiplying the product three times by itself. Nothing is contained in either of the two harmonies except what 3, 4, and 5 supply. It is, in short, the numbers 3, 4, and 5 that make the two harmonies. Now the first harmony, as we shall see, is the square of 3600, and square numbers, according to the ancients, were ὅμοιοι. The second harmony is 4800×2700 , and oblong numbers were considered ἀνόμοιοι. See Iambl. in Nic. Intr. Ar. p. 82 Pistelli οἱ δὲ παλαιοὶ ταυτοὺς τε καὶ ὁμοίους αὐτοὺς (i.e. τοὺς τετραγώνους) ἐκάλουν διὰ τὴν περὶ τὰς πλευράς τε καὶ γωνίας ὁμοιότητα καὶ ἰσότητα, ἀνομοίους δὲ ἐκ τοῦ ἐναντίου καὶ θατέρους τοὺς ἑτερομήκεις, and Nicomachus himself Intr. Ar. pp. 132 ff. Ast¹. The numbers 3, 4, and 5 are therefore called ὁμοιοῦντές τε καὶ ἀνομοιοῦντες in connexion with the arithmetical side of the Platonic Number, because they produce the square and the oblong which express the γεωμετρικὸς ἀριθμὸς in its twofold aspect, first as ὅμοιος and afterwards as ἀνόμοιος. This is the arithmetical significance of ὁμοιοῦντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιοῦντων in this passage: but the words have an even wider significance as a description of the Pythagorean 'cosmic triangle' (Proclus in remf. ii pp. 45. 23 Kroll): see Part ii § 5. To the same section of Part ii I defer my account of αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων, because these words have no technical arithmetical meaning, but merely describe the sides of the Pythagorean triangle in its cosmic and creative aspects.

I accordingly believe that the περίοδος of the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν was obtained by Plato, following of course the Pythagoreans, by adding together the cubes of the three sides of the 'zoogonic triangle': $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216$. The justification for adding the cubes together is that the numbers are said to be contained in the total (ἐν ᾧ πρώτῳ κτλ.).

The result which we have reached is supported by the evidence of Aristotle, who gives us to understand that the total number of this section is 216: see Part iii of this Appendix. It is also in exact correspondence with Aristides Quintilianus, who informs us, in a passage where he alludes expressly to the Platonic Number, that the number 216 is nearly equivalent to 'the number of the seven months' child,' and can be reached by adding together the cubes of the sides of the Pythagorean triangle, precisely as Plato does here: ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ τῶν πλευρῶν ἐκάστην κατὰ βάθος αὐξήσαιμεν (βάθος γὰρ ἡ σώματος φύσις) ποιήσαιμεν ἂν τὸν διακόσια δεκαεξί, ἰσάριθμον ὄντα σύνεγγυς τῷ τῶν ἐπταμήνων (de mus. III p. 151 Meibom, 89 Jahn).

The words πάντα προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἀλληλα ἀπέφηναν can be

¹ That the habit of calling square numbers ὅμοιοι and oblong numbers ἀνόμοιοι was not merely a later development of Pythagoreanism, is expressly stated by Iamblichus (οἱ παλαιοί), and the same inference may be drawn from the Pythagorean συστοιχία (Arist. Met. A 5. 986^a 22 ff.), in which τετράγωνον appears on the same side as πέρας, ἀγαθόν etc., and ἑτερομήκεις along with ἄπειρον, κακόν etc.

abundantly illustrated from Pythagorean writings, and will be more conveniently discussed in Part ii.

I conclude¹ that the arithmetical meaning of section B is

$$3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216.$$

¹ In my former treatise on the Number, I explained section B in a different way (The Number of Plato, pp. 33—35), taking the three ἀποστάσεις as denoting 3, 4, and 5. Except as regards αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστεύμεναι, the explanation which I now offer is new, so far as I know. That the ἀποστάσεις are length, breadth, and thickness, and not what I formerly supposed them to be, nor anything else except length, breadth, and thickness, seems to me proved by the evidence of Aristotle as well as the other authorities quoted above, and is in harmony with the passage cited from Laws 894 A. Other attempts at solving the Number have usually supposed that the ὄροι denote terms in a numerical progression, and ἀποστάσεις the intervals between them. The words ὄροι and ἀποστάσεις could of course bear such an interpretation: but what can the ὄροι be? According to Proclus and Hermann, they are 27, 36, 48 and 64; according to Schneider, 8, 12, 18, 27. I cannot see that Plato furnishes any hints to justify us in selecting either of these progressions, and nothing can be made of them without having recourse to arbitrary calculations for which there is no authority in Plato's language; whereas it is clear from ὦν ἐπίτριστος πυθμὴν κτλ. that 3 and 4, and at least one other number, which πεμπάδι συζυγείς suggests is 5, are present in section B. With regard to ὁμοιούντων κτλ., it is to be noted that Proclus makes ὁμοιούντες=square or cubic numbers, viz. in this case 27 and 64, αἰξοντες=ισάκεις ἴσοι μείζονάκεις, in this case $3 \times 3 \times 4 = 36$, and φθίνοντες=ισάκεις ἴσοι ἐλασσονάκεις viz. $4 \times 4 \times 3 = 48$. I think it is clear that this explanation is devised by Proclus (or those whom he is here following) to suit his hypothesis about the ὄροι: at all events I have found no trace of any such explanation in Theo, Nicomachus, Iamblichus, the Theologumena Arithmetica, or any other ancient writings. Cf. Hultsch in Kroll l.c. p. 402. According to Schneider and Donaldson, ὁμοιούντες is equivalent to ὅμοιοι, and means numbers "whose factors are in the same ratio...i.e. as length to length, so breadth to breadth" (Donaldson l.c.), e.g. 8 and 27, ἀνομοιούντες equivalent to ἀνόμοιοι or numbers whose factors are not in the same ratio, e.g. 12 and 18; while αἰξοντες is equivalent to ὑπερτελείς, i.e. numbers whose 'parts' or measuring numbers make up a sum exceeding the numbers themselves (see Nicom. Introd. Ar. pp. 87 ff. Ast), e.g. 12 and 18, and φθίνοντες to ἐλλιπείς, i.e. numbers which are larger than the sum of their 'parts,' e.g. 8 and 27. But the identification is purely speculative, and no proof of it is offered. It has also been suggested that since ὅμοιοι and ἀνόμοιοι were sometimes used for 'square' and 'oblong' numbers (Iambl. in Nic. p. 82 ed. Pistelli), ὁμοιούντες and ἀνομοιούντες may be odd and even numbers, because according to the Pythagoreans "the odd numbers produce the series of squares, and the even numbers the series of oblongs," and further that αἰξόντων καὶ φθινόντων may be "only another way of describing the antithesis odd and even" (Mr Monro in J. of Ph. VIII p. 278). This too is the merest conjecture. There are other suggestions no less speculative; but these will suffice. It should be mentioned; in conclusion, that 216 is the number at which Schneider, Donaldson (who follows Schneider closely) and Hultsch have also arrived, although they reach it by multiplying 2^3 and 3^3 , and not by adding 3^3 , 4^3 , and 5^3 . Those who wish to study the explanations of these writers will find them in the works referred to at the beginning of this Appendix. Hultsch is more interested in the mathematics than in the Greek; but Schneider, here as always, studies the language carefully, although he himself recognises that in order to reach his conclusion he has to strain the meaning of some words, and introduce conjectural steps for which the language gives us no sanction or authority.

§ 2.

ὦν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν—ἐκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος.

As before, I begin by giving a literal translation. 'Of which the numbers 4, 3, married with 5, furnish two harmonies when thrice increased, the one equal an equal number of times, so many times 100, the other of equal length one way, but oblong—on the one side of 100 squares rising from rational diameters of five diminished by one each, or if from irrational diameters, by two; on the other, of 100 cubes of 3.'

Let us now examine the individual words, beginning with ὦν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν.

What is ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν? About the meaning of this phrase there can no longer be any doubt, if we put any faith in the repeated statements of ancient writers on arithmetic and mathematics. The words denote, as Mr Monro expresses it (Cl. Rev. l.c.) "the ratio 4 : 3 in its lowest terms (the actual numbers 4 and 3)." See Theo Smyrnaeus Expos. rerum math. ad legendum Platonem utilium pp. 80 f. ed. Hiller πάντων δὲ τῶν κατ' εἶδος εἰρημένων λόγων οἱ ἐν ἐλαχίστοις καὶ πρώτοις πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀριθμοῖς οὔτε κατ' ἕκαστον πρῶτοι λέγονται τῶν τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον ἐχόντων καὶ πυθμένες τῶν ὁμοειδῶν· οἷον διπλασίων μὲν λόγων πρῶτος καὶ πυθμὴν ὁ τῶν β' πρὸς ἐν· μετὰ γὰρ τοῦτον ἐν μείζουσι καὶ συνθέτοις ἀριθμοῖς λόγοι εἰσὶ διπλασίοι, ὁ τῶν δ' πρὸς τὰ β' καὶ τῶν ε' πρὸς τὰ γ' καὶ ὁμοίως ἐπ' ἄπειρον. τριπλασίων δὲ λόγων πρῶτος καὶ πυθμὴν ὁ τῶν γ' πρὸς τὸ ἐν· οἱ δὲ αἰ ἐν μείζουσι καὶ συνθέτοις ἀριθμοῖς ἐπ' ἄπειρον προάγουσιν. ὡσαύτως δὲ ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων πολλαπλασίων. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἐπιμορίοις. ἡμισολίων μὲν λόγων πρῶτος καὶ πυθμὴν ὁ τῶν γ' πρὸς τὰ β', ἐπιτρίτων δὲ ὁ τῶν δ' πρὸς γ', καὶ ἐπιτετάρτων ὁ τῶν ε' πρὸς δ'. οἱ δὲ ἐν μείζουσιν ὄροις καὶ συνθέτοις πάλιν ἄπειροι τὸ πλῆθος. τὸ δ' αὐτὸ θεωρεῖται καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων. Thus for example 4 : 3 is the πυθμὴν of 8 : 6, 12 : 9, 16 : 12, and so on : and Plato calls it the ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν because it is the πυθμὴν¹ of all ἐπίτριτοι λόγοι : cf. the expression ὁ ἐπόγδοος πυθμὴν in Theo p. 70. With Theo's evidence Nicomachus Introd. Ar. II p. 134 is in exact correspondence, as Mr Monro has shewn (Cl. Rev. VI pp. 243 f.); and Proclus takes the same view : see his commentary II p. 37 [ἐστιν οὖν οὗτος] ὁ ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν γ' καὶ δ'. We may therefore take it as certain that the ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν is the numbers 4 and 3, forming two of the three sides of the Pythagorean triangle. ὦν, as we have seen, has for its antecedent ὁμοιοῦντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιοῦντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων, which we have already identified with the numbers 3, 4, 5.

Of these three numbers, viz. 3, 4, 5, Plato bids us take 3, 4, and 'couple' or 'marry' them with 5. So far as I can discover, the word συζεύγνυμι had not either in Plato's time, or later, any fixed and stereotyped mathematical meaning, and συζυγείς in this passage is obviously in the first instance a metaphor from marriage, not inappropriate in connexion with a number which is 'lord of better and worse births': cf. Nicolaus ap. Proclus in remp. II p. 26 Kroll ὡς ἐν τοῖς ἀριθμοῖς αἱ ποταὶ συζυγείς ὁμοίους ἢ ἀνομοίους ἀποτελοῦσιν τοὺς ἐξ αὐτῶν, οὕτω καὶ ἐν τοῖς βίοις. But how is the metaphor to be interpreted? If συζυγείς has no arithmetical meaning in this passage, the numbers 3, 4, 5 will stand side by side like lonely celibates throughout all time, and the riddle can never be solved. If it has an arithmetical meaning, the reference must be either to addition or to multiplication. We may fairly say that the process of multiplication is at least as readily suggested by Plato's metaphor as the process of addition, and in point of fact the Pythagoreans frequently denoted marriage by the number 6, because, among other reasons, 6 is produced by multiplying together the first male number, i.e. 3, and the first female number¹, i.e. 2. It is therefore permissible to hold (with Schneider and others) that συζυγείς refers to multiplication, and as it has been asserted that "there is no parallel to lead us to take συζυγείς to mean multiplied" (Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 154), I may mention that Proclus uses the word with this meaning².

¹ For πυθμὴν cf. also Iamblichus in Nic. Ar. ed. Pistelli pp. 38 ff., 42 f., 47 f., 64, 66 (πυθμὴν δὲ ἐπιτρίτων ὁ δ' πρὸς γ' ἐστίν), 67 et al. The other explanations which

I originally offered of ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν need not be mentioned. They have been shewn by Mr Monro, among others, to be untenable : see Cl. Rev. VI pp. 153, 243.

On this view ἐπίτритος πυθμὴν πεμπάδι συζυγείς cannot mean anything except $4 \times 3 \times 5 = 60$. Every other possibility is excluded. We cannot interpret the phrase as $(4 + 3) \times 5$, for ἐπίτритος πυθμὴν is not 4 plus 3, but only 4, 3, and there is nothing in the Greek to justify the addition, nor yet as $(4 \times 5) + (3 \times 5)$, for here again we introduce a plus without any warrant from the language. If on the other hand we refuse to connect the numbers in any way whatever, and hold that if ἐπίτритος πυθμὴν means 4, 3, ἐπίτритος πυθμὴν πεμπάδι συζυγείς means 9, 8 or 20, 15 and nothing more, the marriage is either altogether sterile, or else it produces, not a number, but only a ratio: whereas Plato himself expressly describes the issue of his calculations not as a ratio, but as a number (ξύμπας δὲ οὗτος, ἀριθμὸς γεωμετρικός 546c). Those who, like Hultsch, suppose that συζυγείς denotes addition, and make the whole clause equivalent to $3 + 4 + 5$, justly extend the arithmetical process to the two numbers of the ἐπίτритος πυθμὴν: and if multiplication is intended, we are equally justified in multiplying all three numbers together. The 'coupling' of 3, 4, 5 is simply $3 \times 4 \times 5$.

The words ἐπίτритος πυθμὴν πεμπάδι συζυγείς therefore mean that 3, 4 and 5 are to be multiplied together. $3 \times 4 \times 5 = 60$.

¹ See Iambl. in Nic. Ar. p. 34. 20 Pistelli, Aristid. Quint. I 151 Meibom, Clem. Alex. Strom. v 14. 137B, vi 16. 365A Migne, and the Theolog. Ar. p. 33 Ast, et al. No doubt the number 5 could also bear the same meaning (see Zeller³ I p. 390 n.), but I have found many more examples of 6 than of 5.

² See in remp. II p. 54. 2 ff. ed. Kroll, ἢ δ' οὖν ἑκατοντάς τῷ ἑλλείποντι ἀριθμῷ πρὸς αὐτὴν κατὰ τὸν ἀπὸ τῆς πεμπάδος ἀριθμὸν συζυγείῳ ποιεῖ τὴν ἀπὸ γενέσεως ἐπὶ γένεσιν περίοδον, i.e. 100 coupled with the number which falls short of it by 5² makes the cycle from birth to birth. That cycle, according to Proclus, is 7500 (ib. p. 38); and $100 \times (100 - 25) = 75 = 7500$. It is right to state that this passage had not been fully published when Mr Monro wrote the words quoted above. Cf. also Demetrius ap. Proclus ib. p. 23. 14 ff. The constant employment of οἱ γινόμενοι ἐξ in Euclid (e.g. VII 16 ff.) to denote numbers produced by multiplication out of other numbers involves the same idea as συζυγείς here.

Let us now proceed to τρίς αὐξηθείς. The literal translation is 'thrice increased,' and, as far as concerns the Greek, the words might refer either to three additions, or to three multiplications, and the addenda, or multipliers, might be either the number which has to be increased, that is, 60, or any other number or numbers whatsoever¹. But as we have seen that αὐξήσεις in section B refers to multiplications and not additions, it is the most natural and obvious course to give αὐξηθείς the same meaning here, and as Plato does not specify any multiplier, the simplest inference from his silence is that the multiplier is the same as the multiplicand, that is to say, 60. And $60 \times 60 \times 60 = 12,960,000$.

At this stage it becomes necessary to discuss the arguments which have been advanced in favour of a different explanation of τρίς αὐξηθείς, and against the explanation which was first proposed in my Number of Plato pp. 25—28. The discussion will bring to light several points which will, I hope, convince the reader, as they have completely convinced me, that τρίς αὐξηθείς means 'three times multiplied by itself,' and cannot possibly mean anything else in the context where it occurs.

By every writer whom I have read, the words are taken as meaning cubed, or else the multiplication of some three factors: Weber, however, as I learn from Mr Monro², saw this much—that the words denote three separate processes of multiplication. I may be permitted to take Mr Monro and Dr Gow as types. The former observes³: "The phrase τρίς αὐξηθείς may be translated 'raised to the third dimension,' since it may imply either 'solid' numbers (products of three factors) in general, or the cube, which is the solid number par excellence. For the former use, see Rep. 528 B; for the latter, Rep. 587 D. Aristotle paraphrases τρίς αὐξηθείς by the words ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τοῦτου γένηται στερεός." In Dr Gow's article⁴ we read: "στερεός" (sc. in the passage quoted from Aristotle in Part iii of this Appendix) "seems to be equivalent to and explanatory of τρίς αὐξηθείς (cf. Plato Rep. vii 528 B)." That is, they would regard 60 τρίς αὐξηθείς—granted that ἐπίτριστος πνυθμῶν πεμπάδι συνυγείς means 60—as equivalent to 60 multiplied twice, and not thrice, by itself. I say 'would regard,' because Dr Gow does take τρίς αὐξηθείς as meaning merely the multiplication of three numbers, which in this case, he thinks, are different from one another (viz. 15, 20, 25), but Mr Monro admits⁵, and Dr Gow would not deny, that the three factors may be identical. The fact is αὐξηθείς means simply 'multiplied,' and, if the multiplier is not otherwise stated, it can only be the multiplicand.

In support of their explanation these two scholars quote, in the first place, the well-known passage in which Aristotle refers to Plato's

¹ The phrase cannot however bear Hultsch's interpretation 'multiplied by three,' for a number which is multiplied by 3 does not receive three increases, but only one, or, if we suppose that the increase means addition, two. Thus 60×3 (one increase of 60) = 180 = $60 + 60 + 60$ (two increases of 60). The Greek for

'multiplied by 3,' if we choose the verb αὐξάνω, would be τριάδι αὐξηθείς: cf. τριάδι αὐξηθῆναι Nicom. Intr. Ar. p. 127 Ast and ἐξάδι αὐξηθείς Theol. Ar. p. 39.

² J. of Ph. viii p. 284.

³ I.c. p. 280.

⁴ J. of Ph. xii p. 93.

⁵ I.c. p. 280.

Number (Pol. E 12. 1316^a 4 ff.). This passage of the Politics is so important for the correct understanding of the whole of Plato's Number that I have found it necessary to devote a separate division of this Appendix to its explanation. In Part iii I have, as I believe, shewn that the words quoted by Mr Monro do not paraphrase τῆς αὐξηθείς at all, but tell us what Aristotle believed to be the number of the section which I have called B. I will therefore ask the reader to defer his judgment on the Aristotelian passage till he has read Part iii.

In the second place, the above-named writers refer to Republic VII 528B and IX 587D. I cite these two passages in full. The first is as follows: μετὰ ἐπίπεδον, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἐν περιφορᾷ ὃν ἤδη στερεὸν λαβόντες, πρὶν αὐτὸ καθ' αὐτὸ λαβεῖν· ὁρθῶς δὲ ἔχει ἐξῆς μετὰ δευτέραν αὐξὴν τρίτην λαμβάνειν. ἔστι δέ που τοῦτο περὶ τὴν τῶν κύβων αὐξήν καὶ τὸ βάθους μετέχον (528B). The second runs thus: κατὰ δὲ δύναμιν καὶ τρίτην αὐξήν δηλὸν δὴ ἀπόστασιν ὅσην ἀφεστηκῶς γίνεται (587D).

I have fully commented on these passages where they occur, but it may be convenient once more to recapitulate my explanation of τρίτη αὐξή in each of these places. The first passage is where Plato says that the study of solids by themselves should precede the study of solids ἐν περιφορᾷ, i.e. astronomy: after the second 'increase,' says Plato, we ought to take the third. What does this mean? A point (= unity) has no 'increase': a line (say 3) has one: a rectangle (say 3×4) has two (δευτέρα αὐξή): a solid figure (say $3 \times 4 \times 5$) has three. A solid figure is therefore rightly said to be or have τρίτη αὐξή, because your reckoning begins from the point, which has no increase. The second passage deals with a case, not of solids in general, but of cubes. The number in question is 9—which is (says Plato) the distance separating the tyrant from ἀληθὴς ἡδονή, measured ἀριθμῷ or κατὰ τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸν, i.e. "numero seu secundum longitudinem, numerus enim omnis quatenus monadibus constat, lineae instar habendus" (Schneider III p. lxxxv): 'and how far removed the tyrant is according to the square and the third increase, is manifest.' But the third increase of what? Not of 9 (though belonging to 9), for 9 is itself already one increase, viz. of unity—but the third increase of unity in that special case where 9 is its first increase. 'The first increase (viz. of the unit or point) was ὁ τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμός, i.e. in this case ($1 \times 9 =$) 9: by the second-and-third increases on the same scale we obtain 9×9 (second increase or δύναμις) $\times 9$ (third increase) = 729' (n. ad loc.). Both in 528B and 587D it is unity or the point which suffers a third increase: in Plato's number it is not unity, but 60, and that makes all the difference. Cf. Pt iii.

Let us consider for a moment what is the meaning of the Greek word αὐξή or αὐξήσις. Aristotle¹ distinguishes γένεσις from αὐξήσις in these words: φανερὸν δὴ—ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἡ αὐξήσις μεταβολὴ ἐκ δυνάμει μεγέθους, ἐντελεχείᾳ δὲ μηδὲν ἔχοντος μέγεθος... ἔτι δὲ ἡ γε τοιαύτη μεταβολὴ οὐκ αὐξήσεως ἴδιος ἀλλὰ γενέσεως· ἡ γὰρ αὐξήσις ἔστι τοῦ ἐνν-πάρχοντος μεγέθους ἐπίδοσις, ἡ δὲ φθίσις μείωσις. Compare with this another passage of the same treatise²: ἐν μὲν γὰρ τῷ γίγνεσθαι τι ἀπλῶς ἢ φθείρεσθαι οὐχ ὑπομένει, ἐν δὲ τῷ ἀλλοιούσθαι ἢ αὐξάνεσθαι ἢ φθίνειν ὑπομένει τὸ αὐτὸ τὸ αὐξανόμενον ἢ ἀλλοιούμενον· ἀλλ' ἔνθα μὲν τὸ πάθος, ἔνθα δὲ τὸ μέγεθος τὸ αὐτὸ οὐ μένει. In other words, the process which calls a thing into being out of nothing is ἀπλῇ γένεσις, not αὐξήσις: in αὐξήσις the original size is not lost, but increased. Now apply this to the number 60. Increased once, what does it become? Certainly not 60, which it already is: else what of the words τοῦ ἐνυπάρχοντος ἐπίδοσις, and ὑπομένει τὸ αὐτὸ τὸ αὐξανόμενον,... ἔνθα δὲ τὸ μέγεθος τὸ αὐτὸ οὐ μένει? Does the process of αὐξήσις, when applied to a number, begin by putting it to flight, and afterwards lure it back again? 60 once 'increased' (i.e. in this particular passage, as we have seen, multiplied by itself) is 60×60 ; twice 'increased' it is $60 \times 60 \times 60$; thrice 'increased' it is $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60$. Apply the reverse process to 60^3 , and the illogical nature of the traditional interpretation will at once appear. If 60^3 is 60 three times 'increased,' then 60^2 is 60 twice 'increased,' 60 is 60 once increased, and nothing—or rather, unity, which is the point¹,—is 60. When Aristotle says, in the passage referred to by Mr Monro, ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τούτου γένηται στερεός he means² that 6, which has already one increase, by getting two more becomes 216. The number 216 we may then call either an ἀριθμὸς τρις ηὔξημένος (cf. Epin. 990D), i.e. a number which is thrice increased (sc. from unity, by means of 6), or we may call it ὁ ἐξ ἀριθμὸς δις ηὔξημένος, because ἐξ δις αὐξηθεὶς produces it.

¹ De Gen. et Corr. A 5. 320^b 25 ff.

² ib. 321^a 22 ff.

For my own part, I am unable to see any way of escape from these arguments, but Mr Monro complains of "the want of any evidence" that αὐξή in the phrase τρίτη αὐξή originally referred to the increase of the unit or point³. To this criticism I would make the following reply.

The expression τρίτη αὐξή is extremely rare, occurring only twice in Plato, and not at all, I believe, in Aristotle. I have not found it in later Greek writers on mathematics. But Plato uses also δευτέρα αὐξή of plane surfaces, and if we compare 528B ὁρθῶς δὲ ἔχει ἐξῆς μετὰ δευτέραν αὐξήν τρίτην λαμβάνειν with 526C δεύτερον δὲ τὸ ἐχόμενον τούτου σκεψώμεθα ἅρά τι προσήκει ἡμῖν, it is clear that he also regarded numbers or lines as the πρώτη αὐξή. Now there can be no question that the word αὐξή in each of these phrases bears some meaning, and the obvious and natural meaning is 'increase.' But 'increase' must be increase of something, and we are surely bound to ask 'What is that something which is increased first to a line, second to a plane, and thirdly to a solid?' The non possumus attitude should not be adopted till we have tried and failed. The only possible and at the same time perfectly satisfactory answer is 'the unit or point,' for number on the one hand is a σύστημα μονάδων (VII 525 A n.), and the Pythagoreans, to whom the expression τρίτη αὐξή is surely due, 'built up the line out of points, the plane out of lines, and the solid out of planes' (see App. II to Book VII, where the evidence is cited, and cf. also Part ii § 4). The origin which I see Cantor Vorlesungen zur Gesch. der Mathem. p. 144.

¹ The Greeks did not regard 'nought' as a number and had no symbol for it:

² It will be shewn in Pt. iii. that ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τούτου is 6.

³ Cl. Rev. l.c. pp. 154, 242.

suggest for the phrase is therefore in harmony both with Greek linguistic usage and with the theories of the school to which above all others Plato confesses his obligations in the domain of mathematics (see on VII 530D, E and cf. also App. II to Book VII), and no rival interpretation is offered either by Mr Monro, or, so far as I am aware, by any other critic.

Finally, my interpretation of τῆς αὐξηθείς has been admitted to be "logical, but it is not" says Mr Monro (Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 154) "in accordance with the usus loquendi, which in this and many similar cases follows the inclusive method of reckoning." In support of this allegation Mr Monro quotes a passage from Euclid IX 8 ἐὰν ἀπὸ μονάδος ὁποσοιοῦν ἀριθμοὶ ἐξῆς ἀνάλογον ᾖσιν, ὁ μὲν τρίτος ἀπὸ τῆς μονάδος τετράγωνος ἔσται κτλ., and refers to a similar passage in Archimedes, quoted by Nesselmann, Alg. d. Griechen p. 124 n. 16. "On the latter of these" continues Mr Monro "Nesselmann remarks: 'Es ist bei diesem Satze nur zu bedenken, dass die Griechen bei Angaben von Abständen beide Grenzen mitzählen' (Algebra d. Griechen p. 125, cp. p. 161)." I have no fault to find with Nesselmann, whose remarks are perfectly true and relevant in both the places cited by Mr Monro, and in the fullest harmony, so far as they go, with my explanation of τῆς αὐξηθείς. My only objection is to the inference which Mr Monro on his own account draws from this and similar passages in Greek. That inference will claim our attention presently: but first it is necessary to explain what Euclid means¹.

The meaning is as follows. If, for example, we take the series

1, 60, 3600, 216000 etc.,

in which $1 : 60 :: 60 : 3600 :: 3600 : 216000$ etc.², then the third number—it will be admitted that ἀριθμός is understood with τρίτος—from 1 will be a square. (Here it is of course 60^2 .) The expression 'third number from 1' is doubtless, as Mr Monro thinks, somewhat illogical, for one cannot be the first number from itself: and it is perfectly true that 'this is only one of many examples of the usus loquendi' of the Greek language.

But what inference does Mr Monro draw from the usage in question? Because the third number from one is a square, he seems to infer that the third increase is also a square. This is the only way in which I can interpret the words: "We may feel sure, I think, that the 'third increase' would naturally mean the third term in the increasing series rather than the fourth." (The italics are mine.) Well, the increasing series is 1, 60, 60^2 , and the third term in the series is 60^2 , so that according to Mr Monro's view 60^2 is a τρίτη αὐξή. This no one believes. 'It is not in accordance with the usus loquendi,' not to speak of logic.

My reviewer's inference from the idiom to which he calls attention is therefore unwarranted and fallacious. The fact is, of course, that the

¹ The passage of Archimedes is, as Mr Monro remarks, similar to that from Euclid; and what I say of the one applies equally to the other.

² That Euclid regards the increasing series as beginning with unity, and not with the second number, is clear from the words with which he begins his demonstration: ἐπεὶ γὰρ ἔστιν ὡς ἡ μονὰς πρὸς τὸν Α, οὕτως ὁ Α πρὸς τὸν Β κτλ.

'third increase' meant to the Greeks, as it means to us, the fourth term in the increasing series, and not the third. Thus in the increasing series 1, 60, 3600, 216000, the fourth term, viz. 216000 or $60 \times 60 \times 60$, is the 'third increase,' and in the increasing series which is involved in the words ὃν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν πεμπαδί συζυγείς τρις αὐξηθείς, that is to say, the 'third increase' is also the fourth term viz. 12,960,000 or $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60$ i.e. 60 τρις αὐξηθείς. So far am I from interpreting τρις αὐξηθείς differently from τρίτη αὐξη, as has been asserted by Mr Monro (l.c. p. 154)¹.

$$60, 3600, 216000, 12,960,000,$$

Our conclusion therefore is that ὃν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν πεμπαδί συζυγείς τρις αὐξηθείς means

$$60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60 = 12,960,000.$$

This number, according to Plato, 'furnishes two harmonies' (δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται). What does Plato mean by 'furnishes'? Does he mean 'furnishes of itself,' or 'furnishes after it has been submitted to various arithmetical operations'? παρέχεται elsewhere bears the meaning 'de suo praeberere' (IV 421 D n.), and we are not justified in supplying any new arithmetical processes out of our own imaginations, in the absence of any hint contained in the Greek². No such hint is given: so that παρέχεται can only mean 'furnishes of itself.' Now in what sense can a number be said to furnish of itself a square and an oblong? The natural and obvious answer is 'When it can be resolved both into a square and into an oblong'³.

¹ The reason why τρις αὐξηθείς has been misunderstood so long is due in part to our habit of expressing Plato's mathematics in the technical language of a later generation. Mr Monro for example calls it a paradox to hold "that τρις αὐξηθείς means 'raised to the fourth power,' while τρίτη αὐξη denotes the third power" (Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 242). The 'paradox' becomes a truism if we say 'τρις αὐξηθείς means thrice increased, and τρίτη αὐξη denotes the third increase.' And this is in fact the only admissible way of stating the case. The mathematical terms 'fourth power' and 'third power' were unknown to Plato. 'Power' or δύναμις alone was sometimes used by him with the meaning which we express by 'second power' (Rep. IX 587 D), but he also employs δυνάμει αὐξη to convey that meaning (ib. VII 528 B), and δύναμις itself actually means 'root' in Theaet. 148 A. See Allman Gk Geom. p. 208 n. In the course of my commentary on the Republic I have had occasion to point out some instances in which the interpretation of Plato's philosophy has suffered by the employment of later philosophical formulae and phrases, and it is interesting and instructive to find so conspicuous an example of the same tendency in connexion with his mathematics.

² It is at this point where all the previous attempts to solve the Number with which I am acquainted have broken down. In order to make their conjectures about the ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν πεμπαδί συζυγείς τρις αὐξηθείς yield the two harmonies, the different writers on the subject have been compelled to interpret παρέχεται κτλ. as 'furnishes two harmonies after it has been submitted to other arithmetical processes,' and as no such processes are indicated by Plato, they have supplied the missing links by a variety of purely imaginative conjectures according to their different interpretations of the ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν etc. and of the harmonies which it provides.

³ A less natural but still possible answer would be 'When it is produced by the sum of a square and an oblong.' But the sequel shews that this alternative is not intended here.

Let us now examine the words in which Plato describes the first harmony. It is, he tells us, 'equal an equal number of times, so many times 100.' But how many times 100? This time the Muses are only pretending to tease: for the answer is already in our hands. 12,960,000 furnishes (i.e., as we have seen, can be resolved into) 3600^2 (Fig. 3), and 3600^2 is 'equal an equal number of times, viz. thirty-six times 100,' so that τοσαυτάκις means 36 times. It should be added that ἴσος ἰσάκις is regularly used of a square number by Greek writers on arithmetic¹, and bears the same meaning in Theaet. 147 E.

FIG. 3.

Why does Plato add the words ἐκατὸν τοσαυτάκις when the square could be just as easily discovered without them? He wishes to call our attention to the fact that each of the sides of the square is a multiple of 100, just as each of the sides of the oblong is also a multiple of 100 (ἐκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν—ἐκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος). We are thus encouraged to look for some special significance in his employment of that number. What the significance is will be explained in Part ii § 5. The number 36 had also a profound significance and value in Pythagorean embryology, theory of music, and physics (Part ii § 4), and Plato calls our attention to it all the more pointedly because he represents it as if it were an unknown quantity. In reality it is not unknown, for the antecedent of τοσαυτάκις is easily discovered from the equation which Plato himself has already given us, viz. $12,960,000 = \text{a square}^2$.

¹ Euclid VII def. 11 τετράγωνος ἀριθμὸς ἔστιν ὁ ἰσάκις ἴσος.

² In my Number of Plato p. 21 I explained τοσαυτάκις in substantially the same way. It was urged against my explanation that τοσαυτάκις ought not to refer to a number "discovered by an algebraic process from a subsequent statement" (Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 153. The italics are mine). The words in italics do not apply to the present solution, in which the Number is investigated in the order of the Greek, and not, as on the previous occasion, from the end upwards. I now interpret τοσαυτάκις not by what follows, but by what precedes it, but I still regard the pronominal adverb as meaning 'so many times' i.e. 'a certain number of times.' The usage is just as natural in Greek as in English, and resembles the use of τοσούτον in βέλτιον τότε τοῦδε καὶ νῦν καὶ τοσούτον Alc. I 108E, τόσῳ καὶ τόσῳ in Laus 721D and τοσόνδε in Arist. Pol. Γ 12. 1283^a 8 τοσόνδε γὰρ μέγεθος εἰ κρείττον τοσούδε, τοσόνδε δὴλον ὡς ἴσον. In Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 241 I suggested that the whole phrase might be equivalent to ἴσῃ ἰσάκις ἐκατοντάκις, the word τοσαυτάκις having for its antecedent the square number which ἴσῃ ἰσάκις denotes, and I find that Schneider, Donaldson and apparently also Hultsch (ll.cc.) understand the expression in this way. In that case the first harmony will be $360^2 \times 100$ instead of 3600^2 , and the total result remains the same. But the symmetry of the passage is impaired if we take this view: for just as in the case of the oblong it is not the area, but the sides which are multiplied by 100 (ἐκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν—ἐκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος), so also here the number 100 should multiply the sides, and not the area, of the square. Mr Monro thinks that "the ordinary interpretation of ἐκατὸν τοσαυτάκις—'a hundred taken that number of times viz. 100 times'—is unassailable" (l.c. p. 153). This view of the word is as old as Proclus (l.c. II p. 37), but is far from universally held, as I have just pointed out. I am by no means sure that Plato would have expressed the area of his square in this way: certainly in Men. 83C he writes τεττάρων γὰρ (not τέτταρα) τετράκις ἔστιν ἑκκαίδεκα (cf. ib. 82C, 83E), describing the

The first 'harmony' is therefore 3600²; what is the second?

Plato describes it in the words τὴν δὲ ἰσομήκη μὲν τῇ, προμήκη δέ, ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ διαμέτρων ῥητῶν πεμπάδος, δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων, ἀρρήτων δὲ δυοῖν, ἑκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος, 'the other of equal length one way, but oblong; on the one side, of 100 squares of rational diameters of 5, diminished by one each, or if of irrational diameters, by two; on the other, of 100 cubes of 3.'

Let us examine the words one by one. It is clear that τὴν δὲ ἰσομήκη μὲν τῇ, προμήκη δέ means that the 'harmony' is expressed by means of a rectangle. "When the sides of the rectangle were expressed in numbers," says Allman¹, "προμήκης was the general term for an oblong," and προμήκης is the term employed here. Compare the Platonic definition of an oblong number in Theaet. 148A πλείων ἐλαττονάκης ἢ ἐλάττων πλεονάκης γίγνεται, μείζων δὲ καὶ ἐλάττων αἰὲ πλεονᾶ αὐτὸν περιλαμβάνει. The sense would have been complete if Plato had merely said τὴν δὲ προμήκη, but the addition of ἰσομήκη μὲν τῇ has a stylistic effect: the rectangle, like the square, is also ἰσομήκης, though only in one direction².

We have now to interpret *ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ διαμέτρων ῥητῶν πεμπάδος, δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων, ἀρρήτων δὲ δυοῖν*³. These words express the first of the two sides of the rectangle: cf. Critias 118A πρόμηκες δὲ square as 'of' its sides, just as he usually describes an oblong (cf. Critias 118A πρόμηκες δὲ πᾶν, ἐπὶ μὲν θάτερα τρισχιλίων σταδίων, κατὰ δὲ μέσον ἀπὸ θαλάττης ἄνω σταδίων). If he had wished to say that the first harmony was 100 × 100, we should have expected ἑκατὸν μονάδων τσαντάκης, so as to balance ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν κτλ. below: or rather ἑκατὸν μονάδων ἑκατοντάκης, for Plato never uses τρία τσαντάκης, τέτταρα τσαντάκης, etc., but always τρία τρίς, τέτταρα τετράκης etc. It is incredible that a nation which had a word for 10,000 times had no word to express 100 times, although Mr Monro suggests that because ἑκατοντάκης does not appear to occur in classical literature, therefore it was unknown in Plato's day (Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 153). Over and above all these considerations, there is the indisputable fact that the harmony which Plato describes in the words ἴσην ἰσάκης, ἑκατὸν τσαντάκης must be one which can be 'furnished' or 'yielded' by the ἐπίτριτος πνυθὴν πεμπάδι συζυγείς τρίς αὐξηθὲς: and no theory about the area of that harmony has the smallest claim to be even considered unless it complies with this condition. Mr Monro himself makes no attempt to shew that the number 10,000 can be derived from the subject of παρέχεται, and every writer who has attempted this impossible task has been compelled to resort to purely conjectural and arbitrary processes for which there is not a shadow of justification in Plato's language.

¹ Gk. Geom. p. 210 n.

² Hultsch (Zeitschrift f. Math. etc. l.c. p. 46), who agrees that the words denote a rectangle, changes τῇ into πῇ, but πῇ is not sufficiently precise. The order is of course intended to throw emphasis on τῇ, and at the same time to bring ἰσομήκης as near as possible to ἴσην ἰσάκης. τῇ is demonstrative as in τῇ μὲν, τῇ δέ (Theaet. 158 E et al.), and the position of μὲν is as in X 614 D ἐκ μὲν τοῦ ἀνιέναι—ἐκ δὲ τοῦ ἐτέρου and elsewhere. The usual theory seems to make τῇ mean the square: 'equal to the former in one dimension' (J. and C.). If Plato had intended such a meaning, he would certainly have written ἐκείνη and not τῇ. There should be no question that τῇ is adverbial.

³ The full explanation of this passage is due to Barozzi (see Schneider l.c. p. xxv), but Proclus (l.c. II p. 38) understood 'the rational' and 'irrational' diameters of five.' Barozzi's only error was that he added, instead of multiplying, the two sides of the oblong. I think Hultsch was the first to see that multiplication is intended, although he interprets the sides of the rectangle wrongly.

παῖν, ἐπὶ μὲν θάτερα τρισχιλίων σταδίων, κατὰ δὲ μέσον ἀπὸ θαλάττης ἄνω δισχιλίων.

In the language of Greek arithmetic ἀριθμὸς ἀπὸ means 'square of': see for example Euclid VII 20 εἰν τρεῖς ἀριθμοὶ ἀνάλογον ὦσιν, ὃ ἐπὶ τῶν ἁκρῶν ἴσος ἔσται τῷ ἀπὸ τοῦ μέσου, i.e. for example, in the proportion $2 : 4 :: 4 : 8$, the product of 8 and 2 = 4^2 . The same use of ἀπὸ is found in Plato, e.g. Men. 85B ἀπὸ τῆς διαμέτρου αἱ, ὡς σὲ φῆς, ὃ παῖ Μένωνος, γίγνοιτ' ἂν τὸ διπλάσιον χωρίον.

Consequently ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ is simply 'of one hundred squares of.'

What are διαμέτροι ῥηταὶ πεμπάδος? The rational diameter of 5 is the nearest rational number to the real diameter of a square whose side is five¹, i.e. to $\sqrt{50}$ by Euclid I 47 (see Fig. 4). Now the nearest rational number to $\sqrt{50}$ is $7 = \sqrt{49}$. Therefore ῥηταὶ διαμέτροι πεμπάδος = 'sevens.' Thus the entire clause ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ διαμέτρων ῥητῶν πεμπάδος means 'of one hundred squares of 7,' i.e.

$$100 \times 49 = 4900.$$

It remains to explain δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων and ἀρρήτων δὲ δυοῖν.

δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων means 'wanting one each,' i.e. each ἀριθμὸς ἀπὸ or square being diminished by 1. The normal expression would be δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστου 'wanting, each of them, 1,' but Plato allows ἐκάστου to assimilate itself to ἀριθμῶν.

We can now interpret the whole expression ἑκατὸν μὲν ἀριθμῶν ἀπὸ διαμέτρων ῥητῶν πεμπάδος, δεομένων ἐνὸς ἐκάστων. It is equivalent to

$$(7^2 \times 100) - (1 \times 100) = 4900 - 100 = 4800.$$

The words ἀρρήτων δὲ δυοῖν merely give another way of arriving at 4800. The translation is: 'or, if you take irrational diameters of 5,

FIG. 4.

¹ For evidence of this see Theo Smyrnaeus, pp. 43 ff. Cf. also Proclus in remp. II p. 38, Gow, Gk Math. p. 96 and Cantor Gesch. d. Math. p. 191. This is the only passage in Plato where 'rational diameters' are mentioned. In Theaet. 147D ff. he merely distinguishes rational from irrational roots or surds: while a careful study of Polit. 266A shews that the passage is in no way parallel to ours except in the use of διάμετρος. But there is nothing harsh or difficult, from the Greek point of view, in the expression 'rational diameter.' The geometrical construction is very simple. See Fig. 5. Let $AB = \sqrt{50}$, i.e. the irrational diameter of 5, and consequently $ABDE$ = the square of (ἀπὸ) $AB = 50$; we have only to insert in $ABDE$ the largest square of a rational number which it will contain, say $AFHG$, and AF will be the rational diameter of 5, i.e. that part of the diameter of 5 which is rational.

FIG. 5.

wanting 2 each.' The construction is <ἀπὸ> ἀρρήτων δὲ <διαμέτρων> δεομένων > δυοῖν <ἐκάστων>. The meaning, expressed in figures, is: 'or, if you prefer it, of $(\sqrt{50})^2 \times 100 - (2 \times 100) = 5000 - 200 = 4800$.' δέ gives an alternative, as in μᾶλλον δέ = vel potius.

Consequently one of the two sides of the second harmony is 4800.

The words ἐκατὸν δὲ κύβων τριάδος 'on the other hand of 100 cubes of three' give us the second side, viz. $100 \times 3^3 = 2700$.

The second harmony is therefore

$$4800 \times 2700 \text{ (Fig. 6) } = 12,960,000.$$

And this harmony, like the first, is furnished by $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60$, for $60 \times 60 \times 60 \times 60 = 12,960,000$.

The reason why the square and the rectangle are each called 'harmonies' will be explained in Part ii § 5.

The arithmetical solution of the Platonic Number is therefore

$$(1) \quad 3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216.$$

$$(2) \quad (3 \times 4 \times 5)^4 = 3600^2 = 4800 \times 2700.$$

FIG. 6.

PART ii.

THE MEANING OF THE PLATONIC NUMBER.

I will now discuss the whole passage from beginning to end, and elucidate the meaning step by step.

§ 1. The point of view.

Our city, says Plato, will be moved, when στάσις appears in the two higher classes. The Muses shall tell us how στάσις entered first. The cause of our city's being moved, they say, is that everything created is liable to destruction. The process of destruction (λύσις) is when the leaders of the city γένους ὑμετέρου εὐγονίας τε καὶ ἀφορίας—οὐδὲν μᾶλλον τεύξονται, ἀλλὰ πάρεσιν αὐτοῖς καὶ γεννήσουσι παῖδας ποτε οὐ δέον. Whenever, in ignorance of 'better and worse births,' οἱ φύλακες συνοικίζωσι νύμφας νυμφίοις παρὰ καιρόν, οὐκ εὐφύεις οὐδ' εὐτυχεῖς παῖδες ἔσονται (546 D). In the next generation the dissolution has already gone so far that iron breeds with silver, and copper with gold.

Accordingly the λύσις of the ideal State is the begetting of children when children ought not to be begotten, or briefly, the begetting of children out of season, or inopportunistically.

This is quite in harmony with the stringent rules laid down by Plato in Book v on the subject of marriage and the procreation of children. Thus in 458 D the male and female archons are not allowed ἀτάκτως μίγνσθαι, but marriages are to be celebrated ἱεροὶ εἰς δύναμιν ὅτι μάλιστα. In 459 E it is said: οὐκοῦν δι' ἑορταί τινες νομοθεητέαι, ἐν αἷς ξινάξομεν τὰς τε νύμφας καὶ τοὺς νημφίους, καὶ θυσίαι καὶ ὕμνοι ποιητέοι τοῖς ἡμετέροις ποιηταῖς πρέποντες τοῖς γιγνομένοις γάμοις. And at 461 A it is reckoned a sin against God and man to produce a child for the State οὐχ ὑπὸ θυσιῶν οὐδ' ὑπ' εὐχῶν φῦς ἃς ἐφ' ἐκάστοις τοῖς γάμοις εὐξονται καὶ ἱερεῖαι καὶ ἱερεῖς καὶ ξύμπασα ἡ πόλις κτλ.

§ 2. The meaning of the words from χαλεπὸν μὲν το γεννήσουσι παῖδάς ποτε οὐ δέον.

We have thus obtained the point of view from which the whole passage is to be interpreted. While the cause of change from the best to the second-best commonwealth lies in the perishability of everything which is created, the process which leads to change is the begetting of children inopportunately.

Plato deals first with the process leading to change (λύσις). To plants and animals, he says, cometh production or non-production (a bearing or no bearing) of soul and bodies, whenever revolutions join for each the circumferences of their circles, these circumferences faring a short way for the short-lived, but the reverse for the reverse. That is to say, plants and animals have fixed periods of gestation, which may be represented by circles whose circumferences revolve (Fig. 7). Every time that the fixed point A is reached, there is φορὰ ψυχῆς τε καὶ σωμάτων, if the seed was sown on the last occasion when the same point of the circle was at A, and if it has come, without accident, to maturity: if however the seed was not then sown, or, though sown, has not come to maturity, there is ἀφορία ψυχῆς τε καὶ σωμάτων. The singular ψυχή is used because soul, viewed merely as the principle of life, is one in all plants, in all animals, and in both¹. Why are the circumferences long in the case of long-lived animals, and short in the case of short-lived? Because animals that live long have long periods of gestation, and conversely. Aristotle also takes note of the same general rule: see Probl. x 9. 891^b 25 ff., διὰ τί τὰ μὲν ταχυτόκα τῶν ζῴων ἐστί, τῶν δὲ πολυχρόνιος ἡ κύησις; ἢ ὅτι τὰ μακροβιότερα βραδύτερον πέφυκε τελειοῦσθαι; ἐστί δὲ βραδυτόκα τὰ μακρόβια and de gener. anim. IV 10. 777^a 31 ff., where the elephant is cited as a well-known case in point.

FIG. 7.

The meaning of the words from λύσις δὲ ἥδε το ἐναντίας may therefore be summed up in the sentence: In all plants and animals the period of gestation is fixed by nature. Now as man is the animal with whom in the ideal State we are concerned, we are prepared by this exordium for the mention of the period of gestation in the human race. It will come in due time.

¹ Cf. Tim. 77 B.

Plato proceeds to narrow the case down to man: 'Now as touching your kind (i.e. mankind), clever though the leaders of the city be whom you educated, none the more will they by calculation together with perception obtain' (literally, hit the obtaining of) 'good offspring and no offspring, but it will escape them, and the day will come when they will beget children when they ought not.' Several points in this require to be explained. First: in place of repeating φορὰ καὶ ἀφορία Plato writes εὐγονίας τε καὶ ἀφορίας, because it is not enough for the prosperity of the ideal State merely to produce children—the children must be good in quality. The word ἀφορίας is full of meaning; it is the duty of the rulers to render, if possible, illicit unions unproductive, πάντα διακελευσάμενοι προθυμῆσθαι, μάλιστα μὲν μηδ' εἰς φῶς ἐκφέρειν κύημα μηδὲ γ' εἶν, ἐὰν γένηται, ἐὰν δέ τι βιάσσηται, οὕτω τιθέναι, ὥς οὐκ οὔσης τροφῆς τῷ τοιούτῳ (v 461 c). Second: what is the meaning of λογισμὸς μετ' αἰσθήσεως? Nothing very recondite. Both calculation and perception by the senses must be employed by the rulers in arranging the details connected with marriage and the bringing up of children: perception for example in settling what couples are to be brought together (v 459 A ff.), which children should be reared, and which exposed (460 c al.), and calculation in order to determine what number of marriages are needed to keep the population nearly uniform (460 A), what couples may marry by reason of age (460 E ff.), and other things too trivial to mention. Plato means that however well the rulers employ the means at their disposal, that is, λογισμὸς and αἴσθησις, yet the time will come when mistakes must happen. We are not to blame the rulers of our perfect city, nor yet αἴσθησις (with Amelius ap. Procl. l.c. p. 29 and Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 302): for the real fons et origo mali, as we shall shortly discover, is the Universe, the failure of whose energies is beginning to affect the ideal city, as well as every other portion of the whole. See §§ 5 and 7.

§ 3. The περίοδος of the θεῖον γεννητόν.

We come now to the words ἔστι δὲ θείῳ μὲν γεννητῷ περίοδος ἣν ἀριθμὸς περιλαμβάνει τέλειος. Plato has stated that all ζῷα have a fixed period of gestation: he now proceeds to deal with the periods of (1) the θεῖον γεννητόν and (2) the ἀνθρώπειον, beginning with the θεῖον, on the principle ἐκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα.

Four expressions require to be discussed before we can arrive at Plato's meaning—viz.: περίοδος, περιλαμβάνει, ἀριθμὸς τέλειος, and θεῖον γεννητόν.

The word περίοδος means nothing more than 'way round.' One complete revolution of any circle is a περίοδος: two or more of the same circle, or one (or more) of one circle and one (or more) of another or others, are περίοδοι. This will not be denied by any one who will take the trouble to study side by side the examples quoted in Ast's Lexicon of the use of περίοδος in Plato. In the present passage the 'way round' is that described above in the words ὅταν περιτροπαὶ ἐκάστοις κύκλων πειριφορὰς ξυνάπτωσι: the περίοδος of a θεῖον γεννητόν is therefore fulfilled ὅταν περιτροπῇ θείῳ γεννητῷ κύκλου περιφορὴν ἐξανάπτῃ. Now it has already been shewn that the words from ὅταν περιτροπαί to ἐναντίως refer to periods of gestation, so that the περίοδος of a θεῖον γεννητόν is the period of gestation which ends in the birth of a divine creature¹. This is the only possible interpretation of the Greek, nor is the meaning otherwise than appropriate, as will appear when we apprehend what the 'divine creature' is.

The word περιλαμβάνει means 'comprehends.' If a number is represented by a rectangle, its sides, or factors, are said to 'comprehend' it, as in Theaet. 148 A, where the number which μείζων καὶ ἐλάττων δὲ πλευρὰ περιλαμβάνει is called a προμήκης ἀριθμός. In the present case, we are dealing, not with a number, but with a περίοδος which is comprehended by a number, and that number περιλαμβάνει περίοδον which gives the time that the revolution takes to accomplish. The period of gestation of a divine creature is therefore expressed by a 'final number.'

I will now discuss the words τέλειος ἀριθμός. It is well known that a 'perfect' number meant to Euclid² and Greek arithmeticians generally a number which is equal to the sum of its divisors, e.g. $6 = 1 + 2 + 3$; $28 = 1 + 2 + 4 + 7 + 14$. Although there is no trace of such a meaning in Plato, nor in the fragments of Philolaus³, the usage may very well be old: but even among the Pythagoreans numbers are often called 'perfect,' although they are not equivalent to the sum of their factors⁴. The τέλειος ἀριθμός par excellence was 10 according to Philolaus: θεωρεῖν δὲ τὰ ἔργα καὶ τὰν ἐσσίαν τῷ ἀριθμῷ κατὰν δύναν, ἅτις ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ δεκάδῃ· μεγάλα γὰρ καὶ παντελής καὶ παντοεργὸς καὶ θείῳ καὶ οὐρανίῳ βίῳ καὶ ἀνθρωπίνῳ ἀρχὰ καὶ ἀγεμῶν καὶ κοσμήτειρα ἡ δύναμις ἡ τῆς δεκάδος⁵. But 10 was called by them παντελής or τέλειος simply because, as the basis of their system of calculation, which was a decimal one, it may be regarded as the 'consummating' or 'all-ending' number, the numbers above ten being considered merely repetitions of the first ten⁶. Plato was perfectly at liberty to call any other number τέλειος which 'ends' or 'brings a consummation,' and in point of fact he does so in the Timaeus. In 39 D of that dialogue we find the words: ἐστι δ' ὁμῶς οὐδὲν ἡπτόν κατανοῆσαι δυνατόν, ὥς ὃ γὰρ τέλειος ἀριθμὸς χρόνον τὸν τέλειον ἐναντιόν

¹ For περίοδος in the sense of 'period of gestation,' cf. Aristides Quint. De Musica, p. 143 Meib. ταῖς τῶν ἐπαμήνων περιόδοις. Many writers on the Number understand by περίοδος 'Umlaufszeit' (e.g. Zeller¹ II 1, p. 858 n.): but the word must of course be interpreted by what precedes and follows. I have shewn that 'period of gestation' is the only meaning which harmonises with ὅταν περιτροπαί κτλ. above, and it is the only meaning possible below, where the period of the human creature is described.

² VII def. 23 τέλειος ἀριθμός ἐστὶν ὁ τοῖς ἐαυτοῦ μέρεσιν ἴσος ὢν.

³ Some of Philolaus' fragments, whether genuine or not, are at all events, in my opinion, tolerably early.

⁴ e.g. 3 and 9: see the Theolog. Arithm. pp. 13, 58 ed. Ast. The number 3 is on p. 13 said to be τέλειος ἰδιαιτερον τῶν ἄλλων, implying that other numbers may also be τέλειοι, though in a less specific sense. Cf. Demme (referred to above) pp. 84 f.

⁵ Frag. 13 in Mullach II p. 4.

⁶ See Zeller⁵ I p. 398 n. 2, and Aristotle quoted there.

⁷ Cantor in his Vorlesungen zur Gesch. der Math. p. 142 agrees in denying that 'perfect number' here means 'a number equal to the sum of its divisors.'

πληροὶ τότε, ὅταν ἀπασῶν τῶν ὀκτὼ περιόδων τὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα ξυμπερανθέντα τάχῃ σχῇ κεφαλὴν τῷ τοῦ ταῦτοῦ καὶ ὁμοίως ἀναμετρηθέντα κύκλῳ. It is rightly held that we have here a reference to a Great Year—the period within which all the eight circles¹ revolving around the earth simultaneously reach the point from which they started at the commencement of our cycle. Now if Plato allowed himself to call the number which measures a cycle of the world's life a 'final' or 'ending' number, it is clear that he might with equal propriety apply the epithet τέλειος to the number which completes or fulfils (τελειοῖ)² the World's creation; for the θεῖον γεννητόν, as will presently be shewn, is the World and nothing more. What the particular number is, he does not say: and no one will blame him for his reticence³.

There remain the words θεῖον γεννητῶν. The ancients⁴ explained these words, with perfect justice, as referring to the Universe: οὐρανὸς ἢ κόσμος ἢ καὶ ἄλλο ὃ τί ποτε ὀνομαζόμενος μάλιστ' ἂν δέχοιτο, τοῦθ' ἡμῖν εἰνομασθῶ (Tim. 28 B). In the Timaeus there is abundant evidence that Plato regarded the World as a divine creature: τόνδε τὸν κόσμον, he says, ζῶον ἔμψυχον ἔνουν τε τῇ ἀληθείᾳ διὰ τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ γενέσθαι πρόνοιαν⁵, with which compare the words of Proclus (in Tim. 89 D): ὅταν δὲ ἔμψυχον αὐτὸ καὶ ἔνουν ἴδῃς, θεὸν αὐτὸ καλέσεις, ὅπερ ὁ Πλάτων ἐν Πολιτείᾳ μὲν θεῖον γεννητόν, ἐνταῦθα δὲ θεὸν εὐδαίμονα προσεῖπεν τὸν κόσμον ἡξιώσε. The Universe is θεῖον, because it is a God; γεννητόν, because it is created⁶.

The θεῖον γεννητόν is therefore the World, and the words which we have been discussing mean that the time during which the world is in the womb⁷ is comprehended by a final or consummating number, the size of which Plato prudently conceals.

¹ viz. the circle of the Fixed stars, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Moon: see Rep. x 616 D ff. There is a good definition of the Great Year in Macrobi. Sonn. Scip. II II. 10.

² By the 'World's creation' is meant, of course, the development of a κόσμος or ordered universe out of the primeval chaos. Cf. Tim. 30 A ff. and Pol. 273 B πολλῆς ἦν μετέχον ἀταξίας πρὶν εἰς τὸν νῦν κόσμον ἀφικέσθαι. It ought to be mentioned here that I formerly thought the period of the θεῖον γεννητόν is actually specified by Plato in the sequel, and that it is identical with one of the two harmonies; but the identification cannot be sustained, and I now withdraw it.

³ τελειοῖ is used with the same meaning in the Theol. Arithm. p. 58 Ast: καλεῖται δὲ αὕτη (sc. ἐννεάς) τελεσφόρος, τελειοῖ δὲ τὰ ἐννεάμηνα.

⁴ See Plutarch περὶ τῆς ἐν Τιμαίῳ ψυχογονίας 10. 1017 C and the references in Schneider.

⁵ 30 B: cf. 30 D, 32 D, 34 A, 34 B (εὐδαί-μονα θεὸν αὐτὸν ἐγεννήσατο) and 37 C.

⁶ Tim. 28 B γέγονεν ὁρατὸς γὰρ ἀπτός τε ἔστι καὶ σῶμα ἔχων, πάντα δὲ τὰ τοιαῦτα αἰσθητά, τὰ δ' αἰσθητά, δόξῃ περιληπτά μετ' αἰσθήσεως, γιγνόμενα καὶ γεννητὰ ἐφάνη. Whether these words are to be taken in their literal meaning or not, it will be allowed that if Plato can call the world γεννητόν in the Timaeus, he may do so with equal justice in the Republic.

⁷ In the Orphic verses this identical metaphor is found: see Procl. in Tim. 94 B πάντα γὰρ ἐν Ζηνὸς μεγάλου τάδε δώματι κείται καὶ Ζηνὸς δ' ἐνὶ γαστέρι σὺν ῥα πεφύκει and 95 E τοῦνεκα σὺν τῷ παντὶ Διὸς πάλιν ἐν τὸς ἐτύχθη¹ αἰθέρος εὐρέλῃς ἡδ' οὐρανοῦ ἀγλαὸν ὕψος κτλ. It is well known that there is a large element of Orphic belief embodied in Pythagoreanism; and if these verses are early or embody an early tradition, the figure which Plato here employs may itself be taken from Pythagorean sources.

§ 4. The περίοδος of the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν.

The general statement, with which we started, that every living thing has a fixed period of gestation, has now at last been narrowed down to man. The period of gestation for a human creature, says Plato, is the 'first number in which root and square increasings, comprehending three distances and four limits, of elements which make like and unlike and wax and wane, render all things conversable and rational towards one another.'

The arithmetical meaning of this sentence, as we have seen, is $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216$, the numbers 3, 4, and 5 denoting the sides of the Pythagorean triangle. In order to apprehend its real significance, it will be necessary to say something about (1) the numbers 3, 4, and 5, (2) the expression αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστεύομεναι, τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὅρους λαβοῦσαι, and (3) the whole number 216 together with πάντα προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα ἀπέφηναν.

As regards the numbers 3, 4, and 5, I have already alluded to the evidence which there is for holding that Plato made use of the Pythagorean triangle throughout the Number. The oldest testimony, as we shall see in Part iii, is that of Aristotle, and practically all the ancient commentators, as appears from Proclus (l.c. II pp. 22 ff.), made the figure in question the starting-point of nearly all their investigations on the subject. That the properties of this triangle were employed by the Pythagoreans to explain and enforce their embryological theories, is also attested from many sources, such as Aristides Quintilianus III 151 ff. Meibom = 89 ff. Jahn, Proclus l. c. p. 26 ὅτι ἀπὸ τοῦ τριγώνου τοῦτον δείκνυσιν Πυθαγόρας τὰς τῶν ἑπταμήνων καὶ ἐννεαμήνων εὐγονίας καὶ τὰς τῶν ὀκταμήνων πηρώσεις, Nicomachus Excerpt. ex Nicom. in von Jan's Mus. Scr. Gr. pp. 278 f., Theol. Ar. p. 40 Ast, and Censorinus de die Nat. II (redeo ad propositum, ut doceam quid Pythagoras de numero dierum ad partus pertinentium senserit etc. The authority followed by Censorinus throughout this chapter, and indeed throughout the whole of chapters 4—15, is Varro, as Diels has shewn Dox. Gr. pp. 186 ff.). Compare also Plut. περὶ τῆς ἐν Τιμαίῳ ψυχολογίας 12. 1018 B and Diog. Laert. VIII 29. The most exact parallel to the calculation adopted by Plato is found in the passage already quoted from Aristides l. c. p. 89 Jahn: ἄλλ' εἰ καὶ τῶν πλευρῶν ἐκάστην κατὰ βάθος αὐξήσαιμεν (βάθος γὰρ ἡ σώματος φύσις), ποιήσαιμεν ἂν τὸν διακόσια δεκαέξ, ἱσάριθμον ὅσα συνέγυνε τῶ τῶν ἑπταμήνων. We may therefore, I think, regard it as certain that Plato is closely following the Pythagoreans when he expresses the period of human gestation in terms of their favourite triangle. In what sense are the numbers 3, 4, 5 said 'to make like and unlike and wax and wane'? As the numbers in question produce not only the number 216, but also the γεωμετρικὸς ἀριθμὸς 12,960,000, we shall be in a better position for dealing with this question after we have interpreted the meaning of the larger as well as of the smaller number. This subject is accordingly reserved for § 5.

The phraseology of αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστεύομεναι, τρεῖς

ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὄρους λαβοῦσαι is in all probability borrowed from Pythagorean sources. We have already seen that the use of the word 'increase' in this connexion agrees with Pythagorean principles (Part i § 2), and our authorities for the meaning of τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὄρους were to a considerable extent writers with a Pythagorean bias (Part i § 1). See also Arist. de celo A 1. 268^a 7 ff. μεγέθους δὲ τὸ μὲν ἐφ' ἐν γραμμῇ, τὸ δ' ἐπὶ δύο ἐπίπεδον, τὸ δ' ἐπὶ τρία σῶμα—καθάπερ γάρ φασι καὶ οἱ Πυθαγόρειοι, τὸ πᾶν καὶ τὰ πάντα τοῖς τρισὶν ὄρισται. It is however impossible to believe that so long and cumbrous an expression was even in Plato's time a regular phrase for cubing. The word κυβικός occurs both in Plato (Tim. 55 C, D) and in Aristotle (Probl. xv 3. 910^b 36), and although κύβων αὐξήν in vii 528 B has a different meaning, we may reasonably suppose that αὐξήσεις κυβικαί would have conveyed the meaning of 'cubic increases' or 'cubings' to Plato's contemporaries as well as to a later generation (cf. κυβικὴν αὐξήσιν Ennechr. ex Nicom. p. 279). Why then did not Plato employ that or some other equally simple phrase? The answer is that the words selected by Plato are intended to have a significance of their own, in addition to the arithmetical process of cubing which they describe. We are dealing with the formation of a human child, and, as Aristides reminds us, βάθος ἡ σώματος φύσις. By expressing the process involved as 'root and square increasings,' Plato intended to remind us that the human, like every other solid body, is built up from the line, which makes ἐπιφάνεια as ἐπιφάνεια makes σῶμα (Theo p. 83). The same desire to adumbrate a theory of the different stages in the growth of the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν is apparent also in τρεῖς ἀποστάσεις, τέτταρας δὲ ὄρους, wherein, as we have seen, the allusion is to μῆκος, πλάτος, and βάθος, with the four limits which they imply; and a similar tendency makes itself felt in a noteworthy passage of the Latus, where it is easy to detect Pythagorean inspiration: γίγνεται δὴ πάντων γένεσις, ἡνίκ' ἂν τί πάθος ᾖ; ὁῦλον ὡς ὅποταν ἀρχὴ λαβοῦσα αὐξήν εἰς τὴν δευτέραν ἔλθῃ μετάβασιν καὶ ἀπὸ ταύτης εἰς τὴν πλησίον, καὶ μέχρι τριῶν ἔλθοῦσα αἰσθῇσιν σχῇ τοῖς αἰσθανομένοις (Latus 894 A)¹. We may even go a step further, though Plato does not here invite us to do so, and say that the substance or οὐσία of which the three ἀποστάσεις viz. μῆκος, πλάτος, and βάθος consist, is τὸ ἄπειρον: and the ὄροι which limit and determine them belong to the category of πέρας²: so that the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν, like everything else in the universe³, is a compound of πέρας and ἄπειρον⁴.

¹ It should be mentioned that Proclus finds a further astrological meaning in δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστεύμεναι, interpreting δυνάμεναι of the stars that prevail, and δυναστεύμεναι of the stars which are prevailed against, ἐν ταῖς σπορίμαῖς ὥραις (l.c. II p. 57). Το ὁμοιούντων, ἀνομοιούντων, αἰζόντων and φθινόντων Proclus also attributes an astrological as well as an arithmetical connotation (ib. pp. 57 ff.), but it is most unlikely that these words meant anything of the sort in Plato's time.

Cf. Thompson on Phaedr. 252 E and Pauly-Wissowa art. Astrologie pp. 1810 f.

² Arist. Met. N 3. 1091^a 15 ff. φανερώς γὰρ λέγουσιν (sc. Πυθαγόρειοι) ὡς τοῦ ἐνὸς συσταθέντος—εὐθὺς τὰ ἑγγίστα τοῦ ἀπείρου ὅτι εἴλεκτο καὶ ἐπεραίνετο ὑπὸ τοῦ πέρατος.

³ Philol. Fr. 3 Mullach ἐκ περαινόντων τε καὶ ἀπείρων ὃ τε κόσμος καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ συναρμύχθη. Cf. Arist. Met. A 5. 986^a 15 ff.

⁴ Cf. Phil. 27 B πρῶτον μὲν τοίνυν

Let us now briefly discuss the number 216.

The number 216 is the first number (ἐν ᾧ πρῶτον κτλ.) in which the cubes of 3, 4, 5 occur, and was known to the Pythagoreans as the ψυχολογικὸς κύβος (Anatolius in Theol. Ar. p. 40), because it expresses the period of the seven months' child, counted in days. It is also the cube of the number 6, which the Pythagoreans called the marriage number¹, owing, as we are told, to the fact that 6 represents the union of the first male number 3 and the first female number 2 ($3 \times 2 = 6$). In other respects also the number 216 maintains its character as a matrimonial and generative force: for it is the cube of the area of the zoogonic triangle and the product of the cubes of the first male and female numbers ($2^3 \times 3^3 = 216$)². 216 can likewise be produced by multiplying together the marriage number 6 and 36, and 36 is not only the sum of the Pythagorean τετρακτὺς (1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8), but an *ἀριθμὸς τέλειος καὶ τοῦ ὀρθογωνίου ἔχων τὴν αὐξήσιν*³, and also peculiarly important in the growth of the embryo, as will presently be shewn, both on other grounds and because it is the number of the *δεκανοί*⁴. Any one who cares to examine the writings of later Pythagoreanism will discover many other virtues in the number 216: but enough has been said to shew that the number was suited to express the meaning which is here attached to it, that is to say the number of the seven months' child. I will only add, in conclusion, that the number of the ἐννεάμηνον γεννητόν was itself also connected with the smaller number by adding thereto the product of the sides of the triangle: πάλιν δὲ τὰς τρεῖς ἐπ' ἀλλήλους κατὰ βάθος ποιήσαντες, καὶ τῷ προειρημένῳ προσθέτες, τὸν τῶν ἐννεαμηνῶν συντίθεμεν διακόσια ἑβδομήκοντα ἕξ (Arist. Quint. p. 89 Jahn. $3 \times 4 \times 5 + 216 = 276$). As 210 and 270 were usually held to express the exact numbers of the two periods, Aristides adds ἐν ἀμφοτέροις δὲ ὁ ἕξ περιττεῖ, γαμικὸς ὢν δι' ἣν εἴπομεν αἰτίαν viz. because συντιθέμενος ἐκ πρώτου περιττοῦ καὶ ἀρτίου: see p. 73 ed. Jahn⁵.

We have still to discuss πάντα προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἑλληλα ἀπέφηναν. It is curious that these words find an echo in a fragment attributed to Philolaus⁶ on the virtue of the number 10. The resemblance may be interpreted as an indication either of the spurious or of the genuine character of the fragments of Philolaus, but I am inclined to think that it is in favour of the authenticity, if not the genuineness, of ἀπειρον λέγω, δεύτερον δὲ πέρασ, ἔπειτ' ἐκ τούτων τρίτην καὶ γεγεννημένην οὐσίαν and other passages to the same effect in that dialogue.

¹ Jambl. in Nic. Introd. Ar. p. 34. 19 ff. Pistelli, and many other passages, some of which have already been cited.

² Cf. Macrobian. Somn. Scip. I 6. 15 f.

³ Excerpt. ex Nicom. p. 279 von Jan.

⁴ Proclus l.c. II pp. 44 f., 56 ff. et al. Cf. Aristid. Quint. p. 90 Jahn, Stob. Ecl. Phys. I § 470 ff., Sext. Emp. adv. Astrolog. pp. 728 ff. and August. de civ. Dei v cc. 1—7, and see also Cantor Gesch. d.

Math. p. 86, and Sir G. C. Lewis Ancient Astronomy pp. 306 ff.

⁵ Ancient authorities were not agreed "quoto post conceptionem mense infantes edi soleant" (Censor. de die nat. 7. 2). The different views are given by Censorinus l.c., following Varro: cf. also Gellius Noct. Att. III 16, Proclus l.c. II pp. 33 ff., and Diels Dox. Gr. pp. 427—429.

⁶ Mullach II p. 4 νῦν δὲ οὗτος (sc. ἀριθμὸς) ποττὰν ψυχὰν ἀρμόζων αἰσθήσει πάντα γνωστὰ καὶ ποτάγορα ἀλλήλοις κατὰ γνώμονος φύσιν ἀπεργάζεται.

this particular fragment, for it is not unlikely that in a passage so full as this is of Pythagorean influence there should be some verbal indications of the source whence Plato drew something of his inspiration. However this may be, we are told by Censorinus¹, whose authority, as we have already seen, is Varro, that the Pythagoreans thought the development of the embryo proceeded according to the proportions of the harmony or octave: eos vero numeros, qui in uno quoque partu aliquid adferunt mutationis, dum aut semen in sanguinem aut sanguis in carnem aut caro in hominis figuram convertitur, inter se conlatos rationem habere eam quam voces habent quae in musica σίμφωνοι vocantur. How they worked the idea will appear from these words²: quorum prior ac minor (sc. partus, i.e. the seven months' child, to which they usually assigned a life of 210 days within the womb) senario maxime continetur numero. Nam quod ex semine conceptum est, sex, ut ait (sc. Pythagoras), primis diebus umor est lacteus, deinde proximis octo sanguineus: qui octo cum ad primos sex accesserunt, faciunt primam symphoniam διὰ τεσσάρων. (That is, the fourth, which is 8:6 or 4:3.) Tertio gradu novem dies accedunt iam carnem facientes: hi cum sex illis primis collati sescuplam faciunt rationem et secundam symphoniam διὰ πέντε. (That is, the fifth, which is 9:6 or 3:2.) Tum deinceps sequentibus duodecim diebus fit corpus iam formatum: horum quoque ad eosdem sex collatio tertiam διὰ πασῶν reddit symphoniam duplici rationi subiectam. (That is, the octave, which is 12:6 or 2:1.) Now $6 + 8 + 9 + 12 = 35$, and as 35 is a ἁρμονία³, 210, which is 6×35 , contains 6 ἁρμονίαι. Plato's number is not 210, but 216: but in 216 all these ἁρμονίαι are also present, together with the marriage number 6. The statements of Censorinus are confirmed by other authorities, among whom we may cite Plut. περὶ τῆς ἐν Τιμαίῳ κτλ. 12. 1017 F, Arist. Quint. p. 85 Jahn, Proclus l.c. II pp. 34 f. and Nicomachus Excerpt. ex Nic. p. 279 von Jan⁴. If we search the works of Plato to discover how he himself conceived of the 'harmony' in the development of the child, our quest will be in vain, but it is worthy of remark that the making of Soul in the Timaeus proceeds according to the proportions of the octave⁵, and that the Universe is constituted, as Plato thought, in the

¹ l.c. 9 ad fin.

² l.c. 11.

³ Plut. περὶ τῆς ἐν Τιμαίῳ ψυχογονίας 12. 1017 F.

⁴ It should also be mentioned that Empedocles thought the διάρθρωσις began on the thirty-sixth day from conception. For the views of ancient philosophers on embryology in general see Diels Dox. Gr. pp. 417-433. I may here add that Aristides l.c. gives a few fresh points. He tells us that the sum of 1, 2, 3, 4 (in which are involved the ἴσος, διπλασίων, ἡμιόλιος, and ἐπίτριτος ratios) added to 35, yields 45, καθ' ὃν φασὶ μορφοῦσθαι τὰ ἐννεάμηνα: and $45 \times 6 = 270$, which is the number of a nine months' child. It is also important for our purpose when in speaking of the Pythagorean triangle he notices (p. 89) that the sum of the sides 3 and 4 = 7 (the πεπλοδός, in months, of the ἐπτμήνηος), of 4 and 5 = 9, of 3, 4, and 5 = 12 (the number of signs in the zodiac), and that (as we have already noted) the sum of the cubes of the sides = 216, and $216 + (3 \times 4 \times 5) = 276$, which is about the period of the nine months' child.

⁵ Tim. 35 B. In the Timaeus 44 D ff. the creation of man's body by the created gods is described. It is reasonable to suppose that the embryo was thought by Plato to develop on the same lines as same way¹. There can be little doubt that if he speculated on the subject at all, he followed in the path already marked out by the Pythagoreans, framing the Microcosm, as his manner is, on the lines of the Macrocosm.

§ 5. The meaning of the words from ὦν ἐπίτριτος to κύβων τριάδος.

The chief question which requires to be discussed in this section is 'What does Plato mean by the two harmonies?' So far as I can see, he does not, in this passage, inform us, and we are therefore justified in trying to discover his meaning from other passages in his works.

From the Republic itself we obtain little assistance: but I think that the myth of the Politicus (Pol. 268 E—274 E) furnishes us with the right solution.

It will be advisable to begin by giving a succinct analysis of the story itself.

At one time, says Plato², God himself accompanies and helps to wheel the revolving world, at another, when the times are fulfilled, he lets it go, and the Universe begins to roll back again spontaneously, ζῶν δὲ καὶ φρόνησιν εἰληχὸς ἐκ τοῦ συναρμόσαντος κατ' ἀρχάς. The reason for the reversal of the world's motion is that the Universe, since it partakes in body, is not exempt from change, but being more nearly so than is aught else corporeal, τὴν ἀνακύκλησιν εἰληχεν, ὃ τι σμικροτάτην τῆς αὐτοῦ κινήσεως παράλλαξιν. Thus Plato declares that the Universe τοτὲ μὲν ὑπ' ἄλλης συμποδηγέισθαι θείας αἰτίας, τὸ ζῆν πάλιν ἐπικτώμενον καὶ λαμβάνοντα ἀθανασίαν ἐπισκευαστὴν παρὰ τοῦ δημιουργοῦ, τοτὲ δ' ὅταν ἀνεθῇ, δι' ἑαυτοῦ αὐτὸν ἰέναι, ἀφεθέντα τοιοῦτον ὥστε ἀνάπαλιν πορεύεσθαι πολλὰς περιόδων μυριάδας³. At present the universe is rolling back (ἀνακύκλησις): in the reign of Cronus it *rolled forward*⁴. The end of the backward is the beginning of the forward movement, and when the forward ends, the backward begins. The change from either movement to the other, says Plato, ἡγεῖσθαι δεῖ τῶν περὶ τὸν οὐραϊὸν γιγνομένων τροπῶν πασῶν εἶναι μεγίστην καὶ τελεωτάτην τροπήν, and this τελεωτάτη τροπή is marked by wide-spread destruction among animals and men.

When the backward movement ends, and the forward begins, a few men are left surviving, and these suffer change in sympathy with the whole. The old grow middle-aged and young again till at last they dwindle to a point and disappear: fresh generations are born, not from one another, but from the earth: for those that died in the former cycle and were buried within the earth now rise again from the dead and in those on which the gods first made the human body, and a minute study of the Timæus from this point of view might possibly yield one or two interesting results. In Tim. 91 D Plato sums up the development of the embryo in the words μέχρι περ ἂν—ὡς εἰς ἀρουραν τὴν μήτραν ὀράτα ὑπὸ σμικρότητος καὶ ἀδιάπλαστα ζῶα κατασπείραντες καὶ πάλιν διακρίναντες μεγάλα ἐντὸς ἐκθρέψονται καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο εἰς φῶς ἀγαγόντες ζῶων ἀποτελέσωσι γένεσιν.

¹ Rep. x 617.

² Pol. 269 C ff.

³ 270 A.

⁴ 271 D, 269 A.

their turn are born old, grow young, and vanish, ὅσους μὴ θεὸς αὐτῶν εἰς ἄλλην μοῖραν ἐκόμισεν. In those days, when God ruled the rolling world, and divine shepherds kept their flocks, no creature preyed on any other, nor was there any war or strife. God was himself the shepherd of the earth-born: they had no πολιτεῖαι nor κτήσεις γυναικῶν καὶ παίδων, being born by resurrection from the ground. The earth, their mother, fed them with abundant fruits, and they toiled not, neither did they spin. Whether they were happier than we depends entirely on whether they used their manifold advantages as means to help them to attain unto wisdom: tradition says they did not.

When the forward movement ended, and μεταβολὴν ἔδει γίνεσθαι καὶ δὴ καὶ τὸ γήϊνον ἤδη πᾶν ἀνήλωτο γένος, πάσας ἐκάστης τῆς ψυχῆς τὰς γενέσεις ἀποδεδωκυίας, then the pilot of the Universe οἶον πηδαλίων οἶακος ἀφέμενος εἰς τὴν αὐτοῦ περιωπὴν ἀπέστη. Thereupon began the backward movement. At first there was σεισμός within the world, attended by destruction among all kinds of living things. The few who survive, ceasing to become young, grow old, while those just born from the earth with hoary hair die and return to the earth from which they came. Fresh generations are no longer born from the earth, but even as the world is now left to itself, so also are all its parts, and each race breeds offspring from its kind¹. After the shock of turning, προελθόντος ἱκανοῦ χρόνου, θορύβων τε καὶ ταραχῆς ἥδη πανόμενος καὶ τῶν σεισμῶν, γαλήνης ἐπιλαβόμενος εἰς τε τὸν εἰωθότα δρόμον τὸν ἑαυτοῦ κατακοσμούμενος ἦει, ἐπιμέλειαν καὶ κράτος ἔχων αὐτὸς τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ τε καὶ ἑαυτοῦ, τὴν τοῦ δημιουργοῦ καὶ πατρὸς ἀπομνημονεύων διδαχὴν εἰς δύναμιν². Gradually the Universe became less and less accurate in its movements: τούτων δὲ αὐτῷ τὸ σωματοειδὲς τῆς συγκράσεως αἴτιον, τὸ τῆς πάλαι ποτὲ φύσεως ξύντροφον, ὅτι πολλῆς ἦν μετέχον ἀταξίας πρὶν εἰς τὸν ἰὺν κόσμον ἀφικέσθαι³: it is ἡ ἔμπροσθεν ἕξις to which is due ὅσα χαλεπὰ καὶ ἀδίκῃ ἐν οὐρανῷ γίνεται. As time rolls on, the disorganization increases more and more until the world is at last in danger of perishing with all that it contains. Thereupon God, careful lest his Universe should vanish εἰς τὸν τῆς ἀνομοιότητος ἄπειρον ὄντα τόπον, takes the helm again, and reversing the motion of the world, ἀθάνατον αὐτὸν καὶ ἀγήρων ἀπεργάζεται⁴.

It would be an interesting enquiry to investigate the sources from which Plato drew the materials for this myth. That it embodies many echoes of the early cosmogonies, there can be no doubt. As I have elsewhere pointed out⁵, an essential feature of the story is already involved in two lines of Hesiod, who, in speaking of the end of the fifth or iron age in which we live, observes

Ζεὺς δ' ὀλέσει καὶ τοῦτο γένος μερόπων ἀνθρώπων, εὖτ' ἂν γεινόμενοι πολιοκρόταφοι τελέθωσιν⁶.

¹ 273 E ff.

² 273 A—B.

³ 273 B.

⁴ 273 E.

⁵ Cl. Rev. v p. 445.

⁶ Works and Days 180 f. See also Heraclitus Frag. 78 Bywater φησὶν 'Ἡράκλειτος ταῦτ' εἶναι ζῶν καὶ τεθνηκός, καὶ τὸ ἐγγηγὸς καὶ τὸ καθεῦδον, καὶ νέον καὶ γηραιόν· τάδε γὰρ μεταπεσόντα

Hesiod means that the iron age will end, and consequently a new, and presumably happier, era begin, when men are born grey-haired. We may perhaps regard the grey hairs as a sign that the time is at hand when human creatures, as in Plato's myth, will all be born with grey hairs (πολιὰ φύτα Pol. 273 E) and pass from age to infancy and fade away¹. It is tolerably clear that there was a tradition according to which old or grey-haired children were considered to be a sign of the end: for in the Testament cited by James in his account of the Revelation of St Peter², we are warned that when the end is near there shall be 'children whose appearance shall be as of those advanced in years: for they that are born shall be white-haired³.' But for our present purpose the details of the myth are of less importance and value than the underlying idea of the whole. That idea is that in the life of the Universe there are two recurrent cycles, in one of which peace and uniformity prevail, while in the other discord and dissimilarity gradually assert their sway⁴. It is also, I think, clear that the two cycles are of equal length, for the march of the Universe being regarded as progression and retrogression along one ἐκείνᾳ ἴσθι καὶ ἐκεῖνα πάλιν μεταπεσόντα ταῦτα. The last four words mean that τεθνηκός changes to ζών, καθεῦδον to ἐγρηγορός, and γηραιόν to νέον as well as reversely: so that the essence of Plato's story would seem to be present here also, if we are to understand the participle μεταπεσόντα in its full and proper sense. In the happy land of the Meropes, hard by the river of Pleasure, there are some fabled trees, of whose fruit he that tastes γίνεται κατὰ βραχὺ νεώτερος, τὸ μὲν γὰρ γήρας ἀπορρίψας, ἐπὶ τὴν ἀκμὴν ὑποστρέφει, εἴτα ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν μερικίων ἡλικίαν ἀναχωρεῖ, εἴτα παῖς γίνεται, εἴτα βρέφος, καὶ ἐπὶ τούτοις ἐξαναλώθη (Theopompus Fr. 76, Müller F. H. G. i p. 290). A careful study of Empedocles' cosmology will also discover some interesting analogies with the myth of the Politicus.

¹ In Hesiod's description of the golden age, the return of which he seems to hope for after the age of iron has passed away, there are some features which resemble the life of Plato's ἡγήνεῖς: see especially Works and Days 109 ff. The curious expression of Hesiod αἰεὶ δὲ πόδας καὶ χεῖρας ὅμοιοι perhaps receives some light from Symp. 189 E, and we should remember that ὁμοίότης is the dominant feature in the progressive cycle of the Politicus. It is worth while to compare the whole of the Aristophanic travesty in Plato's Symposium with the myth of the Politicus, and the latter with Hesiod l.c.

² p. 57.

³ Professor Ridgeway (Early Age of Greece i p. 628) interprets πολιοκρόταφοι in Hesiod l.c. as 'fair-haired' and thinks the line εὔτ' ἂν γεινόμενοι πολιοκρόταφοι τελέθωσιν "some sort of oracular utterance referring to fair-haired invaders of some Teutonic stock," remarking that, according to Hesiod, the children of the Iron Age 'are born with white hair.' The exact translation is however 'when they are hoary-headed at their birth,' and it is quite clear from Zeus δ' ὀλέσει καὶ τοῦτο γένος μερόπων ἀνθρώπων εὔτ' ἂν κτλ. that the white hairs foreshadow the end of the Iron Age: so that we should look for parallels to the Hesiodic conception in passages which, like the myth of the Politicus, describe the end of one epoch and the beginning of the next, and not to Diod. Sic. v 32. 2. Plato's πολιὰ φύτα (Pol. 273 E) is an exact parallel to γεινόμενοι πολιοκρόταφοι, and the rest of the Platonic myth shews us how we ought to interpret the words of Hesiod.

⁴ The student of ancient philosophy will naturally recall the cosmological periods of Empedocles: but it would lead us too far to institute a comparison between them and Plato's story. I may say, however, that the myth appears to me to confirm the view of Burnet, who maintains that we are now living in the second of Empedocles' periods, that is, "in the period when strife is gradually gaining the upper hand" (Early Gk Phil. p. 249). The fundamental difference between Plato and Empedocles is that in Plato Strife never obtains the victory altogether, for as soon as the Universe is in serious danger, the Deity steps in.

and the same circle, the forward revolution has to traverse the same space as the reverse, and nothing is said of any difference in the speed of the two revolutions¹. That the cycles occupy a long period of time may be inferred from πολλὰς περιόδων μυριάδας in 270 A.

Now what do these two cycles represent? If we are to believe Deuschle², one of them is 'the transcendent realm of Ideas,' the other 'the world of appearances,' and the myth is intended to shew us 'the relations existing between the world of Ideas and that of phenomena, and the dependence of the latter on the former.' It is surely unnecessary to refute a view which requires us to assign a metaphysical significance to the γηγενεῖς. Deuschle's interpretation belongs to a style of criticism which always makes Plato sing the same old strain, forgetting that his was a παναρμόνιος ψυχή³. To my mind it is quite clear that in the myth of the Politicus, we have before us an astronomical, and not a metaphysical conception. The prelude to the story indicates in what direction we should look for its significance: ἦν τοίνυν καὶ ἐτι ἔσται τῶν πάλαι λεχθέντων πολλά τε ἄλλα καὶ δὴ καὶ τὸ περὶ τὴν Ἀτρέως τε καὶ Θυέστου λεχθεῖσαν ἔριν φάσμα—τὸ περὶ τῆς μεταβολῆς δύσεως τε καὶ ἀνατολῆς ἡλίου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀστρῶν, ὡς ἄρα ὅθεν μὲν ἀνατέλλει νῦν, εἰς τοῦτον τότε τὸν τόπον ἐδύετο, ἀνέτελλε δ' ἐκ τοῦ ἐναντίου, τότε δὲ δὴ μαρτυρήσας ἄρα ὁ θεὸς Ἀτρεῖ μετέβαλεν αὐτὸ ἐπὶ τὸ νῦν σχῆμα (268 E f.): and Plato himself tells us that the myth will explain this astronomical revolution as well as other stories of a far distant past (269 B)⁴.

The only possible explanation of the two cycles is that each of them represents a Great Year. The τροπή which ends one cycle and begins another is said by Plato to be τροπῶν πασῶν—μεγίστη καὶ τελεωτάτη τροπή, and the number of the period which culminates in such a τελεωτάτη τροπή is a τέλειος ἀριθμός in precisely the same sense as the number of the Great Year (Tim. 39 D), that is to say, it is a 'final' or 'consummating' number, and ends an epoch in the life of the world. But we must beware of supposing, as I formerly did, that the Great Year which is symbolized by the forward movement expresses the period during which the world is made, or that the world is dissolved when the ἀνακύκλησις ends: for it is clear from 273 B, C that the creation of the world is prior to both movements, and 273 D shews that the κόσμος, though it may be storm-tossed (χειμασθεῖς), is never actually wrecked.

The next step in our argument is to connect the two 'harmonies' of the Republic with the two cycles of the Politicus.

¹ In 271 A we find περιφορά applied to the forward movement: and in 273 E περίοδος is said of the backward. The life of the Universe is thus pictured as the revolution of a single circle. The plural περίοδοι in 269 C and in 270 A refers to the revolutions of the world on its own axis, and not to the two cycles which Plato describes.

² Der Plat. Politikos pp. 6 ff.

³ δύο γὰρ αὗται ψυχαὶ λέγονται γενέσθαι παναρμόνιοι Olymp. Vit. Pl. 6. The reference is to Homer and Plato.

⁴ The legend about an ἀνακύκλησις of the sun in the time of Atreus is mentioned also by Euripides Orest. 1001 ff. and El. 726 ff.; and from the second of these passages we can see that the story was by some interpreted as the mythical expression of a permanent change in the movement of the heavens. Cf. also the well-known story of the Egyptian priests in Hdt. II 142 and see Sir G. C. Lewis Ancient Astronomy pp. 69, 133.

We note, in the first place, that the harmonies are equal to one another, and that they are of vast extent (12,960,000 days). In like manner, the two cycles in the myth are of the same duration and occupy *πολλὰς περιόδων μυριάδας*¹ (Pol. 270 A). Secondly, during the progressive movement which precedes our era, the dominant features are concord and harmony—in one word ὁμοιότης: during the second, under which we live, strife and discord, or in one word ἀνομοιότης, prevail (Pol. 273 A—D). Now the first of the two harmonies, which I take to represent the progressive cycle, is ἴσην ἰσάκις, ἑκατὸν τοσαυτάκις, i.e. as we have seen 3600²; whereas the second is προμήκης or oblong, the product of two unequal numbers viz. 4800 × 2700: and the Pythagoreans were in the habit of calling square numbers ὅμοιοι, and oblong numbers ἀνόμοιοι: see Iambl. in Nic. p. 82 Pistelli οἱ δὲ παλαιοὶ ταυτοὺς τε καὶ ὁμοίους (sc. τοὺς τετραγώνους) ἐκάλουν διὰ τὴν περὶ τὰς πλευράς τε καὶ γωνίας ὁμοιότητα καὶ ἰσότητα, ἀνομοίους δὲ ἐκ τοῦ ἐναντίου καὶ θατέρους τοὺς ἑτερομήκεις³. It may also be observed that the harmonies, viewed by themselves, in the connexion where they occur, clearly denote some vast periodic cycles, and none of the cycles recognized in antiquity is so large as 12,960,000 days except the Great Year. That Plato should pass from describing the period of gestation in the human race to an account of the Great Year is natural enough: and the arrangement is the same in Censorinus' de die natali (cc. 5—19), the whole of which, according to Diels⁴, is taken from Varro. In conclusion I may note that Aristotle himself appears to have connected the Platonic number with the myth of the Politicus, and that at all events he regarded the Number as expressing a certain cycle, at the end of which there is a change: see Part iii. My conclusion therefore is that the harmony 3600² measures the cycle of Uniformity, and the harmony 4800 × 2700 the cycle of Dissimilarity described in the Politicus.

Let us now see how Plato builds up the two numbers. Each of the two numbers is constructed out of the sides of the Pythagorean triangle 3, 4, 5: for each of them is only (3 × 4 × 5)⁴. We have already met with the triangle as a zoogonic agency, and here it establishes its claim to the title κοσμικόν, by which, as we are told by Proclus⁴, it was known to ¹ In Tim. 39 D it is said that the Great Year is measured τῷ τοῦ ταυτοῦ καὶ ὁμοίως ἴοντος κύκλῳ, that is to say, 'by the number of days and nights' it contains, as Mr Archer-Hind points out. Now περιόδων here means the diurnal revolutions of the heavens, which make days and nights; and the 'harmonies' of the Republic are also expressed in days, so that both in the Politicus and in the Republic Plato employs the unit of measurement which the Timaeus prescribes in the formal definition of the Great Year.

² It should be mentioned that Proclus also observes the prevalence of τὸ ὅμοιον in the first harmony, and τὸ ἀνόμοιον in the second: see Kroll's edition l.c. II pp. 52 ff.

But when he proceeds to talk of the first harmony as the ὁδὸς from νοητὸν to νοητόν, connected with angels et hoc genus omne, and designates the second as the ὁδὸς from γένεσις to γένεσις, guarded by 'the Ephors of Descent' (οἱ τῶν καθόδων ἑφοροί), and when he further canonizes Prometheus as the προστάτης of both because he stole the fire from Heaven, we can only regret that Plato should ever have been made the vehicle of such vagaries.

³ Dox. Gr. p. 188.

⁴ l.c. II p. 45. 23 εἰκότως ἄρα κοσμικὸν τρίγωνον εἰώθασιν τοῦτο καλεῖν οἱ τε ἄλλοι σοφοὶ καὶ οἱ τὰ Αἰγυπτίων ἰστοροῦντες κτλ. Proclus expounds the appellation by shewing, in some detail how the heavenly some ancient thinkers, ὡς πάντων τὰς ἀρχὰς ἔχον καὶ περιέχον ἐν ἑαυτῷ. The force of the words ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων can now be more readily apprehended than before. It has been pointed out in Part i § 1 that the arithmetical application of ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων in the Platonic Number is to the making of the like and unlike harmonies, that is, the square and the oblong: what is their philosophical application in this passage? It is that they are the makers of the like and unlike cycles in the world's history, the era in which concord and uniformity prevail, and that in which discord and dissimilarity gradually assert their sway. It will be remembered that we were able to interpret ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων as the numbers 3, 4 and 5 by means of the second part of the Platonic Number, viz. ὦν ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν κτλ.; and it is by means of the second part of the Number that we are able also to understand the suitability of these words to describe 3, 4 and 5 in the context where they occur. The period of the 'human creature' is fitly constructed out of the elements which build up the cycles of the 'divine creature': for man is the μικρός, and the Universe the μέγας κόσμος¹. The words αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων 'waxing and waning' have also a reference to the two cosmic periods. We may regard the first of the circles as representing the αὔξις or growth of the Whole, and the second as representing its φθίσις or decline. And if we make the numbers 3, 4 and 5 the cosmic ἀρχαί, and follow the method of Pythagorean physics, the αὔξις or growth of the Universe is only the 'waxing' of these numbers on a large scale, its φθίσις only their 'decline.' The Universe renews its energy and strength because its elemental forces expand and grow: and when they begin to flag and fail, ἐπὶ διαφθορᾷ κίνδυνον αὐτοῦ τε ἀφικνέται καὶ τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ (Pol. 273 D).

Such is the special applicability of ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων in connexion with the Platonic Number. But these words would have a still more comprehensive meaning in Pythagorean theory, and while we recognize their special fitness as a description of 3, 4 and 5 in the Platonic number, we are bound, I think, to suppose that Plato was conscious of their wider significance, and intended us to think of it too. According to Philolaus Fr. 3 Mullach ἀνάγκα τὰ εἶντα εἶμειν πάντα ἢ περαίνοντα ἢ ἄπειρα, ἢ περαίνοντά τε καὶ ἄπειρα, ἄπειρα δὲ μόνον οὐ κα εἶη: and as ὁμοιότης belongs to the category of πέρας, and ἀνομοιότης, ἀνωμαλία, ἀναρμοστία etc. to that of ἄπειρον², we may express what he means in other words by saying that everything in the Universe is either like or unlike, or both like and unlike. Philolaus continues ἐπεὶ bodies and everything connected with them conform to this triangle and its manifold properties. However extravagant and absurd the particular fancies of Proclus and his authorities may be, the idea which underlies them is Platonic, viz. that τὰ οὐράνια are the expression in time and space of mathematical shapes and numbers: see App. I to Book VII.

¹ Cf. Arist. Phys. VIII. 2, 252^b 24 ff. εἰ

δ' ἐν ζῳῳ τοῦτο δυνατόν γενέσθαι, τί κωλύει τὸ αὐτὸ συμβῆναι καὶ κατὰ τὸ πᾶν; εἰ γὰρ ἐν μικρῷ κόσμῳ γίνεται, καὶ ἐν μεγάλῳ, and Zeller³ II 2 p. 488, III 2 p. 397 with Stein's excursus on Mikro- und Makrokosmos der Stoa in his Psychologie d. Stoa I pp. 205—214.

² Cf. Phil. 16 C ff., 23 C ff., and Pol. 273 D τὸν τῆς ἀνομοιότητος ἄπειρον ὄντα τόπον.

τοῖνν φαίνεται οὐτ' ἐκ περαινότων πάντων ἔντα οὐτ' ἐξ ἀπείρων πάντων, δηλὸν τ' ἄρα ὅτι ἐκ περαινότων τε καὶ ἀπείρων ὁ τε κόσμος καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ συναρμολόγη. Thus the sides of the Pythagorean triangle, regarded as the universal ἀρχαί, the ἀρχαί not only of the whole, but of each of its parts, including the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν, may well be called in the words of Plato ὁμοιοῦντά τε καὶ ἀνομοιοῦντα 'makers of like and unlike': for 'like and unlike' sums up the κόσμος and all within it. They wax when things are made and wane when things are unmade, rising from lines into planes, and from planes into solids, and afterwards fading from solids into planes, and from planes into lines again. This is in perfect harmony with the method of Pythagorean physics, in which, as we have seen already, the plane is made up of lines, and the solid of planes¹.

So much for the meaning of ὁμοιοῦντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιοῦντων καὶ αἰξόντων καὶ φθινόντων. If we now proceed to scrutinize the two harmonies in detail, we shall find that many of the factors are full of significance.

We know from the *Laws*² that Plato counted 360 'days' in the year: the Great Year, which is 3600^2 or $(360 \times 10)^2 = 360^2 \times 10^2$ days³, is therefore the square of the number of days in the ordinary year multiplied by the square of the Pythagorean perfect number 10. We are now able to express the period in years: it is $\frac{12,960,000}{360} = 36000$ years. Further, 3600^2 is $360^2 \times 100$. Now we know from the *Republic*⁴ that Plato reckoned the duration of human life as 100 years, i.e. $100 \times 360 = 36000$ days. It follows that a day in the life of the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν corresponds to a year in an aeon of the θεῖον γεννητόν. Further, in arriving at the first harmony, Plato is careful, as we have seen, to direct our attention especially to the number 36: each side, he tells us, is so many times 100, i.e. 36 times 100. We have seen on p. 293 that 36 is an exceedingly significant number in many ways: but its special significance here may be that it suggests to us the reason why the number 12,960,000 is called a harmony. We have already found that the number 35 is a ἁρμονία because it contains all the proportions of a ¹ Cf. also Tim. 53 C—56 C, 81 C, D, 89 C. It will be observed that it is the inroads of ἀνομιότης which lead to decay and dissolution in Tim. 81 C, D ὅταν δ' ἡ βίβα τῶν τριγῶνων χαλᾷ διὰ τὸ πολλοὺς ἀγῶνας ἐν πολλῷ χρόνῳ πρὸς πολλὰ ἡγῶνισθαι, τὰ μὲν τῆς τροφῆς εἰσιόντα οὐκέτι δύναται τέμνειν εἰς ὁμοιότητα ἐαυτοῖς, αὐτὰ δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν ἐξωθεν ἐπεισιόντων εὐπετῶς διαιρεῖται· φθίνει δὴ πᾶν ἱζόν ἐν τούτῳ κρατούμενον, γῆρας τε ὀνομάζεται τὸ πάθος. τέλος δέ, ἐπειδὴ τῶν περὶ τὸν μυελὸν τριγῶνων οἱ ξυναρμωθέντες μηκέτι ἀντέχῳσι δεσμοὶ τῷ πόνῳ δισπτάμενοι, μεθίσσι τοὺς τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτῆς δεσμούς, ἡ δὲ λυθεῖσα κατὰ φύσιν μεθ' ἡδονῆς ἐξέπτατο.

² VI 758 B. The number of Senators in the Laws is 360: these are to be divided into 12 sections of 30 each, and each section is to administer the State for one month.

The number 60 with its multiples and divisors is the dominant number throughout the Laws. 360 'days' is of course only an ideal division of the year: see § 6. Plato elsewhere recognises (with Philolaus) $364\frac{1}{2}$ days (Rep. IX 587 E, where see note).

³ See note 1 on p. 299.

⁴ X 615 B, where see note. Sir James Crichton-Browne in an address on old age (see the Times of Oct. 2, 1891), said that "he thought it a good working hypothesis that the natural life of man was 100, and that in so far as it fell short of that, it was 'curtailed of fair proportion.' He would especially exhort medical students to start with a resolution that they would not be content with a duration of life shorter than that either for themselves or for their patients."

ἁρμονία or scale. Now in 36 we have a harmony plus 1, which is ἡ πάντων ἀρχή (Excerpt. ex Nicom. p. 279 von Jan): so that the Number of the Great Year contains $\frac{12000000}{36} = 360,000$ ἁρμονίαι, plus 360,000 units, each harmony having the ἡ πάντων ἀρχή added to it. In like manner the number 216 contained 6 ἁρμονίαι together with 6 units: so that the larger number is called a harmony for the same reason as the smaller number 216 was said to render πάντα προσήγορα καὶ ῥητὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα. The analogy between the Microcosm and the Macrocosm could not be more faithfully observed. In the second harmony the number 100 is still predominant. It is 'of 100 squares of the rational diameter of 5, minus one each, and of 100 cubes of 3.' Now

$$4800 \times 2700 = (480 \times 10) \times (270 \times 10) = (480 \times 270) \times 10^2.$$

(Just so the first harmony is $360^2 \times 10^2$.) 270 is the Pythagorean period of gestation for a nine months' child, and 480, which = 210 + 270, is the sum of the usually recognised periods of gestation for children born after seven and after nine months¹. The Great Year of the Universe may therefore be denoted by a rectangle whose sides are respectively the longer period and the sum of the longer and shorter periods of gestation in the race of man, after it has been multiplied by the square of the Pythagorean perfect number 10. As the Universe is a 'magnus homo,' and man a 'brevis mundus,' these and similar analogies may well have seemed significant to the Pythagoreans, whom Plato is certainly copying here.

§ 6. The number 36000.

We have thus seen that the harmonies represent two recurrent aeons in the life of the Universe, in which the World waxes and wanes alternately. Before we proceed to discuss ἀριθμὸς γεωμετρικός, τοιούτου κύριος, ἀμεινόνων τε καὶ χειρόνων γενέσεων, let us briefly explain the system upon which Plato's reckoning is based.

The number 36000 rests upon the Babylonian sexagesimal system³, which made 60 the unit, and multiplied it by the factors of itself. This mode of reckoning, which to the present day divides our hour into 60 minutes, and our minute into 60 seconds, was widely spread in very early times, and there are traces of it as far west as Italy. It survived in the Latin use of sescenti for an indefinitely large number, and in the period of 6000 years, which was the duration of a dynasty of Etruscan gods. Among the Greeks we find traces of the sexagesimal system as a measure of time as early as Hesiod⁴

¹ Arist. Quint. I.c. Cf. also Theolog. Arith., p. 40 Ast, Cens. 11 and Macrob. Somn. Scip. 16. 15—16. Tannery (Rev. Phil. 1 p. 179 note) also supposes that in 2700 there is a reference to the nine months' gestation.

² Macrob. Somn. Scip. 11 12. 11. The same expression is used by Philo: see Zeller³ III 2, p. 397.

³ Full information on this system will be found in Brandis, Das Münz- Mass- und Gewichtswesen in Vorderasien, pp. 7—21, and in Cantor, Gesch. der Math., pp. 67—94.

⁴ Works and Days 562, 764 et al. It is of course obvious that there must even in Hesiod's time have been some way of making this division correspond with the

and Cleobulus¹, and Herodotus expressly tells us that the Greeks borrowed from the Babylonians the division of the day into 12 parts². It is therefore unnecessary to suppose that Plato borrowed his reckoning directly from the Babylonians, even although, if Berosus may be trusted, 36000 years was actually the duration of a Babylonian cycle³. What it is of importance to note is, that the sexagesimal system was very commonly used in calculating long periods of time, from the notion that the year could be divided into 360 equal parts corresponding to the 360 degrees of the circle yearly traversed by the sun⁴. Thus among the Indians 360 years was 'a year of the gods,' 3600 a 'cycle of Brihaspati,' 216000 a 'cycle of Prajapati,' 4,320,000 an 'age of the gods,' and the 'kalpa' 1000 'ages of the gods' or one 'day of Brahma,' while twice this number, or 8,640,000,000 years, was 'a day and a night of Brahma'⁵.

Let us now see how the number 36000 is connected with other Greek cycles.

It does not appear that Anaximander, Anaximenes, Diogenes of Apollonia, or Anaxagoras defined the period during which the world endures, although they held the Universe to be *φθαρτός*⁶.

According to Stobaeus⁷ the Great Year of Heraclitus was 18000 years, that is, one half of Plato's. Schuster's conjecture⁸, that the time from one ἐκπύρωσις to another was reckoned by Heraclitus at 36000 years, 18000 being the ὁδὸς κάτω, and 18000 the ὁδὸς ἄνω, is in harmony with the tone of Heraclitus' philosophy, and brings Heraclitus very near to Plato⁹, although no ἐκπύρωσις marked the end of Plato's year.

The nearest approach to the doctrine of a Great Year in Empedocles is the theory that the wicked δαίμονες are condemned 'to wander away solar year. See Ideler, Handbuch der Chronologie I p. 257 ff., for more evidence on the subject.

¹ If the epigram quoted by Stob. I 240 is genuine.

² Hdt. II 109. It would appear that for astronomical purposes the Babylonians divided the day into 60 parts: see Cantor l.c. p. 82.

³ I take this from Brandis, Das Münz-etc., p. 11. Compare Sir G. C. Lewis's Ancient Astronomy, pp. 400 ff. The Greek and Egyptian cycle of 36525 years (ibid. pp. 282, 389) is reached by a similar calculation, viz. by multiplying the number of days in the year (taken as 365 $\frac{1}{4}$) by 100. Lewis's excellent and learned work is a mine of information (see pp. 256 ff.) on the part played by the numbers 60 and 360 in the astronomical reckonings of the ancients.

⁴ Martin, Rev. Archéol. XIII pp. 287 ff.

⁵ Martin, l.c. p. 286. Martin interprets the verses of Hesiod beginning ἐννέα τοι ἔσει γενεὴς λακέρυθα κορώνη 'ἀνδρῶν ἡβώντων' (Plut. de def. Or. 415 c) by taking 400 years as the life of the κορώνη, and thus assigns 43,200 (= 3600 × 12) years to the phoenix, whose appearance was generally supposed to herald some kind of new era, and 432,000 years to the nymphs. 432,000 years was according to the Chaldaeans the period from the creation to the deluge.

⁶ Stob. I 417: cf. Zeller⁵ I pp. 231, 251, 271.

⁷ I 264. Cens. 18. 11 assigns 10800 (= 30 × 360) years to Heraclitus' cycle.

⁸ Zeller⁴ I p. 640 note 2.

⁹ The ὁδὸς κάτω leads to the formation of the world, and the ὁδὸς ἄνω to its dissolution. It is the same way, now up, now down. Just so in the Politicus the περίοδος is the same, now forward, and now backward. Burnet's attempt to shew that Heraclitus did not believe in a periodical ἐκπύρωσις is, as he himself confesses, "in direct contradiction with the statements of most writers, ancient and modern," and appears to me unsuccessful (Early Gk Phil. pp. 160 ff.).

from the blessed for thrice ten thousand seasons¹. Zeller rightly observes that this in no way determines the duration of the world, since the δαίμονες must have lived before the beginning of their wanderings and will live after they are done.

A comparison with the Great Year of Philolaus will not yield any satisfactory result, because, as we know from Censorinus², he counted 364 $\frac{1}{2}$ days in the year. We can only say that had he counted 360 days in the year, then, according to the method of reckoning which he employs, his great year would have been $59 \times 360 = 21240$ years, which is $\frac{59}{100}$ of Plato's cycle—and Philolaus (as well as Oenopides) recognised a smaller cycle of 59 years³.

Aristotle is hostile to the idea of a Great Year, and the only passage which could possibly be otherwise construed is in the first book of the Meteorologica 14 p. 352^a 28 ff.⁴; but the most that can be made out of his words is an assertion of the periodical recurrence of partial floods.

Of later authorities, it is enough to mention the Stoics, whose great year was 365×18000 years, i.e. $\frac{365}{25}$ times the great year of Plato, and the astronomer Ptolemy, whose great cycle, like Plato's, was 36000 years⁵.

It will be seen that the Great Year contained in Plato's Number was arrived at in the same way as that of many of the other Greek philosophers.

In conclusion, I may now be permitted to draw attention to the fact that the period of 36000 years is sometimes actually called the 'great Platonic year' in early astronomical treatises. In Barocius' Cosmographia 1 p. 6 (Venetiis, 1598) I find these words said of the movement of the ninth heaven: "qui profecto motus complet unam perfectam revolutionem spatio 36000 annorum iuxta Ptolemaei opinionem; iuxta autem Albategnii, spatio 23760 annorum; iuxta vero Alphonsi, et quorundam aliorum sententiam. 49000 annorum; quod utique" (i.e. whatever its duration is) "temporis spatium vocant magnum Platonicum annum." Even more precise is the Sphaera of Johannes de Sacro-Bosco (ed. Burgersdicius, 1639) p. 12: "orbis nonus centenis quibusque annis iuxta Ptolemaeum unum gradum proprio motu conficit, totamque periodum peragit annis 36000 (quod spatium magnus annus appellari solet, aut annus Platonicus), subiectasque sphaeras una secum circumducit." The work from which this sentence is quoted was a regular text-book of Astronomy till the Copernican theory prevailed over the Ptolemaic: and 36000 years could hardly have come to be called the annus Platonicus in a text-book of Ptolemaic Astronomy unless Ptolemy or some of his predecessors or commentators had understood the Platonic Number, for there is no other passage in Plato which gives the duration of the Great Year. We can even perhaps trace the knowledge of the Number as far back as Hipparchus. The precession of the Equinoxes, which is

¹ Mullach 1 p. 1: cf. Zeller⁴ 1 p. 706.

² Ch. 19. See also Tannery Rev. Phil. XIII pp. 213 ff.

³ Cens. 18. 8: cf. Stob. 1 264.

⁴ This explains the remark of Censori-nus in 18. 11, as Usener has pointed out (Rhein. Mus. XXVIII pp. 392 ff.).

⁵ See Hultsch Zeitschrift f. Math. etc. 1.c. p. 57.

in reality caused by the movement of the axis of the Earth round the pole of the Ecliptic, was—so we are told—discovered by Hipparchus, and the period of time during which the equinoctial points make a complete revolution was maintained by that astronomer to be 36000 years (Hultsch in Pauly-Wissowa art. Astronomie p. 1851). It is difficult to believe that Hipparchus was uninfluenced by Plato's number, if indeed the whole theory of a Great Year is not—as I am sometimes inclined to suspect that it is—connected with some pre-Hipparchian notions about the equinoctial περίοδος, the real extent of which is not 36000, but about 26700 years.

§ 7. ξύμπας δὲ οὗτος—γενέσεων.

'This whole number, a number measuring the earth, is lord of better and worse births.' The number 12,960,000 may fairly be called γεωμετρικός in the ordinary sense of the term, for it is arrived at by mathematical calculations, and expressed in two mathematical figures, the one an oblong, and the other a square. But what Plato chiefly means, as I believe, is that the number in question, since it expresses the duration of an aeon of the World, is τῷ ὄντι γεω-μετρικός (cf. Rep. vi 511 B n.), and measures a period in the lifetime of the Earth. Plato loves to play on the etymological meaning of words, as for example in viii 555 A ὀλίγοις τισὶν ἑαυτοῦ πολεμῶν ὀλιγαρχικῶς τὰ πολλὰ ἡττᾶται καὶ πλουτεῖ, and it is appropriate and right that in a passage where so many of the mathematical terms are symbolic, γεωμετρικός, coming at the climax of the whole, should be symbolic too¹.

In what sense is this number 'lord of better and worse births'? I think the simple and sufficient explanation of Plato's words is that in the early stages of our cycle of 36,000 years, before disintegration and dissimilarity have gone far, γενέσεις are for the most part ἀμείνονες, whereas later they are apt to be χείρονες because the Universe is growing χείρων. Good and bad births are consequently determined by this number². See also § 2 above and Part iii, with the notes on 546 c. There is in Plato's theory a suggestion of the view expressed by Lucretius when he wrote:

Tristis item vetulae vitis sator atque vietae temporis incusat molen caelumque fatigat:
nec tenet omnia paulatim tabescere et ire ad capulum spatio aetatis defessa vetusto³.

I have elsewhere⁴ pointed out that Plato, in order to pave the way

¹ Cf. Proclus in Tim. 270 E, and 271 A, B. In speaking of the ἀριθμὸς τέλειος of the Great Year, Proclus says ὁ χρόνος μετρεῖ τὴν ὅλην κίνησιν καὶ τὸ τέλος αὐτῆς ἐπιστρέφει πρὸς τὴν ἀρχήν· διὸ καὶ ὁ ἀριθμὸς ἐπονομάζεται καὶ τέλειος, and again μετρεῖ δ' οὖν ὁ ὅλος χρόνος ὁ ἐγκόσμιος τὴν μίαν ζωὴν τοῦ παντός.

² Proclus, as we should expect, has resort to all manner of astrological explanations of τοιοῦτου κύριος, ἀμεινόνων τε καὶ χειρόνων γενέσεων: see his in temp. comm. II pp. 70 ff. al. I have already said that I can see no justification for reading theories of this kind into Plato.

³ II 1171—1174.

⁴ VIII 543 A n.

for his 'philosophy of history' in Books VIII and IX, plants his ideal city—only of course θεωρίας καὶ διδασκαλίας χάριν—in the distant past, and in accordance with this fancy we may picture it as belonging to the early stages of our present era of 36,000 years¹.

Some may be disposed to ask the question: 'Did Plato think that these speculations have any serious value?' I am not sure that an editor is called upon to reply: but it is certain that his reply will convince no one who is not convinced already. According to Prof. Huxley (Life II p. 426) "Plato was the founder of all the vague and unsound thinking that has burdened philosophy, deserting facts for possibilities, and then, after long and beautiful stories of what might be, telling you he doesn't quite believe them himself." The unconscious humour of the words in italics may be allowed to atone for the libel which precedes. Plato does not here tell us that 'he doesn't quite believe' the Number: but he warns us in advance that the Muses are jesting. But as there is often a touch of playfulness when Plato professes to be serious, so there is usually an undercurrent of serious meaning in the frolics of his Muse. De iocis non est disputandum: every reader, according to his nationality and nature, will find his appropriate food for laughter in these pleasant 'Babylonian numbers.' The only thing that I venture to assert is that the point of the jest cannot be that it is unintelligible. About the serious side of the episode there is less room for difference of opinion. Plato was profoundly convinced of the truth, which inspires and animates all these calculations, that the Universe and all within it are created and sustained by mathematical laws. The grand old saying, θεὸς ἀεὶ γεωμετερεῖ, is the abiding lesson of the Platonic Number.

PART III.

In this division of the Appendix I propose, by way of epilogue, fully to explain the passage in which Aristotle refers to and criticises the Platonic Number. The duty cannot be evaded, because it has been alleged that Aristotle explains τρὶς αὐξηθεῖς in a different way from that in which the phrase has been explained in Part I of this Appendix². In

¹ If we understand τροπή in Arist. Pol. E 12. 1316^a 17 to refer to the τροπή of the Politicus, and press the criticism of Aristotle for all that it is worth, it would seem that Aristotle thought Plato assigns his city to the previous era, before the μεγίστη καὶ τελεωτάτη τροπή took place. I do not believe that Aristotle seriously thought anything of the sort, but if he did, he was certainly mistaken. Plato's ideal city contains of course some features in common with ὁ ἐπὶ Κρόνου βίος, such as the principle of 'No property in wives' (Pol. 271 E), but in other respects the life of the γηγενεῖς is ludicrously unlike the life of Plato's citizens, and in the Republic we do not hear of any τροπή ushering in the change from Aristocracy to the Spartan State.

² Cl. Rev. I.c. pp. 154, 243. Mr Monro's own explanation of Aristotle's criticism does not pretend to be exhaustive, and involves, as will presently be shewn, several grave mistakes, even if we treat it as a partial explanation and nothing more. That of Sussehl is more complete but hardly less erroneous: see his Aristoteles' Politik II pp. 369—378. Newman's treatment of the subject is confessedly tentative and incomplete (Vol. IV pp. 481—483).

point of fact, as we shall see, Aristotle's criticism, so far as it goes, is completely in harmony with the results of our investigations.

The words of Aristotle are as follows (Pol. E 12. 1316^a 1—17):

ἐν δὲ τῇ πολιτείᾳ λέγεται μὲν περὶ τῶν μεταβολῶν ὑπὸ τοῦ Σωκράτους, οὐ μόντοι λέγεται καλῶς· τῆς τε γὰρ ἀρίστης πολιτείας καὶ πρώτης οὐσίας οὐ λέγει τὴν μεταβολὴν ἰδίως. φησὶ γὰρ αἵτιον εἶναι τὸ μὴ μένειν μηθέν ἄλλ' ἐν τινι περιόδῳ μεταβάλλειν, ἀρχὴν δ' εἶναι τούτων ὧν ἐπίτритος πνθμὴν περπάδι συνζυγείς δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται, λέγων ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἰσθμὸς τοῦτου γένηται στερεός, ὡς τῆς φύσεώς ποτε φουούσης φανύλους καὶ ἀρεῖτους τῆς παιδείας, τοῦτο μὲν οὖν αὐτὸ λέγων ἴσως οὐ κακῶς· ἐνδέχεται γὰρ εἶναι τινας οὓς παιδεύθῃναι καὶ γενέσθαι σπουδαίους ἀνδρας ἀδύνατον. ἄλλ' αὕτη τί ἂν ἰδίως εἴη μεταβολὴ τῆς ὑπ' ἐκείνου λεγομένης ἀρίστης πολιτείας μᾶλλον ἢ τῶν ἄλλων πασῶν καὶ τῶν γιγνομένων πάντων; καὶ διὰ γε τοῦ χρόνου, δι' ὃν λέγει πάντα μεταβάλλειν, καὶ τὰ μὴ ἅμα ἀρξάμενα γίνεσθαι ἅμα μεταβάλλει, οἷοι εἰ τῇ προτέρᾳ ἡμέρᾳ ἐγένετο τῆς τροπῆς, ἅμα ἅρα μεταβάλλει¹.

The words from φησί to πάντων concern us first. They mean: 'for he says that the cause of change is the fact that nothing abides, but all things change in a certain cycle of time, and that the beginning of change comes from' (lit. 'is of') 'those' (sc. elements or numbers), 'whereof 4, 3, coupled with 5, furnish two harmonies, meaning, when the number of this diagram is made solid, the theory being that Nature sometimes produces inferior children and children who defy education. In this particular point, indeed, Socrates is probably right: for there may well be persons who cannot be educated and made into good men. But why should this be a change peculiar to the constitution which he calls the best more than to every other constitution and everything that comes into being?'

In this sentence Aristotle distinguishes between Plato's account of the cause of change and his account of the beginning of change. The cause of change, he tells us, is τὸ μὴ μένειν μηθέν, ἀλλ' ἐν τινι περιόδῳ μεταβάλλειν; and the beginning of change is 'when the number of this diagram is made solid.' In the words of Schneider², who was, I think, the first to apprehend the meaning of this passage: 'τούτων ad ὧν pertinet et sensus verborum talis est: Principium mutationis positum esse in numeris—quorum sesquitertia radix etc. Deinde verba λέγων ὅταν declarant tempus, quo Plato initium mutationis posuerit.' Now what is 'this diagram'? There can be no question—nor is the point disputed—after the evidence already adduced, that the diagram is the Pythagorean triangle, whether we suppose (with Schneider) that the antecedent of τούτου is contained in ἐπίτритος πνθμὴν, or, as appears to me most probable, that Aristotle inserted in his manuscript a diagram, to which he refers in τοῦ διαγράμματος τοῦτου. Now the number of a triangle is its size or area expressed in numbers³, and the area of the

¹ Newman prints a mark of interrogation at the end of this sentence.

² Vol. III p. xxviii.

³ I have not found the precise expression 'the number of a diagram' in any other Greek writer, but we can easily divine the meaning. It was the custom of the Greeks to express numbers by means of geometrical figures, and the 'number of a diagram' must Pythagorean triangle, as we have seen, is 6. Make this number solid, as Aristotle bids us do, that is, cube it, and the result is 216. Aristotle therefore informs us that change begins, according to Plato, with the number 216: or in other words, that the number 216 expresses the beginning of change.

Let us next enquire in what sense Aristotle interprets the view which he attributes to Plato, I mean the view that the number 216 is the beginning of change from aristocracy to τιμαρχία. Aristotle's own words leave us in no doubt upon this subject: for immediately after he has said that change begins with the number 216 (λέγων—στερεός), he adds the explanatory clause ὡς τῆς φύσεώς ποτε φουούσης φαύλους καὶ κρείττους τῆς παιδείας: 'the theory being that Nature sometimes produces inferior offspring' etc. That is to say, the number 216 is the ἀρχὴ μεταβολῆς because it is in some way or other connected with the production of offspring. In what way is it so connected? Because of course the περίοδος of the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν, according to Plato, is 216 days, and, according to the same authority, change begins with the child in the womb: ὅταν—ὑμῖν οἱ φύλακες συνοικίῳσι νύμφας νυμφίοις παρὰ καιρόν, οὐκ εὐφυνεῖς οὐδ' εὐτυχεῖς παῖδες ἔσονται (546D). Thus it is clear that ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τούτου γένηται στερεός is Aristotle's way of stating the period which Plato assigns to the ἀνθρώπειον γεννητόν, viz. 216 days, and Aristotle's evidence is therefore in harmony with the result at which we arrived in our investigation of the words αὐξήσεις—φθινόντων. If we look at the words of Aristotle a little more closely, we shall see, I think, that he construed the passage exactly as we have done. 'Plato says that the beginning of change comes from those elements' of course be the number which the diagram expresses. Thus for example the number of the square whose side is 3 can only be 9: for 9 and no other number is expressed by that square. In Theo p. 39 ed. Hiller the number 9 is actually represented a a a

by the diagram a a a, in which the sum of the letters represents the area: and this method of representing the area of figures was earlier than Aristotle, as appears from Met. N 5. 1092^b 10 ff. ὡς Ἐδρυτος ἔταττε τις ἀριθμὸς τίνος, ὅλον ὁδὸν μὲν ἀνθρώπου, ὁδὸν δὲ ἵππου, ὥσπερ οἱ τοὺς ἀριθμοὺς ἀγοντες εἰς τὰ σχήματα τρίγωνον καὶ τετράγωνον, οὕτως ἀφομοιών ταῖς ψήφοις τὰς μορφὰς τῶν φυτῶν. Cf. also Theophr. Fr. 12. 11 ed. Wimmer. In the face of this evidence, which was first adduced by me in Cl. Rev. XVI p. 22, I cannot believe that Mr Monro will continue to deny that the 'number of a diagram' is its area. On a former occasion he remarked: "The 'number of this diagram'—to wit, the Pythagorean triangle—does not seem to me to mean the area, but the linear measurement of the several sides" (Cl.

a a a

Rev. l.c. p. 154). If so, then we must suppose that the number of the square diagram which I have just taken from Theo is not 9, but $3 + 3 + 3 + 3 = 12$: whereas the number 12 is oblong, and not a τετράγωνος ἀριθμὸς at all. After a reference to IX 587 D κατὰ τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμόν, a phrase which has no bearing on this passage at all (see my note ad loc.), Mr Monro continues "The fact that the three cubes of the sides are together equal to the cube of the next whole number ($3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 6^3$) is surely a strong confirmation of this view." (The italics are mine.) I am unable to attach any relevant meaning to this sentence unless it means that we are to cube $3 + 4 + 5$ by making it into $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3$. Such a solution of the clause ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τούτου γένηται στερεός would make it an exact reproduction not only of the whole number, but also of the arithmetical processes which I find in Plato's αὐξήσεις—ὁμοιούντων, but it is of course wholly illegitimate, for the cube of $3 + 4 + 5$ is 12^3 and not $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3$. I will revert to this point later.

viz. the ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων i.e. 3, 4, 5) 'of which the numbers 4, 3, coupled with 5, furnish two harmonies—meaning (that change begins) when the number of this diagram is cubed.' In Plato the beginning of change does come from 3, 4, 5 because these three numbers are made by him to produce the number 216 ($3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216$), which is the ἀρχὴ μεταβολῆς, as Aristotle points out. The only difference between Aristotle's calculation and Plato's is that Aristotle reaches the number by cubing the area, and not by adding the cubes of the sides, of the Pythagorean triangle, and that is exactly the kind of difference which we should expect; for Aristotle likes to vary his predecessors' ways of expressing their results, and 6^3 was known among the Pythagoreans as the ψυχογονικὸς κύβος: see p. 293. That Aristotle was aware of the way in which Plato himself reached the number is clear enough from his reference in τούτων to the ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων καὶ αὐξόντων καὶ φθινόντων.

Let us now consider Aristotle's further remarks on Plato's beginning of change. He proceeds to say that Plato is quite right in holding that Nature sometimes produces bad offspring; for there may well be persons who cannot be educated. But this mode of change, urges Aristotle, is not peculiar to the ideal city, for it is found in all the other cities, and in fact in everything which is created (ἀλλ' αὕτη—πάντων). The remark is perfectly true: Nature does sometimes produce φαῦλοι and φαῦλα in every sphere, among plants and lower animals as well as in every aggregate of human beings. But Plato would of course reply that he had no intention of assigning an ἴδιος μεταβολή to his ideal State: there cannot be any ἴδιος μεταβολή of a perfect city: for a city which carries within itself the germs of dissolution is for that very reason imperfect. If our city is to decay at all, it must do so from the operation of a law from which there is no escape just because the law is universal throughout the whole domain of Nature, and not peculiar to the city.

Hitherto Aristotle's criticisms have concerned themselves solely with Plato's ἀρχή of change, viz. the number 216, which Aristotle interpreted by the sentence ὡς τῆς φύσεώς ποτε φθοῦσης φαύλους καὶ κρείττους τῆς παιδείας. We have seen that he gives a qualified approval to Plato's account of this matter, his only objection being that deterioration in the breed of children is not confined to aristocracy and so cannot be an ἴδιος ἀρχὴ μεταβολῆς ἐξ ἀριστοκρατίας εἰς τιμαρχίαν. In the next sentence Aristotle directs his remarks against Plato's conception of the Cause of change, viz. τὸ μὴ μένειν μὴθέν, ἀλλ' ἐν τινι περιόδῳ μεταβάλλειν. 'And moreover through the time, by reason of which¹ he says that all things change, those things also which did not begin to come into being at the same time are changed at the same time, for example, if a thing was born the day before the turning, it consequently changes at the same time' (sc. as something born at a different time from it). We have seen that in Plato 'the time, by reason of which all things change,' is the γεωμετρικὸς ἀριθμός, viz. 36000 years. Aristotle's criticism then amounts to this. In that case, he says, 'a thing born the day before the end of the cycle changes at the same time as a thing born, let us say, 100 years before the cycle ends: but if you hold that the περίοδος of the whole is the cause of change, it should be fulfilled for each individual thing before it can cause that thing to be changed: so that if you call the περίοδος 36000 years, a thing born in the year 1 should be changed in the year 36000, while another born in the year 2 should be changed in 36001 and so on.' The τροπή in Aristotle is obviously one of the two secular τροπαί of which Plato speaks in the Politicus: see 270C,D, 271C, and we note by the way that Aristotle agrees with us in regarding the γεωμετρικὸς ἀριθμός as the measure of an aeon in the life of the World. See Part ii § 5. Aristotle's criticism of Plato's Cause of Change is perfectly intelligible, but exceedingly perverse and unfair, as is sometimes the case when he is dealing with Plato: for in the Platonic Number, 36000 is the Cause of Change from Aristocracy to Timarchy only in the sense that it measures a secular epoch, marked, as time goes on, by a gradual and ever-increasing deterioration of the Universe and all its parts. Cf. p. 305.

¹ I follow Bekker's text, except that (with Susemihl) I read γε for τε. It has been proposed to change τοῦ χρόνου into τὸν χρόνον or, as an alternative, δι' ὃν into δι' οὗ. Neither of these changes would affect my argument; but neither is necessary. "Instrumentalis ac modalis vis praep. διά c. genet. coniunctae interdum prope accedit ad causalem vim praep. διά c. acc., ut de eadem re utrumque usurpe-

tur" (Bonitz Ind. Arist. s.v. διά, where many examples are given). In this case τοῦ χρόνου, like ὃν, denotes the cause, rather than the instrument. Susemihl translates: "und soll denn während desjenigen Zeitraumes, dessen Eintritt er als Ursache dieser Umwandlung bezeichnet, auch Dasjenige, welches gar nicht zugleich den Anfang seines Entstehens genommen hat, dennoch zugleich diese Umwandlung

So much for Aristotle's criticism of Plato. But before I conclude, it is necessary to advert to the rival interpretation of φησὶ γὰρ—στερεός, which has been held by many writers, and which Mr Monro has advocated in Cl. Rev. l.c. pp. 154, 243, as well as in the Journal of Philology viii p. 280. According to Mr Monro "Aristotle paraphrases τρις αὐξηθεὶς by the words ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τούτου γένηται στερεός. By the 'number of this figure' he cannot well mean any single number; probably he uses ἀριθμός in the sense of 'linear measurement,' as opposed to surfaces or solids (cf. Rep. p. 587D, where κατὰ τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸν is opposed to κατὰ δύναμιν καὶ τρίτην αὐξήν). Now the most natural way of raising the Pythagorean triangle to the third dimension is by cubing each of the sides; and this process leads us at once to the remarkable fact that $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216 = 6^3$. It is difficult to resist the impression that this is what was in the mind of Plato" (J. of Ph. l.c.). I have dealt with the phrase κατὰ τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸν in my note on ix 587D, and need not touch on it again. The other statements will now be discussed in order. The theory which underlies them is, as the reader will observe, that ὡν ἐπίτριστος πύθμην πεμπάδι σύζυγείς—τρις αὐξηθεὶς in Plato means $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216$.

"Aristotle paraphrases τρις αὐξηθεὶς by the words ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τούτου γένηται στερεός." What proof is offered of this erleiden?" There is nothing in the Greek to justify us in translating δι' ὅν by 'dessen Eintritt,' and I can see no reason for making διὰ in διὰ τοῦ χρόνου refer to time.

I am glad to find that Newman also interprets διὰ of agency ("through the influence of time" l.c. p. 483).

statement? "I do not see," says Mr Monro¹, "what proof of this is needed beyond placing the two passages together. We have:—

Plato's sentence

ὦν ἐπίτριστος πύθμην πεμπάδι σύζυγείς δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται τρίς αὐξηθεῖς.

Aristotle's quotation and comment

‘ὦν ἐπίτριστος πύθμην πεμπάδι σύζυγείς δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται,’ λέγων ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τοῦτου γένηται στερεός.”

Stated in this way, the view which Mr Monro supports is superficially engaging and attractive. But it is wholly illegitimate to institute a comparison of this kind between two parts of a sentence, each of which is incomplete in point of sense, and cannot possibly be otherwise than incomplete because they each begin with a relative pronoun—a pronoun, too, of which, so far as I can see, Mr Monro offers no explanation whatsoever. No fair-minded jury would ever accept as evidence of identification the scrap of incomplete and unintelligible testimony on which we are invited to identify τρίς αὐξηθεῖς with Aristotle's γένηται στερεός. They would insist that the evidence should be intelligible in itself and as far as possible complete. Make the evidence in this case intelligible and complete by writing αὐξήσεις—ἀπέφηναν before Plato's ὦν, and φησὶ—ἀρχὴν δ' εἶναι τούτων before Aristotle's ὦν, and I think a jury of scholars will then pronounce that λέγων ὅταν—γένηται explains ἀρχήν and not τρίς αὐξηθεῖς, a phrase which Aristotle does not even quote. If it does not explain ἀρχήν, but Plato's τρίς αὐξηθεῖς, the participle λέγων is not only superfluous but misleading, for ὅταν—γένηται by itself would in that case be sufficient for Aristotle's purpose, and the addition of λέγων would suggest that what he is about to explain has already been named or referred to. Cf. Pol. Δ 2. 1289^b 21 ταύτας τὰς πολιτείας, λέγω δὲ δημοκρατίας κτλ., E 7. 1307^a 10 μάλιστα δὲ τὰ δύο· λέγω δὲ τὰ δύο δῆμον καὶ ὀλιγαρχίαν, and other passages in the Ind. Arist. s.v. λέγω².

¹ Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 243.

² As it seems to have been suggested that my reason for interpreting the passage in Aristotle as I do is because the other interpretation would be fatal to my view that τρίς αὐξηθεῖς means 'thrice increased' (see Cl. Rev. l.c. p. 154), it is fair to remind the reader that it was Schneider, and not the writer of this Appendix, who first interpreted λέγων ὅταν ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τοῦτου γένηται στερεός as explaining the number arrived at in αὐξήσεις—ἀπέφηναν, and Schneider was not exposed to the same temptation as myself, for he makes τρίς αὐξηθεῖς mean 'cubed,' like most other writers on the Number. Another objection raised was that my explanation makes "Aristotle's comment refer to words which are not only not quoted by him but are in the sentence preceding the words quoted" (Cl. Rev.

l.c. p. 243). In point of fact, I now make Aristotle's comment refer to ἀρχήν, which is in the text of Aristotle: the other view makes them refer to τρίς αὐξηθεῖς, which is not. A somewhat parallel sentence in English would be 'Mr Disraeli says that the root of the mischief is a man "whose egotistical imagination can at all times supply an interminable series of arguments to malign his opponent"—meaning Mr Gladstone.' Why then does Aristotle trouble to quote the words ὦν ἐπίτριστος πύθμην πεμπάδι σύζυγείς δύο ἁρμονίας παρέχεται at all? Because these words, as we have seen, give us Plato's cause—and not merely his ἀρχή—of change, and in the sequel Aristotle is going to criticise the Platonic Cause (καὶ διὰ γε—ἅμα ἄρα μεταβάλλει), as well as the Platonic beginning, of deterioration. In effect Aristotle says: Plato says the Cause of change

"By the 'number of this figure,'" continues Mr Monro, Aristotle "cannot well mean any single number; probably he uses ἀριθμός in the sense of 'linear measurement' as opposed to surfaces or solids... Now the most natural way of raising the Pythagorean triangle to the third dimension is by cubing each of the sides; and this process leads us at once to the remarkable fact that $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216 = 6^3$."

Mr Monro supposes that the ἀριθμός of the Pythagorean triangle is $3 + 4 + 5$. I have already, as I think, proved that the ἀριθμός of a figure is its area, and not the sum of its sides: and here it need only be remarked that ἀριθμός cannot possibly stand for ἀριθμοί, but must denote a single number. By Mr Monro it is interpreted as three separate numbers, which he proceeds to add together—here again, as it appears to me, without the shadow of a hint from Aristotle himself.

Mr Monro says that "the most natural way of raising the Pythagorean triangle to the third dimension is by cubing each of its sides." I should have thought that a more natural way of effecting this result would be to cube the area: but in point of fact it is not the Pythagorean triangle which Aristotle invites us to make solid: it is the number of the Pythagorean triangle. And if the number of the Pythagorean triangle is, as Mr Monro supposes, $3 + 4 + 5$, surely the most natural way of making that number solid is by cubing 12, since $3 + 4 + 5 = 12$. Or are we to suppose that Plato was so ignorant of arithmetic as to believe the cube of $3 + 4 + 5$ to be $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3$?

Finally, Mr Monro remarks, "It is difficult to resist the impression that this is what was in the mind of Plato." I hope there are other students of Plato besides myself who find it easy to resist an impression which attributes so many inconsequences both to Plato and to Aristotle. I should find it difficult to believe that this was in Plato's mind even if Aristotle categorically assured us that it was: but Aristotle does nothing of the sort, and Schneider's explanation of the words ὅτι οὗτος ὁ τοῦ διαγράμματος ἀριθμὸς τοῦτον γένηται στερεός will now, I hope, be at last admitted to be right.

II.

VIII 558 A. τί δέ; ἡ πρῶτης ἐνίων τῶν δικασθέντων οὐ κομψή; ἢ οὐπω εἶδες ἐν τοιαύτῃ πολιτείᾳ, ἀνθρώπων καταψηφισθέντων θανάτου ἢ φυγῆς, οὐδὲν ἦττον αὐτῶν μενόντων τε καὶ ἀναστρεφόμενων ἐν μέσῳ, καὶ ὡς οὔτε φροντίζοντος οὔτε ὀρώντος οὐδενὸς περιουστὲί ὥσπερ ἥρως;

This sentence has been much discussed. I will take the different points in order.

is that everything changes in a certain period of time (i.e. as we found, the Great Year), and that the beginning of change comes from the numbers (3, 4, 5), out of which he also builds up the numerical expression of the Cause of change etc. This 'beginning of change' is the number 216: it comes from 3, 4, 5 because $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3 = 216$: and the only difference between Aristotle and Plato is that Aristotle, who is interested only in the result, and not in the process, expresses 216 as 6^3 and not as $3^3 + 4^3 + 5^3$. See p. 309.

Is ἐνίων κτλ. (a) objective or (b) subjective genitive? Does Plato mean lenitas erga damnatos or lenitas damnatorum? Schneider and others hold the former view; the Oxford editors (apparently with Ficinus, Schleiermacher etc.) prefer the latter. In favour of (a), we might refer to vi 500 A, where allusion is made to the proverbial πραότης of the δῆμος. Schneider also remarks, quite justly, that throughout this section it is the characteristics of democracy which Plato is describing, so that the behaviour of criminals would seem to be irrelevant. But surely the description of the placid criminal is only an artistic and highly ironical way of ridiculing the ἀραρχία of the constitution; and it is in the highest degree forced and unnatural on grammatical grounds to explain ἐνίων as an objective genitive. Neither ξυνθήκας αὐτῶν in ii 359 A nor βέλη αὐτοῦ in Laus 717 A is an exact parallel, and even if they were, the construction would still remain ambiguous and obscure. The proposal to insert a preposition (κατά Herwerden after Stephanus, περί Richards) is the refuge of despair.

I once inclined to believe (with Weil) that δικασθέντων is neuter. But apart from the difficulty mentioned in the notes, the sentence cannot be described as πρᾶον, if the culprit is condemned to death or exile.

On these grounds we must accept the interpretation mansuetudo damnatorum quorundam, as Ficinus translates. A new set of difficulties begins with ἡ οὐπω εἶδες. The words καταψηφισθέντων θανάτου ἢ φυγῆς have often been doubted. Hermann (Ges. Abh. p. 175) makes the plural agree with both substantives taken together; but this solution is inadmissible, because the alternative penalties are mutually exclusive (Kühner Gr. Gr. ii p. 72). Madvig's καταψηφισθέντος appears to me to let too much stress fall upon ἀνθρώπων. I formerly printed θάνατον ἢ φυγῇν, but the mss have no variant and the text may be sound.

The syntax of ἀνθρώπων—ἀναστρεφόμενων is certainly difficult. It is impossible to supply ἐκείνην τὴν πραότητα to govern the genitive (with Reisig, quoted in Schneider's note). Few scholars will agree with Schneider in holding that εἶδον αὐτῶν μεινόντων could mean vidi eos manere because οἶδα θνητὸς ὢν is scio me mortalem esse. Kühner (l.c. ii p. 311) makes the words equivalent to ἡ οὐπω εἶδες—ἀνθρώπων ('in men condemned' etc.)—ὅτι οὐδὲν ἦττον ἔμενόν τε καὶ ἀνεστρέφοντο κτλ., comparing Xen. Mem. i 1. 11 οὐδεὶς δὲ πώποτε Σωκράτους οὐδὲν ἀσεβὲς οὐδὲ ἀνόσιον οὔτε πράττοντος εἶδεν οὔτε λέγοντος ἤκουσεν, but the direct object of εἶδεν in Xenophon is the accusative οὐδέν, and there is no such accusative here.

On a general review, it must be admitted that in spite of its picturesqueness the sentence is unusually disjointed even for Plato. As in some other cases, for example 549 D, so here, we seem to miss the finishing touch. The alternative is to suppose that the text was seriously corrupted at an early date. There is no MS variant of any consequence, except περιουστῇ ὁ καταψηφισθείς instead of περιουστῇ in Ξ³ v, and that is obviously a gloss. Schneider's conjecture, αὐτοῦ for αὐτῶν, is hardly necessary and does not attempt to remedy the graver faults. Herwerden formerly proposed ἡ πραότης <κατ'> ἐνίων—ἡσθου (for εἶδες)—καταψηφισθέντος: on a later occasion he made the following changes only:

καταψηφισθέντος—[καὶ] ὡς—ὁρᾶν δοκοῦντος (for ὁρῶντος)—περινοστοῦσιν ὥσπερ ἡρως. Richards would read the accusative singular (ἄνθρωπον καταψηφισθέντα etc.) or plural consistently throughout. Such drastic treatment is altogether inadmissible in dealing with the text of Plato. In 1867 Richter suggested ἦττον ὄντα τῶν μεόντων in place of ἦττον αὐτῶν μεόντων (Fleck. Jb. for 1867 p. 146). On the same lines is Weil's correction (Rev. d. Phil. viii pp. 171 ff.): ἡ οὐπω εἶδες—ἄνθρωπον <τῶν> καταψηφισθέντων—οὐδὲν ἦττον αὐτῶν—ἐν μέσῳ [καὶ] ὡς κτλ. 'have you never seen how a man who is condemned—saunters about just as freely as those who remain' etc. This emendation deserves to be considered by those who think the text corrupt, although αὐτῶν <τῶν> would perhaps be easier and more natural than αὐτῶν: but for my own part, I think it much safer and wiser to leave the text alone.

III.

VIII 559 B. ἡ μὲν γέ που τοῦ σίτου κατ' ἀμφοτέρα ἀναγκαία, ἡ τε ὠφέλιμος ἡ τε παῦσαι ζῶντα δυνατή.

My interpretation of this passage agrees with that of Schneider and Stallbaum.

Hermann (Rhein. Mus. 1846 p. 442) proposed ἀδυνάτη, and afterwards, when it was pointed out that ἀδυνάτη is not Greek, οὐ δυνατή, which he prints in his text. A similar conjecture (μὴ δυνατή) has forced its way into the text of q and Flor. U. Hermann's conjecture ('and because it cannot be stopped during life') is amply refuted by Schneider (Addit. pp. 66, 67), who observes that although ἀδύνατος παῦσαι in the sense of 'impossible to stop' is perfectly good Greek, ἀδύνατος παῦσαι ζῶντα in the sense of 'impossible for a living man to stop' is incorrect. The words could only mean 'unable to put a stop to life.' It is, I suppose, for this reason that Baiter proposes παῦσαι ζῶντα ἀδύνατον and Richards ζῶντι—οὐ δυνατή, the latter comparing Xen. Anab. iv 1. 24 αὐτὸς δ' ἔφη ἡγήσεσθαι δυνατὴν καὶ ὑποζυγίους πορεύεσθαι ὁδόν. Both these emendations are unexceptionable in point of grammar; but there are more serious difficulties, as will presently appear.

Campbell, reading μὴ δυνατή (with q), remarks that "negation is expressed through μὴ rather than οὐ—which Coraes suggested—because the sentence states a condition. The complete expression would be ἀναγκαία (ἂν εἴη) ἡ μὴ (ἔστι) δυνατή (τινι) παῦσαι ζῶντα." To me the sentence appears as categorical a statement as it is possible to make, even if we understand ἂν εἴη after ἀναγκαία, and, in spite of ἀναγκαῖος ἂν εἴη above, ἔστι is much more naturally supplied. Campbell explains the accusative ζῶντα by quoting iv 422 B, c to illustrate "the transition from the dative to the accusative with an infinitive," but there is no 'transition,' where the dative (apparently τινι) is only understood.

The reading of A, II and a vast majority of mss would never have been suspected except from a desire to find a verbal correspondence between παῦσαι ζῶντα on the one hand, and οὐκ ἂν οἰοί τ' εἶμεν ἀποτρέπειν (558 B), αἷς γέ τις ἀπαλλάξειεν αὖν (559 A) and δυνατή—ἀπαλλάττεσθαι (559 B) on the other. But in point of fact, the correspondence, on Hermann's view, is not even verbal; for παῦσαι ἐπιθυμίαν and ἀπαλλάξαι ἐπιθυμίαν are different. The way 'to stop a desire' is to gratify it; the way 'to get rid of a desire' is never to gratify it at all. On the other hand, if we adopt the authoritative text, the correspondence, though not verbal, is real. A desire which is 'capable of putting a stop to life' is precisely one which we cannot ἀποτρέψαι or ἀπαλλάξαι, i.e. turn aside, get rid of finally, and for this very reason it is 'necessary,' and we must gratify it. πεινῶντα, which Ast reads (cf. Ath. XII 511 E) is of course absurd. Hunger is not cured by homœopathy.

IV.

VIII 560 C, D. κλήσαντες οἱ ἀλαζόνες λόγοι ἐκεῖνοι τὰς τοῦ βασιλικοῦ τείχους ἐν αὐτῷ πύλῃς οὔτε αὐτὴν τὴν ξυμμαχίαν παριῶσιν οὔτε πρέσβεις πρεσβυτέρων λόγους ἰδιωτῶν εἰσδέχονται.

Badham's δι' ὧτων in place of ἰδιωτῶν (Preface to Phaedrus p. x) is adopted by Baiter and has won much applause. See for example Cobet *Var. Lect.*² pp. 219, 533, Madvig Adv. Cr. I p. 431, Heller Cur. Crit. in Pl. de Rep. lib. p. 2 and Apelt Berl. Phil. Woch. 1895 p. 967.

Neither Badham, nor any other of these scholars except Heller, attempts to shew that ἰδιωτῶν is corrupt. Heller's criticism is as follows: "praeterquam quod ἰδιωτῶν vox inusitatam conlocationem occupavit, quid orationes hominum privatorum, qui" (sic) "tamen legati mittuntur, sibi volunt? An putas πρεσβυτέρων λόγους ἰδιωτῶν ratione habita τοῦ βασιλικοῦ τείχους memorari? Credat Judaeus Apella: ego ἰδιωτῶν depravatam esse censens Britanni mutationem et facilem et sententiae aptissimam amplector" (l.c.). The suggestion contained in 'An putas' etc. is due to Stallbaum. No one else, so far as I know, has adopted it; and it is certainly wrong. But the erroneous interpretation of a single commentator is poor evidence on which to condemn the text.

The explanation in the notes appears to me to solve the two difficulties felt by Heller. Some may be disposed to regard ἰδιωτῶν as contrasting with αὐτὴν τὴν ξυμμαχίαν ('nor admit the ambassador-words of elderly men who are not members of the alliance'). But the word ἰδιώτης has in itself a wider connotation; and the antithesis would not be strictly accurate, because it is the λόγοι of οἰκέοι, and not οἰκέοι themselves, who form the alliance. The word ἰδιωτῶν should be taken in its full signification; for οὔτε πρέσβεις provides a sufficient antithesis to οὔτε αὐτὴν τὴν ξυμμαχίαν. Schneider translates "noch nehmen die Reden an, die von einzelnen älteren abgesandt werden," but ἰδιωτῶν is more than 'einzeln.'

To δι' ὧτων there are the following positive objections. (1) All the mss have ἰδιωτῶν. (2) The ἀλαζόνες λόγοι are personified throughout; and εἰσδέχομαι δι' ὧτων means 'I admit through my own ears.' Surely the spectacle of ἀλαζόνες λόγοι admitting other λόγοι through their ears is ludicrous and unmeaning. (3) The words δι' ὧτων—supposing they could be referred to the young man's ears—are not only in themselves superfluous—for by what other avenue could the λόγοι be admitted?—but also a blot on what is otherwise one of Plato's finest and most artistic similitudes. They compel us to identify the 'gates of the king's wall' with the man's ears. Apart from questions of literary and artistic propriety, it is enough to point out that the identification is false. We have before us a simile of the soul, and just as the gates of a city's acropolis are in the city, so the gates of the soul's acropolis are in the soul. The false λόγοι, who are themselves in possession of the fortress, shut its gates and keep the key of the situation in their own hands; but it does not follow that the young man may not hear the good message with his ears. It is because the wise words are not admitted to the soul's citadel (λόγον ἀληθῆ—οὐ προσδεχόμενος οὐδὲ παριείς εἰς τὸ φρούριον κτλ. 561 B) that their purpose fails.

To me these arguments appear to prove conclusively that Badham's emendation gravely disfigures one of the most finished and melodious passages that Plato ever wrote. If any still think differently, I hope they will admit that it is at least unnecessary and unwise to exercise the art of emendation until the text has been proved to be corrupt.

V.

VIII 562 A. Φέρε δῆ, τίς τρόπος τυραννίδος, ᾧ φίλε ἑταῖρε, γίγνεται; ὅτι μὲν γὰρ ἐκ δημοκρατίας μεταβάλλει, σχεδὸν δῆλον. Δῆλον. Ἄρ' οὖν τρόπον τινὰ τὸν αὐτὸν ἐκ τε ὀλιγαρχίας δημοκρατία γίγνεται καὶ ἐκ δημοκρατίας τυραννίς; Πῶς;

The explanation which I have given of this passage is due to Schneider. So far as the language is concerned, it is, I think, invulnerable; but we must allow that ἄρ' οὖν—τυραννίς would be easier and more natural if the original question referred to the τρόπος τῆς γενέσεως and not to the τρόπος τῆς πολιτείας.

Jowett and Campbell boldly construe τίς—γίγνεται as 'τίς τρόπος ἐστὶ τῆς γενέσεως αὐτοῦ' (sic); 'what is the nature of the process in the case of tyranny?' They cite no parallels, and it is surely inadmissible to do violence to the Greek in this way.

Others have resorted to emendation. Stallbaum thinks of τίνα τρόπον—τυραννίς γίγνεται or (with pardonable hesitation) τίς τρόπος τυραννίδος ᾧ, ᾧ φίλε ἑταῖρε, γίγνεται; Other suggestions are τίς ἀρχὴ τυραννίδος γίγνεται, or γενέσεως for γίγνεται (Richards). I once conjectured τίς τρόπος τυραννίδος—<καὶ τίνα τρόπον> γίγνεται in view of 555 B. If we adopt any of these readings, ὅτι μὲν γάρ etc. means 'as for the fact that tyranny comes from democracy, that is pretty clear: so that we need only describe the τρόπος τῆς γενέσεως.'

The sense is excellent, but none of the emendations carries conviction, and it is at least doubtful whether the text has suffered corruption. I agree with Krohn (Pl. St. p. 214) and previous editors in adhering to the reading of the MSS.

VI.

VIII 568 D. Δῆλον, ἔφη, ὅτι, εἰάν τε ἱερὰ χρήματα ἢ ἐν τῇ πόλει, ταῦτα ἀναλώσει, ὅποι ποτὲ αὖν αἰεὶ ἐξαρκῇ, <καὶ> τὰ τῶν ἀπολομένων, ἐλάττους εἰσφορὰς ἀναγκάζων τὸν δῆμον εἰσφέρειν.

The reading of the best MSS—ὅποι ποτὲ αὖν αἰεὶ ἐξαρκῇ τὰ τῶν ἀποδομένων, ἐλάττους κτλ.—is retained by Schneider and Stallbaum. The Oxford editors print ἀποδομένων, but pronounce it wrong. Schneider remarks “quidni τοὺς ἀποδομένους sacerdotes et sacrorum antistites intelligamus, quos tyrannus sacra vendere eamque pecuniam ad se deferre cogat?” and Stallbaum understands the passage in much the same way.

The arguments against this view have been well put by Vermehren. “Abgesehen davon dass es eine ganz unnöthige und Platonfremde Ausführlichkeit wäre, wenn für das an sich völlig klare und ausreichende ἀναλίσκειν τὰ ἱερὰ χρήματα noch die Art und Weise der Ausführung dieser Maasregel angegeben würde, begreift sich schwer, wie jener Gedanke aus den Worten hergeleitet werden soll” (Plat. Stud. pp. 108—110). τὰ τῶν ἀποδομένων cannot mean ‘the proceeds of sales’ but only ‘the property of those who sold,’ and it is inaccurate or strained to describe the tyrant as spending the sellers’ property.

To meet the linguistic difficulty the following emendations have been proposed: (1) τὰ τῶν ἀποδιδομένων or τὰ ἐκ τῶν ἀποδιδομένων (Stephanus): (2) τὸ τῶν ἀποδομένων (Hermann, who compares τὸ τῶν παιζόντων and the like): (3) τὰ τῶν ἀποδεδομένων (Stallbaum): (4) τὰ τῶν πωλουμένων (Campbell). The first and third are wrong in point of language, for ἀποδίδοσθαι is not vendi but vendere (see Stephanus-Hase Thes. s.v. The disputed reading ἀπέδοσαν in Thuc. vi 62. 4 will scarcely be considered evidence). Hermann’s eccentric conjecture hardly needs refutation. πωλουμένων deserves the praise of ingenuity, but τὰ τῶν πωλουμένων cannot surely mean ‘the proceeds of what is thus exposed for sale.’ ἐκ is needed before τῶν.

Even if these suggestions were linguistically sound, which is not, I think, the case, Vermehren’s first objection still holds good. Why should Plato have troubled to explain so simple a process as ἱερὰ χρήματα ἀναλῶσαι?

The kind of solution which I have adopted was first suggested by Vermehren. Dübner (Schneider Addit. p. 70) asserts that the λ over the δ of ἀποδομένων in A is by the first hand. Possibly; but I think it doubtful. ἀπολομένων is however read by Flor. U as well as by γ. The correction in A is certainly old, and ought to carry weight; but in any case the intrinsic merit of ἀπολομένων is very great. τε in εἰάν τε ἱερὰ χρήματα suggests that some other kind of χρήματα will presently be specified, and it would be strange if Plato had ignored so obvious a source of revenue as the goods of the proscribed (Vermehren l.c. p. 109), in view especially of 567 B, C, as well as the history of tyranny in general and Dionysius' tyranny in particular (see note). The change from Λ to Δ is easy in uncial mss. After ἀπολομένων was corrupted to ἀποδομένων, it was natural to omit καί, and make τὰ τῶν ἀποδομένων (probably mistaken for passive) subject to ἐξαρκῇ. Nothing short of this would give even a semblance of meaning to the passage. The editor of φ , who was certainly an intelligent, if too facile, emendator, added καί before ὅποι. I formerly accepted his view: Vermehren adds τε after τὰ: but Baiter's insertion of καί before τὰ is not more difficult, and intrinsically, I think, better.

I. Αὐτὸς δὴ λοιπός, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὁ τυραννικὸς ἀνὴρ σκέψασθαι, πῶς τε μεθίσταται ἐκ δημοκρατικοῦ γενόμενός τε ποῖός τις ἐστὶν καὶ τίνα τρόπον ζῆ, ἄθλιον ἢ μακάριον. Λοιπὸς γὰρ οὖν ἔτι οὗτος, ἔφη. Οἴσθ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὃ ποθῶ ἔτι; Τὸ τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν, οἶαί τε καὶ ὅσαι εἰσὶν, οὐ μοι δοκοῦμεν ἱκανῶς διηρησθαι. τούτου δὴ 5 ἐνδεῶς ἔχοντος, ἁσαφεστέρα ἔσται ἡ ζήτησις οὐ ζητοῦμεν. Οὐκοῦν, ἦ δ' ὅς, ἔτ' ἐν καλῷ; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν· καὶ σκόπει γε ὃ ἐν αὐταῖς βούλομαι ἰδεῖν. ἔστιν δὲ τόδε. τῶν μὴ ἀναγκαίων ἡδονῶν τε καὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν δοκοῦσί τινές μοι εἶναι παράνομοι, αἱ κινδυνεύουσι μὲν ἐγγίγνεσθαι παντί, κολαζόμεναι δὲ ὑπὸ τε τῶν νόμων καὶ τῶν 10

7. ἔτ' (vel ἔτι) ἐν καλῷ Ξ9: ἔτ' (vel ἔτι) ἐγκαλῶ ΑΠ.

571 A—572 B There remains the tyrannical man. Before beginning to describe his origin and character, we must complete our analysis of desire. Among the unnecessary desires, there is a special class which we call lawless or unnatural. It is these which are apt to be aroused in sleep, after over-indulgence in eating or drinking. But when we retire to rest with Desire and Anger in abeyance, and the rational element within us in full play, our dreams are innocent, and much is revealed to us in visions of the night.

571 A 5 οὐ—διηρησθαι. The psychological foundation of Tyranny, as well as of Oligarchy and Democracy, is Desire; but there are three varieties of Desire, and it is the lowest of these, viz. the Unnecessary and παράνομοι, which Tyranny represents. See VIII 558 D n., and cf. Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II pp. 310—314.

571 B 7 ἔτ' ἐν καλῷ. See cr. n. ἐν καλῷ might well be written ἐγκαλῶ in early Greek script: see Meisterhans Gr.

*d. Att. Inschr.*³ pp. 106—108. It is strange that Apelt (Berl. Philol. Woch. for 1895 p. 965) should defend ἔτ' ἐγκαλῶ: "soll ich (das Fehlende) noch einklagen" gives a poor sense. For ἐν καλῷ see Jebb on Soph. El. 384 νῦν γὰρ ἐν καλῷ (i.e. εὐκαιρον) φρονεῖν.

9 παράνομοι is more like our 'unnatural' than 'lawless': cf. Phaed. 113 E, Phaedr. 254 A, Eur. Med. 1121 ὦ δεινὸν ἔργον παράνομόν τ' εἰργασμένη (addressed to Medea after she has slain her children), and the author of the Διαλέξεις ἠθικαὶ in Mullach Frag. Phil. Gr. I p. 546 τοὶ δὲ Πέρσαι—καλὸν νομίζοντι καὶ τὰ θυγατρὶ καὶ τὰ μητρὶ καὶ τὰ ἀδελφῶ συνίμει· τοὶ δὲ "Ελλᾶνες καὶ αἰσχρὰ καὶ παράνομα. The phrase οὐ κατὰ νόμον in Hdt. I 61 has the same connotation. Compare the 'bestial' states—θηριώδεις like θηριώδες below in 571 C—described in Arist. Eth. Nic. VII 6. 1148^b 16 ff.

10 ἐγγίγνεσθαι παντί: 'are born in,' 'form an original part of every one' (D. and V.), not simply 'arise in' (as Bosan-βελτιόνων ἐπιθυμιῶν μετὰ λόγου ἐνίων μὲν ἀνθρώπων ἢ παντά-πασιν ἀπαλλάττεσθαι ἢ ὀλίγαι λείπεσθαι καὶ ἀσθενεῖς, τῶν δὲ ἰσχυρότεραι καὶ ¹ πλείους. Λέγεις δὲ καὶ τίνας, ἔφη, ταύτας; C Τὰς περὶ τὸν ὕπνον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐγειρομένας, ὅταν τὸ μὲν ἄλλο τῆς 15 ψυχῆς εὖδῃ, ὅσον λογιστικὸν καὶ ἡμέρον καὶ ἄρχον ἐκείνου, τὸ δὲ θηριῶδες τε καὶ ἄγριον ἢ σίτων ἢ μέθης πλησθέν, σκιρτᾷ τε καὶ ἀπωσάμενον τὸν ὕπνον ζητῇ ἰέναι καὶ ἀποπιμπλάναι τὰ αὐτοῦ ἡθῇ. οἶσθ' ὅτι πάντα ἐν τῷ τοιούτῳ τολμᾷ ποιεῖν, ὡς ἀπὸ πάσης λελυμένον τε καὶ ἀπηλλαγμένον αἰσχύνης καὶ φρονήσεως. μητρί 20 τε γὰρ ἐπιχειρεῖν ¹ μίγνυσθαι, ὡς οἶεται, οὐδὲν ὀκνεῖ ἄλλω τε ὁπωσὺν D ἀνθρώπων καὶ θεῶν καὶ θηρίων, μαιφονεῖν τε ὁτιοῦν, βρώματός τε ἀπέχεσθαι μηδενός· καὶ ἐνὶ λόγῳ οὔτε ἀνοίας οὐδὲν ἐλλείπει οὔτ' ἀναισχυντίας. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη, λέγεις. "Ὅταν δέ γε, οἶμαι, ὑγιεινῶς τις ἔχῃ αὐτὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ σωφρόνως καὶ εἰς τὸν ὕπνον 25 ἤγῃ τὸ λογιστικὸν μὲν ἐγείρας ἑαυτοῦ καὶ ἐστιάσας λόγων καλῶν

22. ἐνὶ λόγῳ A²Π: fortasse ἐν ὀλίγῳ A¹.

quet suggests, ignoring or forgetting ἀπαλλάττεσθαι and λείπεσθαι). Cf. ἐγγίγνεται in 572 A and ἐκάστω ἐνεσσι 572 B. There is something of 'the ape and tiger' in every human being: see infra 588 C ff. These παράνομοι ἐπιθυμίαι doubtless represent "der verbrecherische Hang der menschlichen Natur" (Krohn Pl. St. p. 216), but we ought not to compare Plato's conception with the doctrine of 'original sin,' as Schleiermacher (Platons Staat p. 601) and Susemihl (Gen. Entw. II p. 238) appear to do. According to Plato, Man is an οὐράνιον φυτὸν, οὐκ ἔγγειον.

571 C 13 λέγεις δὲ καὶ κτλ. 'And pray what are these desires?' lit. 'and you mean by these desires, pray, which?' καὶ "significat accessionem aliquam pro interrogantis voluntate necessariam vel maiorem in modum expetitam" (Schneider, who compares Polit. 291 A τίνας αὐτοῦς καὶ λέγεις; Euthyd. 271 A and Heindorf ad loc.).

14 τὰς περὶ τὸν ὕπνον κτλ. "The cursed thoughts that Nature Gives way to in repose" (Macbeth II i. 8). We must however beware of supposing that Plato regards sleep as the time when the lowest part of soul normally and naturally asserts its sway. It is only in the vicious, and after acts of self-indulgence, that the beast within us pollutes our slumber: cf. Cic.

de div. I 115 and II 119. To translate ὅταν by 'when' (D. and V.) is therefore misleading: it means 'as often as.' See 571 D n.

17 ἰέναι "vix sanum videtur," says Herwerden. The text is perfectly sound. Although the man is, as we say, sleeping, his θηριῶδες 'has shaken off sleep' and 'seeks to go and gratify its instincts.' The theory is that in dreams the part of the soul concerned is not asleep, but awake, and goes out to seek the object of its desire. Cf. 572 A n.

19 μητρί τε κτλ. Cf. Soph. O. T. 981 f. πολλοὶ γὰρ ἤδη κἀν ὀνείρασι βροτῶν | μητρί ξυνηνύσθησαν, with Jebb ad loc.

571 D 20 ὡς οἶεται goes closely with μίγνυσθαι ('intercourse, as it supposes, with' etc.). ὡς Οἰδῖπους (suggested by Förster Rhein. Mus. for 1885 p. 631) is a tasteless conjecture, which confuses reality and dreamland.

21 μαιφονεῖν τε ὁτιοῦν: such as parricide and other unnatural murders (φόνοι παράνομοι Phaed. 113 E).

βρώματός τε κτλ. Cannibalism, etc.: cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. VII 6. 1148^b 20—25.

24 αὐτὸς αὐτοῦ. The genitive depends on ὑγιεινῶς ἔχῃ as in ἡδέως ἔχων ἔμμαντοῦ Alexis ap. Athen. x 419 c and other examples quoted by Blaydes on Ar. Lys. 1125 and Wasps 357.

25 ἐστιάσας κτλ. For the metaphor καὶ σκέψεων, εἰς σύνομιαν αὐτὸς αὐτῷ ἀφικόμενος, τὸ ἐπιθυμητικὸν δὲ | μῆτε ἐνδεία δούς μῆτε πλησμονῇ, ὅπως ἂν κοιμηθῇ καὶ μὴ παρέχῃ θόρυβον τῷ | βελτίστῳ χαῖρον ἢ λυπούμενον, ἀλλ' ἐὰν αὐτὸ καθ' αὐτὸ μόνον καθαρὸν σκοπεῖν καὶ ὀρέγεσθαι του καὶ

2. του καὶ A²Ξ: τοῦ Π γ: om. A¹.

in ἐστίδας see I 354 A n. The general meaning of this passage is best illustrated from Tim. 45 E—46 A γενομένης δὲ πολλῆς μὲν ἡσυχίας βραχύνειρος ὕπνος ἐμπίπτει, καταλειφθεισῶν δὲ τινων κινήσεων μειόνων, οἷαι καὶ ἐν οἷοις ἂν τόποις λείπωνται, τοιαῦτα καὶ τοσαῦτα παρέσχοντο ἀφομοιωθέντα ἐντὸς—φαντάσματα, with which Aristotle's theory closely agrees: see Eth. Nic. I 13. 1102^b 7 ff. and Stewart's note. In like manner Zeno recommended his followers to gauge their moral 'progress' (προκοπή) by the nature of their dreams (Frag. 160 ed. Pearson). See also on 572 A.

26 τὸ ἐπιθυμητικὸν κτλ. In Cic. de div. II 119 the Pythagorean veto on beans is attributed to this motive. Plato's psychology in this passage recalls the myth of the Phaedrus: cf. especially 253 C—256 E of that dialogue.

572 A 1 ἀλλ' ἐὰν κτλ. The bearing of this remarkable chapter on the theory of divination did not escape Cicero, who has translated, or rather paraphrased, from ὅταν 571 C to ἄπτεται 572 A: see his de div. I 60, 61. In Tim. 71 D—72 B it is not, as here, the best part of soul which is said to perceive 'past, present, or future' in dreams, but ἡ περὶ τὸ ἦπαρ ψυχῆς μοῖρα κατωκισμένη, the function of λογισμός being to interpret the visions seen by the ἐπιθυμητικὸν in divination (whether ὄναρ or ὕπαρ), ὅπη τι σημαίνει καὶ ὅτω μέλλοντος ἢ παρελθόντος ἢ παρόντος κακοῦ ἢ ἀγαθοῦ (ib. 72 A). In the present passage Plato appeals to the widespread popular view that the soul during sleep is freed from the trammels of the body, foresees the future, and has access to a region of truth denied, with few exceptions, to the waking mind: "viget enim animus in somnis, liberque est sensibus et omni impeditioe curarum, iacente et mortuo paene corpore" (Cic. de div. I 115): see Pind. Frag. 131 3—5 Bergk τὸ γὰρ ἐστὶ μόνον | ἐκ θεῶν· εὐδεῖ δὲ πρᾶσσόντων μελέων, ἀτὰρ εὐδόντεσιν ἐν πολλοῖς ὀνείροις | δεικνυσι τερπνῶν ἐφέροισαν χαλεπῶν τε κρίσιν, Aesch. Ag.

179 ff. (στάζει δ' ἐν θ' ὕπνῳ κτλ.), Eum. 104 εὐδονσα γὰρ φρήν ὁμμασιν λαμπρύνεται and Xen. Cyr. VIII 7. 21, and cf. generally Rohde *Psyche*² I pp. 6 ff., II pp. 309 n. 2 and 414. On this view the Stoic theory of divination by dreams was based (see Cic. l.c. I 110 ff.), and the same idea appears also in Aristotle Frag. 12 ὅταν—ἐν τῷ ὕπνῳ καθ' ἑαυτὴν γέννηται ἡ ψυχὴ, τότε τὴν ἰδίαν ἀπολαβοῦσα φύσιν προμαντεύεται τε καὶ προαγορεύει τὰ μέλλοντα. We may compare the lines of Wordsworth:

"that serene and blessed mood
 In which the affections gently lead us on Until, the breath of this corporeal frame
 And even the motion of our human blood Almost suspended, we are laid asleep
 In body, and become a living soul:
 While with an eye made quiet by the power
 Of harmony, and the deep power of joy,
 We see into the life of things."

2 ὀρέγεσθαι του. Schneider and Stallbaum read ὀρέγεσθαι τοῦ αἰσθάνεσθαι with Π (see cr. n.) and a majority of MSS; but such an expression would be heavy and unpleasing. Jowett and Campbell think "καὶ αἰσθάνεσθαι should perhaps be struck out and the accent restored to του," while Burnet omits καὶ, reading ὀρέγεσθαι του αἰσθάνεσθαι. The text, I believe, is sound, but cannot mean 'to aspire further (καὶ) to perceive something which it knows not' (J. and C.). We may translate 'to yearn after it knows not what and perceive what it knoweth not.' Just as in evil dreams the baser part of soul reaches out after the object of its desires (571 C), so also the βέλτιστον, in these happier visions of the night, has longings which are all its own. ὀρέγεσθαι expresses the instinctive and unconscious turning of the soul towards the fountain of her being, and the waking counterpart of these visions of the night are just "those shadowy recollections,

 Which, be they what they may,
 Are yet the fountain light of all our day,
 Are yet a master light of all our seeing."

With the use of ὀρέγεσθαι cf. Phaed. 65 C ὀρέγεται τοῦ ὄντος κτλ., a passage which throws light on Plato's meaning here in more ways than one.

αἰσθάνεσθαι ὃ μὴ οἶδεν, ἢ τι τῶν γεγρονότων ἢ ὄντων ἢ καὶ μελλόντων, ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τὸ θυμοειδὲς πραῦνας καὶ μὴ τιςιν εἰς ὀργὰς
 5 ἐλθὼν κεκινημένῳ τῷ θυμῷ καθεύδῃ, ἀλλ' ἡσυχάσας μὲν τῷ δύο εἶδη, τὸ τρίτον δὲ κινήσας, ἐν ᾧ τὸ φρονεῖν ἐγγίγνεται, οὕτω ἀναπαύηται, οἶσθ' ὅτι τῆς τ' ἀληθείας ἐν τῷ τοιούτῳ μάλιστα ἄπτεται καὶ ἥκιστα παράνομοι | τότε αἱ ὄψεις φαντάζονται τῶν B ἐνυπνίων. Παντελῶς μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, οἶμαι οὕτω. Ταῦτα μὲν τοίνυν 10 ἐπὶ πλέον ἐξήχθημεν εἰπεῖν· ὃ δὲ βουλόμεθα γινῶναι, τόδ' ἐστίν, ὡς ἄρα δεινόν τι καὶ ἄγριον καὶ ἄνομον ἐπιθυμιῶν εἶδος ἐκάστω ἔνεστι, καὶ πάννυ δοκοῦσιν ἡμῶν ἐνίοις μετρίοις εἶναι· τοῦτο δὲ ἄρα ἐν τοῖς ὕπνοις γίγνεται ἐνδηλον. εἰ οὖν τι δοκῶ λέγειν καὶ συγχωρεῖς, ἄθρει. Ἄλλὰ συγχωρῶ.

15 II. Τὸν τοίνυν δημοτικὸν ἀναμνήσθητι οἶον ἔφαμεν εἶναι. ἦν δέ | που γεγρονῶς ἐκ νέου ὑπὸ φειδωλῷ πατρὶ τεθραμμένος, τὰς C χρηματιστικὰς ἐπιθυμίας τιμῶντι μόνας, τὰς δὲ μὴ ἀναγκαίους

5. ἐλθὼν II: ἐλθὼν A. τῷ A¹ II: τῷ A².

5 ἡσυχάσας. ἡσυχάζω is used transitively only in the aorist: cf. Solon ap. Arist. Ath. Pol. 5. 3. Schleiermacher (Platon's Staat p. 601) thinks that Plato recognises here, and in ἐγείρας, ἐστίαςας, πραῦνας, κινήσας etc., a fourth principle or 'part' of soul, that viz. which is able to excite or calm the others. Krohn on the other hand sees in this passage a sort of implicit recognition of the 'ego' as a separate and distinct entity (Pl. St. p. 217). The latter view is nearer the truth (cf. v 462 C, D iii.); but we ought not to press the words too much: cf. ἐπεικεῖ τινα ἑαυτοῦ βίᾳ κατέχει ἄλλας κακὰς ἐπιθυμίας VIII 554 C, and III 411 B n.

6 εἶδη. Other examples of this rare form of the dual in Plato are cited by Roeper de dual. usu Plat. p. 12.

7 μάλιστα: i.e. more than when he retires to sleep in any other condition. It is better, in view especially of the second half of this clause, to understand μάλιστα in this way, than to take the word generally, as if divination by dreams were the best way of grasping truth. Plato would hardly say this, nor indeed would the average Greek. See especially Tim. 71 D ff.

8 παράνομοι. 571 B n.

572 B—573 C The origin of the tyrannical man is as follows. A democratical father has a son, who is led away by evil associates into every form of lawlessness. When his family come to the rescue, these tyrant-breeders implant in him a master-passion to act as champion of his drone-desires. The history of the corresponding State repeats itself in the young man's soul, and the champion Lust becomes a tyrant in due course. We look on Lust, Drink, Madness as tyrants; and the tyrannical man arises when these three tyrants establish their dominion over the soul.

572 B 10 βουλόμεθα. W. H. Thompson's ἐβουλόμεθα is unnecessary and even awkward with the present ἐστίν just following. The Greek means simply 'but what we want to notice is this' etc.

12 καὶ πάννυ belongs to μετρίοις (Schneider) rather than to δοκοῦσιν (J. and C.): 'however virtuous we may some of us appear to be.'

15 οἶον ἔφαμεν εἶναι. VIII 561 A—562 A.

ἦν δέ που κτλ.: 'he had been, you remember, produced, by having been brought up from early years' etc. Socrates recalls the genesis of the democratical man (described in 558 C, 559 D ff.) before recalling his nature (in D below). Ast suggested γεγονῶς <καὶ> or γεγονῶς <τε καὶ>, taking γεγονῶς of birth. The correct interpretation was pointed out by Schneider.

ἀλλὰ παιδιᾶς τε καὶ καλλωπισμοῦ ἔνεκα γιγνόμενας ἀτιμάζοντι.
 ἢ γάρ; Ναί. Συγγενόμενος δὲ κομψότεροις ἀνδράσι καὶ μεστοῖς ὧν ἄρτι διήλθομεν ἐπιθυμιῶν, ὁρμήσας εἰς ὕβριν τε πᾶσαν καὶ 20 τὸ ἐκείνων εἶδος μίσει τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς φειδωλίας, φύσιν δὲ τῶν διαφθειρόντων βελτιῶ ἔχων, ἀγόμενος ἀμφοτέρωσιν ἡ κατέστη εἰς μέσον ἀμφοῖν τοῖν τρόποιν καὶ μετρίως δὴ, ὥς ᾤετο, ἐκάστων ἀπολαύων οὔτε ἀνελεύθερον οὔτε παράνομον βίον ζῆν, δημοτικὸς ἐξ ὀλιγαρχικοῦ γεγονώς. Ἦν γάρ, ἔφη, καὶ ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ δόξα 25 περὶ τὸν τοιοῦτον. Θὲς τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πάλιν τοῦ τοιούτου ἡδη πρεσβυτέρου γεγνηότος νέον ὕν ἐν τοῖς τούτου αὖ ἡθεσιν τεθραμμένον. Τίθημι. Τίθει τοίνυν καὶ τὰ αὐτὰ ἐκείνα περὶ αὐτὸν γιγνόμενα, ἅπερ καὶ περὶ τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ· ἀγόμενόν τε ἡ εἰς πᾶσαν παρανομίαν, ὀνομαζομένην δ' ὑπὸ τῶν ἀγόντων ἐλευθερίαν 30 ἅπασαν, βοηθοῦντά τε ταῖς ἐν μέσῳ ταύταις ἐπιθυμίαις πατέρα τε καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους οἰκείους, τοὺς δ' αὖ παραβοηθοῦντας· ὅταν δ' ἐλπίσωσιν οἱ δεινοὶ μάχοι τε καὶ τυραννοποιοὶ οὗτοι μὴ ἄλλως τὸν νέον καθέξειν, ἔρωτά τινα αὐτῷ μηχανωμένους ἐμποιῆσαι προστάτην τῶν ἀργῶν καὶ τὰ ἔτοιμα διανεμομένων ἐπιθυμιῶν, 35

23. ἐκάστων ἀπολαύων Π: ἐκάστων ἀπολαβὼν A¹: ἕκαστον ἀπολαβὼν A².
 28. αὐτὸν A² Ξ q: αὐτῶν A¹ Π.

572 C 18 παιδιᾶς—καλλωπισμοῦ. Plato is less severe than in VIII 559 D—562 A. He has since discovered a yet lower depth than merely democratical desire, and the democratical man is almost virtue itself compared with the tyrannical.

19 κομψότεροις κτλ. VIII 559 D n.
 21 τὸ ἐκείνων εἶδος: 'their kind of conduct.' εἶδος is used almost like τρόπος, as in Thuc. II 41. 1, VI 77. 2 and VIII 56. 2. Ficinus has mores, but it does not follow that he read ἥθος, which is less suitable with ὁρμήσας.

572 D 22 κατέστη κτλ. VIII 561 A—562 A. The words ὥς ᾤετο qualify μετρίως: cf. 571 D.

24 οὔτε ἀνελεύθερον κτλ.: i.e. 'in the mean between ὀλιγαρχία and ἀναρχία' etc. (J. and C., comparing VIII 561 A and 561 E). ἔζη for ζῆν was conjectured by Ast, on account, no doubt, of ᾤετο. Schneider holds that ᾤετο refers to the time "quo primum ingreditur in istam vivendi rationem optimum factu statuebat omnibus pariter cupiditatibus obtemperare." It is difficult to understand ᾤετο otherwise than as the imperfect of recapitulation; and I prefer to think that Plato, in spite of the inconsistency, wrote ζῆν rather than ἔζη in order to bring the δημοτικὸς before us as a living reality, so as to prepare for θὲς τοίνυν—τεθραμμένον. There is no MS authority for ἔζη.

26 περὶ τὸν τοιοῦτον: "anlangend den so beschaffenen" (Schneider), "touching such a person" (D. and V.).

28 τίθει κτλ. The present echoes τίθημι (cf. I 339 D, VII 514 B, 519 B, 527 B, VIII 564 A al.), and is in itself more appropriate than θές to introduce a succession of pictures. τοίνυν means 'further' (I 339 D n.). The reference in ἅπερ καὶ—πατέρα is to VIII 559 E ff.

572 E 35 προστάτην κτλ. This overmastering passion becomes the champion of the drone-desires, exactly as the budding tyrant is the προστάτης of the proletariat: see VIII 564 D, 565 C ff. With ἔτοιμα διανεμομένων cf. τῶν ἐτοίμων ἀναλωτῆς VIII 552 B (J. and C.).

ὑπόπτερον καὶ μέγαν κηφήνά τινα. ἢ τί ἄλλο οἶει εἶναι τὸν τῶν τοιούτων ἔρωτα; Οὐδὲν ἔγωγε, ἢ δ' ὅς, ἄλλ' ἢ τοῦτο. Οὐκοῦν ὅταν περὶ αὐτὸν βομβοῦσαι αἱ ἄλλαι ἐπιθυμίαι, θυμιαμάτων τε 5 γέμουσαι καὶ μύρων καὶ στεφάνων καὶ οἴνων καὶ τῶν ἐν ταῖς τοιαύταις συνουσίαις ἡδονῶν ἀνειμένων, ἐπὶ τὸ ἔσχατον αὔξουσαι τε καὶ τρέφουσαι πόθου κέντρον ἐμποιήσωσι τῷ κηφήνι, τότε δὴ δορυφορεῖται τε ὑπὸ μανίας καὶ οἰστρᾷ¹ οὗτος ὁ προστάτης τῆς Β ψυχῆς, καὶ ἐάν τινας ἐν αὐτῷ δόξας ἢ ἐπιθυμίας λάβῃ ποιουμένας 10 χρηστὰς καὶ ἔτι ἐπαισχυνομένας, ἀποκτείνει τε καὶ ἔξω ὠθεῖ παρ' αὐτοῦ, ἕως ἂν καθήρῃ σωφροσύνης, μανίας δὲ πληρώσῃ ἐπακτοῦ.
 Παντελῶς, ἔφη, τυραννικοῦ ἀνδρὸς λέγεις γένεσιν. Ἄρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ τὸ πάλαι διὰ τὸ τοιοῦτον τύραννος ὁ Ἔρως λέγεται; Κινδυνεύει, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν, ὦ φίλε, εἶπον, καὶ μεθυσθεὶς ἀνὴρ 15 τυραννικόν τι φρόνημα¹ ἴσχει; Ἴσχει γάρ. Καὶ μὴν ὁ γε C μαινόμενος καὶ ὑποκεκινηκώς οὐ μόνον ἀνθρώπων ἀλλὰ καὶ θεῶν

10. ἐπαισχυνομένας II: ἐπαισχυρόμενος A. —ὠθεῖ A².

11. μανίας II: καὶ μανίας A.

ἀποκτείνει—ὠθεῖ A¹ II: ἀποκτείνῃ

573 A 2 ὑπόπτερον is doubly appropriate: for "Eros too has wings.

τῶν τοιούτων. Masculine, not neuter, as Stallbaum once supposed.

4 ὅταν. A large majority of MSS have ὅταν δῆ, which Schneider retains. δῆ is unsuitable after οὐκοῦν, and may possibly have arisen from the accidental reduplication of AN: see on V 450 C. I agree with most editors in accepting the text of A.

αὐτόν κτλ. αὐτόν means ἔρωτα, the μέγαν κηφήνα. On βομβοῦσαι see VIII 564 D n. The position of the participial adjective ἀνειμένων is illustrated on VII 532 C.

6 αὔξουσαι τε καὶ τρέφουσαι. The object is τὸν κηφήνα, not of course πόθου κέντρον, as Jowett translates. This master-passion grows by what it feeds on, until it becomes acute, and ends in madness and frenzy. πόθου κέντρον (cf. Phaedr. 253 E πόθου κέντρων) is 'the sting of unsatisfied desire' (Sehnsucht Schneider): cf. the definition of πόθος in Crat. 420 A πόθος—οὐ τοῦ παρόντος—ἀλλὰ τοῦ ἀλλοθι που ὄντος καὶ ἀπόντος. Ast conjectured τρέφουσαι πόθον, κέντρον κτλ., "namque πόθος s. ἔρως iam inest in furo." But in point of fact the ἔρως is the drone, and the MS text is far more picturesque and expressive.

8 δορυφορεῖται. Cf. VIII 566 B ff.

573 B 9 ἐν αὐτῷ. The Oxford editors, with Herwerden, read ἐν αὐτῷ, "i.e. the man," remarking that "good opinions and desires could hardly be supposed to exist" in the drone. True; but παρ' αὐτοῦ shews that αὐτῷ is right, and αὐτῷ is unpleasing on aesthetic as well as on grammatical grounds. Plato speaks as if the master-passion were itself the soul. The inaccuracy is easily excused because the whole soul is rapidly falling under its sway.

ποιουμένας='accounted.' Hermann proposes ποτωμένας, Herwerden ἐμποιουμένας: but the text is sound. See VI 498 A n.

11 καθήρῃ: as in the καθαρός of VIII 567 C.

μανίας δὲ κτλ. See cr. n. A few deterioris notae MSS agree with A, which is certainly in error here. Cf. IV 441 D. The epithet ἐπακτοῦ recalls the ξενικός of VIII 567 D f.

14 καὶ μεθυσθεὶς κτλ. Ast compares Bacchyl. Frag. 27. 6 f. Bergk (on the effects of wine) αὐτίχ' ὁ μὲν πόλεων κρήδεμνα λύει | πᾶσι δ' ἀνθρώποις μοναρχήσιν δοκεῖ. But τυραννικόν τι φρόνημα ἴσχει has of course a wider meaning than this.

573 C 16 ὑποκεκινηκώς='deranged' ἐπιχειρεῖ τε καὶ ἐλπίζει δυνατὸς εἶναι ἄρχειν. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη. Τυραννικὸς δέ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὃ δαιμόνιε, ἀνὴρ ἀκρεβῶς γίγνεται, ὅταν ἢ φύσει ἢ ἐπιτηδεύμασιν ἢ ἀμφοτέροις μεθυστικός τε καὶ ἐρωτικός καὶ μελαγχολικὸς γένηται. Παντελῶς μὲν οὖν.

20

III. Γίγνεται μὲν, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὕτω καὶ τοιοῦτος ἀνὴρ· ζῇ δὲ D δὴ πῶς; Τὸ τῶν παιζόντων, ἔφη, τοῦτο ἰσὺ καὶ ἐμοὶ ἐρεῖς. Λέγω

(D. and V.). The litotes in ὑπο- is only euphemistic. ὑποκεκνηκώς with this meaning does not apparently occur elsewhere in classical Greek: see Stephanus-Hase Theas s.v., where the only parallel cited is from a scholium on Soph. Aj. 531 ὑποκεκνηκῶτι μὴ πιστεύουσα. W. H. Thompson (on Phaedr. 249 D) proposes παρακεκνηκώς, in view of Ar. Frogs 643, where he approves 'on MS authority' the reading ἦν με παρακινήσαντ' ἴδης. In point of fact, however, this reading will not scan, and the Ravenna with other MSS has ἦν μ' ὑποκινήσαντ' ἴδης, although ὑποκινεῖν is not used with the same sense as here.

οὐ μόνον κτλ. The madman also τυραννικόν τι φρόνημα ἴσχει. ἐλπίζει is not here 'expects' (D. and V.) but 'fancies,' 'imagines' (II 383 B n.).

18 τυραννικὸς δὲ κτλ. I formerly printed δὴ for δέ (with q and Vermehren Plat. Stud. p. 112), but now prefer the reading of the best MSS. Plato is testing his account of the origin of the tyrannical man by obvious and admitted facts: cf. (with Schneider) IV 442 E ff. Lust, Drink, and Madness are confessedly tyrants; and we hold that a τυραννικὸς ἀνὴρ in the strictest sense of the term (for ἀκριβῶς cf. I 341 C) is produced when a man falls under the dominion of all three. So that our theory accords with everyday experience. μελαγχολικός is not of course 'passionate' (Jowett), but 'insane': cf. ὁ γὰρ μαίνόμενος καὶ ὑποκεκνηκώς above.

573 C—576 B In respect of his character and mode of life, the tyrannical man plunges into every form of dissipation, and is hounded on by ever fresh desires. His income and property soon disappear; and in order to satisfy his clamorous lusts, he plunders his father's estate, not hesitating if need be to lay violent hands on father and mother. Then follow sacrilege and theft, and every variety of crime; for he has now become in living fact that which once he rarely was in dreams. Such men, if few in number, may go abroad and join a tyrant's bodyguard or remain to swell the ranks of petty criminals at home; but if they are numerous, they make the worst of all their crew into a tyrant over their fatherland. Tyranny is the goal and consummation of such a man's desires. Throughout his whole existence, both before and after he attains the crown of his ambition, the tyrannical man is a stranger to freedom and friendship, faithless and superlatively unrighteous—in one word, he is the living embodiment of the monstrous lusts we found in dreams, and the longer he rules, the worse he grows.

573 C ff. Plato's τυραννικός is a monster without a single redeeming feature of any kind, the incarnation of unnatural desire, "bloody, Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful, Sudden, malicious"—"not in the legions Of horrid hell can come a devil more damned In evils" (Macbeth Act IV Sc. 3). It must be admitted that Plato takes a terrible revenge on Dionysius: see on 577 A.

21 γίγνεται κτλ. 'Such, apparently, is the origin also of the tyrannical man.' The stress of the voice falls on τοιοῦτος i.q. τυραννικός (τυραννικός ἀνὴρ in Socrates' last sentence). καὶ is etiam: we have now described his origin as well as that of the others. J. and C. propose ἀνὴρ, as if Plato meant γίγνεται οὕτω, καὶ ἔστιν τοιοῦτος. But the character of the man has still to be described (ζῇ δὲ δὴ πῶς); hitherto we have been concerned only with his genesis (γίγνεται μὲν). Schneider caught the meaning ("so nun entsteht auch dieser Mann"); but recent English translators are wrong. For μὲν Richards conjectures μὲν οὖν (or οὐκοῦν γίγνεται μὲν as an alternative). The asyndeton helps of course to accentuate the antithesis between γίγνεται and ζῇ.

22 τὸ τῶν παιζόντων. παροιμία ἥνικα τις ἐρωτηθεὶς τι ὑπὸ γινώσκοντος τὸ ἐρω-

- δή, ἔφην. οἶμαι γάρ, τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο ἑορταὶ γίγνονται παρ' αὐτοῖς καὶ κῶμοι καὶ θαλῖαι καὶ ἑταῖραι καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα πάντα, ὧν ἂν 25 Ἔρως τύραννος ἔνδον οἰκῶν διακυβερνᾷ τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς ἅπαντα.
'Ανάγκη, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ πολλαὶ καὶ δειναὶ παραβλαστάνουσιν ἐπιθυμίαι ἡμέρας τε καὶ νυκτὸς ἐκάστης, πολλῶν δεόμεναι; Πολλὰ μέντοι. Ταχὺ ἄρα ἀναλίσκονται ἐάν τινες ὦσι πρόσοδοι. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο | δὴ δανεισμοὶ καὶ τῆς οὐσίας παραιρέσεις. E 30 Τί μῖν; Ὅταν δὲ δὴ πάντ' ἐπιλίπη, ἄρα οὐκ ἀνάγκη μὲν τὰς ἐπιθυμίας βοᾶν πυκνὰς τε καὶ σφοδρὰς ἐννεοστευμένας, τοὺς δ' ὥσπερ ὑπὸ κέντρων ἐλαυνομένους τῶν τε ἄλλων ἐπιθυμιῶν καὶ διαφερόντως ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἔρωτος, πάσαις ταῖς ἄλλαις ὥσπερ δορυφόροις ἡγουμένους, οἰστρᾶν καὶ σκοπεῖν, τίς τι ἔχει, ὃν δυνατὸν 35 ἀφελέσθαι ἀπατήσαντα ἢ | βιασάμενον; Σφόδρα γ', ἔφη. Ἀναγ- 574 καῖον δὴ πανταχόθεν φέρειν, ἢ μεγάλαις ὁδοῖς τε καὶ ὁδύναϊς

24. θαλῖαι II: θάλεια A.

30. ἐπιλίπη A¹ II: ἐπιλείπη A².

τηθέν, αὐτὸς ἀγνοῶν, οὕτως ἀποκρίνεται
'σὺ καὶ ἐμοὶ ἐρεῖς' (Schol.). Cf. Phil.
25 B.

573 D 23 αὐτοῖς: the τυραννικός and his associates.

24 θαλῖαι. See cr. n. θάλεια is either an adjective or the name of the Muse.
Schneider (who was unaware that II has θαλῖαι) retains θάλεια, but his note conclusively proves, I think, that the Attic writers as well as Homer invariably observed the distinction. Stallbaum alone of recent editors reads θαλῖαι.

ἑταῖραι. "Nullus locus scortis est inter ἑορτὰς atque κῶμους καὶ θαλῖας" says Stallbaum. On this account he prefers ἑταῖραι (a conjecture of G. W. Nitzsch), taking the word, strangely enough, for luxuraria. There is not the shadow of a difficulty: cf. II 373 A n. and ἑταῖρας 574 B below.

ὧν κτλ.: 'in whoso's breast the tyrant Love indwelling steers all their soul.' The words are tinged with poetical colouring, as often in passages of this kind: cf. VIII 560 D, E al. J. and C. erroneously make ὧν neuter and dependent on Ἔρως. The pronoun is construed with τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς ἅπαντα by Shorey (A. J. Ph. XVI p. 237), but in that case οἷς would have been more natural.
The view I take agrees with Schneider's.

26 παραβλαστάνουσιν: 'shoot up beside' the master-passion. These desires correspond to τὸ τοῦ τυράννου στρατί-πεδον τὸ καλὸν τε καὶ πολὺ καὶ ποικίλον καὶ οὐδέποτε ταῦτόν in the τυραννουμένη πόλιν (VIII 568 D).

28 ἀναλίσκονται κτλ. Cf. VIII 568 D.

573 E 29 τῆς οὐσίας παραιρέσεις κτλ.: 'encroachments on his capital' etc.
(J. and C.), viz. to meet the money-lender's claims. See VIII 555 E. On ἐπιλίπη see VIII 568 E n.

30 ἀνάγκη μὲν κτλ. Bekker reads ἀνάγκη τὰς μὲν with q and Flor. U:
"recte, si cupiditates ipsas opponi statuimus. Sed nihil impedit, quo minus alteram necessitatem—quae postea hanc consequi particula δὴ significatur, iam hic scriptori obversatam atque hanc illi alteri oppositam putemus. Accedit quod si τὰς μὲν ἐπιθυμίας scripsisset, non τοὺς δέ, sed αὐτοὺς δὲ dicturus fuisse videtur" (Schneider). We have no right to change τοὺς to αὐτοὺς as Stallbaum is fain to do.

31 ἐννεοστευμένας is copied, as Ast.
observes, by Longinus περὶ ὕψους 44. 7.

32 κέντρων. The other desires (as well as the master Passion) are compared to goads. For the idiom ὥσπερ ὑπὸ κέν-τρων τῶν κτλ. cf. VIII 553 B n.

33 αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἔρωτος κτλ. is not for τῶν αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἔρωτος κτλ., as Stallbaum seems to hold; for the ἔρως is itself an ἐπιθυμία: see 572 E ff. With δορυφόροις cf. VIII 567 D.

ξυνέχεσθαι. Ἀναγκαῖον. Ἄρ' οὖν ὥσπερ αἱ ἐν αὐτῷ ἡδοναὶ ἐπιγιγνόμεναι τῶν ἀρχαίων πλέον εἶχον καὶ τὰ ἐκείνων ἀφηροῦντο, οὕτω καὶ αὐτὸς ἀξιώσει νεώτερος ὢν πατρός τε καὶ μητρὸς πλέον 5 ἔχειν καὶ ἀφαιρεῖσθαι, ἐὰν τὸ αὐτοῦ μέρος ἀναλώσῃ, ἀπονειμάμενος τῶν πατρῶν; Ἀλλὰ τί μήν; ἔφη. Ἄν δὲ δὴ αὐτῷ μὴ ἐπιτρέ-
 B πωσιν, ἄρ' οὐ¹ τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἐπιχειροῖ ἂν κλέπτειν καὶ ἀπατᾶν τοὺς γονέας; Πάντως. Ὅποτε δὲ μὴ δύναίτο, ἀρπάξοι ἂν καὶ βιάζοιτο μετὰ τοῦτο; Οἶμαι, ἔφη. Ἀντεχομένων δὴ καὶ μαχο- 10 μένων, ὃ θαυμάσιε, γέροντός τε καὶ γραδὸς ἄρ' εὐλαβηθείη ἂν καὶ φείσαιο μή τι δρᾶσαι τῶν τυραννικῶν; Οὐ πάννυ, ἡ δ' ὅς, ἔγωγε θαρρῶ περὶ τῶν γονέων τοῦ τοιοῦτου. Ἄλλ', ὃ Ἀδείμαντε, πρὸς Διός, ἔνεκα νεωστὶ φίλης καὶ οὐκ ἀναγκαίας ἐταίρας γεγυνίας τὴν
 C πάλαι φίλην¹ καὶ ἀναγκαίαν μητέρα, ἡ ἔνεκα ὠραίου νεωστὶ φίλου 15 γεγονότος οὐκ ἀναγκαίου τὸν ἄωρόν τε καὶ ἀναγκαῖον πρεσβύτην πατέρα καὶ τῶν φίλων ἀρχαιότατον δοκεῖ ἂν σοι ὁ τοιοῦτος πληγαῖς τε δοῦναι καὶ καταδουλώσασθαι ἂν αὐτοὺς ὑπ' ἐκείνοις, εἰ εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν οἰκίαν ἀγάγοιτο; Ναὶ μὰ Δία, ἡ δ' ὅς. Σφόδρα γε μακάριον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἔοικεν εἶναι τὸ τυραννικὸν ὑὸν τεκεῖν. Πανύ 20
 D γ', ἔφη. Τί δ', ὅταν δὴ τὰ πατρός καὶ μητρὸς¹ ἐπιλείπη τὸν τοιοῦτον, πολλὴ δὲ ἤδη ξυνειλεγμένον ἐν αὐτῷ ἢ τὸ τῶν ἡδονῶν σμῆνος, οὐ πρῶτον μὲν οἰκίας τινὸς ἐφάψεται τοίχου ἢ τινος ὀψὲ νύκτωρ ἰόντος τοῦ ἱματίου, μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἱερόν τι νεωκορήσει;

21. τὰ Α²Π: om. Α¹.

574 A 1 ἀναγκαῖον δὴ κτλ. The civic parallel is in VIII 568 D ff. φέρειν = 'lift' (in the sinister sense of ἄγειν καὶ φέρειν: cf. Laus 762 A). On the position of ἐπιγιγνόμεναι see VII 532 C n. The words ἀξιώσει νεώτερος ὢν κτλ. correspond to VIII 568 E ff., and ἐὰν—ἀναλώσῃ is subordinate to ἀπονειμάμενος τῶν πατρῶν ('his father's property,' not, of course, 'his patrimony': cf. VIII 568 E).

574 B 10 ἀντεχομένων. The middle of ἀντέχω in the sense of 'resist' is extremely rare; but occurs in Arist. H. A. VII 3, 583^a 18, possibly in Xen. de Ven. 6, 6, and occasionally in later Greek: see Stephanus-Hase Thes. s.v. The presence of μαχομένων makes it unlikely that ἀντεχομένων means 'cleaving to' sc. in the attitude of supplication.

14 οὐκ ἀναγκαίος. The adjective ἀναγκαῖος throughout this sentence combines the two senses of 'necessary') (

'superfluous,' and 'related by the ties of blood.' Bosanquet justly draws attention to the singular pathos and pietas of Plato's words: cf. V 470 D n. For the parallel in the State see VIII 569 B.

574 C 17 πληγαῖς—δοῦναι. See VIII 566 C n.

574 D 21 ἐπιλείπη. The present has better MS authority, and is intrinsically more appropriate than the aorist: "nam et ei quod sequitur ξυνειλεγμένον ἢ magis respondet et eo ipso temporis puncto quo patrimonium deficere incipit filium istum ad latrocinia et sacrilegia abripi accuratus significat" (Heller Cur. Crit. p. 4). Contrast VIII 568 E n.

23 ἐφάψεται: 'put himself in touch with' (sich in Berührung setzen Schneider). The delicate euphemism is missed by the English translators.

24 ἱερόν τι νεωκορήσει: 'will sweep out a temple.' The euphemism may be

25 καὶ ἐν τούτοις δὴ πᾶσιν, ἃς πάλαι εἶχεν δόξας ἐκ παιδὸς περὶ καλῶν τε καὶ αἰσχυρῶν, τὰς δικαίας ποιουμένας, αἱ νεωστὶ ἐκ δουλείας λελυμέναι, δορυφοροῦσαι τὸν ἔρωτα, κρατήσουσι μετ' ἐκείνου, αἱ πρότερον μὲν ὄναρ ἐλύοντο ἐν ὕπνῳ, ὅτε ἦν | αὐτὸς ἔτι ὑπὸ Ε νόμοις τε καὶ πατρὶ δημοκρατούμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ· τυραννευθεὶς δὲ 30 ὑπὸ ἔρωτος, οἷος ὀλιγάκις ἐγίνετο ὄναρ, ὕπαρ τοιοῦτος αἰεὶ γενόμενος, οὔτε τινὸς φόνον δεινοῦ ἀφέξεται οὔτε βρώματος οὔτ' ἔργου, ἀλλὰ | τυραννικῶς ἐν αὐτῷ ὁ ἔρως ἐν πάσῃ ἀναρχίᾳ καὶ ἀνομίᾳ 575 ζῶν, ἅτε αὐτὸς ὢν μόναρχος, τὸν ἔχοντά τε αὐτὸν ὥσπερ πόλιν ἄξει ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τόλμαν, ὅθεν αὐτόν τε καὶ τὸν περὶ αὐτὸν θόρυβον θρέψει, τὸν μὲν ἔξωθεν εἰσεληλυθότα ἀπὸ κακῆς ὁμιλίας, τὸν δ' illustrated by Cicero's jest about Verres, "futurum ut omnia vereretur" (Quint. vi 3. 55). Suidas has νεωκορήσει. ἐνίστε ἀντὶ τοῦ ἱεροσυνλήσει· κορεῖν γὰρ λέγουσι τὸ καλλύνειν, τὸ σαροῦν ('sweep') καὶ ἐκκαλλύνειν. The explanation of the Scholiast is less accurate. See also Shück de Scholiis p. 34 and Photius i p. 103 (ed. Porson) ἱερόν τι νεωκορήσας· εὐφημότερον ἀντὶ τοῦ ἱεροσυνλήσας (as emended by Schneider). L. and S. say that νεωκόρος does not mean 'temple-sweeper' till Philo, but the present passage shews that this meaning is at least as old as Plato.

26 δικαίας. The letters αια are written over an erasure in A, so that the scribe may have originally written δίκας, which appears in all other mss. The Scholiast read δικαίας, as appears from his paraphrase τῶν δοξῶν τῶν ἀγαθῶν, ἃς πάλαι εἶχεν, and no one, since Bekker, has adopted δίκας except Stallbaum. τὰς δίκας ποιουμένας is indefensible, and χρηστάς in 573 B, to which Plato here refers, proves δικαίας right.

ποιουμένας κτλ. ποιουμένας = 'accounted': see on vi 498 A. The words ἐκ δουλείας λελυμέναι correspond to viii 567 E. ὄναρ is an adverbial accusative: cf. vii 520 C n. The expression ἐν ὕπνῳ, though excised by Cobet (*V. L.*² p. 525), is quite in keeping with Plato's ubertas orationis.

574 E 29 ἐν ἑαυτῷ. So also in 579 c. Herwerden calls for ἐν ἑαυτοῦ, which could, of course, only mean 'in his senses': see Blaydes on Ar. Wasps 642.

30 γενόμενος κτλ. γιγνώμενος (Richards in Cl. Rev. viii p. 23, following Ste-phanus) is a groundless conjecture. The tyrannical man must have reached this stage before he sticks at nothing. On βρώματος see 571 D n.

575 A 2 ἅτε αὐτὸς κτλ.: 'being himself a monarch with sole sway will not only lead the man in whom he dwells as in a city unto every form of daring' etc. τε is used ἀνακολούθως: see on ii 373 B. The words ἅτε αὐτὸς ὢν μόναρχος suggest as the proper supplement of the τε clause something like 'but will also make him a tyrant too'; and the sentiment appears in a somewhat different form in 575 C, D (where see nn.). So Hofer (de part. Pl. p. 14) correctly explains the passage. Schneider understands κυβερνῶν or the like (to balance ὢν) after πόλιν—an impossible solution, which he himself abandoned afterwards in his translation. Others cancel τε (q and Stallbaum), or suggest ἔχοντά τε καὶ τρέφοντα (Richards). Neither proposal is either necessary or probable. The words ὥσπερ πόλιν have also caused difficulty; and Vind. E offers the ingenious emendation πῶλον (sic). Should ὥσπερ πόλιν be connected with τὸν ἔχοντά τε αὐτόν or with ἄξει? The latter view has hitherto, I believe, been held; but the introduction of the parallel is very awkward, and, in point of fact, neither ἔρως nor even the tyrant himself was said in Book viii to lead the city into daring deeds (viii 566 D ff., quoted by Stallbaum, is nothing to the point). On the other view ὥσπερ πόλιν is natural and easy: if ὁ ἔρως is a μόναρχος, ὁ ἔχων τὸν ἔρωτα is the πόλις where he rules. Cf. ἔως ἂν ἐν αὐτοῖς ὥσπερ ἐν πόλει πολιτείαν καταστήσωμεν 590 E.

ἐνδοθεν ὑπὸ τῶν αὐτῶν τρόπων καὶ ἑαυτοῦ ἀνεθέντα καὶ ἐλευθερωθέντα· ἢ οὐχ οὗτος ὁ βίος τοῦ τοιοῦτου; Οὗτος μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

B Καὶ ἂν μὲν γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὀλίγοι οἱ τοιοῦτοι ἐν πόλει ὥσι· καὶ τὸ ἄλλο πλῆθος σωφρονῇ, ἐξελθόντες ἄλλον τινὰ δορυφοροῦσι τύραννον ἢ μισθοῦ ἐπικουροῦσιν, ἕαν πον πόλεμος ᾗ· ἕαν δ' ἐν εἰρήνῃ τε καὶ ἡσυχίᾳ γένωνται, αὐτοῦ δὴ ἐν τῇ πόλει κακὰ δρῶσι 10 σμικρὰ πολλά. Τὰ ποῖα δὴ λέγεις; Οἷα κλέπτουσι, τοιχωρυχοῦσι, βαλλαντιοτομοῦσι, λωποδυτοῦσιν, ἱεροσυλοῦσιν, ἀνδραποδί-ζονται· ἔστι δ' ὅτε συκοφαντοῦσιν, ἕαν δυνατοὶ ὥσι λέγειν, καὶ ψευδομαρτυροῦσι καὶ δωροδοκοῦσιν. Σμικρὰ γ', ἔφη, κακὰ λέγεις, C ἕαν ὀλίγοι ὥσιν οἱ τοιοῦτοι. Τὰ γὰρ σμικρὰ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρὸς τὰ 15 μεγάλᾳ σμικρὰ ἔστιν καὶ ταῦτα δὴ πάντα πρὸς τύραννον πονηρία τε καὶ ἀθλιότητι πόλεως, τὸ λεγόμενον, οὐδ' ἔκταρ βάλλει. ὅταν γὰρ δὴ πολλοὶ ἐν πόλει γένωνται οἱ τοιοῦτοι καὶ ἄλλοι οἱ ξυνε-

17. ἔκταρ II: ἔκταρ A.

5 ὑπὸ τῶν—ἑαυτοῦ has been called 'nonsense' by Richards, who conjectures for καὶ ἑαυτοῦ either ἐαυτῶ, or καὶ αὐτῶν: Herwerden contents himself with deleting καί. The text is assuredly sound; and although Stallbaum is here at fault, Vermehren correctly explained the passage as long ago as 1870 (Pl. Stud. pp. 112 ff.). καί is quoque, and we should translate 'by means of the same dispositions in himself also' ("durch dieselben Eigenschaften auch seiner selbst" Vermehren). τῶν αὐτῶν sc. as those of his evil associates. The history of the State furnishes an exact parallel in the contrast between the foreign mercenaries and the emancipated slaves (VIII 567 D, E). Jowett's translation is right, but in his edition he still takes καί as 'and.'

575 B II κλέπτουσι κτλ. recalls I 344 B (where see n.) and 348 D. From Xen. Mem. I 2. 62 and Symp. 4. 36 it would seem that these crimes were commonly cited as instances of ἀδικία in the Socratic school. Cf. also Ar. Thesm. 817 ff.

575 C 15 ἕαν—τοιοῦτοι is bracketed by Herwerden. The words are certainly difficult, if σμικρὰ γε κακὰ be taken as ironical, for we have no right to render ἕαν by 'even if': "a small catalogue of evils—(even) if there are only a few such men!" J. and C. But there is no irony. The meaning is 'True, they are small evils, if such men are few in number.' 'Yes,' said I, 'for small is small in comparison with great.' Adimantus' caveat prepares us for ὅταν γὰρ δὴ πολλοὶ κτλ. below.

16 πονηρία: 'in respect of a city's wretchedness and misery.' For the datives cf. VI 509 D (σαφηνεία καὶ ἀσαφεία), VIII 555 A and infra 576 C. Its union with ἀθλιότητι seems to shew that πονηρία is here 'wretchedness' rather than 'vice,' although the Greeks did not clearly separate the two ideas (see on I 335 B), and in Plato wickedness is misery.

17 οὐδ' ἔκταρ βάλλει: 'are not within sight of.' The proverb means οὐδὲ ἐγγύς ἐστιν (Diogen. III 46). The other sources are given in Deutsch u. Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. II p. 43. Eustathius (in Od. II 292. 27, quoted by Schneider) argues for the rough breathing ἔκταρ (see cr. n.), on the ground that the word comes from ἰκνοῦμαι; but it is clear from his argument, as well as from the other authorities, that ἔκταρ was the regular pronunciation.

ὅταν γὰρ δὴ κτλ. The tyrannical man is like the philosopher in one respect. He does not attain to his full development except in a city meet for him. See VI 497 A and Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 318. With μετὰ δήμου ἀνοίας cf. Solon Frag. 11 ed. Bergk.

πόμενοι αὐτοῖς καὶ αἰσθωνται ἑαυτῶν τὸ πλήθος, τότε οὗτοί εἰσιν 20 οἱ τὸν τύραννον γεννῶντες μετὰ δήμου ἀνοίας, ἐκείνου, ὃς ἂν αὐτῶν μάλιστα αὐτὸς ἐν αὐτῷ μέγιστον καὶ ἰ πλείστον ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ D τύραννον ἔχῃ. Εἰκότως γ', ἔφη· τυραννικώτατος γὰρ ἂν εἴη.
 Οὐκοῦν ἐὰν μὲν ἐκόντες ὑπέικωσιν· ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ἐπιτρέπη ἡ πόλις, ὥσπερ τότε μητέρα καὶ πατέρα ἐκόλαζεν, οὕτω πάλιν τὴν πατρίδα, 25 ἐὰν οἷός τ' ᾖ, κολάσεται ἐπεισαγόμενος νέους ἐταίρους, καὶ ὑπὸ τούτοις δὴ δουλεύουσιν τὴν πάλαι φίλην μητρίδα τε, Κρήτες φασί, καὶ πατρίδα ἔξει τε καὶ θρέψει. καὶ τοῦτο δὴ τὸ τέλος ἂν εἴη τῆς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ τοιούτου ἀνδρός. ἰ Τοῦτο, ἡ δ' ὅς, παντάπασί γε. E Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὗτοί γε τοιοῖδε γίγνονται ἰδίᾳ καὶ πρὶν ἄρχειν; 30 πρῶτον μὲν οἷς ἂν ξυνῶσιν, ἡ κόλαξιν ἑαυτῶν ξυνόντες καὶ πᾶν ἐτοιμοῖς ὑπηρετεῖν, ἡ ἐὰν τοῦ τι δέωνται, αὐτοῖς ὑποπεσόντες, πάντα 576 σχήματα τολμῶντες ποιεῖν ὡς οἰκεῖοι, διαπραξάμενοι δὲ ἀλλότριον; Καὶ σφόδρα γε. Ἐν παντὶ ἄρα τῷ βίῳ ζῶσι φίλοι μὲν οὐδέποτε οὐδενί, αἰεὶ δὲ του δεσπύζοντες ἡ δουλεύοντες ἄλλῳ, ἐλευθερίας δὲ 5 καὶ φιλίας ἀληθοῦς τυραννικὴ φύσις αἰεὶ ἄγευστος. Πάνν μὲν οὖν.
 Ἄρ' οὖν οὐκ ὀρθῶς ἂν τοὺς τοιούτους ἀπίστους καλοῖμεν; Πῶς δ' οὐ; Καὶ μὴν ἀδίκους γε ὡς οἷόν τε μάλιστα, εἴπερ ὀρθῶς ἐν τοῖς πρόσθεν ἰ ὠμολογήσαμεν περὶ δικαιοσύνης, οἷόν ἐστιν. Ἀλλὰ B μὴν, ἡ δ' ὅς, ὀρθῶς γε. Κεφαλαιωσώμεθα τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὸν 10 κίκιστον. ἔστιν δέ που, οἷον ὄναρ διήλθομεν, ὃς ἂν ὕπαρ τοιούτος

31. τοῦ τι (vel του τί) Eγ: τοῦτί AII.

575 D 21 πλείστον—τύραννον. The τύραννος is ἔρως: see 575 A τυραννικῶς ἐν αὐτῷ ὁ ἔρως—ζῶν and 573 D. This explanation, with which Schneider agrees, is better than to make τύραννος equivalent merely to 'the tyrannical element' (cf. II 382 D n.) and so weaken the force of τυραννικώτατος γὰρ ἂν εἴη. Plato here ignores the fact that if a successful tyrant has strong passions he is usually not less strong in capacity and will. If he were entirely the slave of Passion, he would not prove successful.

23 ἐὰν μὲν κτλ. Cf. Prot. 325 D.
 The idiom, which begins with Homer, is illustrated at length by Herwerden Διμ. XIX pp. 338 f. The reference in ὥσπερ τότε is to 574 C. νέους is 'new' (Schneider), not 'young': cf. VIII 568 A n., and νεωστὶ φίλης, νεωστὶ φίλου 574 B, C. μητρίδα Photius (ed. Porson I p. 268) thus explains: μητρίδα· τὴν πατρίδα.

καὶ Πλάτων καὶ Φερεκράτης. Cf. Synes.
Ep. 93. 1460 A Migne μητρίδος, ὡς ἂν Κρήτες εἴποιεν.

27 ἔξει τε καὶ θρέψει: 'will have and hold' ('haben und halten' Schneider).
 There is no sarcasm in θρέψει ('that is his way of supporting her!') J. and C.): nor does the word in this passage mean more than 'keep.'

29 τοιοῖδε γίγνονται. τοιοῖδε "ad se-quentia spectat" (Schneider), and γίγνον-ται = 'prove themselves,' 'shew themselves,' as often.

576 A 2 ἀλλότριον: sc. γιγνόμενον, rather than γίγνονται, which Schneider supplies. The participles are all in explanatory apposition with τοιοῖδε. Ast bids us repeat ὡς, wrongly: see Heindorf on Theaet. 167 E.

3 φίλοι μὲν—οὐδενί. Cf. Xen. Hiero.
 3 and VIII 567 B n.

576 B 10 οἷον κτλ.: "qui vigilans

ἦ. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν. Οὐκοῦν οὗτος γίγνεται ὃς ἂν τυραννικώτατος φύσει ὦν μοναρχήσῃ, καὶ ὅσῳ ἂν πλείω χρόνον ἐν τυραννίδι βιῶ, τοσοῦτῳ μᾶλλον τοιοῦτος. Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη διαδεξάμενος τὸν λόγον ὁ Γλαῦκων.

IV. Ἀρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὃς ἂν φαίνεται πονηρότατος, καὶ 15
C ἁθλιώτατος φανήσεται; καὶ ὃς ἂν πλείστον χρόνον καὶ μάλιστα τυρανεύσῃ, μάλιστα τε καὶ πλείστον χρόνον τοιοῦτος γεγονὸς τῇ ἀληθείᾳ; τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς πολλὰ καὶ δοκεῖ. Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη, ταῦτα talis est, qualem finximus supra (571 C, D, E) somniantem” (Stallbaum). The Oxford editors, with D. and V., and apparently also Schneider, translate ‘He is the man who in reality is such as we imagined him in our dream.’ The Greek is perhaps a little simpler if we take this view, but I agree with Bosanquet in preferring Stallbaum’s, partly because such a statement could scarcely be called a κεφάλαιον, and partly on account of 574 E οἷος ὀλιγάκις ἐγένετο ὄναρ, ὕπαρ τοιοῦτος δὲ γινόμενος—a striking observation which would be at once recalled to Adimantus’ mind, although the strong antithesis between ὄναρ and ὕπαρ is alone sufficient to suggest the meaning. We expect brevity and compression in a summary description of this kind. For the purposes of grammatical explanation we should supply εἶναι after διήλθομεν (‘as we described a man to be in dreams’). The ellipse is easy because of ἦ: for ὃς—ἦ is logically antecedent to οἷον—διήλθομεν.

II οὗτος γίγνεται. οὗτος is in the predicate. For γίγνεται see on VIII 562 A.

13 διαδεξάμενος κτλ. We have now finished our account of depraved cities and individuals, and the change of interlocutors shews that we are about to enter on a new stage in the discussion: cf. VI 487 A, 506 D al. Aristotle blames Plato for not saying what is to follow tyranny (Pol. E 12. 1316^a 25 ff.). In reply, Plato would, I think, first point out that he is not required to touch on this subject either by the main thesis of the Republic or by the special aim which he has in view throughout Books VIII and IX (see VIII 543 A n.). He might afterwards observe that, since the best hope of founding the perfect city lies in imbuing an absolute ruler or one of his descendants with a love of genuine philosophy (VI 499 B—502 C), the deepest darkness perhaps contained a promise of the dawn. See especially the striking passage in Law 709 E—712 A. Aristotle seems to have understood him to mean this (ἐπεὶ κατ’ ἐκείνους δεῖ εἰς τὴν πρώτην καὶ τὴν ἀρίστην· οὕτως γὰρ ἂν ἐγένετο συνεχὲς καὶ κύκλος l.c.), and criticises him accordingly from the facts of experience; but the succession of polities in the Republic is not intended to be in all respects, or even primarily and chiefly, historical (VIII 543 A n.).

576 B—577 B What shall we say then about the happiness or unhappiness of the individual who is most depraved? As is the city, so will the individual be in point of happiness as well as virtue. And the city in which a tyrant rules is of all cities the worst and most unhappy. What of the tyrannical man? He that has lived with a tyrant, and is himself moreover capable of judging, will best decide. Let us pretend, says Socrates, that we ourselves possess these qualifications.

576 C ff. We have now discussed ὁ κάκιστος, and it only remains to compare him with ὁ ἀριστος in respect of happiness and misery. The present chapter is introductory to the triad of arguments by means of which Plato proves that the victory rests with ὁ ἀριστος. His description of the misery of the tyrant is based, as he virtually tells us, on the evidence of his own eyes (577 A, B nn.), but we should of course remember that in such cases we are apt to see what we wish to see, and Plato’s description, regarded as a portrait of Dionysius I, though it doubtless possesses a certain historical value, may well be somewhat overdrawn.

576 C 18 τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς κτλ. = ‘although the multitude are multitudinous also in their views’ expresses the antithesis implied in the emphatic τῇ ἀληθείᾳ γούν οὕτως ἔχειν. Ἄλλο τι οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὃ γε τυραννικὸς κατὰ 20 τὴν τυραννουμένην πόλιν ἂν εἴη ὁμοιότητι, δημοτικὸς δὲ κατὰ δημοκρατουμένην, καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι οὕτω; Τί μὴν; Οὐκοῦν ὃ τι πόλις πρὸς πόλιν ἀρετῇ καὶ εὐδαιμονίᾳ, τοῦτο καὶ ἀνὴρ πρὸς ἄνδρα; Ἰ Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Τί οὖν ἀρετῇ τυραννουμένη πόλις πρὸς Δ βασιλευομένην οἶαν τὸ πρῶτον διήλθομεν; Πᾶν τοῦναντίον, ἔφη.

 25 ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀρίστη, ἡ δὲ κακίστη. Οὐκ ἐρήσομαι, εἶπον, ὅποτεράν λέγεις· δῆλον γάρ. ἀλλ' εὐδαιμονίας τε αὐτὰ καὶ ἀθλιότητος ὡσαύτως ἢ ἄλλως κρίνεις; καὶ μὴ ἐκπληττώμεθα πρὸς τὸν τύραννον ἓνα ὄντα βλέποντες, μῆδ' εἴ τινας ὀλίγοι περὶ ἐκείνον, ἀλλ' ὡς χρῆ ὅλην τὴν πόλιν εἰσελθόντας θεάσασθαι, καταδύντες ἰ εἰς ἅπασαν Ε 30 καὶ ἰδόντες, οὕτω δόξαν ἀποφαινόμεθα. Ἄλλ' ὀρθῶς, ἔφη, προκαλεῖ· καὶ δῆλον παντί, ὅτι τυραννουμένης μὲν οὐκ ἔστιν ἀθλιωτέρα, βασιλευομένης δὲ οὐκ εὐδαιμονεστέρα. Ἄρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ περὶ τῶν ἀνδρῶν τὰ αὐτὰ ταῦτα προκαλοῦμενος ὀρθῶς ἂν προ- 577 καλοίμην, ἀξιῶν κρίνειν περὶ αὐτῶν ἐκείνον, ὃς δύναται τῇ διανοίᾳ εἰς ἀνδρὸς ἥθος ἐνδὺς διιδεῖν, καὶ μὴ καθάπερ παῖς ἔξωθεν ὁρῶν ἐκπλήττεται ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν τυραννικῶν προστάσεως, ἦν πρὸς τοὺς 5 ἔξω σχηματίζονται, ἀλλ' ἱκανῶς διορᾷ; εἰ οὖν οἰοίμην δεῖν ἐκείνον

23. ἀρετῇ γρ in marg. A²: ἀρα ἢ A¹: ἀρα ἢ ΠΞ q.

)(τῇ δόξῃ. Herwerden's conjecture τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς ἄλλα δοκεῖ is singularly feeble and inelegant. The Scholiast neatly remarks πολλὰ δοκεῖ· ἀντὶ τοῦ ψευδῆ· τὸ γὰρ ψεῦδος πολυχρῶν, ἀπλοῦς δ' ὁ μῦθος τῆς ἀληθείας ἔφν. On Plato's contempt of the many see VI 494 A n.

ταῦτα refers to the two questions, not to τοῖς—δοκεῖ. If otherwise, Plato would, I think, have written τοῦτο here.

20 ὁμοιότητι, though doubted by Ast, Cobet, Herwerden, and others, is sound enough: see on VIII 555 A.

576 D 23 ἀρετῇ. See cr. n. The correct reading was first restored by Schneider 26 εὐδαιμονίας—ἀθλιότητος κτλ. For the genitive see on V 470 A. μὴ ἐκπληττώμεθα = 'do not let us be dazzled' (D. and V.): cf. 577 A. Jowett's 'panick-stricken' suggests a wrong idea.

28 ἀλλ' ὡς κτλ.: 'but as it is necessary to go into and survey the entire city, do not let us give our opinion until we have crept into the whole of the interior and seen it.' It is best to make ὡς virtually causal, as it often is when dependent on imperatives or imperatival expressions (here ἀποφαινόμεθα): cf. I 336 D, IV 420 E, Symp. 189 B et al. With εἰς ὅλην τὴν πόλιν κτλ. cf. IV 421 B ἢ τοῦτο μὲν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ὅλην βλέποντας θεάσασθαι κτλ. καταδύναι playfully suggests that we mean to elude the tyrant's eye (cf. infra 579 B, Gorg. 485 D). He shall not catch us if we can help it. For other views on this clause see App. I.

577 A 4 τῆς—σχηματίζονται: 'circumstance and pomp of majesty, which they put on to the world outside.' Cf. προσθήσασθαι X 599 A n. and (with Schneider) II 365 C πρόθυρα μὲν καὶ σχῆμα—περιγραπτέον. τῶν τυραννικῶν seems to be usually taken as masculine, in which case it might have been omitted without any loss to the meaning. I think it is the genitive of τὰ τυραννικά: cf. B below ἐν οἷς μάλιστα γυμνὸς ἂν ὀφείη τῆς τραγικῆς σκευῆς.

5 εἰ οὖν οἰοίμην κτλ. 'If then I should think it right for all of us to listen to the man who is both capable πάντας ἡμᾶς ἀκούειν, τοῦ δυνατοῦ μὲν κρίναι, ξυνωκηκότος δὲ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ καὶ παραγεγονότος ἔν τε ταῖς κατ' οἰκίαν πράξεσιν, ὥς B πρὸς ἐκείστους τοὺς οἰκείους ἔχει, ἐν οἷς μιλιστα γυνὸς ἂν ὀφθῇ τῆς τραγικῆς σκευῆς, καὶ ἐν αὐτοῖς δημοσίοις κινδύνοις, καὶ ταῦτα πάντα ἰδόντα κελεύοιμεν ἐξαγγέλλειν, πῶς ἔχει εὐδαιμονίας καὶ 10 ἀθλιότητος ὁ τύραννος πρὸς τοὺς ἄλλους; 'Ορθότατ' ἂν, ἔφη, καὶ ταῦτα προκαλοῖο. Βούλει οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, προσποιησώμεθα ἡμεῖς

8. ἂν ὀφθῇ II: ἀνοφθῇ A.

12. προσποιησώμεθα AΠ: προσποιησόμεθα A².

of judging' etc. The dialogue form is strained almost to breaking in this remarkable sentence. We are all to be silent and listen to Plato himself. Plato might fairly claim from his psychological studies and experience as a teacher, to be δυνατὸς τῇ διανοίᾳ εἰς ἀνδρὸς ἥθος ἐνδὺς διδεῖν and so δυνατὸς κρίναι, and he had lived under the same roof with Dionysius I of Syracuse. The poet Gray was one of the first to observe that Plato is here meant.

577 B 8 ἐν οἷς = 'among whom' is surely better and more natural than ἐν αἷς, which Richards has conjectured. The tyrant lays aside the mask in his own family.

9 τραγικῆς σκευῆς = "theatrical garb" (D. and V.) again betrays "a feeling of the kinship between the shows of tyranny and those of tragedy" (Bosanquet: cf. VIII 568 A n.). Dionysius I was himself a writer of tragedies, and notoriously jealous—so we are told—of his poetical reputation (Grote x pp. 302 ff.): but it would be frigid to suppose that this was in Plato's mind when he wrote the word τραγικῆς.

αὐτοῖς was first conjecturally restored by Heindorf (on Soph. 262 A), following Ficinus, instead of the vulgate αὐτοῖς. It has since been found to be the reading of most of the other MSS as well as A.

10 κελεύοιμεν. The singular κελεύοιμι (7 Flor. U) is still read by Stallbaum. There is surely no reason why Socrates should not associate Glauco with himself in this hypothetical invitation.

11 ὀρθότατ' ἂν—προκαλοῖο forms the apodosis to what Socrates has said (cf. 582 E), but refers "ad initium potius quam ad exitum orationis Socraticae" (Schneider. Cf. v 465 E n.). Glauco admits most fully the claim that Plato has earned a right to speak with authority on this subject.

12 προσποιησώμεθα κτλ. Plato cannot appear in propria persona, so that it is necessary for Socrates and Glauco to pretend that they also belong to the number of those 'who would be able to judge' and have met with τύραννοι and τυραννικοί. The fiction is rendered necessary by the laws of dialogue as ἵνα—ἐρωτῶμεν frankly states. We must beware of supposing that it is Plato who 'pretends': Plato does not pretend, but ὡς δυνατὸς μὲν κρίναι, ξυνωκηκῶς δὲ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ κτλ. (577 A). Richards objects to ἂν with δυνατῶν, and it is certainly unusual to find ἂν with an adjective in this way. But as δυνατῶν can itself take an infinitive, it hardly differs from the participle δυναμένων, and the suggestions δυνατῶν ὄντων, or δυνατῶν ἂν <όντων>, are unattractive. I should add in conclusion that nearly all critics are now agreed in holding that Plato throughout the whole of this passage is referring to his own experience of Dionysius I: see for example Susemihl Gen. Entw. II pp. 240, 294 ff., Teichmüller Lit. Fehd. I p. 110, Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. d. Pl. Pol. pp. 667 ff., with Zeller⁴ II p. 413 n. 1. The date of Plato's first visit to the elder Dionysius was in or near 388 B.C. Compare Epp. VII 324 A—327 D. Whether this epistle be genuine or not, the visit is abundantly attested, as Zeller proves (l.c. pp. 413—415 nn.), and it is strange that J. and C. should still have doubts upon the subject. See also on v 473 D, VI 496 B, 499 B and infra 579 B n.

577 B—580 C Like the city whose counterpart he is, the tyrannical man is in reality a slave, powerless to work his will, penniless and insatiate, full of fear and lamentation. A still greater depth of misery awaits him if he becomes a εἶναι τῶν δυνατῶν ἂν κρίναι καὶ ἤδη ἐντυχόντων τοιούτοις, ἵνα ἔχωμεν ὅστις ἀποκρινεῖται ἃ ἐρωτῶμεν; Πάνυ γε.

- 15 V. "Ἴθι δὴ μοι, ἔφην, ὧδε σκόπει. ἴ τὴν ὁμοιότητα ἀναμιμνη- C σκόμενος τῆς τε πόλεως καὶ τοῦ ἀνδρός, οὕτω καθ' ἕκαστον ἐν μέρει ἀθρῶν τὰ παθήματα ἑκατέρου λέγε. Τὰ ποῖα; ἔφη.
Πρώτον μὲν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὡς πόλιν εἰπεῖν, ἐλευθέραν ἢ δουλὴν τὴν τυραννουμένην ἐρεῖς; 'Ὡς οἶόν τ', ἔφη, μάλιστα δούλην. Καὶ μὴν 20 ὁρᾷς γε ἐν αὐτῇ δεσπότης καὶ ἐλευθέρους. 'Ορῶ, ἔφη, σμικρόν γε τι τοῦτο· τὸ δὲ ὅλον, ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, ἐν αὐτῇ καὶ τὸ ἐπικεκῆστατον ἀτίμως τε καὶ ἀθλίως δούλον. Εἰ οὖν, εἶπον, ὅμοιος ἴ ἀνὴρ τῇ D πόλει, οὐ καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῳ ἀνάγκη τὴν αὐτὴν τάξιν ἐνεῖναι, καὶ πολλῆς μὲν δουλείας τε καὶ ἀνελευθερίας γέμειν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ, 22. ἀνὴρ Campbell: ἀνὴρ codd.

tyrant. Imagine the piteous plight of one who is suddenly transported into a solitary place where he is at the mercy of his own slaves, and surrounded by free neighbours who make common cause with them! Such is the position of the tyrant, a prisoner in his own palace, tormented by longings which he can never appease. To sum up, he is the supreme embodiment of vice and misery, and the longer he holds sway, the worse he becomes.

Let us now give judgment. In respect of virtue and happiness the different individuals stand as follows: (1) Kingly, (2) Timocratical, (3) Oligarchical, (4) Democratical, (5) Tyrannical. He who is most kingly is best and happiest, he who is most a tyrant over himself and city, worst and most miserable,—whether their true character be hidden from men and gods, or not.

577 c ff. The arguments by means of which Plato establishes his conclusion may be briefly described as the political argument, the psychological argument, and the metaphysical argument. The first (577 B—580 C) depends on the resemblance between the soul and the State, the second (580 C—583 A) on the three-fold division of the soul into λογιστικόν, θυμοειδές, and ἐπιθυμητικόν, the third (583 B—587 B) on Plato's theory of Reality or Being. Now it is just these three methods of investigation, and these alone, which have been employed in the different parts of the dialogue, the political and psychological in II—IV and VIII—IX, the metaphysical in V—VII; and it is therefore altogether appropriate and right that Plato should bring them together now, and use their united forces 'in making up the last account.' The sequence of the three arguments follows the usual Platonic way of progression from the exoteric to the esoteric, and as the ideal city culminated in metaphysical idealism, so it is a metaphysical argument that crowns our citadel of proof.

577 C 16 καθ' ἕκαστον κτλ. καθ' ἕκαστον = 'point by point,' 'in detail,' not 'singly' (D. and V.), which would be καθ' ἑκάτερον here, since only two objects of comparison are involved. ἀθρῶν: sc. ἑκάτερον, viz. the city and the man (J. and C.). On ὡς πόλιν εἰπεῖν and ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν ('I might almost say') see I 341 B n.

577 D 22 ἀνὴρ. See cr. n. I have followed the advice of a reviewer of my Text of the Republic in Hermath. xxiv p. 256 and accepted Campbell's ἀνὴρ. It is difficult to dispense with the article here: cf. τῆς τε πόλεως καὶ τοῦ ἀνδρός above.

24 ἀνελευθερίας κτλ. In ἀνελευθερίας there is here a strong suggestion of the etymological meaning ("Unfreiheit" Schneider). μικρόν, as J. and C. observe, is introduced to make the parallel between State and individual as complete as possible. From another point of view it might be held that the μοχθηρότατον in the tyrannical soul is not σμικρόν but πολὺ (573 D—576 B).

καὶ ταῦτα αὐτῆς τὰ μέρη δουλεύειν, ἄπερ ἦν ἐπιεικέστατα, μικρὸν 25
 δὲ καὶ τὸ μοχθηρότατον καὶ μακρώτατον δεσπόζειν; Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη. Τί οὖν; δούλην ἢ ἐλευθέραν τὴν τοιαύτην φήσεις εἶναι ψυχὴν; Δούλην δὴ που ἔγωγε. Οὐκοῦν ἢ γε αὖ δούλη καὶ τυραννουμένη πόλις ἥκιστα ποιεῖ ἂ βούλεται; Πολύ γε. Καὶ ἢ Ε τυραννουμένη ἄρα ψυχὴ ἥκιστα ποιήσει ἂ ἂν βουλευθῇ, ὡς περὶ 30 ὅλης εἰπέειν ψυχῆς· ὑπὸ δὲ οἴστρου αἰεὶ ἐλκομένη βία ταραχῆς καὶ μεταμελείας μεστὴ ἔσται. Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Πλουσίαν δὲ ἢ πενομένην ἀνάγκη τὴν τυραννουμένην πόλιν εἶναι; Πενομένην.
 578 Καὶ ψυχὴν ἄρα τυραννικὴν | πενιχρὰν καὶ ἄπληστον ἀνάγκη αἰεὶ εἶναι. Οὕτως, ἢ δ' ὅς. Τί δέ; φόβου γέμειν ἄρ' οὐκ ἀνάγκη τὴν τε τοιαύτην πόλιν τὸν τε τοιοῦτον ἄνδρα; Πολλή γε. Ὀδυρμούς δὲ καὶ στεναγμούς καὶ θρήνους καὶ ἀλγηδόνας οἶει ἔν τινι ἄλλῃ πλείους εὐρήσειν; Οὐδαμῶς. Ἐν ἀνδρὶ δὲ ἡγεῖ τὰ τοιαῦτα ἐν 5 ἄλλῳ τινὶ πλείω εἶναι ἢ ἐν τῷ μαινομένῳ ὑπὸ ἐπιθυμιῶν τε καὶ ἐρώτων τούτῳ τῷ τυραννικῷ; Πῶς γὰρ ἂν; ἔφη. Εἰς πάντα δὴ, Β οἶμαι, ταῦτά τε καὶ ἄλλα τοιαῦτα ἀποβλέψας τὴν γε πόλιν τῶν πόλεων ἀθλιωτάτην ἔκρινας. Οὐκοῦν ὀρθῶς; ἔφη. Καὶ μάλα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. ἀλλὰ περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς αὐτοῦ τυραννικοῦ τί λέγεις εἰς ταῦτα 10

3. τε τοιαύτην Ξ: γε τοιαύτην ΑΠ q. τε ΑΠ q¹.

4. δὲ Ξ: τε ΑΠ q.

8. γε Ξ q²:

577 D, E 29 καὶ ἡ τυραννουμένη
 κτλ. There is no βούλησις, in the true sense of that term, except τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ:
 cf. I 336 A with the Gorgias quoted ad loc. and Men. 77 C ff. Or in other words Virtue alone is free: cf. ἀρετὴ δὲ ἀδέσποτον x 617 E with note ad loc. See also Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 317.

30 ὡς—ψυχῆς. The restriction (for which cf. 579 E) is necessary, for the μοχθηρότατον part of the τυραννουμένη ψυχὴ will have its way.

31 ἐλκομένη κτλ. Badham's ἐλάννομένη would be less suitable with βία than ἐλκομένη (cf. VII 515 E), and is otherwise a gratuitous alteration. On ταραχῆς see VIII 547 A, 557 A, 561 C nn. In the tyrannical soul the fatal principle of ἀνομοιότης attains its highest development. With μεταμελείας cf. ὁ δ' ἀκρατὴς μεταμελητικός (Arist. Eth. Nic. VII 9. 1150^b 30).

578 A 1 ἄπληστον: like the sieve in Gorg. 493 A—D (Nettleship). Nothing can 'fill up the cistern' of his lust.

2 τὴν γε—πόλιν. I follow the Oxford editors in putting τε for γε (see cr. n.).

 γε is not indefensible; but the balance with τὸν τε τοιοῦτον ἄνδρα is strongly in favour of τε: see the examples cited in Hoefel de part. Plat. p. 12.

3 ὀδυρμούς δέ. See cr. n. Jowett defended τε: Campbell and all the other editors do better in accepting the text of Ξ. A few MSS have γε: and Plato may have written ὀδυρμούς δέ γε as Schneider suggests.

5 ἐν ἀνδρὶ κτλ.: 'and in an individual,' viz. as contrasted with a πόλις, whence the emphatic position to which the words are assigned. In ἐν ἄλλῳ τινὶ the idiom is akin to 'partitive apposition': see IV 431 A n.

578 B 8 τὴν γε πόλιν. γε is restrictive: our verdict on the individual has still to be pronounced. Cf. 582 B, C.
 J. and C. are the only editors who retain τε here (see cr. n.), but the anacoluthon would be too harsh, and τὸν ἔχοντά τε in 575 A is different: see note ad loc.

ταῦτα ἀποβλέπων; Μακρῶ, ἔφη, ἀθλιώτατον εἶναι τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων. Τοῦτο, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὐκέτ' ὀρθῶς λέγεις. Πῶς; ἦ δ' ὅς. Οὐπω, ἔφην, οἶμαι, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τοιοῦτος μάλιστα. Ἀλλὰ τίς μήν; "Οὐδ' ἴσως σοι ἔτι δόξει εἶναι τούτου ἀθλιώτερος. Ποῖος; 15 "Ὅς ἂν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τυραννικὸς ὢν μὴ ἰδιώτην βίον καταβιῶ, ἀλλὰ C δυστυχῆς ἦ καὶ αὐτῷ ὑπὸ τινος συμφορᾶς ἐκπορισθῇ ὥστε τυράννη γενέσθαι. Τεκμαίρομαί σε, ἔφη, ἐκ τῶν προειρημένων ἀληθῆ λέγειν. Ναί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· ἀλλ' οὐκ οἶεσθαι χρὴ τὰ τοιαῦτα, ἀλλ' εὖ μάλα τῷ τοιοῦτῳ λόγῳ σκοπεῖν. περὶ γάρ τοι τοῦ μεγίστου ἡ 20 σκέψις, ἀγαθοῦ τε βίου καὶ κακοῦ. Ὀρθότατα, ἦ δ' ὅς. Σκόπει δὴ, εἰ ἄρα τι λέγω. δοκεῖ γάρ μοι δεῖν ἐννοῆσαι ἵ ἐκ τῶνδε περὶ D αὐτοῦ σκοπούντας. Ἐκ τίνων; Ἐξ ἑνὸς ἐκάστου τῶν ἰδιωτῶν, ὅσοι πλούσιοι ἐν πόλεσιν ἀνδράποδα πολλὰ κέκτηνται. οὗτοι γάρ

19. τῷ τοιοῦτῳ nos: τῷ τοιοῦτῳ AΠΞζ.

13 τοιοῦτος μάλιστα: i.q. ἀθλιος μάλιστα. The subject is οὗτος, and ὁ τοιοῦτος μάλιστα is in the predicate.

578 C 15 τυραννικὸς ὢν. "Have a care of inserting any negative particle here, as H. Stephanus would do, which would wholly destroy the sense" (Thomas Gray). Cf. 575 C, D and 579 C.

16 δυστυχῆς ἦ. Cobet (*V. L.*² p. 534) revives Bekker's δυστυχῆς; but the MS reading is preferable: "significatur infelicitatem ei qui tyrannus factus sit, usque adesse perpetuoque eum comitari" (Schneider). Cf. VIII 561 A n. and δυστυχεῖ εἶναι 580 A.

18 ἀλλ' εὖ μάλα κτλ.: 'but carefully study by means of argument the two individuals in question.' τῷ τοιοῦτῳ is literally 'the two such people,' i.e. the two τυραννικοί, viz. the τυραννικός who lives an ἰδιώτης βίος, and the τυραννικός who becomes a τύραννος. It is the relative position of these two individuals in respect of misery which is the question before us now, and the rest of this chapter aims at answering it by argument: see 579 C, D, where the conclusion of the reasoning is given. No satisfactory explanation of the MS reading τῷ τοιοῦτῳ λόγῳ σκοπεῖν (cr. n.) has yet been offered. Some hold that τοιοῦτῳ refers forward ("nach folgender Regel," Schleiermacher, Prantl), but τῷ τοιοῦτῳ cannot be thus used, although τοιοῦτῳ by itself might be. Others translate "by the help of such a process of reasoning as we now employ" (J. and C. etc.). I doubt whether this meaning, which does not, by the way, furnish a sufficiently pointed antithesis to οἰεσθαι, is easily conveyed by τῷ τοιοῦτῳ. The translations "bei einer solchen Untersuchung" (Schneider), "where the argument is of such a nature" (J. and C., comparing the altogether different τοῖς τοιοῦτοις κακοῖς in 579 C), and 'in this high argument' are untenable on grammatical grounds; nor can we easily explain the dative as meaning 'in the interests of' ("videndum ne dativus eam rem significet, cuius gratia accurate quaerendum esse Socrates dicat" Schneider). The emendations proposed are (1) τῷ τοιοῦτῳ λόγῳ (Stephanus), (2) τὸ τοιοῦτον λόγῳ or τὸν τοιοῦτον λόγῳ (Ast), (3) fortasse εὖ μάλ' ἐν κτλ. (W. H. Thompson J. Ph. v p. 218). Did Stephanus mean by τῷ τοιοῦτῳ λόγῳ something like the δίκαιος and ἀδίκος λόγος of the Clouds? τοιοῦτῳ could not convey so much, but Stephanus was, I believe, on the right track when he restored τὸ τοιοῦτῳ. The corruption was all the easier, because the dual is constantly corrupted in the MSS of the Republic: thus in III 410 E all MSS have ἀμφοτέρα, in III 412 A ἐπιτεινομένης was written by A¹, in IV 422 E πολέμια is the reading of A, and in IV 442 D both A and Π give τῷ ἀρχομένῳ for τῷ ἀρχομένῳ. Cf. also III 395 A n.

578 D 23 ὅσοι πλούσιοι. We ought not, with J. and C., to understand ὄντες. The adjective logically belongs to ἰδιωτῶν, but is idiomatically placed in the relative clause: see Kuhner Gr. Gr. II pp. 924 ff.

τοῦτό γε προσόμοιον ἔχουσιν τοῖς τυράννοις, τὸ πολλῶν ἄρχειν· διαφέρει δὲ τὸ ἐκείνου πλήθος. Διαφέρει γάρ. Οἷσθ' οὖν ὅτι 25 οὗτοι ἀδεῶς ἔχουσιν καὶ οὐ φοβοῦνται τοὺς οἰκέτας; Τί γὰρ ἂν φοβοῖντο; Οὐδέν, εἶπον· ἀλλὰ τὸ αἷτιον ἐννοεῖς; Ναί· ὅτι γε E πᾶσα ἡ πόλις ἐνὶ ἐκάστῳ βοηθεῖ τῶν ἰδιωτῶν. Καλῶς, ¹ ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λέγεις. τί δέ; εἴ τις θεῶν ἄνδρα ἓνα, ὅτῳ ἔστιν ἀνδράποδα πεντήκοιτα ἢ πλεῖω, ἄρας ἐκ τῆς πόλεως αὐτόν τε καὶ γυναῖκα καὶ 30 παῖδας θείη εἰς ἐρημίαν μετὰ τῆς ἄλλης οὐσίας τε καὶ τῶν οἰκετῶν, ὅπου αὐτῷ μηδεὶς τῶν ἐλευθέρων μέλλοι βοηθήσειν, ἐν ποίῳ ἂν τιμὴ καὶ ὁπόσῳ φόβῳ οἷε γενέσθαι αὐτὸν περὶ τε αὐτοῦ καὶ παίδων καὶ γυναικός, μὴ ἀπόλουντο ὑπὸ τῶν οἰκετῶν; Ἐν παντί, ἦ δ' 79 ὅς, ἔγωγε. Οὐκοῦν | ἀναγκάζοιτο ἂν τινὰς ἤδη θωπεύειν αὐτῶν 35 τῶν δούλων, καὶ ὑπισχνεῖσθαι πολλὰ καὶ ἐλευθεροῦν οὐδὲν δεόμενος, καὶ κόλαξ αὐτὸς ἂν θεραπόντων ἀναφανείη; Πολλὴ ἀνάγκη, ἔφη, αὐτῷ, ἢ ἀπολωλέναι. Τί δ', εἰ καὶ ἄλλους, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὁ θεὸς

30. ἄρας II: ἄρας A.

25 ἐκείνου. On the transition from plural to singular see I 347 A n.

26 τί γὰρ κτλ.: 'Why of course, what should they be afraid of?' sc. in their slaves. τί is not 'why,' but 'what,' as οὐδὲν shews: cf. V 449 B n. Campbell, making τί 'why,' translates οὐδέν by 'Oh, for no reason,' and refers to Proī. 310 B; but there too οὐδέν is 'nothing': see my note ad loc.

57B E 29 εἴ τις θεῶν κτλ. It is a mistake to suppose from this passage that the treatment of slaves in Athens or Greece generally was exceptionally cruel or unkind. Granted the existence of slavery at all, what Plato here says would nearly always be found true, especially where, as in Athens, the slaves belonged for the most part to an alien and inferior race. See Gilbert Gk Const. Ant. E. T. pp. 170—174. Fifty slaves would of course be more than the average number belonging to a single citizen. In Athens, during the fourth century B.C., the slaves were probably little, if at all, more numerous than the free-born population and metoecs (Beloch Die Bevölk. d. Gr.-Röm. Welt p. 99).

33 ὁπόσῳ. On ὁπόσῳ following ποίῳ see I 348 B n.

579 A I αὐτῶν τῶν δούλων. "Quum ingenui desint, a quibus auxilium petat, nonnullis ex servorum ipsorum, quos timet, numero adulari cogitur" (Schneider). This explanation, which Vermehren also approves (Pl. Stud. p. 114), exactly meets the case, and there is no reason either to change αὐτῶν to αὐ (with Stephanus) or to delete τῶν δούλων (with Ast and Herwerden).

2 οὐδὲν δεόμενος: 'when he needn't.' He is under no obligation to set them free: why then should he make them a present of their freedom? The innuendo is in Plato's neatest style. For the language cf. (with Schneider) Plut. Tib. Gracch. 21. 2 δέισασα περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρός ἢ βουλὴ ψηφίζεται μὴδὲν δεομένη πέμπειν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἀσίαν. The conjecture οὐδὲν δεομένου (Groen v. Prinsterer Prosop. Plat. p. 211, Ast, and Herwerden, who appeals in vain to Plut. Cato Maior 12. 3, Dem. 11. 9, and Isocr. Arcop. 25) is, as Schneider shews, inept; for if the slaves do not need to be set free, because they are practically free already, "ne ero quidem opus est ut ad eos coercendos illam aliamve ineat rationem."

4 ἄλλους—γείτονας. These free-born neighbours in Plato's simile represent surrounding independent States, who detest tyranny, and help the tyrant's subjects. See Newman's Politics of Aristotle II p. 315.

5 κύκλῳ κατοικίσειεν γείτονας πολλοὺς αὐτῷ, οὐ μὴ ἀνέχουσιντο, εἴ τις ἄλλος ἄλλου δεσπόζειν ἀξιοί, ἀλλ' εἴ ποῦ τινα τοιοῦτον λαμβάνουσιν, ταῖς ἐσχάταις τιμωροῦντο τιμωρίαις; Ἐτι ἂν, ἔφη, οἶμαι, μᾶλλον ἐν παντὶ κακοῦ εἴη, κύκλῳ φρουρούμενος ὑπὸ πάντων B πολεμίων. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐκ ἐν τοιούτῳ μὲν δεσποτηρίῳ δέδεται ὁ 10 τύραννος, φύσει ὦν οἷον διεληλύθαμεν, πολλῶν καὶ παντοδαπῶν φόβων καὶ ἐρώτων μεστός· λίχνῳ δὲ ὄντι αὐτῷ τὴν ψυχὴν μόνῳ τῶν ἐν τῇ πόλει οὔτε ἀποδημῆσαι ἔξεστιν οὐδαμῶσε οὔτε θεωρῆσαι ὅσων δὴ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι ἐλεύθεροι ἐπιθυμηταὶ εἰσιν, καταδεδυκὼς δὲ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τὰ πολλὰ ὡς γυνὴ ξῆ, φθονῶν¹ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις πολί- C 15 ταις, εἴαν τις ἔξω ἀποδημῇ καὶ τι ἀγαθὸν ὁρᾷ; Παντάπασιν μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

VI. Οὐκοῦν τοῖς τοιούτοις κακοῖς πλείω καρποῦται ἀνὴρ ὅς ἂν κακῶς ἐν ἑαυτῷ πολιτευόμενος, ὃν νῦν δὴ σὺ ἀθλιώτατον ἔκρινας, τὸν τυραννικόν, ὥς μὴ ἰδιώτης καταβιῶ, ἀλλὰ ἀναγκασθῇ

5. κατοικίσειε q²: κατοικήσειεν vel κατοικήσειε AIIΞ q¹. 8. εἴη Ξ q: εἰ εἴη AΠ, sed εἰ puncto notavit A². 18. ἐαυτῷ A²Π: ταυτῷ (sic) A¹.

579 B 8 ὑπὸ πάντων πολεμίων: 'by none but enemies': cf. pāsin agriois in vi 496 D. The tyrant's splendid but awful isolation is admirably brought out by Plato: see also on viii 567 B. In this respect Plato's similitude faithfully reflects the position of Dionysius I in Sicily and indeed, except for the support which Sparta lent him, in the whole Hellenic world. See Grote x p. 306 ff.

9 ἐν τοιούτῳ κτλ. The picture which follows is no doubt also drawn from Dionysius I: see Grote x pp. 244, 328 iii.

11 λίχνῳ "is the same with regard to the eye, that liquoriness is to the taste" (Thomas Gray).

12 οὔτε ἀποδημῆσαι κτλ. The parallel with Xen. Hiero i. 11 is singularly close. Plato speaks con amore, thinking doubtless of his own sojournings in foreign lands. See Zeller¹ ii pp. 404—414. Neuman de locis Aegypti. in oper. Plat. (1874) discovers many allusions to Plato's 'Wanderjahre' throughout his works.

13 ὅσων δὴ κτλ. Such as the Olympian games etc.: cf. Xen. l.c. τὰς κοινὰς πανηγύρεις ἐνθα τὰ ἀξιοθεατότατα δοκεῖ εἶναι ἀνθρώποις συναγείρεσθαι. Dionysius was represented at Olympia by deputy, as Hermann reminds us (Gesch. u. System

p. 116). Cf. Grote x p. 303. The phrase τι ἀγαθὸν ὁρᾷ, with which the sentence concludes, has a curiously modern sound.

17 οὐκοῦν κτλ.: 'greater then, by evils such as these, is the profit which is reaped by the individual who' etc. ("Um so grosse Übel reicher also ist der Mann" Schleiermacher). τοῖς τοιούτοις κακοῖς is dative of amount of difference: cf. ii 373 E μείζονος—οὔτι σμικρῷ, ἀλλ' ὅλῳ στρατοπέδῳ, vi 507 E οὐ σμικρᾷ—ιδέα—τιμωτέρῳ and Latius 848 B (Schneider Addit. p. 72). The passage has been strangely misunderstood, Stephanus suggesting variously <ἐπὶ> or <πρὸς> τοῖς τοιούτοις or τῶν τοιούτων, and Ast <ἐν> τοῖς τοιούτοις. Stallbaum comes nearer to the truth in his "per huius modi mala," but the dative is exactly as in τοσούτῳ πλείω. The view that the dative is merely one of 'circumstance'—an alternative suggestion in J. and C.—cannot be upheld. See also on 578 C. The reference in νῦν δὴ is to 578 B.

19 ὥς μὴ κτλ. I have returned to the text of A, Π, and nearly all the mss. Θ¹ with Stobaeus (Flor. 50. 50) has μὴ ὥς, and so Stallbaum and Baier read. μὴ ὥς suits better with ἀλλὰ ἀναγκασθῇ, but the irregularity is slight, and, as Schneider observes, the sentence opens as if it were ὑπὸ τινος τυχῆς τυραννεῦσαι, καὶ ἑαυτοῦ ὧν ἀκράτωρ ἄλλων 20 ἐπιχειρήσῃ ἄρχειν· ὥσπερ εἴ τις κάμνοντι σώματι καὶ ἀκράτορι ἑαυτοῦ μὴ ἰδιωτεύων, ἀλλ' ἀγωνιζόμενος ἰπρὸς ἄλλα σώματα καὶ μαχόμενος ἀναγκάζοιτο διώγειν τὸν βίον. Παντάπασιν, ἔφη, ὁμοιότατά τε καὶ ἀληθέστατα λέγεις, ὦ Σώκρατες. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ φίλε Γλαύκῳ, παντελῶς τὸ πάθος ἄθλιον, καὶ τοῦ ὑπὸ 25 σοῦ κριθέντος χαλεπώτατα ζῆν χαλεπώτερον ἔτι ζῆν ὁ τυραννῶν; Κομιδῇ γ', ἔφη. Ἔστιν ἄρα τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, κὰν εἰ μὴ τῷ δοκεῖ, ὁ τῷ ὄντι τύραννος τῷ ὄντι δοῦλος τὰς μεγίστας θωπείας καὶ δουλείας καὶ κόλαξ τῶν πονηροτάτων, καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας οὐδ' ὅπως τι οὐδὲν ὑποπιμπλᾷ, ἀλλὰ πλείεστων ἐπιδεδέσματος καὶ πένης τῇ ἀληθείᾳ 30 φαίνεται, εἴαν τις ὅλην ψυχὴν ἐπίσταιται θεάσασθαι, καὶ φόβου γέμων διὰ παντὸς τοῦ βίου σφαδασμῶν τε καὶ ὀδυνῶν πλήρης, εἴπερ τῇ τῆς πόλεως διαθέσει ἥς ἄρχει ἔοικεν. ἔοικεν δέ· ἦ γάρ;

Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. | Οὐκοῦν καὶ πρὸς τούτοις ἔτι ἀποδώσομεν τῷ ἀνδρὶ καὶ ἂν τὸ πρότερον εἴπομεν, ὅτι ἀνάγκη καὶ εἶναι καὶ ἔτι μᾶλλον γίγνεσθαι αὐτῷ ἢ πρότερον διὰ τὴν ἀρχὴν φθονερῷ, ἀπίστῳ, αἰδίκῳ, ἀφίλῳ, ἀνοσίῳ καὶ πάσης κακίας πανδοκεῖ τε καὶ τροφεῖ, 27. δοκεῖ Lob.: δοκῇ A cum ceteris.

meant to be positive and not negative, so that ὡς μὴ is suited to what precedes. We may add that ὡς μὴ ἰδιώτης καταβιβῶ is a clearer echo of μὴ ἰδιώτην βίον καταβιβῶ 578 C, which Plato wishes to recall.

579 D 27 κὰν εἰ μὴ τῷ δοκεῖ κτλ. Cf. V 473 A and (for κὰν) III 408 B n. The reading δοκῇ (see cr. n.) is retained by Schneider, but ε and η are easily confused, and, even if we allow sporadic instances of εἰ with the subjunctive in Attic, the analogy of V 473 A, as well as the sense, is in favour of δοκεῖ. There need not be a specific allusion in τῷ: for praises of tyranny and the tyrant's lot were common enough in Greece: cf. I 344 B, VIII 568 A nn. The phrase τῷ ὄντι invites us to understand τύραννος and δοῦλος in the fullest sense: cf. V 474 A n.

28 δοῦλος κτλ. I once too rashly placed καὶ κόλαξ after δοῦλος, in order to obtain a chiasmus, understanding δουλείας τῶν πονηροτάτων like δούλων δουλείαν in VIII 569 C. Two inferior MSS have δουλείας καὶ θωπείας: but the inversion is not difficult, because the two notions are so closely allied: cf. (with Schneider) Euthyd. 302 B ἀπορὸν τινα στροφὴν ἐφευγόν τε καὶ ἐστρεφόμεν (where Schanz's brackets 'nemini nocent').

579 E 29 καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας κτλ. Xenophon's Hiero is in effect a diluted commentary on this sentence: cf. also Gorg. 524 E ff., and especially Shakespeare's Macbeth IV 3. 50—99, V 3. 22—29.

32 σφαδασμῶν = 'convulsive movements' is a rare word. The spelling σφαδασμός appears in no MS except A¹; but the iota is attested from other sources: see Stephanus-Hase Thes. s. v. The verb σφαδάζειν (μετὰ σπασμοῦ πηδᾷν Hesych.) denotes any nervous, twitching, convulsive motion, outside one's own control, the result of excitement, fear, pain, disease etc. (Stephanus-Hase l. c.). For the sense of this passage cf. 577 E n.

580 A 2 τὸ πρότερον κτλ. The reference is to VIII 567 and supra 576 A, B. ἡ πρότερον might of course have been spared, and Herwerden more suo cuts it out; but the sentence gains in weight by the addition.

5 καὶ ἐξ ἀπάντων τούτων μάλιστα μὲν αὐτῷ δυστυχεῖ εἶναι, ἔπειτα δὲ καὶ τοὺς πλησίον αὐτῷ τοιούτους ἀπεργάζεσθαι. Οὐδεὶς σοι, ἔφη, τῶν νούν ἔχόντων ἀντερεῖ. "Ἴθι δὴ μοι, ἔφην ἐγώ, νῦν ἤδη ὥσπερ ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς ἀποφαίνεται, καὶ σὺ οὕτω, τίς πρῶτος B 580 A, B 7 νῦν ἤδη ('nunc demum') is fully illustrated by Jecht de usu part. ἤδη in Pl. dialog. pp. 44 f.

8 ὥσπερ ὁ διὰ πάντων κτλ. The comparison is borrowed from the Athenian method of judging in musical or dramatic competitions. According to Petersen, who in his Dorpat program über die Preisrichter der Grossen Dionysien zu Athen (1878) has carefully investigated the whole subject, the mode of procedure was as follows. Some time before the festival a number of qualified persons were selected by the βουλευταὶ in cooperation with the χορηγοί, and their names deposited in 10 urns, one for each φυλή. On the day of the contest, one name was drawn from each urn, and the ten judges thereby constituted, after witnessing the performance, each wrote down in his γραμματεῖον the order in which he arranged the several competitors. Of these ten judges five were next selected by lot, and the final verdict was given in accordance with the votes already registered by these five. The most important piece of evidence in support of this theory is furnished by Lysias 4. 3 ἐβουλόμην δ' ἂν μὴ ἀπολαχεῖν αὐτὸν κριτὴν Διονυσίοις, ἵν' ὑμῶν φανερόν ἐγένετο ἐμοὶ διηλλαγμένους, κρίνας τὴν ἐμὴν φυλὴν νικᾶν· νῦν δὲ ἔγραψε μὲν ταῦτα εἰς τὸ γραμματεῖον, ἀπέλαχε δέ. In none of the ancient authorities, which are fully cited by Petersen, do we find the expression ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς: but Petersen thinks the phrase may perhaps denote any one of the surviving five, who had lasted through all the stages, having been originally chosen by the Senate, and afterwards by lot on the two remaining opportunities. The singular number, according to Petersen, is generic, as in Laus 659 A, B and elsewhere. It is true of course that the matter could not always be brought to an immediate issue in this way; for, to take a single instance, in a case where there were, let us say, three competitors, the votes of the five judges might result in a tie between two competitors for each of the three prizes. Thus we might have:

	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)
1st Prize	A	B	C	A	B
2nd Prize	B	A	B	C	C
3rd Prize	C	C	A	B	A

In such a case we must, I suppose, believe either that one of the five judges, who will then be ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς, had a casting vote, or else—and this is the more reasonable view—that C was held to be disqualified for the first prize, and fresh scrutinies began. Petersen's explanation is accepted in the main by Müller (Griech. Bühnenall. pp. 369—372), and, though to some extent conjectural, appears to me the best available, except in one point. ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς can hardly be separated from ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών, a phrase which is quoted from Cratinus' Panoptae (Fr. 157 Kock), and explained as ὁ ἐσχατος ἀγών in Bekker's Anecdota p. 91. 10. The διὰ πάντων κριτῆς must surely mean the judge of the διὰ πάντων ἀγών, and if so, διὰ πάντων should be similarly interpreted in both phrases. In διὰ πάντων ἀγών it cannot mean "der durch alle Stadien oder besser durch alle Collegien hindurchgegangen war" (Petersen l. c. p. 24), but may possibly mean the last and greatest ἀγών, as τὸ διὰ πασῶν is the greatest interval in a scale of one octave. The expression is strangely reminiscent of the musical terms διὰ πέντε, διὰ τεττάρων, διὰ πασῶν etc., and in a competition between χοροί, it is natural enough that musical analogies should provide a name for the decisive struggle in which the claims of the competitors as it were contend with one another for the final victory. It will be seen that I understand ἀγών in the quotation from Cratinus as referring; not to the actual dramatic or musical representation, but to the final struggle in which the lot arbitrates between the rival claims, the earlier ἀγών being presumably that which is decided by the votes of the ten judges: so that the upshot of the whole matter will be that Socrates appeals to Glauco, as the Archon might to one of the five judges in what we may be forgiven for calling the 'grand finale.'

κατὰ τὴν σὴν δόξαν εὐδαιμονία καὶ τίς δεύτερος, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐξῆς πέντε ὄντας κρίνει, βασιλικόν, τιμοκρατικόν, ὀλιγαρχικόν, 10 δημοκρατικόν, τυραννικόν. Ἀλλὰ ῥαδία, ἔφη, ἡ κρίσις. καθάπερ γὰρ εἰσῆλθον, ἔγωγε ὥσπερ χοροὺς κρίνω, ἀρετῇ καὶ κακίᾳ καὶ εὐδαιμονίᾳ καὶ τῷ ἐναντίῳ. Μισθωσώμεθα οὖν κήρυκα, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, ἢ αὐτὸς ἀνείπω, ὅτι ὁ Ἀρίστωνος υἱὸς τὸν ἄριστόν τε καὶ δικαιοτατον ἑὐδαιμονέστατον ἔκρινε, τοῦτον δ' εἶναι τὸν βασιλικώτατον 15 καὶ βασιλεύοντα αὐτοῦ, τὸν δὲ κάκιστόν τε καὶ ἀδικώτατον ἀθλιώτατον, τοῦτον δὲ αὖ τυγχάνειν ὄντα ὃς ἂν τυραννικώτατος ὦν ἑαυτοῦ τε ὅ τι μάλιστα τυραννῇ καὶ τῆς πόλεως; Ἀνειρήσθω σοι, ἔφη.
 Ὁ οὖν προσαναγορεύω, εἶπον, ἑάν τε λαυθάνωσιν τοιοῦτοι ὄντες ἑάν τε μὴ πάντας ἀνθρώπους τε καὶ θεοὺς; Προσαναγόρευε, ἔφη. 20

VII. Εἰεν δὴ, εἶπον· αὕτη μὲν ἡμῖν ἡ ἀπόδειξις μία ἂν εἴη· ἡ δευτέραν δὲ ἰδὲ τήνδε, ἑάν τι δόξη εἶναι. Τίς αὕτη; Ἐπειδὴ, ὥσπερ πόλις, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, διήρηται κατὰ τρία εἶδη, οὕτω καὶ ψυχὴ ἐνὸς ἐκάστου τριχῇ, δέξεται, ὥς ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ, καὶ ἑτέραν ἀπόδειξιν.

14. ὁ Α²Π: om. Α¹. 22. δὲ ἰδὲ nos: δεῖ δὲ ΑΠ: δὲ δεῖ vulgo cum Ξg.
 24. δέξεται Ξ: τὸ (punctis notatum) λογιστικὸν δέξεται Α: λογιστικὸν δέξεται Π: λογιστικὴν δέξεται q¹: λογιστικὴ δέξεται q².

calling on him to pronounce tis πρῶτος κτλ. The word ἀποφαίνεσθαι is probably formal: cf. Laws 659 B and Dio Chrys. quoted by Petersen l. c. p. 7. For a further discussion of this passage see App. II.

580 B 10 πέντε ὄντας: viz. in all.

12 εἰσῆλθον κτλ. "in scenam ingressi sunt" (Stallbaum). In dramatic and musical contests the victor's name was publicly proclaimed by a herald (see Müller l. c. p. 372 n. 2): hence μισθωσώμεθα κτλ. pursues the comparison introduced by ὥσπερ ὁ διὰ πάντων κτλ. Cf. also Phil. 66 A πάντη δὴ φήσεις—ὑπὸ τε ἀγγέλων πέμπων καὶ παροδοι φράζων ὡς ἡδονὴ κτῆμα οὐκ ἔστι πρῶτον κτλ. (the result arrived at in the dialogue). For the verbal play in Ἀρίστωνος—τὸν ἄριστον cf. II 368 A n.

19 580 C ἑάν τε λαυθάνωσιν κτλ. is said with reference to the challenge in II 367 E.

580 C—583 A A second proof may be founded on our psychological theory. Let us agree to call the three varieties of soul, knowledge-loving, honour-loving, and gain-loving respectively, and let us distinguish three corresponding varieties both of men and of pleasures. If you ask any three men who represent these different classes, which of the three lives is the most pleasurable, each will pronounce in favour of his own. Which of them is right? The necessary requisites for deciding this, like every other question, are experience, intelligence or wisdom (φρόνησις), and argument. Now the lover of knowledge is the only one among the three in whom any of these qualifications is present, and he possesses them all. We therefore accept his verdict, and arrange accordingly, placing love of knowledge first, love of honour second, and love of money last.

580 D ff. 21 εἰεν δὴ κτλ. After the political follows the psychological argument: see 577 C n.

22 δὲ ἰδέ. My correction of δεῖ δὲ (the reading of the best MSS: see cr. n.) has been generally accepted. The reading δὲ δεῖ is intrinsically unsatisfactory, and can only be an attempt to 'emend' δεῖ δὲ. See Cl. Rev. XI p. 349.

24 δέξεται κτλ.: 'it will admit also of another demonstration.' The subject is simply 'our thesis,' as stated just before in the conclusion of the first argument

- 25 Τίνα ταύτην; Τήνδε. τριῶν ὄντων τριτταὶ καὶ ἡδοναὶ μοι φαίνονται, ἐνὸς ἐκάστου μία ἰδίᾳ, ἐπιθυμίαι τε ὡσαύτως καὶ ἀρχαί. Πῶς λέγεις; ἔφη. Τὸ μὲν, φαμέν, ἦν ὃ μανθάνει ἄνθρωπος, τὸ δὲ ὃ θυμοῦται· τὸ δὲ τρίτον διὰ πολυειδίαν ἐνὶ οὐκ ἔσχομεν ὀνόματι ἰ προσειπεῖν ἰδίῳ αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ ὃ μέγιστον καὶ E
- 30 ἰσχυρότατον εἶχεν ἐν αὐτῷ, τούτῳ ἐπωνομάσαμεν· ἐπιθυμητικὸν γὰρ αὐτὸ κεκλήκαμεν διὰ σφοδρότητα τῶν περὶ τὴν ἐδωδὴν ἐπιθυμιῶν καὶ πόσιν καὶ ἀφροδίσια καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα τούτοις ἀκόλουθα, καὶ φιλοχρήματον δὴ, ὅτι διὰ χρημάτων μάλιστα ἀποτε λύνονται 581
- αἱ τοιαῦται ἐπιθυμίαι. Καὶ ὁρθῶς γ', ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὖν καὶ τὴν ἡδονὴν αὐτοῦ καὶ φιλίαν εἰ φαίμεν εἶναι τοῦ κέρδους, μάλιστ' ἂν εἰς ἐν κεφάλαιον ἀπεριδοίμεθα τῷ λόγῳ, ὥστε τι ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς*

26. ἰδίᾳ II: ἰδίᾳ A.

3. φαίμεν A²Ξ: φαμέν A¹II: φῶμεν q.

(580 C). Cf. (with Stallbaum) V 453 D οὐ γὰρ εὐκόλῳ ἔοικεν and Phaed. 69 E τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς ἀπιστίαν παρέχει (unjustly bracketed by Schanz), where the subject similarly 'latet in antegressis.' Idiomatic expressions like δηλώσει (VI 497 C n.), δείξει etc. belong to a somewhat different category. It is impossible to extract any satisfactory sense out of the passage if (with Schneider alone of all the editors) we retain τὸ λογιστικόν (see cr. n.) or λογιστικόν, the latter of which occurs before δέξεται in many MSS. The Oxford editors, with much probability, suggest that λογιστικόν is the relic of some such gloss on τριχῇ as we actually find in Par. K, viz. λογιστικόν. ἐπιθυμητικὸν θυμικόν (sic).

25 ἡδοναὶ κτλ. Hitherto in the Republic the words Pleasure and Desire have, with few exceptions (e.g. I 328 D, VI 485 D, VIII 554 E al.), had an evil, or at least unmoral, connotation. The view now put forward, viz. that each 'part' of soul has its own pleasures and desires differing in point of virtue and vice (cf. VI 505 C) like the 'parts' to which they belong, is related not only to the theory of the Philebus but also to the Aristotelian analysis of pleasure in Eth. Nic. X cc. 3—5.

26 ἰδίᾳ. Paris A has ἰδίᾳ—see cr. n.—"multo minus connece" (Schneider). Cf. ἰδίῳ αὐτοῦ infra E.

27 ἀρχαὶ κτλ. Any one of the three may hold rule in the soul. The reference in ἦν is to IV 436 A ff.

580 E 29 ὃ μέγιστον κτλ.: viz.

ἐπιθυμία. The words τούτῳ ἐπωνομάσαμεν mean 'we gave the name of ἐπιθυμία to this part,' when we called it ἐπιθυμητικόν (ἐπιθυμητικὸν γὰρ κτλ.). Cf. (with Stallbaum) Theaet. 185 C ὃ τὸ ἔστιν ἐπωνομάξαις, Crat. 420 B and elsewhere. J. and C. wrongly understand τούτῳ as instrumental. The variant τούτο has little authority and is much inferior: still worse is τούτον which Madvig (Adv. Cr. I p. 431) 'suspiscatur fuisse.'

30 ἐπιθυμητικὸν κτλ. IV 439 D. The lowest part of soul was called φιλοχρήματον in IV 436 E et al.: see next note.

581 A 4 εἰς ἐν κεφάλαιον κτλ. Plato recognised three varieties in τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν, corresponding respectively to the oligarchical, democratical, and tyrannical man (VIII 558 D n.). In the present chapter these varieties again recede into the background. This apparent 'Inconsequence,' together with other reasons, led Krohn to suppose that the whole of this proof, as well as the next, was written at a different time from the rest of Books VIII and IX (Pl. St. pp. 221 ff. Cf. Pfeleiderer Zur Lösung etc. p. 75. Krohn has since retracted his view: see his Pl. Fr. p. 104). But the unity of the ἐπιθυμητικόν as such has never been sacrificed, since each of its varieties are also expressions of desire; and Plato is therefore fully justified in setting it over against φιλόσοφον and θυμοειδές. To have compared each of its varieties separately with the two higher principles would have greatly lengthened and complicated Plato's proof; and he δηλοῦν, ὅποτε τοῦτο τῆς ψυχῆς τὸ μέρος λέγοιμεν, καὶ καλοῦντες 5 αὐτὸ φιλοχρήματον καὶ φιλοκερδὲς ὀρθῶς ἂν καλοῖμεν; Ἐμοὶ γοῦν δοκεῖ, ἔφη. Τί δέ; τὸ θυμοειδὲς οὐ πρὸς τὸ κρατεῖν μέντοι φαμέν καὶ νικᾶν καὶ εὐδοκιμεῖν αἰεὶ ὅλον ὠρμῆσθαι; ¹ Καὶ μάλα.

Εἰ οὖν φιλόνηκον αὐτὸ καὶ φιλότιμον προσαγορεύοιμεν, ἢ ἑμμελῶς ἂν ἔχοι; Ἐμμελέστατα μὲν οὖν. Ἀλλὰ μὴν ᾧ γε μαίθινον, ¹⁰ παντὶ δῆλον ὅτι πρὸς τὸ εἰδέναι τὴν ἀλήθειαν ὅπῃ ἔχει πᾶν αἰεὶ τέταται, καὶ χρημάτων τε καὶ δόξης ἥκιστα τούτων τούτῳ μέλει.
Πολύ γε. Φιλομαθὲς δὴ καὶ φιλόσοφον καλοῦντες αὐτὸ κατὰ τρόπον ἂν καλοῖμεν; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ἄρχει ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς τῶν μὲν τοῦτο, τῶν δὲ τὸ ἕτερον ἐκείνων, ὁπότερον ¹⁵ ἂν τύχη; Οὕτως, ἔφη. Διὰ ταῦτα δὴ καὶ ἀνθρώπων λέγομεν 6. 7. ἐμοὶ γοῦν Α¹Π: ἔμοιγ' οὖν Α². 16. λέγομεν Ξ²: λέγωμεν ΑΠ ρ¹.

reserves this point for another mode of treatment at a later opportunity (587 C n.). Why does he select the word φιλοχρήματον (s. φιλοκερδὲς) to denote the ἐπιθυμητικόν here? He wishes to find a single word to contrast with φιλόσοφον and φιλόνηκον (s. φιλότιμον). The word ἐπιθυμητικόν itself is excluded, because we have agreed that the φιλόσοφον and φιλόνηκον have also ἐπιθυμῖαι of their own (580 D), and, as φιλοχρήματον made its appearance in each of the three forms of ἐπιθυμία (VIII 551 A, 553 C, 555 A, 558 D, 561 A, 568 D, IX 572 C, 573 D), it is the best summary description available. Plato himself claims no more for it, and that is why he says μάλιστα ἂν εἰς ἐν κεφάλαιον ἀπεριδοίμεθα. Cf. Grimmelt de reip. Pl. comp. et univ. pp. 73 ff.

7. οὐ—μέντοι. See on I 339 B.

581 B 9 φιλόνηκον. For the spelling of this word see VIII 548 C n. and my note on Prot. 336 E. The present passage and also 586 C, D below conclusively prove that Plato connected the word with νίκη and not with νείκος, from which indeed it could not be derived without doing violence to the laws of the Greek language (cf. Schanz Vol. VI p. x). Now Plato certainly did not write νείκη, but νίκη; and it is therefore highly improbable that he wrote φιλόνηκος. φιλόνηκος has also considerable support from the inferior MSS of the Republic. The substitution of ει for long ι became extremely common in imperial times, especially in proper names derived from νίκη (Meisterhans³ p. 49), and even ἐνεί- κων and the like are also found on late inscriptions (e.g. CIG 1585). In the case of φιλόνηκος the error was apparently established by Plutarch's time: see his Agas. 5. 4. The meaning 'lover of strife' is often unsuitable in Plato; where it suits, it is secondary and derivative, for the lover of victory must also love strife: non sine pulvere palma. For an exhaustive discussion of the question the student may be referred to Schmidt Ethik d. alten Griechen I pp. 386—391. While admitting that 'φιλόνηκος and its derivatives are far more frequent in Attic writers,' Schmidt is inclined to admit the existence of φιλόνηκος as a separate word, connected with νείκη as a by-form—so he thinks—of νείκος: but νείκη, at least in classical Greek, is only a conjecture on Aeschylus Ag. 1378 and Eum. 903; and in Plato, at all events, there is, I believe, no case in which φιλόνηκος does not give the meaning required by the context.

12 ἥκιστα τούτων: 'less than any of them,' lit. 'least of these' three εἶδη of soul. There is no good reason for suspecting the text; for although strictly speaking the φιλόσοφον can only care for σοφία, the φιλόσοφος, who presently (581 C ff.) takes the place of the φιλόσοφον, is not wholly indifferent to either (582 B, C): he merely cares much less for them than the φιλόνηκος and φιλοχρήματος do. τούτων is necessary to bring out the contrast: ἥκιστα alone, proposed by Baiter, or ἥκιστα πάντων (W. H. Thompson) would express too much.

581 C 16 διὰ ταῦτα δὴ κτλ. Cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. I 3, 1095^b 17 ff. τρεῖς τὰ πρῶτα τριττὰ γένη εἶναι, φιλόσοφον, φιλόνικον, φιλοκερδές; Κομιδῇ γε. Καὶ ἡδονῶν δὴ τρία εἶδη, ὑποκείμενα ἐν ἐκάστῳ τούτων; Πάνυ γε. Οἶσθ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι εἰ ἔθελος τρεῖς 20 τοιούτους ἀνθρώπους ἐν μέρει ἕκαστον ἀνερωτᾶν, τίς τούτων τῶν βίων ἡδιστος, τὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἕκαστος μάλιστα ἐγκωμιάσεται; ὃ γε χρηματιστικὸς πρὸς ¹ τὸ κερδαίνειν τὴν τοῦ τιμᾶσθαι ἡδονὴν ἢ τὴν D τοῦ μαρτυρεῖν οὐδενὸς ἀξίαν φήσκει εἶναι, εἰ μὴ εἴ τι αὐτῶν ἀργύριον ποιεῖ. Ἀληθῆ, ἔφη. Τί δὲ ὁ φιλότιμος; ἦν δ' ἐγώ. οὐ τὴν μὲν 25 ἀπὸ τῶν χρημάτων ἡδονὴν φορτικὴν τίνα ἡγεῖται, καὶ αὐτὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ μαρτυρεῖν, ὃ τι μὴ μάθημα τιμὴν φέρει, καπνὸν καὶ φλυαρίαν; Οὕτως, ἔφη, ἔχει. Τὸν δὲ φιλόσοφον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τί οἴωμεθα τὰς

18. ὑποκείμενα A²Ξ: ὑποκείμενον A¹Π q.

21. γε Hermann cum M: τε A cum ceteris.

27. τί οἴωμεθα Graser: ποιώμεθα codd.

γάρ εἰσι μάλιστα οἱ προῦχοντες (sc. βλοῖ), ὃ τε νῦν εἰρημέος (i.e. ὁ ἀπολαυστικὸς) καὶ ὁ πολιτικὸς (i.e. ὁ φιλότιμος here) καὶ τρίτος ὁ θεωρητικὸς.

λέγομεν κτλ. 'And for this reason we say that the primary classes of men are also three in number' etc.? λέγομεν (see cr. n.) is the reading of all MSS except AΠq¹, and Schneider is right, I think, in retaining it, not only because these three γένη have been named before (IV 435 E), but still more because the classification was apparently a familiar one: see Stewart on Arist. I. c. For the orthographical error see Introd. § 5. I take τριττὰ as predicative: the hyperbaton is not, I think, a difficult one, because the stress of the voice falls on τριττὰ, and to my ear it sounds more idiomatic than τὰ πρῶτα γένη τριττὰ εἶναι would be. A possible alternative would be to take εἶναι with φιλόσοφον κτλ. ('that the three primary classes of men are lovers of wisdom' etc.), but this is somewhat less natural and satisfactory, in view especially of καὶ ἡδονῶν κτλ. The words τὰ πρῶτα mean 'the first' or 'original,' as in Aristotle's πρώτη ὕλη, the Stoic πρώται ἀρεταί and the like: it would be possible to subdivide each of these primary classes into δευτέρα γένη, τρίτα γένη etc. Jowett, reading λέγωμεν, translates 'we may begin by assuming,' but it is harsh to separate τὰ πρῶτα from γένη, and the adverbial τὰ πρῶτα generally, if not always, refers back to something said or done 'at the beginning.' Cf. Shorey A. J. Ph. XIII p. 366.

18 ὑποκείμενα. The singular ὑποκείμενον (see cr. n.), retained by Schneider and all other editors except Baiter, is questionable Greek. In such cases the adjective, participle, or verb agrees with the whole and not with the part. ὑποκείμενα is little inferior to ὑποκείμενον in authority and the corruption was easy. Cf. VIII 550 E n.

21 τὸν ἑαυτοῦ κτλ. Cf. Pind. Frag. 215 Bergk ἄλλο δ' ἄλλοισιν νόμισμα, σφετέραν δ' αἰνεῖ δίκαν ἕκαστος and Gorg. 484 E ff.

ὃ γε. See cr. n. Hermann's conjecture is, I now think, right. We may perhaps explain τε as ἀνακλόουον (cf. II 373 B n.) and taken up in τί δὲ ὁ φιλότιμος; κτλ., but γε is much livelier and better: 'the money-maker, at all events' etc. Cf. VIII 556 A n. If γε is right, we should not, as Hermann does, make the sentence interrogative.

581 D 23 ἀργύριον ποιεῖ: 'produces money.' ποιεῖ (Badham) is a neat conjecture; but the text is sound: cf. χρήματα ποιεῖν Arist. Pol. A 9. 1258^a 11.

26 καπνὸν καὶ φλυαρίαν. This contemptuous, half-proverbial, use of καπνός is illustrated by Blaydes on Ar. Clouds 320.

581 D, E 27 τὸν δὲ φιλόσοφον κτλ. 'But the lover of knowledge, said I, what value shall we suppose that he assigns to the other pleasures compared with that of knowing how the truth stands and always enjoying a kindred sort of pleasure while he learns? Will he not think them very far away?' (viz. from ἡ τοῦ εἰδέναι ἄλλας ἡδονὰς νομίζειν πρὸς τὴν τοῦ εἰδέναι ἢ τάληθές ὅπῃ ἔχει καὶ ἐν τοιοῦτῳ τινὶ αἰεὶ εἶναι μαυθάνοντα τῆς ἡδονῆς; οὐ πάνυ πόρρω, καὶ καλεῖν τῷ ὄντι ἀναγκαίης, ὥς οὐδὲν τῶν ἄλλων δεό- 30 μενον, εἰ μὴ ἀνάγκη ᾖ; Εὐ, ἔφη, δεῖ εἰδέναι.

VIII. "Ὅτε δὴ οὖν, εἶπον, ἀμφισβητοῦνται ἐκάστου τοῦ εἶδους αἱ ἡδοναὶ καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ βίος, μὴ ὅτι πρὸς τὸ κάλλιον καὶ αἰσχίον ζῆν μηδὲ τὸ χεῖρον καὶ ἄμεινον, ἀλλὰ πρὸς αὐτὸ τὸ ἥδιον καὶ 2 ἀλυπότερον, | πῶς ἂν εἰδείμεν, τίς αὐτῶν ἀληθέστατα λέγει; Οὐδὲν πάνυ, ἔφη, ἔγωγε ἔχω εἰπεῖν. Ἄλλ' ὁδε σκόπει. τίμη χρὴ κρίνεσθαι τὰ μέλλοντα καλῶς κριθήσεσθαι; ἂρ' οὐκ ἐμπειρία τε καὶ φρονήσι καὶ λόγῳ; ἢ τούτων ἔχοι ἂν τις βέλτιον κριτήριον; Καὶ πῶς ἂν; ἔφη. Σκόπει δὴ. τριῶν ὄντων τῶν ἀνδρῶν τίς ἐμπειρότατος 5 πασῶν ὧν εἴπομεν ἡδονῶν; πότερον ὁ φιλοκερδής, μαυθάνων αὐτὴν τὴν ἀλήθειαν οἶόν ἐστιν, ἐμπειρότερος δοκεῖ σοι εἶναι τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ 1 εἰδέναι ἡδονῆς, ἢ ὁ φιλόσοφος τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ κερδαίνειν; Πολύ, ἔφη, διαφέρει. τῷ μὲν γὰρ ἀνάγκη γεύεσθαι τῶν ἐτέρων ἐκ παιδὸς

29. τῆς ἡδονῆς A¹Π cum ceteris: punctis notavit A².

κτλ.). The χρηματιστικός considers the pleasures of honour and learning οὐδενὸς ἀξίας, compared with his own; the φιλό- τιμος similarly, mutatis mutandis; what then does the φιλόσοφος consider his pleasures to be compared with the others? What are his pleasures? Let us see. He either knows (i.e. has learnt) the truth in any given instance or is getting to know (i.e. is learning) it; his pleasures are therefore that of knowing and that of learning, i.e. τοιοῦτόν τι τῆς ἡδονῆς, for the pleasures of learning are akin to those of knowing. From each of these pleasures those of gain and fame are far removed. With the general sense, cf. Phaed. 64 D: for the use of ἐν IV 429 C, D: for τοιοῦτῳ τινὶ τῆς ἡδονῆς Xen. An. I 7. 5 ἐν τοιοῦτῳ εἶναι τοῦ κινδύνου προσόντος: and for the position of τῆς ἡδονῆς Braun de hyperb. Pl. II p. 4, where many examples of similar hyperbata are quoted. The mss read ποιῶμεθα (see cr. n.), but Graser's emendation is in my opinion entirely right. I have taken τῆς ἡδονῆς with τοιοῦτῳ τινί: others wrongly, as I believe, join it to οὐ πάνυ πόρρω. See on the whole passage App. III.

581 E 29 οὐ πάνυ πόρρω: sc. οἷώ- μεθα νομίζειν; as before.

30 ἀναγκαίης: necessarias, quippe ceteris nihil indigentem nisi necessitas cogeret (after Stallbaum). Hence τῷ ὄντι: see on VI 511 B.

31 δεῖ εἰδέναι: we should not suppose (οἰεσθαι), but be sure of it. Badham's conjecture διέλθον (ad Euthyd. p. 98) is wholly needless and inept.

32 ἀμφισβητοῦνται: 'are in dispute' (Jowett). For this somewhat irregular use of the passive cf. Cope's Rhetoric of Aristotle I p. 299. 'It is tempting to make the verb middle ('dispute with one another'), as in Laws 957 D, and suppose that the pleasures are personified, as the two lives are in Prodicus' apologue of Heracles at the cross-roads (Xen. Mem. II I. 21 ff.). αὐτῶν in τίς αὐτῶν will then mean τῶν ἡδονῶν, and not τῶν ἀνδρῶν. But on such a theory, instead of αὐτὸς ὁ βίος, we should rather have had αὐτοὶ οἱ βίοι: and on the whole it is doubtless better to acquiesce in the ordinary interpretation, which is also more in harmony with τριῶν ὄντων τῶν ἀνδρῶν κτλ. below.

582 B 9 τῶν ἐτέρων. "Glauco simul utrisque philosophum praefert experientia, quoniam Socrates quis omnium experientissimus esset voluptatum rogaverat" (viz. in 582 A τριῶν ὄντων κτλ.) Schneider. The English translators take τῶν ἐτέρων as 'the other' (Jowett), viz. 'gain'; but that would be τοῦ ἐτέρου.

- 10 ἀρξαμένῳ· τῷ δὲ φιλοκερδεῖ, ὅπῃ πέφυκε τὰ ὄντα μαυθάνοντι, τῆς ἡδονῆς ταύτης, ὡς γλυκεῖα ἐστίν, οὐκ ἀνάγκη γένεσθαι οὐδ' ἐμπειρῶ γίγνεσθαι, μᾶλλον δὲ καὶ προθυμουμένῳ οὐ ῥάδιον. Πολὺ ἄρα, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, διαφέρει τοῦ γε φιλοκερδοῦς ὁ φιλόσοφος ἐμπειρίᾳ ἀμφοτέρων τῶν ἡδονῶν. Πολὺ μέντοι. Τί δὲ τοῦ φιλοτίμου; C 15 ἄρα μᾶλλον ἄπειρός ἐστι τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ τιμᾶσθαι ἡδονῆς ἢ ἐκείνος τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ φρονεῖν; Ἄλλὰ τιμὴ μὲν, ἔφη, ἐάνπερ ἐξεργάζωνται ἐπὶ ὃ ἕκαστος ὥρμηκε, πᾶσιν αὐτοῖς ἔπεται· καὶ γὰρ ὁ πλούσιος ὑπὸ πολλῶν τιμᾶται καὶ ὁ ἀνδρεῖος καὶ ὁ σοφός· ὥστε ἀπὸ γε τοῦ 20 τιμᾶσθαι, οἷόν ἐστιν, πάντες τῆς ἡδονῆς ἐμπειροὶ· τῆς δὲ τοῦ ὄντος θέας, οἷαν ἡδονὴν ἔχει, ἀδύνατον ἄλλῳ γεγεῖσθαι πλὴν τῷ φιλοσόφῳ. Ἐμπειρίας μὲν ἄρα, εἶπον, ἔνεκα κάλλιστα τῶν ἀνδρῶν D κρίνει οὗτος. Πολὺ γε. Καὶ μὴν μετὰ γε φρονήσεως μόνος ἐμπειρος γεγονὼς ἔσται. Τί μὴν; Ἄλλὰ μὴν καὶ δι' οὗ γε δεῖ

16. τιμὴ μὲν v: τί μὴν AΠΞ: τί μὴ q.

22. οὗτος II: οὕτως A.

18. ὁ σοφός A²Ξ q: σοφός A¹II.

φρονήσεως A²Ξ q: σωφρονήσεως II et fortasse A¹.

582 C 14 τί δὲ τοῦ φιλοτίμου; and how does he stand in relation to the lover of honour?' Supply διαφέρει ὁ φιλόσοφος, or rather a more general idea of comparison out of διαφέρει: cf. 585 D and X 597 D. We must beware of translating 'but what of the lover of honour?' (D. and V.), as if τοῦ φιλοτίμου were here equivalent to περὶ τοῦ φιλοτίμου (V 470 A n.). This error caused Groen v. Prinsterer (Protop. Pl. p. 210) to suggest ἄρα μᾶλλον ἐμπειρός ἐστι τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ φρονεῖν ἡδονῆς, ἢ ἐκείνος τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ τιμᾶσθαι; with which the translation of Davies and Vaughan also agrees. The subject of ἀπειρός ἐστι is of course ὁ φιλόσοφος, and ἐκείνος means ὁ φιλότιμος.

18 ὁ ἀνδρεῖος represents ὁ φιλότιμος; cf. ἀνδρεία 582 E and πολεμικοῦ 583 A n.

19 τοῦ ὄντος. The presence of such metaphysical terms in this and the succeeding proof is what chiefly encourages Pfeleiderer (Zur Lösung etc. pp. 74 ff.) and some others to maintain that §§ 580—587 were written at a later period than the rest of this Book, most of which they believe to be earlier than V 471 C—VII inclusive. See also on 581 A. Others with much more reason find in these expressions a strong argument in defence of the structural unity of the Republic; for it would seem that τῆς τοῦ ὄντος θέας and the like presuppose the discussions of Book VII. See Zeller⁴ II p. 561 n.

582 D 22 κρίνει. Bekker's conjecture κρίνει is unnecessary.

μετὰ γε φρονήσεως corresponds to φρονήσει in 582 A. Plato is taking the three requisites in order. The ἐμπειρία of the φιλόσοφος is alone intelligent, and, without φρόνησις, ἐμπειρία is no more than a sort of ἀτεχνος τριβή (Phaedr. 260 E: cf. Gorg. 463 B). It is indeed quite true, as Nettleship reminds us (Lect. and Rem. II p. 322), that the higher kind of man learns more from the experience which he shares with the lower kind without having to go through nearly the same amount of it.

23 ἀλλὰ μὴν κτλ. Bosanquet observes that "this is perhaps a good argument to prove that the man of culture is pre-eminently competent to appraise the value of different ideals of life, but it is not a good argument to prove that he is a good judge of degrees of agreeable feeling in lives fundamentally different from his own" (similarly Nettleship I. c. p. 321). True; but that is not the point. Plato is attempting to prove that the φιλόσοφος is the best judge, not of 'the degrees of agreeable feeling' experienced, in one particular kind of life, but of the relative pleasure of three different kinds of life, and his reasoning, granted that pleasures can be compared at all, is perfectly legitimate. Each of the three men pronounces his own life not merely ὀργάνου κρίνεσθαι, οὐ τοῦ φιλοκερδοῦς τοῦτο ὄργανον οὐδὲ τοῦ φιλοτίμου, ἀλλὰ τοῦ φιλοσόφου. Τὸ ποῖον; Διὰ λόγων που 25 ἔφαμεν δεῖν κρίνεσθαι. ἦ γάρ; Ναί. Λόγοι δὲ τούτου μάλιστα ὄργανον. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Οὐκοῦν εἰ μὲν πλούτῳ καὶ κέρδει ἄριστα Ε ἐκρίνετο τὰ κρινόμενα, ἃ ἐπῆνει ὁ φιλοκερδὴς καὶ ἔψεγεν, ἀνάγκη ἂν ἦν ταῦτα ἀληθέστατα εἶναι. Πολλή γε. Εἰ δὲ τιμῇ τε καὶ νίκῃ καὶ ἀνδρείᾳ, ἅρ' οὐχ ἃ ὁ φιλότιμός τε καὶ ὁ φιλόνομος; 30 Δῆλον. Ἐπειδὴ δ' ἐμπειρία καὶ φρονήσῃ καὶ λόγῳ; Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη, ἃ ὁ φιλόσοφός τε καὶ ὁ φιλόλογος ἐπαινεῖ, ἀληθέστατα εἶναι.

 583 Τριῶν ἄρ' οὐσῶν τῶν | ἡδονῶν ἢ τούτου τοῦ μέρους τῆς ψυχῆς, ᾧ μακθάνομεν, ἡδίστη ἂν εἴη, καὶ ἐν ᾧ ἡμῶν τοῦτο ἄρχει, ὁ τούτου βίος ἡδιστος; Πῶς δ' οὐ μέλλει; ἔφη· κύριος γοῦν ἐπαινέτης ὧν ἐπαινεῖ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ βίον ὁ φρόνιμος. Τίνα δὲ δεύτερον, εἶπον, βίον καὶ τίνα δευτέραν ἡδονὴν φησιν ὁ κριτὴς εἶναι; Δῆλον ὅτι τὴν 5 τοῦ πολεμικοῦ τε καὶ φιλοτίμου· ἐγγυτέρω γὰρ αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἢ ἡ τοῦ χρηματιστοῦ. Ἑστάτην δὲ τὴν τοῦ φιλοκερδοῦς, ὡς ἔοικεν.
 Τί μὴν; ἦ δ' ὅς.

3. ὧν Α²Π: ὡν ut videtur Α¹.

pleasant, but pleasanter than those of the other two: how then are we to decide? Nothing but argument will help us, and the φιλόσοφος is the only one of the triad who possesses that weapon. It should be observed that throughout this part of the discussion Plato takes it for granted that some kinds of pleasure are in point of fact more pleasant than others. At present his object is to discover what these are, but in the argument which is still to come (585 B ff.), he grapples with the metaphysical question—for to him it was a question, not of psychology, but of metaphysics—and attempts to shew that pleasures contain more or less of pleasure according as there is in them more or less of truth.

26 ἔφαμεν κτλ. The reference is to 582 A. Λόγοι means 'rational arguments,' 'reasoning' (cf. VI 511 B n.), and τούτου is of course τοῦ φιλοσόφου, not τοῦ κρίνεν, as Stallbaum thinks.

582 E 29 ἀληθέστατα here and in ἀληθέστατα εἶναι below contains a hint of the theory which is afterwards developed in 585 B ff., where the various kinds of pleasure are shewn to be different in respect of reality and truth.

30 φιλόνομος. See on 581 B.

31 ἀνάγκη, ἔφη κτλ. supplies the apodosis to ἐπειδὴ—λόγῳ: cf. supra 577 B n.

583 A 5 ὁ κριτῆς κτλ. ὁ κριτῆς is the φιλόσοφος, as αὐτοῦ in the next sentence shews. There is therefore no reference to 580 B. For πολεμικοῦ Herwerden proposes φιλονίκου, very arbitrarily: see on 582 C. It is worth noting that the conclusion of this argument incidentally furnishes a further reply to the objection raised by Adimantus in IV 419 A ff., viz. that Plato's guardians cannot possibly be happy.

583 B—585 A Our third and crowning proof is as follows. All the pleasures except those of the wise (φρόνιμοι) are untrue and impure. We must recognise the existence of three distinct states, viz. Pleasure and Pain, which are positive and opposite, and the Neutral state, which is negative and intermediate. Men frequently identify the intermediate condition with Pleasure; but they are mistaken when they do so, for there are some pleasures, e.g. those of smell, which have a positive character of their own. Now bodily pleasures, so-called, together with the corresponding pleasures of anticipation, are for the most part merely ways of escape from pain, and belong to the neutral

IX. Ταῦτα μὲν¹ τοίνυν οὕτω δὴ ἐφεξῆς ἂν εἴη καὶ δις νενι- B 10 κηκὼς ὁ δίκαιος τὸν ἄδικον· τὸ δὲ τρίτον Ὀλυμπικῶς τῷ σωτήρῳ
 ' τε καὶ τῷ Ὀλυμπίῳ Δίῳ, ἄθρει ὅτι οὐδὲ παναληθὲς ἐστὶν ἢ τῶν state. They are falsely judged pleasant through juxtaposition and contrast with positive Pain.

583 B ff. 9 ταῦτα μὲν κτλ. The political and psychological λόγοι have registered their votes, and it only remains for us to hear the verdict of the metaphysical, to which Plato characteristically assigns the greatest value (καίτοι —πτωμάτων below). See on 577 C. Plato's theory of true or pure and false or impure pleasures reappears in the Philebus. Both dialogues teach (1) that Pleasure consists in πλήρωσις, (2) that the majority of bodily pleasures are not pleasures at all, but only λυπῶν ἀπαλλαγαί, and (3) that there are other—true or pure—pleasures (e.g. smell) which are not preceded or followed by pain. The last generation of scholars mostly placed the Republic after the Philebus. I am inclined to agree with more recent critics in thinking it earlier (see on VI 506 B and Jackson in Journal of Philology xxv pp. 65—82), but the greater degree of elaboration which marks the treatment of this subject in the Philebus may be and has been accounted for on either hypothesis. Aristotle also touches on the question of Mixed and Unmixed Pleasures in Eth. Nic. VII 12. 1152^b ff., especially 1152^b 35—1153^a 7, ib. 15. 1154^a 22—^b 31 and again in X 2—5, especially 2. 1173^a 22—^b 20. The present section is further important in the history of ethics for its clear distinction between the μέση κατάστασις and the two extremes; a distinction already noted by the Cyrenaics (RP⁷. § 208^b) and afterwards adopted by Epicurus (ib. § 380 ff.).

δύο and δις refer of course to the two preceding proofs 577 B—580 C and 580 C—583 A.

10 τὸ δὲ τρίτον κτλ. The libations at banquets (according to the Schol. on Phil. 66 D: cf. also Schol. on Charm. 167 A and on Pind. Isthm. 5. 7 with Hesych. s. v. τρίτος κρατήρ and Pollux vi 15, 100) were offered in the following sequence: (1) to Olympian Zeus and the Olympian gods, (2) to the heroes, (3) to Zeus Soter. Hence the proverb τὸ τρίτον τῷ σωτήρῳ, with which Plato sometimes introduces the third or culminating stage in an argument, demonstration, or the like (Phil. and Charm. ll. cc., Laws III 692 A, Epp. VII 340 A). In the present instance there is also an allusion to the Olympic games, as appears from Ὀλυμπικῶς ('Olympic-wise'). Stallbaum conjectures that competitors at Olympia were in the habit of making their third libation "non uni tantum Διὶ σωτήρῳ, sed sicuti consentaneum fuit, τῷ σωτήρῳ τε καὶ τῷ Ὀλυμπίῳ Δίῳ": but there is no authority for this idea. Is Plato thinking of the πένταθλον, in which it was necessary to win in three (probably leaping, discus-throwing, javelin-throwing) out of the five events in order to obtain the prize (see P. Gardner in J. of H. Studies I p. 217, where the evidence is quoted)? Schneider takes this view: but the words τῶν πτωμάτων below make it clear that the reference is only to wrestling. The point manifestly is, that as in wrestling the third throw decided the contest between two athletes (Schol. on Aesch. Eum. 592 et al.), so here the δίκαιος wins after he has thrice defeated the ἄδικος (cf. also Euthyd. 277 C). I think Ὀλυμπικῶς is intended to suggest that the contest between justice and injustice is the greatest of all moral, as the Olympic was of all physical, παλαισμάτα: the victors ζήσουσι τοῦ μακαριστοῦ βίου ὃν οἱ Ὀλυμπιονίκαί ζωσι μακαριώτερον (V 465 D n.). Compare Phaedr. 256 B τῶν τριῶν παλαισμάτων τῶν ὡς ἀληθῶς Ὀλυμπιακῶν ἐν νενικήκασιν. Plato adds the epithet τῷ Ὀλυμπίῳ de suo: in an Olympic contest Zeus Soter is also in the truest sense Olympian too, although in banquets Zeus Olympius received only the first, and not also the third libation. With similar and even greater emphasis on the word Ὀλυμπίῳ Pindar prays for an Olympic victory for Phylacidas in the words εἴη δὲ τρίτον | σωτήρῳ ποσειδώντα | Ὀλυμπίῳ Αἰγίαν κατά | σπένδειν μελιφθόγοις ἀοιδαῖς (Isthm. l.c.: see Donaldson ad loc.).

11 οὐδὲ παναληθὲς — καθαρά. In what sense is pleasure said by Plato to be pure and true? It is pure when unadulterated by pain, whether antecedent, present or consequent; and there is also perhaps in Plato's use of the epithet 'pure' a relic or hint of the old halfἄλλων ἡδονὴ πλὴν τῆς τοῦ φρονίμου οὐδὲ καθαρὰ, ἀλλ' ἐσκιαγραφημένη τις, ὡς ἐγὼ δοκῶ μοι τῶν σοφῶν τινὸς ἀκηκοέναι.

 καίτοι τοῦτ' ἂν εἴη μέγιστόν τε καὶ κυριώτατον τῶν πτωμάτων.
 Πολύ γε· ἀλλὰ πῶς λέγεις; Ὡδ', εἶπον, ἐξευρήσω, σοῦ ἀπο- 15
 C κρινομένου ζητῶν ἅμα. Ἐρώτα δὴ, ἔφη. Λέγε δὴ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· οὐκ ἐναντίον φάμεν λύπην ἡδονῇ; Καὶ μάλα. Οὐκοῦν καὶ τὸ μήτε χαίρειν μήτε λυπεῖσθαι εἶναι τι; Εἶναι μέντοι. Μεταξὺ τούτοις ἀμφοῖν ἐν μέσῳ ὃν, ἡσυχίαν τινὰ περὶ ταῦτα τῆς ψυχῆς; ἢ οὐχ οὕτως αὐτὸ λέγεις; Οὕτως, ἦ δ' ὅς. Ἄρ' οὐ μνημονεύεις, 20 ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τοὺς τῶν καμίωντων λόγους, οὓς λέγουσιν ὅταν κάμνωσιν; Ποίους; Ὡς οὐδὲν ἄρα ἐστὶν ἥδιον τοῦ ὑγιαίνειν, ἀλλὰ D σφᾶς ἡλελήθει, πρὶν κάμνειν, ἥδιστον ὃν. Μέννημαι, ἔφη.
 Οὐκοῦν καὶ τῶν περιωδυνία τινὲ ἐχομένων ἀκούεις λεγόντων, ὡς οὐδὲν ἥδιον τοῦ παύσασθαι ὀδυνώμενον; Ἀκούω. Καὶ ἐν ἄλλοις 25
 | γε οἶμαι, πολλοῖς τοιούτοις αἰσθάνει γιγνομένους τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, ceremonial, half-religious idea of 'pure from taint': see App. III and Rohde Psyche II pp. 281 ff. al. But in its deepest signification the truth or purity of Pleasure involves the ontological theory that soul and its sustenance (knowledge etc.) have more part in Being and Truth than Body and its food: the spiritual and not the material is the true. See also on 586 E and especially Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II pp. 322—327, where the farther bearings of Plato's theory are admirably traced.

12 πλὴν τῆς τοῦ φρονίμου. Cf. Phaed. 69 B, C.

ἐσκιαγραφημένη. See on II 365 C. Bodily pleasure is ἐσκιαγραφημένη in the fullest sense of the word, because it depends on contrast and balance of pleasure with pleasure, and pleasure with pain (584 A), just as perspective produces its effect by the contrast of light and shade (586 B). Similarly in Phaed. 69 B Plato hints that the so-called virtue which consists in bartering one bodily pleasure for another is σκιαγραφία τις—καὶ οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς οὐδ' ἀληθὲς ἔχουσα, and ib. 81 B the soul is said to be γεγοητευμένη ὑπ' αὐτοῦ (sc. τοῦ σώματος) ὑπὸ τε τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν καὶ ἡδονῶν. Cf. also Phil. 44 C αὐτὸ πρῶτον αὐτῆς (sc. τῆς ἡδονῆς) ἐπαγωγὸν γοήτευμα, ἀλλ' οὐχ ἡδονὴν εἶναι. In each of these passages there is probably a conscious reminiscence of Orphic doctrines: see next note and App. IV.

13 τῶν σοφῶν alludes, I believe, to Orphic or Pythagorean ascetics, who preached the doctrine σώμα σῆμα and regarded bodily pleasure as essentially false and impure: see especially Rohde Psyche II pp. 121—130, and 161—166. Evidence for this view is given in App. IV, where the other interpretations are also discussed.

14 καίτοι is hardly 'et vero' 'and surely' (as Kugler takes it de part. τοί etc. p. 18, comparing Gorg. 452 E, Theaet. 187 C al.), but rather 'quamquam' 'and yet' (sc. 'strong as were the other two proofs,' or the like): "und das wäre doch wohl" Schneider.

583 C 17 τὸ μήτε χαίρειν κτλ. This τρίτη διάθεσις is described in Phil. 32 E ff.: cf. ib. 42 E ff. and Tim. 64 C ff.

18 μεταξὺ κτλ.: 'something which is intermediate between these two, a sort of repose of the soul so far as these are concerned.' Herwerden is fain to cancel either μεταξύ or ἐν μέσῳ: but the fulness of expression is characteristic. See Introd. § 5.

19 ἡσυχίαν: whereas λύπη and ἡδονή are κινήσεις 583 E.

20 ἄρ' οὐ. Three inferior MSS have ἄρ' οὐν, which is easier; but ἄρ' οὐ is much more lively, and not more abrupt than e.g. πολεμήσομεν τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο, ὦ Γλαῦκον; II 373 E (quoted by Schneider). The stylistic effect is exactly like Lucretius' 'Nonne vides' etc.: e.g. II 263 al.

ἐν οἷς, ὅταν λυπῶνται, τὸ μὴ λυπεῖσθαι καὶ τὴν ἡσυχίαν τοῦ τοιούτου ἐγκωμιάζουσιν ὡς ἡδιστον, οὐ τὸ χαίρειν. Τοῦτο γάρ, ἔφη, τότε ἡδὺ ἴσως καὶ ἀγαπητὸν γίγνεται, ἡσυχία. Καὶ ὅταν 30 παύσῃται ἄρα, εἶπον, χαίρων τις, ἢ τῆς ἡδονῆς ἡσυχία λυπηρὸν Ε ἔσται. Ἴσως, ἔφη. Ὁ μεταξὺ ἄρα νῦν δὴ ἀμφοτέρων ἔφαμεν εἶναι, τὴν ἡσυχίαν, τοῦτό ποτε ἀμφοτέρα ἔσται, λύπη τε καὶ ἡδονή.
 Ἔοικεν. Ἡ καὶ δυνατόν τὸ μῆδέτερα ὃν ἀμφοτέρα γίγνεσθαι;
 Οὐ μοι δοκεῖ. Καὶ μὴν τό γε ἡδὺ ἐν ψυχῇ γιγνόμενον καὶ τὸ
 35 λυπηρὸν κίνησίς τις ἀμφοτέρω ἐστόν. ἢ οὐ; Ναί. | Τὸ δὲ μήτε 584 λυπηρὸν μήτε ἡδὺ οὐχὶ ἡσυχία μέντοι καὶ ἐν μέσῳ τούτοις ἐφάνη ἄρτι; Ἐφάνη γάρ. Πῶς οὖν ὀρθῶς ἔστι τὸ μὴ ἀλγεῖν ἡδὺ ἡγεῖ-σθαι ἢ τὸ μὴ χαίρειν ἀνιαρόν; Οὐδαμῶς. Οὐκ ἔστιν ἄρα τοῦτο, 5 ἀλλὰ φαίνεται, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, παρὰ τὸ ἀλγεῖν ἡδὺ καὶ παρὰ τὸ ἡδὺ

27. τὸ Α²Π: om. Α¹.

33. δυνατόν Α²Π: fortasse ἀδύνατον Α¹.

583 D 28 τοῦτο γὰρ κτλ. The argument is as follows. While suffering pain, men are apt to look upon the ἡσυχία from pain as the highest pleasure. Perhaps (suggests Glauco) at such a time the neutral state is in point of fact found positively pleasant and welcome by them. Socrates proceeds to shew (by a reductio ad absurdum proof) that Glauco's suggestion is untenable. 'In that case,' he argues, 'ἡσυχία from pleasure will in like manner be positively painful: and thus the neutral state, which we declared to be between the two extremes, will upon occasions be both, viz. both pleasure and pain.' Glauco allows that that which is neither cannot become both, and Socrates proceeds: In this instance the 'both' is a κίνησις, and the 'neither' a ἡσυχία, and lies, as we have seen, between the two: so that it is wrong to identify the absence of pain with pleasure or the absence of pleasure with pain. Hence your suggestion is erroneous: οὐκ ἔστιν ἄρα τοῦτο, ἀλλὰ φαίνεται κτλ. See below on 584 A. The argument is really complete when Glauco says οὐ μοι δοκεῖ, but the words καὶ μὴν τό γε ἡδὺ introduce a new reason for refusing to identify ἡσυχία with pleasure or with pain, by explicitly stating for the first time that pleasure and pain are each of them a κίνησις. ἡσυχία and κίνησις are mutually exclusive notions. Cf. Phil. 43 D—44 B, where the reasoning follows nearly the same lines. See also next note.

583 E 32 ἀμφοτέρα—ἡδονή. Does Plato mean that the neutral state will sometimes be both painful and pleasant at one and the same time,—or only at one time painful and at another pleasant? According to Gorg. 497 c ff., in eating when hungry, drinking when thirsty etc., we cease from pain and pleasure simultaneously, so that in such a case the neutral state will appear to be both pleasant and painful. But the rest of the argument does not support this interpretation; and in the corresponding passage of the Philebus (43 D) we have τὸ δὲ μῆδέτερα τούτων ἔσθ' ἡμῖν ὅπως θάτερα γένοιτ' ἂν. The simpler view should therefore be adopted.

35 κίνησις. In Pleasure the κίνησις is πλήρωσις, in pain, κένωσις, as is afterwards pointed out (585 A n.).

584 A 2 οὐχὶ—μέντοι κτλ. See I 339 B n. It is safer to construe ὀρθῶς with ἡγεῖσθαι than with ἔστι (as D. and V. translate). Cf. Euthyphr. 5 E ταῦτα ὀρθῶς ἂν εἴη οὕτω γιγνόμενα, where ὀρθῶς belongs to γιγνόμενα, or to a γιγνόμενα understood.

4 οὐκ ἔστιν κτλ. contradicts Glauco's suggestion τοῦτο γὰρ—ἡσυχία 583 D. There is no reality about this (as you suggest): it is only a φάντασμα—the neutral state appearing pleasant by the side of pain, being, in fact, a sort of σκιαγραφία, as we said in 583 B. On γοητεία see 583 B n.

ἰλγεινὸν τότε, ἢ ἡσυχία, καὶ οὐδὲν ὑγίαινον τούτων τῶν φαντασμάτων πρὸς ἡδονῆς ἰλήθειαν, ἰλλὰ γοητεία τις. 'Ὡς γοῦν ὁ λόγος, ἔφη.
 B σημαίνει. 'Ιδὲ τοίνυν, ἔφη ἐγώ, ἡδονάς, αἱ οὐκ ἐκ λυπῶν εἰσίν, ἵνα μὴ πολλάκις οἰηθῆς ἐν τῷ παρόντι οὕτω τοῦτο πεφυκέναι, ἡδονὴν μὲν παύσαν λύπης εἶναι, λύπην δὲ ἡδονῆς. Ποῦ δὴ, ἔφη, καὶ ποίας 10 λέγεις; Πολλὰ μὲν, εἶπον, καὶ ἄλλαι, μάλιστα δ' εἰ 'θέλεις ἐννοῆσαι τὰς περὶ τὰς ὁσμὰς ἡδονάς. αὐταὶ γὰρ οὐ προλυπηθέντι ἐξαίφνης ἀμήχανοι τὸ μέγεθος γίνονται παυσάμεναι τε λύπην οὐδεμίαν C καταλείπουσιν. 'Αληθέστατα, ἔφη. Μὴ ἄρα πειθώμεθα¹ καθαρὰν ἡδονὴν εἶναι τὴν λύπης ἀπαλλαγὴν, μηδὲ λύπην τὴν ἡδονῆς. Μὴ 15
 γάρ. 'Αλλὰ μέντοι, εἶπον, αἱ γε διὰ τοῦ σώματος ἐπὶ τὴν ψυχὴν τείνουσαι καὶ λεγόμεναι ἡδοναὶ σχεδὸν αἱ πλείσταί τε καὶ μέγισταί τούτου τοῦ εἵδους εἰσὶ, λυπῶν τινὲς ἀπαλλαγαί. Εἰσὶ γάρ. Οὐκ-

8. ἔφη ἐγώ Θ: ἔφη δ' ἐγώ ΑΠΞ (sed δ puncto notavit A²): δ' ἐγώ γ.

584 B 8 αἱ οὐκ ἐκ λυπῶν κτλ. are the so-called 'pure' pleasures of Phil. 51 B ff. τὰς περὶ τε τὰ καλὰ λεγόμενα χρώματα καὶ περὶ τὰ σχήματα καὶ τῶν ὁσμῶν τὰς πλείστας καὶ τὰς τῶν φθόγων καὶ ὅσα τὰς ἐνδεῖας ἀναισθητοῦς ἔχοντα καὶ ἀλύπτους τὰς πληρώσεις αἰσθητὰς καὶ ἡδέας, καθαρὰς λυπῶν, παραδίδωσιν. They are never preceded by pain, but may, according to the Philebus, be preceded by κένωσις and ἐνδεῖα, so long as these are imperceptible; and they are caused by πλήρωσις no less than the pleasures which are called impure, although the πλήρωσις in the case of the pure pleasures is ἀληθεστέρα: cf. 585 B and Tim. 65 A.

ἵνα μὴ πολλάκις κτλ.: 'in case, perhaps, you should suppose in the present instance' etc. (sc. as you did in the other 583 D). μὴ πολλάκις is 'ne forte' (IV 422 C n.), and ἐν τῷ παρόντι refers to the example which Socrates is about to give. Glaucō's ποῦ δὴ asks for an explanation of ἐν τῷ παρόντι, just as ποίας invites Socrates to specify the ἡδονάς αἱ οὐκ ἐκ λυπῶν εἰσίν. The English translators are in error.

11 πολλὰ μὲν κτλ. In spite of this passage and Phil. 51 B ff. Aristotle seems actually to insinuate that Plato made all pleasures conditional on release from pain: see Stewart on Eth. Nic. x. 2. 1173^b 12 ff.

12 ὁσμᾶς. Has Heraclitus' curious fragment (38 Bywater) αἱ ψυχὰς ὁσμῶνται καθ' ἑδὴν any bearing on this doctrine of the 'purity' of smell? If the soul, after it is 'purified' from the body by death, still retains this sense, presumably ὁσμή is (in Orphic language) 'pure.' It is possible enough that Plato's whole theory of 'pure pleasures' was suggested by some such early theological notion, though he afterwards developed it in his own way. See however Rohde *Psyche*² II p. 152 n. Aristotle also looks upon smell as a painless pleasure: see Eth. Nic. x. 2. 1173^b 18 ff. et al.

584 C 16 αἱ γε—ἡδοναὶ κτλ. The emphasis is on διὰ τοῦ σώματος. All pleasures belong of course to the soul (Tim. 64 B); but some come through the body, while others—the pleasures of knowledge, for example, according to Plato—do not (cf. Theaet. 184 E—185 E and generally Phil. 47 D ff.). Most of the former class—smell is an exception—and the greatest among them (τὰ φροδίσια Phil. 65 C) are only λυπῶν ἀπαλλαγαί (cf. Phaedr. 258 E, Phil. 45 A—47 B and Arist. Eth. Nic. VII 13. 1153^a 33, 15. 1154^a 26 ff.), and so 'mixed' and unreal: compare the picture of the χαραδριῶ βλος in Gorg. 494 B ff. The same is true of the purely spiritual pleasures and pains which come from the anticipation of these 'mixed' pleasures and pains. On the pleasures and pains of anticipation see Phil. 32 C ff.

οὖν καὶ αἱ πρὸ μελλόντων τούτων ἐκ προσδοκίας γιγνόμεναι προη-20 σθήσεις τε καὶ προλυπήσεις κατὰ ταῦτα ἔχουσιν; Κατὰ ταῦτα.

X. Οἷσθ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οἳαί εἰσιν¹ καὶ ᾧ μάλιστα εἰόκασιν; D Τῷ; ἔφη. Νομίζεις τι, εἶπον, ἐν τῇ φύσει εἶναι τὸ μὲν ἄνω, τὸ δὲ κάτω, τὸ δὲ μέσον; Ἐγωγε. Οἶει οὖν ἂν τινα ἐκ τοῦ κάτω φερόμενον πρὸς μέσον ἄλλο τι οἶεσθαι ἢ ἄνω φέρεσθαι; καὶ ἐν 25 μέσῳ στάντα, ἀφορῶντα ὅθεν ἐνήνεκται, ἄλλοθί που ἂν ἡγείσθαι εἶναι ἢ ἐν τῷ ἄνω, μὴ ἑωρακότα τὸ ἀληθῶς ἄνω; Μὰ Δι' οὐκ ἔγωγε, ἔφη, ἄλλως οἶμαι οἰηθῆναι ἂν τὸν τοιοῦτον. Ἄλλ' εἰ πάλιν γ', ἔφην, φέροιτο,¹ κάτω τ' ἂν οἶοιτο φέρεσθαι καὶ ἀληθῆ οἶοιτο; E Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Οὐκοῦν ταῦτα πάσχοι ἂν πάντα διὰ τὸ μὴ ἔμπειρος 30 εἶναι τοῦ ἀληθινῶς ἄνω τε ὄντος καὶ ἐν μέσῳ καὶ κάτω; Δηλον
δὴ. Θανμάζοις ἂν οὖν, εἰ καὶ ἄπειροι ἀληθείας περὶ πολλῶν τε ἄλλων μὴ ὑμεῖς δόξας ἔχουσιν πρὸς τε ἡδονὴν καὶ λύπην καὶ τὸ μεταξὺ τούτων οὕτω διάκεινται, ὥστε ὅταν μὲν ἐπὶ τὸ λυπηρὸν φέρωνται, ἀληθῆ τε | οἴονται καὶ τῷ ὄντι λυποῦνται, ὅταν δὲ ἀπὸ 585 λύπης ἐπὶ τὸ μεταξύ, σφόδρα μὲν οἴονται πρὸς πληρώσει τε καὶ ἡδονῇ γίγνεσθαι, ὥσπερ δὲ πρὸς μέλαν φαῖον ἀποσκοποῦντες

27. ἄλλως II: ἀλλ' ὥς A.
om. AIIΞ.

30. κάτω A²II: κάτω (sic) A¹.

3. δὲ γ:

19 προσηθήσεις is a Platonic coinage not found elsewhere. The reading προαι-σθήσεις (Ξ and Vind. B) held its ground till Bekker; but προσηθήσεις had already been conjectured by Floyer Sydenham (Lupton in Cl. Rev. II p. 228).

20 προλυπήσεις: thus for example τὸ πρὸ τῶν λυπηρῶν (sc. ἐλπιδόμενον) is φοβερὸν καὶ ἀλγεινόν (Phil. I. c.). If bodily pleasure is 'mixed,' the same must be true of bodily pain: and so the προλυπήσεις as well as the προσηθήσεις of anticipation are 'mixed' (κατὰ ταῦτα ἔχουσιν). Fear for example (which is προσδοκία κακοῦ) is a 'mixed' pain: see Phil. 47 E.

584 D 22 νομίζεις κτλ. This is the popular conception of 'above' and 'below' held also by most of the philosophers, e.g. Heraclitus, the Pythagoreans, Anaxagoras, the Atomists (RP⁷. §§ 29, 68 A, 124 B nn., 149 B nn.), and even Aristotle (Phys. IV 4. 212^a 24 ff.), and found also in the Phaedo (109 ff.). In the Timaeus, on the other hand, Plato takes a different and more scientific view: φύσει γὰρ δὴ τινας τόπους δύο εἶναι διεληφότας διχῇ τὸ πᾶν ἐναντίους τὸν μὲν κάτω, — τὸν δ' ἄνω — οὐκ ὁρθὸν οὐδαμῇ νομίζειν κτλ. (62 C ff.).

It is possible (with Solomon Cl. Rev. III p. 418) to construe the divergence as "an incidental proof of the distance separating the Republic from the Timaeus," especially as the myth in Book x agrees with the view of Above and Below given here: but too much stress should not be laid on the present passage, which is intended only as an illustration and nothing more.

23 οἶει οὖν ἂν τινα κτλ. Cf. Phaed. 109 C.

584 E 31 εἰ καὶ κτλ.: 'if men also who are ignorant of truth' etc. καὶ sc. like ὁ μὴ ἔμπειρος τοῦ ἀληθινῶς ἄνω τε ὄντος κτλ. in our simile. Three deterioris notae MSS have εἰ καὶ οἱ ἄπειροι, and Hermann conjectures οἱ for καὶ: but cf. the use of εἰ καὶ in x 597 A. The article is not necessary, and ought not to be introduced without better MS authority.

585 A 2 πληρώσει prepares the way for the coming argument, in which Pleasure is viewed as πληρώσις, Pain as κένωσις (cf. Phil. 31 E ff.). So far, we have been told only that they are κινήσεις (583 E).

3 ὥσπερ δὲ κτλ. The equations are of course Black = Pain, Grey = Absence ἀπειρία λευκοῦ, καὶ τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην ἀφορῶντες ἀπειρία ἡδονῆς ἀπατῶνται; Μὰ Δία, ἣ δ' ὅς, οὐκ ἂν θαυμάσαιμι, ἀλλὰ 5 πολὺ μᾶλλον, εἰ μὴ οὕτως ἔχει. Ὡδὲ γ' οὖν, εἴποι, ἐννόει· οὐχὶ B πείνα καὶ δίψα καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα κενώσεις τινές εἰσιν τῆς περὶ τὸ σῶμα ἕξεως; Τί μὴν; Ἀγνοια δὲ καὶ ἀφροσύνη ἀρ' οὐ κενότης ἐστὶ τῆς περὶ ψυχὴν αὐ ἕξεως; Μάλα γε. Οὐκοῦν πληροῖτ' ἂν ὁ τε τροφῆς μεταλαμβάνων καὶ ὁ νοῦν ἴσχων; Πῶς δ' οὐ; Πλή- 10 ρωσις δὲ ἀληθεστέρα τοῦ ἦττον ἢ τοῦ μᾶλλον ὄντος; Δῆλον, ὅτι τοῦ μᾶλλον. Πότερα οὖν ἡγεῖ τὰ γένη μᾶλλον καθαρὰς οὐσίας μετέχειν, τὰ οἶον σίτου τε καὶ ποτοῦ καὶ ὄψου καὶ ξυμπάσης

 C τροφῆς, ἢ τὸ δόξης τε ἀληθοῦς εἶδος καὶ ἐπιστήμης καὶ νοῦ καὶ

4. τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην Schleiermacher: πρὸς τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω λύπην cod. d.

7. πείνα II et corr. A²: πείνη A¹.

13. τὰ οἶον II: οἶον A¹: τὰ οἶα A².

of Pain, White = Pleasure. Plato's simile is particularly appropriate, because Grey is a mixture of white and black (Tim. 68 C φαῖον δὲ λευκοῦ τε καὶ μέλανος sc. κράσει γίγνεται), just as λυπῆς ἀπαλλαγὴ according to this discussion (584 C al.) may be regarded as a mixture of pleasure and pain (584 C, 586 B), or in other words only a 'mixed' pleasure. With the simile itself cf. Arist. Phys. V 1. 224^b 34 τὸ φαῖον λευκὸν πρὸς τὸ μέλαν καὶ μέλαν πρὸς τὸ λευκόν and ib. 5. 229^b 16 ff. The best MSS omit δέ after ὥσπερ, and all the MSS have καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω λύπην instead of καὶ τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην (see cr. n.), but it is impossible to believe that they are right. On the text and other views of this passage see App. V.

6 ἔχει. There is slight MS authority for ἔχοι, which Neukirch (in Pl. Pol. quaest. phil. I p. 47) and Richter (Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 147) approve. ἔχει is sound enough: cf. Prot. 315 E οὐκ ἂν θαυμάσοιμι, εἰ—τυγχάνει ὦν.

585 A—586 C Consider the question also in this way. Hunger, thirst etc. are modes of physical depletion; and Ignorance is a form of spiritual emptiness. He who partakes of food, and he who acquires Knowledge or Reason, are each 'filled'; but which of them is the more truly 'filled'? Knowledge and its kindred have more reality and truth than Food etc., Soul than Body: hence the acquisition of knowledge is a truer form of replenishment than the other. The resulting Pleasure will therefore be more true. Those who are strangers to wisdom and virtue know nothing of true delights, but fight with one another for delusive and unsatisfying joys.

585 A 6 ὥδὲ γ' οὖν. "In his γε vim acuit vocabuli ὥδε, sed οὖν inservit continuandae argumentationi. Ferri non potest γοῦν, quod ad universam sententiam pertineret, habens illud vim asseverandi cum restrictione quadam" (Stallbaum). Contrast I 335 E, VII 527 D nn. Here most of the MSS appear to have γε οὖν.

οὐχὶ πείνα καὶ δίψα κτλ. For the sense cf. Phil. 31 E and (in general) VII 519 A, B nn. The form πείνα (see cr. n.) is supported also by IV 437 D; but πείνη is in itself legitimate and occurs tolerably often in Plato, as Schneider shews.

585 B 8 ἀρ' οὐ κενότης κτλ. Ignorance, as well as hunger, is κενότης (cf. 584 B n.); but whereas we are conscious of physical depletion and therefore suffer pain, we are not—speaking generally—conscious of intellectual depletion, so that Ignorance is not, as a rule, painful; and thus the pleasures of Learning—the πλήρωσις of that whereof Ignorance is the κενότης—not being preceded by pain, are pure. This conclusion is worked out in Phil. 52 A, B, but not here, where the argument takes a different course. On ἴσχω 'acquire' 'get' see VI 511 D n.

14 τὸ δόξης τε ἀληθοῦς κτλ. So in Phil. 60 D μνήμην καὶ φρόνησιν καὶ ἐπιστήμην καὶ ἀληθῆ δόξαν τῆς αὐτῆς ιδέας τιθέμενος: cf. also ib. 19 D, 21 A, B, D. These objects are here conceived of as the τροφή of the soul, cf. Phaed. 84 B.

15 ξυλλήβδην αὖ πάσης ἀρετῆς; ὧδε δὲ κρίνε· τὸ τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου ἐχόμενον καὶ ἀθανάτου καὶ ἀληθείας καὶ αὐτὸ τοιοῦτον ὃν καὶ ἐν τοιοῦτῳ γιγνόμενον μᾶλλον εἶναι σοι δοκεῖ, ἢ τὸ μηδέποτε ὁμοίου καὶ θνητοῦ καὶ αὐτὸ τοιοῦτο καὶ ἐν τοιοῦτῳ γιγνόμενον; Πολύ, 16. αὐτὸ Ξγ: αὖ τὸ ΑΠ.

18. αὐτὸ Π: αὖ τὸ Α.

585 C ff. 15 ὧδε δὲ κρίνε κτλ. The following sentences are among the most perplexing in the whole of the Republic, or indeed in the whole of Plato's writings. That the reading of the MSS is corrupt has been admitted by the majority of critics, and will be proved in App. VI, to which I must refer for a full discussion on the text and interpretation of this difficult passage. Here it is possible only to set down what seems to me, after a review of all the conditions of the problem, the least unsatisfactory solution. The emendation in the text, which I printed in my Text of the Republic, has been approved by a critic in Hermathena xxiv p. 252. We have to discover whether food, drink etc. participate in pure Being more than true opinion, knowledge etc.; and the answer is arrived at by the following steps. (1) Which is more—that which is connected with the ever-like, the immortal and Truth, and which is itself of this nature, and found in something of this nature; or that which is connected with the never-like and mortal, and which is itself of this nature (never-like etc.) and found in something of this nature? That which is connected with the ever-like, says Glauco, is more. (2) Then does the Being of the never-like (αἰὲ ἀνομοίου = μηδέποτε ὁμοίου) participate in Being at all more than the Being of Knowledge does? Certainly not (οὐν is strictly illative: if it is true that what is connected with the ever-like is more than what is connected with the never-like, then the Being of the never-like cannot be more than Knowledge is—for Knowledge of course ἔχεται τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου. Knowledge is in short taken as a type of that which ἔχεται τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου). (3) Or has the Being of the never-like more part in Truth than Knowledge has? To this also the answer is no: [for that which is connected with the ever-like—and Knowledge is so—is connected also with Truth: see above τὸ τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου ἐχόμενον—καὶ ἀληθείας]. (4) And if it has less part in truth [as it has], it must also have less part in Being. [This deduces from step (3) the conclusion already implied in (2), and also paves the way for οὐκοῦν ὧς—μετέχει]. (5) Thus—since what is true of Knowledge is true of all the spiritual γένη, [and since food etc. are of course only particular examples of the αἰὲ ἀνομοιον or never-like], universally (ὅλως) those γένη which are concerned with the care of the body have less part in Being and Truth than those which are concerned with the care of the soul. For a further discussion of this passage and other suggested solutions and emendations see App. VI.

τὸ τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου κτλ. The whole of this passage presupposes, as Grimmelt shews (de reip. Pl. comp. et unit. pp. 74 ff.), the metaphysical theory of v—vii. With τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου cf. v 479 A and vi 500 C: with ἀθανάτου vi 485 B (ἐκείνης τῆς οὐσίας τῆς αἰὲ οὐσης): and with καὶ ἀληθείας vi 508 D. The last two words are rejected by Madvig and Baiter on the grounds that (1) we should expect an adjective, (2) καὶ ἀληθείας has no antithesis expressed, whereas αἰὲ ὁμοίου and ἀθανάτου have: (3) the words unduly anticipate τί δ'; ἀληθείας; below. As I understand the passage, the mention of Truth is necessary—see above—just in view of τί δ'; ἀληθείας; and there is little weight in Madvig's first two arguments.

16 καὶ αὐτό κτλ. Is καὶ here and in καὶ αὐτό again below 'and' (Schneider) or 'both'? The first view is perhaps more likely: for it is more in keeping with the somewhat loose structure of the argument throughout this passage, and καὶ in D below (καὶ αὐτό) is most probably 'and.'

16, 18 ἐν τοιοῦτῳ (bis). The soul is of the nature of τὸ αἰὲ ὁμοιον: see vi 490 B, 508 D, and especially Phaed. 79 A ff.: the body on the other hand is never constant, for like everything material πανταταὶ ὑπὸ γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς (vi 485 B).

ἔφη, διαφέρει τὸ τοῦ αἰὲ ὁμοίου. Ἡ οὖν αἰὲ <ἀν>ομοίου οὐσία οὐσίας τι μᾶλλον ἢ <ῆ> ἐπιστήμης μετέχει; Οὐδαμῶς. Τί δ'; 20 ἀληθείας; Οὐδὲ τοῦτο. Εἰ δὲ ἀληθείας ἦττον, οὐ καὶ οὐσίας; D Ἀνάγκη. Οὐκοῦν ὅλως τὰ περὶ τὴν τοῦ σώματος θεραπείαν γένη τῶν γενῶν αὐτῶν περὶ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς θεραπείαν ἦττον ἀληθείας τε καὶ οὐσίας μετέχει; Πολύ γε. Σῶμα δὲ αὐτὸ ψυχῆς οὐκ οἷε οὕτως; Ἐγώ γε. Οὐκοῦν τὸ τῶν μᾶλλον ὄντων πληρούμενον καὶ 25 αὐτὸ μᾶλλον ὄν ὅντως μᾶλλον πληροῦται ἢ τὸ τῶν ἦττον ὄντων καὶ αὐτὸ ἦττον ὄν; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Εἰ ἄρα τὸ πληροῦσθαι τῶν φύσει προσηκόντων ἡδὺ ἐστὶ, τὸ τῷ ὄντι καὶ τῶν ὄντων πληρού- E μενον μᾶλλον μᾶλλον ὄντως τε καὶ ἀληθεστέρως χαίρειν ἂν ποιοῖ ἡδονῇ ἀληθεῖ, τὸ δὲ τῶν ἦττον ὄντων μεταλαμβάνον ἦττόν τε ἂν 30 ἀληθῶς καὶ βεβαίως πληροῖτο καὶ ἀπιστοτέρας ἂν ἡδονῆς καὶ ἦττον ἀληθοῦς μεταλαμβάνοι. Ἀναγκαιότατα, ἔφη. Οἱ ἄρα 586 φρονήσεως καὶ ἀρετῆς ἀπειροὶ, εὐὐχίαις δὲ καὶ τοῖς τοιούτοις αἰὲ ξυνόντες, κάτω, ὡς ἔοικεν, καὶ μέχρι πάλιν πρὸς τὸ μεταξὺ φέρονται τε καὶ ταύτῃ πλανῶνται διὰ βίου, ὑπερβάντες δὲ τοῦτο πρὸς τὸ ἀληθῶς ἄνω οὕτε ἀνέβλεψαν πώποτε οὕτε ἠνέχθησαν, οὐδὲ τοῦ

19. αἰὲ <ἀν>ομοίου nos: αἰὲ ὁμοίου AΠΞ: ἡ δὲ τοῦ μηδέποτε ὁμοίου pro ἡ οὖν αἰὲ ἀνομοίου q. In v et Flor. R legitur ἡ οὖν μὴ αἰὲ ὁμοίου κτλ. 20. <ῆ> nos: om. codd. 24. ψυχῆς II: τῆς ψυχῆς A, sed τῆς puncto notavit A².

19 ἡ οὖν αἰὲ ἀνομοίου κτλ. These words have already been discussed: but it should here be remarked that the insertion of τοῦ before the adjective (Ast, Madvig etc., both here and in μηδέποτε ὁμοίου above) is not necessary. On the connexion between ἐπιστήμη, οὐσία and ἀλήθεια see especially Theaet. 186 C, D.

585 D 24 σῶμα—οὕτως; 'And don't you think the same is true of the body itself as compared with the soul?' For the sense cf. Phaed. 80 B, and with the genitive ψυχῆς 582 C n. On this sentence Bosanquet remarks: "The only way to master this conception in its true light is to consider body and mind not as two things (body and soul) on a level or side by side, but, as daily experience really teaches us, under some such point of view as that of part and whole" (Companion p. 362). This point of view is suggestive, but it is scarcely that of the Republic, in spite of 584 C; and the student will best apprehend Plato's meaning both here and especially in x 608 D ff. if he carry his analysis no further than Plato himself does, and regard soul and body as two distinct and separate entities.

585 E 29 μᾶλλον μᾶλλον. The first μᾶλλον belongs both to τῷ ὄντι (= ὄντως) and to τῶν ὄντων: the second to ὄντως. After the stage of the argument reached in οὐκοῦν—ἦττον ὄν, it would have been enough to write here τὸ τῷ ὄντι πληρούμενον μᾶλλον μᾶλλον ὄντως—ἀληθεῖ, τὸ δὲ ἦττον ὄντως πληρούμενον ἀπιστοτέρας ἂν—μεταλαμβάνοι. Plato characteristically amplifies his conclusion, even at the risk of obscuring the relation between it and the preceding step.

586 A 2 κάτω κτλ. refers to the illustration in 584 D ff. The meaning of μέχρι πάλιν is 'as far as back again' sc. to the intermediate point: cf. μέχρι δεῦρο, μέχρι ἐνταῦθα, and other instances of the same usage in Stephanus-Hase Thest. s.v. μέχρι and Kühner-Blass Gr. Gr. II 1 p. 539 f.

3 πλανῶνται. They are like 'wanderers' who have lost the way: cf. the common use of πλανᾶσθαι in the New Testament; e.g. Pet. II 2. 15.

τὸ ἀληθῶς ἄνω refers to 584 D: but

- 5 ὄντος τῷ ὄντι ἐπληρώθησαν, οὐδὲ βεβαίου τε καὶ καθαρᾶς ἡδονῆς ἐγεύσαντο, ἀλλὰ βοσκημάτων δίκην κάτω αἰεὶ βλέποντες καὶ κεκυφότες εἰς γῆν καὶ εἰς τραπέζας βόσκονται χορταζόμενοι καὶ ὀχεύοντες, καὶ ἔνεκα ἰ τῆς τούτων πλεονεξίας λακτίζοντες καὶ B κυρίττοντες ἀλλήλους σιδηροῖς κέρασί τε καὶ ὀπλαῖς ἀποκτινύασι
- 10 δι' ἀπληστίαν, ἵτε οὐχὶ τοῖς οὖσιν οὐδὲ τὸ ὄν οὐδὲ τὸ στέγον ἑαυτῶν πιμπλάντες. Παντελῶς, ἔφη ὁ Γλαῦκων, τὸν τῶν πολλῶν, ὦ Σώκρατες, χρησμοδεῖς βίον. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐκ ἀνάγκη καὶ ἡδοναῖς ξυνεῖναι μεμιγμέναις λύπαις, εἰδώλοισι τῆς ἀληθοῦς ἡδονῆς καὶ ἐσκιαγραφημέναις, ὑπὸ τῆς παρ' ἀλλήλας θέσεως ἀποχραινομέναις,
- 15 ὥστε σφοδροὺς ἐκατέρας φαίνεσθαι καὶ ἔρωτας ἑαυτῶν λυττῶντας C τοῖς ἄφροσιν ἐντίκτειν καὶ περιμαχίτους εἶναι, ὥσπερ τὸ τῆς Ἑλένης εἶδωλον ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν Τροίᾳ Στησίχορος φησι γενέσθαι the words are intended also to suggest the deeper Platonic use of 'the true Above,' where Truth and Purity dwell: see Phaed. 109 B ff., with VII 514 A n.

6 βοσκημάτων δίκην κτλ. Cf. Tim. 91 E (the heads etc. of brute beasts are εἰς γῆν ἐλκόμενα in sympathy with their earthly souls) and VII 519 A, B n. With κεκυφότες εἰς τραπέζας cf. the description of Syracusan gluttony in the seventh Platonic Epistle 326 B ff. χορταζόμενοι (cf. II 372 D) and ὀχεύοντες are properly used of brute beasts, and therefore suitable after βοσκημάτων δίκην. ἔνεκα τῆς τούτων πλεονεξίας is equivalent to ὥστε τούτων πλέον (sc. than others) ἔχειν.

586 B 9 σιδηροῖς κτλ. The epithet is significant and should be pronounced with emphasis. The horns and hoofs wherewith these human βοσκήματα 'kick and butt' are lethal weapons made of iron. Van Leeuwen's conjecture σκληροῖς for σιδηροῖς (Mnem. N. S. xxv Pt 4) only emasculates a fine comparison. J. and C. aptly cite in illustration Aesch. Ag. 1115 ff. ὀπλαῖς may be said "with a glance at ὅπλοις" (J. and C.). War springs from the insatiate desires of the flesh (II 373 E n.): hence δι' ἀπληστίαν.

10 ἅτε οὐχὶ—πιμπλάντες explains ἀπληστίαν. They cannot be 'filled' because that part of themselves which they fill is not the real, not the continent part, and that wherewith they fill it is not the real either. Bosanquet aptly compares "Whoso drinketh of this water shall thirst again." In οὐδὲ τὸ στέγον Plato doubtless has in mind the story of the Danaids, in which the πῖθος τετρημένος was interpreted by certain 'wise men'—probably preachers of the Orphic-Pythagorean way of life: cf. App. IV—as the bottomless or incontinent part of soul: see Gorg. 493 A ff., especially the words τῶν δ' ἀμνήτων τοῦτο τῆς ψυχῆς, οὐ αἱ ἐπιθυμίαι εἰσὶ, τὸ ἀκόλαστον αὐτοῦ καὶ οὐ στεγανόν, ὡς τετρημένος ἐῖναι πῖθος, διὰ τὴν ἀπληστίαν ἀπεικάσας together with Rohde *Psyche*² I pp. 326—329. Schneider makes a curious error when he says "τὸ στέγον hic corpus quasi vas animi significare videtur."

12 χρησμοδεῖς refers to the half-oracular style of Socrates' description: compare for instance σιδηροῖς κέρασί τε καὶ ὀπλαῖς with the famous ξύλων τεῖχος in the oracle to the Athenians (Hdt. VII 141—144: see also id. I 55 al. for more examples).

14 ἐσκιαγραφημέναις κτλ. See on 583 B. The words ὑπὸ τῆς—ἀποχραινομέναις mean 'taking their colour from juxtaposition.'—The word ἀποχραίνειν had also a more technical sense (τὸ τὰ χρωσθέντα ἐνοποιεῖν Tim. lex. Pl. s.v. χραίνειν), to which Plato alludes in Laws 769 A.

586 C 16 ὥσπερ κτλ. The many σκριαμοχοῦσι (VII 520 C) like the Trojans fighting for Helen's shadow in the fields of Troy.

17 Στησίχορος κτλ. See Phaedr. 243 A and Bergk *Poet. Lyr. Gr.*⁴ III pp. 214 ff. There is no real ground for supposing (with Teichmüller Lit. Fehd. I pp. 113 ff.) that Plato intends an allusion to Isocrates' Helena, in spite of περιμάχτος περιμάχῃτον ἀγνοία τοῦ ἀληθοῦς; Πολλή ἀνάγκη, ἔφη, τοιοῦτόν τι αὐτὸ εἶναι.

XI. Τί δέ; περὶ τὸ θυμοειδὲς οὐχ ἕτερα τοιαῦτα ἀνάγκη 20 γίγνεσθαι, ὅς ἂν αὐτὸ τοῦτο διαπράττηται, ἢ φθόνῳ διὰ φιλοτιμίαν D ἢ βία διὰ φιλονικίαν ἢ θυμῷ διὰ δυσκολίαν, πλησμονὴν τιμῆς τε καὶ νίκης καὶ θυμοῦ διώκων ἄνευ λογισμοῦ τε καὶ νοῦ; Τοιαῦτα, ἢ δ' ὅς, ἀνάγκη καὶ περὶ τοῦτο εἶναι. Τί οὖν; ἦν δ' ἐγὼ· θαρροῦντες λέγωμεν, ὅτι καὶ περὶ τὸ φιλοκερδὲς καὶ τὸ φιλόνικον ὅσαι ἐπιθυμίαι 25 εἰσὶν, αἱ μὲν ἂν τῇ ἐπιστήμῃ καὶ λόγῳ ἐπόμεναι καὶ μετὰ τούτων

21. ἂν A²Π: om. A¹.

διαπράττηται A²Π: διαπράττεται ut videtur A¹.

25. λέγωμεν A¹Π: λέγομεν A².

in Hel. 40 and the reference to Stesichorus ib. 64. Instead of τοῦ ἀληθοῦς Floyer Sydenham conjectured τῆς ἀληθείας (see Cl. Rev. II p. 229). It is more like Plato's suggestiveness to say 'the truth' than 'the true Helen,' which would moreover (as Lupton points out l.c.) rather be τῆς ἀληθείης.

586 C—588 A The pleasures of anger, unless pursued in conformity with reason, are similarly unreal. We may even venture to say that it is only when obedient to knowledge that the desires of the two lower parts of soul can attain those pleasures which are in the highest sense their own and true—so far as it is possible for them to have true pleasures at all. Now the tyrannical desires are farthest from reason, so that the tyrant has least pleasure. By an elaborate calculation it is shewn that the king lives seven-hundred and twenty-nine times more pleasantly than the tyrant; and if the just man so far surpasses the unjust in respect of pleasure, how much greater will be his transcendence in beauty and virtue!

586 C 20 ἕτερα τοιαῦτα κτλ. The satisfaction of τὸ θυμοειδὲς is also no true pleasure, but only λῦτης ἀπαλλαγὴ. See Phil. 47 E. αὐτὸ τοῦτο means τὸ τοῦ θυμοειδὲς. The verb διαπράττηται is used as in IV 440 D οὐ λήγει τῶν γενναίων, πρὶν ἂν ἡ διαπράξηται ἢ κτλ. φιλοτιμίαν, φιλονικίαν καὶ δυσκολίαν ('ill temper' cf. III 411 C) are particular forms of the principle which Plato calls τὸ θυμοειδὲς. Each of them is a κενότης and painful. The κενότης is filled, as the case may be, by τιμῇ, νίκῃ, or θυμῷ (indulgence in anger): hence πλησμονὴν τιμῆς κτλ. On the spelling φιλονικίαν, which the present passage, like others in Plato, clearly points to, see 581 B η.

586 D 23 ἄνευ λογισμοῦ τε καὶ νοῦ is emphatic, and prepares us for θαρροῦντες λέγωμεν κτλ., where Plato concedes after all a certain measure of reality and truth to the pleasures of the two lower parts of soul, provided they act in obedience to reason. That the φιλοκερδὲς should in any degree whatsoever participate in true pleasure, has been judged inconsistent with the previous argument (Krohn Pl. St. pp. 227 ff.), but is not so, if we fully appreciate the restrictions which Plato makes (cf. Grimmelt de reip. comp. et unit. p. 76), and also remember that in the perfect city, which is the counterpart of the perfect soul, the lower orders found their truest pleasure in working for the common welfare under reason as embodied in the Guardians. The gist of the present passage is well expressed by Nettleship, who in his Lectures and Remains II p. 331 remarks "that in the most trivial satisfaction there may be a sense of serving something wider and higher than animal appetite: that this gives to the satisfaction of appetite a permanence and a satisfactoriness which by itself it cannot have." Appetite, in short, behaves like a loyal citizen of the πολιτεία ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ. Cf. IV 443 D, E.

26 αἱ μὲν κτλ. The antithesis is supplied in a different form by ὅταν δὲ κτλ. 587 A. Instead of ἐπομένων in line 29 Stephanus read ἐπόμεναι, without MS authority: but cf. (with Schneider) ὡς ἀμεινον δὲ παντὶ ὑπὸ θεοῦ καὶ φρονίμου ἀρχεσθαι, μάλιστα μὲν οἰκεῖον ἔχοντος ἐν αὐτῷ κτλ. 590 D. See note ad loc.

τὰς ἡδονὰς διώκονται, ὥς ἂν τὸ φρόνιμον ἐξηγήται, λαμβάνωσι, τὰς ἀληθεστάτας τε λήψονται, ὥς οἶόν τε αὐταῖς ἀληθεῖς λαβεῖν, ἅτε ἀληθεῖα ἐπομένων, καὶ τὰς ἑαυτῶν οἰκείας, ἑῖπερ τὸ βέλτιστον Ε
30 ἐκάστω, τοῦτο καὶ οἰκειότατον; Ἀλλὰ μὲν, ἔφη, οἰκειότατόν γε. Τῷ φιλοσόφῳ ἄρα ἐπομένης ἀπάσης τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ μὴ στασιαζούσης ἐκάστω τῷ μέρει ὑπάρχει εἰς τε τᾶλλα τὰ ἑαυτοῦ πράττειν καὶ δικαίῳ εἶναι, καὶ δὴ καὶ τὰς ἡδονὰς τὰς ἑαυτοῦ ἕκαστον καὶ τὰς βελτίστας καὶ εἰς τὸ δυνατόν | τὰς ἀληθεστάτας καρποῦσθαι. 587 Κομιδῇ μὲν οὖν. Ὅταν δὲ ἄρα τῶν ἐτέρων τι κρατήσῃ, ὑπάρχει αὐτῷ μήτε τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἡδονὴν ἐξευρίσκειν τά τε ἄλλ' ἀναγκάζειν ἄλλοτρίαν καὶ μὴ ἀληθῆ ἡδονὴν διώκειν. Οὕτως, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν ἂ
5 πλεῖστον φιλοσοφίας τε καὶ λόγου ἀφέστηκεν, μάλιστ' ἂν τοιαῦτα ἐξεργάζεται; Πολύ γε. Πλεῖστον δὲ λόγου ἀφίσταται οὐχ ὅπερ νόμον τε καὶ τάξεως; Δῆλον δὴ. Ἐφάνησαν δὲ πλεῖστον ἄφεσ- Β τῶσαι οὐχ αἱ ἐρωτικάι τε καὶ τυραννικαὶ ἐπιθυμίαι; Πολύ γε. Ἐλάχιστον δὲ αἱ βασιλικαὶ τε καὶ κόσμιοι; Naί. Πλεῖστον δὴ, 10 οἶμαι, ἀληθοῦς ἡδονῆς καὶ οἰκείας ὁ τύραννος ἀφεστήξει, ὁ δὲ ὀλίγιστον. Ἀνάγκη. Καὶ ἀηδέστατα ἄρα, εἶπον, ὁ τύραννος βιώσεται, ὁ δὲ βασιλεὺς ἡδιστα. Πολλὴ ἀνάγκη. Οἶσθ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅσῳ ἀηδέστερον ζῇ τύραννος βασιλέως; Ἄν εἴπῃς, ἔφη.

27. ἐξηγήται A²II: ἐξηγεῖται A¹.

λαμβάνωσι A¹II: λαμβάνουσι A².

586 E 29 τὸ βέλτιστον—οἰκειότατον. Cf. Arist. Eth. Nic. x chapter 7 ad finem δόξειε δ' ἂν καὶ εἶναι ἕκαστος τοῦτο (sc. τὸ κράτιστον τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ), εἴπερ τὸ κύριον καὶ ἀμεινον κτλ. The whole of the latter portion of that famous chapter, in which Aristotle comes nearer to the spirit of Plato than anywhere else throughout his writings, might be summed up in the pregnant saying τὸ βέλτιστον ἐκάστω, τοῦτο καὶ οἰκειότατον—a saying which reaches to the very foundations of Plato's philosophy: for if that which is best for each thing, is also most its own—most truly akin to it, part of its very being,—it follows that each thing truly is just in proportion as it is good. In other words the cause of all existence is the Good; see on VI 505 D, 509 B.

31 τῷ φιλοσόφῳ κτλ. τῷ φιλοσόφῳ is of course neuter, and not masculine. With μὴ στασιαζούσης κτλ. cf. IV 441 D—444 A. Soul attains its true unity (so far as is possible in this life: see on X 611 B) when the two lower 'parts' obey the highest; only then does a man become εἰς ἐκ πολλῶν (IV 443 E n.). δικαίῳ εἶναι: i.e. according to the definition of Justice in Book IV l.c.

587 A 3 μήτε—ἀναγκάζειν κτλ.: as in the eloquent picture of the λογιστικόν and the θυμοειδές, seeking for pleasures to lay at the feet of the φιλοχρήματον VIII 553 C, D. Cf. also infra 590 B. For μήτε—τε see IV 420 B n.

587 B 10 ὁ δέ: viz. ὁ βασιλεὺς. It is unnecessary to insert βασιλεὺς in the text, as Baiter wishes to do: cf. I 349 D n.

13 ὅσῳ ἀηδέστερον κτλ. Plato loved to play with mathematics, and in the following passage he endeavours to give an arithmetical expression to the pleasures of justice and injustice. His motive in introducing this "hedonistic calculus," as Bosanquet calls it, has been much discussed. The following considerations deserve attention. (1) On artistic grounds, now that the argument has been concluded, it is not inappropriate that Justice and Injustice, represented by the Τριῶν ἡδονῶν, ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐσῶν, μιᾶς μὲν γνησίας, δυοῖν δὲ νόθαιν, C τῶν νόθων εἰς τὸ ἐπέκεινα ὑπερβᾶς ὁ τύραννος, φυγῶν νόμον τε 15 καὶ λόγον, δούλαις τισὶ δορυφόροις ἡδοναῖς ξυνοικεῖ, καὶ ὅποσῳ ἐλαττοῦται οὐδὲ πᾶν ῥάδιον εἰπεῖν, πλὴν ἴσως ὧδε. Πῶς; ἔφη.

 Ἀπὸ τοῦ ὀλιγαρχικοῦ τρίτος που ὁ τύραννος ἀφειστήκει· ἐν μέσῳ γὰρ αὐτῶν ὁ δημοτικὸς ἦν. Ναί. Οὐκοῦν καὶ ἡδονῆς τρίτῳ εἰδῶλι πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀπ' ἐκείνου ξυνοικοῖ ἄν. εἰ τὰ πρόσθεν ἀληθῆ; 20 D Οὕτω. Ὁ δέ γε ὀλιγαρχικὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ βασιλικοῦ αὐτὸς τρίτος, ἐὰν εἰς ταῦτόν ἀριστοκρατικὸν καὶ βασιλικὸν τιθώμεν. Τρίτος γάρ.

14. νόθαιν Π: νόθων Α¹: νόθοι Α². corr. Α².

19. δημοτικὸς Α¹Π: δημοκρατικός

King and the Tyrant, should as it were be weighed in the balance. The importance of ἀριθμεῖν, μετρεῖν, ἰστάναι is constantly present to Plato's mind. See on x 602 D. (2) The Pythagoreans were in the habit of expressing virtues and other immaterial ideas in terms of numbers (see Zeller⁹ I pp. 389 ff.), and there is reason to suppose that the number 729 played a part in a Pythagorean calendar (588 A n.). Some of the terms employed by Plato, such as τρίτη αὔξη, are also in all probability of Pythagorean origin. See App. I to Book VIII pp. 279 ff. (3) The arithmetical method of calculation enables Plato to set forth in a very striking and dramatic way his own dissent from the popular estimate of the tyrant's happiness (Schneider). (4) When all is said we must allow that some of the steps are arbitrary, and that Plato's main object is to reach the significant number 729, so as to indicate that the king has more pleasure than the tyrant every day and every night of his life. There is of course an element of playfulness in the episode, and we need not suppose that Plato set any particular store by his calculations: but neither ought we on the other hand to dismiss the whole reckoning as a meaningless and foolish jest. See also on VIII 545 C.

14 τριῶν ἡδονῶν κτλ. The three pleasures are those of the king, the timocrat, and the oligarch. The first variety is genuine, the second and third spurious: but the tyrant has 'crossed the line into the region beyond the spurious,' i.e. his pleasures represent a still lower depth (see 571 B ff.), being in fact only εἰδῶλα twice removed of the oligarch's spurious pleasures (587 C). Schleiermacher made τῶν νόθων depend participatively on τὸ ἐπέκεινα ("so ist der Tyrann auf die jenseitige der unächten hinübergestiegen"). This view is linguistically defensible (c. Phaed. 112 B), and even attractive at first sight; but τῶν νόθων must be interpreted by δυοῖν νόθων, and δυοῖν νόθων certainly does not include the tyrant's species of pleasure. The feminine dual ending -ων (instead of the commoner -ων) is "magis elatioris quam vulgaris sermonis" (Roepel de dual. us. Pl. p. 6). Cf. IV 422 E n.

587 C 16 δορυφόροις ἡδοναῖς. These are described in 573 D ff.

17 οὐδὲ should not be taken with εἰπεῖν. The hyperbaton is too difficult, and the meaning ("not even to express it" J. and C.) weak. We should translate 'and it isn't very easy, either, to say' etc., taking οὐδὲ as 'also not,' a usage illustrated by Riddell Digest § 141. See on οὐδὲ θαμίζεις κτλ. I 328 C.

18 ὁ τύραννος. We might expect ὁ τυραννικός, but throughout the whole of this comparison Plato is content to take the tyrant—who is, we remember, τυραννικώτατος 575 D—as the type of the tyrannical, and the king as the type of the kingly or aristocratic man. See above on 587 B and also below 587 E n.

19 οὐκοῦν καὶ ἡδονῆς κτλ. If the tyrant is third from the oligarch, his pleasure will also be, in respect of truth, third from the oligarch's, i.e. will be an image of an image (τρίτῳ εἰδῶλι cf. x 597 E and. 599 A, D) of the oligarch's pleasure.

587 D 21 ἐὰν εἰς ταῦτόν κτλ. See on IV 445 D.

Τριπλασίον ἄρα, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τριπλάσιον ἀριθμῷ ἀληθοῦς ἡδονῆς ἀφέστηκεν τύραννος. Φαίνεται. Ἐπίπεδον ἄρ', ἔφην, ὡς ἔοικεν, 25 τὸ εἶδωλον κατὰ τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸν ἡδονῆς τυραννικῆς ἂν εἴη. Κομιδῇ γε. Κατὰ δὲ δύναμιν καὶ τρίτην αὐξήν δῆλον δὴ ἀπόστασιν

23 τριπλασίον ἄρα κτλ. The distance of the tyrant from true pleasure is measured first ἀριθμῷ, i.e. "numero seu secundum longitudinem, numerus enim omnis quatenus monadibus constat, lineae instar habendus" (Schneider III p. LXXXXV. See also for ἀριθμῷ VII 526 C n. and cf. the expression γραμμικὸς ἀριθμὸς in vites us to raise to the second power not 3, but 9—the number which we are presently expected to raise to the third power. The inferential ἄρα seems to me in favour of the Scholiast's view, as well as κατὰ τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸν (cf. κατὰ τὸ μήκος in Theo p. 31 al.), an expression which corresponds to ἀριθμῷ in the pre-

Nicom. Introd. Ar. p. 117 Ast. Relatively to themselves, we reckoned the oligarch, democrat, and tyrant, as 1, 2, 3; but we have since found that the distance of the oligarch from true pleasure is in reality 3 times 1: hence that of the tyrant must be 3 times 3, as in the line AB. We should doubtless regard the intervening numbers (4, 5, and 7, 8) as indicating different stages in the gradual degeneration of the oligarch into the democrat (559 D ff.) and the democrat into the tyrant or tyrannical man (572 D ff.). It might seem more natural to make the distance of the tyrant from true pleasure 5 and not 9 (King 1, Timocrat 2, Oligarch 3, Democrat 4, Tyrant 5); but (as Schneider reminds us) the pleasures of the Democrat and Tyrant lie beyond the two spurious pleasures, so that the modulus of progression may reasonably be increased. Plato's chief object is however to reach the number 729, and he could not do so except by making a fresh departure with the oligarch.

24 ἐπίπεδον ἄρα κτλ. The number 9 is ἐπίπεδον, because $= 3 \times 3$: εἰσι δὲ τῶν ἀριθμῶν οἱ μὲν ἐπίπεδοι, ὅσοι ὑπὸ δύο ἀριθμῶν πολλαπλασιάζονται, ὅσον μήκους καὶ πλάτους· τούτων δὲ οἱ μὲν τρίγωνοι, οἱ δὲ τετράγωνοι κτλ. (Theo. Smyrn. p. 31 Hiller. Cf. Gow Gk Math. p. 69 and Müller in Hermes 1870 p. 394 n. 1). This explanation, which so far agrees with that of the Scholiast, is adopted by the English translators and editors; but Schneider (l.c. and on p. 313 of his translation) holds that ἐπίπεδον κτλ. in-vious sentence while at the same time preparing us for κατὰ δὲ δύναμιν καὶ τρίτην αὐξήν in the next. The whole sentence is, I believe, only a way of saying that, if the tyrant is 3×3 degrees distant from true pleasure, his εἶδωλον of pleasure may be represented by 9. The use of the mathematical term ἐπίπεδον has a playful effect, both in itself and also because it sounds wilful and eccentric to express a number of one 'increase' (τὸν τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸν) in terms of two. δύναμις = δευτέρα αὐξή: cf. Tim. 54 B and Cantor Gesch. d. Mathem. p. 178. The first increase (viz. of the unit or point) was ὁ τοῦ μήκους ἀριθμὸς, i.e. in this case ($1 \times 9 = 9$) 9: by the second-and-third increases (on the same scale) we obtain 9×9 (second increase or δύναμις) $\times 9$ (third increase or τρίτη αὐξή) = 729. See App. I to Book VIII p. 279. Schneider's erroneous idea that the squaring of 9 has already been alluded to in ἐπίπεδον—εἴη leads him to take δύναμις as merely 'power' and τρίτην αὐξήν as "per exegesis ad δύναμιν additum." What motive induced Plato to cube the distance? Was it something purely fanciful, e.g. "in order to gauge the depth of the tyrant's misery" (J. and C.), or because the king and the tyrant are themselves solid creatures (cf. Arist. Quint. de Mus. III p. 89. 35 Jahn)? I think not. He probably intended to suggest that "the degradation proceeds by increasingly wide intervals" (Bosanquet), but the actual calculations are inspired by a desire to reach the total 729. See on 588 A.

ὄσσην ἀφεστηκὼς γίγνεται. Δῆλον, ἔφη, τῷ γε λογιστικῷ. Οὐκοῦν Ε εἰάν τις μεταστρέψας ἀληθείαν ἡδονῆς τὸν βασιλέα τοῦ τυράννου ἀφεστηκότα λέγῃ ὅσον ἀφέστηκεν, ἐννεακαικεκοσικαιεπτακοσιο-πλασιῶν ἡδίων αὐτὸν ζῶντα εὐρήσει τελειωθείσῃ τῇ πολλαπλα- 30 σιώσει, τὸν δὲ τυράννον ἀνιαιρότερον τῇ αὐτῇ ταύτῃ ἀποστᾶσει.
 Ἀμύχανον, ἔφη, λογισμὸν καταπεφύρηκας τῆς διαφορότητος τοῖν
 588 ἀνδρῶν, τοῦ τε δικαίου καὶ | τοῦ ἀδίκου, πρὸς ἡδονὴν τε καὶ λύπην.
 Καὶ μέντοι καὶ ἀληθὴ καὶ προσήκοντά γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, βίοις ἀριθμὸν, εἴπερ αὐτοῖς προσήκουσιν ἡμέραι καὶ νύκτες καὶ μῆνες καὶ ἐνιαυτοί.
 Ἀλλὰ μὴν, ἔφη, προσήκουσιν. Οὐκοῦν εἰ τοσοῦτον ἡδονῇ νικᾷ ὁ ἀγαθὸς τε καὶ δίκαιος τὸν κακὸν τε καὶ ἄδικον, ἀμυχάνῳ δὲ 5 28 / μεταστρέψας: 'conversely' ("umgekehrt" Schneider).

587 Ε 32 ἀμύχανον κτλ. I do not think there can be any doubt that Schneider is right in retaining καταπεφύρηκας, which is found in all the best and also in a majority of the inferior MSS. The word has reference to the gigantic and tempestuous numeral ἐννεακαικεκοσικαιεπτακοσιοπλασιῶν, which Socrates has by a mighty effort of expiration—γῆγενεί φνῆματι—hurled down upon his hearers' heads. Cf. generally Theaet. 180 A and Ar. Frogs 822—825. καταφορεῖν "con-tentationem vocis ad praelongum vocabulum numeri a Socrate prolati adhibendam significare potest; nec multum ab hoc abludat illa καταφορά, quam oratoribus esse inter accusandum longiore spiritus productionem ex Hermogene refert vetus lexicon apud Stephanum Thes. T. 1111
 p. 109 c" (Schneider). See Stephanus-Hase Thes. s.v., and also on καταφορικὸς, where the words ἀδιόριστον τέθεικε τὸν ἀντιλέγοντα, ἵνα μετὰ ἀδικίας καταφορικῶ χρώμενος λόγῳ σφόδρα πλήξῃ τοὺς ἀκούοντας are quoted from Chrysost. x
 p. 386 c. The reading καταπεφύρακας is much less dramatic and appropriate, and has very little MS authority (Σ², v and two other MSS, in one of which it is only a correction).

33 τοῦ τε δικαίου—ἀδίκου. These words might have been dispensed with,
 and accordingly Herwerden brackets them. But the point at issue, as originally raised in Book II, was the relation between Justice and Injustice, not the relation between the King and the Tyrant: and before giving his final answer, Plato does well to remind us that the King and the Tyrant are only types of Justice and Injustice. Cf. ὁ ἀγαθός—ἄδικον just below.

588 A 2 προσήκοντά γε κτλ. 729 is twice $364\frac{1}{2}$, and Philolaus counted $364\frac{1}{2}$ days, and presumably therefore $364\frac{1}{2}$ nights in the year (Censor, de die nat. 19).
 This explains ἡμέραι καὶ νύκτες. It is not so obvious in what way the number 729 is related to months. On this subject J. and C. remark "12 months in a year:
 $30 + \frac{1}{3}$ days in a month: $12 \times (30 + \frac{1}{3}) =$ $364 : 2 \times 364\frac{1}{2} = 729$." I can see no point in such a calculation. Sussemlahl on the other hand reminds us that Philolaus believed in a so-called great year of 729 months, and as Plato is following Philolaus in ἡμέραι καὶ νύκτες, we may reasonably suppose that he does so in the rest of the passage, so that καὶ μῆνες will be a reference to Philolaus' great year. See Sus. Gen. Entw. II p. 244 n.
 3, and on the subject of Philolaus' year of 729 months Zeller⁵ I p. 428 n. 3. I have as yet found no evidence for supposing that Philolaus went a step farther and postulated a yet greater year of 729 ordinary years, but the words καὶ ἐνιαυτοί in Plato make it probable that he did so.
 On this supposition the full explanation of προσήκοντα—ἐνιαυτοί will be 729 days and nights = 1 year.

729 months = 1 great year.

729 years = 1 greatest year.

The general upshot is that the king is happier than the tyrant every day and every night of his life, rather than (as Bosanquet suggests) that "one day of the good life is worth a year of the bad";
 "a day in thy courts is better than a thousand."

ὅσω πλέον νικήσει εὐσχημοσύνη τε βίου καὶ κάλλει καὶ ἀρετῇ;
'Αμηνάω μέντοι νῆ Δία, ἔφη.

XII. Εἶεν δὴ, εἶπον· ἐπειδὴ ἐνταῦθα λόγου¹ γεγόναμεν, ἀνα- B λάβωμεν τὰ πρῶτα λεχθέντα, δι' ἃ δεῦρ' ἤκομεν. ἦν δέ που 10 λεγόμενον λυσιτελεῖν ἀδικεῖν τῷ τελέως μὲν ἀδίκῳ, δοξαζομένῳ δὲ δίκαιῳ. ἢ οὐχ οὕτως ἐλέχθη; Οὕτω μὲν οὖν. Νῦν δὴ, ἔφη, αὐτὰ διαλεγώμεθα, ἐπειδὴ διωμολογησάμεθα τό τε ἀδικεῖν καὶ τὸ δίκαια πράττειν ἦν ἐκάτερον ἔχει δύναμιν. Πῶς; ἔφη. Εἰκόνα πλάσαντες τῆς ψυχῆς λόγῳ, ἵνα εἰδῇ ὁ ἐκεῖνα λέγων, οἷα ἔλεγεν.

6. πλέον nos (cf. Meisterhans³ p. 152): πλείονι A¹: πλέονι q: πλείον A²ΠΞ.
12. τό τε A²Π: τε A¹.

6. πλέον. See cr. n. πλέον and not πλείον is the classical form, though both πλείονι and πλείονι were admissible (Meisterhans³ p. 152). The diphthong ει (in A² Π etc.) may therefore be held to favour the reading πλείονι, which I formerly adopted; but the dative is undeniably awkward, and it is better to acquiesce in πλείον: cf. τοσοῦτον ἡδονὴν νικᾷ above.

588 A—589 B We are now in a position to refute the thesis that Injustice combined with a reputation for Justice is profitable for him who is unjust. The soul may be likened to a composite creature—part bestial, part leonine, part human,—wearing the outward semblance of humanity. He who maintains that Injustice profits a man, holds that it is profitable to starve the human element and make strong the rest, and encourage strife and sedition within the soul. The advocate of Justice on the other hand asserts that the human element should have the mastery and bring the others into harmony with one another and itself.

588 B 9 ἦν δέ που λεγόμενον. The reference is to II 361 A ff. For αὐτῷ C. Schmidt conjectured αὐ οὕτω, which I too hastily adopted in my edition of the text. Glauco and Adimantus are careful in Book II to disclaim the views which they expound; and after ἦν δέ που λεγόμενον it is easy to refer αὐτῷ to the hypothetical person (not necessarily Thrasy-machus in particular: see II 358 C and 367 A) for whom they speak: cf. ὁ ἐκεῖνα λέγων presently and ὁ περὶ τοῦ τοιούτου λόγου λέγων (II 360 D), as well as φῆσει λογιζόμενος (ib. 366 A). See also on 590 A.

13 εἰκόνα πλάσαντες κτλ. Cf. Τιμ. 69 D—70 E and the picture of the soul in Phaedr. 246 A, 253 D ff. We are told by Clement (Strom. II 20. 1058 C Migne) that Basilides compared man to a wooden horse, peopled by a host of different spirits. The underlying idea of Plato's similitude is that man is a compound of the mortal and the immortal, standing midway between corruptibility and incorruptibility: θνητῆς καὶ ἀθανάτου φύσεως μεθόριον (Philo de mund. opif. 46). In the noble lines of George Herbert:

"To this life things of sense
Make their pretence:
In th' other Angels have a right by birth:
Man ties them both alone,
And makes them one,
With th' one hand touching heav'n, with
th' other earth.
In soul he mounts and flies,
In flesh he dies.
He wears a stuffe whose thread is coarse and round,

But trimm'd with curious lace,
And should take place
After the trimming, not the stuff: and ground."

Nettleship (Lect. and Rem. II p. 333) justly observes "that it was no mere figure of speech with Plato to represent these psychical tendencies in man as animals, for he clearly believed that there was continuity between the different forms in which life appears; that somehow or other souls rose and fell in the scale of being according as they behaved in each form in which they were embodied; and that there was a real identity between certain elements in man's soul and certain elements in other organic creatures." See X 618 B ff., Phaed. 81 E ff.

C Ποίαν τινά; ἢ δ' ὅς. Τῶν τοιούτων τινά, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οἶαι μυθο- 15 λογοῦνται παλαιαὶ γενέσθαι φύσεις, ἢ τε Χιμαίρας καὶ ἡ Σκύλλη· καὶ Κερβέρου, καὶ ἄλλαι τινὲς συχναὶ λέγονται ξυμπεφυκυῖαι ιδέαι πολλαὶ εἰς ἓν γενέσθαι. Λέγονται γάρ, ἔφη. Πλάττε τοῖνυν μίαν μὲν ιδέαν θηρίου ποικίλου καὶ πολυκεφάλου, ἡμέρων δὲ θηρίων ἔχοντος κεφαλὰς κύκλῳ καὶ ἀγρίων καὶ δυνατοῦ μετα- 20 βάλλειν καὶ φύειν ἐξ αὐτοῦ πάντα ταῦτα. Δεινοῦ πλάστου, ἔφη, D τὸ ἔργον· ὅμως δέ, ἐπειδὴ εὐπλαστότερον κηροῦ καὶ τῶν τοιούτων λόγος, πεπλάσθω. Μίαν δὴ τοῖνυν ἄλλην ιδέαν λέοντος, μίαν δὲ ἀνθρώπου· πολὺ δὲ μέγιστον ἔστω τὸ πρῶτον καὶ δεύτερον τὸ δεύτερον. Ταῦτα, ἔφη, ῥάω· καὶ πέπλασται. Σύναπτε τοῖνυν 25 αὐτὰ εἰς ἓν τρία ὄντα, ὥστε πῃ ξυμπεφυκέναι ἀλλήλοισι. Συνήπται.
 ἔφη. Περίπλασον δὴ αὐτοῖς ἔξωθεν ἑνὸς εἰκόνα, τὴν τοῦ ἀνθρώ-E που, ὥστε τῷ μὴ δυναμένῳ τὰ ἐντὸς ὁρᾶν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἔξω μόνον ἔλντρον ὁρῶντι ἐν ζῶνι φαίνεσθαι, ἄνθρωπον. Περιπέπλασται, ἔφη. Λέγωμεν δὴ τῷ λέγοντι, ὥς λυσιτελεῖ τούτῳ ἀδικεῖν τῷ 30 ἀνθρώπῳ, δίκαια δὲ πρᾶττειν οὐ ξυμφέρει, ὅτι οὐδὲν ἄλλο φησὶν ἢ λυσιτελεῖν αὐτῷ τὸ παντοδαπὸν θηρίον εὐωχοῦντι ποιεῖν ἰσχυρὸν καὶ τὸν λέοντα καὶ τὰ περὶ τὸν λέοντα, τὸν δὲ ἄνθρωπον λιμο-589 κτονεῖν¹ καὶ ποιεῖν ἀσθενῆ, ὥστε ἔλκεσθαι ὅπῃ ἂν ἐκείνων ὁπότερον ἄγῃ, καὶ μηδὲν ἕτερον ἐτέρῳ ξυνεθίζειν μηδὲ φίλον ποιεῖν, ἀλλ' εἶναι αὐτὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς δάκνεσθαι τε καὶ μαχόμενα ἐσθίειν ἀλλήλα.
 Παντάπασι γάρ, ἔφη, ταῦτ' ἂν λέγοι ὁ τὸ ἀδικεῖν ἐπαινῶν. Οὐκοῦν

I. ἐκείνων A²II: ἐκείνω A¹.

588 C 16 Χιμαίρας κτλ. The Scholiast thus explains: ἡ Χιμαῖρα τὸ εἶδος ἐστὶ 'πρόσθε λέων, ὀπίθεν δὲ δράκων, μέσση δὲ Χιμαῖρα'—Σκύλλα δὲ—πρόσωπον ἔχουσα καὶ στέρνα γυναικός, ἐκ λαγῶνων δὲ κυνῶν κεφαλὰς ἐξ καὶ πέντε δώδεκα—εἶχε δὲ οὗτος (Κέρβερος) τρεῖς μὲν κυνῶν κεφαλὰς, οὐρανὸν δὲ δράκοντος, κατὰ νώτου δὲ παντοίων δφρων εἶχε κεφαλὰς.

17 καὶ ἄλλαι τινὲς κτλ.: e.g. Hippocentaurs, Gorgons, Pegasus (Phaedr. 229 D). The relatival is succeeded by an independent sentence, as often (II 357 B n.).

19 θηρίον—πολυκεφάλου. Cf. Phaedr. 230 A θηρίον—Τυφῶνος πολυπλοκώτερον καὶ μᾶλλον ἐπιτεθυμένον, Tim. 70 E (the ἐπιθυμητικόν as a θρέμμα ἄγριον) and Arist. Pol. I 16. 1287^a 30 ἢ τε γὰρ ἐπιθυμία τοιοῦτον (viz. θηρίον). For the epithet ποικίλου see VIII 557 C, 561 E and πολυειδίαν in 580 D.

ἡμέρων δέ. Madvig would write ἡμέρων τε: but ἡμέρων—ἀγρίων is loosely treated as a new point in the description, although it only elaborates and explains πολυκεφάλου, and δέ does not balance the preceding μέν. So also J. and C.

588 D 24 μέγιστον—τὸ πρῶτον. The ἐπιθυμητικόν is the largest part of soul: see IV 442 A and II 379 C n.

25 σύναπτε τοῖνυν κτλ. Krohn finds fault with Plato for failing to preserve the essential unity of the individual throughout this comparison (Pl. St. p. 229). But, according to Plato, the true unity of the individual is realised only through the subjection of the two lower 'parts' of soul to the highest (586 E n.); and this subjection is described in 589 A, B.

5 αὐὸ τὰ δίκαια λέγων λυσιτελεῖν φαίη ἂν δεῖν ταῦτα πράττειν καὶ ταῦτα λέγειν, ὅθεν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὁ ἐντὸς ἄνθρωπος ἔσται ἐγκρατέ-στατος καὶ τοῦ πολυκεφάλου θρέμματος ἐπιμελήσεται, ὥσπερ Β γεωργὸς τὰ μὲν ἥμερα τρέφων καὶ τιθασεύων, τὰ δὲ ἄγρια ἀποκωλύων φύεσθαι, ξύμμαχον ποιησάμενος τὴν τοῦ λέοντος φύσιν, 10 καὶ κοινῇ πάντων κηδόμενος, φίλα ποιησάμενος ἁλλήλοισι τε καὶ αὐτῷ, οὕτω θρέψει; Κομιδῇ γὰρ αὐὸ λέγει ταῦτα ὁ τὸ δίκαιον ἐπαινῶν. Κατὰ πάντα τρόπον δὲ ὁ μὲν τὰ δίκαια ἐγκωμιάζων ἀληθῆ ἂν λέγοι, ὁ δὲ τὰ ἄδικα ψεύδοιτο. πρὸς τε γὰρ ἡδονὴν Γ καὶ πρὸς εὐδοξίαν καὶ ὠφελίαν σκοπουμένην ὁ μὲν ἐπαινέτης τοῦ 15 δικαίου ἀληθεύει, ὁ δὲ ψέκτης οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς οὐδ' εἰδὼς ψέγει ὅ τι ψέγει. Οὐ μοι δοκεῖ, ἢ δ' ὅς, οὐδαμῇ γε. Πείθωμεν τοίνυν αὐτὸν πρίως, οὐ γὰρ ἐκὼν ἁμαρτάνει, ἐρωτῶντες· ὦ μακίριε, οὐ καὶ τὰ καλὰ καὶ αἰσχροὶ νόμιμα διὰ τὰ τοιαῦτ' ἂν φαῖμεν γεγονέναι; τὰ μὲν καλὰ ὁ τὰ ὑπὸ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, μᾶλλον δὲ ἴσως τὰ ὑπὸ τῷ θεῷ Δ

13. ἀληθῆ ἂν II: ἀλήθειαν A.

589 A 6 τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. "The genitive," say the Oxford editors, "may be governed by ἐγκρατέστατος or may be taken partitively with ὁ ἐντὸς ἄνθρωπος." The former is the correct view. Stephanus suggested ἐγκρατέστερος; but "quum tria sint quae de imperio contendunt, superlativus recte habet" (Schneider). ὁ ἐντὸς ἄνθρωπος has been compared with Paul's ὁ ἔσω ἄνθρωπος in Rom. 7. 22: cf. also Eph. 3. 16.

589 B 7 ἐπιμελήσεται. The subject is of course still ὁ ἐντὸς ἄνθρωπος, and therefore no comma should be placed after ἐγκρατέστατος. Jowett's translation "He should watch over" etc. is very misleading.

ὥσπερ γεωργός clearly belongs to the following clause, not, as supposed by Stallbaum and the other editors except Schneider, to that which goes before. Cf. IV 419 A n. For the illustration cf. Euthyphr. 2 D.

9 ξύμμαχον κτλ. The θυμοειδὲς is the natural ally of the λογιστικόν: see IV 440 E ff.

589 B—591 A The panegyrist of Justice is thus victorious on every count. His opponent will surrender when he understands that Virtue subjects the bestial to the human, nay rather to the element of God within us, while of Vice the opposite is true. Shall it profit a man to take gold unjustly and make his soul a slave? We may also define intemperance, self-will, discontent, cowardice, servility and meanness, and the vulgarity which we associate with mechanical pursuits, in terms of our comparison. The better must rule the worse—such is our principle, and it is in harmony with the aims both of law and of the government of children.

589 C 15 οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς. We ought not to supply λέγει: for οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς ψέγει is itself idiomatic for οὐδὲν ὑγιὲς ψέγων λέγει (Schneider).

17 οὐ γὰρ ἐκὼν ἁμαρτάνει: according to the usual Socratic view: see II 382 A n.

589 D 19 μᾶλλον δὲ—θεῷ. "Both Plato and Aristotle thought that there was in human nature a certain imperfect presence of God, and that it was this divine presence, however small, which made it specifically human nature" (Nettleship Lect. and Remains II p 334). Cf. VI 501 B n. with Tim. 90 A ff. (man is a φυτὸν οὐκ ἐγγεῖον, ἀλλ' οὐράνιον) and Arist. Eth. Nic. x 7. 1177^b 30 ff. The doctrine of a θεῖον τι ἐν ἡμῖν was by no means new to Greek philosophical and religious thought (see Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 121, 184 ff., 207 ff.), but Plato gave it a far deeper meaning than it ever had before.

τὰ θηριώδη ποιοῦντα τῆς φύσεως, αἰσχροὶ δὲ τὰ ὑπὸ τῷ ἀγρίῳ 20
 τὸ ἡμερον δουλούμενα; ξυμφήσει ἢ πῶς; Ἐάν μοι, ἔφη, πείθεται.
 Ἔστιν οὖν, εἶπον, ὅτῳ λυσιτελεῖ ἐκ τούτου τοῦ λόγου χρυσίον λαμβάνειν ἀδίκως, εἴπερ τοιόνδε τι γίγνεται, λαμβάνων τὸ χρυσίον ἅμα καταδουλοῦται τὸ βέλτιστον ἑαυτοῦ τῷ μοχθηροτάτῳ; ἢ εἰ E μὲν ἰ λαβὼν χρυσίον ἰὸν ἢ θυγατέρα ἐδουλοῦτο, καὶ ταῦτ' εἰς 25 ἀγρίων τε καὶ κακῶν ἀνδρῶν, οὐκ ἂν αὐτῷ ἐλυσιτελεῖ οὐδ' ἂν πᾶμπολυ ἐπὶ τούτῳ λαμβάνειν, εἰ δὲ τὸ ἑαυτοῦ θεϊότατον ὑπὸ τῷ ἀθεωτάτῳ τε καὶ μιαιωτάτῳ δουλοῦται καὶ μηδὲν ἐλεεῖ, οὐκ ἄρα 90 ἄθλιός ἐστι καὶ ἰ πολλὴ ἐπὶ δεινότηρῳ ὀλέθρῳ χρυσὸν δωροδοκεῖ ἢ Ἐριφύλῃ ἐπὶ τῇ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ψυχῇ τὸν ὅρμον δεξαμένη; Πολὺ μέντοι, ἢ δ' ὅς ὁ Γλαύκων· ἐγὼ γάρ σοι ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου ἀποκρι-νοῦμαι.

XIII. Οὐκοῦν καὶ τὸ ἀκολασταίνειν οἷε δια ταῦτα πάλαι 5 ψέγεσθαι, ὅτι ἀνιέται ἐν τῷ τοιούτῳ τὸ δεινόν, τὸ μέγα ἐκείνο καὶ πολυειδὲς θρέμμα πέρα τοῦ δέοντος; Δῆλον, ἔφη. Ἡ δ' αὐθαδία
 B καὶ δυσκολία ψέγεται οὐχ ὅταν τὸ ἰ λεοντωδὲς τε καὶ ὀφειῶδες

1. ἢ A²Π: ἢ A¹.

21 δουλούμενα is bracketed by Herwerden, who suggests as an alternative the omission of ὑπὸ before τῷ ἀγρίῳ. Neither change should be adopted; cf. ὑπὸ τῷ ἀθεωτάτῳ—δουλοῦται 589 E.

ἔάν μοι—πείθεται. 'If he takes my advice, he will.' ἐμοί, which I once read (with Stobaeus Flor. 9. 65, W. H. Thompson, Baiter)—'if he takes my advice'—is certainly more pointed; but there is no real ground for deserting the MSS, and the unemphatic pronoun is quieter and, as it seems to me, more in keeping with the general spirit of this 'gentle exhortation' (πείθωμεν τοίνυν αὐτὸν πρῶς 589 C).

23 λαμβάνων τὸ χρυσίον κτλ. On the construction see I 351 B n. For the structure of the sentence beginning εἰ μὲν λαβὼν κτλ. cf. I 336 E n.

589 E 25 εἰς ἀγρίων—ἀνδρῶν: sc. δουλείαν or the like (supplied from ἐδουλοῦτο) rather than οἰκίαν, which J. and C. supply. Cf. IV 425 A n. and for the genitive VIII 569 C.

590 A 2 Ἐριφύλῃ. Hom. Od. XI 326 f. Μαῖράν τε Κλυμένην τε ἴδον στυγερὴν τ' Ἐριφύλην, | ἣ χρυσὸν φίλον ἀνδρὸς ἐδέξατο τιμήντα.

3 ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου. See 588 B n. Glauco

'will speak for the champions of Injustice in their surrender as well as in their attack.

6 τὸ δεινόν, τὸ μέγα κτλ. "Socrates quasi monstrum conspicatus, quod τὸ δεινὸν θρέμμα appellaturus erat, denuo descriptionem eius incipit et per asyndeton horridulam orationem facit" (Schneider). The asyndeton has a highly rhetorical effect: see the remarks of Longinus on rhetorical asyndeton combined with ἀναφορά and διατύπωσις ('vivid description') in his περὶ ὕψους 20. Jowett and Campbell understand τὸ δεινόν substantively ('the dangerous thing, viz. that great beast')—a most improbable view, as it appears to me. On the other hand, Stallbaum, writing τὸ δεινὸν τὸ μέγα κτλ. without any comma, compares Crat. 398 B ἐν γε τῇ ἀρχαίᾳ τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ φωνῇ and other passages, none of which is parallel except (in some respects) Soph. O. R. 806 κἀγὼ τὸν ἐκτρέποντα, τὸν τροχηλάτην | παῖω δι' ὀργῆς, and there a comma is required. We certainly should not (with Stephanus and Ast) read τὸ δεινὸν καὶ τὸ μέγα κτλ.

590 B 8 ὀφειῶδες. The serpentine element has not hitherto been mentioned, but (as Schleiermacher points out, Piatons αὔξεται καὶ συντείνηται ἀναρμόστως; Πάνυ μὲν οἶν. Τρυφή δὲ 10 καὶ μαλθακία οὐκ ἐπὶ τῇ αὐτοῦ τούτου χαλάσει τε καὶ ἀνέσει ψέγεται, ὅταν ἐν αὐτῷ δειλίαν ἐμποιῇ; Τί μὴν; Κολακεία δὲ καὶ ἀνελευθερία οὐχ ὅταν τις τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο, τὸ θυμοειδές, ὑπὸ τῷ ὀχλῶδει θηρίῳ ποιῇ καὶ ἔνεκα χρημάτων καὶ τῆς ἐκείνου ἀπλη-στίας προπηλακιζόμενον ἐθίξῃ ἐκ νέου ἀντὶ λέοντος πίθηκον 15 γίγνεσθαι; ¹ Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. Βαναυσία δὲ καὶ χειροτεχνία διὰ τῶ τί, οἶει, ὄνειδος φέρει; ἢ δι' ἄλλο τι φήσομεν ἢ ὅταν τις ἀσθενὲς φύσει ἔχῃ τὸ τοῦ βελτίστου εἶδος, ὥστε μὴ ἂν δύνασθαι ἄρχειν τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ θρεμμάτων, ἀλλὰ θεραπεύειν ἐκείνα, καὶ τὰ θωπεύματα αὐτῶν μόνον δύνηται μανθάνειν; ² Ἐοικεν, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν ἵνα 20 καὶ ὁ τοιοῦτος ὑπὸ ὁμοίου ἄρχηται οἷον περ ὁ βέλτιστος, δοῦλον αὐτόν φαμεν δεῖν εἶναι ἐκείνου ¹ τοῦ βελτίστου, ἔχοντος ἐν αὐτῷ τὸ θεῖον ἄρχον, οὐκ ἐπὶ βλάβῃ τῇ τοῦ δούλου οἰόμενοι δεῖν ἄρχε-σθαι αὐτόν, ὥσπερ Θρασύμαχος ᾤετο τοὺς ἀρχομένους, ἀλλ' ὥς ἄμεινον ὄν παντὶ ὑπὸ θεοῦ καὶ φρονίμου ἄρχεσθαι, μάλιστα μὲν

Staat p. 609) may well be included in τὰ περὶ τὸν λέοντα 588 E. It symbolizes some meaner forms of the θυμοειδές which cannot well be attributed to the king of beasts, e.g. δυσκολία (III 411 C), perfidiousness etc. Cf. Theogn. 601 f. ἔρρε, θεοῖσιν τ' ἐχθρὸν καὶ ἀνθρώποισιν ἄπιστε | ψυχρὸν δὲ ἐν κόλπῳ ποικίλον εἶχες ὄφιν. Clement (Strom. IV 3. 1225 B Migne) is thinking of the Old Testament when he says ὄφιν ὁ ἀπατεῶν, but the idea is also Greek. It should also be remarked that expansions and amplifications like the addition of ὀφειδὲς in this passage are characteristic of the style of Plato: cf. for example Theaet. 147 A, B and 161 C. The emendation ὀχλῶδες, which Nettleship appears to favour (Lect. and Remains II p. 335), is excessively weak, and would moreover refer not to the θυμοειδές, but to the ἐπιθυμητικόν (cf. τῷ ὀχλῶδει θηρίῳ below). It seems to me clear both from λεοντῶδες and from αὐτοῦ τούτου below that at present Plato is thinking only of the θυμοειδές and its degenerate kinds. We must therefore beware of referring ὀφειδὲς to τοὺς φιληδόνους, τοὺς γαστρὶ καὶ αἰδοίοις δουλεύοντας (Clement's interpretation of Matt. 3. 7: see Strom. IV 16. 1308 A).

9 τρυφή δὲ καὶ μαλθακία κτλ. Cf. III 411 A, B. On πίθηκον see X 620 C n.

590 C 15 βαναυσία. See on VI

495 D.

19 δύνηται has been suspected by Stephanus, Ast, and Herwerden. The word could well be spared, but, as it is in all the MSS, was read by Stobaeus (Flor. 9. 67) and is not in itself an error, we are hardly justified in resorting to excision. The subjunctive depends of course on ὅταν, and καὶ connects δύνηται with ἔχῃ. By reading τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ (not αὐτῷ) θρεμμάτων, and making τὸ τοῦ βελτίστου εἶδος the subject to δύνασθαι and θεραπεύειν, Schneider makes it rather easier to refer δύνηται to ὅταν τις: but on the whole it is more natural to retain αὐτῷ and make the subject of δύνασθαι the same as that of δύνηται, viz. the individual himself. Even at the cost of a little awkwardness, Plato prefers to make the sentiment expressed by καὶ τὰ θωπεύματα —μανθάνειν co-ordinate with, rather than a consequence of, ὅταν τις ἀσθενὲς κτλ. For the imagery of the sentence cf. (with J. and C.) VI 493 A ff.

ἵνα καὶ κτλ. is Plato's justification for assigning the farmers and artisans to a dependent position in his city. For the syntax of ὑπὸ ὁμοίου—οἷον περ see III 402 A n.

590 D 23 ὥσπερ Θρασύμαχος ᾤετο. See I 343 A ff.

24 μάλιστα μὲν κτλ. A profounder and truly Platonic form of Hesiod's famous οἰκεῖον ἔχοντος ἐν αὐτῷ, εἰ δὲ μή, ἔξωθεν ἐφεστῶτος, ἵνα εἰς 25 δύναμιν πάντες ὅμοιοι ὦμεν καὶ φίλοι, τῷ αὐτῷ κυβερνώμενοι; E Καὶ ὁρθῶς γ', ἔφη. Δηλοῖ δέ γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ὁ νόμος, ὅτι τοιοῦτον βούλεται, πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν τῇ πόλει ξύμμαχος ὢν, καὶ ἡ τῶν παίδων ἀρχή, τὸ μὴ εἶναι ἐλευθέρους εἶναι, ἕως ἂν ἐν αὐτοῖς ὥσπερ 01 ἐν πόλει πολιτείαν καταστήσωμεν καὶ τὸ βέλτιστον θεραπεύσαντες 30 τῷ παρ' ἡμῖν τοιούτῳ ἀντικαταστήσωμεν φύλακα ὅμοιον καὶ ἄρ-χοντα ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ τότε δὴ ἐλευθέρου ἀφίεμεν. Δηλοῖ γάρ, ἡ δ' ὅς.

 Πῇ δὴ οὖν φήσομεν, ὦ Γλαύκων, καὶ κατὰ τίνα λόγον λυσιτελεῖν ἀδικεῖν ἢ ἀκολασταίνειν ἢ τι αἰσχροὺν ποιεῖν, ἐξ ὧν πονηρότερος 5

28. βούλεται E² cum Stobaeo (Flor. 9. 67): βουλεύεται APΞ¹ γ.

saying οὗτος μὲν πανάριστος δὲ αὐτὸς πάντα νοήσῃ, | ἐσθλὸς δ' αὖ κάκεινος δὲ εὖ εἰπόντι πίθηται (OD. 293 f., as quoted by Arist. Eth. Nic. I 2. 1095^b 10). Instead of οἰκεῖον ἔχοντος ἐν αὐτῷ Madvig proposes to read οἰκεῖον ἐνόντος ἐν αὐτῷ. The emendation is neat and gets rid of the difficulty both in ἔχοντος and in ἐφεστῶτος: but ἔχοντος ἐν αὐτῷ appropriately recalls ἔχοντος ἐν αὐτῷ above, and the genitive absolute may be compared with ἀποκριναμένον VII 538 D, ἐπομένων 586 D and δοκιμασθέντων Laus 755 D. (Badham's δοκιμασθέντας is of course only a conjecture.) Cf. Riddell Digest § 274.

25 ἐφεστῶτος is another independent genitive absolute. The double peculiarity is certainly unusual. Stephanus obliterates first one, and then both by suggesting (1) ἐφεστῶτα, and (2) ἔχοντι—ἐφεστῶς (intended, I suppose, as neuter, but the neuter should be ἐφεστός: see Schanz Vol. II p. XII). I believe the text is sound: there is hardly any limit—except that required by intelligibility—to Plato's rapid changes of construction, and they are especially common with participles. See VI 488 D n. with Engelhardt Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 45.

590 E 28 βούλεται κτλ. See cr. n. The reading βούλεται is found also in v., Flor. R, Flor. T, Stobaeus (Flor. 9. 67) and Iamblichus (Protrept. 88 p. 33 Pistelli). βουλεύεται, which Schneider and Hermann, following the best MSS, still retain, is much less suitable, and the corruption is easy and tolerably frequent: cf. (with Schneider) Phil. 35 D and 50 E, "ubi βουλεύεσθαι et βουλεύομαι pro βούλεσθαι et βούλομαι in quibusdam scriptum est." Plato means that the purpose, intention or meaning of Law is that the better should rule the worse, and we may fairly appeal to the witness of Law on such a subject, for Law does not, as Thrasymachus argued (I 343 C), hold a brief for ὁ κρείττων, but is the ally of every class and individual in the city without exception, πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν τῇ πόλει ξύμμαχος. Law is "the ally of everybody in the community without distinction, because the ally of that which is best in him" (Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 336).

591 A 2 ἀντικαταστήσωμεν κτλ.: sc. as a counterpart or substitute for our own βέλτιστον (τῷ παρ' ἡμῖν τοιούτῳ), by which he has hitherto been guided. Madvig's conjecture ὄντι καταστήσωμεν is both unnecessary and inelegant. On the singular αὐτῷ in spite of the plural παίδων see I 347 A n.

591 A—592 B It is also better for him who is guilty of Injustice to be detected and punished than to escape. The wise man will honour those studies which promote the welfare of his soul, and the same great object will be his guiding principle in all that appertains to the body and its state, as well as to the acquisition of riches and honours. Will he take part in political life? Perhaps not in the land of his birth, but in his own true city assuredly he will. It may be that the perfect city is an example laid up in Heaven for him who would plant a city in his soul.

5 ἀδικεῖν—ποιεῖν. It is more natural and better in point of literary effect to make the infinitives coordinate (with the English translators) than to suppose (with Schneider) that ἡ—ῆ is 'either—or' and ἀκολασταίνειν and τι αἰσχροὺν ποιεῖν intended as different species of the genus ἀδικία.

μὲν ἔσται, πλείω δὲ χρήματα ἢ ἄλλην τινὰ δύναμιν κεκτήσεται; Οὐδαμῇ, ἢ δ' ὅς. Πῇ δ' ἀδικοῦντα λανθάνειν καὶ μὴ δίδοναι δίκην λυσιτελεῖν; ἢ οὐχὶ ὁ μὲν λανθάνων ἔτι πονηρότερος γίγνεται, B τοῦ δὲ μὴ λανθάνοντος καὶ κολαζομένου τὸ μὲν θηριῶδες κοιμίζεται 10 καὶ ἡμεροῦται, τὸ δὲ ἡμερον ἐλευθεροῦται, καὶ ὅλη ἡ ψυχὴ εἰς τὴν βελτίστην φύσιν καθισταμένη τιμιωτέραν ἔξιν λαμβάνει, σωφροσύνην τε καὶ δικαιοσύνην μετὰ φρονήσεως κτωμένη, ἢ σῶμα ἰσχύν τε καὶ κάλλος μετὰ υἱείας λαμβάνον, τοσούτῳ ὅσῳ περ ψυχὴ σώματος τιμιωτέρα; Παντάπασιν μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν 15 ὁ γε νοῦν ἔχων πάντα ἡ αὐτοῦ εἰς τοῦτο ξυντείνας βιώσεται, C πρῶτον μὲν τὰ μαθήματα τιμῶν, ἃ τοιαύτην αὐτοῦ τὴν ψυχὴν ἀπεργάσεται, τὰ δὲ ἄλλα ἀτιμάζων; Δῆλον, ἔφη. Ἐπειτά γ', εἶπον, τὴν τοῦ σώματος ἔξιν καὶ τροφήν οὐχ ὅπως τῇ θηριῶδει καὶ ἀλόγῳ ἡδονῇ ἐπιτρέψας ἐνταῦθα τετραμμένος ζήσει, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ 20 πρὸς υἱείαν βλέπων οὐδὲ τοῦτο πρεσβεύων, ὅπως ἰσχυρὸς ἢ υἱίης ἢ καλὸς ἔσται, ἐὰν μὴ καὶ σωφρονήσῃν μέλλῃ ἀπ' αὐτῶν, ἡ ἀλλ' D αἰετὴν ἐν τῷ σώματι ἁρμονίαν τῆς ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἕνεκα ξυμφωνίας

8. ἔτι πονηρότερος A: ἔγq: ἐπιπονηρότερος A¹ II.

17. ἀπεργάσεται II: ἀπερ-γάσεται A. 19. ζήσει E: ζώσῃ A¹: ζώσῃ (sic) II: ζῶῃ A² q.

7 πῇ δ' ἀδικοῦντα κτλ. It was maintained in II 361 A ff., 365 C ff. that Injustice could evade detection and punishment. So much the worse, says Socrates, for the sinner, who thereby forfeits his only chance of reformation, since Punishment is the appointed cure for Vice. It may be doubted whether so humane a view altogether corresponded to the actual administration of the Athenian or any other State; but to an ideal-ist like Plato 'is' means 'should be,' and in so far as human laws fulfil their true function by reflecting the divine ordinances, we may truly say that punishment is remedial. See on the whole subject II 380 B n.

591 C 17 ἀπεργάσεται κτλ. Editors rightly abandon the present ἀπεργάζεται (see cr. n.) as indefensible. ζήσει is condemned by Cobet (*V. L.*² p. 610) as an interpolation, but some verb is needed, and Cobet himself allows that "ζήσω apud Atticos semel et iterum comparet" (e.g. V 465 D, Ar. Plut. 263 and Fr. 498 Dindorf). ζώσῃ (see cr. n.) can hardly be maintained in Plato, though not, apparently, unknown in Ionic: see Kühner-Blass Gr. Gr. I 2, p. 436. The erroneous ζῶῃ is clearly due to a misunderstanding of οὐχ ὅπως (non modo non).

591 D 21 ἀλλ' ἀδ' κτλ. With the sentiments cf. III 410 Aff., VI 498 B n. On φανέται see cr. n. If we retain φαίνεται, as I formerly did, with J. and C., Schneider and the early editions, the conjunctive is parallel to the future ἔσται, both depending on ὅπως: cf. (with Schneider) Tim.
 18 E μηχανάσθαι κλήροισι τισίν, ὅπως—ξυλλήξονται, καὶ μὴ τις αὐτοῖς ἐχθρα—γίγνηται. A few additional examples are cited by Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 893 n. 5.
 In this instance, however, φαίνεται is particularly awkward, and may easily be a corruption of φανέται, under the influence of the preceding ἐάν. q has φαίνονται, which doubtless springs from the same misunderstanding which produced the corruption ζῶῃ for ζήσει in C. φανέται is adopted also by Ast, Stallbaum, and a reviewer of my Text of the Republic in Hermathena XXIV p. 256. We must understand the clause as still under the government of ὅπως, and not as independent; otherwise the verb becomes otiose, as it is in fact regarded by Hermann, Stallbaum and Baier, all of whom bracket it.

ἄρροττόμενος φανείται. Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, ἔάνπερ μέλλῃ τῇ ἀληθείᾳ μουσικὸς εἶναι. Οὐκοῦν, εἶπον, καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ τῶν χρημάτων κτήσῃ ξύνταξιν τε καὶ ξυμφωνίαν; καὶ τὸν ὄγκον τοῦ 25 πλήθους οὐκ ἐκπληττόμενος ὑπὸ τοῦ τῶν πολλῶν μακαρισμοῦ ἀπειρον αὐξήσει, ἀπέραντα κακὰ ἔχων; Οὐκ οἶομαι, ἔφη. Ἄλλ' Ε ἀποβλέπων γε, εἶπον, ἡ πρὸς τὴν ἐν αὐτῷ πολιτείαν καὶ φυλάττων, μή τι παρακιῇ αὐτοῦ τῶν ἐκεῖ διὰ πλῆθος οὐσίας ἢ δι' ὀλιγότητα, οὕτως κυβερνῶν προσθήσῃ καὶ ἀναλώσῃ τῆς οὐσίας καθ' ὅσον ἂν 30 οἷός τ' ᾖ. Κομιδῇ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Ἀλλὰ μὴν καὶ τιμάς γε, εἰς 2 ταῦτόν ἀποβλέπων, τῶν μὲν μεθέξει καὶ γεύσεται ἐκῶν, ἃς ἂν ἡγῇται ἀμείνω αὐτὸν ποιήσῃ, ἃς δ' ἂν λύσειν τὴν ὑπάρχουσιν ἔξιν, φεύξεται ἰδία καὶ δημοσία. Οὐκ ἄρα, ἔφη, τά γε πολιτικά ἐβελήσῃ πράττειν, ἔάνπερ τούτου κήδηται. Νὴ τὸν κύνα, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἔν γε τῇ ἑαυτοῦ πόλει καὶ μάλα, οὐ μέντοι ἴσως ἔν γε τῇ 5 πατρίδι, ἐὰν μὴ θεία τις ξυμβῇ τύχη. Μανθάνω, ἔφη, ἐν ᾗ νῦν διήλθομεν οἰκίζοντες πόλει λέγεις, τῇ ἐν λόγοις κειμένη· ἐπεὶ γῆς
 B γε ὁ οὐδαμοῦ οἶμαι αὐτὴν εἶναι. Ἄλλ', ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐν οὐρανῷ ἴσως

23. φανείται Iamblichus (Protrept. 90): φαίνεται AΠΞ: φαίνονται g. 29. πλήθος A²Ξ g: πλήθους A¹Π.

23 ἔάνπερ—μουσικός εἶναι. Cf. IV
 432 A, 443 D, E.

24 οὐκοῦν—ξυμφωνίαν; sc. τῆς ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἔνεκα ξυμφωνίας ἀρμόσεται.

25 τοῦ πλήθους κτλ.: i.e. τοῦ πλῆ-θους τῶν χρημάτων κτλ.: cf. VIII 563 B n. οὐκ before ἐκπληττόμενος is not interrogative, but negatives ἐκπληττόμενος—αὐξή-σει. The interrogative force of οὐκοῦν is carried on from the last sentence.

591 E 31 ἀλλὰ μὴν καὶ τιμάς γε
 κτλ. See on VIII 566 E. The idiom has more in common with 'partitive ap-position' than with such an ἀνακόλουθον accusative as in Tim. 37 D (quoted by Schneider) ἡμέρας γὰρ καὶ νύκτας καὶ μῆνας καὶ ἐνιαυτοὺς, οὐκ ὄντας πρὶν οὐρανὸν γενέσθαι, τότε ἅμα ἐκείνῳ ξυνισταμένῳ τὴν γένεσιν αὐτῶν μηχανάται.

592 A 4 νῇ τὸν κύνα. See III 399
 E n.

5 ἔν γε τῇ ἑαυτοῦ πόλει: i.e. in the πολιτεία προσήκουσα of VI 497 A.

οὐ μέντοι—πατρίδι. We may compare the story about Anaxagoras in D. L.
 II 7: τέλος ἀπέστη καὶ περὶ τὴν τῶν φυσικῶν θεωρίαν ἦν, οὐ φροντίζων τῶν πολιτικῶν. ὅτε καὶ πρὸς τὸν εἰπόντα, Οὐδέν σοι μέλει τῆς πατρίδος; Εὐφῆμει, ἔφη· ἐμοὶ γὰρ καὶ σφόδρα μέλει τῆς πατρίδος, δέλξας τὸν οὐρανόν. See also Anti-sthenes ap. D. L. VI 11. The question whether the wise man will take part in politics is raised by Aristotle in a somewhat different form (Pol. I 3. 1276^b 16 ff. al.), and afterwards became one of the stock questions of post-Aristotelian philosophy: see RP⁷ § 384 c n. c.

6 θεία—τύχη: such as is contemplated in VI 499 B, where see note.

νῦν. The reading νῦν δὴ has very little authority, and it is certain that νῦν sometimes refers to the immediate past: see on VIII 563 C.

7 τῇ ἐν λόγοις κειμένη: 'the city which is founded in words.' It is truer and more perfect, aye and more lasting too, just because it κείται ἐν λόγοις: for φύσιν ἔχει πράξιν λέξεως ἥττον ἀληθείας ἐφάπτεσθαι (V 473 A) and ῥῆμα ἐργμάτων χρονιώτερον βιοτεύει (Pind. Nem. 4. 6).

592 B 8 ἀλλ'—ἐν οὐρανῷ κτλ. 'But perhaps it is laid up in heaven as an ensample for him who desires to behold it and beholding found a city in himself.'
 If the philosopher is prevented from founding a city after the pattern in the Heavens, he can at all events 'found παράδειγμα ἀνάκειται τῷ βουλομένῳ ὄρᾶν καὶ ὀρῶντι ἑαυτὸν 10 κατοικίῃσιν. διαφέρει δὲ οὐδέν, εἴτε που ἔστιν εἴτε ἔσται· τὰ himself' ("sich selbst begründen" Schneider, and so also Bosanquet): cf. VI 496 C—497 A. ἑαυτὸν κατοικίῃσιν is a pregnant and powerful phrase, which involves not only the idea of the πόλις s. πολιτεία ἐν ἡμῶν (cf. 590 E, 591 E, X 605 B, 608 B), but also perhaps a hint that the παράδειγμα ἐν οὐρανῷ is as it were the μητρό-πολις from which our souls should be colonised. Jowett and Campbell understand ἐκεῖ after ἑαυτὸν κατοικίῃσιν, while Richards thinks Plato may have written ἑαυτὸν <αὐτόσε> or <εἰς αὐτήν> κατοικίῃσιν: but the word παράδειγμα, as well as τῷ βουλομένῳ ὄρᾶν καὶ ὀρῶντι, shew that the heavenly city is regarded as a model for the soul rather than as the place in which the soul should be planted. The conjectures αὐτό (sc. τὸ παράδειγμα) κατοικίῃσιν and ὀρῶντι πρὸς (s. εἰς) αὐτό κατοικίῃσιν (Herwerden) do not merit refutation. What does Plato mean by ἐν οὐρανῷ? It is surely something more than "harmlose populär-theologische Redeweise" (Pfeiderer zur Lösung etc. p. 33). The poet Gray (who aptly reminds us of Diogenes Laertius' epitaph on Plato πόλιν ἦλθεν ἥν ποθ' ἑαυτῷ ἔκτισε, καὶ δαπέδῳ Ζηνὸς ἐνιδρύσατο III 45) remarks "ἐν οὐρανῷ, that is, in the idea of the divinity: see the beginning of the following book." Apparently he understood the words of the Heaven of Ideas, a view which has, with various modifications and qualifications, found favour also with other critics (see Steinhart Einleitung p. 254 and cf. Susemihl Gen. Entw. II p. 248 ff. Proclus in Tim. 269 E seems to interpret the παράδειγμα as τὴν ἐν οὐρανῷ πολιτείαν τῆς ψυχῆς, but Plato is manifestly speaking of the πολιτεία τῆς πόλεως). Others have taken ἐν οὐρανῷ of the 'Weltall' or Macrocosm, as if the Universe itself were one great ideal city, after whose pattern we should regulate the City of the Soul (see Steinhart l. c. and p. 270 with Tim. 47 B, 90 D); but, as Schneider points out, we can hardly reconcile such an interpretation with VII 529 C—530 C, and ἀνάκειται is also against it. The sentence may be compared with Pol. 297 C, Λaws 713 B ff. and especially 739 D, E, where the polity of the Republic is thus described: ἡ μὲν δὴ τοιαύτη πόλις, εἴτε που θεοὶ ἢ παῖδες θεῶν αὐτὴν οἰκοῦσι πλείους ἐνός, οὕτω διαζῶντες εὐφραίνόμενοι κατοικοῦσι· διὸ δὴ παράδειγμά γε πολιτείας οὐκ ἄλλη χρὴ σκοπεῖν, ἀλλ' ἐχομένους ταύτης τὴν ὅτι μάλιστα τοιαύτην ζητεῖν κατὰ δύναμιν. We might employ this passage to explain ἐν οὐρανῷ ἴσως παράδειγμα, but its tone is less elevated and impressive, and in particular it does not help us to understand τῷ βουλομένῳ ὄρᾶν καὶ ὀρῶντι. Plato's language is extraordinarily suggestive, and I confess that to me, as apparently to Susemihl (l. c. p. 249), these words suggest, not indeed the doctrine of Anamnesis in all its bearings, but something of the half-religious, half-poetical atmosphere with which Plato invests that doctrine in the Phaedrus. The mysterious and haunting phrase ἐν οὐρανῷ παράδειγμα recalls the 'imperial palace whence we came,' and the whole sentence reminds us once again of that profound and inspiring doctrine ἀνθρώπος οὐράνιον φυτὸν, οὐκ ἔγγειον, which, as I have often pointed out, underlies so much of Platonism. The sister-doctrine of Immortality seems also to be implied, and from this point of view the Christian parallels are highly remarkable and significant: see for example Philipp. 3. 30 ἡμῶν γὰρ τὸ πολίτευμα ἐν οὐρανοῖς ὑπάρχει, and many other passages in the New Testament, e.g. Hebr. II. 16, 12, 23, 13. 14: 1 Pet. I. 4, 2. iii. 13. I do not venture to assert that Plato consciously and deliberately thought of Anamnesis and Immortality when he wrote ἐν οὐρανῷ etc., but the words are steeped in the fragrance of these beliefs; and to regard the reference to heaven "as a mere passing figure of speech" (Bosanquet) seems to me to do less than justice to the wonderful depth and fervour of this passage.

10 τὰ γὰρ ταύτης κτλ. See Nettle-ship Lect. and Rem. II p. 338 and Theaet. 173 C ff., quoted by him. Interpreted strictly and by themselves, the words of Plato would mean only that the philosopher will abstain from public and political life except when some 'divine chance' enables him to exercise his true vocation. But taken in connexion with ἑαυτὸν κατοικίῃσιν they mean more. In founding the city within himself after the likeness of the heavenly city the philosopher is in γὰρ ταύτης μόνης ἂν πράξειεν, ἄλλης δὲ οὐδεμιᾶς. Εἰκός γ', ἔφη.

τέλος πολιτείας θ'.

reality a true πολιτικός, because he is thereby faithful to the principles of the true and perfect State: even while he lives, he is already in a sense a citizen of Heaven, for the Kingdom of Heaven is reproduced within him. In existing cities the truest politicians are sometimes those who abstain from politics altogether, according to Gorg. 521 D ff. I agree with Steinhart (Einleitung p. 254) and Christ (Gr. Literaturgesch. p. 348 n. 6) that Plato now speaks much less hopefully than before of the prospects of realising his ideal city upon earth: see on V 470 E, VI 499 C and 502 C. It is possible to force some of the earlier allusions into a sort of harmony with the words of this passage (see for example Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. d. Pl. Pol. pp. 637 ff.); but we cannot help feeling that the tone and atmosphere are very different. Steinhart (l.c. p. 703 n. 264) traces the difference to Plato's disappointed hopes of the younger Dionysius. The conjecture is interesting, but even without this stimulus Plato may well have come to feel that his καλλίπολις is hardly of this world (cf. Laws 713 B), and that its true value lies in the religious, political, and moral ideals which it holds before mankind.

APPENDICES TO BOOK IX.

I.

IX 576 D, E. ἀλλ' εἰδαιμονίας τε αὖ καὶ ἀθλιότητος ὡσαύτως ἢ ἄλλως κρίνεις; καὶ μὴ ἐκπληττώμεθα πρὸς τὸν τύραννον ἕνα ὄντα βλέποντες, μὴδ' εἴ τινας ὀλίγοι περὶ ἐκείνους, ἀλλ' ὥς χρή ὅλην τὴν πόλιν εἰσελθόντας θεάσασθαι, καταδύντες εἰς ἅπασαν καὶ ἰδόντες, οὕτω δόξαν ἀποφαινόμεθα.

The difficult clause ὥς χρή—θεάσασθαι has hardly received sufficient attention at the hands of editors. There is no variant of any consequence in the mss.

The chief trouble lies in determining the precise force of ὥς χρή.

Is ὥς (1) 'sicut,' introducing an analogy, or (2) simply 'ut,' i.e. 'as,' or (3) a causal particle?

The first of these views is apparently held by Schleiermacher and Schneider. The former translates "sondern wie man sich eine Stadt ganz beschauen muss, wenn man hineinkommt, so lass uns überall herumsteigen und zusehn und dann unsere Meinung abgehen." Schneider's version is "sondern so wie man den gesammten Staat zu sehen in ihn hineingehen muss, in das innere des ganzen eindringen, und wenn wir ihn gesehen haben, unsere Meinung aussprechen." Schleiermacher seems to suppose that there is a comparison between what is necessary in order to see the sights of a town, and what is necessary in order to pronounce judgment on the τυραννομένη πόλις: in either case we must get 'inside' the city. This explanation is attractive, and can be made very plausible; but (a) we should expect ὥσπερ in place of ὥς: (b) the present χρή suggests something which is our duty here and now, rather than what would be necessary in a hypothetical case: (c) the antithesis between seeing with the eye, and seeing with the mind, is not sufficiently brought out by merely setting θεάσασθαι over against ἰδόντες: and (d) it is not natural that the illustration should be confined to the tyrant's city, as it manifestly is by the words ὅλην τὴν πόλιν. For these reasons I cannot bring myself to agree with Schleiermacher, alluring as his view is.

The second explanation gives a thoroughly natural and easy meaning to ὥς χρή. But how are we to explain the remainder of the clause, ὅλην—θεάσασθαι? We cannot, surely, supply θεασάμενοι (with J. and C.) before ὥς, nor would the resulting sense be satisfactory if we could. Two explanations may be suggested. We may suppose, on the one hand, that ὅλην—θεάσασθαι is merely explanatory of ὥς χρή ('as is right,' viz. that we should go into and see the whole city, 'let us' etc.). It is however, an objection to this theory that it makes ὅλην—θεάσασθαι almost entirely otiose, and Jowett, in point of fact, practically omits the words from his translation ("let us go as we ought into every corner of the city and look all about"). On the other hand, it may be argued that ὡς χρή, though in itself, strictly speaking, parenthetical, is allowed to affect the construction in much the same way as ὡς οἶμαι, ὡς ἔοικεν sometimes are (see for example Soph. Trach. 1238 ἀνὴρ ὅδ', ὡς ἔοικεν, οὐ μεῖν ἐμοὶ κτλ. with note on 1347 A). But there is apparently no other example of this kind of attraction on so extensive a scale, and ὅλην—θεάσασθαι is still nearly, if not quite, superfluous.

The view that ὡς is causal presents the fewest difficulties, and for that reason I have adopted it in the notes. It is held also by Ast and Davies and Vaughan. The text may be corrupt, but it has not, so far as I know, been hitherto suspected. If ἀλλά were read before καταδύντες and not before ὡς, all difficulty would disappear. 'Do not let us be dazzled by looking at the tyrant, who is but one man among many, or at a few persons in his retinue, for it is the entire city which we must go in and view; but let us' etc. The corruption, however, is not easy to explain, and it is safer and wiser to follow the mss.

II.

IX 580 A, B. ἔθι δὴ μοι, ἔφην ἐγώ, νῦν ἤδη ὥσπερ ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς ἀποφαίνεται, καὶ σὺ οὕτω, τίς πρῶτος κατὰ τὴν σὴν δόξαν εὐδαιμονία καὶ τίς δεύτερος, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐξῆς πέντε ὄντας κρίνε, βασιλικόν, τιμοκρατικόν, δλιγαρχικόν, δημοκρατικόν, τυραννικόν.

The general meaning of this passage is clear, but it is difficult to determine the exact force of ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς. There is no reason to suspect the text, although the phrase is apparently not found elsewhere; nor would Orelli's conjecture διασάντων deserve to be accepted, even if διὰ πάντων were corrupt.

In the program cited in the notes, Petersen has collected and discussed most of the available literary evidence on the Athenian method of judging in dramatic and musical contests. None of the passages quoted by him throw any direct light upon the words διὰ πάντων: but it is possible to construct from these passages a reasonable theory of the whole subject, in which ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς receives what is at least a plausible explanation. I have adopted the substance of Petersen's theory in the notes, but not his view of the particular phrase ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτῆς.

The other prima facie evidence, which Petersen does not discuss, is as follows:

Antiatticistes in Bekk. Anecd. p. 91. 10: διὰ πάντων ἀγῶν λέγεται ὁ ἔσχατος. Κρατῖνος Πανόπταις (Crat. Fr. 157 Koch).

Hesychius: διὰ πάντων κριτῆς. Βοηθός φησι ἐν τοῖς περὶ Πλάτωνος, ὅτι ὁ νομοθέτης ἐκέλευσε τοῖς κρίνουσι γράφειν τὰ κεφάλαια ἑκάστον.

CIG 1585, 1586, 1719, 1720.

An inscription found at Nysa and published in Bull. Hell. ix 126 l. 55 τετειμῆσθαι τε αὐτὸν ἀναγορε[ύσει] χρυσῷ στεφάνῳ ἐν ταῖς τοῦ διὰ πάντων ἀγῶ[νος] ἱερουργίαις τε καὶ σπονδαῖς, and other inscriptions cited in Pauly-Wissowa Real-Encyclopädie etc. s.v. ἀγών.

The remark of Boethus preserved by Hesychius merely alludes to the regulation that the judges were to make use of a γραμματεῖον. This is abundantly attested from other sources (see Müller Griech. Bühnenalt. p. 371 n. 2), and does not, so far as I can see, help us to interpret διὰ πάντων. Cratinus' fragment, on the other hand, is important; for it shews that there was a διὰ πάντων ἀγών before the time of Plato.

The first of the inscriptions, CIG 1585, gives a list of victors in a musical contest at Thespiae, ending with διὰ πάντων (sc. ἐνίκα) Εὐμάρων Ἀλεξάνδρον Θεσπιεύς, who is also mentioned at the beginning as the author of the successful προσόδιον. The second inscription, found on Mt Helicon, is similar; and in CIG 1719 and 1720, both of which were discovered at Delphi, we meet with διὰ πάντων—though in 1719 πάντων has to be supplied by Boeckh—and ὁ διὰ πάντων, in the sense of ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών (as in the inscription from Nysa). According to Boeckh on CIG 1585, ὁ διὰ πάντων (νικῶν) is "victor inter victores," the winner of the prize given for the one best production of all the successful pieces in the different kinds, like the prize for 'the best animal in the yard' at an agricultural show: and this interpretation is supported by the fact that the winner of the διὰ πάντων in that inscription has already secured the prize for the προσόδιον. A less probable theory understands τῶν ἀγωνισμάτων rather than τῶν ἀγωνιστῶν after διὰ πάντων, and takes ὁ διὰ πάντων νικῶν as "wer in mehreren Productionen zwar nicht den Sieg errungen hatte, aber doch ihm am nächsten gekommen war": such a person "verdiente seiner Vielseitigkeit wegen schon einen Preis" (Kayser quoted in Grasberger Erziehung u. Unterricht iii p. 15). It will be observed that neither explanation makes the διὰ πάντων ἀγών a competition involving distinct and separate performances of its own.

As the διὰ πάντων ἀγών must necessarily have been decided last, and always, I think, comes at the end of the list of victories, the usage of the inscriptions is not inconsistent with the explanation of διὰ πάντων ἀγών as ὁ ἔσχατος, given in Bekker's Anecdota l.c. And, since it is obvious that if the Greeks could use the expressions ὁ διὰ πάντων νικῶν and ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών, they may well have spoken of the judge in the διὰ πάντων as ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτής, it may seem that a satisfactory explanation of the Platonic phrase is possible by the aid of the Inscriptions.

But neither Kayser's nor Boeckh's interpretation of the inscriptional use of διὰ πάντων is in the least degree suited to the situation in the Republic. Glauco is invited to arrange the competitors in order of merit, and not merely to decide which is first; nor are the βασιλικός, τιμοκρατικός, ὀλιγαρχικός etc. in any sense competitors in different departments, like the πνθαύλης, ῥαψωδός etc. of the Inscriptions; they are all from beginning to end candidates in one and the same contest for one and the same prize. The hypothesis proposed by Kayser is still less apposite: for Plato's βασιλικός is anything but 'many-sided,' and has never been beaten in any contest at all.

For these reasons I cannot see that the Inscriptions hitherto discovered give us any real assistance in attempting to elucidate the sentence of Plato, and it should be further remarked that they are all of them as late as the days of the Empire. There is nothing relevant to our purpose in the large collection of inscriptions contained in Reisch de musicis Graecorum certaminibus (1885).

It may be well to mention some of the different views which have been held by Platonic scholars on this difficult phrase. Ficinus translates "quemadmodum iudex omnia circumspiciens de singulis iudicat"; Schleiermacher "wie, wer in irgend einer Sache über alle durchweg richten soll, sein Urtheil abgibt," confessing however (Platons Staat p. 603) that he finds the sentence obscure; Schneider "der Richter, der über alle entscheidet," i.e. "der welcher das Urtheil fällt, wenn Alle die in einem musikalischen Wettstreit um den Preis kämpfen, ihre Leistungen vollendet haben" (p. 312 of his Translation); Prantl "der Alles umfassende Richter"; Müller "der Richter, der das Ganze zusammenfassend sein Urtheil abgibt," i.e. "der verständige Richtende, der bei Abgabe seiner Stimme nicht einzelnes, sondern den ganzen Thatsbestand ins Auge fasst"; Jowett "as the general umpire in theatrical contests"; and Davies and Vaughan "the judge who passes sentence after going through the whole case." In most of these versions διὰ πάντων is construed as if it were not a technical expression at all, but merely equivalent to διὰ πάντων διεξελθών or the like (cf. VII 534 C). To me, on the other hand, it seems certain that ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτής is an essential part of Plato's comparison, and would at once suggest to Plato's readers some particular judge or judges in musical or dramatic competitions. Jowett and Campbell think the words may mean: (1) the judge who decides the prizes of all the different kinds of contests; (2) or all the prizes, e.g. first, second, third in the same contest; (3) the judge who gave the final decision in some musical pentathlon. I have already given my grounds for rejecting the first suggestion; the second makes διὰ πάντων practically otiose, for it is obvious that all the prizes in the same contest must be awarded by the same authority; the third is more reasonable, although I cannot agree that "πίτε ὄντας conveys an allusion to the pentathlon." The words πίτε ὄντας refer of course to the competitors, βασιλικόν etc., and not to five different subjects of competition.

Sir Richard Jebb suggests another view, which appears to me deserving of consideration. He writes as follows:—

"A clue to the sense of διὰ πάντων here is given by those phrases in which διά with the genitive denotes the range of a comparison or a competition: e.g., Iliad XII 104 ἔπρεπε καὶ διὰ πάντων ('among all'): Herod. I 25 θέης ἄξιον διὰ πάντων τῶν ἀναθημάτων: id. VI 63 εὐδοκίμουντι διὰ πάντων. The phrase ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών may be a terse expression ('the contest from among all,' = 'the contest of those selected from among all' or 'distinguished among all') for that contest in which the competitors were οἱ διὰ πάντων εὐδοκμήσαντες, those who had done best among all the competitors,—having vanquished their respective opponents in the preliminary contests. ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών would thus be what the old interpreter calls it, ὁ ἔσχατος, the final contest. For example, in the dithyrambic ἀγών at Athens there were ten choruses, one for each tribe. We will suppose that these ten competed, to begin with, in pairs. Then ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών would be the final contest between the five choruses left in after the preliminary contests. ὁ διὰ πάντων κριτής would be any one of the (five) judges in ὁ διὰ πάντων ἀγών. It seems possible that the illustration from the final decision in the contest of dithyrambic choruses may have struck Plato as having a special fitness because five competitors are in question here."

III.

IX 581 D, E. τὸν δὲ φιλόσοφον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τί οἰώμεθα τὰς ἄλλας ἡδονὰς νομίζειν πρὸς τὴν τοῦ εἰδέναι τάληθες ὅπῃ ἔχει καὶ ἐν τοιοῦτῳ τινὲ ἀεὶ εἶναι μανθάνοντα τῆς ἡδονῆς; οὐ πᾶν πόρρω, καὶ καλεῖν τῷ ὄντι ἀναγκαίως, ὡς οὐδὲν τῶν ἄλλων δεόμενον, εἰ μὴ ἀνάγκη ᾖν;

In this difficult passage all the mss have ποιούμεθα instead of τί οἰώμεθα. In other respects the text which I have printed agrees with A and II; nor is there any important variant in the inferior mss, except νομίζειν οὐδέν (for νομίζειν) in Ξ and a few of its congeners.

ποιούμεθα was read by Schneider, whose translation is as follows:—"Von dem Wissenschaftliebenden aber, sagte ich, sollen wir nicht glauben dass er die andern Annehmlichkeiten in Vergleich mit der das Wahre wie es ist, zu erkennen und immer lernend auf solche Weise beschäftigt zu sein für sehr entfernt vom angenehmen hält und sie in der That nothwendige nennt, als der der andern nicht begehren würde, wenn es nicht nothwendig wäre?" Schleiermacher had already taken the passage in this way, except that he fell into error over οὐ πᾶν πόρρω. The objections to Schneider's view have been pointed out by Stallbaum and others. They are briefly these: (1) ποιεῖσθαι by itself cannot mean 'existimare,' 'statuere'; (2) ποιούμεθα τὰς ἄλλας νομίζειν—τῆς ἡδονῆς οὐ πᾶν πόρρω is not equivalent to ἀρ' οὐ ποιούμεθα—τὰς ἄλλας νομίζειν—τῆς ἡδονῆς πᾶν πόρρω, which is that which Schneider translates. See also Graser Spec. advers. in serm. Pl. pp. 19—23. Jowett attempts to evade the second of these objections by translating "may we suppose that the philosopher regards the other pleasures in regard to the pleasure of knowing the truth, and in that pursuit abiding always, not so very far from the Heaven of pleasure, and that he calls" etc., and making τῆς ἡδονῆς οὐ πᾶν πόρρω slightly ironical, as if "intended to express that the philosopher has in knowledge the true pleasure." This explanation is, to say the least, obscure; if I understand it rightly, 'regards' means 'values,' and ποιεῖσθαι τι πρὸς τι surely cannot mean 'to value one thing in regard to another.'

In his published translation Jowett had acquiesced in Graser's τί οἰώμεθα, which a large majority of critics have approved (Müller, Prantl, Hermann, Baiter, Madvig, Campbell). This emendation, which is easy enough, τί and π being nearly identical in uncials, removes all difficulty in the earlier part of the sentence, and is much neater than Stallbaum's μὴ οἰώμεθα. It is also an argument against μὴ οἰώμεθα that it requires us to read ρομίζεν οὐδέν for ρομίζεν: while, on the other hand, as soon as τί οἰώμεθα was corrupted into ποιώμεθα, the οὐδέν which we find in Ξ etc. may have been introduced into the text to go with πρὸς in the sense of 'nothing' (i.e. 'of no account') 'in comparison with' etc., exactly as in τί οἰώμεθα τὰς ἄλλας ἡδονὰς ρομίζεν πρὸς of the original uncorrupted text.

Critics have also differed widely about the words μανθάνοντα—πόρρω. Does the sentence contain two questions or only one? Of those who accept the conjecture τί οἰώμεθα, Graser and Müller suppose that there is only a single question. The former (l.c.) bids us construe τῆς ἡδονῆς κτλ. as "quo in studio a voluptate tam prope abest, ut illas etiam revera necessarias appellet" etc., taking καὶ καλεῖν for ὥστε καὶ καλεῖν. The latter invites us to carry on the τοῦ of τοῦ εἰδέναι not only to εἶναι (to which of course it also belongs), but even to καλεῖν. Each of these explanations is equally unsatisfactory in point of meaning and of grammar.

Those who hold that there are two questions have hitherto made the first end with μανθάνοντα (Prantl, Hermann, Baiter, Campbell). According to their view, the meaning is 'And what, are we to suppose, is the philosopher's estimate of the other pleasures in comparison with that of knowing the truth as it is, and being evermore engaged in such an intellectual pursuit? Must we not think that he accounts them far removed from true pleasure?' etc. (Campbell). To this there are two objections. τῆς ἡδονῆς is not by itself commensurate with 'true pleasure,' either here, or (as Shorey seems to hold A. J. Ph. xvi p. 230) in Phil. 44 c (γοήτευμα, οὐχ ἡδονήν): and in any case (though this consideration is less weighty) it should follow rather than precede οὐ πᾶν πόρρω. The first objection is met by Campbell's conjecture τῆς ἀληθινῆς, or by τῆς <ἀληθινῆς> ἡδονῆς. There is, however, no sign of corruption, except the three dots placed over τῆς ἡδονῆς by a later hand in A, and that is insufficient, although Baiter brackets the offending words. Madvig (Adv. Crit. i p. 431) would emend to τὸν δὲ φιλόσοφον—τί οἰώμεθα—πρὸς τὴν—μανθάνοντα ἡδονήν, observing quite truly that "reliquae ἡδοναὶ non videntur philosopho τῆς ἡδονῆς (universae) πᾶν πόρρω, sed longe ab ea, quam ipse percipiat." The solution which I propose in the notes has some affinity in point of meaning with that of Madvig, but requires no alteration of the text. It seems to me to be free from all the difficulties which are inherent in the above explanations.

IV.

IX 583 B. ἄθρει ὅτι οὐδὲ παναληθῆς ἐστὶν ἡ τῶν ἄλλων ἡδονῇ πλὴν τῆς τοῦ φρονίμου οὐδὲ καθαρά, ἀλλ' ἐσκιαγραφημένη τις, ὡς ἐγὼ δοκῶ μοι τῶν σοφῶν τινὸς ἀκηκοέναι.

Who are τῶν σοφῶν? Stallbaum's answer is "Verba ὡς ἐγὼ δοκῶ—ἀκηκοέναι, nisi fallor, ad Philebum ipsius Platonis referenda sunt." Apart altogether from the disputed question as to the priority of the Philebus, it is very unlikely that Plato should refer to himself as τις τῶν σοφῶν, and none of the other passages where such a phrase occurs lends any support to this explanation. Schleiermacher (Platons Staat p. 604), Susemihl (Gen. Entw. II p. 242), and Zeller¹ (II p. 548 n. 2), hold that the entire argument presupposes the Philebus, but do not discuss the words τῶν σοφῶν τινός. It is tolerably clear, as Schneider points out on p. 312 of his translation, that τῶν σοφῶν τινός is one of those who in Phil. 44 B ff. are said to consider the so-called pleasures of the body merely λυπῶν ἀποφυγαί. The passage in question is as follows:

Σω. Ὅντως γὰρ τοὺς πολέμιους Φιλίβου τοῦδε, ὦ Προτάρχε, οὐ μανθάνεις. Πρω. Λέγεις δὲ αὐτοὺς τίνας; Σω. Καὶ μάλα δεινοὺς λεγόμενους τὰ περὶ φύσιν, οἳ τὸ παράπαν ἡδονὰς οὐ φασιν εἶναι. Πρω. Τί μὴν; Σω. Λυπῶν ταύτας εἶναι πάσας ἀποφυγὰς, ἃς νῦν οἱ περὶ Φίληβον ἡδονὰς ἐπονομάζουσιν. Πρω. Τούτοις οὖν ἡμᾶς πότερα πείθεσθαι ξυμβουλεύεις, ἢ πῶς, ὦ Σώκρατες; Σω. Οὐκ, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ μάντεσι προσχρήσθαι τισι, μαντευομένοις οὐ τέχνη ἀλλὰ τινα δυσχερεῖα φύσεως οὐκ ἀγεννοῦς, λίαν μεμισηκότων τὴν τῆς ἡδονῆς δύναμιν καὶ νενομικότων οὐδὲν ὑγιές, ὥστε καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο αὐτῆς τὸ ἐπαγωγὸν γοήτευμα, οὐχ ἡδονὴν εἶναι κτλ.

Schneider's identification, so far as it goes, has been generally accepted by recent critics; and the parallels are too close to admit of doubt: note in particular γοήτευμα as compared with ἐσκιαγραφημένη. But there is little agreement on the question who these haters of pleasure are, and they have been variously explained as: (1) Antisthenes and the Cynics (Urban ib. die Erwähnungen d. Phil. d. Antisthenes in d. Pl. Schriften p. 28 and Zeller¹ II p. 306 n. 6); (2) "probably Pythagorising friends" of Plato's, "who, adopting a ritual of extreme rigour, distinguished themselves by the violence of their antipathies towards τὰς ἡδονὰς τῶν ἀσχημόνων" (Grote Plato II p. 610 n., and to somewhat the same effect also Prantl in his Translation of the Republic p. 422 n. 311); (3) Democritus and his adherents (Hirzel Unters. zu Cicero's philos. Schrift. I pp. 141—152, and Natorp in Arch. f. Gesch. d. Phil. III pp. 522—528, and in Die Ethika d. Demokritos pp. 164—179). The respectful tone in which Plato, both in the Philebus and in the Republic, mentions the authors of these anti-hedonistic theories does not permit us to suppose that Antisthenes is intended. It is moreover inconsistent with the grossness which pervaded the Cynic philosophy to suppose that they looked upon the unseemly pleasures as delusive and false; nor was Antisthenes in any sense of the term δεινὸς λεγόμενος τὰ περὶ φύσιν.

These reasons, which are to my mind conclusive, are urged by Grote, and supplemented with great ability by Natorp.

I agree with von Arnim, who in his review of Natorp (Gött. gel. Anz. for 1894 p. 889) emphatically rejects the attempted identification of these pleasure-haters with Democritus and his followers. The founder of Hedonism could surely never have totally denied the existence of pleasure (τὸ παράπαν ἡδονὴς οὐ φασιν εἶναι Phil. l.c.); and Plato (in spite of Hirzel l.c. pp. 146 ff.) was not likely to treat the Arch-materialist with so much consideration and respect. Natorp's elaborate comparison of Democritus' ethical fragments with the writings of Plato involves many highly speculative combinations, and the two writers seldom if ever touch one another except in moral and political common-places and maxims for which parallels can readily be quoted from the other remains of pre-Socratic literature.

There are, I think, strong positive reasons for holding, in virtual agreement with Grote, that Plato has in view preachers of the Orphic-Pythagorean moral and religious school.

In the first place, we find other passages in which Plato alludes to this class of moralists as σοφοί. They were Plato's precursors in asserting the doctrine of individual immortality and transmigration; and in the Meno (81 A ff.) Plato refers to them in this connexion by the words ἀκήκουα γὰρ ἀνδρῶν τε καὶ γυναικῶν σοφῶν περὶ τὰ θεῖα πράγματα κτλ. The famous passage of the Gorgias (492 E ff.) where the Orphic-Pythagorean view of the body as a tomb—σῶμα σῆμα—is expounded, begins ὅπερ ἦδη του ἔγωγε καὶ ἤκουσα τῶν σοφῶν, ὡς νῦν ἡμεῖς τέθναμεν, καὶ τὸ μὲν σῶμά ἐστιν ἡμῖν σῆμα κτλ. It is even possible that οἱ σοφοί was a recognised way of describing—sometimes not without irony—the representatives of the Orphic brotherhood. Dieterich in his Nekenia (pp. 124, 133) cites in support of this contention Sophocles El. 62 ἦδη γὰρ εἶδον πολλάκις καὶ τοὺς σοφοὺς | λόγῳ μάτην θνήσκοντας, and Euripides Hcl. 513 f. λόγος γάρ ἐστιν οὐκ ἐμός, σοφῶν δ' ἔπος, | δεινῆς ἀνάγκης οὐδέν ἰσχύειν πλέον. The sages who reappeared after they were supposed to have died—Pythagoras, Zalmoxis, Aristeas etc.—are generally connected with the Orphic cult (Rohde *Psyche*² 11 pp. 28 ff. 90 ff.), and the power of Ἀνάγκη was a characteristic feature in the same creed (Dieterich l.c.). Another place in which σοφοί has the same reference, according to Dieterich, is Aesch. P. V. 936 οἱ προσκυνῶντες τὴν Ἀδράστειαν σοφοί. The goddess Adrasteia plays a large part in the Orphic theology (cf. Thompson on Pl. Phaedr. 248 c), and Aeschylus' line certainly gains additional point if we agree with Dieterich, although in this particular instance I cannot regard the reference as proved. Miss Harrison has supplied me with two other passages to the same effect, one in Eur. Ion 1139 ὡς λέγονσιν οἱ σοφοί, where the allusion is to some numerical measurements according to which a ritual tent has to be built, and another in Eur. Fr. 938 Dindorf καὶ γαῖα μητέρ, Ἐστῖαν δέ σ' οἱ σοφοὶ βροτῶν καλοῦσιν. In the last of these instances οἱ σοφοί undoubtedly means the Pythagoreans; see Pl. Phaedr. 247 A and Thompson ad loc.

Secondly, the conception of the unreality and 'impurity' of bodily pleasure has the closest affinity with the doctrine of the Phaedo. It is implied in the Phaedo, as it is here (οὐδὲ πανοληθής), that the pleasures of sense are not, strictly speaking, pleasures at all (τοῦτο ὃ καλοῦσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἡδὴ, 60 B τὰς ἡδονὰς καλουμένας τὰς τοιάσδε, οἷον σιτίων καὶ ποτίων κτλ. 64 D: cf. also 69 B and 81 B quoted in the notes); and just as sensual pleasure is here declared to be 'impure' (οὐδὲ καθαρά), so also the Phaedo constantly insists on the need of purification (κάθαρσις) from the body and its lusts (66 A—68 B, 69 B, C, 80 E ff., 82 D, 108 B, 114 C). Now it is precisely these and such-like views on sin, the relation of body and soul, etc., which formed the kernel of the Orphic-Pythagorean morality (Rohde l.c. II pp. 121—136, 160—170), and Plato himself does not desire to conceal the source from which he derived his inspiration (see Crat. 400 C and other evidence in Stallbaum-Wohlrab on Phaed. 62 B and Rohde l.c. II pp. 265—295). See also on IX 586 B.

The words δεινοὺς λεγομένους τὰ περὶ φύσιν in the Philebus seem to shew that Plato is there thinking in particular of certain pythagorising Orphics. The Pythagoreans "might well be termed δεινοὶ περὶ φύσιν. They paid much attention to the interpretation of nature, though they did so according to a numerical and geometrical symbolism" (Grote l.c.). The expression 'symbolism' is however incorrect, if—as I think with Burnet Early Greek Phil. pp. 312 ff.—the Pythagorean numbers, at all events in the original form of the theory, were spatial, in which case δεινοὶ τὰ περὶ φύσιν is even more appropriate as a description of the Pythagoreans). In the present passage there is nothing (beyond the parallel with the Philebus) to indicate any special reference to Pythagoreans, although, as Rohde has shewn, the moral and religious teaching of Orphics and Pythagoreans was for all practical purposes the same.

V.

IX 584 E—585 A. In this difficult passage the reading of Paris A and all the best MSS is ὥσπερ πρὸς μέλαν φαῖον ἀποσκοποῦντες ἀπειρία λευκοῦ, καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω λύπην ἀφορῶντες ἀπειρία ἡδονῆς ἀπατῶνται;

In the text I have followed Schneider in reading, with q and Flor. U, ὥσπερ <δε> instead of ὥσπερ, and Schleiermacher in printing τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην for πρὸς τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω λύπην, which is in all the MSS.

I will deal first with ὥσπερ—ἀπειρία λευκοῦ. The structure of the clause proves that it is mainly intended to balance and illustrate καὶ—ἀπειρία ἡδονῆς. That being the case, is it possible to dispense with δε after ὥσπερ, for which the authority is very slight?

In his In Plat. Pol. quaest. philol. I pp. 46 ff. Neukirch remarks "verba ὥσπερ πρὸς—λευκοῦ, describentia eos, quibuscum illi, de quibus in antecedentibus sermo est, comparantur, ita accedunt, quasi absolvant comparationem; quam ut magis perspicuam et perfectam exhibeat, addit praeterea scriptor καὶ πρὸς—ἀπατῶνται, nullam iam habens rationem eorum, quae ante ὥσπερ posita sunt," comparing (for the use of ὥσπερ) III 413 D, IV 432 D, E, VIII 557 C, X 605 B, 611 C, D and Phaed. 60 B—61 A. Hermann also agrees with Neukirch in excluding δέ. It is certainly true that ὥσπερ cum asyndeto may be thus used (see on VI 497 B), but inasmuch as ἀπατώνται furnishes the antithesis to σφόδρα μὲν οἴονται, we cannot here dispense with δέ. With Schneider and the other editors, I am therefore reluctantly obliged to desert the best mss in this passage.

There is less unanimity among critics about καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω λύπην. As the words stand in the mss, Painlessness is equated with Black, Pain with Grey, and Pleasure with White. In point of fact, however, Black should correspond to Pain, and Grey to Painlessness. The second hand in γ tried to avoid the difficulty by advising the transposition of μέλαν and φαῖον, and so Jowett translates, "they, not knowing pleasure, err in contrasting pain with the absence of pain, which is like contrasting black with grey instead of white" etc. But ἀπειρία λευκοῦ is not 'instead of white'; and, as Schneider observed, *γ*² is certainly wrong, for however ignorant you are of white, you do not mistake black when contrasted with grey. Schneider himself, followed by Stallbaum and the other editors, is content to obey the mss "quia per codices mutare non licet." His explanation, like that of Stallbaum ("res eodem redit, sive dolor iuxta doloris vacuitatem, sive doloris vacuitas iuxta dolorem spectari dicatur"), is fatal to the balance of the two clauses ὥσπερ—λευκοῦ and καὶ—ἡδονῆς: nor is it permissible, with the Oxford editors, to defend the ms reading by calling that a chiasmus which in reality involves an erroneous identification.

For these reasons, the mss are, I believe, wrong. There is little to choose between Schleiermacher's two conjectures τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην and πρὸς λύπην οὕτω τὸ ἄλυπον, the second of which was afterwards repeated by W. H. Thompson (J. of Ph. v p. 218). With Richards (Cl. Rev. VIII p. 294), I rather prefer the first, chiefly on account of the chiasmus.

VI.

IX 585 C. Ἡ οὖν αἰὲ ὁμοίου οὐσία οὐσίας τι μᾶλλον ἢ ἐπιστήμης μετέχει; Οὐδαμῶς. Τί δ'; ἀληθείας; Οὐδὲ τοῦτο. Εἰ δὲ ἀληθείας ἦττον, οὐ καὶ οὐσίας; Ἀνάγκη κτλ.

Such is the text of all the best mss. There is nothing in any of the others to indicate the presence of corruption, for the variants μὴ αἰὲ ὁμοίων (v Flor. R) and τοῦ μηδέποτε ὁμοίου (γ and a Florentine ms) are obviously only attempts at emendation.

The traditional reading is maintained by Schneider and the Oxford editors. On grammatical grounds it is clear (1) that Τί δ'; ἀληθείας; Οὐδὲ τοῦτο stands for Τί δ'; <ἢ αἰὲ ὁμοίου οὐσία> ἀληθείας <τι μᾶλλον ἢ ἐπιστήμης μετέχει>; Οὐδὲ τοῦτο: also (2) that Εἰ δὲ ἀληθείας ἦττον stands for Εἰ δὲ ἀληθείας ἦττον <μετέχει ἢ αἰὲ ὁμοίου οὐσία>. We have no right (with Schneider) to explain Τί δ' ἀληθείας as Τί δ', <ἦ> ἀληθείας, or to understand only <μετέχει τι> alter εἰ δὲ ἀληθείας ἦττον.

Jowett and Campbell do not explain the construction, but apparently regard the introduction of ἐπιστήμη as otiose and irrelevant. "For the sake of his" (Plato's) "argument it would have been sufficient to obtain the admission that truth and essence go together: that the pleasures of the body, being less true, are also less real." It appears to me quite clear that the mention of ἐπιστήμη plays an important part in the argument. Surely it must refer to, and be interpreted by, ἐπιστήμης already mentioned in τὸ δόξης τε ἀληθοῦς εἶδος καὶ ἐπιστήμης κτλ.

Is it possible to reconcile the grammatical construction of the MS text with such an interpretation of ἐπιστήμης? Let us try.

The Being of the ever-like, as appears from Glauco's πολὸν διαφέρει τὸ τοῦ ἀεὶ ὁμοίου taken in connexion with the previous sentence, has more Being and more Truth, than the Being of the never-like has. If therefore the Being of the ever-like has as much part in Knowledge as it has in Being and in Truth (ἡ οὖν—Οὐδὲ τοῦτο), we may infer (since μετοχή is reciprocal) that Knowledge also has more part in Being and in Truth than has the Being of the never-like. (The inference is just, but Plato does not draw it, and his way of expressing himself certainly does not invite us to do so. If we could make ἡ ἐπιστήμης = ἡ ἐπιστήμης οὐσία, which is barely possible, or if we read ἡ < ἡ > ἐπιστήμης sc. οὐσία, or ἐπιστήμη instead of ἐπιστήμης, this explanation becomes easier in itself, and the inference is also easier to draw.) But the words εἰ δὲ ἀληθείας ἦττον, οὐ καὶ οὐσίας; present an insuperable difficulty. They cannot be made to suit with this interpretation unless we make the subject of ἦττον < μετέχει > either (a) ἐπιστήμη (or ἡ ἐπιστήμης οὐσία), or else (b) τὸ μηδέποτε ὁμοιον (or τὰ οἶον σίτον κτλ.); and the only possible grammatical subject, so far as I can see, is ἡ ἀεὶ ὁμοίου οὐσία.

For these and other reasons, some of which are urged by Vermehren Plat. Stud. pp. 114 ff., the text must, I fear, be pronounced corrupt.

The emendation which I have ventured to print supposes that the error lies in the subject of μετέχει. By reading ἀεὶ ἀνομοίου (= μηδέποτε ὁμοίου) instead of ἀεὶ ὁμοίου, and ἡ ἐπιστήμης sc. οὐσία instead of ἐπιστήμης, it is possible to introduce the necessary contrast in respect of Being and Truth between the never-like (to which such γένη as food etc. belong), and Knowledge, which belongs to the ever-like. R. G. Bury's emendation proceeds upon essentially the same principle. After an acute analysis of this passage (Cl. Rev. xiii pp. 289 ff.) he proposes to write: ἡ οὖν ἀεὶ ὁμοίου σιτία μᾶλλον ἢ ἐπιστήμη μετέχει; This suggestion regarded in itself is more attractive than that which I have adopted: for it contrasts the particular, instead of the general, with the particular, and thus makes ὅλως doubly appropriate. But on the one hand, throughout the whole of this argument Plato uses the word μετέχειν only in connexion with Being and Truth: whereas Bury connects it with the 'ever-like'; and on the other hand it is extremely unlikely that ἡ οὖν ἀεὶ ὁμοίου σιτία—ἐπιστήμη should ever have been corrupted into ἡ οὖν ἀεὶ ὁμοίου οὐσία οὐσίας τι—ἐπιστήμης. Bury's explanation of the error involves one dittography and four subsequent adaptations or 'corrections.' If we were dealing only with an emended MS like g, such a restoration might be possible—probable it could not even then be called: but I doubt if there is a single instance in which it can be shewn that Paris A has suffered to this extent in this particular way. I should however be only too glad to accept a convincing emendation on the lines indicated by Bury, and I have spent no small amount of time in trying to devise one, without attaining any more satisfactory result than that which he has reached. Possibly αἰὶ ὁμοίου has replaced a word denoting some particular kind of food.

Meantime the reading given in the text, though less pointed, appears to me less improbable. αἰὲ ἀνομοίου, which gives the same sense as q's τοῦ μηδέποτε ὁμοίου, might readily pass into αἰὲ ὁμοίου under the influence of αἰὲ ὁμοίου just before; and the addition of <ῆ> after ῆ is scarcely a change.

The other conjectures are these: (1) ἡ οὖν ἀνομοίου οὐσία οὐσίας τι μᾶλλον ῆ ἐπιστήμης μετέχει; (Hermann, followed by Müller): (2) ἡ δὲ τοῦ ἀνομοίου κτλ.; (Stallbaum, who adds "nolumus tamen in re incerta quidquam in oratione Platonis, qualem codd. plurimi optimique exhibent, immutare"): (3) ἡ γοῦν ἀνόμοιος οὐσία ὁμοίας τι μᾶλλον ἐπιστήμης μετέχει; "Hat denn zum Wenigsten das ungleiche Wesen einen grösseren Antheil am Wissen als das gleiche? Keineswegs. Und wie, an der Wahrheit? Auch das nicht. Wenn aber einen minderen an der Wahrheit, weil am Wissen, dann nicht auch am Sein? Nothwendig" (Vermehren l.c.). (4) Madvig (and after him Baiter) postulates an extensive lacuna. He first ejects καὶ ἀληθείας just before, and after writing with Ast τὸ <τοῦ> μηδέποτε ὁμοίου, continues as follows: 'Ἡ οὖν <τοῦ> αἰὲ ὁμοίου οὐσία οὐσίας τι μᾶλλον ῆ ἐπιστήμης μετέχει; Οὐδαμῶς. Τί δ', ἀληθείας; Οὐδὲ τοῦτο. <Ἡ δὲ τοῦ ἀνομοίου οὐκ ἐπιστήμης ῆττον μετέχει ῆ ἡ τοῦ ὁμοίου; Πῶς γάρ οὔ; Εἰ δ' ἐπιστήμης, καὶ ἀληθείας; Καὶ τοῦτο.> The possibility of a lacuna must be allowed, as well as the counter-possibility that ἡ οὖν—ἀνάγκη is a clumsy attempt (modelled perhaps on Theaet. 186 c, d) on the part of some scribe to shew that Being and Truth go together, so that where there is less of the one, there is also less of the other; but neither solution is probable. It will be observed that all these attempts at correction agree in working in ἀνόμοιον (in some form or other) as the subject to μετέχει, although they are, I think, wrong in leaving ἐπιστήμης as it stands. It may be added that the brief account of Plato's third argument in Proclus Comment. 11 p. 82 ed. Kroll is of no use in trying to interpret or emend this difficult sentence.

I.

I. Καὶ μὴν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πολλὰ μὲν καὶ ἄλλα περὶ αὐτῆς ἐννοῶ, 59
ὥς παντὸς ἄρα μᾶλλον ὀρθῶς φέκίζομεν τὴν πόλιν, οὐχ ἥκιστα δὲ

595 A—597 E On a retrospect of our city, says Socrates, we can now see even more clearly than before that we did right in excluding imitative Poetry. What is Imitation? Examine it in the light of the Ideas, and you will find that it is the production of images or appearances which are third in order from Reality and Truth. There are, for example, three beds: (1) that which is in Nature, made, as we may say, by God: (2) that which the carpenter manufactures: (3) that which is the product of the painter's art. The first is, and must be, one: for there cannot be two Ideas of bed. We have thus two makers in connexion with the notion of bed: (1) a Nature-maker (φύσιουργός), who is God; (2) a manufacturer (δημιουργός), viz. the carpenter. There is also (3) an imitator, i.e. the painter. Imitation is therefore concerned with a product third in sequence from Nature, and the tragic poet, among other imitators, is third from Royalty and Truth.

595 A ff. Book X falls into two divisions, the first (595 A—608 B) dealing with Poetry, the second (608 C—621 D) with Immortality and the rewards of Justice both here and hereafter. The second half of the Book forms a welcome supplement to Plato's treatment of the main thesis of the Republic (see on 608 C); but the first division is of the nature of an episode, and might have been omitted without injury to the artistic unity of the dialogue (cf. Hirmer Entst. u. Komp. d. pl. Pol. p. 623). It is in no sense, as supposed by Schleiermacher (Einleitung p. 55) and apparently also by Hirzel (der Dialog I p. 237 n.), a fulfilment of the promise held out in III 392 C; nor ought we to construe ὥς δὲ καὶ πλεῖω ἐτι τοῦτων III 394 D as a hint that the subject of Poetry is to be resumed: see note ad

loc. Why then is the episode introduced at all? The chorizontists (such as Siebeck Unters. zur Phil. d. Griech. pp. 142 ff., Pfeleiderer zur Lösung etc. p. 34 and Brandt zur Entwickl. d. Pl. Lehre d. Seelenteilen p. 27), relying partly on the tone of the exordium, partly on ἀπολελογήσθω 607 B, assert that Plato is replying to certain comic poets (Pfeleiderer), or to Antisthenes (Brandt), who had presumably fallen foul of Plato's treatment of Poetry in Books II and III. Cf. also Zeller⁴ II p. 556 n. 2. But apart altogether from the question whether the Republic was issued en bloc or piecemeal, there is no actual evidence to support the presumption on which this theory rests (cf. 598 D, 607 B nn.). The Platonic dialogue, like actual conversation, is at liberty to recall, modify, and expand the results of a discussion apparently finished (cf. Hirzel l.c. pp. 228—230, 236); and we have already had an incidental recurrence to the subject of Poetry in VIII 568 A—D. Granted that Plato wished to justify his exclusion of the Muses by metaphysical and psychological as well as moral and paedagogic arguments, the beginning of Book X is his best, and indeed, as Hirmer shews (l.c. p. 625), his only opportunity: see on 595 B. He may well have wished to do so: for his dethronement of the great educator of Greece (606 E) would be sure to arouse wide-spread hostility, and Plato almost seems to feel that it needs further justification even to himself (595 B n.). Cf. Hirmer l.c. pp. 624—628 and see also on 598 D, 607 B.

The student will find an excellent and exhaustive account of Plato's theory of Aesthetics in Walter Gesch. d. Aesthetik im Altertum (1893) pp. 168—476. His attitude towards Poetry and Poets is ἐνθυμηθεῖς περὶ ποιήσεως λέγω. Τὸ ποῖον; ἔφη. Τὸ μηδαμῇ παραδέχεσθαι αὐτῆς ὅση μιμητική. παντὸς γὰρ μᾶλλον οὐ B παραδεκτέα νῦν καὶ ἐναργέστερον, ὥς ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ, φαίνεται, ἐπειδὴ 5 χωρὶς ἕκαστα διήρηται τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς εἶδη. Πῶς λέγεις; Ὡς μὲν πρὸς ὑμᾶς εἰρῆσθαι—οὐ γὰρ μου κατερεῖτε πρὸς τοὺς τῆς τραγωδίας ποιητὰς καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἅπαντας τοὺς μιμητικούς—λῶβῃ ἔοικεν εἶναι πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα τῆς τῶν ἀκούοντων διανοίας, ὅσοι μὴ ἔχουσι φάρμακον τὸ εἰδέναι αὐτὰ οἷα τυγχάνει ὄντα. Πῇ 10 δὴ, ἔφη, διανοούμενος λέγεις; Ῥητέον, ἦν δ' ἐγὼ· καίτοι φιλία γέ

5. παραδεκτέα A¹II: παραδεκτέον corr. A².

very fully discussed by Reber Platon u. die Poesie (1864), Heine de rat. quae Platon cum poet. Gr. intercedit, etc. (1880), and more recently by Finsler Platon u. die Arist. Poetik (1900) and Stählin Die Stellung d. Poesie in d. plat. Phil. (1901). Following on the path marked out by Belger in his dissertation de Arist. etiam in arte poetica Platonis discip. (1872), Finsler has succeeded in shewing that Aristotle's debt to Plato in his Theory of Poetry is far greater than is commonly supposed: and although the treatment of Poetry in Book x of the Republic must be confessed to be inadequate and unjust, Plato himself, as Walter and Stählin have recognised, furnishes us elsewhere with the materials for constructing a truer and more generous theory. See also on 598 E. It may be added that a study of the Poetics of Aristotle side by side with 595 A—608 B will enable the student to understand both Plato and Aristotle better than if he confines himself to either alone. See also Butcher *Aristotle's Theory of Poetry and Fine Art*², pp. 115 ff.

595 A 3 ἐνθυμηθεῖς περὶ ποιήσεως.
 II 377 B—III 403 C.

τὸ μηδαμῇ—μιμητική. See III 394 B—398 B. Plato speaks as if he had tabooed all mimetic poetry, but it is clear from III 396 E compared with 397 D, 398 B and 401 B—402 C that he did not condemn poetic and artistic imitation as such, but would have admitted it where the model imitated was good. See also on 595 C, 607 A, 608 A infra.

595 B 5 ἐπειδὴ—εἶδη: viz. in Book IV and also throughout VIII and IX. The psychological theory of these books is laid under contribution in 602 C ff.: see note ad loc. It may seem strange that Plato makes no reference to the metaphysical doctrine of V—VII, since he derives his first argument (596 A—601 B) from the theory of Ideas: but it was unnecessary for him to refer to it in this connexion, because the theory is itself expressly re-enunciated (εἶδος γὰρ που κτλ. 596 A) before the argument begins.

6 ὥς—εἰρῆσθαι: 'between ourselves.'
 Cf. IV 430 E n.

10 αὐτὰ: viz. πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα, tragedy and other forms of μιμητική ποίησις: not (as Schleiermacher) "wie sich die Dinge in der Wirklichkeit verhalten." A knowledge of the real character of dramatic Poetry is the only antidote against its evil influence. On τυγχάνει ὄντα see I 337 B n.

11 καίτοι φιλία γε—λέγειν. Plato speaks with real feeling: no one who had so much of the poet in himself could be insensible to Homer's charm, and nearly every dialogue of Plato bears evidence of the affectionate admiration in which he held the 'first of tragic poets.' See Heine de rat. quae Platon cum poetis Graec. intercedit pp. 8—15. The ancients classed Plato and Homer together: δύο γὰρ αὐτὰ ψυχὰι λέγονται γενέσθαι παναρμόνιοι, says Olympiodorus (viz. Pl. 6): and Longinus remarks that of all Greek writers Plato was Ὁμηρικώτατος—ἀπὸ τοῦ Ὁμηρικοῦ κέλινου νάματος εἰς αὐτὸν μυρίας ὄσας παρατροπὰς ἀποχευευσάμενος (περὶ ὕψους 13. 3). See also the admirable remarks on Plato's imitation of Homer in James Geddes's essay On the Composition and Manner of Writing of the Ancients pp. 180—200, and Proclus' much less sound and instructive article ὅτι διὰ πάσης τῆς ἐαυτοῦ συγγραφῆς Ὁμήρου ζηλωτής ἐστίν ὁ Πλάτων ταῖς τε λεκτικαῖς ἀρεταῖς καὶ ταῖς πραγματικαῖς in his in τίς με καὶ αἰδῶς ἐκ παιδὸς ἔχουσα περὶ Ὀμήρου ἀποκωλύει λέγειν.

 ἔοικε ἰ μὲν γὰρ τῶν καλῶν ἀπάντων τούτων τῶν τραγικῶν πρῶτος C διδάσκαλός τε καὶ ἡγεμὼν γενέσθαι. ἀλλ' οὐ γὰρ πρό γε τῆς 15 ἀληθείας τιμητέος ἀνὴρ, ἀλλ', ὃ λέγω, ῥητέον. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.
 Ἄκουε δὴ, μᾶλλον δὲ ἀποκρίνου. Ἐρώτα. Μίμησιν ὅλως ἔχοις ἂν μοι εἰπεῖν ὃ τί ποτ' ἐστίν; οὐδὲ γὰρ τοι αὐτὸς πάνυ τι ξυννοῶ, τί βούλεται εἶναι. Ἡ που ἄρ', ἔφη, ἐγὼ συννοήσω. Οὐδέν γε, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἄτοπον, ἐπεὶ πολλὰ τοι ὀξύτερον βλεπόντων ἀμ|βλύ- 596

15. ἀλλ' ὁ A²Π: fortasse ἀλλὰ A¹.

rempr. Kroll 1 pp. 163—177. There is a touch of something like filial love and piety in what Plato says of Homer in this passage, and we may well believe that he did not part company with the friend of his childhood without pain. From the way in which Plato here speaks, it looks as if he feared that his heart might after all get the better of his head (cf. infra 605 C, D, 606 B, 607 C ff.), and consequently tried by new and deeper arguments to provide an 'antidote' (φάρμακον, or ἐπωδή 608 A) for himself as well as others (so also Hirmer l.c. p. 626).

595 C 13. τῶν καλῶν κτλ. καλῶν is of course ironical. For the sense cf. 598 D, 602 B, 607 A, Theaet. 152 E οἱ ἄκροι τῆς ποιήσεως ἐκατέρας, κωμωδίας μὲν Ἐπίχαρμος, τραγωδίας δὲ Ὀμηρος and ib. 153 A, with Arist. Poet. 4. 1448^b 35 ff., 5. 1449^b 16 ff. It will be remembered that Aeschylus called his dramas τεμάχη τῶν Ὀμήρου μεγάλων δειπνῶν (Athen. VIII 347 E). Herwerden, quite without reason, so far as I can see, brackets τῶν τραγικῶν. It is unkind of Aristotle to purloin this sentiment in order to introduce his attack on Plato's theory of Ideas in Eth. Nic. I 4. 1096^a 11 ff., and Plato might well complain, in the words of Aeschylus, τὰδ' οὐχ ὑπ' ἄλλων, ἀλλὰ τοῖς αὐτῶν περὶ τοῖς. To read ἀνὴρ for ἀνὴρ, as has been proposed, would make a general statement particular, and spoil the antithesis between ἀνὴρ and ἀληθείας. The reference in δ λέγω is to ῥητέον in line 11 above: cf. VII 541 B.

16. μίμησιν κτλ. In III 392 C ff., μίμησις, in its application to Poetry, was regarded primarily as a form of style or λέξις, viz. the imitative or dramatic (the narrative, and in this sense it included tragedy, comedy, and the strictly dramatic parts of epic and other poetry (394 C). But even in Book III μίμησις and its cognate notions have sometimes a wider application (e.g. 401 B—402 C). The following discussion tries to define the essential meaning of μίμησις in general by its relation to the Theory of Ideas. It should be noted that Poetry and Art were admitted to be μιμήσεις in Plato's day: cf. Lysis 668 B τοῦτό γε πᾶς ἂν ὁμολογοῖ περὶ τῆς μουσικῆς, ὅτι πάντα τὰ περὶ αὐτῇ ἐστὶ ποιήματα μίμησις τε καὶ ἀπεικασία, with Xen. Mem. III 10. 1—8, Plato Crat. 424 D, 430 B (τὰ ὑφ' ἡγεμονίας — μιμήματα — πραγμάτων τινῶν, 434 A, Soph. 266 D), Prot. 312 D, Critias 107 B et al. See also on III 392 C and cf. Stählin Poesie in d. plat. Phil. p. 25. On the contrast between Plato's view of Imitation in Book X and that of Aristotle in his Poetics, see Butcher *Theory of Poetry*² etc. pp. 115—152. Walter has justly remarked (Gesch. d. Aesthetik im Altertum p. 442) that μίμησις, with its question-begging connotation, was in many ways an unfortunate word by which to describe the essence of Art, though in view of what Aristotle made of it, I should not go so far as to say that 'Imitation is an unproductive principle, and dries up aesthetic life' (ib.). If Poetry, and not Painting and Statuary, had determined the Greek view of Art, we should probably hear more of Creation (ποίησις), and less of Imitation, in ancient discussions on aesthetics; and it is difficult not to regret that Plato did not select a new and more fruitful point of view. See also on 598 A, B.

19. ἐπεὶ πολλὰ κτλ. is neither arrogant nor rude, if we realise the situation: see on VII 532 E f.

τερον ὁρῶντες πρότεροι εἶδον. Ἔστιν, ἔφη, οὕτως· ἀλλὰ σοῦ παρόντος οὐδ' ἂν προθυμηθῆναι οἷός τε εἶην εἰπεῖν, εἴ τί μοι καταφαίνεται, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς ὅρα. Βούλει οὖν ἐνθένδε ἀρξώμεθα ἐπισκοποῦντες, ἐκ τῆς εἰωθυίας μεθόδου; εἶδος γάρ που τι ἐν 5 ἑκάστοις εἰώθαμεν τίθεσθαι περὶ ἕκαστα τὰ πολλά, οἷς ταυτὸν ὄνομα ἐπιφέρομεν. ἢ οὐ μανθάνεις; Μανθάνω. Θῶμεν δὲ καὶ νῦν ὃ τι βούλει τῶν πολλῶν. οἷον, εἰ θέλεις, πολλαὶ που εἰσι

4. ἀρξώμεθα A²II: ἀρξόμεθα A¹.

596 A 5 ἐκ τῆς εἰωθυίας μεθόδου κτλ. As in V 476 A (see note ad loc.), so here, Plato does not try to prove the Ideal Theory, but treats Glauco as already a loyal Platonist. The account which Plato here gives of his Ideas has been widely canvassed from many different points of view. Bosanquet (Companion pp. 381 ff.) appears to me to err by interpreting it throughout only in terms of modern life and thought. Others refuse to regard it as serious, in view of the inherent difficulties, and because of Aristotle's remark διὸ δὴ οὐ κακῶς ὁ Πλάτων ἔφη ὅτι εἶδη ἔστιν ὅποσα φύσει Met. A 4. 1070^a 18: cf. also A 991^b 3 ff. with Bonitz's note. Others, again, like Krohn (Pl. St. pp. 242 ff.), hold that the Ideal Theory in Bk X is inconsistent with the theory expounded in V—VII, where we do not hear of Ideas corresponding to concrete and artificial objects, but only of Ideas of qualities (such as Justice) and the like. In reply to the last school of critics, we may point out that Plato is not bound to give an exhaustive account of the Ideal theory whenever he has occasion to make use of it. On the previous occasion he confined himself to Ideas of the virtues etc., because they only were relevant to his immediate purpose (see on V 476 A and cf. Grimmelt de resp. Pl. comp. et univ. pp. 81 ff., Hirmer l.c. pp. 646 ff. and Dümmler zur Comp. d. Pl. St. p. 14), and it is exactly the same reason which makes him cite Ideas of concrete and artificial objects in Book X. The view that Plato should not be taken seriously is as old as Proclus, who (in Tim. 104 F) observes οὐ γὰρ κατὰ τινὰς ἰδέας ὁ τεχνίτης ποιεῖ ἃ ποιεῖ, εἰ καὶ δοκεῖ τοῦτο λέγειν ὁ ἐν Πολιτείᾳ Σωκράτης, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖ μὲν τὰ εἰρημένα παραδείγματος εἶρητα· χάριν καὶ οὐ περὶ αὐτῶν τῶν ιδεῶν, but, apart from their considerations, the recurrence of the same form of the theory in other dialogues (see on 596 B, C) justifies us in taking Plato here also at his word. The history of the controversy is ably reviewed by Dr Beckmann (Nim Plato artefactorum ideas statuerit, Bonn 1889), with whom and with Zeller¹ II pp. 666, 701 al. I agree in believing this passage to be an authoritative exposition of the Ideal theory on one of its many sides.

εἶδος γάρ που κτλ.: 'for we are, as you know, in the habit of assuming a certain idea—always one idea—in connexion with each group of particulars to which we apply the same name': lit. 'an Idea, one each' i.e. each being one. There cannot be two or more Ideas of Bed for example: cf. 597 C. Unnecessary trouble has been raised about the translation of this sentence by Krohn (Pl. St. p. 240), whose version "in Bezug auf jedes der vielen Dinge nehmen wir je eine Einheit als εἶδος τι an" is both strained and inaccurate. For the statement itself cf. V 476 A, 479 A, B, E, 480 A, VI 493 E and VII 507 B n. Plato might have written any of the foregoing passages without believing in Ideas of anything beyond qualities and attributes: but that he did believe in other Ideas also is evident not only from Book X, but also from Phil. 15 A, 16 C, D and many other places quoted by Zeller¹ II p. 701 n. 1.

8 πολλαὶ που εἰσι κλῖναι κτλ. Why does Plato select examples of artificial objects, when the Painter can equally well paint the features of Nature, as is virtually allowed in C? One reason is that otherwise he could not have constructed the descending scale θεός, κλινοποιός, ζωγράφος 597 B ff. Had he selected e.g. mountains, it would be difficult to specify the middle term. Moreover in Soph. 266 B ff. we have a distinction drawn between θεῖα and ἀνθρωπίνη εἰδωλοποικῆ, the first producing likenesses of natural objects by natural agencies, the κλίνειν¹ καὶ τράπεζαι. Πῶς δ' οὐ; Ἀλλὰ ἰδέαι γέ που περὶ B 10 ταῦτα τὰ σκεύη δύο, μία μὲν κλίνης, μία δὲ τραπέζης. Ναί.

 Οὐκοῦν καὶ εἰώθαμεν λέγειν, ὅτι ὁ δημιουργὸς ἐκατέρου τοῦ σκεύους πρὸς τὴν ἰδέαν βλέπων οὕτω ποιεῖ ὁ μὲν τὰς κλίνας, ὁ δὲ τὰς τραπέζας, αἷς ἡμεῖς χρῶμεθα, καὶ τᾶλλα κατὰ ταῦτά; οὐ γάρ που τὴν γε ἰδέαν αὐτὴν δημιουργεῖ οὐδεὶς τῶν δημιουργῶν.¹ πῶς γάρ; C 15 Οὐδαμῶς. Ἀλλ' ὅρα δὴ καὶ τόνδε τίνα καλεῖς τὸν δημιουργόν.
 Τὸν ποῖον; Ὃς πάντα ποιεῖ, ὅσαπερ εἰς ἕκαστος τῶν χειροτεχνῶν.
 Δεινὸν τίνα λέγεις καὶ θαυμαστὸν ἄνδρα. Οὕτω γε, ἀλλὰ τάχα

15. τόνδε τίνα II: τὸν δέ τίνα (sic) A. 17. τάχα A²Ξ: ταῦτα Π q et fortasse A¹.

second likenesses of artificial objects by artificial means, and Painting is there also classed under the second head: τί δὲ τὴν ἡμετέραν τέχνην; ἄρ' οὐκ αὐτὴν μὲν οἰκίαν οἰκοδομικὴ φήσομεν ποιεῖν, γραφικὴ δὲ τιν' ἑτέραν, ὅσον ὄναρ ἀνθρώπινον ἐργηγορῶσιν ἀπειργασμένην; (266 C). Inasmuch as σκεναστά are elsewhere credited with less reality than φυτεῦτά (see on VII 532 B, C iii.), the choice of these examples is also specially appropriate to Plato's main object, that is to say, the depreciation of imitative art.

596 B 9 ἀλλὰ ἰδέαι κτλ. For ideas of σκεναστά cf. especially Crat. 389 A—390 A, a passage which forms an admirable commentary on this. The anecdote about Plato and Diogenes in D. L. VI 53 (Πλάτωνος περὶ ἰδεῶν διαλεγομένου, καὶ ὀνομάζοντος τραπέζοτητα καὶ κυσθήτητα κτλ.) is pointless unless Plato believed in εἶδη τῶν σκευαστῶν.

II οὐκοῦν—κατὰ ταῦτά. Cf. Crat. 389 A ff. ποῖ βλέπων ὁ τέκτων τὴν κερκίδα ποιεῖ; ἄρ' οὐ πρὸς τοιοῦτόν τι ὁ πέφυκε κερκίζειν; Πάνυ γε. Τί δέ; ἂν καταγῇ αὐτῷ ἡ κερκὶς ποιοῦντι, πότερον πάλιν ποιήσει ἄλλην πρὸς τὴν καταγνῆαν βλέπων, ἢ πρὸς ἐκεῖνο τὸ εἶδος, πρὸς ὅπερ καὶ ἦν κατέαξεν ἐπολεῖ; Πρὸς ἐκεῖνο, ἔμοιγε δοκεῖ. Οὐκοῦν ἐκεῖνο δικαιοῦται' ἂν αὐτὸ δ' ἔστι κερκὶς καλέσαιμεν; Ἔμοιγε δοκεῖ. The Idea is conceived as a παράδειγμα: cf. VI 500 E—501 C and see on V 476 D. Borrowing the ontology of the Philebus, we might say that the carpenter has an ἄπειρον of wood, into which he introduces πέρας after the model of the Idea of Bed or αἰτία, thereby manufacturing a μυκτὸν or material bed (Schmitt die Verschiedenheit d. Ideenlehre in Pl. Rep. u. Phil. p. 25 n. 68). We are not entitled (in view of 597 B and the phraseology of the present passage) to take ἰδέαν merely as the plan or form of bed in the mind of the carpenter: the Ideas of σκεναστά must be credited with the same attributes—transcendence, self-existence, etc.—as appertain to those of abstract qualities and φυτεῦτά (see on V 476 A), although the difficulties which such a view involves are undeniably greater in the one case than in the other. If we put ourselves in Plato's position—and Socrates is here speaking as one Platonist to another (εἰώθαμεν λέγειν)—it becomes correct to say that the carpenter is looking at the Idea rather than at his own νόημα, for the νόημα is nought apart from its object, the νοητόν (cf. V 476 E n.), i.e. the self-existent Idea of Bed, without which all the νοήματα in the world would be powerless to generate a bed because it is the αὐτὸ δ' ἔστι κλίνη, and no mere νόημα, which is the true and essential cause of all material κλίναι. See also on 597 B.

596 C 15 καὶ τόνδε—δημιουργόν: i.e. καὶ τόνδε τὸν δημιουργόν τίνα καλεῖς, sc. as well as the δημιουργὸς ἐκατέρου τοῦ σκεύους. Baier ought not to have printed Vernehen's pointless conjecture καὶ τόνδε τινὰ καλεῖς τῶν δημιουργῶν (Pl. Stud. p. 118): for Plato is leading up to 597 B ζωγράφος δὴ, κλινopoῖς, θεός, τρεῖς οὗτοι ἐπιστάται τρισὶν εἶδεσι κινῶν, and he again calls the painter a δημιουργός in D and E: so also χειροτέχνης just below.

16 δς—χειροτεχνῶν. Cf. Soph. 233 E—234 c, where the same conception is worked out in almost exactly the same way.

17 τάχα here means 'soon,' and not 'perhaps': cf. with Schneider Crat. 410 E.

μᾶλλον φήσεις. ὁ αὐτὸς γὰρ οὗτος χειροτέχνης οὐ μόνον πάντα οἶός τε σκεύη ποιῆσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἐκ τῆς γῆς φυόμενα ἅπαντα ποιεῖ καὶ ζῶα πάντα ἐργάζεται, τὰ τε ἄλλα καὶ ἑαυτόν, καὶ πρὸς 20 τούτοις γῆν καὶ οὐρανὸν καὶ θεοὺς καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ τὰ ἐν Ἄιδου ὑπὸ γῆς ἅπαντα ἐργάζεται. Πάνυ θαυμαστόν, ἔφη, λέγεις σοφιστήν. Ἀπιστεῖς; ἦν δ' ἐγώ. καὶ μοι εἰπέ, τὸ παράπαν οὐκ ἂν σοι δοκεῖ εἶναι τοιοῦτος δημιουργός, ἢ τινὶ μὲν τρόπον γενέσθαι ἂν τούτων ἁπάντων ποιητής, τινὶ δὲ οὐκ ἂν; ἢ οὐκ 25 αἰσθάνει, ὅτι καὶ αὐτὸς οἶός τ' εἴης πάντα ταῦτα ποιῆσαι τρόπον γέ τι; Καὶ τίς, ἔφη, ὁ τρόπος οὗτος; Οὐ χαλεπός, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἀλλὰ πολλαχῇ καὶ ταχὺ δημιουργούμενος· τάχιστα δέ που, εἰ θέλεις λαβὼν κάτοπτρον περιφέρειν πανταχῇ· ταχὺ μὲν ἥλιον 30 ποιήσεις καὶ τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, ταχὺ δὲ γῆν, ταχὺ δὲ σαντόν τε 30 καὶ τᾶλλα ζῶα καὶ σκεύη καὶ φυτὰ καὶ πάντα ὅσα νῦν δὴ ἐλέγετο. Naί, ἔφη, φαινόμενα, οὐ μέντοι ὄντα γέ που τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. Καλῶς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ εἰς δέον ἔρχει τῷ λόγῳ. τῶν τοιούτων γάρ, οἶμαι, δημιουργῶν καὶ ὁ ζωγράφος ἐστίν. ἢ γάρ; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Ἀλλὰ

21. πάντα A¹Π: punctis notavit A².

20 καὶ ἑαυτόν presents no difficulty: cf. ταχὺ δὲ σαντόν in E below. It is difficult to imagine why Liebholt proposed τὰ κατ' ἐνιαυτόν (Philolog. for 1880 p. 168). Perhaps he thought the δημιουργός was ὁ θεός, an extraordinary error, which Peipers and others (see Zeller⁴ II p. 711 n. 4) perpetrated, making God his own creator, and drawing some profound and far-reaching metaphysical lessons from their mistake.

καὶ πρὸς τούτοις κτλ. Soph. l.c. καὶ πρὸς γε θαλάττης [καὶ γῆς] καὶ οὐρανοῦ καὶ θεῶν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ξυμπάντων. The words in brackets occur only in E, and were possibly introduced from this passage.

21 πάντα has two (not, as Baier asserts, five) dots over it in A, but is in all the MSS and should not (with Baier) be bracketed. It is important, in view of 598 C ff., to insist that there is nothing which the Painter and Poet cannot 'make': hence the emphasis.

22 ἐν Ἄιδου should also of course be kept, though cancelled by Herwerden. Polygnotus' famous picture of τὰ ἐν Ἄιδου at Delphi may serve as an illustration (Paus. x 28—31).

596 D 23 σοφιστήν: used as in Symp.

203 D δεινὸς γόης καὶ φαρμακεὺς καὶ σοφιστής. Plato may also mean to hint that the Painter and Sophist are birds of a feather: for in Soph. 233 E ff. a definition of the Sophist in the ordinary sense of the term is evolved out of just such an account of painting as we find here.

25 ποιητής. The Greek idea of the Poet as a 'maker' lends additional flavour to ποιεῖν and ποιητής throughout this argument.

28 δημιουργούμενος is suggested of course by δημιουργός just before: cf. III 395 B. The combination of this verb with τρόπος has a playful mock-heroic air.

29 κάτοπτρον κτλ. On the view of Painting here involved see 598 A n. It is usual to compare Shakespeare's "hold the mirror up to nature," but (as Bosanquet points out) there is more in Shakespeare's saying than in Plato's.

596 E 33 τῶν τοιούτων—ζωγράφος ἐστίν. The Painter will copy with less accuracy than a mirror, so that according to Plato's way of reasoning in this passage Photography is superior in point of truth to Painting (Reber Plato u. die Poesie p. 23). See however on 598 A.

35 φήσεις οὐκ ἀληθῆ, οἶμαι, αὐτὸν ποιεῖν ἂ ποιεῖ. καίτοι τρόπῳ γέ τινι καὶ ὁ ζωγράφος κλίνην ποιεῖ. ἢ οὐ; Ναί, ἔφη, φαινομένην γε καὶ οὗτος.

II. Τί δὲ ὁ κλινοποιός· οὐκ ἄρτι | μέντοι ἔλεγες, ὅτι οὐ τὸ 597 εἶδος ποιεῖ, ὃ δὴ φαμεν εἶναι ὃ ἔστι κλίνη, ἀλλὰ κλίνην τινά; Ἔλεγον γάρ. Οὐκοῦν εἰ μὴ ὃ ἔστιν ποιεῖ, οὐκ ἂν τὸ ὄν ποιοῖ, ἀλλὰ τί τοιοῦτον, οἶον τὸ ὄν, ὃν δὲ οὐ; τελέως δὲ εἶναι ὄν τὸ τοῦ 5 κλινουργοῦ ἔργον ἢ ἄλλου τινὸς χειροτέχνου εἴ τις φαίη, κινδυνεύει οὐκ ἂν ἀληθῆ λέγειν; Οὐκουν, ἔφη, ὥς γ' ἂν δόξειεν τοῖς περὶ τοὺς τοιοῦσδε λόγους διατρίβουσιν. Μηδὲν ἄρα θαυμάζωμεν, εἰ καὶ τοῦτο ἀμυδρόν τι τυγχάνει ὄν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν. Ἥ γάρ. B Βούλει οὖν, ἔφη, ἐπ' αὐτῶν τούτων ζητήσωμεν τὸν μιμητὴν τούτου, 10 τίς ποτ' ἐστίν; Εἰ βούλει, ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν τριτταί τινες κλῖναι αὗται γίγνονται· μία μὲν ἢ ἐν τῇ φύσει οὔσα, ἣν φαίμεν ἄν, ὥς ἐγῶμαι, θεὸν ἐργάσασθαι. ἢ τίν' ἄλλον; Οὐδένα, οἶμαι. Μία

37. γε A²Π: om. A¹.

3. ποιεῖ A²Ξ q: ποιῇ A¹Π.

11. ἐν Π: om. A.

38 οὐ—μέντοι. I 339 B n. ἄρτι refers to 596 B:

597 A 7 εἰ καὶ τοῦτο κτλ.: sc. as well as the κλίνη made by the painter.

597 B 9 ἐπ' αὐτῶν τούτων κτλ. For ἐπὶ see on V 475 A. τούτον in τὸν μιμητὴν τούτου ("hunc, quem quaerimus" Schneider) was found by Dübner to be the reading of A as well as the rest of Bekker's MSS, and Schneider restores it in his Addit. p. 77.

10 οὐκοῦν κτλ. For γίγνονται see on VIII 562 A. With ἐν τῇ φύσει cf. infra 597 C, 598 A, Phaed. 103 B and Parm. 132 D τὰ μὲν εἶδη ταῦτα ὥσπερ παραδείγματα ἐστάναι ἐν τῇ φύσει. Each of these passages brings ἡ φύσις into connexion with the Ideas: cf. also V 476 B, VI 301 B, Crat. 389 B ff. and infra 597 D, E. In the phrase ἐν τῇ φύσει, the expression ἡ φύσις means 'Nature' i.e. rerum natura (cf. R. G. Bury in Cl. Rev. VIII p. 299), but for Plato rerum natura, strictly interpreted, is the Ideal World. Plato's nomenclature is in harmony with the traditional usage of Greek philosophy, for "in Greek philosophical language, φύσις always means that which is primary, fundamental, and persistent, as opposed to that which is secondary, derivative, and transient" (Burnet Early Greek Phil. p. 11). Now in Platonism the primary, fundamental, persistent, is the εἶδος: and hence the φύσις or 'nature' of anything means its Idea (e.g. Phaedr. 254 B ἡ μνήμη πρὸς τὴν τοῦ κάλλους φύσιν ἠνέχθη), and the φύσις or nature of all things (rerum natura) becomes an expression for the World of Ideas ("regio idearum, ὁ νοητὸς τόπος" Schneider). Bosanquet would like to render φύσις by 'evolution,' "without understanding any definite theory of origins." Such a translation would be, in my judgment, not only gravely misleading, but linguistically wrong; for ἐν τῇ φύσει οὔσα cannot mean 'which evolution has produced': the force of ἐν must be local—figuratively so, of course—exactly as in ὥσπερ παραδείγματα ἐστάναι ἐν τῇ φύσει referred to above. So also J. B. Mayor in Cl. Rev. X p. 121. To Krohn, φύσις appears to be "die allgemeine Gesetzlichkeit des Universums, die dem δημιουργὸς die Musterbilder liefert" (Pl. St. p. 249). This is nearer the truth, but we must not surrender the self-existence of the Ideas. See also on 597 D.

11 ἦν—θεὸν ἐργάσασθαι. "Occurrit, ut videtur, quasi ex improviso Platoni, Deum Idearum auctorem appellare" says Pansch (de deo Platonis p. 45), truly enough, in the restricted sense that we ought to lay no stress on this passage by δέ γε ἦν ὁ τέκτων. Ναί, ἔφη. Μία δὲ ἦν ὁ ζωγράφος. ἡ γάρ;

 "Ἐστω. Ζωγράφος δὴ, κλινοποιός, θεός, τρεῖς οὗτοι ἐπιστάται C τρισὶν εἶδεσι κλινῶν. Ναὶ τρεῖς. Ὁ μὲν δὴ θεός, εἴτε ὁ οὐκ 15 ἐβούλετο, εἴτε τις ἀνάγκη ἐπὶ μὴ πλέον ἢ μίαν ἐν τῇ φύσει ἀπεργάσασθαι αὐτὸν κλίνην, οὕτως ἐποίησεν μίαν μόνον αὐτὴν ἐκείνην ὃ ἔστιν κλίνη· δύο δὲ τοιαῦται ἢ πλείους οὔτε ἐφυτεύθησαν ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ οὔτε μὴ φυῶσιν. Πῶς δὴ; ἔφη. "Ὅτι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, εἰ δύο μόνας ποιήσειεν, πάλιν ἂν μία ἀναφανείη, ἥς ἐκείναι ἂν αὐ 20 ἀμφοτέραι τὸ εἶδος ἔχουεν, καὶ εἴη ἂν ὃ ἔστιν κλίνη ἐκείνη, ἀλλ' οὐχ αἱ δύο. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη. Ταῦτα δὴ, οἶμαι, εἰδὼς ὁ θεός, βουλό-D μειος εἶναι ὄντως κλίνης ποιητῆς ὄντως οὔσης, ἀλλὰ μὴ κλίνης τινός, μηδὲ κλινοποιός τις, μίαν φύσει αὐτὴν ἔφυσεν. "Εοικεν.

19. δὴ A²Ξ: δὲ vel δ' A¹Πg.

itself as evidence for the origin of the Ideas. But, if God and the Idea of Good are the same (see on VI 505 A ff.), Plato is merely saying in theological language what he formerly said in philosophical, when he derived the οὐσία of all other Ideas from the Idea of Good (VI 509 B). See Krohn Pl. St. p. 242, where the same explanation is given, and Zeller⁴ II p. 666. It is not, I think, quite correct to dismiss θεός as merely "eine mythische Ausdrucksweise" (Hirmer Entstehung u. Komp. etc. p. 647), and Sussehl (Einleitung p. 262) is certainly wrong when he takes it to mean 'a god.' The sentence has been much discussed in connexion with the theory that Plato's Ideas are 'thoughts of God': see for example Hermann de loco Plat. de rep. VI 505 sq. p. 5 with Bonitz's reply Disput. Pl. duae p. 33 and Hermann's rejoinder Vindic. disp. de idea boni pp. 39 ff., and cf. Zeller I. c. pp. 664—670. I have already said in App. III to Book VII that Plato himself says nothing to shew that he viewed his Ideas in this light; and it is only by reading into his words much more than they are naturally fitted to convey, that the present passage can be made to support the identification.

597 C 19 εἰ δύο κτλ.: not of course 'if God had made' etc. (D. and V.), but 'if he should make' etc., referring to the future, in harmony with οὕτε μὴ φυῶσιν. The words δύο μόνας mean 'no more than two,' "auch nur zwei" (Schneider). Even two (not to speak of more) would involve a fresh idéa. Cf. Tim. 31 A τὸ γὰρ περιέχον πάντα ὅποσα νοητὰ ζῶα, μεθ' ἐτέρου δευτέρου οὐκ ἂν ποτ' εἴη· πάλιν γὰρ ἂν ἕτερον εἶναι τὸ περὶ ἐκείνω δέοι ζῶον, οὐ μέρος ἂν εἴτην ἐκείνω, καὶ οὐκ ἂν ἐτι ἐκείνῳ ἀλλ' ἐκείνω τῷ περιέχοντι τὸδ' ἂν ἀφωμοιωμένον λέγοιτο ὀρθότερον. The τρίτος ἀνθρωπος argument against the theory of Ideas rests on the same basis: see Parm. 132 E ff. with Arist. Met. A 9. 990^b 17 and Bonitz ad loc.

597 D 24 μίαν φύσει κτλ.: 'created it, in its essential nature, one.' So it appears. Shall we then call him the Nature-maker of bed, or something of the sort? It would at all events be fair to do so, since he has made both this and all besides in their essential nature.' Connected with the notion 'bed' (observe the neuter τούτου), there are two makers: (1) its φυττουργός, who makes ἡ φύσει κλίνη, (2) its δημιουργός, who makes κλίνη τις, a particular material bed. The first is God—the φυττουργός not only of 'bed' but of all else: the second a carpenter. φυττουργός is used by Plato in the peculiar sense of ὁ φύσει-τι ποιῶν, the maker of e.g. the bed-by-nature, the table-by-nature, etc.; and the peculiar form of Glauco's answer (δίκαιον γοῦν κτλ.) shews that he was sensible of the linguistic experiment. Plato's meaning would have been easier for us to catch if (using substantives instead of pronouns), he had said μίαν φύσει κλίνην ἔφυσεν (created one bed-by-nature, cf. VI 501 B τὸ φύσει δίκαιον) and ἐπειδήπερ καὶ φύσει-κλίνην καὶ φύσει-τάλλα πάντα πεποίηκεν, but what he does write is much

- 25 Βούλει οὖν τοῦτον μὲν φυτουργὸν τοῦτον προσαγορεύωμεν ἢ τι τοιοῦτον; Δίκαιον γοῦν, ἔφη, ἐπειδὴ περ φύσει γε καὶ τοῦτο καὶ ἄλλα πάντα πεποίηκεν. Τί δὲ τὸν τέκτονα; ἄρ' οὐ δημιουργὸν κλίνης; Ναί. Ἡ καὶ τὸν ζωγράφον δημιουργὸν καὶ ποιητὴν τοῦ τοιοῦτου; Οὐδαμῶς. Ἀλλὰ τί αὐτὸν κλίνης φήσεις εἶναι; Τοῦτο, 30 ἢ δ' ὅς, ἔμουγε δοκεῖ μετριώτατ' ἂν προσαγορεύεσθαι, μιμητὴς οὐ ἐκεῖνοι δημιουργοί. Εἶεν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· τὸν τοῦ τρίτου ἄρα γεννήματος ἀπὸ τῆς φύσεως μιμητὴν καλεῖς; Πάννυ μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Τοῦτ' ἄρα ἔσται καὶ ὁ τραγωδοποιός, εἴπερ μιμητὴς ἐστί, τρίτος τις ἀπὸ βασιλέως καὶ τῆς ἀληθείας πεφυκώς, καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄλλοι more elegant. It seems to me certain that φύσις in this passage refers to the essential nature (i.e. the Idea) of the thing in question. Schleiermacher, Schneider, and Müller, to judge from their translations, held the same view. The English translators render the second φύσει 'by creation' (D. and V.) or 'by the natural process of creation' (Jowett), but apart from other objections, φύσει surely cannot bear a sense so very different from that which it has at the beginning of the argument: see 597 B n., where reference is made also to Bosanquet's ingenious, but, as I believe, wholly mistaken view.

29 τί αὐτὸν κλίνης κτλ.; For the genitive cf. IX 582 C, 585 D, infra 597 E and (with J. and C.) Symp. 204 D τί τῶν καλῶν ἐστὶν ὁ ἔρως;

597 E 30 μιμητὴς οὐ ἐκεῖνοι δημιουργοί. There is (1) the φυτουργός, (2) the δημιουργός, (3) the imitator of 'bed.' The two former are each of them (in the wider sense) δημιουργοί of 'bed.' It will be noticed that 'bed' is treated pro tempore (from βούλει οὖν to ὁμολογήκαμεν) as a single undifferentiated notion, because the contrast is shifted from the three beds to those who are concerned in their production. At 598 A εἰπέ δέ μοι κτλ. Plato again differentiates the notion, in order to make it clear that the Painter imitates only the material, and not the Ideal, bed.

31 τὸν τοῦ τρίτου κτλ. The genitive is like τί αὐτὸν κλίνης κτλ. above. I do not think we ought (with J. and C.) to supply δημιουργόν.

33 τοῦτ' ἄρα—μιμηταί. Since the tragic poet is an imitator, he too will be τοῦ τρίτου γεννήματος ἀπὸ τῆς φύσεως, or in other words, τρίτος τις ἀπὸ βασιλέως κτλ. Baiter's text is misleading because he prints no comma after μιμητὴς ἐστί. That Tragedy is a branch of μίμησις, was universally allowed: see above on 595 C. Plato's procedure in reasoning from Painting to Poetry (cf. infra 598 C, 601 A, 603 B and 605 A) may be illustrated by Simonides' remark that 'Poetry is vocal Painting,' as 'Painting is silent Poetry' (ὁ Σιμωνίδης τὴν μὲν ζωγραφίαν ποίησιν σιωπῶσαν προσαγορεύει, τὴν δὲ ποίησιν ζωγραφίαν λαλοῦσαν Plut. de gloria Ath. 346 F)—a saying which Lessing appropriately cites in the preface to his Laocoon.

τρίτος τις κτλ.: 'as it were third from King and Truth.' The metaphor is a genealogical one (cf. III 391 C Πηλέως, σὺ φρονεστάτου τε καὶ τρίτου ἀπὸ Διός), and the King corresponds of course to the φυτουργός or God. On the one hand we have (1) God, (2) the τέκτων, (3) the μιμητὴς: on the other (1) the αὐτὸ ὅ ἐστι κλίνη, (2) a material κλίνη, (3) a picture of a material κλίνη: and just as the picture is τὸ τρίτον γέννημα ἀπὸ τῆς φύσεως, so the imitator is 'third in descent' (τρίτος—πεφυκώς) and consequently two degrees removed from ὁ θεός. The propriety of the term βασιλέως will be seen if we translate Plato's theological phraseology into its philosophical equivalent. When he tells us that God constructs the Idea of Bed, he means that the Idea of Good is the source of that Idea (597 B n.), and the Idea of Good is King of the Ideal World: see VI 509 D. This is the application of the phrase: but it is possible enough that the expression itself was half-proverbial in Plato's time, and referred originally to the person who stood next but one in order of succession to the Persian throne. See App. I. The general sense is well illustrated by J. and C. from Dante In- μιμηταί. Κινδυνεύει. Τὸν μὲν δὴ μιμητὴν ὡμολογήκαμεν· εἰπὲ 35 598 δέ μοι | περὶ τοῦ ζωγράφου τόδε· πότερα ἐκείνο αὐτὸ τὸ ἐν τῇ φύσει ἕκαστον δοκεῖ σοι ἐπιχειρεῖν μιμεῖσθαι ἢ τὰ τῶν δημιουργῶν ἔργα; Τὰ τῶν δημιουργῶν, ἔφη. Ἄρα οἷα ἔστιν ἢ οἷα φαίνεται; ferno 11. 105 Si che vostr' arte a Dio quasi è nipote, i.e. Art is Nature's daughter, as Nature is God's: 'so that your art is as it were the grandchild of God.' It should be noticed that the drift of Plato's meaning can be expressed in terms of the simile of the line. The αὐτὸ δ' ἔστι κλίνη, for example, belongs to EB (see Fig. 1 on p. 65), the material κλίνη to DC, and the picture of a Bed to the realm of εἰκόνες, that is to say AD. Similarly we may suppose that the state of mind of the carpenter is πίστις, and that of the Painter εἰκασία. See below on 601 E and cf. App. I to Book VII. Other views of the phrase τρίτος τις ἀπὸ βασιλέως are discussed in App. I.

598 A—598 D Moreover it is not the Idea which is copied by the Painter, but only the manufactured objects, and even of these he copies only one particular aspect or appearance. Hence Imitation is far removed indeed from the Truth; and only a simpleton will be beguiled by it.

598 A I πότερα ἐκείνο—ἔφη. In holding that the Art of Painting imitates only τὰ τῶν δημιουργῶν ἔργα, Plato degrades it to the level of photography, and the painter himself to a mere mechanical copyist, whose intelligence does not rise above εἰκασία (in the sense of VI 511 E; see note ad loc. and App. I to Book VII). Yet the highest art has in every age claimed to portray, not the so-called actual, but the Ideal: see for example Arist. Poet. 25. 6 and 17: "It may be impossible that there should be men such as Zeuxis painted. 'Yes,' we say, 'but the impossible is the higher thing; for the ideal type must surpass the reality'" (Butcher's translation), and the recent development of this idea by W. J. Courthope, Life in Poetry and Law in Taste pp. 152, 165, 195 ff. and passim. In the present passage, Plato bases his unfavourable verdict on what must be admitted to be a narrow and scholastic interpretation of his own ontology, but in view of Books II and III as well as 605 C—607 A below, we can hardly doubt that his attitude was determined in the first instance by educational rather than by metaphysical considerations, and that throughout the whole of Book X he was thinking less of the inherent possibilities of Art, than of actual Greek Art and Poetry considered as the exponents of a moral and religious creed which Plato himself emphatically disowns. See also on 607 A. In any case, the objections which he here urges do not touch the real essence of any form of Art except pure and unadulterated realism. Elsewhere throughout the Platonic writings there are not wanting indications of a juster estimate of the artistic faculty and its possibilities (see for example III 401 B—403 C, and especially V 472 D, and cf. Walter Gesch. d. Aesthetik im Altertum pp. 441 ff., 459 ff. and Stählin Stellung d. Poesie in d. Plat. Phil. pp. 56—65), and the sympathetic student of Plato will find it easy to construct a nobler and more generous theory of Aesthetic Art out of the doctrine of Ideas together with its corollaries of ἀνάμνησις and pre-existence. It is also a historical fact that Plato's own conception of a transcendent self-existing Beauty, αἰὲν ὄν καὶ οὔτε γιγνόμενον οὔτε ἀπολλύμενον, οὔτε αἰσθανόμενον οὔτε φθίνον, ἔπειτα οὐ τῇ μὲν καλόν, τῇ δ' αἰσχρόν, οὐδὲ τοτὲ μὲν, τοτὲ δ' οὐ, οὐδὲ πρὸς μὲν τὸ καλόν, πρὸς δὲ τὸ αἰσχρόν (Symp. 211 A), has proved an inexhaustible fountain of inspiration to some of the greatest artists, notably, for instance, in connexion with the Platonic Academy at Florence in the days of Michel Angelo: see Symonds, Renaissance in Italy II pp. 205, 207, 247, 323 ff. Those who have caught the spirit of Plato's teaching will agree with me when I say that the famous lines of Wordsworth on King's College Chapel

"They dreamt not of a perishable home, Who thus could build,"

are more truly and characteristically Platonic than Plato's attack upon poetry and painting in this passage.

3 ἄρα οἷα ἔστιν κτλ. The painter, as Bosanquet reminds us, operates in two dimensions, and so cannot copy the material bed "in its solid completeness, but τοῦτο γὰρ ἔτι διόρισον. Πῶς λέγεις; ἔφη. ὦδε. κλίνη, εἴαν τε 5 ἐκ πλαγίου αὐτὴν θεᾷ εἴαν τε καταντικρὺ ἢ ὀπιοῦν, μή τι διαφέρει αὐτὴ ἐαυτῆς, ἢ διαφέρει μὲν οὐδέν, φαίνεται δὲ ἄλλοια; καὶ τᾶλλα ὡσαύτως; Οὕτως, ἔφη· φαίνεται, διαφέρει δ' οὐδέν. Τοῦτο ἰδὲ αὐτὸ σκόπει. πρὸς πότερον ἢ γραφικὴ πεποιήται περὶ ἕκαστον; πότερα πρὸς τὸ ὄν, ὡς ἔχει, μιμήσασθαι, ἢ πρὸς τὸ φαινόμενον, ὡς 10 φαίνεται, φαντάσματος ἢ ἀληθείας οὔσα μίμησις; Φαντάσματος, ἔφη. Πόρρω ἄρα πού τοῦ ἀληθοῦς ἢ μιμητικὴ ἐστὶν καί, ὡς ἔοικεν, διὰ τοῦτο πάντα ἀπεργάζεται, ὅτι σμικρόν τι ἕκαστον ἐφάπτεται καὶ τοῦτο εἰδῶλον. οἷον ὁ ζωγράφος, φάμεν, ζωγραφήσει ἡμῖν σκυτοτόμον, τέκτονα, τοὺς ἄλλους δημιουργοὺς, περὶ only his partial view of it" i.e. the bed as it appears to him from one point of view, a particular φάντασμα of bed. His work, in fact, is σκιαγραφία (II 365 C η.). It will follow that Painting is a stage lower than 'third from truth,' but Plato does not press the point, and in 599 A and D Poetry—the sister art to Painting—remains as before only τρίτον ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας. See also on μιμητικὴ in B below.

598 B 8 πεποιήται is passive, not middle, as J. and C. strangely imagine. Cf. 605 A ὁ δὲ μιμητικὸς ποιητὴς—οὐ πρὸς τὸ τοιοῦτον τῆς ψυχῆς πέφυκε τε καὶ ἡ σοφία αὐτοῦ τούτῳ ἀρέσκειν πέπηγεν.

9 τὸ ὄν: not of course in the metaphysical sense, but in the sense in which e.g. the material bed 'is' as opposed to its φάντασμα, which only φαίνεται, and which is all that the painter copies. An apologist of Art might fairly reply to Plato that in another and profounder sense it is just because Art does 'imitate' the φάντασμα and not the material reality that her creations frequently possess a measure of ideality and truth beyond and above what Plato assigns to them here. Cf. Butcher, Aristotle's Theory of Poetry etc. pp. 127 ff., 157—162. For the construction see on III 407 B.

11 ἡ μιμητικὴ. In this particular instance the inference from Painting to the whole of imitative art is hardly to be justified: for Sculpture, which is certainly, in the Greek way of thinking, a branch of μιμητικὴ, cannot be said to copy only a φάντασμα of the material object to the same extent that Painting does. See however Soph. 235 E, 236 A.

12 διὰ τοῦτο—εἰδῶλον: 'what enables it to manufacture all things is that it lays hold of but a little part of each, and even that is unsubstantial.' πάντα ἀπεργάζεται recalls 596 C—E, while preparing us at the same time for πάσας ἐπισταμένῃ τὰς δημιουργίας κτλ. below in C. In σμικρόν τι ἕκαστον ἐφάπτεται the construction is like μεταλαμβάνουσι—τούτων τῶν τῆς ἀρετῆς μορίων οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι, οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι (Prot. 329 E). For εἰδῶλον Herwerden conjectures εἰδῶλον: but the word refers to φαντάσματος above and must therefore be in apposition to the part and 'not the whole. The particular 'appearance' of a bed which a painter copies is properly regarded as only a little 'part' of it.

14 περὶ οὐδενός—τῶν τεχνῶν: 'although he does not understand about the arts of any one of them.' According to this explanation, which is that of Prantl, περὶ governs τῶν τεχνῶν and τούτων has for its antecedent σκυτοτόμον, τέκτονα κτλ. The plural τῶν τεχνῶν is a trifling irregularity, due to the introduction of τοὺς ἄλλους δημιουργοὺς, in the absence of which Plato would doubtless have written περὶ οὐδετέρου τούτων ἐπαίων τῆς τέχνης. For the distance between περὶ and its noun cf. VIII 551 C περὶ ἄλλου οὕτως ὁνοοῦν ἀρχῆς, Prot. 319 D περὶ τῶν τῆς πόλεως διοικήσεως (if Sauppe is right in construing περὶ with διοικήσεως), Lysis 859 A οὕτω διανοώμεθα περὶ νόμων δὲν γραφῆς γίγνεσθαι ταῖς πόλεσιν, Tim. 40 D τὰ περὶ θεῶν ὁρατῶν καὶ γεννητῶν εἰρημένα φύσεις ἐχέτω τέλος, and other examples in Lina de praepos. usu Plat. pp. 17 f. It is certainly wrong to translate the text by 'without knowing anything about these arts,' and we have no right to resort to such emendations as οὐδὲν τούτων ἐπαίων τῶν

C οὐδεὶς τούτων ἐπαίων τῶν τεχνῶν· ἀλλ' ὅμως παῖδάς τε καὶ 15
 ἄφρονas ἀνθρώπους, εἰ ἀγαθὸς εἴη ζῳγράφος, γράψας ἂν τέκτονα καὶ πόρρωθεν ἐπιδεικνὺς ἐξαπατῶ ἂν τῷ δοκεῖν ὡς ἀληθῶς τέκτονα εἶναι. Τί δ' οὐ; Ἀλλὰ γάρ, οἶμαι, ὦ φίλε, τόδε δεῖ περὶ πάντων τῶν τοιούτων διανοεῖσθαι· ἐπειδὴν τις ἡμῖν ἀπαγγέλλῃ περὶ του, ὡς ἐνέτυχεν ἀνθρώπῳ πᾶσας ἐπισταμένῳ τὰς δημιουργίας καὶ 20 D τᾶλλα πάντα, ὅσα εἰς ἕκαστος οἶδεν, οὐδὲν ὅ τι οὐχὶ ἀκριβέστερον ὁτοῦν ἐπισταμένῳ, ὑπολαμβάνειν δεῖ τῷ τοιούτῳ, ὅτι εὐήθης τις ἄνθρωπος, καί, ὡς ἔοικει, ἐντυχὼν γόητί τινι καὶ μιμητῇ ἐξηπατήθη, ὥστε ἔδοξεν αὐτῷ πᾶσσοφος εἶναι, διὰ τὸ αὐτὸς μὴ οἶός τ' εἶναι

24. πᾶσσοφος A¹ γ¹: πᾶς σοφὸς A² Π: πάνσοφος Ξ γ².

τεχνῶν (Ast) or οὐδὲν περὶ τούτων (or τούτων πέρι οὐδὲν) ἐπαίων τῶν τεχνῶν (Richards). I now believe that Prantl's view, with which Stallbaum also agrees, is correct, and therefore withdraw my former conjecture τεχνιτῶν. That τεχνῶν is sound appears also from αὐτός τε οὐκ ἐπαίων περὶ σκυτοποιίας in 601 A.

598 C 16 γράψας—τέκτονα εἶναι. The same idea recurs in Soph. 234 B. The subject of δοκεῖν (opinari) is παῖδάς τε καὶ ἄφρονas ἀνθρώπους (Schneider). This is better than to make δοκεῖν = videri and supply τὸ ἐξωγραφημένον (with J. and C.).

598 D 22 ὑπολαμβάνειν δεῖ τῷ τοιούτῳ: 'we must reply to'—(or 'retort upon') 'such a person': cf. (with J. B. Mayor in Cl. Rev. X p. 110) Prot. 320 C πολλοὶ οὖν αὐτῷ ὑπέλαβον κτλ. The antecedent of τῷ τοιούτῳ is τις. The words have been strangely misinterpreted by Schneider ("bei dem muss man annehmen" etc.), J. and C. ("we must understand by such a statement") and others, forgetful of the parallel expression in the Protagoras. Vermehren actually goes so far as to conjecture ἐν τῷ τοιούτῳ (Plat. Stud. p. 119).

23 γόητί τινι. Cf. Soph. 234 C.

24 διὰ τὸ αὐτὸς κτλ. In agreement with Dümmler (Antisth. pp. 23 ff.), Stählin (Stellung d. Poesie etc. p. 26) takes this as a specific reference to Antisthenes. Antisthenes, in the first place, denied the Ideal theory and held that there could be no knowledge except of particulars: so that Plato might well insinuate that he was incapable of distinguishing knowledge from ignorance: cf. v 476 D n. In the second place, Antisthenes was a champion of Homer, and discovered a sort of moral philosophy in his works (see Frag. 24—28 in Winckelmann Antisth. Frag. and Zeller⁴ II pp. 330 ff.). On the strength of these two facts Stählin has evolved the ingenious theory that Plato's motive throughout this part of the discussion is a purely polemical one, and that he did not seriously consider Poetry only 'third from Royalty and Truth.' Plato, thinks Stählin, says in effect: 'Antisthenes holds that poets have knowledge of and copy particulars; but there is no knowledge of particulars, and particulars are copies of Ideas, so that on Antisthenes's own shewing Poets are ignorant, and Poetry is thrice removed from Truth: whereas Antisthenes thinks Homer was omniscient.' The dagger is only laid: for Antisthenes was not an Idealist. Yet it is tolerably clear that Plato is refuting a view of poetry which found enthusiastic advocates in his own time, and Antisthenes may have been one of these, though the evidence falls far short of proof (see next note): but the purpose of this investigation is certainly not polemical and nothing more, and in spite of other passages in which Plato takes a more generous view of Poetry (see on 598 E), there is no good reason to suppose that his hostility is otherwise than serious here. See also on line 28.

598 D—601 B We hear it said that tragedians, including Homer, have knowledge of that whereof they write; but it is not so. No one would seriously give himself to the production of copies if he could make originals. If the poet possessed true knowledge of what he imitates, he would rather do great deeds than sing of them; and Homer rendered no services to his fellow men in the sphere of action, 25 ἐπιστήμην καὶ ἀνεπιστημοσύνην καὶ μίμησιν ἐξετάσαι. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη.

III. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μετὰ τοῦτο ἐπισκεπτέον τὴν τε τραγωδίαν καὶ τὸν ἡγεμόνα αὐτῆς Ὅμηρον, ἐπειδὴ τινων ἀκούομεν, ὅτι οὗτοι πάσας μὲν τέχνας¹ ἐπίστανται, πάντα δὲ τὰ ἀνθρώπεια 30 τὰ πρὸς ἀρετὴν καὶ κακίαν καὶ τὰ γε θεῖα· ἀνάγκη γὰρ τὸν ἀγαθὸν ποιητὴν, εἰ μέλλει περὶ ὧν ἂν ποιῇ καλῶς ποιήσῃ, εἰδότα ἄρα ποιεῖν, ἢ μὴ οἷόν τε εἶναι ποιεῖν. δεῖ δὴ ἐπισκέψασθαι, πότερον invention, or even education, as the neglect he suffered in his own lifetime abundantly proves. The fact is that the Poet writes without knowledge. His productions are but images of images, and owe all their charm to their poetic setting.

598 D 28 τὸν ἡγεμόνα αὐτῆς Ὅμηρον κτλ. See 595 C n. In τινων Dümmler and Stählin (ll. cc.) again recognise Antisthenes, but although Antisthenes seems to have believed in Homer, there is no evidence that he was a champion of Tragedy (note ὅτι οὗτοι κτλ.); and he was certainly not the only person in whose eyes Homer was regarded as at once a universal genius and the educator of the whole of Greece. It is not necessary to suppose that Plato has any individual person in his mind: there must have been many such apologists of Homer and dramatic poetry in Plato's day, and Plato as usual individualizes the type. See for instance the Ion of Plato and Ar. Frogs 1008 ff. It will, no doubt, help us to appreciate Plato's attitude towards Poetry if we remember that she was the de facto rival of Philosophy, and that (as Munk observes, die nat. Ordnung d. Plat. Schr. pp. 313 ff.) the Republic is in a certain sense a demand that Philosophy shall take the place which Poetry had hitherto filled in educational theory and practice: see especially the address to poets in Laws 817 A ff. ὦ ἀρίστοι—τῶν ξένων, ἡμεῖς ἔσμεν τραγωδίας αὐτοὶ ποιηταὶ κατὰ δύναμιν ὅτι καλλίστης ἅμα καὶ ἀρίστης· πᾶσα οὖν ἡμῖν ἡ πολιτεία ξυνέστηκε μίμησις τοῦ καλλίστου καὶ ἀρίστου βίου, ὃ δὴ φαμεν ἡμεῖς γε ὄντως εἶναι τραγωδίαν τὴν ἀληθεστάτην. ποιηταὶ μὲν οὖν ὑμεῖς, ποιηταὶ δὲ καὶ ἡμεῖς ἔσμεν τῶν αὐτῶν, ὑμῖν ἀντίτεχνοί τε καὶ ἀνταγωνισταὶ τοῦ καλλίστου δράματος κτλ. Cf. also infra 600 A n. But it is surely absurd to suppose that Plato was actuated by any feeling of personal jealousy towards Homer, and aspired to supplant him in the admiration of his countrymen: 'there is no envy in the choir divine' (Phaedr. 247 A). There is something almost pathetic in Dionysius' inability to understand and appreciate Plato when he assures us with monotonous and feeble iteration that 'there was, there really was in Plato's nature, with all its excellences, something of vainglory. He shewed this particularly in his jealousy of Homer, whom he expels from his imaginary commonwealth after crowning him with a garland and anointing him with myrrh' (Letter to Pompeius § 756, translated by Roberts).

598 E 30 ἀνάγκη—ποιεῖν. The saying is attributed by Wilamowitz (Phil. Unters. IV p. 285) to Sophocles himself, on what authority he does not say. Is he thinking of Athen. I 22 B μεθῶν δὲ ἐποiei τὰς τραγωδίας Αἰσχύλος, ὡς φησι Χαμαίλειον. Σοφοκλῆς γοῦν ἐνείδειεν αὐτῷ ὅτι εἰ καὶ τὰ δέοντα ποιεῖ, ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰδὼς γε? In any case the reference ought not to be thus limited, nor ought we to suppose (with Dümmler and Stählin, ll. cc.) that Antisthenes alone is intended, for Plato seems to be alluding to a tolerably widespread view and one which was freely represented in Apologies of Poetry. Understood in its full significance, the theory of Poetry which Plato is here combating requires us to believe that a poet who can represent a general, a pilot etc., knows the art of generalship, pilotage etc. (cf. 599 c ff.), and we are told that Sophocles was actually made στρατηγός because of his Antigone (see the Argument ascribed to Aristophanes the grammarian). If we realise the part which Poetry, and especially the poetry of Homer, played in Greek education, and remember that Aristophanes makes Homer the teacher of τάξεις, ἀρετάς, ὀπλίσεις ἀνδρῶν, it is by no means extraμμηταῖς τούτοις οὗτοι ἐντυχόντες ἐξηπάτηνται καὶ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν 99 ὁρῶντες οὐκ αἰσθάνονται τριττὰ ἀπέχοντα τοῦ ὄντος καὶ ῥάδια ποιεῖν μὴ εἰδοῖσι τὴν ἀλήθειαν· φαντάσματα γάρ, ἀλλ' οὐκ ὄντα ποιοῦσιν· ἢ τι καὶ λέγουσιν καὶ τῷ ὄντι οἱ ἀγαθοὶ ποιηταὶ ἴσασιν περὶ ὄν δοκοῦσιν τοῖς πολλοῖς εὖ λέγειν. Πάνν μὲν οὖν, ἔφη, ἔξεταστέον.

 Οἶεο οὖν, εἴ τις ἀμφοτέρω δύναιτο ποιεῖν, τό τε μμηθησόμενον καὶ 5 τὸ εἰδῶλον, ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν εἰδῶλων δημιουργίᾳ ἑαυτὸν ἀφεῖναι ἂν σπου-B δάζειν καὶ τοῦτο προστήσασθαι τοῦ ἑαυτοῦ βίου ὥς ἡ βέλτιστον vagant to suppose that such views were actually maintained in Plato's time, though Pericles for example had a different criterion of strategic ability when he told Sophocles that he 'knew how to write poetry, but not how to command an army' (Περικλῆς ποιεῖν με ἔφη, στρατηγέειν δ' οὐκ ἐπίστασθαι Athen. XIII 604 D). Cf. Ion 540 B—542 B and Stählin Stellung d. Poesie etc. p. 23 n. 3. 'The public,' remarks Stählin, 'whose views Plato here combats, allowed the authority of the poets to extend even to the domain of the particular arts. It was Plato who broke through this magic circle which surrounded Poetry.' Aristotle followed in the same path, refusing to allow that a mistake in respect of some particular art is necessarily a flaw in the poetry: see Poet. 25. 1460^b 20 ff., 33 ff. Plato himself, of course, holds that poets are destitute of scientific knowledge, and compose their poems οὐ σοφία, ἀλλὰ φύσει τινὶ καὶ ἐνθουσιάζοντες Ap. 22 C: cf. also Phaedr. 245 A, Ion 533 D ff., Laus 719 C and Men. 99 C. The true Poet, according to Plato, is a seer: knowledge he has none, but instead of it intuition, enthusiasm and inspiration: he is in short ἐνθεος, because ἐπιπνους ὢν καὶ κατεχόμενος ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ (Men. l.c.). This view of Poetry is of course earlier than Plato: we meet with something like it in a striking fragment of Democritus ap. Dio Chrys. LIII 274 (quoted by Stählin l.c. p. 12) "Ὁμηρος φύσεως λαχὼν θεαζούσης ἐπέων κόσμον ἐτεκτῆρατο παντοίων, and Pindar likes to represent himself as the inspired mouthpiece of the Muses and Apollo. We cannot attain to a correct conception of Plato's aesthetic unless we are careful to remember that, although he refused to allow that the poet has knowledge, he did not deny him genius and inspiration. See also on 598 A supra.

32 πότερον μμηταῖς κτλ.: 'whether these men whom they have met are imitators, by whom they have been deceived' etc. μμηταῖς is of course predicative, and that is why τούτοις has no article. We certainly ought not (with Richards) to change τούτοις into τοιούτοις. Cf. IV 436 D n.

599 A 1 τριττὰ—ὄντος: 'are three stages removed from Truth.' One of Schneider's MSS has τριτὰ (sic), and Herwerden conjectures τριτα, comparing τριτος ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας in D. Possibly Proclus also read τριτα: see the critical note in Kroll's edition of the in temp. I p. 203, 22. If the numeral is an adjective agreeing with ἔργα, we must certainly read τριτα, but it may be an accusative of extent, i. q. τρία ἀπέχοντα. I therefore think it safer to retain the MS reading, especially as τριττὰ was more likely to be corrupted into τριτα than conversely.

2 φαντάσματα—ποιοῦσιν. 596 E.

3 ἢ τι καὶ κτλ.: 'or whether again there is something in what they say.' ἢ καὶ is sometimes thus used instead of ἢ, from a feeling that it introduces something additional, viz. an additional alternative. Cf. (with Schneider) Hom. II. II 238 and Pl. Laws 744 A. The force of ἢ καὶ in Ap. 27 E, Phaedr. 269 A and infra 602 D, 605 D is nearly, but not quite, the same.

6 ἐπὶ—δημιουργία depends on σπονδάζειν, rather than on ἀφεῖναι. The word σπονδάζειν is emphatic: he might occasionally παίζειν ἐν τοῖς τοιούτοις, but he would never make it the serious business of his life: cf. infra 602 B, VII 536 C n. and Phaedr. 276 C ff. The whole of this passage reminds us very strongly of the depreciatory estimate of written books in the Phaedrus. Cf. 599 B n.

7 τοῦτο—ἔχοντα: 'set this in the forefront of his life as his best possession,' ἔχοντα; Οὐκ ἔγωγε. Ἄλλ' εἴπερ γε, οἶμαι, ἐπιστήμων εἴη τῇ ἀληθείᾳ τούτων πέρι, ἅπερ καὶ μιμείται, πολὺ πρότερον ἐν τοῖς 10 ἔργοις ἂν σπουδάσειεν ἢ ἐπὶ τοῖς μιμήμασι, καὶ περὶ τοῦτο ἂν πολλὰ καὶ καλὰ ἔργα ἑαυτοῦ καταλιπεῖν μνημεῖα, καὶ εἶναι προθυμοῖτ' ἂν μᾶλλον ὁ ἐγκωμιαζόμενος ἢ ὁ ἐγκωμιάζων. Οἶμαι, ἔφη· οὐ γὰρ ἐξ ἴσου ἢ τε τιμὴ καὶ ἡ ὠφελία. Τῶν μὲν τοίνυν ἄλλων πέρι μὴ ἀπαιτῶμεν λόγον Ὅμηρον ἢ ἄλλον ὄντινον τῶν ποιητῶν,

 15 ἔρωτῶντες, εἰ ἱατρικὸς ἦν τις αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ μὴ μιμητὴς μόνον ἱατρικῶν λόγων, τίνας ὑγίεις ποιητὴς τις τῶν παλαιῶν ἢ τῶν νέων λέγεται πεποιηκέναι, ὥσπερ Ἀσκληπίος, ἢ τίνας μαθητὰς ἱατρικῆς κατελίπετο, ὥσπερ ἐκεῖνος τοὺς ἐκγόνους, μὴδ' αὖ περὶ τὰς ἄλλας τέχνας αὐτοὺς ἐρωτῶμεν, ἀλλ' ἐῴμεν· περὶ δὲ ὧν μεγίστων τε καὶ
 20 καλλίστων ἐπιχειρεῖ λέγειν Ὅμηρος, πολέμων τε πέρι καὶ στρατηγιῶν καὶ διοικήσεων πόλεων καὶ παιδείας πέρι ἀνθρώπου, δίκαιόν που ἐρωτᾶν αὐτὸν πυνθανομένους· ὦ φίλε Ὅμηρε, εἴπερ μὴ τρίτος ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας εἰ ἀρετῆς πέρι, εἰδώλου δημιουργός, ὃν δὴ μιμητὴν ὠρισάμεθα, ἀλλὰ καὶ δεύτερος, καὶ οἶός τε ἦσθα
 25 γινώσκειν, ποῖα ἐπιτηδεύματα βελτίους ἢ χειροῦς ἀνθρώπους ποιεῖ ἰδίᾳ καὶ δημοσίᾳ, λέγε ἡμῖν, τίς τῶν πόλεων διὰ σέ βέλτιον

15. μὴ A²Π: nescio an omiserit A¹.

in accordance with the maxim τὰ καλὰ τρέψαι ἔξω in Pind. Pyth. 3. 83. προστήσασθαι is used like πρόστασις IX 577 A, and προστήσασθαι in VII 531 B is not very different. Others (Schneider, Stallbaum, etc.) think προστήσασθαι κτλ. means 'to set before his life' as an aim or goal. In itself, this rendering is unexceptionable; but it does not suit with ὡς βέλτιστον ἔχοντα. The word ἔχοντα cannot be equivalent to ἡγούμενον 'considering' (in spite of the exceptional phrase ἐντίμως ἔχειν VII 528 B n.); nor is it easy to accept the version of Schneider "und dieses als das beste was er könnte." The emphasis requires us to take ἔχοντα in its full sense ("als das beste was er habe" Schleiermacher). Stallbaum conjectures ὡς βέλτιστ' ἂν ἔχοντα, but the text is sound. For βέλτιστον instead of τὸ βέλτιστον cf. (with Schneider) μέγιστον ἀγαθόν in I 330 D.

599 B 9 ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις. ἐπὶ for ἐν is called for by Herwerden, but cf. Laus 834 B: τὰς σπουδὰς—τὰς τε ἐν τῇ τροφῇ καὶ τὰς περὶ ἀγωνίαν αὐτῶν. In ἔργοις there is combined the twofold sense of 'deeds' and 'originals') (μιμήματα: the originals of dramatic μίμης are actions (603 C n.).

11 καὶ εἶναι—ἐγκωμιάζων. He would rather be Achilles than Homer. There is another side of the question, represented by Pindar's ῥῆμα δ' ἐργμάτων χρονιώτερον βιοτεύει (Nem. 4. 6), and by Plato himself very forcibly in Symp. 209 D, and it is certainly unfair to insinuate that no one would write good poems if he were capable of doing great deeds. Some of Plato's expressions in this passage almost suggest the tone of a man of letters pining for a life of action: cf. VI 496 D nn.

13 ὠφέλεια: not simply to the agent himself: cf. σφᾶς ὠφελικέαι 599 E.

599 C 15 ἐρωτῶντες κτλ. Cf. Ion 537 C ff., Ap. 22 A—C. τοὺς ἐκγόνους are of course the Asclepiadae: see on III 405 D.

599 D 24 ὠρισάμεθα κτλ. See 597 E f. From ἀλλὰ καὶ δεύτερος we may infer that "the actual law-giver, in Plato's view, is second from reality" (Bosanquet).

26 τίς τῶν πόλεων κτλ. Contrast Symp. 209 C ff. where Homer and Hesiod ᾠκησεν, ὥσπερ διὰ Λυκούργου Λακεδαιμόνων καὶ δι' ἄλλους πολλοὺς E πολλὰ μεγάλαί τε καὶ μικραί; σὲ δὲ τίς αἰτιάται πόλις νομο-θέτην ἀγαθὸν γεγονέναι καὶ σφᾶς ὠφελῆκεναι; Χαρώνδαν μὲν γὰρ Ἰταλία καὶ Σικελία, καὶ ἡμεῖς Σόλων· σὲ δὲ τίς; ἔξει τινα 30 εἰπεῖν; Οὐκ οἶμαι, ἔφη ὁ Γλαῦκων· οὐκ οὐκ λέγεται γε οὐδ' ὑπ' 00 αὐτῶν Ὀμηριδῶν. Ἀλλὰ δὴ τίς πόλεμος ἐπὶ Ὀμήρου ὑπ' ἐκείνου ἄρχοντος ἢ συμβουλευόντος εἰς πολέμηθεις μνημονεύεται; Οὐδέεις.

 Ἀλλ' οἷα δὴ εἰς τὰ ἔργα σοφοῦ ἀνδρὸς πολλὰ ἐπίνοιαι καὶ εὐμήχανοι εἰς τέχνας ἢ τινας ἄλλας πράξεις λέγονται, ὥσπερ αὖ Θάλεω τε περὶ τοῦ Μιλησίου καὶ Ἀναχάρσιος τοῦ Σκύθου; Οὐδαμῶς 5 τοιοῦτον οὐδέν. Ἀλλὰ δὴ εἰ μὴ δημοσίᾳ, ἰδίᾳ τισὶν ἡγεμῶν παιδεῖας αὐτὸς ζῶν λέγεται Ὀμηρος γενέσθαι, οὐ ἐκείνου ἡγάπων ἐπὶ B συνουσίᾳ καὶ τοῖς ὑστέροις ὁδὸν τινα¹ παρέδωκεν βίου Ὀμηρικῇ, ὥσπερ Πυθαγόρας αὐτὸς τε διαφερόντως ἐπὶ τούτῳ ἡγαπήθη, καὶ

31. Ita Π: οὐκ οὐκ—μνημονεύεται Socrati tribuit A. 3. εἰς A²Π: om. A¹.

are linked with Lycurgus, Solon, καὶ ἄλλοι ἄλλοι πολλοῦ ἀνδρες, καὶ ἐν Ἑλλήσιν καὶ ἐν βαρβάροις, πολλὰ καὶ καλὰ ἀποφνημένοι ἔργα, γεννήσαντες παντοίαν ἀρετήν.

599 E 28 σὲ δὲ τίς κτλ. Yet it is a genuinely Greek sentiment that 'Poets are the unacknowledged'—a Greek would have said 'acknowledged'—'legislators of the world' (Shelley).

29 Χαρώνδαν κτλ. Charondas, of Catana in Sicily, the legislator of the Chalcidian colonies in Italy and Sicily, is not elsewhere mentioned by Plato, though frequently by Aristotle: see Susemihl and Hicks on Arist. Pol. A 2. 1252^b 14. The date of Charondas is probably the sixth century B.C.: see Niese in Pauly-Wissowa art. Charondas, where the authorities relating to this early legislator are cited and reviewed. It is worth noting, in view of Ἰταλία here and elsewhere in Plato (Laws 777 C, Tim. 20 A: cf. also Laws 659 B), that an argument against the genuineness of the seventh Platonic Epistle has been derived from the fact that it mentions Italy (326 B, 339 D): see Hermann, Gesch. u. System p. 591 n. 213.

32 Ὀμηριδῶν: 'votaries of Homer,' 'Homer's devotees.' So the word is rightly explained by Heine (de rat. quae Pl. c. poet. Gr. intercedit pp. 18—22), and also by Jebb (Homer p. 78). Cf. Ὀμήρου ἐπαινέταις 606 E and the use of Ὀμηρίδαι in Ion 530 E, Phaedr. 252 B. The original meaning of Ὀμηρίδαι is discussed by Jebb l.c.

ἀλλὰ δὴ like ἀλλὰ γάρ= 'at enim' (II 365 C n.).

600 A 3 εἰς τὰ ἔργα should be connected with σοφοῦ. The omission of εἰς in A¹ (see cr. n.) is apparently accidental, for it occurs in all other MSS.

4 Θάλεω τε—καὶ Ἀναχάρσιος. Plato retains the Ionic genitive in the Ionic name: cf. Arist. Pol. A 11. 1259^a 6 Θάλεω τοῦ Μιλησίου. On Thales' useful discoveries see Zeller² I p. 183 n. 2. Anacharsis was credited by some authorities with the invention of the anchor and the potter's wheel (D. L. I 105).

8 ὁδὸν τινα—βίου Ὀμηρικῇ. Yet in another and wider sense Homer was the founder of a 'way of life,' and the ὁδὸς Ὀμηρικῇ, which Plato so strongly condemns in Books II and III, was in fact the ὁδὸς Ἑλληνικῇ (Reber Platon u. die Poesie p. 25). From this point of view Plato's antagonism to Homer is only a symptom of his profound dissent from much that we are accustomed to regard as essentially characteristic of the Greek view of life. See on v 470 E and Bohne Wie gelangt P. zur Aufstellung s. Staatsideals, etc. p. 38.

10 οἱ ὕστεροι ἔτι καὶ νῦν Πυθαγόρειον τρόπον ἐπονομάζοντες τοῦ βίου διαφανεῖς πῃ δοκοῦσιν εἶναι ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις; Οὐδ' αὖ, ἔφη, τοιοῦτον οὐδὲν λέγεται. ὁ γὰρ Κρεώφυλος, ὃ Σώκρατες, ἴσως, ὁ τοῦ Ὀμήρου ἑταῖρος, τοῦ ὀνόματος ἂν γελοιότερος ἔτι πρὸς παιδείαν φανεῖη, εἰ τὰ λεγόμενα περὶ Ὀμήρου ἀληθῆ. λέγεται γὰρ ὡς 15 πολλή τις ἀμέλεια ἰ περὶ αὐτὸν ἦν ἐπ' αὐτοῦ ἐκείνου, ὅτε ἔζη. C

IV. Λέγεται γὰρ οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. ἀλλ' οἶει, ὦ Γλαῦκων, εἰ τῷ ὄντι οἷός τ' ἦν παιδεύειν ἀνθρώπους καὶ βελτίους ἀπεργάζεσθαι Ὀμηρος, ἥτε περὶ τούτων οὐ μιμῆσθαι ἀλλὰ γιγνώσκειν δυνάμενος, οὐκ ἄρ' ἂν πολλοὺς ἑταίρους ἐποιήσατο καὶ ἐτιμᾶτο καὶ ἡγαπᾶτο 20 ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ Πρωταγόρας μὲν ἄρα ὁ Ἀβδηρίτης καὶ Πρόδικος

600 B 10 Πυθαγόρειον τρόπον—τοῦ βίου. The aim of the Πυθαγόρειος βίος was ἐπεσθαι θεῷ, and the rules of abstinence etc. by which its votaries sought to 'follow God' made them conspicuous (διαφανεῖς) and exceptional among the Greeks. See Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 159—171.

12 ὁ γὰρ Κρεώφυλος κτλ. Κρεώφυλος was read before Ast on slight MS authority, and gives an excellent sense to τοῦ ὀνόματος—φανεῖη: but Κρεώφυλος is confirmed by all the best MSS, as well as by Callimachus (Epigr. 6 ap. Strabo XIV 638 Κρεωφύλου πόνος εἰμι κτλ.) and others: see Pape-Benseler s.v. Plato speaks of him as Homer's friend or disciple (for ἑταῖρος has this meaning here: cf. ἑταῖρους in C and Soph. 216 A ἑταῖρον—τῶν ἀμφὶ Παρμενίδην κτλ. with Bonitz Ind. Arist. s.v.); others, including the Scholiast, say he was his son-in-law. The Epic poem Οἰχαλίας ἄλωσις was ascribed to Creophylus by Callimachus (l.c.): but according to another tradition, Creophylus received the poem from Homer himself in return for hospitality (Suidas s.v. Κρεώφυλος).

13 τοῦ ὀνόματος—ἔζη. Cf. Cic. de re pub. III Frag. 38 Nobbe Sardanapalus ille vitio multo quam nomine ipso deformior (as if Σαρδανό-φαλλος). Κρεώφυλος (from κρέας and φύλον: 'Carnigena' 'Fleischgeburt,' suggests Schneider) is an ὄνομα γελοιον πρὸς παιδείαν: for Beef suggests anything but culture. "I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that does harm to my wits" (Twelfth Night I 3. 90). The Greeks had the same feeling: cf. Plato's remarks on the effects of over-much feeding and athletics in III 411 C—E μισόλογος δή, οἶμαι, ὁ τοιοῦτος γίγνεται καὶ ἄμουσος, and Euripides Frag. 284 Dindorf, with the comic fragment παχεῖα γαστήρ λεπτόν οὐ τίκτει νόον. Plato means that the proof of the pudding is in the eating: Homer must have been a poor teacher if his disciples (including Creophylus) learnt so little. Had he taught them successfully they would have proved their παιδεία by treating their master more respectfully: cf. Gorg. 519 C, D, where we are told that if teachers of δικαιοσύνη do not get paid by their pupils, it only shows that they have failed to teach their subject and therefore deserve no fees. Λέγεται—ἔζη means 'for it is said that he was much neglected even in his own age, when he was alive,' whereas it is precisely during his lifetime that he would have been most respected if he had taught to any purpose: witness the enthusiasm aroused by Protagoras, Prodicus and other teachers! Thus understood, ὅτε ἔζη has a strong rhetorical emphasis and ought not to be discarded (with Cobet, Baiter, and Herwerden). For ἐκείνου after αὐτοῦ referring to the same person cf. VII 538 B and Riddell Digest of Platonic Idioms p. 143 § 49. If we adopt Ast's conjecture and read ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ἐκείνου, the passage gains a little in point, because αὐτοῦ ἐκείνου will then refer to Creophylus: but it is difficult to make the subject of ἔζη different from the antecedent of αὐτοῦ ἐκείνου, and on the whole I no longer think there is any good reason for deserting the MSS.

600 C 16 ἀλλ' οἶει κτλ. For οἶει thus used cf. Men. 93 C with Heindorf on Theaet. 147 B.

20 Πρωταγόρας μὲν ἄρα κτλ. With.

ὁ Κεῖος καὶ ἄλλοι πάμπολλοι δύνανται τοῖς ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν παριστάναι D ἰδίᾳ¹ ξυγγυμνόμενοι, ὥς οὔτε οἰκίαν οὔτε πόλιν τὴν αὐτῶν διοικεῖν οἶοι τ' ἔσονται, ἐὰν μὴ σφεῖς αὐτῶν ἐπιστατήσωσιν τῆς παιδείας, καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ σοφίᾳ οὕτω σφόδρα φιλοῦνται, ὥστε μόνον οὐκ ἐπὶ ταῖς κεφαλαῖς περιφέρουσιν αὐτοὺς οἱ ἐταῖροι. "Ομηρον δ' ἄρα 25 οἱ ἐπ' ἐκείνου, εἴπερ οἷός τ' ἦν πρὸς ἀρετὴν δυνάμει ἀνθρώπους, ἢ Ἡσίοδον ῥαψωδεῖν ἂν περιόντας εἶων, καὶ οἳ μᾶλλον ἂν αὐτῶν ἀντεῖχοντο ἢ τοῦ χρυσοῦ καὶ ἡμίκαζον παρὰ σφίσιν οἶκοι E εἶναι,¹ ἢ εἰ μὴ ἔπειθον, αὐτοὶ ἂν ἐπαιδαγώγουν ὅπῃ ᾔσαν, ἕως ἱκανῶς παιδείας μεταλάβοιεν; Παντάπασιν, ἔφη, δοκεῖς μοι, ὦ 30 Σώκρατες, ἀληθῆ λέγειν. Οὐκοῦν τιθώμεν ἀπὸ Ὀμήρου ἀρξαμένους

21. Κεῖος A²: Κίος vel Κίος A¹ΠΞ q.

A²Π: ἐπιστατῶσιν ut videtur A¹.

23. ἐπιστατήσωσιν vel ἐπιστατήσωσι

26. δυνάμει Matthiaeus: δνεῖναι (sic) A¹Π:

δύναι (sic) A² q: δνῖναι Ξ.

27. περιόντας A²Ξ: περιόντας A¹Π q.

the structure of the sentence cf. (with Stallbaum) Crit. 50 E and Protr. 325 B, C; where ἄρα occurs, as here, in both clauses. See also on I 336 E and App. IV to Book I. Prodicus survived to 399 at least, but Protagoras seems to have died about 411; so that if the date of action of the dialogue is 410, the reference to Protagoras as apparently still living may seem an anachronism. But the slip is a trifling one in any case; and Socrates might quite well have spoken as he does even if either or both of the persons had recently died. See Introd. § 3.

600 D 22 οὔτε οἰκίαν—παιδείας. Cf. Prot. 318 E ff. and Men. 91 A ff.

25 ἐπὶ ταῖς κεφαλαῖς περιφέρουσιν: 'carry about shoulder-high' ('auf den Händen tragen' Schneider). Ast quotes Dio Chrys. Or. IX p. 141 A ὑψηλὸν φερόμενον ὑπὸ τοῦ δ'χλου, and the imitation of this passage by Themistius Or. XXI p. 254 A ὃν ἡμεῖς διὰ ταύτην τὴν φαντασίαν μόνον οὐκ ἐπὶ ταῖς κεφαλαῖς περιφέρομεν. It is clear that the phrase has a honorific meaning, so that it cannot be, as Erasmus (quoted by Ast) imagined, "translatum—a matribus ac nutricibus, quae infantulos cunis impositos capite portant," whether children were thus carried in antiquity or no.

26 δυνάμει. See cr. n. I agree with Hermann, Baier and the Oxford editors in preferring δυνάμει to δνῖναι (so Bekker and Schneider on slight MS authority) or δνῆσαι (Stallbaum, after one MS of Aristides II p. 432). δνῆσαι is a very dubious formation, and the present gives a better meaning than the aorist. The error arose from lipography of -να-: and δνεῖναι, δνῆναι look like attempts to make the residue into an infinitive.

600 E 28 παρὰ σφίσιν οἶκοι εἶναι: 'to be with them in their homes.' παρὰ σφίσιν οἰκεῖν, which Cobet (*V. L.*² p. 534) and Herwerden desire to read, would not necessarily mean more than 'to dwell in their country.' With the sentiment cf. Men. 89 B (quoted below).

29 αὐτοὶ ἂν ἐπαιδαγώγουν: 'they would have made themselves their tutors and escorted them' etc. παιδαγωγῆν is used in the same playful way in Alc. I 135 D κινδυνεύσομεν μεταβαλεῖν τὸ σχῆμα, ὦ Σώκρατες, τὸ μὲν σὺν ἐγῷ, σὺ δὲ τοῦμόν· οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ὅπως οὐ παιδαγωγῶ σε ἀπὸ τῆσδε τῆς ἡμέρας, σὺ δ' ὑπ' ἐμοῦ παιδαγωγῆσει. The proverb οἷς παῖδες οἱ γέροντες perhaps lends an additional point to ἐπαιδαγώγουν, as in Soph. Fr. 623 Dindorf=Eur. Bacch. 193 γέρον γέροντα παιδαγωγῶ σ' ἐγώ.

30 μεταλάβοιεν. The regular sequence would be μετέλαβον, but cf. Men. 89 B οὓς ἡμεῖς ἂν—ἐφυλάττομεν ἐν ἀκροπόλει, κατασημνῶμενοι πολὺ μᾶλλον ἢ τὸ χρυσίον, ἵνα μηδεὶς αὐτοὺς διέφθειρεν (διαφθείρειεν conj. Madvig), ἀλλ' ἔπειδ' ἀφίκοντο εἰς τὴν ἡλικίαν, χρήσιμοι γίνοντο τοῖς πόλεσιν. The difference is the difference between 'should' and 'should have.'

πάντας τοὺς ποιητικοὺς μιμητὰς εἰδῶλων ἀρετῆς εἶναι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων, περὶ ὧν ποιοῦσιν, τῆς δὲ ἀληθείας οὐχ ἥπτεσθαι, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ νῦν δὴ ἐλέγομεν, ὁ ζωγράφος σκυτοτόμον ποιήσει δοκοῦντα | εἶναι, αὐτὸς τε οὐκ ἐπαίων περὶ σκυτοτομίας καὶ τοῖς μὴ ἐπαίου- 60
σιν, ἐκ τῶν χρωμάτων δὲ καὶ σχημάτων θεωροῦσιν; Πάνν μὲν οὖν. Οὕτω δὴ, οἶμαι, καὶ τὸν ποιητικὸν φήσομεν χρώματα ἄττα ἐκάστων τῶν τεχνῶν τοῖς ὀνόμασι καὶ ῥήμασιν ἐπιχρωματίζειν, 5 αὐτὸν οὐκ ἐπαίοντα ἀλλ' ἢ μιμῆσθαι, ὥστε ἐτέροις τοιούτοις ἐκ τῶν λόγων θεωροῦσι δοκεῖν, ἐάν τε περὶ σκυτοτομίας τις λέγῃ ἐν μέτρῳ καὶ ῥυθμῷ καὶ ἀρμονίᾳ, πάνν εὖ δοκεῖν λέγεσθαι, ἐάν τε
| περὶ στρατηγίας ἐάν τε περὶ ἄλλου ὁπουοῦν· οὕτω φύσει αὐτὰ B ταῦτα μεγάλην τινὰ κήλησιν ἔχειν. ἐπεὶ γυμνωθέντα γε τῶν τῆς

5. αὐτὸν—ἐτέροις II et in marg. A² (ubi tamen ἀλλὰ pro ἀλλ' ἢ et ἐν τοῖς pro ἐτέροις): om. A¹. 6, 7. ἐν μέτρῳ—λέγεσθαι II et in marg. A²: om. A¹.

32 πάντας τοὺς ποιητικούς: see on 595 C.

μιμητὰς εἰδῶλων: 'imitators of images.' The words can scarcely mean 'forgers of semblances,' 'imitative makers of shadows,' as suggested by J. and C., in spite of 599 D εἰδῶλου δημιουργός and τοῦ εἰδῶλου ποιητής in 601 B. The images which the poet manufactures are in fact images of images, according to both 598 B and 596 B ff.: cf. 602 B 12.

34 νῦν δὴ. 598 B, C.

ὁ ζωγράφος κτλ.: 'the painter will make what seems to be a shoemaker, in the eyes of those who understand as little about shoemaking as he does himself, but judge by colour and form.' The dative is the dative of person judging, and does not directly depend on δοκοῦντα εἶναι, though doubtless affected by it. This explanation is better, I think, than to construe τοῖς μὴ ἐπαίουσιν either directly with δοκεῖν (so Vermehren Pl. St. p. 120, comparing ὥστε ἐτέροις—δοκεῖν below), or with ποιήσει ('und für diejenigen, die auch nichts verstehen' Schneider).

601 A 4 τοῖς ὀνόμασι καὶ ῥήμασιν. The dative is instrumental.

6 δοκεῖν—δοκεῖν. The repetition "partim perspicuitatis studio, partim sermonis familiaris negligentiae cuidam tribuenda videtur" Schneider, who cites in illustration Latw 859 D, where there is a similar repetition of εἶναι. Other parallels will be found in Engelhardt Anac. Pl. Spec. III p. 44.

7 ῥυθμῷ καὶ ἀρμονίᾳ κτλ. Rhythm and Pitch are the two elements of Music: see III 398 D n. The words αὐτὰ ταῦτα mean 'just these' and no more: viz. Metre and Music. For the sense cf. (with Ast) Isocrates Erag. 8—10.

601 B 9 ἔχειν. ἔχει was read till Bekker, apparently without any MS authority. The influence of φήσομεν is still felt.

ἐπεὶ γυμνωθέντα—φαίνεται. Cf. Isocr. l.c. II ἦν γάρ τις τῶν ποιημάτων τῶν εὐδοκιμούντων τὰ μὲν ὀνόματα καὶ τὰς διανοίας καταλίπη, τὸ δὲ μέτρον διαλύσῃ, φανήσεται πολὺ καταδεέστερα τῆς δόξης ἢς νῦν ἔχομεν περὶ αὐτῶν and Pl. Gorg. 502 C, Symp. 205 C, Phaedr. 258 D ἐν μέτρῳ ὡς ποιητής, ἢ ἄνευ μέτρον ὡς ἰδιώτης. A cursory inspection of these passages of Plato might lead one to suppose that he defined poetry as no more than λόγος ἔχων μέτρον, but we can see from other passages in his writings that it was not the μέτρον, but the μῦθος which appeared to him to be the most essential part of poetry (e.g. Phaedr. 61 B ἐννοήσας ὅτι τὸν ποιητὴν δεοί, εἴπερ μέλλοι ποιητὴς εἶναι, ποιεῖν μῦθος ἀλλ' οὐ λόγους: cf. Arist. Poet. 9. 1451^b 29 τὸν ποιητὴν μᾶλλον τῶν μύθων εἶναι δεῖ ποιητὴν ἢ τῶν μέτρων. See also Walter Gesch. d. Aesthetik im Alt. pp. 460, 463). Whether Plato would have spoken of a prose romance as a poem, is another question, and the passages to which I have referred make it unlikely that he would have done so. Aristotle seems to attach less importance than μουσικῆς χρωμάτων τὰ τῶν ποιητῶν, αὐτὰ ἐφ' αὐτῶν λεγόμενα, ¹⁰ οἶμαί σε εἶδέναι οἷα φαίνεται. τεθέασαι γάρ που. "Εγώγ', ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἔοικεν τοῖς τῶν ὠραίων προσώποις, καλῶν δὲ μή, οἷα γίγνεται ἰδεῖν, ὅταν αὐτὰ τὸ ἄνθος προλίπη; Παντάπασιν, ἦ δ' ὅς. "Ιθι δῆ, τόδε ἄθρει· ὁ τοῦ εἰδώλου ποιητῆς, ὁ μιμητῆς, C φαμέν, τοῦ μὲν ὄντος οὐδὲν ἐπαίει, τοῦ δὲ φαινομένου· ¹⁵ οὐχ οὕτως; Naί. Μὴ τοίνυν ἡμίσεως αὐτὸ καταλίπωμεν ῥηθέν, ἀλλ' ἱκανῶς ἴδωμεν. Λέγε, ἔφη. Ζωγράφος, φαμέν, ἡνίας τε γράψει καὶ χαλινόν; Naί. Ποιήσει δέ γε σκυτοτόμος καὶ χαλκεύς; Πάνυ

10. λεγόμενα A¹Π: γεγόμενα corr. A².

16. ἡμίσεως A¹Π: ἡμίσεος A².

Plato to the metrical form: see Poet. 1. 1447^b 17 ff. οὐδὲν δὲ κοινὸν ἐστὶν Ὀμήρῳ καὶ Ἐμπεδοκλεῖ πλὴν τὸ μέτρον· διὰ τὸν μὲν ποιητὴν δίκαιον καλεῖν, τὸν δὲ φυσιολόγον μᾶλλον ἢ τὸν ποιητὴν κτλ. and ib. 9. 1451^b 2 ff.: but it is doubtful whether even Aristotle could have said with Sir Philip Sidney 'One may be a poet without versifying,' although he would certainly not quarrel with the converse statement that 'one may be a versifier without poetry.' See on the whole subject Butcher *Aristotle's Theory of Poetry*² etc. pp. 143 ff. and Courthope Life in Poetry etc. pp. 68 ff.

¹¹ τεθέασαι γάρ που. An example is afforded by III 393 B ff., but the reference is more general.

¹² ἔοικεν—προλίπη. Aristotle cites this as an example of an εἰκὼν (Rhet. III 4. 1406^b 36 ff.).

601 B—602 B The condition of Imitative art in respect of knowledge may be apprehended in the following way. In connexion with every object we can distinguish three arts, that which uses, that which makes, and that which imitates it. The user alone has knowledge of the object; the maker, when the user instructs him, has correct opinion; but neither knowledge nor correct opinion can be attributed to the imitator. He merely copies what appears to be beautiful to the ignorant multitude.

601 B 14 Ἰθι δῆ, τόδε ἄθρει κτλ. Plato has already proved that Imitation is 'third from Truth' ἐκ τῆς εἰσθηνίας μεθόδου (596 A), i.e. from the ontological standpoint provided by his own Ideal Theory. The following argument takes up a different standpoint, according to which knowledge is defined as ἐμπειρία or practical familiarity (601 C, D, 602 A). The attitude assumed throughout this section resembles in some respects that of the historical Socrates (601 D n.). Can the two points of view be reconciled? Bosanquet makes an interesting attempt to do so (pp. 379, 389 ff.), but his misconception (as it seems to me) of Plato's Ideas renders his conclusions less valuable than they might otherwise have been. Krohn (Pl. St. p. 255) professes himself unable to effect a reconciliation. We must admit that Plato himself does not, as a matter of fact, endeavour in this passage to connect the two arguments. Had he chosen to make the effort, I think a careful study of Euthyd. 288 E—290 D and Crat. 390 B—E will shew on what lines he might have proceeded (see on ἐμπειρότατον in 601 D), but it is safer to suppose that he has shifted his ground, and is applying a new and less strictly scientific μέθοδος to shew that the Imitator is third from knowledge, as Imitation is from truth.

601 C 16 ἡμίσεως—ῥηθέν. See on 601 E. ἡμίσεως or ἡμισέως, in whichever way accented, is surely a full adverb, and not "the genitive used adverbially" (J. and C.) like ὀλίγον, πολλοῦ, etc., although there is good authority for the genitive in -εως from ἡμισυς (see Lobeck Phryn. p. 247). Stephanus preferred ἡμισέως: but the adverb follows the accent of the genitive plural (ἡμίσεων), and ἡμίσεως* ἐπίρρημα. Πλάτων Πολιτείας ἐκτῷ (Antiatt. in Bekk. Anecd. 98. 30)—a note which certainly refers to this passage: see Introd. § 4—supports the MS accentuation (Schneider). Liebhold's conjecture ἐπὶ μιμήσεως needs no refutation.

γε. Ἄρ' οὖν ἐπαίει οἷας δεῖ τὰς ἡνίας εἶναι καὶ τὸν χαλινὸν ὁ 20 γραφεύς; ἢ οὐδ' ὁ ποιήσας, ὃ τε χαλκεὺς καὶ ὁ σκυτεὺς, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνος, ὅσπερ τούτοις ἐπίσταται χρῆσθαι, μόνος ὁ ἵππικός; Ἀληθέστατα. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ περὶ πάντα οὕτω φήσομεν ἔχειν; Πῶς; Ἰ Περὶ ἕκαστον ταύτας τινὰς τρεῖς τέχνας εἶναι, χρησομένην, ἢ ποιήσουσαν, μιμησομένην; Ναί. Οὐκοῦν ἀρετὴ καὶ κάλλος καὶ 25 ὀρθότης ἐκάστου σκεύους καὶ ζώου καὶ πράξεως οὐ πρὸς ἄλλο τι ἢ τὴν χρεῖαν ἐστίν, πρὸς ἣν ἂν ἕκαστον ἢ πεποιημένον ἢ πεφυκός; Οὕτως. Πολλὴ ἄρα ἀνάγκη τὸν χρώμενον ἐκάστῳ ἐμπειρότατόν τε εἶναι καὶ ἄγγελον γίνεσθαι τῷ ποιητῇ, οἷα ἀγαθὰ ἢ κακὰ ποιεῖ

21. ὅσπερ A²Π: ὥσπερ A¹.

26. πρὸς ἣν Π: ἣν A.

21 ἐπίσταται. See on ἐμπειρότατον in D below.

601 D 24 οὐκοῦν ἀρετὴ—πεφυκός. The historical Socrates was in the habit of testing the beauty, excellence etc. of an object by the degree in which it fulfilled its function or purpose: see especially Xen. Symp. 5. 4 ff. together with other passages cited by Krohn Pl. St. p. 369. Plato himself adopts the same standard in I 352 E—353 E and elsewhere.

27 ἐμπειρότατον. Throughout the whole of this argument it is held that he who uses, e.g. an instrument, has knowledge of it (ἐπίσταται C, εἰδώς and εἰδότε E, εἰδότης and ἐπιστήμην etc. 602 A), and Plato says nothing to make us attach any metaphysical significance to the word 'knowledge,' which he often employs throughout his writings without any suggestion of the Ideas (e.g. II 374 D, IV 422 C). There is no doubt a certain sense in which—if we have regard to Crat. 390 b ff. and Euthyd. 288 E ff.—ὁ χρώμενος has, not indeed scientific knowledge of the Idea, but something analogous thereto. Dialectic, which is the scientific Knowledge of Ideas, is κατ' ἐξοχὴν the χρωμένη ἐπιστήμη, the Science which alone knows in what respect each thing is good and useful, and uses things accordingly (cf. Euthyd. 290 C, Crat. 390 C), proving itself thereby the royal or kingly science (VI 505 A n.). Thus the man who uses a single instrument correctly occupies the same relative position in regard to that object which the dialectician occupies in regard to the totality of things, and is, in his own small way, a king compared with the maker and imitator of the instrument. Cf. Bosanquet p. 390. But if Plato had intended us to pursue this vein, he would, I think, have furnished us with some hints in the course of the argument itself. See also on 601 B.

28 οἷα—χρήται: 'what are the good or bad points of the instrument he uses when he uses it,' lit. 'what good or bad things that which he uses does'—we cannot like the Greeks say 'makes'—'in use.' This interpretation, which is Schleiermacher's ("wie sich das was er gebraucht gut oder schlecht zeigt in Gebrauch"), seems to me the natural and obvious meaning of the Greek. In agreement, apparently, with Schneider's version, Campbell proposes "what specimens of that which he (the user) employs, the maker makes that are good or bad in actual use," remarking that "the correlation of singular and plural arises from the collocation of particular and universal. The instrument (sing.) is good in some cases, but bad in others (plur.)." Campbell's solution has the advantage of referring ποιεῖ to ποιητής, and corresponds more exactly with χρηστῶν καὶ πονηρῶν αὐλῶν in E. The grammatical difficulty is however, I think, insuperable. If the subject to ποιεῖ must be ποιητής, it would even be easier to make ὃ χρήται=τούτῳ δὲ χρήται—a rare form of attraction illustrated on V 465 D: but there is a certain elegance in applying ποιεῖ also to the instrument, which is in its way a 'maker too' and one by whose ἔργα the other maker must be guided. Herwerden remarks "expectabam potius oīa ἀγαθὰ ἢ κακὰ (sc. ἐστὶ) ἐν τῇ χρεῖᾳ ὧν (i.e. τῶν οἷς) κτλ." It is well that his expectations have been disappointed.

ἐν τῇ χρεία ᾧ χρῆται. οἷον αὐλητῆς που αὐλοποιῶ ἐξαγγέλλει
 Ε περὶ τῶν αὐλῶν, οἳ ἂν ὑπηρετῶσιν | ἐν τῷ αὐλεῖν, καὶ ἐπιτάξει 30 οἷους δεῖ ποιεῖν, ὁ δ' ὑπηρετήσῃ. Πῶς δ' οὔ; Οὐκοῦν ὁ μὲν εἰδὼς ἐξαγγέλλει περὶ χρηστῶν καὶ ποιηρῶν αὐλῶν, ὁ δὲ πιστεύων ποιήσει; Ναί. Τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἄρα σκεύους ὁ μὲν ποιητῆς πίστιν ὀρθὴν ἔξει περὶ κάλλους τε καὶ ποιηρίας, ξυνὼν τῷ εἰδῶτι καὶ 02 ἀναγκαζόμενος ἀκούειν | παρὰ τοῦ εἰδότος, ὁ δὲ χρώμενος ἐπι- 35 στήμην. Πάνυ γε. Ὁ δὲ μιμητῆς πότερον ἐκ τοῦ χρῆσθαι ἐπιστήμην ἔξει ὧν ἂν γράφῃ, εἴτε καλὰ καὶ ὀρθὰ εἴτε μί, ἢ δόξαν ὀρθὴν διὰ τὸ ἐξ ἀνάγκης συνεῖναι τῷ εἰδῶτι καὶ ἐπιτάττεσθαι οἷα χρὴ γράφειν; Οὐδέτερα. Οὔτε ἄρα εἴσεται οὔτε ὀρθὰ δοξάσει 5 ὁ μιμητῆς περὶ ὧν ἂν μιμῆται πρὸς κάλλος ἢ πονηρίαν. Οὐκ ἔοικεν. Χαρίεις ἂν εἴῃ ὁ ἐν τῇ ποιήσει μιμητικὸς πρὸς σοφίαν

29 ἐξαγγέλλει. Bekker and others write ἐξαγγελεῖ both here and in Ε below. The present echoes ἀγγελον γίγνεσθαι, and I agree with Schneider that change is needless, in spite of ἐπιτάξει and ὑπηρετήσῃ: cf. κείσθαι—ἔσεσθαι V 478 D. For the meaning cf. Crat. 390 B.

30. οἳ ἂν ὑπηρετῶσιν κτλ. I take this clause as a sort of parenthetical adjunct or characterisation of αὐλοποιῶ: thus the fluteplayer informs the flutemaker about his flutes—the persons who are his servants in the art of fluteplaying—and he will give orders how they should be made, and the flutemaker will serve him.' The liberty is great, but hardly greater than Plato allows himself elsewhere in the Republic: cf. III 411 C ἀκράχολοι οὖν καὶ ὀργίλοι ἀντὶ θυμοειδοῦς γεγέννηται, δυσκολίας ἔμπλεοι, IV 426 C ὡς ἀποθανομένους, ὅς ἂν τοῦτο ὀρθῶς, VI 496 C, D, I 347 A n.: and the break afforded by the interposition of this clause makes the difference of tense between ἐξαγγέλλει and ἐπιτάξει seem easy and natural. To the ordinary interpretation, which makes αὐλῶν the antecedent to οἳ ἂν, it is a serious and I think fatal objection that the verb ὑπηρετεῖν is used immediately afterwards of the flutemaker in a way which seems to imply that it has been used of him before: and it is also very strange and unnatural to speak of flutes as ὑπηρετᾶται ἐν τῷ αὐλεῖν. Jowett's translation "which of his flutes is satisfactory to the performer," though Schleiermacher, Schneider and Prantl take much the same view, cannot be fairly extracted from οἳ ἂν ὑπηρετῶσιν. Many inferior MSS read οἷα for οἳ: and Richards conjectures οἷα ποιοῦσιν or οἷα ἀποτελοῦσιν, but the change is much too great. I once suggested ὑπερέχουσιν for ὑπηρετῶσιν, but now believe the foregoing interpretation to be right.

601 E 32 ἐξαγγέλλει. See on ἐξαγγέλλει in D above.

πιστεύων. In the language of the Line, his state of mind is πίστις (cf. πίστιν ὀρθήν below): see App. I to Book VII. In 596 B on the other hand the δημιουργὸς πρὸς τὴν ἰδέαν βλέπει. Plato does not try to reconcile the two points of view (601 D n.): but he might say that the objective reality of that which guides the δημιουργὸς is always the Idea, whether he acts on his own initiative or under the direction of another. See on 596 B. It should be noted that Poetry and the other imitative arts are placed higher, and not lower, than δημιουργία in Phaedr. 248 E. Here, however, Plato's purpose is a narrower one, viz. by means of an illustration derived from the mechanical arts to complete the proof—hitherto only ἡμίσεως ῥηθέν 601 C—that the Imitator does not εἰδῶς ποιεῖν, as many assert (598 E), but is in reality third from knowledge.

602 A 3 δόξαν ὀρθήν. See IV 430 B n.

5 οὔτε—πονηρίαν. The word εἰκασία, though not here used, represents the Imitator's state of mind: see on VI 511 E and App. I to Book VII.

7 ὁ ἐν τῇ ποιήσει μιμητικὸς. Stallbaum remarks "cave unam poesim intelli-περὶ ὧν ἂν ποιῇ. Οὐ πάνν. Ἄλλ' οὖν¹ δὴ ὅμως γε μιμήσεται, B οὐκ εἰδὼς περὶ ἐκάστου, ὅπῃ πονηρὸν ἢ χρηστὸν· ἀλλ', ὡς ἔοικεν, 10 οἷον φαίνεται καλὸν εἶναι τοῖς πολλοῖς τε καὶ μηδὲν εἰδόσιν, τοῦτο μιμήσεται. Τί γὰρ ἄλλο; Ταῦτα μὲν δὴ, ὡς γε φαίνεται, ἐπικεικὼς ἡμῖν διωμολόγηται, τὸν τε μιμητικὸν μηδὲν εἰδέναι ἄξιον λόγου περὶ ὧν μιμεῖται, ἀλλ' εἶναι παιδιάν τινα καὶ οὐ σπουδὴν τὴν μίμησιν, τούς τε τῆς τραγικῆς ποιήσεως ἀπτομένους ἐν ἱαμβείοις 15 καὶ ἐν ἔπεσι πάντας εἶναι μιμητικοὺς ὡς οἷον τε μάλιστα. Πάνν μὲν οὖν.

V. ¹ Πρὸς Διός, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, τὸ δὲ δὴ μιμεῖσθαι τοῦτο οὐ περὶ C τρίτον μὲν τί ἐστὶν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας; ἦ γάρ; Ναί. Πρὸς δὲ gas": but ποίησις is certainly 'poetry' and nothing else, as Schneider shews, throughout the whole of this episode. It is poetical μίμησις with which the discussion is primarily and chiefly concerned: hence this passing exclamation—for it is nothing more: witness the asyndeton. With χαρίεις (ironical, of course) followed by οὐ πάνν, in which the irony disappears, cf. IV. 426 A, B (J. and C.). <οὐκουν> χαρίεις (Richards) is an unnecessary conjecture. The reading μιμήσει for ποιήσει (q and some other MSS) is tautological and absurd.

602 B 10 οἷον φαίνεται—εἰδόσιν. He will copy τὰ τῶν πολλῶν πολλὰ νόημα καλοῦ τε πέρι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων (V 479 D).

τοῦτο μιμήσεται κτλ. τοῦτο is surely not "a cognate accusative" (J. and C.): see on μιμητὰς εἰδῶν 600 E. For παιδιάν τινα see on 599 A, and on ἐν ἔπεσι 595 C n.

602 C—603 B Consider, again, what is the part of our nature to which Imitation appeals. Painting depends for its effect on the optical delusions to which we are subject, and against which the arts of measurement, counting etc., are our only safeguard. The rational part of soul applies these arts, and proves itself the best by accepting their results. The opposing part is therefore one of the baser elements within us; and base will be the brood that springs from its union with imitative art, in Poetry as well as Painting.

602 C ff. The reasoning from here to 607 A has been supposed to rest on a psychological theory irreconcilable with that of Book IV, to which the discussion expressly alludes (in 602 E). See for example Krohn Pl. St. p. 255 and Pfeleiderer Zur Lösung etc., p. 38. It is true that

Plato is here content, in view of his immediate purpose, with a twofold division of soul into (1) a rational and (2) an irrational, ἀλόγιστον (604 D, 605 B), or lower element. But the resemblance between the two theories is greater than the difference, for (a) the λογιστικόν is common to both, and (b) on its moral side the irrational element appears sometimes as the ἐπιθυμητικόν (606 D καὶ περὶ ἀφροδισίων—καὶ περὶ πάντων τῶν ἐπιθυμητικῶν κτλ.), sometimes as a degenerate form of the θυμοειδές (604 E, 606 A: cf. θυμοῦ 606 D). What is new is the assignment to the ἀλόγιστον of a certain quasi-intellectual power—viz. the power of forming false opinions (603 A, 605 C); but there was no occasion to raise this point in the earlier psychology, which was intended as a foundation for Plato's theory of the virtues. It becomes necessary to touch upon the question now, because imitative art aims at producing false opinions, and Plato accordingly assigns them to the ἀλόγιστον.

602 C 17 πρὸς Διός κτλ. The logical sequence is "iam vero haec imitatio non solum futilia efficit, sed etiam futilem animi nostri partem afficit" (Schneider). There is a certain awkwardness in making the transitional sentence interrogative in form, but the extreme animation carries it through. We cannot (with Stephanus) cancel οὐ and print a colon after ἀληθείας, for the interrogation is attested by πρὸς Διός.

18 μὲν τί. μὲν of course balances δὲ in πρὸς δὲ κτλ., and μέντοι (Stallbaum with some deterioris notae MSS) is not so good.

δὴ ποῖόν τί ἐστὶν τῶν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔχον τὴν δύναμιν, ἣν ἔχει; Τοῦ ποίου τινὸς πέρι λέγεις; Τοῦ τοιοῦδε. ταυτόν που ἡμῖν 20 μέγεθος ἐγγύθεν τε καὶ πόρρωθεν διὰ τῆς ὀψews οὐκ ἴσον φαίνεται. Οὐ γάρ. Καὶ ταῦτα καμπύλα τε καὶ εὐθέα ἐν ὕδατι τε θεωμένοις καὶ ἔξω, καὶ κοῖλά τε δὴ καὶ ἐξέχοντα διὰ τὴν περὶ τὰ χρώματα

Δ αὐτὴν πλάνην τῆς ὀψews, καὶ πᾶσά τις ἰ | ταραχὴ δὴλη ἡμῖν ἐνοῦσα αὕτη ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ· ᾧ δὴ ἡμῶν τῷ παθήματι τῆς φύσεως ἡ σκια- 25 γραφία ἐπιθεμένη γοητείας οὐδὲν ἀπολείπει, καὶ ἡ θαυματοποιία καὶ αἱ ἄλλαι πολλαὶ τοιαῦται μηχαναί. Ἀληθῆ. Ἄρ' οὖν οὐ τὸ μετρεῖν καὶ ἀριθμεῖν καὶ ἰστάναι βοήθειαι χαριέσταται πρὸς αὐτὰ ἐφάνησαν, ὥστε μὴ ἄρχειν ἐν ἡμῖν τὸ φαινόμενον μεῖζον ἢ ἔλαττον ἢ πλέον ἢ βαρύτερον, ἀλλὰ τὸ λογισάμενον καὶ μετρήσαν ἢ καὶ 30

Ε στήσαν; Πῶς γάρ οὔ; ἢ Ἀλλὰ μὴν τοῦτό γε τοῦ λογιστικοῦ ἂν εἴη τοῦ ἐν ψυχῇ ἔργον. Τούτου γὰρ οὖν. Τούτῳ δὲ πολλακίς μετρήσαντι καὶ σημαίνοντι μεῖζω ἅττα εἶναι ἢ ἐλάττω ἕτερα ἐτέρων ἢ ἴσα τάναντία φαίνεται ἅμα περὶ ταῦτά. Ναί. Οὐκοῦν

19. Ita A¹: ab A² τω super ποῖον, τὸ pro τῶν scripta legimus. Pro τῶν, quod praebebat etiam γ sed omisit Ξ, legitur in Π τῷ. 25. αὕτη Π: αὕτη Α.

22 καὶ ταῦτα καμπύλα τε κτλ. Nettle-ship (Lect. and Rem. II p. 349 n. 2) reminds us that images in water were among Plato's examples of τὰ ἐφ' οἷς εἰκασία ἐστὶν in Book VI 510 A: but, as Jackson points out, Plato is here thinking of refraction, and not of reflection.

24 πᾶσά τις—ψυχῇ. "pāsa cum αὕτη coniungendum et per attractionem pro πᾶν τοῦτο dictum videtur. τις nomini praepositum est ut Gorg. p. 522 D αὕτη γάρ τις βοήθεια ἐαυτῷ πολλακίς ἡμῖν ὁμολόγηται κρατίστη εἶναι" Schneider. For other examples of this sort of attraction see Riddell Digest p. 203 § 201. Conjecture is not necessary; but if it were, we could not acquiesce either in αὕτῃ for αὕτη (Richter Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 147, with one MS), or even, I think, in πᾶσι for πᾶσα (Richards). B. D. Turner in his edition of Book x thinks we may translate "and this weakness (πάθημα, as it is afterwards specified) is manifested in our souls as every species of confusion." This solution gives an awkward sense, and is grammatically less easy than Schneider's.

602 D 26 γοητείας οὐδὲν ἀπολείπει: 'leaves no magic art untried.'

27 τὸ μετρεῖν—ιστάναι. Cf. Euthyphr. 7 B, C, Prot. 356 B, Phil. 55 E, [περὶ δικαίου] 373 A and Xen. Mem. I 1. 9 ἃ ἐξεστὶν ἀριθμήσαντας ἢ μετρήσαντας ἢ στήσαντας εἶδέναι. See also on IX 587 B.

29 ἐφάνησαν: 'were discovered' 'were invented' = ἠυρέθησαν: cf. φανῆναι VII 528 D. The meaning is not 'were found by us to be' etc., as Liebhold supposes (Fleck. Jb. 1884 p. 522), and even Krohn, who actually thinks ἐφάνησαν may possibly contain a reference to some 'lost fragment' of the Republic (Pl. St. p. 252). Grimmelt, in his reply to Krohn, takes nearly the right view (de comp. et unit. etc. p. 90 n.).

τὸ φαινόμενον—βαρύτερον. 'The apparently larger' rules in us when we believe the nearer and smaller of two objects to be larger than a more distant object which measurement shews to be larger. Similarly in the other cases. There is no good reason for adding ἡ κουφότερον after βαρύτερον, as Madvig proposes to do: cf. IV 433 D n.

30 τὸ λογισάμενον κτλ.: 'that which has counted' etc. For ἢ καί = 'or if you like' see on 599 A.

602 E 31 τοῦτό γε κτλ.: sc. τὸ λογίσασθαι κτλ. In λογιστικοῦ there is a glance at the etymology of the word: cf. VII 525 B n.

32 τούτῳ δὲ—ἅμα περὶ ταῦτά κτλ.

- 35 ἔφαμεν τῷ αὐτῷ ἅμα περὶ ταῦτὰ ἐναντία δοξάζειν ἀδύνατον εἶναι;
 Καὶ ὁρθῶς γ' ἔφαμεν. | Τὸ παρὰ τὰ μέτρα ἅρα δοξάζειν τῆς ψυχῆς 603 τῷ κατὰ τὰ μέτρα οὐκ ἂν εἴη ταυτόν. Οὐ γὰρ οὖν. Ἀλλὰ μὴν τὸ μέτρῳ γε καὶ λογισμῷ πιστεῦον βέλτιστον ἂν εἴη τῆς ψυχῆς.
 Τί μὴν; Τὸ ἅρα τούτῳ ἐναντιοίμενον τῶν φαύλων ἂν τι εἴη ἐν 5 ἡμῖν. Ἀνάγκη. Τοῦτο τοίνυν διομολογήσασθαι βουλόμενος ἔλεγον, ὅτι ἡ γραφικὴ καὶ ὅλως ἡ μιμητικὴ πόρρω μὲν τῆς ἀληθείας ὅν τὸ αὐτῆς ἔργον ἀπεργάζεται, πόρρω δ' αὖ φρονήσεως ὄντι τῷ ἐν ἡμῖν B προσομιλεῖ τε καὶ ἑταίρα καὶ φίλη ἐστὶν ἐπ' οὐδεὶν ὕμει εὐδ' ἄλληθεῖ.
 Παντάπασιν, ἡ δ' ὅς. Φαύλη ἅρα φαύλῳ ξυγγιγνομεῖη 10 φαῦλα γεννᾷ ἡ μιμητικὴ. Ὅεικεν. Πότερον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἡ κατὰ τὴν ὄψιν μόνον, ἡ καὶ ἡ κατὰ τὴν ἀκοήν, ἦν δὲ ποιήσιν ὀνομάζομεν; Εἰκός γ', ἔφη, καὶ ταύτην. Μὴ τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τῷ

11. ἡ καὶ ἡ γ: ἡ A¹: ἡ καὶ A²ΠΞ.

'And to this principle, when it has measured and signifies that some given objects are greater or less than or equal to some others, the contrary appearances are often presented in connexion with the same objects at the same time.' τάναντία is 'the contrary,' i.e. not 'opposite appearances' in general, but the contrary (in any given instance) of the impression formed without the aid of measurement: cf. τάναντία in V 453 C, Euthyph. 6A et al. The object A, for example, which is nearer and smaller, appears larger than B: but the λογιστικόν discovers after measurement that A is smaller and reports accordingly. We have thus two contrary coexisting impressions of the same object. One of the two impressions belongs to the λογιστικόν: does the other also? No, because, as shewn in IV 436 A—C, it is impossible for the same faculty to hold contrary opinions simultaneously in relation to the same objects. Hence the part of soul which δοξάζει παρὰ τὰ μέτρα is not the same as that which δοξάζει κατὰ τὰ μέτρα (i.e. the λογιστικόν). And as the part which believes λογισμός (viz. the λογιστικόν, cf. 604 D, 605 B) is the best, that which opposes it will be τῶν φαύλων τι ἐν ἡμῖν. J. and C. follow Schneider in translating τῷ αὐτῷ as instrumental ('with the same faculty to form opposite opinions at the same time'); but it is much more natural to make it the dative with infinitive after ἀδύνατον, in view especially of τὸ—δοξάζον τῆς ψυχῆς immediately following. Rightly understood, IV 436 B is also in favour of taking τῷ αὐτῷ in this way. For other views of this difficult passage see App. II.

603 A 5 ἔλεγον: viz. in πρὸς Διός—ἔχει 602 C, although Socrates reads more into πρὸς δὲ δὴ ποῖον—ἔχει than the mere words by themselves convey.

603 B 7 τῷ ἐν ἡμῖν κτλ. See on 602 C.

9 φαῦλη—μιμητικὴ. Cf. VI 496 A.

11 ἡ καὶ ἡ. See cr. n. "Inter ἡ et κα facile καὶ ἡ excidere potuit" (Schneider).

603 B—605 C If we examine Poetry on its own merits, apart from the sister-art of Painting, we observe that Poetry imitates action. Now in action we often fluctuate between two impulses. When a great calamity befalls us, we are tempted to give way to grief, before the eyes of others; but Law bids us refrain, and try to cure the wound instead of hugging it. That which is best within us readily obeys: whereas the part that tempts us to dwell upon our sorrows is irrational, indolent, cowardly. Yet it is just this peevish, querulous side of human nature which most lends itself to imitation, and whose portrayal in dramatic art the vulgar most readily understand. Poetry is thus the counterpart of Painting; its products are low in point of truth, and it feeds our lower nature. We exclude the Poet from our city on both grounds.

603 B 12 μὴ τοίνυν κτλ. In 605 A Plato seems to think that his procedure εἰκότι μόνον πιστεύσωμεν ἐκ τῆς γραφικῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐπ' αὐτὸ αὖ C ἔλθωμεν τῆς ¹ διανοίας τοῦτο, ᾧ προσομιλεῖ ἡ τῆς ποιήσεως μιμητική, καὶ ἴδωμεν, φαῦλον ἢ σπουδαῖον ἐστίν. Ἀλλὰ χρή. Ὡς 15 δὴ προθώμεθα· πράττοντας, φαμέν, ἀνθρώπους μιμεῖται ἡ μιμητική βιαίους ἢ ἐκουσίας πράξεις καὶ ἐκ τοῦ πράττειν ἢ εὖ οἰομένους ἢ κακῶς πεπραγέναι καὶ ἐν τούτοις δὴ πᾶσιν ἢ λυπουμενούς ἢ χαί-ροντας. μὴ τι ἄλλο ἦν παρὰ ταῦτα; Οὐδέν. Ἄρ' οὖν ἐν ἅπασι D τούτοις ὁμοιοητικῶς ἄνθρωπος διάκειται; ¹ ἢ ὥσπερ κατὰ τὴν 20 ὄψιν ἐστασίαζεν καὶ ἐναντίας εἶχεν ἐν ἑαυτῷ δόξας ἅμα περὶ τῶν αὐτῶν, οὕτω καὶ ἐν ταῖς πράξεσι στασιάζει τε καὶ μάχεται αὐτὸς αὐτῷ; ἀναμνησκομαι δέ, ὅτι τοῦτό γε νῦν οὐδὲν δεῖ ἡμᾶς διομολογεῖσθαι· ἐν γὰρ τοῖς ἄνω λόγοις ἱκανῶς πάντα ταῦτα διωμο-λογησάμεθα, ὅτι μυρίων τοιούτων ἐναντιωμάτων ἅμα γιγνομένων 25 ἡ ψυχὴ γέμει ἡμῶν. Ὁρθῶς, ἔφη. Ὁρθῶς γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ· ἀλλ' E ὁ τότε ἀπελίπομεν, ¹ νῦν μοι δοκεῖ ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι διεξελθεῖν. Τὸ ποῖον; ἔφη. Ἀνὴρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐπιεικὲς τοιαύδε τύχης μετασχών, ὅν ἀπολέσας ἢ τι ἄλλο ὦν περὶ πλείστου ποιεῖται, ἐλέγομέν· που καὶ τότε ὅτι ῥᾶστα οἶσει τῶν ἄλλων. Πάνυ γε. Νῦν δέ γε τόδ' 30 ἐπισκεψώμεθα, πότερον οὐδὲν ἀχθέσεται, ἢ τοῦτο μὲν ἀδύνατον, μετριάσει δέ πως πρὸς λύπην. Οὕτω μᾶλλον, ἔφη, τό γε ἀληθές. |

 04 Τόδε νῦν μοι περὶ αὐτοῦ εἰπέ· πότερον μᾶλλον αὐτὸν οἶει τῇ λύπῃ

13. πιστεύσωμεν A²Ξ: πιστεύσομεν A¹Π: πιστεύωμεν g. 18. πᾶσιν (sive πᾶσι) ἢ Π: πᾶσιν A¹: πᾶσι A². 19. ἦν Ast: ἦ AΞ: ἦ Π: om. g. 28. τύχης Π: ψυχῆς A. I. τόδε ν: τὸ δὲ AΠΞ: τόδε δὴ g.

in arguing from Painting to Poetry (597 E n.) needs a word of explanation and defence. The following argument incidentally furnishes such a defence by deducing from an independent treatment of Poetry the conclusions to which we have already been led by τὸ εἰκὸς ἐκ τῆς γραφικῆς.

603 C 15 ὦδε δὴ προθώμεθα: 'let us put it before us in this way.' The object is easily supplied, and in other respects προτίθεσθαι is used as in II 375 D, Phil. 36 E and elsewhere: so that there is no good reason for suspecting the text. ὑποθώμεθα (Richards) has a different and less suitable meaning.

16 πράττοντας κτλ. Cf. Aristotle's definition of tragedy as μίμησις πράξεως κτλ. (Poet. 6. 1449^b 24) and Plato Latius 817 A ff. See also Stählin Stellung d. Poesie etc. pp. 35 f.

19 μὴ τι—ταῦτα; 'It was nothing beyond this, was it?' I have adopted Ast's conjecture (see cr. n.), which Schneider also favours, in preference to omitting ἦ with g and two other MSS, Stallbaum, and Baiter. The imperfect may be a reminiscence of III 399 A—C. The different usages of μὴ with the subjunctive have not yet been thoroughly explained (see Cl. Rev. x pp. 150—153, 239—244), but it seems clear that μὴ cannot in interrogative sentences with the 3rd person subjunctive mean 'num,' and the meaning 'perhaps' (as in μὴ ἀληθὲς ἦ) is unsuitable. The only exact parallel to this idiom in Plato is Parm. 163 D where Heindorf similarly restores ἦν, apparently with Waddell's approval. See however on the other hand Goodwin MT. p. 93.

603 D 21 ἐστασίαζεν. 602 C ff.

24 τοῖς ἄνω λόγοις. IV 439 C ff.

603 E 30 καὶ τότε. III 387 D, E.

604 A I τόδε. See cr. n. τὸ δέ, μαχεῖσθαι τε καὶ ἀντιτενεῖν, ὅταν ὁράται ὑπὸ τῶν ὁμοίων, ἢ ὅταν ἐν ἐρημίᾳ μόνος αὐτὸς καθ' αὐτὸν γίγνηται; Πολύ που, ἔφη, διοίσει, ὅταν ὁράται. Μονωθεὶς δέ γε, οἶμαι, πολλὰ μὲν τολμήσει 5 φθέγξασθαι, ἢ εἴ τις αὐτοῦ ἀκούοι αἰσχύνοιτ' ἄν, πολλὰ δὲ ποιήσει, ἢ οὐκ ἂν δέξαιτό τινα ἰδεῖν δρῶντα. Οὕτως ἔχει, ἔφη.

VI. Οὐκοῦν τὸ μὲν ἀντιτείνειν διακελευόμενον λόγος καὶ νόμος ἐστίν, τὸ δὲ ἔλκον¹ ἐπὶ τὰς λύπας αὐτὸ τὸ πάθος; Ἀληθῆ. Β Ἐναντίας δὲ ἀγωγῆς γυγνομένης ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ περὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἅμα 10 δύο φαιμέν ἐν αὐτῷ ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι. Πῶς δ' οὖν; Οὐκοῦν τὸ μὲν ἕτερον τῷ νόμῳ ἔτοιμον πείθεσθαι, ἢ ὁ νόμος ἐξηγεῖται; Πῶς; Λέγει που ὁ νόμος, ὅτι κάλλιστον ὃ τι μάλιστα ἡσυχίαν ἄγειν ἐν ταῖς ξυμφοραῖς καὶ μὴ ἀγανακτεῖν, ὥς οὔτε δήλου ὄντος τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ τε καὶ κακοῦ τῶν τοιούτων, οὔτε εἰς τὸ πρόσθεν οὐδὲν

2. ἀντιτενεῖν q: ἀντιτείνειν ΑΠΞ.

10. ἐν q: om ΑΠΞ.

though supported by most MSS and retained by Bekker and others, cannot, I think, be right. "Nescias τὸ cum νῦν construendum, an per se pro τούτῳ accipiendum sit. Hoc communi, illud Platonice loquendi consuetudini repugnat. Contra τῷδε offensione caret, et quoniam nexus inter haec et superiora intercedens paullo ante particula δὲ post νῦν significatus est, δῆ—abesse posse videtur" (Schneider).

2 ἀντιτενεῖν. See cr. n. Schneider and the more conservative editors keep the present; but it is much more difficult to defend such a difference in tense with τε—καὶ than for example in 601 D. Cf. I 342 A n. Stobaeus (Flor. 124. 43) has μάχεσθαι τε καὶ ἀντιτείνειν, which may be right.

3 μόνος is bracketed by Cobet (V. L. p. 361) and others. Cf. however Polit. 307 E αὐτοὶ καθ' αὐτοὺς μόνοι and other examples in Ast Lex. Plat. s.v. μόνος.

5 ποιήσει κτλ. Richards would write ποιῆσαι, but ποιήσει is much more forcible. The words ἀ—δρῶντα mean 'which he would not like any one to see him do': not "which he would not choose to see another doing" (J. and C.). Cf. ἀ εἴ τις αὐτοῦ ἀκούοι αἰσχύνοιτ' ἄν. It should be remembered throughout this passage that violent demonstrations of grief did not offend the Greek sense of propriety so much as they offend ours: cf. Bosanquet Companion p. 396.

604 B 8 αὐτὸ τὸ πάθος: "the affliction itself" (D. and V.): "das Leiden selbst" (Schneider), objectively understood: not "perturbatio" (Ficinus) or "Leidenschaft" (Schleiermacher). See Krohn Pl. St. p. 256.

10 δύο is of course neuter, but δύο τινέ (q Flor. U) hardly makes the gender clearer and ought not to be preferred.

ἐν αὐτῷ. See cr. n. αὐτῷ, which Schneider and others retain, has a great preponderance of MS authority, but is not sufficiently precise: for the two principles do not merely belong to the man, but are in him: cf. 603 B. This kind of error is a common one in Paris A: see Introd. § 5. Morgenstern's conjecture αὐτῷ, which Burnet adopts, would refer "ad proxime commemorata πάθος et λόγον, quae diversa et duo esse Socrates iam supra posuit, non nunc demum colligit" (Schneider). φαιμέν need not be parenthetical: for εἶναι can be omitted as well as ἐστὶ, and its presence would have been awkward here, on account of the εἶναι to which δύο is subject. See Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. pp. 33 f.

11 τῷ νόμῳ. Richards proposes τῷ λόγῳ in view of λόγος καὶ νόμος above and λογισμῷ 604 D. This conjecture would introduce a false and unpleasing contrast between τῷ λόγῳ and ὁ νόμος. The repetition of ὁ νόμος is for emphasis.

13 δήλου ὄντος—προβαίνειν. Cf. Euthyphr. 4 D and other grammatical parallels in Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 648.

C προβαίνουν τῷ χαλεπῶς φέρουσι, οὔτε τι τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ¹ ἄξιον 15 ὃν μεγάλης σπουδῆς. ὃ τε δεῖ ἐν αὐτοῖς ὃ τι τάχιστα παραγίγνεσθαι ἡμῖν, τούτῳ ἐμποδῶν γιγνόμενον τὸ λυπεῖσθαι. Τίμι, ἢ δ' ὅς.
 λέγεις; Τῷ βουλευέσθαι, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, περὶ τὸ γεγονὸς καὶ ὥσπερ ἐν πτώσει κύβων πρὸς τὰ πεπτωκότα τίθεσθαι τὰ αὐτοῦ πράγματα, ὅπῃ ὁ λόγος αἰρεῖ βέλτιστ' ἂν ἔχειν, ἀλλὰ μὴ προσπταί- 20 σοντας καθάπερ παῖδας ἐχομένους τοῦ πληγέντος ἐν τῷ βοᾶν διατρίβειν, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ ἐθίζειν τὴν ψυχὴν ὃ τι τάχιστα γίγνεσθαι D πρὸς τῷ ἰᾶσθαι τε καὶ ἐπανορθοῦν τὸ πεσόν τε καὶ νοσήσαν, ἱατρικῇ θρηνηφιδίαν ἀφανίζοντα. Ὁρθότατα γοῦν ἂν τις, ἔφη, πρὸς τὰς τύχας οὕτω προσφέροίτο. Οὐκοῦν, φαμέν, τὸ μὲν βέλτιστον 25 τούτῳ τῷ λογισμῷ ἐθέλει ἔπεσθαι. Δῆλον δὴ. Τὸ δὲ πρὸς τὰς ἀναμνήσεις τε τοῦ πάθους καὶ πρὸς τοὺς ὀδυρμούς ἄγον καὶ ἀπλή-στως ἔχον αὐτῶν ἂρ' οὐκ ἀλόγιστόν τε φήσομεν εἶναι καὶ ἀργὸν καὶ δειλίας φίλον; Φήσομεν μὲν οὖν. Οὐκοῦν τὸ μὲν πολλὴν μίμησιν E καὶ ποικίλῃν ¹ ἔχει, τὸ ἀγανακτικόν· τὸ δὲ φρόνιμόν τε καὶ 30 ἡσύχιον ἦθος, παραπλήσιον ὃν αἰεὶ αὐτὸ αὐτῷ, οὔτε ῥάδιον

16. ὃ τε A¹Π: ὃ τι A², sed corr. a manu recenti ὃ τε. 20. αἰρεῖ Ξ q: ἐρεῖ A: ἔρρει Π. 21. πληγέντος Π: πλήττοντος A. 23. τῷ (sive τῷ) q: τὸ AIIΞ. 24. ἱατρικῇ θρηνηφιδίαν Stobaeus (Flor. 109. 10) et Plutarchus (Cons. ad Apoll. 112 E): ἱατρικὴν θρηνηφιδίαν A²: ἱατρικὴν καὶ θρηνηφιδίαν Π et fortasse A¹: θρηνηφιδίαν Ξ: ἱατρικὴ τὴν θρηνηφιδίαν q. 25. βέλτιστον A¹Π: βέλτιστόν που A².
 31. αὐτὸ Ξ q et in marg. A²: om. A¹Π.

15 οὔτε τι κτλ. The sentiment is repeated and expanded in Laws 803 B ff.
 604 C 20 ὁ λόγος αἰρεῖ. Cf. IV 440 B and infra 607 E. The origin of this frequent phrase is, I think, to be sought in the legal rather than, as Schneider supposes, in the military meaning of αἰρεῖν. Cf. "voluptatem—convictam superiore libro" in Cic. de Fin. III 1. Badham (on Phil. 35 D) strangely conjectures that the figure is "borrowed from the draught-board."

ἀλλὰ μὴ προσπταίσαντας κτλ. Cf. (with Stallbaum) Dem. Phil. I 40. The curious error πλήττοντος for πληγέντος, found in several MSS besides A, is perhaps due to a reminiscence of V 469 E.

604 D 23 πρὸς τῷ ἰᾶσθαι κτλ. See cr. n. In Stephanus-Hase Thes. s.v. πρὸς it is said that γίγνεσθαι πρὸς τι = "occupatum; esse circa aliquid vel in aliquo vel in aliqua re," but no certain examples are given. I agree with the Oxford editors in thinking the dative right as against the accusative, which the German editors retain. Cf. VIII 567 A n. πεσόν. The conjecture παιῖαν (Herwerden Mn. XIX p. 340) is worse than unnecessary. ἀφανίζοντα agrees of course with the subject of ἐθίζειν, which is singular, in spite of προσπταίσαντας. We need not (with Apelt Obs. Cr. p. 12) write ἀφανίζοντας or ἀφανίζουσαν: see on I 347 A.

24 ἱατρικῇ κτλ. Stallbaum reads τὴν θρηνηφιδίαν with q (see cr. n.). "In dictione poetica articulum etiam minus desidero" (Schneider). The article would be comparatively tame.

26 τούτῳ τῷ λογισμῷ means the λογισμός expressed in λέγει που ὁ νόμος (B) — ἀφανίζοντα (D). Stallbaum was the first to restore λογισμῷ (from AII etc.) for the λογιστικῷ of inferior MSS.

604 E 30 ἔχει κτλ. ἔχει = ἐνδέχεται, as often. The Euripidean drama forcibly illustrates what Plato here says. τὸ ἀγανακτικόν may be regarded as a degenerate variety of the θυμοειδές: cf. III 411 A—C and supra 602 C n.

μιμήσασθαι οὔτε μιμουμένον εὔπετὲς καταμαθεῖν, ἄλλως τε καὶ πανηγύρει καὶ παντοδαποῖς ἀνθρώποις εἰς θέατρα ξυλληγομένοις.
 ἀλλοτρίου γὰρ που πάθους ἡ μίμησις αὐτοῖς γίγνεται. | Παντάπασι 603 μὲν οὖν. Ὁ δὲ μιμητικὸς ποιητὴς δῆλον ὅτι οὐ πρὸς τὸ τοιοῦτον τῆς ψυχῆς πέφυκέν τε καὶ ἡ σοφία αὐτοῦ τούτῳ ἀρέσκειν πέπηγεν, εἰ μέλλει εὐδοκιμήσειν ἐν τοῖς πολλοῖς, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὸ ἀγανακτη-5 τικόν τε καὶ ποικίλον ἦθος διὰ τὸ εὐμίμητον εἶναι. Δῆλον. Οὐκοῦν δικαίως ἂν αὐτοῦ ἤδη ἐπιλαμβανοίμεθα καὶ τιθεῖμεν ἀντίστροφον αὐτὸν τῷ ζῳγράφῳ· καὶ γὰρ τῷ φαῦλα ποιεῖν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἔοικεν αὐτῷ, καὶ τῷ πρὸς ἕτερον τοιοῦτον ὁμιλεῖν τῆς | ψυχῆς, B ἀλλὰ μὴ πρὸς τὸ βέλτιστον, καὶ ταύτῃ ὁμοίωται. καὶ οὕτως ἤδη 10 ἂν ἐν δίκῃ οὐ παραδεχοίμεθα εἰς μέλλουσιν εὐνομεῖσθαι πόλιν, ὅτι τοῦτο ἐγείρει τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ τρέφει καὶ ἰσχυρὸν ποιῶν ἀπόλλυσι τὸ λογιστικόν, ὥσπερ ἐν πόλει ὅταν τις μοχθηροὺς ἐγκρατεῖς ποιῶν παραδιδῷ τὴν πόλιν, τοὺς δὲ χαριεστέρους φθείρῃ. ταῦτόν καὶ τὸν μιμητικὸν ποιητὴν φήσομεν κακὴν πολιτείαν ἰδίᾳ ἐκάστου 15 τῇ ψυχῇ ἐμποιεῖν, τῷ ἀνοήτῳ αὐτῆς χαριζόμενον καὶ οὔτε τὰ
 μείζω | οὔτε τὰ ἐλάττω διαγιγνώσκοντι, ἀλλὰ τὰ αὐτὰ τοτὲ μὲν C

32. μιμουμένον II: μιμούμενον A. 3. τε A¹: γε A² (sed corr. τε a manu recenti) cum IIΞg. 11. ποιῶν A¹II: ποιοῦν A². 13. φθείρῃ A²Ξ: φθείρει A¹II: φθείροι g.

32 μιμουμένον. See cr. n. μιμούμενον, if it could be taken as passive, would be better and more pointed; but there is apparently no other example of the present participle of this verb used passively, and we are hardly justified in reasoning from the perfect (μεμιμμένα Crat. 425 D) etc. to the present. Schneider thinks μιμούμενον may be active, 'the imitator' being said instead of 'the imitation' ('nor is it easy to understand one who tries to imitate him' J. and C.). But we cannot help feeling that εὔπετὲς as well as ῥᾶδιον ought to agree with ἦθος. I therefore follow Stallbaum in preferring the genitive absolute μιμουμένου, which has the authority of g and several other MSS in addition to II.

ἄλλως τε—ξυλληγομένοις. Cf. VI 492 B.

605 A 3 πέφυκέν τε—πέπηγεν. It is easy to carry on the negative if we read τε and not γε, which is in all MSS except A¹. πέφυκε πρὸς, like πεποιήται πρὸς in 598 B, is here said of the relation of Art to that which it imitates, as appears from ἀλλὰ πρὸς—εὐμίμητον εἶναι. The word πέπηγεν means 'is framed' or 'constructed,' i.e. πεποιήται (598 B): cf. VII 530 D. The infinitive is the old dative infinitive of purpose 'constructed for pleasing' 'to please': see Goodwin MTF. pp. 297, 310 f. Various unnecessary and unpleasing conjectures have been proposed: the addition of οὐ before τούτῳ (Stephanus), ἡ σοφία αὐτῷ τούτῳ ἀρέσκειν πέφυκεν (Cornarius Ecl. p. 102): the transposition of πέφυκε and πέπηγεν (Valckenaer on Eur. Phoen. 923): and οὐ τοῦ τούτῳ ἀρέσκειν πεπείνηκεν (Richter in Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 147).

4 εἰ μέλλει—τοῖς πολλοῖς. See on VI 493 D and cf. Reber Pl. u. die Possie pp. 54—59.

5 οὐκοῦν δικαίως—ζωγράφῳ. See on 603 B.

605 B 12 μοχθηροὺς—πόλιν κτλ. τοὺς is not required before μοχθηροὺς any more than τοῖς before πόλιν (Herwerden's conjectures in Mn. XIX p. 340). With πολιτείαν—ψυχῇ cf. IX 590 E and X 608 B.

μεγάλα ἡγουμένῳ, τοτὲ δὲ σμικρά, εἰδῶλα εἰδωλοποιούντα, τοῦ δὲ ἀληθοῦς πόρρω πάνυ ἀφεστῶτα. Πάνυ μὲν οὖν.

VII. Οὐ μέντοι πῶ τό γε μέγιστον κατηγορήκαμεν αὐτῆς. τὸ γὰρ καὶ τοὺς ἐπιεικεῖς ἱκανῇ εἶναι λωβᾶσθαι, ἐκτὸς πάνυ τινῶν 20 ὀλίγων, πάνδεινόν που. Τί δ' οὐ μέλλει, εἴπερ γε δρᾷ αὐτό; Ἀκοῖον σκόπει. οἱ γὰρ που βέλτιστοι ἡμῶν ἀκροώμενοι Ὀμήρου D ἢ ἄλλου τινὸς τῶν τραγῳδοποιῶν μιμουμένου τινὰ τῶν ἡρώων ἐν πένθει ὄντα καὶ μακρὰν ῥῆσιν ἀποτείνοντα ἐν τοῖς ὕδурμοῖς ἢ καὶ ἄδοιτάς τε καὶ κοπτομένους, οἷσθ' ὅτι χαίρομεν τε καὶ ἐνδύντες 25 ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἐπόμεθα συμπάσχοντες καὶ σπουδάζοντες ἐπαινοῦμεν

17. εἰδωλοποιούντα *q*²: εἰδωλοποιούντι AΠΞ *q*¹.

605 C 17 εἰδῶλα εἰδωλοποιούντα κτλ. See cr. n. εἰδωλοποιούντα seems also to have been the reading of the first hand in Vind. F. The dative εἰδωλοποιούντι is retained by Schneider, who makes it agree with τῷ ἀνοήτῳ and regards ἀφεστῶτα as neuter plural. This interpretation, though grammatically tenable, is otherwise unsatisfactory. Plato (in 605 A) has just correlated Poetry with Painting because Poetry also (a) produces φαῦλα πρὸς ἀλήθειαν and (b) consorts with φαῦλόν τι τῆς ψυχῆς. On both grounds, he concludes, Poetry must be proscribed: for (b) τοῦτο ἐγείρει—τοτὲ δὲ σμικρά, and (a) εἰδῶλα εἰδωλοποιεῖ. The chiasmic sequence is usual in Plato. If we read εἰδωλοποιούντι, Plato assigns only one of his two main reasons for the exclusion of Poetry, viz. (b), and the correspondence between this and the preceding sentence disappears. On this account Stallbaum and others are, I believe, right in restoring the accusative, and making ἀφεστῶτα, as well as εἰδωλοποιούντα, agree with τὸν μιμητικὸν ποιητὴν. The error—an easy one after διαγινώσκοντι and ἡγουμένῳ—affected ἀφεστῶτα also in at least one MS, for Ξ has ἀφεστῶτι.

605 C—607 A. But the most serious count in our indictment is that Poetry is capable of corrupting, with few exceptions, even men of character and virtue. Tragedy stirs in us just those emotions which we are ashamed to indulge when suffering misfortunes of our own, and the consequence is that we succumb more readily in the hour of trial. The same may be said, mutatis mutandis, of comedy also. We shall therefore decline to model our lives after Homer, and refuse to surrender our city to the rule of Pleasure.

605 C 19 αὐτῆς. That is, τῆς ποιήσεως. Cf. VI 503 E n.

20 τὸ γὰρ καὶ τοὺς ἐπιεικεῖς. See on 595 B.

605 D 23 τινὰ τῶν ἡρώων κτλ. Cf. III 387 D. In ῥῆσιν—κοπτομένους the contrast is between a ῥῆσις or set speech, spoken and not sung, “quales multae in tragoediis, Euripidis praesertim” (Casaubon apud Stallbaum), and κομμοί, which are sung. Hence ἢ καὶ—κοπτομένους, ‘or if you like singing and beating the breast,’ is perfectly accurate, and we ought not to change καὶ ἄδοντας into κλαίοντας or κλαίοντας (with Ast, Cobet, Baizer) or ἄδοντας into ἀλύνοντας (with Winckelmann). For ἢ καὶ cf. 599 A n. The readings τινὰς—δντας—ἀποτείνοντας in q and some other MSS are only attempts to obliterate the common irregularity of a singular (τινὰ etc.) passing into a plural: see on I 347 A. Richards ‘suspects’ that Plato wrote μιμουμένου—ἀποτείνοντας—κλαίοντας—κοπτομένου. The conjecture is as unnecessary as it is bold.

25 χαίρομεν κτλ. Pity, according to Aristotle, as well as Plato, is aroused by Tragedy: see Poet. 6. 1449^b 27. With συμπάσχοντες κτλ. cf. Arist. Pol. Θ 5. 1340^a 12 ἐτι δὲ ἀκροώμενοι τῶν μιμήσεων γίνονται πάντες συμπαθεῖς, and with ἐπαινοῦμεν—διαβῇ Latius 800 D δς ἂν δακρῦσαι μάλιστα τὴν θύσασαν παραχρήμα ποιήσῃ πόλιν, οὗτος τὰ νικητήρια φέρει, Phil. 48 A τὰς γε τραγικὰς θεωρήσεις, ὅταν ἅμα χαίροντες κλάωσι and Ion 535 E. See also on 606 B and III 395 D.

ὡς ἀγαθὸν ποιητὴν, ὃς ἂν ἡμᾶς ὅ τι μάλιστα οὕτω διαθῇ. Οἶδα· πῶς δ' οὐ; "Ὅταν δὲ οἰκεῖόν τινι ἡμῶν κῆδος γένηται, ἐννοεῖς αὖ ὅτι ἐπὶ τῷ ἐναντίῳ καλλωπιζόμεθα, ἂν δυνώμεθα ἡσυχίαν ἄγειν 30 καὶ καρτερεῖν, ὥς τοῦτο μὲν ἀνδρὸς ὂν, ἐκείνο δὲ γυναικός, ὃ τότε Ε ἐπηρεάζομεν. Ἐννοῶ, ἔφη. Ἡ καλῶς οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὗτος ὁ ἔπαινος ἔχει, τὸ ὁρῶντα τοιοῦτον ἄνδρα, οἷον ἑαυτὸν τις μὴ ἀξιοῖ εἶναι ἀλλ' αἰσχύνετο ἂν, μὴ βδελύττεσθαι ἀλλὰ χαίρειν τε καὶ ἐπαινεῖν; Οὐ μὰ τὸν Δί', ἔφη, οὐκ εὐλόγῳ ἔοικεν. | Ναί, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, εἰ ἐκείνη γ' 60 αὐτὸ σκοποῖς. Πῇ; Εἰ ἐνθυμοῖο, ὅτι τὸ βίᾳ κατεχόμενον τότε ἐν ταῖς οἰκείαις ξυμφοραῖς καὶ πεπεινηκὸς τοῦ δακρύσαι τε καὶ ἀπο-δύρασθαι ἱκανῶς καὶ ἀποπλησθῆναι, φύσει δὲ τοιοῦτον οἷον τούτων 5 ἐπιθυμεῖν, τότε ἔστιν τοῦτο τὸ ὑπὸ τῶν ποιητῶν πιμπλάμενον καὶ χαῖρον· τὸ δὲ φύσει βέλτιστον ἡμῶν, ἵτε οὐχ ἱκανῶς πεπαιδευμένον λόγῳ οὐδὲ ἔθει, ἀνίστην τὴν φυλακὴν τοῦ θρηνώδους τούτου, ἵτε ἀλλότρια ἢ πάθῃ θεωροῦν, καὶ ἑαυτῷ οὐδὲν αἰσχρὸν ὂν, εἰ ἄλλος Β ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς φάσκων εἶναι ἀκαίρως πεινθεῖ, τοῦτον ἐπαινεῖν καὶ 10 ἐλεεῖν· ἀλλ' ἐκείνο κερδαίνειν ἡγεῖται, τὴν ἡδονὴν, καὶ οὐκ ἂν δέξαιτο αὐτῆς στερηθῆναι καταφρονήσας ὅλου τοῦ ποιήματος.
 λογίζεσθαι γάρ, οἶμαι, ὀλίγοις τισὶν μέτεστιν, ὅτι ἀπολαύειν

12. ἀπολαύειν Α'Π: ἀπολλύει ut videtur corr. Α'².

606 Α 1 ναί κτλ. It is unreasonable to take pleasure in and praise such exhibitions; for the appetite to which they minister is one which in the case of our own individual misfortunes we are careful to repress. Jackson points out that ναί ('ganz recht' Schneider) assents to what Glauco has just said, viz. οὐκ εὐλόγῳ ἔοικεν, and does not mean ναί, εὐλόγῳ ἔοικεν, as J. and C. suppose, taking ναί as the equivalent of the French si.

2 κατεχόμενον τότε: viz. ὅταν οἰκεῖόν τινι ἡμῶν κῆδος γένηται (605 D).

5 τότε ἔστιν τοῦτο κτλ.: 'is on those occasions the part of our nature which the poets satisfy and please.' τοῦτο is the subject, and repeats τὸ βίᾳ κατεχόμενον κτλ., while τὸ—χαῖρον is in the predicate. A difficulty has been felt because τότε now refers to poetical exhibitions, whereas the other τότε had a different reference; but the emphatic place of the second adverb seems to place it in opposition to the first, and mistake is made impossible by the presence in the one case of ἐν ταῖς οἰκείαις συμφοραῖς, in the other of ὑπὸ τῶν ποιη-

τῶν. Cf. also the double reference of αὖ—αὖ in 606 C. Madvig conjectures αὖτ' ἐστὶ τοῦτο, Richards τοῦτ' ἐστὶν αὐτό. I once read τοῦτό ἐστιν with q and Flor. U, but there is not sufficient reason for deserting the best mss. On the theory of Tragedy involved in this sentence see 606 B n.

7 τοῦ θρηνώδους τούτου. See on τὸ ἀγανακτητικόν 604 E.

606 B 8 ἐαυτῷ. "Plato passes from the rational part of soul to the man himself" J. and C. Hence καταφρονήσας below. The antithesis with ἄλλος ἀνὴρ makes the meaning clear; and a similar transition occurs, as Schneider points out, in VI 486 A: see also note ad loc.

11 καταφρονήσας—ποιήματος. He cannot bring himself to despise the whole poem: yet that is the only safe thing to do. From this point of view Plato's own καταφρόνησις ὅλης τῆς ποιήσεως is in itself the strongest testimony to the hold which Poetry had on him. See on 595 B.

12 ἀπολαύειν—οἰκεία. Cf. 111 395 C ff. and Latius 6:6 B.

ἀνάγκη ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων εἰς τὰ οἰκεῖα· θρέψαντα γὰρ ἐν ἐκεί-νοις ἰσχυρὸν τὸ ἐλεεινὸν οὐ ῥάδιον ἐν τοῖς αὐτοῦ πάθεσι κατέχειν.

C Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη. Ἄρ' οὐχ ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος καὶ περὶ τοῦ γελοίου, 15 ὅτι, ἂν αὐτὸς αἰσχύνοιο γελωτοποιῶν, ἐν μιμήσει δὲ κωμωδικῇ ἢ καὶ ἰδίᾳ ἀκοῖων σφόδρα χαρῆς καὶ μὴ μισῆς ὡς πονηρά, ταῦτ' οὖν ποιεῖς ὅπερ ἐν τοῖς ἐλέοις; ὁ γὰρ τῷ λόγῳ αὖ κατεῖχες ἐν σαυτῷ βουλούμενον γελωτοποιεῖν, φοβούμενος δόξαν βωμολοχίας, τότε αὖ ἀνίης καὶ ἐκεῖ νεανικὸν ποιήσας ἔλαθες πολλάκις ἐν τοῖς οἰκείοις 20 16. ἂν Schneider: ἂν codd.

A1: μιμήση Ξ: οὐ μιμήσεις γ.

17. μὴ μισῆς A2: μιμήσης (sic) Π et nisi fallor
20. ἀνίης Ξ γ: ἂν εἴης A: ἀνείης Π.

13 θρέψαντα—κατέχειν. Plato and Aristotle agree in holding that Pity is one of the principal emotions to which Tragedy ministers. The point at which they part company is where they begin to discuss the effect produced upon human life and conduct by the indulgence of this emotion in the mimicry of the stage. According to Plato, the emotion grows by what it feeds upon, and becomes more and more troublesome and deleterious in real life, the more we indulge it at the theatre: according to Aristotle, tragedy effects the 'purgation' of pity and its kindred emotions and tends to free us from their dominion in matters of more serious moment (Poet. 6. 1449^b 27 et al.). Aristotle hopes to effect by means of theatrical stimulation what Plato would attain by starving the emotions even in play. It is obvious that the Aristotelian theory of the drama was in this important respect developed in direct and conscious antagonism to the Platonic, to which, in other particulars, it owes much: see Finsler Platon u. die Arist. Poetik pp. 96 ff. I think it may fairly be argued that Plato's view is not less true to experience than that of Aristotle; for a spectacle which 'purges' the ἐλεεινὸν in one man may strengthen it in another and make him more than ever inclined to self-pity. On the contrast between the Platonic and Aristotelian views see Butcher *Aristotle's Theory of Poetry*² etc. pp. 237—268, especially 241 f., and for Aristotle's debt to Plato in his definition of tragedy consult the excellent essay of Siebeck Zur Katharsisfrage in his Unters. zur Phil. d. Gr. pp. 165—180.

14 ἐλεεινόν. ἐλεεινός and not ἐλεωνός is the Platonic form of this word: see Schanz Phaedo p. VII.

606 C 15 ἄρ' οὐχ κτλ. Cf. III 388 E.

16 ὅτι κτλ.: lit. 'that whatever jests you would be ashamed to make yourself, but which you are mightily pleased to hear in comic representations, or it may be in private life, and do not hate as bad, you do the same thing' etc. 'Whatever' is treated as equivalent to 'if any': see Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 945. I have followed Schneider in writing ἄν or ἃ ἂν instead of ἄν (see cr. n.), although he gives no other instance where ἄν appears to do double duty in this fashion. The usage, however, ought not on that account to be pronounced impossible; for cases in which a single relative pronoun forms, as here, the object of two opposing clauses, one representing a hypothetical, the other an actual situation, are extremely rare. We should also remember that ὅς is occasionally used instead of ὅς ἂν with the subjunctive, even in classical prose, according to the best MSS: e.g. Laus 737 B: see also Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 206. A sentence like the present is made easier by the mere existence of such an exceptional liberty of style. For the corruption of ἄν to ἃ cf. (with Schneider) Gorg. 486 E. All other attempts at emendation—and they are numerous—involve too much change: see App. III.

17 ἰδίᾳ: i.e. "intra privatos parietes et ab iis, qui artem non profitentur" (Schneider). The word has been held to refer to writings in prose: but see on II 363 E.

18 αὖ κατεῖχες. αὖ is "item, ut antea θρηνηῶδες" (Stallbaum). Madvig's conjecture ἄν should not be adopted. The second αὖ (τότ' αὖ) points the contrast between κατεῖχες and ἀνίης: cf. 606 A n.

ἐξενεχθεὶς ὥστε κωμωδοποιὸς γενέσθαι. Καὶ μάλα, ἔφη. | Καὶ περὶ Δ ἀφροδισίων δὴ καὶ θυμοῦ καὶ περὶ πάντων τῶν ἐπιθυμητικῶν τε καὶ λυπηρῶν καὶ ἡδέων ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ, ἃ δὴ φαμεν πάσῃ πράξει ἡμῖν ἐπεσθαι, ὅτι τοιαῦτα ἡμᾶς ἡ ποιητικὴ μίμησις ἐργάζεται; τρέφει 25 γὰρ ταῦτα ἄρδουσα, δέον αὐχμεῖν, καὶ ἄρχοντα ἡμῖν καθίστησιν, δέον ἄρχεσθαι αὐτά, ἵνα βελτίους τε καὶ εὐδαιμονέστεροι ἀντὶ χειρόνων καὶ ἀθλιωτέρων γιγνώμεθα. Οὐκ ἔχω ἄλλως φάναι, ἢ δ' ὅς. Οὐκοῦν, εἶπον, ὦ Γλαῦκων, ὅταν | Ὀμήρου ἐπαινέταις Ε ἐντύχης λέγουσιν, ὡς τὴν Ἑλλάδα πεπαίδευκεν οὗτος ὁ ποιητὴς 30 καὶ πρὸς διοίκησιν τε καὶ παιδείαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων πραγμάτων ἄξιος ἀναλαβόντι μαρτάνειν τε καὶ κατὰ τοῦτον τὸν ποιητὴν πάντα τὸν αὐτοῦ βίον κατασκευασάμενον ζῆν, | φιλεῖν μὲν χρὴ καὶ 607 ἀσπάζεσθαι ὡς ὄντας βελτίστους εἰς ὅσον δύνανται, καὶ συγχω-ρεῖν Ὀμηρον ποιητικώτατον εἶναι καὶ πρῶτον τῶν τραγωδοποιῶν, εἰδέναι δέ, ὅτι ὅσον μόνον ὕμνους θεοῖς καὶ ἐγκώμια τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς 5 ποιήσεως παραδεκτέον εἰς πόλιν· εἰ δὲ τὴν ἡδυσμένην Μοῦσαν

606 D 21 καὶ περὶ ἀφροδισίων κτλ.
Cf. III 389 D ff., and (for the psychological theory of this passage) supra 602 C n. ὅτι, which depends on ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος, is easy enough if we retain ὅτι in C: cf. VI 510 D οὐκοῦν καὶ ὅτι κτλ. and infra 613 D καὶ αὐ καὶ περὶ τῶν ἀδίκων ὅτι κτλ. Otherwise ὅτι becomes extremely difficult, although Stallbaum and Neukirch (in Pl. Pol. quaest. phil. I p. 49) think that ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος ἐστὶν may even then be supplied. The word was accordingly suspected by Ast and bracketed by Baier. Madvig conjectures ἐτι, and Richards would replace ὅτι τοιαῦτα by ἕτερα τοιαῦτα or οὐ τὰ αὐτά (understood interrogatively). The recurrence of ὅτι is, however, the strongest evidence in favour of its genuineness both here and above. See App. III. The pronoun τοιαῦτα takes its meaning from ἀφροδισίων etc. The note of interrogation after ἐργάζεται was added by Schneider. On ἄρδουσα see VIII 550 B n.

606 E 28 Ὀμήρου ἐπαινέταις.
Dümmler and Stählin suppose that Plato has Antisthenes in his mind: but see on 598 D.

31 ἄξιος. Campbell was the first to point out that ἄξιος, and not ἄξιον, is the reading of Paris A. There is no MS authority of any kind for ἄξιον, and it is intrinsically much inferior.

607 A 3 πρῶτον τῶν τραγωδοποιῶν. See on 595 C.

4 ὕμνους—ἀγαθοῖς. In Laws 801 E—802 A the same exceptions are allowed. Even religious hymns would fall under the heading of μίμησις, according to Plato's definition of the term: so that it is once more clear that his real quarrel is not with Imitation as such, but only with Imitation of the false and immoral. See on 595 A. For the construction cf. (with Stallbaum) Sympr. 194 D τοῦ ἐγκωμίου τῷ Ἐρωτι. In pp. 55—59 of his Stellung d. Poesie in der plat. Phil. Stählin gives an interesting sketch of the kind of Poetry which Plato would have admitted in the Republic.

5 ἡδυσμένην. The same word is used by Aristotle in a narrower sense, with specific reference to what he considers the ἡδύσματα or seasoning of poetry, viz. metre and melody: see Butcher *Aristotle's Theory of Poetry*² etc. p. 146 n. 1. Here ἡδυσμένην points the way to ἡδονή; and for that reason 'pleasurable' is a more suitable translation than 'honeyed' (Jowett) or 'highly-seasoned' (D. and V.), although the epithet also suggests a comparison with cookery (cf. ὄψον ἡδύναι Theaet. 175 E). For the sentiment cf. III 398 A f. αὐτοὶ δ' ἂν τῷ αὐστηροτέρῳ καὶ ἀηδεστέρῳ ποιητῇ χρώμεθα κτλ.

παραδέξει ἐν μέλεσιν ἢ ἔπεις, ἡδονή σοι καὶ λύπη ἐν τῇ πόλει βασιλεύσεται ἀντὶ νόμου τε καὶ τοῦ κοινῇ αἰεὶ δόξαντος εἶναι βελτίστου λόγου. Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη.¹

B VIII. Ταῦτα δὴ, ἔφη, ἀπολελογίσθω ἡμῶν ἀναμνησθεῖσιν περὶ ποιήσεως, ὅτι εἰκότως ἄρα τότε αὐτὴν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἀπε- 10 στέλλομεν τοιαύτην οὖσαν· ὁ γὰρ λόγος ἡμᾶς ἔρει. προσείπωμεν δὲ αὐτῇ, μὴ καὶ τίνα σκληρότητα ἡμῶν καὶ ἀγροικίαν καταγνῶ, ὅτι παλαιὰ μὲν τις διαφορὰ φιλοσοφία τε καὶ ποιητικῇ. καὶ γὰρ ἡ

9. ἀπολελογίσθω Ξ9: ἀπολελογίσθω AII. corr. A².

13. ποιητικῇ A¹Π: μιμητικῇ

7 τοῦ κοινῇ—λόγου: 'the principle which the community shall in every instance have pronounced to be the best.' See 604 B—D, where one example of such a λόγος is provided. For λόγος in this sense cf. (with Schneider) Crit. 46 B ἐγὼ—αἰεὶ τοιοῦτος οἶος τῶν ἐμῶν μηδὲν ἄλλω πείθεσθαι ἢ τῷ λόγῳ, ὃς ἂν μοι λογιζομένη βέλτιστος φαίνεται. In his second edition Ast wished to place a comma after βελτίστου ('that which has ever been judged best by all, viz. reason'). This interpretation lends a certain weight and dignity to the clause; but the other is easier and more natural. Cf. Shorey in A. J. Ph. XIII pp. 364 ff. Plato elsewhere provides against what he takes to be the antinomian tendency of Poetry by enacting that the Poet shall παρὰ τὰ τῆς πόλεως νόμιμα καὶ δίκαια ἢ καλὰ ἢ ἀγαθὰ μηδὲν ποιεῖν ἄλλω, and submit all his works to a state censorship (Laws 801 C, D), although in a striking passage of the Politicus (299 B, E) he himself insists that freedom is the very life of poetry and every other art. See Reber Platon u. die Poesie p. 71.

607 B—608 B The quarrel between Philosophy and Poetry is nothing new; but, for our own part, we are willing to let Poetry return, as soon as she is proved to be not merely pleasant, but profitable. Till then, we shall use our argument as a charm to protect ourselves against her fascinations; for the issue at stake is greater than it appears.

607 B 9 ἀπολελογίσθω κτλ. See cr. n. The reading ἀπολελογίσθω—enumerata sunt or, according to Hermann, singulatim exputata sunt—though retained by Hermann and Baiter, is much less appropriate than ἀπολελογίσθω: for the whole of the preceding episode is an ἀπολογία or defence of Plato's attitude towards Poetry in Books II and III (595 A n.). ἀπολελογίσθω is also more in accordance with ὅτι εἰκότως ἀπεστέλλομεν: and the words ὁ γὰρ λόγος ἡμᾶς ἔρει 'non tam eorum sunt, qui ius suum exsequi, quam qui excusare se valuerunt' (Schneider). The corruption, which recurs infra 607 D in II, is by no means rare: see Stephanus-Hase s.v. ἀπολογίζομαι. See also on VI 490 A. On ὁ γὰρ λόγος ἡμᾶς ἔρει see 604 C n. προσείπωμεν δὲ αὐτῇ='let us tell her also.' With this use of προσει- πείν cf. II 375 E n.

13 παλαιὰ—ποιητικῇ. There are few traces of this 'ancient feud' in the extant fragments of early Greek poetry. Pindar furnishes one, Fr. 209 ed. Bergk, ἀτελὴ σοφίας καρπὸν δρέπειν (said of the φυσιολογοῦντες: see above on V 457 B). The early philosophers on the other hand were constantly falling foul of Homer, Hesiod and the poets generally on theological and moral grounds: see for example Heraclitus Fr. 35, 43, I I I, I I 9 Bywater, and Xenophanes and Empedocles in RP.⁷ §§ 82, 83, 140 A—140 D. The attitude of Pythagoras was equally hostile, if we may trust Hieronymus ap. D. L. VIII 21. Even those philosophers who defended Homer did not venture to take him at his word, but had resort to the allegorical method of interpretation (II 378 D n.). The antagonism between Philosophy and Poetry—the latter "immortalising in imperishable creations the traditional faith, the former, just on account of that faith, condemning those creations" Krohn (Pl. St. p. 261)—was appreciated in its true historical significance by those Christian apologists who, like Clement, make philosophy a προπαιδεῖα to Christianity—ἐπαιδαγωγεί γὰρ καὶ λακέρυζα πρὸς δεσπόταν κύων ἐκείνη κραυγάζουσα, καὶ 15 μέγας ἐν ἀφρόνων κενεαγορίαισι, καὶ ὁ τῶν λίαν σοφῶν ὄχλος κράτων, καὶ οἱ λεπτῶς μεριμνῶντες ὅτι ἄρα πένονται, C καὶ ἄλλα μυρία σημεῖα παλαιᾶς ἐναντιώσεως τούτων· ὁμως δὲ

15. λίαν Herwerden: δια A.

16. κράτων nos: κρατῶν codd.

αὕτη τὸ Ἑλληνικόν, ὡς ὁ νόμος τοῦς Ἑβραίοις, εἰς Χριστόν. προπαρασκευάζει τολινὴν ἢ φιλοσοφία, προοδοποιούσα κτλ. (Strom. I 5. 718 D, 720 A. Cf. Spiess Logos Spermaticos pp. 3—5).

καὶ γὰρ—πένονται. The source of these quotations has not been discovered. They are all from poets, as Schneider holds; but we ought not to take παλαιά too strictly, and infer from it that all of them are very old. Plato's main object is to make out that his quarrel with Poetry is nothing new, for Poetry and Philosophy have quarrelled from the earliest times; and it is therefore inherently probable that the quotations are of very different dates. There is no a priori reason why some of them should not be from the contemporary drama; but some of them should be older; and those who refer them all to comedy, such as Ast, Prantl, and Heine (de ral. quae Pl. c. poet. Gr. intercedit p. 50 n. 4), can hardly be right. Still less is Pfeleiderer justified in citing them as expressions of the indignation which, according to his own chorizontic views, Books II and III had aroused in comic poets (Zur Lösung etc. p. 34).

ἡ λακέρυζα—κραυγάζουσα. Cf. Laius 967 C, D καὶ δὴ καὶ λοιδορήσεις γε ἐπήλθον ποιηταῖς, τοὺς φιλοσοφοῦντας κυσὶ ματαῖαις ἀπεικάζοντας χρωμέναισιν ὑλακαῖς. The occasion which provoked this assault upon philosophy was—so Plato tells us—the atheistic teaching of Anaxagoras and his followers about the celestial bodies. Here the λακέρυζα κύων represents of course φιλοσοφία: but (in view of the passage in the Laius) it would be unsafe to identify δεσπόταν with Poetry. Probably the quotation is from some lyric poet.

15 μέγας—κενεαγορίαισι is presumably also a lyrical fragment, directed against some notable philosopher, or less probably against some philosophical figure—“cuius modi Δίνος in Nubibus Aristophanis est” (Schneider).

ὁ—κράτων: ‘the rabble-rout of all-too-sapient heads.’ I have combined Herwerden’s conjecture ΛΙΑ for ΔΙΑ with my own suggestion κράτων (from κράς) instead of κρατῶν (Cl. Rev. x p. 105). τῶν λίαν σοφῶν ὄχλος | κράτων looks like a tragic fragment, and a comparison with Med. 305 εἰμὶ δ’ οὐκ ἄγαν σοφῇ and Hipp. 518, El. 296 γνώμην ἐνείναι τοῖς σοφοῖς λίαν σοφὴν, suggests that the author is Euripides: cf. also VIII 568 A n. The head stands for the whole personality, as in the familiar use of κάρα and κεφαλὴ in Tragedy and elsewhere (πολλὰς ἰφθίμους κεφαλὰς Ἀἰδὶ προέλαψεν Il. 11. 55 ἢ μιὰρὰ κεφαλὴ αὐτῇ Dem. Cor. 153 et al.: see Blaydes on Ar. Ach. 285); and a learned poet like Euripides might the more readily have described philosophers by this feature, because the head, and not the heart or midriff, was believed to be the seat of intelligence not only by Hippocrates, but also by many of the philosophers themselves, including Pythagoras, Alcmaeo, Democritus and Plato: see Diels Dox. Gr. pp. 391^a 3, 391^b 5, 392^a 2, 427^a 8, Zeller⁵ i p. 448 and Gomperz, Greek Thinkers i pp. 148, 313. There are also, I think, traces of a similar view even in popular beliefs: see for example Ar. Clouds 1275 f. οὐκ ἔσθ’ ὅπως σύ γ’ αὐτὸς ὑγαίνεις. τί δαί; | Τὸν ἐγκέφαλον ὥσπερ σεσεῖσθαί μοι δοκεῖς. For other views of this passage see App. IV.

607 C 16 οἱ λεπτῶς—πένονται: ‘the subtle thinkers, how that they are beggars after all.’ This quotation is probably from comedy, which abounds in references to μεριμνοφροντισταῖ, λεπτολόγοι etc. (cf. Ar. Clouds 101, 153 al.), and constantly ridicules the poverty and destitution of οἱ σοφοί: see the passages quoted in my edition of the Apology, pp. VIII f. There is nothing in the language to justify Schneider in attributing the fragment to a lyrical poet. A MS note in my copy of Schneider cites the proverb λεπτὴν πλέκεν· λεγόμενον τι ἐπὶ τῶν πενήτων from Photius (p. 215. 12).

εἰρήσθω, ὅτι ἡμεῖς γε, εἴ τινα ἔχοι λόγον εἰπεῖν ἢ πρὸς ἡδονὴν ποιητικὴ καὶ ἢ μίμησις, ὡς χρὴ αὐτὴν εἶναι ἐν πόλει εὐνομουμένην, ἴσμενοι ἂν καταδεχοίμεθα, ὡς ξύνισμέν γε ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς κηλουμένοις 20 ὑπ' αὐτῆς· ἀλλὰ γὰρ τὸ δοκοῦν ἀληθὲς οὐχ ὅσιον προδιδόναι.

D ἢ γάρ, ὦ φίλε, οὐ κηλεῖ ὑπ' αὐτῆς καὶ σύ, καὶ μάλιστα ἴ' ὅταν δι' Ὀμήρου θεωρῆς αὐτήν; Πολύ γε. Οὐκοῦν δικαία ἐστὶν οὕτω κατιέναι, ἀπολογησαμένη ἐν μέλει ἢ τινι ἄλλῳ μέτρῳ; Πάνυ μὲν οὖν. Δοῖμεν δέ γέ που ἂν καὶ τοῖς προστάταις αὐτῆς, ὅσοι μὴ 25 ποιητικοί, φιλοποιηταὶ δέ, ἄνευ μέτρου λόγον ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς εἰπεῖν, ὡς οὐ μόνον ἡδεῖα, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὠφελίμη πρὸς τὰς πολιτείας καὶ τὸν βίον τὸν ἀνθρώπινόν ἐστιν· καὶ εἰμειῶς ἀκουσόμεθα. κερδανούμεν

E γάρ που, ἐὰν μὴ μόνον ἡδεῖα ἴ' φανῇ ἀλλὰ καὶ ὠφελίμη. Πῶς δ' οὐ μέλλομεν, ἔφη, κερδαίνειν; Εἰ δέ γε μὴ, ὦ φίλε ἐταῖρε, ὥσπερ 30 οἱ ποτέ του ἐρασθέντες, ἐὰν ἡγήσωνται μὴ ὠφέλιμον εἶναι τὸν ἔρωτα, βία μὲν, ὅμως δὲ ἀπέχονται, καὶ ἡμεῖς οὕτως, διὰ τὸν ἐγγεγονότα μὲν ἔρωτα τῆς τοιαύτης ποιήσεως ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν καλῶν 608 πολιτειῶν τροφῆς | εὖνοι μὲν ἐσόμεθα φανῆναι αὐτὴν ὡς βελτίστην καὶ ἀλθεσστάτην, ἕως δ' ἂν μὴ οἷα τ' ἢ ἀπολογησασθαι, ἀκροασόμεθ' αὐτῆς ἐπάδοντες ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς τοῦτον τὸν λόγον, ὃν λέγομεν, καὶ ταύτην τὴν ἐπιδόην, εὐλαβούμενοι πάλιν ἐμπεσεῖν εἰς τὸν παιδικόν τε καὶ τὸν τῶν πολλῶν ἔρωτα. ἀκροασόμεθα δ' οὖν, ὡς 5

20. καταδεχοίμεθα A¹II: κατα punctis notavit A². 24. ἀπολογησαμένη A¹Ξγ: ἀπολογισομένη A²: ἀπολογισαμένη Π. μέτρῳ AII: γρ τρόπῳ in marg. A². 5. ἀκροασόμεθα nos: αἰσθόμεθα AII: αἰσθόμεθα Ξ: εἰσόμεθα γ.

20 καταδεχοίμεθα. καταδέχεσθαι is 'to receive home from exile': cf. κατιέναι below. δεχοίμεθα, which Baiter reads on insufficient authority, is much less expressive and appropriate.

ξύνισμέν γε κτλ. See on 595 B.

607 D 24 ἀπολογησαμένη. Plato is hardly likely to let Poetry return on the promise of an ex post facto ἀπολογία: she must surely make good her defence before the decree of banishment can be repealed. Hence ἀπολογησαμένη, which Schneider and the Oxford editors adopt, is right as against the ἀπολογισομένη of A² and a few inferior MSS (followed by Bekker and others).

607 E 30 εἰ δέ γε κτλ. The words from γε μὴ το φανῆ[ναι] have been found on one of the Oxyrhynchus Papyri, without any difference from the text of A except οὕτω for οὕτως and ἐγγεγονότα for ἐγγεγονότα (Grenfell and Hunt, Vol. I p. 52).

33 τῶν καλῶν πολιτειῶν. Ξ has κακῶν for καλῶν, oblivious of the irony.

608 A 5 ἀκροασόμεθα δ' οὖν κτλ. 'We shall listen, I say, in the conviction that this kind of poetry should not be taken seriously' etc. A majority of MSS, including A and II, read αἰσθόμεθα instead of ἀκροασόμεθα (see cr. n.): but the present αἰσθομαι was not used in classical Greek, as Stallbaum successfully proves in his elaborate note (cf. also Kühner-Blass Gr. Gr. I 2. p. 354), and if it were, the meaning would still be unsuitable. Neither of the two variants, αἰσθόμεθα and εἰσόμεθα has any great MS authority, or is at all likely to be right. I formerly adopted Madvig's conjecture ἀσόμεθα, which is in harmony with the Greek tendency to drop the preposition in repeating the

- οὐ σπουδαστέον ἐπὶ τῇ τοιαύτῃ ποιήσει ὡς ἀληθείας τε ἀποτομένη καὶ σπουδαία, ἀλλ' εὐλαβητέον αὐτὴν ὃν τῷ ἀκρωμένῳ, περὶ τῆς ἑν αὐτῷ πολιτείας δεδιότι, καὶ νομιστέα ἅπερ εἰρήκαμεν περὶ B ποιήσεως. Παντάπασιν, ἣ δ' ὅς, ξύμφημι. Μέγας γάρ, ἔφην, ὁ 10 ἀγών, ὃ φίλε Γλαύκων, μέγας, οὐχ ὅσος δοκεῖ, τὸ χρηστὸν ἢ κακὸν γενέσθαι, ὥστε οὔτε τιμῇ ἐπαρθέντα οὔτε χρήμασιν οὔτε ἀρχῇ οὐδεμιᾷ οὐδέ γε ποιητικῇ ἄξιον ἀμελῆσαι δικαιοσύνης τε καὶ τῆς ἄλλης ἀρετῆς. Ξύμφημί σοι, ἔφη, ἐξ ὧν διεληλύθαμεν· οἶμαι δὲ καὶ ἄλλον ὄντιν οὖν.¹
- 15 IX. Καὶ μὴν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τά γε μέγιστα ἐπίχειρα ἀρετῆς καὶ C προκείμενα ἄθλα οὐ διεληλύθαμεν. Ἀμύχανόν τι, ἔφη, λέγεις μέγεθος, εἰ τῶν εἰρημένων μείζω ἐστὶν ἄλλα. Τί δ' ἄν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ,

6. ἀποτομένη II: ἀποτομένη A.

idea of a compound verb (ἐπάδοντες and ἐπωδόν, but ἀσόμεθα), and suits the situation fairly well, if we regard ὡς οὐ σπουδαστέον—δεδιότι as virtually embodying the ἐπωδὴ of which Plato speaks and depending directly on ἀσόμεθα ('we will say over to ourselves that' etc.). ἀσόμεθα is both a better and an easier remedy than Stallbaum's αἰσθανόμεθα, but the objections to it are that it involves the rejection of οὖν, for the "participial clause εὐλαβοῦμενοι—ἔρωτα is hardly enough to justify the resumptive δ' οὖν" (J. and C.), and also the rejection of ὃν after εὐλαβητέον αὐτὴν (with Stallbaum and Baiter). For the omission of οὖν, we have the authority of II and several MSS besides; but ὃν is in all the MSS except v and Flor. RT. (Vind. F has ὃν.) The suggestion ἀφεξόμεθα, which Campbell appears disposed to make, has little probability. ἀκροασόμεθα seems to me to give exactly the meaning which we require without involving any further change in the reading of the best MSS. I have printed my conjecture because I think it more probable than any other; but it involves too much departure from the MSS to be considered certain. For the sentiment cf. 595 B n.

6 τῇ τοιαύτῃ ποιήσει: viz. the ἡδυσμένη Μούσα of 607 A. The emphasis on τῇ τοιαύτῃ implies that there is another sort of Poetry which Plato would not exclude. See on 595 A and 607 A.

7 εὐλαβητέον—ὃν. ὃν is omitted by Stallbaum and Baiter (with v and two Florentine MSS). The word must, I think, be rejected, if we read αἰσθόμεθα, αἰσθανόμεθα, or ἀσόμεθα: for with each of these verbs ὡς—δεδιότι must be regarded as the direct object of the verb: but with the reading ἀκροασόμεθα there is no difficulty about ὃν. The meaning is 'We will listen, I say, in the belief that such poetry etc., and that the listener must be on his guard against it' etc.

608 B 8 τῆς ἐν αὐτῷ πολιτείας. See 605 B n.

11 οὔτε—οὐδέ γε. Cf. VI 499 B n.

608 C, D. The greatest rewards of virtue have still to be described. We will first prove that the soul is immortal.

608 C 15 καὶ μὴν κτλ. The main thesis of the Republic—that Justice alone and by itself is better than Injustice alone and by itself—was finally demonstrated in Book IX. But Justice and Injustice do also, in point of fact, involve consequences: and it is necessary to take these into account, if we are to make the comparison between Virtue and Vice in all respects perfect and complete. Cf. 612 B n.

17 τῶν εἰρημένων. Nettleship (Lect. and Rem. II p. 355) thinks τῶν εἰρημένων can only refer to 'the rewards of justice on earth,' in which case we must suppose that this passage and the argument for Immortality which it introduces were written by Plato after 612 A—613 E, where he describes the rewards of virtue and vice while we are still alive. But there is no ἐν γε ὀλίγῳ χρόνῳ μέγα γένοιτο; πᾶς γὰρ οὗτός γε ὁ ἐκ παιδὸς μέχρι πρεσβύτου χρόνος πρὸς πάντα ὀλίγος ποῦ τις ἂν εἶη.

Οὐδὲν μὲν οὖν, ἔφη. Τί οὖν; οἶει ἀθανάτῳ πράγματι ὑπὲρ το- 20
D σούτου δεῖν χρόνου ἐσπουδακέναι, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὕπὲρ τοῦ παντός; Οἶμαι ἔγωγ', ἔφη. ἀλλὰ τί τοῦτο λέγεις; Οὐκ ἦσθησαι, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὅτι ἀθάνατος ἡμῶν ἡ ψυχὴ καὶ οὐδέποτε ἀπόλλυται; καὶ ὅς ἐμβλέψας μοι καὶ θαυμάσας εἶπε· Μὰ Δί', οὐκ ἔγωγε· σὺ δὲ τοῦτ' ἔχεις λέγειν; Εἰ μὴ ἀδικῶ γ', ἔφην. οἶμαι δὲ καὶ σύ· οὐδὲν 25 γὰρ χαλεπὸν. Ἔμοιγ', ἔφη· σοῦ δ' ἂν ἡδέως ἀκούσαιμι τὸ οὐ χαλεπὸν τοῦτο. Ἀκούοις ἄν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ. Λέγε μόνον, ἔφη.

21. οὐχ Π et in marg. A²: om A¹.

reason why τῶν εἰρημένων should not, like ἐκείνοις in 612 B, refer to what Plato in 614 A calls 'those goods which Justice by herself supplied' (ἐκείνοις τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς οἷς αὐτὴ παρέιχετο ἡ δικαιοσύνη): and it is much more natural to assign this meaning to τῶν εἰρημένων than to suppose 'that Plato had two plans in his mind as to how to finish the Republic.' I can find no sufficient evidence to justify any such idea.

18 πᾶς γὰρ—ἂν εἶη. Cf. VI 486 A. Stallbaum follows Bekker in reading πρὸς τὸν πάντα with q and Flor. U, comparing VI 498 D, οὐχ ὑπὲρ τοῦ παντός below and Phaed. 107 C. "Videtur—πᾶς ad universum tempus, quod omnino dicitur, ab illo verbis πᾶς οὗτος etc. significato distinguendum sufficere, ac nescio an consulto scriptor, quum priorem πάντα χρόνον necessario definisset, hunc plane infinitum exhibuerit" (Schneider). Cf. Walbe Synt. Plat. spec. p. 26.

608 D 22 οἶμαι ἔγωγε: sc. ὑπὲρ τοῦ παντός δεῖν ἐσπουδακέναι. Cf. I 336 E n. and App. ad loc.

οὐκ ἦσθησαι κτλ. 'Have you not observed' etc. The light and airy tone with which Plato introduces this momentous topic has often been remarked upon; and we can hardly help feeling that οὐδὲν γὰρ χαλεπὸν is too audacious to be taken seriously, in spite of Plato's immoveable conviction of the immortality of the soul (see on VI 498 D). The doctrine itself had of course long been an article of the Orphic and Pythagorean creeds (see Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 1 ff. and Laudowicz Præexistenz d. Seele u. Seelenwand. in Gr. Phil. pp. 1—29), and we must not suppose (with Thomas Gray) that it is the novelty of the idea which occasions Glauco's wonder. Glauco regards the originally half-theological doctrine of the immortality of the Soul with the same sort of well-bred incredulity which it inspired in most of Plato's contemporaries (cf. VI 498 D with I 330 D, E and Phaed. 69 E, 70 A, 80 D), and is astonished that a well-balanced mind should treat it seriously as a philosophical dogma capable of being established by rational argument.

25 εἰ μὴ ἀδικῶ γε. See on IV 430 D. 608 D—611 A Everything, which suffers destruction, is destroyed by its own peculiar evil or disease, and that which cannot be destroyed thereby is indestructible. Now the evil which is peculiar to the soul is vice, and vice is powerless to slay the soul. We must beware of supposing that the soul is destroyed by bodily disease, unless it can be proved that bodily disease engenders within the soul its own specific evil; and if any one has the boldness to assert that the souls of the dying do actually become more vicious, he must be prepared to shew that vice, alone and by itself, is fatal to its possessor, which is far from being true. Vice would lose its terrors if death were the end of all things. We conclude that the soul is immortal, since neither its own nor any alien evil can destroy it.

608 D ff. Socrates has already expressed his belief in the immortality of the soul in VI 498 D: cf. also ib. 496 E and I 330 D, E. The proof which Plato gives here has been widely discussed and severely, though often unfairly and unintelligently, criticised by many critics, to some of whom reference is made in the

Ἄγαθόν τι, εἶπον, καὶ κακὸν καλεῖς; Ἐγωγε. ἰ Ἀρ' οὖν Ε ὥσπερ ἐγὼ περὶ αὐτῶν διανοεῖ; Τὸ ποῖον; Τὸ μὲν ἀπολλύν 30 καὶ διαφθεῖρον πᾶν τὸ κακὸν εἶναι, τὸ δὲ σῶζον καὶ ὠφελοῦν τὸ ἀγαθόν. Ἐγωγ', ἔφη. Τί δέ; κακὸν ἐκάστω τι καὶ ἀγαθὸν λέγεις;
 οἶον ὀφθαλμοῖς | ὀφθαλμίαν καὶ ξύμπαντι τῷ σώματι νόσον σίτῳ 60
 τε ἐρυσίβην σηπεδόνα τε ξύλοις, χαλκῷ δὲ καὶ σιδήρῳ ἰόν, καί, ὅπερ λέγω, σχεδὸν πᾶσι ξύμφυτον ἐκάστω κακὸν τε καὶ νόσημα;
 Ἐγωγ', ἔφη. Οὐκοῦν ὅταν τῷ τι τούτων προσγένηται, πονηρόν 5 τε ποιεῖ ὃ προσεγένετο, καὶ τελευτῶν ὅλον διέλυσεν καὶ ἀπώλεσεν; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Τὸ ξύμφυτον ἄρα κακὸν ἐκάστου καὶ ἡ πονηρία ἕκαστον ἀπόλλυσιν, ἢ εἰ μὴ τοῦτο ἀπολεῖ, οὐκ ἂν ἄλλο γε αὐτὸ ἔτι ἰ διαφθεῖρειεν. οὐ γὰρ τό γε ἀγαθὸν μή ποτέ τι ἀπολέσῃ, οὐδὲ Β αὐτὸ μήτε κακὸν μήτε ἀγαθόν. Πῶς γὰρ ἄν; ἔφη. Ἐὰν ἄρα τι 10 εὐρίσκωμεν τῶν ὄντων, ὃ ἔστι μὲν κακόν, ὃ ποιεῖ αὐτὸ μοχθηρόν, τοῦτο μέντοι οὐχ οἶόν τε αὐτὸ λύνει ἀπολλύν, οὐκ ἤδη εἰσόμεθα,

30. τὸ δὲ A²Π: om. A¹.
 καὶ Π: τί A¹: τί δὲ καὶ A².

31. ἔγωγ' A¹Π: ἔγωγε τοῦτο γ' ἔφη A². τι course of the notes. Plato does not stop to define what he means by 'soul,' nor the different senses in which he employs the word 'death,' and the consequence is that superficial inspection of his reasoning often sees a fallacy where there is only an ellipse. The best preparation for a study of this argument is a careful examination of the proofs in the Phaedo, to which Plato himself appears expressly to allude in 611 B: see note ad loc. It will be easier to understand the reasoning of Plato if we bear in mind the following considerations. (1) The duality of soul and body is assumed throughout the whole discussion. (2) It is the individual immortality of the soul which Plato wishes to prove. (In his excellent monograph Unsterblichkeitslehre Plato's, Halle, 1878, Bertram appears to me to have conclusively and once for all established this point as against Teichmüller Die Plat. Fr. pp. 1—23. Cf. Simson Der Begriff d. Seele bei Plato pp. 126—143.) (3) The conception of soul as the principle of life, though not expressly enunciated here, is present to Plato's mind (609 D n.). The question whether immortality (in the fullest sense of the term) belongs to the entire soul, or only to part of it, is not raised in the course of the proof itself, but from 611 B—612 A, it would seem that the λογιστικόν alone is indestructible (611 B n.). At each successive incarnation the λογιστικόν is defiled ὑπὸ τῆς τοῦ σώματος κοινωνίας, and (according to Phaed. 81 B ff.) the pollution frequently adheres even after death, causing the soul to seek re-incarnation. The ultimate aim is apparently to be delivered from bodily existence altogether, and live ἀνευ σωμάτων τὸ παράπαν εἰς τὸν ἔπειτα χρόνον (Phaed. 114 C, but even then the soul would not—so at least I think—seem to Plato to lose its essential individuality and become absorbed. See on the whole subject Simson l.c. pp. 144—154 and cf. 611 B n.).

608 E 31 κακόν—λέγεις; Richards would add ἴδιον or οἰκείον after λέγεις, comparing (for ἴδιον) 610 B, and (for οἰκείον) 609 C, 610 E. It is easy to understand εἶναι: 'do you say that each thing has a particular evil and a particular good?' See Schanz Nov. Comm. Pl. p. 33.

609 A 5 διέλυσεν καὶ ἀπώλεσεν. Throughout this argument, as throughout the Phaedo, destruction means dissolution (διάλυσις).

6 τὸ ξύμφυτον κτλ. The words ἐκάστου and ἀπολεῖ are bracketed by Herwerden, quite undeservedly. For the statement itself see on 609 E.

ὅτι τοῦ πεφυκότος οὕτως ὀλεθρος οὐκ ἦν; Οὕτως, ἔφη, εἰκός.
 Τί οὖν; ἦν δ' ἐγώ· ψυχῇ ἄρ' οὐκ ἔστιν ὃ ποιεῖ αὐτὴν κακὴν; Καὶ
 C μάλα, ἔφη· ἃ νῦν δὴ διήμουν πάντα, ἀδικία τε καὶ ἀκολασία καὶ δειλία καὶ ἀμαθία. Ἡ οὖν τι τούτων αὐτὴν διαλύει τε καὶ ἀπόλ- 15 λυσι; καὶ ἐννοεῖ μὴ ἐξαπατηθῶμεν οἰθέντες τὸν ἄδικον ἄνθρωπον καὶ ἀνέητον, ὅταν ληφθῇ ἀδικῶν, τότε ἀπολωλέναι ὑπὸ τῆς ἀδικίας, πονηρίας οὔσης ψυχῆς. ἀλλ' ὥδε ποιεῖ· ὥσπερ σῶμα ἢ σώματος πονηρία νόσος οὔσα τήκει καὶ διόλλυσι καὶ ἄγει εἰς τὸ μηδὲ σῶμα εἶναι, καὶ ἃ νῦν δὴ ἐλέγομεν ἅπαντα ὑπὸ τῆς οἰκείας κακίας τῷ 20 D προσκαθῆσθαι¹ καὶ ἐνεῖναι διαφθειρούσης εἰς τὸ μὴ εἶναι ἀφικνεῖται —οὐχ οὕτω; Ναί. Ἴθι δὴ, καὶ ψυχὴν κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον σκόπει. Ἄρα ἐνούσα ἐν αὐτῇ ἀδικία καὶ ἡ ἄλλη κακία τῷ ἐνεῖναι καὶ προσκαθῆσθαι φθείρει αὐτὴν καὶ μαραίνει, ἕως ἂν εἰς θάνατον ἀγαγοῦσα τοῦ σώματος χωρίση; Οὐδαμῶς, ἔφη, τοῦτό γε. Ἀλλὰ 25

13, 14 ψυχῇ—νῦν Π et in marg. A²: om. A¹.
 21. ἐνεῖναι A¹Π: διεῖναι ut videtur corr. A².

15. ἦ Π: ἦ Α.

609 B 12 ἦν. "Imperfectum illud tempus indicat, quo res nondum satis cognita, et tamen ita, ut nunc apparet, comparata esset" Schneider. Cf. IV 436 C n.

14 ἀδικία—ἀμαθία. Vice is the evil peculiar to soul: cf. IV 444 C, Tim. 86 B ff. and Soph. 227 E.

609 C 18 ἀλλ' ὥδε ποιεῖ. ποιεῖ means 'picture,' 'represent.' που οἶει, which Liebhold conjectures (Philol. 1880 p. 169), is wholly inapposite; for the sense requires an imperative. Ast suggests γνοί or σκόπει, but the text is sound: see on VII 498 A.

609 D 24 ἕως ἂν—χωρίση. θάνατον must here be understood of the soul's death, otherwise the parallel with ὥσπερ—ἀφικνεῖται breaks down, and the reasoning becomes not merely fallacious, but absurd. We have, in fact, to distinguish between the death or dissolution of (a) the body (as described in C above ὥσπερ σῶμα—εἰς τὸ μηδὲ σῶμα εἶναι), (b) the soul, (c) the σύνολον, or body plus soul. If the soul is mortal, the moment at which it is dissolved and perishes is when the σύνολον dies, i.e. (Phaed. 64 C, 67 d) when soul is separated from body (cf. Phaed. 70 A, 77 B, D, E, 80 D and 84 B). Plato reminds us of this by saying ἕως ἂν εἰς θάνατον ἀγαγοῦσα τοῦ σώματος χωρίση instead of merely ἕως ἂν εἰς θάνατον ἀγάγη. Cf. 610 D n.

25 οὐδαμῶς—τοῦτό γε. It is strange that Glauco should assent so readily. He is apparently thinking (as in 610 E) of the activity and vitality which wicked men so frequently display; but we may fairly ask 'Why should soul be the only thing which is incapable of being destroyed by its own vice?' It would surely be more true to hold that vice is able to kill the soul just because it is able ποιεῖν αὐτὴν κακὴν (609 B), and Panaetius actually made use of a similar argument in order to prove the soul mortal ("nihil esse, quod doleat, quin id aegrum esse quoque possit. quod autem in morbum cadat, id etiam interitum; dolere autem animos, ergo etiam interire" Cicero Tusc. Disp. I 79). Is ἄρα ἐνούσα—χωρίση intended as an appeal to experience? Even if we allowed that experience is the proper tribunal, our experience of the effect of injustice on a human soul is limited to a single life; and why should not one soul wear out many bodies and perish at last through its own vice καὶ ἡ αὐτὸ τοῦτο θάνατος, ψυχῆς ὀλεθρος (cf. Phaed. 87 B, 91 D. See also Deichert Plato's Beweise f. die Unsterblichkeit d. Seele pp. 46—48). These difficulties are serious, and possibly fatal: they have even led some critics to stigmatise the whole argument as a petitio principii (e.g. Brandt Zur Entwick. d. Pl. Lehre v. d. Seelentheilen p. 29). Plato does not attempt to solve them here; but μέντοι ἐκεῖνό γε ἄλογον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὴν μὲν ἄλλου πονηρίαν ἀπολ-λύναι τι, τὴν δὲ αὐτοῦ μή. Ἄλογον. Ἐννοεῖ γάρ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὃ Γλαῦκων, ὅτι οὐδ' ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν σιτίων πονηρίας, ἢ ἂν ἢ αὐτῶν Ε ἐκείνων, εἴτε παλαιότης εἴτε σαπρότης εἴτε ἡτισοῦν οὔσα, οὐκ 30 οἰόμεθα δεῖν σῶμα ἀπόλλυσθαι· ἀλλ' ἐὰν μὲν ἐμποιῇ ἢ αὐτῶν πονηρία τῶν σιτίων τῷ σώματι σώματος μοχθηρίαν, φήσομεν αὐτὸ δι' ἐκεῖνα ὑπὸ τῆς αὐτοῦ κακίας νόσου οὔσης ἀπολωλέναι· ὑπὸ δὲ σιτίων πονηρίας ἄλλων ὄντων ἄλλο | ὃν τὸ σῶμα, ὑπ' ἄλλοτρίου 610 κακοῦ μὴ ἐμποιήσαντος τὸ ἔμφυτον κακόν, οὐδέποτε ἀξιώσομεν διαφθεῖρεσθαι. Ὁρθότατα, ἔφη, λέγεις.

Χ. Κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τοίνυν λόγον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ἐὰν μὴ σώματος 5 πονηρία ψυχῇ ψυχῆς πονηρίαν ἐμποιῇ, μὴ ποτε ἀξιώμεν ὑπὸ ἄλλοτρίου κακοῦ ἄνευ τῆς ἰδίας πονηρίας ψυχὴν ἀπόλλυσθαι, τῷ ἐτέρου κακῷ ἑτερον. Ἐχει γάρ, ἔφη, λόγον. Ἡ τοίνυν ταῦτα ἐξελέγξωμεν ὅτι οὐ καλῶς λέγομεν, ἢ ἕως ἂν ἢ ἀνέλεγκτα, μὴ Β ποτε φῶμεν ὑπὸ πυρετοῦ μηδ' αὖ ὑπ' ἄλλης νόσου μηδ' αὖ ὑπὸ 10 σφαγῆς, μηδ' εἴ τις ὅ τι σμικρότατα ὅλον τὸ σῶμα κατατέμοι,

3. ὀρθότατα Stephanus: ὀρθότατ' ἂν ΑΠΞ q.

5. μὴ ποτε Α²Π: μήτε Α¹.

8. ἀνέλεγκτα Α²Π: ἐλεγκτα (sic) Α¹.

8, 9. μὴ ποτε II: μήτε Α.

a comparison of the present argument with Phaed. 93 A—94 B helps at all events to explain his position. Soul is always soul, and no soul is more a soul than any other (Phaed. 93 B); hence the soul which is made evil by vice retains its vitality unimpaired. It is in fact the conception of soul as the principle of life which explains (from the Platonic point of view) Glauco's emphatic οὐδαμῶς. Cf. I 353 D τί δ' αὖ τὸ ζῆν; ψυχῆς φήσομεν ἔργον εἶναι; Μάλιστα γ', ἔφη, with note ad loc. It is on the essential connexion between 'soul' and 'life' that Plato builds his crowning argument for the immortality of the soul in the Phaedo (100 B ff., and especially 105 C, D). Cf. Zeller⁴ II p. 827 and infra 610 D n.

609 E 30 αὐτῶν—τῶν σιτίων. Herwerden (following Ξ) would omit τῶν σιτίων, but the contrast with σώματος μοχθηρίαν is improved by the presence of these words. αὐτῶν is 'ipsorum' exactly as in αὐτῶν ἐκείνων above: 'of food itself' (body).

32 ὑπὸ δὲ σιτίων κτλ. Cf. 609 A, B. It is difficult to see where the ἔμφυτον κακόν comes in when the organism is destroyed by violence. Surely fire destroys wood without using σπηδεῶν as its instrument. The fact is that Plato's theory of a ξύμφυτον κακόν by which and which alone each object is destroyed, if destroyed it be, does not apply except where the object is independent of external influences, and such, throughout this proof, he supposes soul to be. Cf. 608 D n. and Brandt l.c. p. 29.

610 A 3 ὀρθότατα. See cr. n. Vind. F has ὀρθότατ' ἂν, Vind. E ὀρθότατ' ἄρ': otherwise there is no variant. Schneider alone retains ἂν—λέγεις, but fails to justify the solecism. ὀρθότατ' ἂν—λέγεις, which Hermann and Stallbaum take from Ξ and Flor. V, does not suit the situation here, as κάλλιστα ἂν λέγοις does in Lazus 807 E. Both here and in Lazus 656 A (where A has ὀρθότατα λέγοις) the simplest correction is ὀρθότατα λέγεις. For the error see Introd. § 5.

8 ἐξελέγξωμεν. Richards proposes ἐλεγχθῶμεν, but the hortatory subjunctive is quite out of place with the passive here. See also on VII 534 C.

610 B 10 ὅ τι σμικρότατα is more idiomatic than εἰς ὅ τι σμικρότατα, which J. and C. suggest: cf. VI 509 D and Sympr. 191 D.

ἐνεκα τούτων μηδὲν μᾶλλον ποτε ψυχὴν ἀπόλλυσθαι, πρὶν ἂν τις ἀποδείξῃ, ὥς διὰ ταῦτα τὰ παθήματα τοῦ σώματος αὐτὴ ἐκείνη ἀδικωτέρα καὶ ἀνοσιωτέρα γίγνεται· ἄλλοτρίου δὲ κακοῦ ἐν ἄλλῳ γιγνομένου, τοῦ δὲ ἰδίου ἐκάστῳ μὴ ἐγγιγνομένου, μήτε ψυχὴν μήτε
 C ἄλλο μηδὲν¹ ἑῷμεν φάναι τινὰ ἀπόλλυσθαι. Ἄλλῃ μέντοι, ἔφη, 15 τοῦτό γε οὐδεὶς ποτε δείξει, ὥς τῶν ἀποθνήσκοντων ἀδικωτέρας αἱ ψυχαὶ διὰ τὸν θάνατον γίγνονται. Ἐὰν δέ γέ τις, ἔφην ἐγώ, ὁμόσῃ τῷ λόγῳ τολμᾷ ἰέναι καὶ λέγειν, ὥς πονηρότερος καὶ ἀδικω-τερος γίγνεται ὁ ἀποθνήσκων, ἵνα δὴ μὴ ἀναγκάζεται ἀθανάτους τὰς ψυχὰς ὁμολογεῖν, ἀξιόσομέν που, εἰ ἀληθῆ λέγει ὁ ταῦτα 20 λέγων, τὴν ἀδικίαν εἶναι θανάσιμον τῷ ἔχοντι ὥσπερ νόσον, καὶ D ἰπ' αὐτοῦ τούτου ἀποκτινύντος τῇ ἑαυτοῦ φύσει ἀποθνήσκειν τοὺς λαμβάνοντας αὐτό, τοὺς μὲν μάλιστα θάπτον, τοὺς δ' ἡττον σχολαίτερον, ἀλλὰ μὴ ὥσπερ νῦν διὰ τοῦτο ὑπ' ἄλλων δίκην ἐπιτιθέντων ἀποθνήσκουσιν οἱ ἄδικοι. Μὰ Δί', ἡ δ' ὅς, οὐκ ἄρα 25 πάνδεινον φανεῖται ἡ ἀδικία, εἰ θανάσιμον ἔσται τῷ λαμβάνοντι·

22. τούτου g: τοῦ ΑΠ: om. Ξ. Α²Π: φαίνεται corr. Α².

24 τοῦτο g: τούτου ΑΠΞ.

26. φανεῖται

610 C 18 ὁμόσῃ—ἰέναι: 'dares to close with the argument' not 'with us in argument' (one of J. and C.'s alternatives). Cf. Euthyd. 294 D ὁμόσῃ ἦν τοῖς ἐρωτήμασιν, Euthyphr. 3 C and Theaet. 165 E.

λέγειν ὥς πονηρότερος κτλ. I think it was Dr Johnson who said 'Every man is a rascal when he is sick.' For the omission of the copula with ὁμολογεῖν cf. II 374 A n.

610 D 22 αὐτοῦ τούτου. See cr. n. The reading αὐτοῦ τοῦ, which has most of the MSS in its favour, is kept by Schneider, Stallbaum and Burnet ("ab ea, utpote suapte vi et natura perimente" Schneider). Hermann and Jowett and Campbell read αὐτοῦ τούτου, which is intrinsically far better ('this itself' 'just this' as opposed to the external agencies mentioned below), and might easily have been corrupted into αὐτοῦ τοῦ.

ἀποθνήσκειν—οἱ ἄδικοι. If Injustice kills the soul, which is the principle of life (609 D n.), the wicked should die of their own wickedness; for they cannot of course continue to live on after their soul expires. As it is, however, they have to be put to death by others, and (according to Glauco) their wickedness rather increases than diminishes their vitality. The argument may not be conclusive (609 D n.); but we are surely not justified in charging Plato (as Brandt apparently does l.c. p. 29) with confounding either here or in 609 D the two notions of physical death and death of the soul.

24 ἀλλὰ μὴ ὥσπερ κτλ. For the construction cf. III 410 B n.

διὰ τοῦτο. See cr. n. Schneider defends διὰ τούτου by Aesch. Ag. 447 πρὸντ' ἄλλοτρίας διὰ γυναικός: but Aeschylus regards Helen as an agent in the death of the fallen Greeks, and the meaning 'on account of' is even more necessary here than in 609 E δι' ἐκείνα ὑπὸ τῆς αὐτοῦ κακίας. Cf. VIII 562 B n.

25 οὐκ ἄρα—κακῶν. Cf. Phaed. 107 C εἰ μὲν γὰρ ἦν ὁ θάνατος τοῦ παντὸς ἀπαλλαγῇ, ἔρμαιον ἂν ἦν τοῖς κακοῖς ἀποθανοῦσι τοῦ τε σώματος ἅμ' ἀπηλλάχθαι καὶ τῆς αὐτῶν κακίας μετὰ τῆς ψυχῆς. The thought expressed in these two passages contains the germ of a new argument for immortality. It might be urged that a future existence is necessary in order that the wicked may pay the penalty for their sins, so that Immortality would become a "postulate of the moral government of the universe" (Deichert l.c. p. 48). Plato ἀπαλλαγὴ γὰρ ἂν εἴη κακῶν· ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον οἶμαι αὐτὴν φανήσεσθαι πᾶν τούναντίον τοὺς ἄλλους ἀποκτινύνουσιν, εἴπερ οἷόν τε, ἵ τὸν Ε δ' ἔχοντα καὶ μάλα ζωτικὸν παρέχουσιν, καὶ πρὸς γ' ἔτι τῷ ζωτικῷ 30 ἄγρυπνον· οὕτω πόρρω που, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἐσκήνῃται τοῦ θανάσιμος εἶναι. Καλῶς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, λέγεις. ὅποτε γὰρ δὴ μὴ ἰκανὴ ἢ γε οἰκεία πονηρία καὶ τὸ οἰκεῖον κακὸν ἀποκτεῖναι καὶ ἀπολέσαι ψυχὴν, σχολῇ τό γε ἐπ' ἄλλου ὀλέθρῳ τεταγμένοι κακὸν ψυχὴν ἢ τι ἄλλο ἀπολεῖ, πλὴν ἐφ' ᾧ τέτακται. Σχολῇ γ', ἔφη, ὡς γε τὸ 35 εἰκός. Οὐκοῦν ὅποτε μὴδ' ὑφ' ἐνὸς ἀπόλλυται κακοῦ, μήτε οἰκεῖον μήτε ἄλλο τρίου, δῆλον ὅτι ἀνάγκη αὐτὸ ἀεὶ ὂν εἶναι· εἰ δ' ἀεὶ ὂν, 611 ἀθάνατον. Ἀνάγκη, ἔφη.

XI. Τοῦτο μὲν τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὕτως ἐχέτω· εἰ δ' ἔχει, ἐννοεῖς, ὅτι ἀεὶ ἂν εἶεν αἱ αὐταί. οὔτε γὰρ ἂν που ἐλάττους γένοιτο 5 μηδεμιᾶς ἀπολλυμένης οὔτε αὖ πλείους. εἰ γὰρ ὅτιοῦν τῶν ἀθανάτων πλεόν γίγνοιτο, οἶσθ' ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ θνητοῦ ἂν γίγνοιτο καὶ πάντα ἂν εἴη τελευτῶντα ἀθάνατα. Ἀληθῇ λέγεις. Ἄλλ', ἦν δ' ἐγώ, μήτε τοῦτο οἰώμεθα· ὁ γὰρ λόγος οὐκ ἐάσει· μήτε γε ἵ αὖ τῇ Β ἀληθεστάτῃ φύσει τοιοῦτον εἶναι ψυχὴν, ὥστε πολλῆς ποικιλίας is content merely to suggest this argument: neither here nor elsewhere does he place it in the forefront of his dialectical proof of immortality.

610 E 29 καὶ μάλα ζωτικὸν κτλ. Glauco is thinking of the extreme activity and vitality sometimes displayed by the more aggressive kind of villain. A good example is furnished by the career of Dionysius I of Syracuse. With ἄγρυπνον Stallbaum compares "ut iugulent homines surgunt de nocte latrones" (Hor. Epod. 1 2. 32)—an instance on a small and petty scale of the sort of thing which is in Plato's mind.

611 A—612 A It follows that the number of souls is always constant, each of them retaining its individuality throughout. We have hitherto represented soul as a composite substance; but the composite cannot easily be immortal; and if we would see the soul as it really is, we must view it apart from the body and those material accretions with which in human life it is clogged and encumbered. Then and only then shall we be able to see its true nature.

611 A 4 αἰεὶ ἂν εἶεν αἱ αὐταί: 'it will always be the same souls that are in existence.' αἱ αὐταί is the subject, not the predicate (as Teichmüller translates Plat. Fr. p. 7). Although οὔτε γὰρ—πλείους justifies αἰεὶ ἂν εἶεν αἱ αὐταί only in so far as concerns the total number of souls, αἱ αὐταί by itself means more than this, and implies the personal identity of each individual soul throughout all the vicissitudes of its endless existence. The conviction that the life of each particular soul is a continuous sequence of cause and effect stretching from eternity to eternity was firmly held by Plato, and he briefly reminds us of it here because the theory of future rewards and punishments, which he will presently describe, rests on that hypothesis and no other. For the history of this belief before the time of Plato see Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 134—136.

5 ὅτιοῦν—ἀθάνατα. All things are either mortal or immortal: hence the immortal, if increased at all, must be so at the expense of the mortal, which will accordingly in course of time be exhausted. Cf. Phaed. 70 C—72 E, especially 72 B ff., where a similar train of reasoning is employed to prove ἐκ τῶν τεθνεώτων τοὺς ζῶντας γίγνεσθαι καὶ τὰς τῶν τεθνεώτων ψυχὰς εἶναι.

611 B 8 τῇ ἀληθεστάτῃ φύσει κτλ. In its true and essential nature soul is akin to the simple and incomposite: see Phaed. 78 B—81 A.

καὶ ἀνομοιοτήτος τε καὶ διαφορᾶς γέμειν αὐτὸ πρὸς αὐτό. Πῶς 10 λέγεις; ἔφη. Οὐ ῥάδιον, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, αἰδίου εἶναι σύνθετόν τε ἐκ πολλῶν καὶ μὴ τῇ καλλίστῃ κεχρημένον συνθέσει, ὥς νῦν ἡμῖν ἐφάνη ἡ ψυχὴ. Οὐκ οὖν εἰκός γε. Ὅτι μὲν τοίνυν ἀθάνατον C τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, οὐ λελωβημένον δεῖ αὐτὸ θεάσασθαι ὑπὸ τε τῆς τοῦ 15 σώματος κοινωνίας καὶ ἄλλων κακῶν, ὥσπερ νῦν ἡμεῖς θεώμεθα, ἀλλ' οἷον ἐστὶν καθαρὸν γιγνόμενον, τοιοῦτον ἱκανῶς λογισμῷ δια-θεατέον, καὶ πολὺ κύλλιον αὐτὸ εὐρήσει καὶ ἐναργέστερον δικαιο-σύνας τε καὶ ἀδικίας διόφεται καὶ πάντα ἃ νῦν διήλθομεν. νῦν δὲ εἴπομεν μὲν ἀληθῆ περὶ αὐτοῦ, οἷον ἐν τῷ παρόντι φαίνεται 20

17, 18. διαθεατέον Ξq: διαθετέον ΑΠ.

19. α Α²Π: om. Α¹.

10 αὐτὸ πρὸς αὐτό goes with ἀνομοιό-τητος—διαφορᾶς: cf. διαφέρεσθαι πρὸς αὐτὸ and the like. The translation 'viewed by itself' (D. and V.) is quite wrong.

12 ὥς νῦν ἡμῖν ἐφάνη ἡ ψυχὴ refers to the tripartite division of soul in IV 435 A ff.: cf. (with Campbell) infra C νῦν δὲ εἴπομεν κτλ., 612 A νῦν δὲ—διελλύθαμεν and (for the use of νῦν) ὥσπερ νῦν in VI 504 D and III 414 B n. It is much less natural to connect the clause with αἰδίου ("eternal as we have just proved the soul to be" D. and V., with whom Jowett and apparently also Schneider agree. Prantl and others take the right view). Now that he has proved the soul to be immortal, Plato takes the opportunity to suggest a revision of the psychology of Book IV, in which soul was treated as composite (435 A n.): for nothing that is composite can well be immortal (cf.
Phaed. l.c.). According to the theory which is rather suggested (612 A) than fully worked out in this chapter, the so-called lower 'parts' are not of the essence of soul at all, but only incidental to its association with body, and consequently perishable. Cf. Phaed. 66 C ff., 79 C, D and the θυγρὸν εἶδος ψυχῆς of Tim. 69 C ff.
Plato expresses himself with great reserve (612 A), but apparently intends us to believe that soul in its truest nature is λογιστικόν, and that the λογιστικόν alone is immortal (so also Simson Begriff d.
Seele bei Plato p. 128: cf. also Grimmelt de reip. Pl. comp. et univ. p. 94 and Nettleship Lect. and Rem. II p. 357).

14 οἱ ἄλλοι. The reference is generally supposed to be to the arguments of the Phaedo. Krohn however (Pl. St. p.

266) compares παλαιός—λόγος οὐ μεμνή-μεθα (Phaed. 70 C), where Plato is thinking of Orphic and Pythagorean beliefs, and suggests that οἱ ἄλλοι should here be interpreted in the same way; while Pfleiderer (Zur Lösung etc. p. 41) sees an allusion to the Phaedrus and Meno.
That the arguments of the Phaedo are included in the reference, is extremely probable both on other grounds, and also on account of the remarkable affinity between that dialogue and the whole of this section; but Plato's words are wide enough to cover all the proofs of immortality current in the Platonic school, whether published or not.

ἀναγκάσειαν ἄν. See on VI 490 C.

611 C 17 καθαρόν: sc. from body and its attendant evil: cf. Phaed. 81 B ff.

18 εὐρήσει: sc. τις, which is easily supplied after the verbal διαθεατέον: cf.
(with Schneider) Euthyd. 299 D οὐκοῦν δεῖ δεῖ αὐτὸ ἔχειν—ἐν ἑαυτῷ; καὶ εἴη ἂν εὐδαιμονέστατος, εἰ ἔχοι κτλ.

ἐναργέστερον—διόφεται. The theory of Justice and Injustice in Book IV rested on a psychology which explained soul not as καθαρόν, and by itself, but present in body (cf. 612 A). Plato hints that the new psychological standpoint will give us a new and higher conception of Justice. I agree with Hirzel (der Dialog I pp. 237 f.) in holding that this higher conception can only be the Idea.
The plural refers to different conceptions of Justice and Injustice, rather than to "their various forms" (as J. and C. explain).

τεθεάμεθα μέντοι διακείμενον αὐτό, ὥσπερ οἱ τὸν θαλάττιον Γλαῦ-κον ὀρώντες οὐκ ἂν ἔτι ῥαδίως αὐτοῦ ἴδοιεν τὴν ἀρχαίαν φύσιν, D ὑπὸ τοῦ τά τε παλαιὰ τοῦ σώματος μέρη τὰ μὲν ἐκκεκλάσθαι, τὰ δὲ συντετριφῆθαι καὶ πάντως λελωβῆσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν κυμάτων, ἄλλα 25 δὲ προσπεφυκέναι, ὅστρεά τε καὶ φυκία καὶ πέτρας, ὥστε παντὶ μᾶλλον θηρίῳ ἐοικέναι ἢ οἷος ἦν φύσει, οὕτω καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμεῖς θεώμεθα διακειμένην ὑπὸ μυρίων κακῶν. ἀλλὰ δεῖ, ὦ Γλαῦκων, ἐκείσε βλέπειν. Ποῖ; ἢ δ' ὅς. Εἰς τὴν φιλοσοφίαν ἢ αὐτῆς, καὶ E ἐννοεῖν ὣν ἅπτεται καὶ οἷων ἐφίεται ὁμιλιῶν, ὡς ξυγγενὴς οὖσα τῷ 30 τε θείῳ καὶ ἀθανάτῳ καὶ τῷ αἰεὶ ὄντι, καὶ οἷα ἂν γένοιτο τῷ τοιούτῳ πᾶσα ἐπισπομένη καὶ ὑπὸ ταύτης τῆς ὁρμῆς ἐκκομισθεῖσα ἐκ τοῦ πόντου, ἐν ᾧ νῦν ἐστίν, καὶ περικρουσθεῖσα πέτρας τε καὶ ὅστρεα,

23. ἐκκεκλάσθαι II: κεκλάσθαι A.

21 τὸν θαλάττιον Γλαῦκον. Glaucus, who had originally been a fisherman himself, when transmuted into a sea-god, became a patron god of sailors and fishermen. See Roscher Lex. d. Myth. s.v. and Frazer on Paus. ix 22. 7.

611 D 23 τά τε παλαιὰ—ἄλλα δέ. For τε followed by δέ cf. II 367 C n.

ἐκκεκλάσθαι. See cr. n. The reading κεκλάσθαι is found only in one inferior MS besides A. It is rather less suitable in point of meaning, and “quum ἐκκλᾶν perrarum, κλᾶν usu tritum sit, duorum codicum gratia vulgatum mutare durum videtur” (Schneider).

28 εἰς τὴν φιλοσοφίαν αὐτῆς. Cf. Phaed. 79 D ὅταν δέ γε αὐτὴ καθ' αὐτὴν σκοπῇ, ἐκείσε ὀχρεῖται εἰς τὸ καθαρὸν τε καὶ αἰεὶ ὄν καὶ ἀθάνατον καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχον, καὶ ὡς συγγενὴς οὖσα αὐτοῦ αἰεὶ μετ' ἐκείνου τε γίγνεται, ὅταν περ αὐτὴ καθ' αὐτὴν γένηται καὶ ἐξῆ αὐτῇ, καὶ πέπανται τε τοῦ πλάνου καὶ περὶ ἐκείνα αἰεὶ κατὰ ταῦτά ὡσαύτως ἔχει, ἅτε τοιούτων ἐφαπτομένη.

611 E 29 ξυγγενὴς—ὄντι. Cf. Phaed. 79 A ff., especially 80 A, B and Latus 899 D, 959 B, Tim. 90 A, C. Here we have yet another expression of the profound conviction which inspires the teaching of Plato, that man is an οὐράνιον φυτὸν, οὐκ ἔγγειον. Herwerden would omit τῷ before αἰεὶ ὄντι, but the article adds emphasis by making αἰεὶ ὄντι look like a different category from ‘the divine and immortal,’ which is treated as a unity. Cf. I 334 E n.

30 οἷα ἂν γένοιτο—ἐπισπομένη. In the light of 611 B, C we may suppose that when the soul altogether follows after the divine it shakes itself clear of the body and the lower parts of soul associated therewith, and appears in its true unity as pure λογιστικόν. Cf. Grimmelt l.c. p. 94 and 608 D n.

31 τοῦ πόντου—ἐστίν. The imagery, which is of course suggested by the comparison with Glaucus of the sea, reminds us of Phaed. 109 B—110 B.

32 περικρουσθεῖσα is used with exactly the same meaning and construction as περιεκόπη in VII 519 A. The word is particularly appropriate here, because it might well be used of striking a vessel of any kind in order to shake off the integuments with which it has become incrustated in the depths of the sea. Cf. also the metaphorical use of circumcisa in Cic. de Fin. I 44. παρακρουσθεῖσα (Morgenstern) gives a wrong meaning, and περικουφισθεῖσα, which Liebhold suggests, is tame and inadequate.

πέτρας—ὅστρεα is bracketed by Herwerden and Richards, the latter proposing as an alternative to insert καὶ before ἂν νῦν. The image is scarcely bolder than τὰς τῆς γενέσεως ξυγγενεῖς ὥσπερ μολυβδόδας in VII 519 A, and the comparison with Glaucus easily carries it through. ‘Stripped of stones and shellfish—the numerous and wild accretions of earth and stone which in consequence of these “happy” feastings as they are called have fastened themselves about her in her present state, because it is on ἄγρια περιπέφυκεν ὑπὸ τῶν εὐδαιμόνων λεγομένων ἐστιάσεων.

12 ἃ νῦν αὐτῇ ἄτε γῆν ἐστιωμένη | γενηρὰ καὶ πετρώδη πολλὰ καὶ
 καὶ τότ' ἂν τις ἴδοι αὐτῆς τὴν ἀληθὴ φύσιν, εἴτε πολυειδὴς εἴτε μονοειδὴς, εἴτε ὅπῃ ἔχει καὶ ὅπως. νῦν δὲ τὰ ἐν τῷ ἀνθρωπίνῳ βίῳ πάθη τε καὶ εἶδη, ὡς ἐγῶμαι, ἐπεικῶς αὐτῆς διεληλύθαμεν. Παν- 5 τάσασι μὲν οὖν, ἔφη.

XII. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τά τε ἄλλα ἀπελυσάμεθα ἐν τῷ λόγῳ
 B καὶ οὐ τοὺς μισθοὺς | οὐδὲ τὰς δόξας δικαιοσύνης ἐπηνέγκαμεν, ὥσπερ Ἡσιόδον τε καὶ Ὀμηρον ὑμεῖς ἔφατε, ἀλλ' αὐτὸ δικαιοσύνην αὐτῇ ψυχῇ ἄριστον ἡῦρομεν καὶ ποιητέον εἶναι αὐτῇ τὰ δίκαια, 10

8. ἐπηνέγκαμεν II: ἐπηνέγκαμεν (sic) A.

earth that she feasts.' Liebholt's conjecture γῇ ἐνοικουμένη and Madvig's γῆν ἐστιωμένη or γῆν εἰσφικισμένη may be taken as indications of how far these critics are qualified to deal with the text of Plato. Plato means of course that the soul which feeds on earth becomes of the earth, earthy. Man is an οὐράνιον φυτὸν (Tim. 90 A) and should draw his sustenance from Heaven. The best commentary on the whole passage is VII 519 A, B, with the extracts from the Phaedo cited at loc.: cf. also IX 586 A, B, III. For the 'happy feastings' see on IV 421 B.

612 A 3 εἴτε—ὅπως. For this formula cf. Phaed. 100 D and Laws 899 B. Plato seems clearly to imply that soul in its true nature is μονοειδής, although he refrains from dogmatising on the subject here. See on 611 B.

612 A—613 E Now that we have proved justice to be in itself, apart from all consequences, best for the soul, we may safely dwell on the rewards of Virtue both in life and after death. We revoke the concession which, for the sake of the argument, we formerly made, and restore to justice the appreciation which in point of fact she does receive from gods and men. The just are dear to the gods and the special object of their providence, but it is otherwise with the unjust. Among men too, Injustice, though for a time it may run well, breaks down before the race is finished; whereas Justice reaches the goal and wins the crown. The honours and prizes which Glauco claimed for successful Injustice fall to Justice, and it is the unjust who suffer the insults and torments which he foretold for the just.

612 A, B 7 οὐκοῦν κτλ. 'Well then,' said I, 'did we not in our discourse clear away the imputations against Justice and abstain from bringing forward the wages' etc. Jackson is inclined—perhaps rightly—to make the sentence categoric and not interrogative. In τὰ ἄλλα ἀπελυσάμεθα the word ἄλλα refers to the other points raised by Thrasy-machus (I 337 A ff.), Glauco and Adimantus (II 358 E ff.), besides the complaint that Justice is usually recommended not on its own merits, but for the sake of its results (II 362 E ff.). For ἀπελυσάμεθα cf. VI 409 E ἀπολνόμενος τὴν τῆς φιλομαθίας διαβολήν, Ap. 37 B, Phaedr. 267 D, Arist. Rhet. III 14. 1415^b 37, 15. 1416^a 5 al. Other explanations of this difficult word and the variant ἀπεδυσάμεθα are discussed in App. V. Instead of ἐπηνέγκαμεν, I formerly read (with Cobet, Baier and J. and C.) ἐπηνέκαμεν. The scribe of Paris A (see cr. n.) seems to have had both readings before him, but to have finally decided in favour of ἐπηνέκαμεν, which is in exact correspondence with μισθοὺς δὲ καὶ δόξας πάρες ἄλλοις ἐπαίνειν II 367 D. All the other MSS read ἐπηνέγκαμεν except Par. K, which has ἐπηνέσαμεν. ἐπηνέγκαμεν should probably be preferred, both on account of the MS evidence, and still more because the aorist seems necessary to balance ἀπελυσάμεθα and ἡῦρομεν. There is no special reason why the word ἐπαίνειν in II 367 D should be echoed here: and it is not employed of Homer and Hesiod in II 363 A, to which ἔφατε refers. For the confusion cf. (with J. and C.) Pol. 307 A, where some MSS read ἐπηνέγκαμεν, and others ἐπηνέκαμεν.

9 αὐτὸ δικαιοσύνην. See on II 363 A.

εάν τ' ἔχῃ τὸν Γύγον δακτύλιον, εἰάν τε μή, καὶ πρὸς τοιοῦτον δακτυλίῳ τήν Ἀϊδος κυνὴν; Ἀληθέστατα, ἔφη, λέγεις. Ἀρ' οὖν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὦ Γλαῦκων, νῦν ἤδη ἀνεπίφθονόν ἐστιν πρὸς ἐκείνους καὶ τοὺς μισθοὺς τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ καὶ τῇ ἄλλῃ ἀρετῇ ἀποδοῦναι, 15 ὅσους ἢ τε καὶ οἷους τῇ ψυχῇ παρέχει παρ' ἀνθρώπων τε καὶ θεῶν, C ζῶντός τε ἔτι τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καὶ ἐπειδὴν τελευτήσῃ; Παντάπασι μὲν οὖν, ἦ δ' ὅς. Ἀρ' οὖν ἀποδώσετέ μοι ἃ ἐδανείσασθε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ; Τί μάλιστα; Ἔδωκα ὑμῖν τὸν δίκαιον δοκεῖν ἄδικον εἶναι καὶ τὸν ἄδικον δίκαιον. ὑμεῖς γὰρ ἡγείσθε, κὰν εἰ μὴ δυνατὸν εἴη 20 ταῦτα λανθάνειν καὶ θεοὺς καὶ ἀνθρώπους, ὅμως δοτέον εἶναι τοῦ λόγου ἕνεκα, ἵνα αὐτὴ δικαιοσύνη πρὸς ἀδικίαν αὐτὴν ἢ κριθείη. ἦ D οὐ μνημονεύεις; Ἀδικοῖν μὲντ' ἂν, ἔφη, εἰ μή. Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν κεκριμένοι εἰσίν, ἐγὼ πάλιν ἀπαιτῶ ὑπὲρ δικαιοσύνης, ὥσπερ ἔχει δόξης καὶ παρὰ θεῶν καὶ παρ' ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἡμᾶς ὁμολογεῖν περὶ

19. ἡγείσθε II: ἡγείσθε A. 22. ἐπειδὴ Flor. C: ἐπειδὴ ἦν A¹ II: ἐπειδὴ οὖν q.
 Pro ἐπειδὴ—ἐγὼ praebent Ξ et in marg. A² ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, κεκριμένοι εἰσί.

11 τὸν Γύγον δακτύλιον. II 359 C n.

12 Ἀϊδος κυνὴν. See II. v 844 f. αὐτὰρ Ἀθήνη | δὴν Ἀϊδος κυνὴν, μὴ μιν ἴδοι ὄβριμος Ἀρης, with Leaf ad loc. Leaf observes that "the name Ἀϊδος here evidently preserves something of its original sense, the Invisible (Ἀφίδης)." For other examples of the proverb see Blaydes on Ar. Ach. 390.

13 νῦν ἤδη ἀνεπίφθονον. We may without prejudice consider the question of rewards, now that we have judged virtue and vice upon their merits; and it is even necessary to do so, if we are to take account of all the circumstances of the case. See on 608 C.

πρὸς ἐκείνους: sc. τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς οἷς αὐτὴ παρείχετο ἡ δικαιοσύνη, as it is more fully expressed in 614 A.

612 C 19 ἡγείσθε—κριθείη represents the general substance, though not the precise form, of the demands put forward by Glauco and Adimantus in II 361 A—D, 367 E. The reference is not more inexact than other cross-references in the Republic (see on 502 D al.), and Siebeck is hardly justified in suggesting that Plato's recollection of Book II had grown faint by the time he wrote Book X (Untersuch. zur Phil. d. Griechen p. 144). The reading ἡγείσθε (see cr. n.) has some little support from the inferior MSS as well as from A. It is defensible in itself, and (as Campbell observes) "agrees better with ἔδωκα and δοτέον and with ἀπαιτῶ in the following sentence." But ἡγείσθε is on the whole more natural with δοτέον εἶναι and ought probably to be retained. An unfortunate misprint in my edition of the Text of the Republic (1897) assigns to II the reading ἡγείσθε (sic), and the error is repeated by Burnet in his apparatus criticus. In reality II has ἡγείσθε.

κὰν εἰ. See on III 408 B.

20 ταῦτα: viz. Justice and Injustice.

612 D 22 ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν κτλ. See cr. n. The reading in the text has the approval of Schneider and others. It involves less departure from II and A¹ than either (a) ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν κεκριμένοι εἰσίν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πάλιν ἀπαιτῶ κτλ. (Hermann), or (b) ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, κεκριμένοι εἰσίν, ἐγὼ πάλιν (Ast, Stallbaum), or (c) ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, κεκριμένοι εἰσί, πάλιν ἀπαιτῶ κτλ. (Baiter, J. and C., Burnet). There is no authority for (c) except a marginal annotation in A, although Burnet erroneously attributes this reading to Vind. F and Stobaeus. See (for Vind. F) Schneider's note and (for Stobaeus) Flor. I p. 402. 22 f. Hense. To (a) and (c) it may also be objected that the contrast between Socrates on the one hand, and Glauco and Adimantus on the other, requires the presence of ἐγώ as the subject to ἀπαιτῶ: and in (b) the jingle ἦν δ' ἐγώ—ἐγὼ πάλιν "valde in-suae est" (Schneider).

24 ἡμᾶς. The reading ὑμᾶς, which Stallbaum adopts, has little authority, αὐτῆς δοκεῖσθαι οὕτω, ἵνα καὶ τὰ νικητήρια κομίσηται, ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ 25 δοκεῖν κτωμένην δίδωσι τοῖς ἔχουσιν αὐτήν, ἐπειδὴ καὶ τὰ ἀπὸ τοῦ εἶναι ἀγαθὰ διδοῦσα ἐφάνη καὶ οὐκ ἐξαπατῶσα τοὺς τῷ ὄντι Ε λαμβάνοντας αὐτήν. Δίκαια, ἔφη, αἰτεῖ. Οὐκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, πρῶτον μὲν τοῦτο ἀποδώσετε, ὅτι θεοὺς γε οὐ λανθάνει ἐκάτερος αὐτῶν οἷός ἐστιν; Ἀποδώσομεν, ἔφη. Εἰ δὲ μὴ λανθάνετον, ὁ 30 μὲν θεοφιλὴς ἂν εἴη, ὁ δὲ θεομισῆς, ὥσπερ καὶ κατ' ἀρχὰς ὁμολογοῦμεν. Ἔστι ταῦτα. Τῷ δὲ θεοφιλεῖ οὐχ ὁμολογήσομεν, ὅσα 313 γε ἀπὸ θεῶν | γίγνεται, πάντα γίγνεσθαι ὡς οἶόν τε ἄριστα, εἰ μὴ τι ἀναγκαῖον αὐτῷ κακὸν ἐκ προτέρας ἀμαρτίας ὑπῆρχεν; Πάνν μὲν οὖν. Οὕτως ἄρα ὑποληπτέον περὶ τοῦ δικαίου ἀνδρός, ἕαν τ' ἐν περὶ γίγνηται ἕαν τ' ἐν νόσοις ἢ τινι ἄλλῳ τῶν δοκούντων κακῶν, ὡς τούτῳ ταῦτα εἰς ἀγαθὸν τι τελευτήσῃ ζῶντι ἢ καὶ 5 ἀποθανόντι. οὐ γὰρ δὴ ὑπὸ γε θεῶν ποτὲ ἀμελεῖται, ὅς ἂν προθυ-μεῖσθαι ἐθέλῃ δίκαιος γίγνεσθαι καὶ ἐπιτηδεύων ἀρετὴν εἰς ὅσον Β δυνατόν ἀνθρώπῳ¹ ὁμοιοῦσθαι θεῷ. Εἰκός γ', ἔφη, τὸν τοιοῦτον μὴ ἀμελεῖσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ ὁμοίου. Οὐκοῦν περὶ τοῦ ἀδίκου τὰναντία τούτων δεῖ διανοεῖσθαι; Σφόδρα γε. Τὰ μὲν δὴ παρὰ θεῶν 10 τοιαυτ' ἂν εἴη νικητήρια τῷ δικαίῳ. Κατὰ γοῦν ἐμὴν δόξαν, ἔφη.

Τί δέ, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, παρ' ἀνθρώπων; Ἄρ' οὐχ ὧδε ἔχει, εἰ δεῖ τὸ ὄν τιθῆναι; οὐχ οἱ μὲν δεινοὶ τε καὶ ἄδικοι δρῶσιν ὅπερ οἱ δρομῆς, ὅσοι ἂν θέωσιν εὖ ἀπὸ τῶν κάτω, ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν ἄνω μὴ; τὸ μὲν

25. ἃ Ξγ: om. A¹Π, sed ante δίδωσι reposuit A². 26. τὰ A²Π: om. A¹.
32. In verbis ἔστι ταῦτα desinit II. 33. γε Ξγ et corr. A²: τε A¹.

and is a needless change, for "Socrates ipse adhuc una cum reliquis iustitiam male audire et deos hominesque secus de ea statuere τοῦ λόγου ἔνεκα posuerat" (Schneider).

25 δοκεῖσθαι. Cf. VI 490 A.
612 E 31 κατ' ἀρχὰς ὁμολογοῦμεν. I 352 B.

613 A 2 προτέρας ἀμαρτίας = 'former sin' means the sins committed in a previous existence. Hence the imperfect ὑπῆρχεν ('was to him from the first,' i.e. from the moment of his birth).

6 οὐ γὰρ δὴ ὑπὸ γε θεῶν κτλ. Cf. (with Morgenstern de Plat. rep. comment. p. 141) Ap. 41 C, D and, for a proof of the divine Providence, Laws 899 D ff.

7 εἰς ὅσον δυνατόν—θεῷ. ὁμοίως θεῷ κατὰ τὸ δυνατόν is the ethical end for man: see Theaet. 176 B—177 A, and cf.

II 383 C, VI 500 C, D, 501 B, C, and Laws 716 B—D together with the μελέτη θανάτου of the Phaedo and the old Pythagorean maxims ἐπὶν θεῷ, ἀκολουθεῖν τῷ θεῷ. Cf. also Rohde *Psyche*² pp. 163, 285—287.

613 B 14 ὅσοι ἂν—μὴ κτλ.: "who run well from the lower end of the course to the upper, but not from the upper to the lower" etc. (J. and C.). Plato is thinking of the διάνυλος, and calls the outward and homeward journeys respectively ἀπὸ τῶν κάτω and ἀπὸ τῶν ἄνω. We must suppose, although there seems to be no other authority for the supposition, that the end from which the competitors started was spoken of as 'down' and the other end as 'up.' Schneider suggests that the outward limit may have stood higher, but Greek stadia seem always to

15 πρῶτον ὀξέως ἀποπηδῶσιν, τελευτῶντες δὲ ἰ καταγέλαστοι γίγνουν- C ται, τὰ ὧτα ἐπὶ τῶν ὤμων ἔχοντες καὶ ἀστεφάνωτοι ἀποτρέχοντες· οἱ δὲ τῇ ἀληθείᾳ δρομικοὶ εἰς τέλος ἐλθόντες τὰ τε ἄθλα λαμβά-νουσιν καὶ στεφανοῦνται. οὐχ οὕτω καὶ περὶ τῶν δικαίων τὸ πολὺ 20 συμβαίνει; πρὸς τέλος ἐκάστης πράξεως καὶ ὁμιλίας καὶ τοῦ βίου μᾶλα. Ἀνέξει ἄρα λέγοντος ἐμοῦ περὶ τούτων ἵπερ αὐτὸς ἔλεγε περὶ τῶν ἀδίκων; ἐρῶ γὰρ δὴ, ὅτι οἱ ἰ μὲν δίκαιοι, ἐπειδὰν πρεσ- D βύτεροι γένωνται, ἐν τῇ αὐτῶν πόλει ἄρχουσὶ τε, ἂν βούλωνται, τὰς ἀρχάς, γαμοῦσί τε ὁπόθεν ἂν βούλωνται, ἐκδιδοάσι τε εἰς οὓς 25 ἂν ἐθέλωσι· καὶ πάντα, ἃ σὺ περὶ ἐκείνων, ἐγὼ νῦν λέγω περὶ τῶνδε· καὶ αὖ καὶ περὶ τῶν ἀδίκων, ὅτι οἱ πολλοὶ αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐὰν νέοι ὄντες λάθωσιν, ἐπὶ τέλους τοῦ δρόμου αἰρεθέντες καταγέλαστοί εἰσιν, καὶ γέροντες γιγνόμενοι ἄθλιοι προπηλακίζονται ὑπὸ ξένων τε καὶ ἀστῶν, μαστιγούμενοι καὶ ἃ ἰ ἄγροικα ἔφησθα σὺ εἶναι, E 30 ἀληθὴ λέγων· πάντα ἐκεῖνα οἴου καὶ ἐμοῦ ἀκκοεῖναι ὡς πάσχου-

30. λέγων Ast: λέγων εἶτα στρεβλώσονται (στρεβλήσονται q) καὶ ἐκκαυθήσονται codd. Pro λέγων γρ λέγοντα in marg. A².

have been level. The use of ἄνω and κάτω is as in περιπατεῖν ἄνω κάτω (Ar. Lys. 709), εἶπ' ἄνω τε καὶ κάτω (Eur. H. F. 953), and other examples quoted in Stephanus-Hase Thes. s.v. ἄνω p. 1063. The subject of ἀποπηδῶσι is not οἱ δρομῆς, but οἱ δεινοὶ τε καὶ ἀδικοὶ: so that τὸ μὲν πρῶτον corresponds roughly to ἀπὸ τῶν κάτω, and τελευτῶντες to ἀπὸ τῶν ἄνω. This interpretation is that of Schneider and the other editors. A wholly different view is taken by Riddell (Digest § 111) and Madvig. They understand τὰ κάτω of the lower, and τὰ ἄνω of the upper parts of the body ("who run fairly with their legs, but with the upper part of their bodies—head, neck, arms—in bad form" Riddell l.c. For the use of ἀπό cf. Latus 795 B, 832 E and Xen. Rep. Lac. 5. 9). But an allusion to the physiology of bad running is not in place here, and it is difficult to resist the impression that ἀπὸ τῶν κάτω and ἀπὸ τῶν ἄνω are significant parts of the comparison. On Riddell's view they are not, for there is nothing in the career of the clever and unjust which can well be illustrated by 'running fairly with their legs' etc. The point is, as τὸ μὲν πρῶτον—ἀποτρέχοντες expressly states, that they do well at first, but collapse before the end, like runners who run well as far as the καμπτήρ, but break down in the second half of the διαulos. For the illustration from the games cf. v 465 D II.

613 C 16 τὰ ὧτα—ἔχοντες. "A metaphor taken from horses and other animals, which let their ears drop when they are tired and overdriven" Thomas Gray. Schneider quotes Photius p. 572. 14 Porson τὰ ὧτα ἐπὶ τῶν ὤμων ἔχοντες· ἐπισείοντες τὴν κεφαλὴν· ὁ ποιοῦσιν ἐκκληνόμενοι. With ὁ δὲ τῇ ἀληθείᾳ—στεφανοῦνται cf. Pythag. Simil. 22 in Mullach Frag. Phil. Gr. I p. 486 τοῖς μὲν σταδιοδραμοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῷ τέρατι τὸ βραβεῖον τῆς νίκης, τοῖς δὲ φιλοπονήσασιν ἐπὶ τοῦ γήρωσ τὸ πρωτεῖον τῆς φρονήσεως ἀπόκειται.

21 ἔλεγε. II 362 B.

613 D 28 ἄθλιοι προπηλακίζονται: "are insulted in their misery" (D. and V.). ἄθλιοι is not altogether predicative ("are miserably insulted" J. and C.), although it goes more closely with προπηλακίζονται than with γέροντες γιγνόμενοι. Schneider translates "und Greise werdend bittere Schmach erdulden müssen."

613 E 29 ἄγροικα ἔφησθα. II 361 E. 30 λέγων. See cr. n. I agree with Ast, Hermann, and Stallbaum in omitting εἶτα στρεβλώσονται καὶ ἐκκαυθήσονται σιν. ἀλλ' ὃ λέγω, ὅρα εἰ ἀνέξει. Καὶ πάννυ, ἔφη· δίκαια γὰρ λέγεις.

XIII. "Α μὲν τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ζῶντι τῷ δικαίῳ παρὰ θεῶν 614 τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων ἀθλά τε καὶ μισθοὶ καὶ δῶρα γίγνεται πρὸς ἐκείνοις τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς οἷς αὐτὴ παρέιχετο ἡ δικαιοσύνη, τοιαυτ' ἂν εἴη. Καὶ μάλ', ἔφη, καλὰ τε καὶ βέβαια. Ταῦτα τοίνυν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, οὐδέν ἐστι πλήθει οὐδὲ μεγέθει πρὸς ἐκεῖνα, ἃ τελευτήσαντα ἐκάτερον περιμένει. χρὴ δ' αὐτὰ ἀκοῦσαι, ἵνα τελέως ἐκάτερος αὐτῶν 5

5. ἐκάτερος Ξ^2 : ἐκάτερον $A\Xi^1\eta$.

"quia nec tempus antecedentibus congruit, nec sententiae ratio Socratem singula supplicia enumerare patitur" (Stallbaum). The passage to which the words refer runs as follows: μαστιγώσεται, στρεβλώσεται, δεθήσεται, ἐκκαυθήσεται τῷ φθαλμῷ (II 361 E); and εἰτα—ἐκκαυθήσονται ('after that'—i.e. after they have been scourged—'they will be racked' etc.) is probably a marginal note intended to remind us of the further tortures specified in the earlier passage. Schneider and the Oxford editors retain the words as a parenthesis, which is, to say the least, exceedingly awkward.

613 E—616 B But what we have hitherto recounted is as nothing compared with the wages of Virtue and Vice hereafter. Let us hear the vision of Er, the son of Armenius. For twelve days he lay in a trance, during which his soul travelled to a meadow, where he heard the narrative of their experiences from other souls that had fulfilled the millennial period of reward or punishment. In most cases the recompense for good and evil actions was tenfold; but certain crimes were punished yet more sternly, and for some incurable sinners there was no hope at all.

614 A 5 χρὴ δ' αὐτὰ ἀκοῦσαι κτλ.

The Nékvia of the Republic is one of the earliest extant Apocalypses, and many of its features reappear in later apocalyptic literature, including that of the early Christian era. See James Apocrypha Anecdota in Robinson's Texts and Studies. A careful comparison of the myth in the Republic with those of the Phaedrus, Gorgias, and Phaedo shews that in spite of discrepancies in detail, the four dialogues conspire to produce what is on the whole a tolerably consistent picture of the destiny of the human soul—a kind of ancient 'Divina Commedia,' as Döring points out (Archiv f. Gesch. d. Philos. vi pp. 475—490). The sources and affinities of Plato's eschatological myths have been much discussed. Besides the article by Döring on Die eschatologischen Mythen d. Plato (Archiv l.c.) the student should consult Ettig Acheruntica (Leipziger Stud. xiii 1891, pp. 251—402, especially 284 ff.), Norden Vergilstudien (Hermes xxviii 1893, pp. 360—406), and especially Dieterich Nekyia (Leipzig 1893), where the common features in ancient representations of the underworld are clearly exhibited. There are traces of Nékviai before the time of Plato, and the investigations of Dieterich and others have made it clear that the materials of Plato's picture are derived in large measure from Orphic or Pythagorean traditions (Dieterich l.c. pp. 128 ff.: cf. also Norden l.c. p. 374, Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 91 ff., and Zeller⁵ I i. p. 450. Dieterich may be wrong in some of his conjectures, as F. Weber tries to shew in his inaugural dissertation, Platonische Notizen über Orpheus München 1899 p. 20 n., but the broad outlines of his theory are in my opinion established beyond reasonable doubt). Evidence of Pythagorean and Orphic affinities will be cited in the notes. Cf. Proclus in remp. II p. 110 Kroll εἶτε δὲ ἔχει τὰ τῆς ἱστορίας οὕτως εἶτε καὶ μὴ, ζητεῖν ἀποπον, τοῦ Πλάτωνος τὰ τοιαῦτα πλαττοντος μὲν οὐδαμῶς, κατὰ δὲ τὴν χρείαν τῶν προκειμένων εἰ παραλαμβάνοντος καὶ χρωμένου πᾶσι μετὰ τῆς πρεπούσης περιβολῆς καὶ οἰκονομίας, ὥς καὶ τῇ Μαντικῇ ξένη καὶ τῷ κατὰ τὸν Εὐγόνος πρόγονον διηγήματι καὶ τῷ κατὰ τοὺς Ἀλαντικούς λόγῳ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ὁμοίοις. We may well suppose, however, that the imagination of Plato dealt freely with his materials, and the myth of the

ἀπειλήφη τὰ ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου ὀφειλόμενα ἀκοῦσαι. Λέγοις ἄν, ἔφη, ὥς οὐ πολλὰ ἄλλ' ἥδιον | ἀκούοντι. Ἄλλ' οὐ μέντοι σοι, ἦν δ' B ἐγώ, Ἀλκίνου γε ἀπόλογον ἐρῶ, ἀλλ' ἀλκίμου μὲν ἀνδρός, Ἡρὸς τοῦ Ἀρμενίου, τὸ γένος Παμφύλου· ὅς ποτε ἐν πολέμῳ τελευτή- 10 σας, ἀναιρεθέντων δεκαταίων τῶν νεκρῶν ἤδη διεφθαρμένων, ὑγίης μὲν ἀνῆρέθη, κομισθεὶς δ' οἴκαδε μέλλων θάπτεσθαι δώδεκαταῖος ἐπὶ τῇ πυρᾷ κείμενος ἀνεβίω, ἀναβιούς δ' ἔλεγεν ἃ ἐκεῖ ἴδοι. ἔφη δέ, ἐπειδὴ οὐ ἐκβῆναι τὴν ψυχὴν, πορεύεσθαι μετὰ πολλῶν, καὶ ἀφικνεῖσθαι σφᾶς εἰς τόπον τινὰ δαιμόνιον, ἐν ᾧ τῆς τε γῆς δὴ C

7. ὥς A²Ξ q: om. A¹. ἄλλ' Ξ q¹: ἄλλ' A q². 8. ἡρὸς A²Ξ: ἥρος A¹: ἥρὸς q. 13. οὐ A¹Ξ q: οὐν A².

Republic bears the unmistakable impress of Plato's own genius in its artistic finish no less than in its religious and moral teaching.

ἐκάτερος. See cr. n. The accusative appears to be in all MSS except v K and Ξ².

6 ἀκοῦσαι is doubted by Stephanus, and bracketed by Ast, Stallbaum, and Baiter. There is nothing offensive in the repetition ἀκοῦσαι—ἀκοῦσαι (cf. VI 511 E n.), and the second ἀκοῦσαι is welcome, if not necessary, as defining the exact nature of the debt ('due to hear,' i.e. 'due to be heard,' like καλὸς ἰδεῖν and the like). "The debt which has been incurred in words" (ἀ ἐδανείσασθε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ 612 C) "has to be paid in words" (J. and C.). ὑπὸ depends on ὀφειλόμενα rather than on ἀκοῦσαι. J. and C. take ἀκοῦσαι as = 'to have related concerning them,' comparing ἀκοῦσαι σοφίσματα VI 496 A and Lys. 207 A; but it is more natural to give the word the same meaning as it bears just before.

614 B 8 Ἀλκίνου—ἀπόλογον. Books IX—XII of the Odyssey were known as Ἀλκίνου ἀπόλογοι the 'tales to Alcinous': see Ael. Var. Hist. XIII 14 Ἀλκίνου ἀπολόγου [καὶ] Κυκλώπειαν καὶ Νέκυιαν καὶ τὰ τῆς Κίρκης. Cf. Arist. Poet. 16. 1455^a 2 and Rhet. III 16. 1417^a 13, from which it appears that the whole four books were also called collectively ὁ Ἀλκίνου ἀπόλογος. There is doubtless an allusion, as the Oxford editors remark, to the νέκυια of Od. XI, which is itself one of the 'tales to Alcinous'; but the expression has also a proverbial application, being used of a long and tedious story (ἐπὶ τῶν φλναρούντων καὶ μακρὸν ἀποτείνοντων λόγον Suidas s.v. Ἀπόλογος Ἀλκίνου. Other authorities will be found in Deutsch u. Schneidewin Paroem. Gr. I p. 210, II p. 13). For the paronomasia Ἀλκίνου—ἀλκίμου see Riddell Digest § 323.

Ἡρὸς τοῦ Ἀρμενίου κτλ. The names point to the East. Ἡρ ὄνομα κύριον Ἑβραϊκόν, says Suidas, and Er is one of the ancestors of Joseph, the husband of the Virgin Mary: see St Luke 3. 28. By some of the ancients, including Clement (Strom. v 157 Migne), Er was identified with Zoroaster (Proclus l.c. p. 109). τοῦ Ἀρμενίου is of course 'son of Armenius,' not 'the Armenian,' as some ancient expositors imagined (see Proclus in remp. II p. 110). Plutarch Symp. IX 740 B appears to have read Ἀρμονίον, a reading which was known to Proclus (l.c.), and which commended itself also to the poet Gray: but Ἀρμονίον has no MS authority. Proclus himself adopts the same reading as that of our best MSS, and explains the passage quite correctly in p. 110. 19 ff.

10 δεκαταίων. The occurrence of the number 10 and its multiples is one of the Pythagorean elements of the story: cf. infra 615 A, B εἶναι δὲ τὴν πορείαν χιλιέτη (10³ years)—ὑπὲρ ἐκάστου δεκάκις—ὥς βίον ὄντος τοσούτου (10³ years) τοῦ ἀνθρώπου—καὶ εἰκοστήν in 620 B. See also on 614 C.

12 ἀναβιούς δὲ—ἔδοι. Other miraculous stories about the dead or seeming-dead returning to life again and describing what they have seen are given by Proclus l.c. pp. 113—116, 122. Cf. also Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 90—102.

14 ἀφικνεῖσθαι. In Phaed. 107 D and 113 D each soul is conducted by its δαίμων to the place of judgment.

εἶναι χάσματα ἐχομένω ἀλλήλοιον καὶ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ αὖ ἐν τῷ ἄνω 15 ἀλλὰ καταντικρύν· δικαστὰς δὲ μεταξὺ τούτων καθῆσθαι, οὓς, ἐπειδὴ διαδικάσειαν, τοὺς μὲν δίκαιους κελεύειν πορεύεσθαι τὴν εἰς

16. ἀλλὰ Ξρ: ἀλλὰ Α.

614C τόπον τινά, δαιμόνιον κτλ.
The situation may be seen from the accompanying plan. AB is the τόπος δαιμόνιος or λειμών (614E) in which the judges sit. BC, AC' represent the two ways by which the souls when they are judged depart to receive their rewards or punishments. DA and D'B are the two ways by which the souls return to the meadow to be reincarnated, after their period of reward or punishment is complete. (Aristotle makes a grave error when he writes "duo ostia, alterum, per quod animae descendunt in corpora, alterum, per quod e vita redeant." None of the four χάσματα represent the way by which the souls arrive at the meadow immediately after they leave the body.) The τόπος or λειμών appears also in the Phaedo and the Gorgias: εἰς δὴ τινὰ τόπον, οἱ δὲ τοὺς συλλεγέντας διαδικασμένους εἰς "Αἴδου πορεύεσθαι (Phaed. 107 D): οὗτοι οὖν—δικάσουσιν ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι (Gorg. 524 A).

Ettig l.c. p. 306 is inclined to derive the idea from Homer's ἀσφάδελος λειμών.
We find traces of a λειμών also in Empedocles v. 23 Karsten ἄτῃς ἂν λειμῶνά (apparently of the Earth) τε καὶ σκότος ἡλάσκουσιν, and in Orphic fragments

(e.g. Fr. 154 Abel): cf. also Plut. de fac. orb. Lunae 943 C ἐν τῷ πρασιῶτι τοῦ ἀέρος, ὃν λειμῶνας "Αἴδου καλοῦσι and Plat. Phaedr. 248 B (the 'meadow' or 'plain of Truth'). In none of these passages is the meadow a place of judgment for departed souls; but πεδίον ἀληθείας is used of the judgment-place in the Axiochus (371 B), a dialogue full of Orphic influence; and it is therefore probable that Plato borrowed the meadow from some Orphic or Pythagorean dogma.
We ought, I think, to conceive the meadow as situated somewhere on what Plato in the Phaedo calls ἡ ὡς ἀληθῶς γῆ, meaning the real surface of the earth as opposed to the misty hollows in which we live: see below on 616 A and cf.
Susemihl Gen. Entwick. II p. 270. Some of the speculations of the Neoplatonists on this subject are given by Proclus l.c.
pp. 128—136: but they are altogether fantastic and useless.

15 χάσματα. Roeper (de dual. usu Plat. p. 29) would read χάσματε ("id est, ut me monuit Usenerus, χάσματ' ἐχομένω, a librario male suppletum"). The dual is also found in q and Flor. U; but there is hardly sufficient ground for deserting the best MSS: cf. III 395 A ἡ οὐ μιμήματα ἀρτι τούτω ἐκάλες; Lach. 187 A εἰ δ' αὐτοὶ εὐρεταὶ γεγονότε (so B) τοῦ τοιούτου, and other passages in Roeper l.c. Proclus also has χάσματα ἐχομένω (l.c. p. 136. 17).
With the two ways (BC, AC') by which the souls depart after judgment cf. Gorg.
524 A ἐν τῇ τρίδῳ ἐξ ἧς φέρετον τῷ ὁδῷ, ἡ μὲν ἐς μακάρων νήσους, ἡ δὲ εἰς τάρταρον; also Phaedr. 249 A. The 'two ways' were a familiar feature in Orphic-Pythagorean pictures of the other world: for illustrations see Dieterich l.c. pp. 191 ff.
and Rohde Psyche II p. 220 n. 4.

17 εἰς δεξιάν. The way to the abode of the blest was generally figured as εἰς δεξιάν: see Rohde l.c. and Dieterich l.c.
p. 85 n. 2, where Dieterich quotes from an Inscription found in a grave in the district of Thurii χαῖρε χαῖρε δεξιάν ὁδοπορῶν Λειμῶνάς τε ἱεροῦς κατὰ τ' ἄλσεα Φερρεφονείας. The whole of this Inscription, according to Dieterich, be-δεξιάν τε καὶ ἄνω διὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, σημεῖα περιήψαντας τῶν δεδικασμένων ἐν τῷ πρόσθεν, τοὺς δὲ ἀδίκους τὴν εἰς ἀριστεράν τε καὶ 20 κάτω, ἔχοντας ¹ καὶ τούτους ἐν τῷ ὅπισθεν σημεῖα πάντων ὧν D ἔπραξαν. ἑαυτοῦ δὲ προσελθόντος εἰπεῖν, ὅτι δέοι αὐτὸν ἄγγελον ἀνθρώποις γενέσθαι τῶν ἐκεῖ καὶ διακελεύοντό οἱ ἀκούειν τε καὶ θεᾶσθαι πάντα τὰ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ. ὁρᾶν δὴ ταύτη μὲν καθ' ἐκάτερον τὸ χάσμα τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τε καὶ τῆς γῆς ἀπιούσας τὰς ψυχάς, ἐπειδὴ 25 αὐταῖς δικασθεῖν, κατὰ δὲ τῷ ἐτέρῳ ἐκ μὲν τοῦ ἀνιέναι ἐκ τῆς γῆς μεστὰς αὐχμοῦ τε καὶ κόνεως, ἐκ δὲ τοῦ ἐτέρου καταβαίνειν ἐτέρας ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καθαρὰς. καὶ τὰς ¹ αἰὶ ἀφικνουμένας ὥσπερ ἐκ E πολλῆς πορείας φαίνεσθαι ἥκειν καὶ ἀσμένας εἰς τὸν λειμῶνα ἀπιούσας οἷον ἐν πανηγύρει κατασκηναῖσθαι καὶ ἀσπάζεσθαι τε 30 ἀλλήλας ὅσαι γινώριμαι, καὶ πυνθάνεσθαι τὰς τε ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἡκούσας παρὰ τῶν ἐτέρων τὰ ἐκεῖ καὶ τὰς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τὰ παρ' ἐκείναις. διηγείσθαι δὲ ἀλλήλαις τὰς μὲν ὀδυρομένας τε καὶ κλαούσας, ἀναμνησκομένας | ὅσα τε καὶ οἷα πάθοιεν καὶ ἴδοιεν 615 ἐν τῇ ὑπὸ γῆς πορείᾳ—εἶναι δὲ τὴν πορείαν χιλιέτη—τὰς δ' αὖ ἐκ

23. θεᾶσθαι A²Ξq; θεάσασθαι ut videtur A¹. ούσας A², sed e puncto notatum.

29. ἀπιούσας A¹Ξq; ἐπι-
 31. καὶ τὰς A²Ξq²; τὰ A¹q¹. 2. χιλιετη (sic) A¹; χιλιετῇ Ξq; χιλιέτην A².

trays Orphic and Pythagorean influences. Cf. 617 C n. The other features (ἄνω, ἐν τῷ πρόσθεν, εἰς ἀριστεράν τε καὶ κάτω, ἐν τῷ ὅπισθεν) are also in keeping with Pythagorean notions: see Arist. Frag. 195 (1513^a 24 ff.) τὸ οὖν δεξιὸν καὶ ἄνω καὶ ἔμπροσθεν ἀγαθὸν ἐκάλουν, τὸ δὲ ἀριστερόν τε καὶ κάτω καὶ ὅπισθεν κακὸν ἔλεγον, ὥς αὐτὸς Ἀριστοτέλης ιστόρησεν ἐν τῇ τῶν Πυθαγορείων ἀρεσκόντων συναγωγῇ.

18 διὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Presumably they passed up through the heavens to the outer surface of the heavenly sphere, as described in Phaedr. 247 B ff. Cf. also Proclus l.c. p. 160. 19 ff. πολλὰ δὲ ἐπορεύθησαν αἱ μὲν κατ' οὐρανὸν συμπεριπολοῦσαι τοῖς οὐρανίοις θεοῖς κτλ.—clearly a reminiscence of Phaedr. 246 E ff.

614 C, D σημεῖα κτλ. Cf. Gorg. 526 B. κάτω is fully explained in the myth of the Phaedo 111 C—114 C. Cf. infra 615 A.

20 πάντων ὧν ἔπραξαν from its correspondence with τῶν δεδικασμένων above suggests that our own actions are our doom.

22 καὶ διακελεύοντο = 'and that they exhorted' corresponds of course to καὶ διακελεύεσθαι of the oratio recta. Stallbaum's explanation ("optativus ponitur loco accusativi cum infinitivo") is untenable; nor is there any good reason for suspecting the text or writing διακελεύεσθαι with Eusebius (Praep. Ev. XI 35. 5) and others. The optative is much more dramatic and realistic. Cf. VIII 569 A n.

23 ταύτη μὲν is explained by καθ' ἐκάτερον—γῆς i.e. (see the figure on p. 435) BC and AC'. Cornarius conjectured καθ' ἕτερον μὲν τὸ χάσμα, but ἐκάτερον is much more elegant, and forms a better balance with κατὰ δὲ τῷ ἐτέρῳ (viz. D'B and D'A).

25 ἐκ τῆς γῆς is not of course 'from earth' (D. and V.), but 'out of the earth' ('aus der Erde' Schneider). They have suffered punishment ἐν τῇ ὑπὸ γῆς πορείᾳ (615 A) 'in their sojourn underground' i.e. in the bowels of the Earth, as explained at length in Phaed. 113 E—114 B.

614 E 28 τὸν λειμῶνα. "Articulus locum quasi fama celebratum designat" Schneider. See on 614 C.

615 A 2 χιλιέτη. Cf. Virg. Aen.

τοῦ οὐρανοῦ εὐπαθείας διηγείσθαι καὶ θέας ἀμυχάνους τὸ κάλλος. τὰ μὲν οὖν πολλά, ὧ Γλαύκων, πολλοῦ χρόνου διηγήσασθαι· τὸ δ' οὖν κεφάλαιον ἔφη τὸδε εἶναι, ὅσα πώποτε τινα ἠδίκησαν καὶ 5 ὅσους ἕκαστοι, ὑπὲρ ἀπάντων δίκην δεδωκέναι ἐν μέρει, ὑπὲρ ἑκάστου δεκάκις· τοῦτο δ' εἶναι κατὰ ἑκατονταετηρίδα ἑκάστην, B ὡς ἱ βίου ὄντος τοσούτου τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου, ἵνα δεκαπλάσιον τὸ ἔκτισμα τοῦ ἀδικήματος ἐκτίνοιεν, καὶ οἶον εἴ τινες πολλῶν θανάτων ἦσαν αἵτιοι, ἢ πόλεις προδόντες ἢ στρατόπεδα, καὶ εἰς δουλείας 10 ἐμβεβληκότες ἢ τινος ἄλλης κακουχίας μεταίτιοι, πάντων τούτων δεκαπλασίας ἀλγηδόνας ὑπὲρ ἑκάστου κομίσαιντο, καὶ αὖ εἴ τις

6. ὅσους A¹Ξq: οὗς A².

9. πολλῶν Ξ: πολλοὶ Aq: sed punctis notavit q².

VI 748 ff. has omnes, ubi mille rotam volvere per annos | Lethaeum ad fluvium deus evocat agmine magno. There is little doubt that both Virgil and Plato took the period of 1000 years from some Orphic or Pythagorean source: see Dieterich l.c. pp. 116 ff. It will be observed that the thousand years do not, in the Republic, include the lifetime of the soul on earth, which Plato estimates at 100 years (615 B). In the Phaedrus on the other hand the entire interval from birth to birth is reckoned at 1000 years (249 A ff., compared with 248 D, E).

3 εὐπαθείας—κάλλος suggests the beatific visions of the Phaedrus (247 A ff.).

4 πολλοῦ χρόνου: sc. ἐστὶ, as in Laus IV 708 D χρόνου πολλοῦ καὶ παρχάλεπον (Stallbaum). It is worse than needless to insert δεῖ (with Liebhold) after χρόνου.

5 ὅσα—ἠδίκησαν. In Plato, as in Dante, doing wrong to others is the great sin.

7 τοῦτο δ' εἶναι κτλ. 'that is,' said he, 'once in every hundred years.' τοῦτο δ' εἶναι ('namely') explains ὑπὲρ ἑκάστου δεκάκις. This view is simpler and more idiomatic than (with Schneider) to make τοῦτο=τὸ δίκην δοῦναι ἐν μέρει ὑπὲρ ἑκάστου.

615 B 8 ὄντος τοσούτου. The same duration of human life is postulated also in Phaedr. 248 D ff., but retribution in that dialogue appears to be ἐννάκις, and not δεκάκις as here; cf. 256 E with 248 E. The number 100 is the square of the Pythagorean 'perfect' number 10, so that Pythagorean influence is doubtless at work again. See App. I to Book VIII

p. 301, and cf. 614 B n. It should also be remarked that the Greeks, like other races, had many stories to tell of the μακρόβιοι of early days, and the 'Naturvölker' of historic times were also credited with preternaturally long lives: see the evidence collected by Rohde Griech. Roman pp. 218, 236, 247 nn.

9 καὶ οἶον κτλ.: 'and for example if' etc. κομίσαιντο depends of course on ἵνα. Plato somewhat awkwardly coordinates his illustration with the principle itself (ἵνα—ἐκτίνοιεν): but there is not sufficient ground for expunging καὶ (with q², Stephanus and others).

πολλῶν. See cr. n. Par. D—followed here by Burnet—has πολλοῖς, "quod propter pluralem θανάτων ferri nequit" (Schneider). The passage quoted by J. and C. in defence of πολλοῖς from Laus IX 870 D τοὺς οὖν τούτων μηνυτὰς ἀναίρουσι θανάτοις is not quite parallel.

10 πόλεις προδόντες κτλ. So in Virg. Aen. VI 620 vendidit hic auro patriam. Antiphon (de Her. Caed. 10) names as the three chiefest sins τὸ ἀποκτείνειν καὶ τὸ ἱεροσυλεῖν καὶ τὸ προδιδόναι τὴν πόλιν. Cf. also Dieterich Nek. pp. 66 ff.

εἰς δουλείας ἐμβεβληκότες is parallel, as Schneider points out, to αἵτιοι and not to προδόντες.

12 καὶ αὖ—κομίζονται. It is not at first sight clear whether this applies to those who have come ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, or to those who, though condemned on the whole account, have done some good actions in their lives, and occasionally shewn themselves just and pious. The latter view is supported by Phaed. 113 D ἐκεῖ (in Acheron) οἰκοῦσι τε καὶ καθαιρόεὐεργεσίας εὐεργετηκότες καὶ δίκαιοι καὶ ὅσοι γεγυνοότες εἶεν, κατὰ ταῦτά τὴν ἀξίαν κομίζονται. τῶν δὲ εὐθύς γενομένων καὶ C 15 ὀλίγον χρόνον βιούντων πέρι ἄλλα ἔλεγεν οὐκ ἄξια μνήμης. εἰς δὲ θεοὺς ἄσεβείας τε καὶ εὐσεβείας καὶ γονέας καὶ αὐτόχειρος φόνου μείζους ἔτι τοὺς μισθοὺς διηγεῖτο. ἔφη γὰρ δὴ παραγενέσθαι ἐρωτώμεν ἑτέρῳ ὑπὸ ἑτέρου, ὅπου εἴη Ἄρδιαῖος ὁ μέγας. ὁ δὲ Ἄρδιαῖος οὗτος τῆς Παμφυλίας ἔν τιτι πόλει τύραννος ἐγεγόνει, 20 ἥδη χιλιοστὸν ἔτος εἰς ἐκείνῳ τὸν χρόνον, γέροντά τε πατέρα ἀποκτείνας καὶ ἑπρεσβύτερον ἀδελφόν καὶ ἄλλα δὴ πολλὰ τε καὶ I ἀνόσια εἰργασμένος, ὥς ἐλέγετο. ἔφη οὖν τὸν ἐρωτώμενον εἰπεῖν, οὐχ ἥκει, φάναι, οὐδ' ἂν ἥξει δεῦρο.

16. αὐτόχειρος Ast: αὐτόχειρας codd.

μενοὶ τῶν τε ἀδικημάτων δίδοντας δίκας ἀπολύονται, εἰ τίς τι ἡδίκηκεν, τῶν τε εὐεργεσιῶν τιμὰς φέρονται κατὰ τὴν ἀξίαν ἕκαστος, and is, I believe, what Plato means. Cf. 616 B n.

13 εὐεργετηκότες. A few mss, including g, have εὐηργετηκότες, which Rutherford (Notae Phryg. p. 245) and the grammarians regard as the regular Attic form: but εὐεργέτηκεν is found on Inscriptions of the 4th Century B.C. See Meisterhans³ p. 172 and Kühner-Blass I 2. p. 33.

615 C 14 τῶν δὲ εὐθύς κτλ.: 'about those who died as soon as they were born, and those who had lived but a short time' etc., lit. 'about the 'as-soon-as-they-were-born' and the 'short-lived' etc.' The εὐθύς γεγυνομένοι and the ὀλίγον χρόνον βιούντες were probably two well-recognised categories of the ἄωροι (as to whom see Rohde *Psyche*² II pp. 411 ff.): hence the article τῶν. Cf. Virg. Aen. VI 428 dulcis vitae exsortes, et ab ubere raptos. A limbus infantum appears to have been a feature of early Orphic pictures of the underworld (Dieterich Nek. p. 158). It is unwise to insert ἀποθανόντων (Ast, Stallbaum) or ἀπογενομένων (Herwerden, Baiter) after γεγυνομένων, or to read <ἀπο>-γενομένων (Cobet), for, as Schneider observes, "de mortuis hic agi in aperto est." Schneider's own interpretation may be gathered from his note "nec nostrates, opinor offenderet von denen, die eben erst geboren gewesen etiam non addito als sie starben." I agree with Stallbaum in doubting whether εὐθύς can have this meaning: and it is safer, I think, to understand εὐθύς γεγυνομένοι in the ordinary way. Others think that only one category is intended, taking ὀλίγον χρόνον βιούντων as equivalent to ἀποθανόντων (Purves, and so also D. and V. "those whose death followed close upon their birth"). But καὶ cannot be so easily ignored.

15 εἰς δὲ θεοὺς κτλ. Cf. Xen. Mem. IV 4. 19, 20 *παρὰ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις πρῶτον νομίζεται τοὺς θεοὺς σέβειν. Οὐκοῦν καὶ γονέας τιμᾶν πανταχοῦ νομίζεται; Καὶ τοῦτο, ἔφη, and Pind. Pyth. 6. 23—27 and other passages in Nägelsbach Nachhom. Theol. pp. 191 ff., 275 ff. The categories of sinners in the Phaedo (113 E—114 B) correspond very nearly to those mentioned here. Cf. Dieterich Nek. pp. 165 ff.*

16 αὐτόχειρος φόνου. See cr. n. In common with most editors I have adopted αὐτόχειρος in place of αὐτόχειρας. The error was easy, and the change is slight. Schneider understands εἰς before αὐτόχειρας, in a different sense from that which it bears with θεοὺς and γονέας. "Contorta sane loci interpretatio," says Stallbaum, rightly. αὐτόχειρ φόνος (cf. the ἀνδροφόνος of the Phaedo l.c.) does not necessarily mean either 'suicide' or 'the murder of near relations' (D. and V.), but merely 'slaying with one's own hand,' 'homicide.' See Jebb on Soph. Ant. 55.

18 Ἀρδιαῖος: a purely fictitious personage, no doubt, although verisimilitude is preserved by χιλιοστὸν: cf. εἶναι δὲ τὴν πορὸν χιλιέτην 615 A.

615 D 23 οὐδ' ἂν ἥξει. ἂν with the future indicative is scarcely here 'colloquial' (as Goodwin holds, MT. p. 66),

XIV. Ἐθεασάμεθα γὰρ οὖν δὴ καὶ τοῦτο τῶν δεινῶν θαυμά-
των. ἐπειδὴ ἐγγὺς τοῦ στομίου ἤμεν μέλλοντες ἀνιέναι καὶ τᾶλλα 25 πάντα πεπονηότες, ἐκείνόν τε κατέδομεν ἐξαίφνης καὶ ἄλλους σχεδόν τι αὐτῶν τοὺς πλείστους τυράννους· ἦσαν δὲ καὶ ἰδιωταί τινες τῶν μεγάλα ἡμαρτηκότων· οὓς οἰομένους ἴδῃ ἀναβήσεσθαι οὐκ ἐδέχετο τὸ στόμιον, ἀλλ' ἐμυκάτο, ὅποτε τις τῶν οὕτως ἀνιάτως ἐχόντων εἰς ποιηρίαν ἢ μὴ ἰκανῶς δεδωκὼς δίκην ἐπιχειροῖ ἀνιέναι. 30 ἐνταῦθα δὴ ἄνδρες, ἔφη, ἄγριοι, διάπυροι ἰδεῖν, παρεστῶτες καὶ καταμανθάνοντες τὸ φθέγμα, τοὺς μὲν διαλαβόντες ἦγον, τὸν δὲ
Ἀρδιαῖον καὶ ἄλλους συμποδίσαντες χεῖράς τε καὶ πόδας | καὶ

32. διαλαβόντες A¹ q: ἰδίᾳ λαβόντες A² Z.

but has a solemn, half-tragic or poetical effect. There is the usual supply of emendations, such as οὐδ' αὖ ἤξει (Madvig) οὐδ' ἀνήξει (Herwerden), οὐδὲ μὴ ἤξει (Cobet), οὐδὲ δὴ ἤξει (Richards); but the idiom is sufficiently well established (see on VI 492 C), and, as Turner remarks, the variant ἤξει (in Z and three other MSS) is itself also evidence in favour of ἄν.

27 σχεδόν τι—τυράννους. Cf. Gorg. 525 D οἶμαι δὲ καὶ τοὺς πολλοὺς εἶναι τούτων τῶν παραδειγμάτων ἐκ τυράννων καὶ βασιλέων καὶ δυναστῶν καὶ τὰ τῶν πόλεων πραξάντων γεγονότας.

ἦσαν δὲ καὶ κτλ.: not "erant vero etiam aliqui privati ex eorum numero, qui magna perpetraverant facinora" (Stallbaum), but "erant vero etiam nonnulli privati et quidem de genere magnorum peccatorum" (after Schneider). With ἦσαν cf. Phaed. 59 B ἦν δὲ καὶ Κτήσιππος and Protr. 315 A.

615 E 29 ἐμυκάτο. Cf. Arist. an. post. II II. 94^b 32 βροντᾶ—ὡς οἱ Πυθαγόρειοι φασιν, ἀπειλῆς ἔνεκα τοῖς ἐν τῷ ταρτάρῳ, ὅπως φοβῶνται (quoted by Zeller⁵ I p. 451 n. 3). See also Plut. de gen. Socr. 591 C. The remarks of Proclus on this part of the myth deserve quotation: πάντα γὰρ ταῦτα φρικώδεις μὲν ποιεῖ τὰς πονῆας καὶ ἀπαραιτήτους, ἀνυπερβλήτους δὲ τὰς μοχθηρίας δείκνυσσι τῶν κολαζομένων, εἰπερ καὶ τὰ ἄψυχα φωνὴν ἀφίησιν ἐμψυχον κατ' αὐτῶν καὶ τὰ κολάζοντα φάσματα δυσαντίβλεπτα καὶ τὰ δεσμωτήρια ἄψυκτα (l.c. p. 180).

29 ἀνιάτως ἐχόντων. Cf. Phaed. 113 E οἱ δ' ἄν. δόξωσιν ἀνιάτως ἔχειν διὰ τὰ μεγέθη τῶν ἁμαρτημάτων κτλ. See on II 380 B.

31 ἄνδρες—ἄγριοι κτλ. These are the prototypes of the κολάζοντες ἄγγελοι of later apocalyptic literature: see for example Petri Apoc. vv. 21, 23 (Dieterich Nek. pp. 4 and 60). Cf. also Euseb. Praep. Ev. XIII 13, 5.

ἔφη: sc. ὁ ἐρωτώμενος (supra D).

32 τοὺς μὲν—ἦγον. διαλαβεῖν παλαιστρινόν τι (Hesychius). The word is explained in Bekker Anecd. 36 as τὸ ἐκατέρωθεν τινος λαβεῖσθαι. Cf. Hdt. IV 68 διαλελαμμένος ἄγεται, I 114 a1. Some malefactors they seized in this forcible way and marched off direct to Tartarus (see on 616 A): others, and among them Ardiaeus, they tortured first, and utilised as παραδείγματα (infra 616 A n.). Schneider translates "die nehmen die einen und führten sie abseits," understanding διαλαβεῖν as 'take aside': a usage for which the lexica rightly or wrongly quote Aesch. F. L. 41 διαλαβάνων γὰρ ἕκαστον ἡμῶν ἐν μέρει. The variants ἰδίᾳ λαβόντες (Z and some other MSS), ἰδίᾳ παραλαβόντες (Euseb. Praep. Ev. XIII 13, 5 and Clem. Strom. V 133 Migne) etc. point to a similar but not identical interpretation: cf. also Proclus l.c. p. 182, 6 ff. διαλαβόντες γὰρ ἄγονσιν οἱ μὲν ἄλλους, οἱ δὲ ἄλλους· τοῦτο γὰρ τὸ διαλαβεῖν, οἷον διανεμασθαι τὰς κολάσεις. But τοὺς μὲν seems clearly to refer to some of the ἀνιάτως ἔχοντες, and none of this class is likely to have met with gentle treatment at the hands of the ἄνδρες διάπυροι. In Phaed. 113 E all the incurables are thrown εἰς τὸν Τάρταρον, ὅθεν οὐποτε ἐκβαλνουσιν. It may be noted that the reading διαλαβόντες is confirmed by Plutarch's imitation τοῦτον ἢ Δίκη διαλαβοῦσα (de ser. numi. vind. 563 A).

κεφαλὴν, καταβαλόντες καὶ ἐκδείραντες, εἶλκον παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἐκτὸς ἐπ' ἀσπαλάθων κνάπτοντες καὶ τοῖς αἰὲ παριοῦσι σημαίνοντες, ὧν ἕνεκά τε καὶ ὅτι εἰς τὸν Τάρταρον ἐμπεσούμενοι ἄγοντο. 5 ἔνθα δὲ φόβων ἔφη πολλῶν καὶ παντοδαπῶν σφίσιν γεγυγνότεν τοῦτον ὑπερβάλλειν, μὴ γένοιτο ἐκάστῳ τὸ φθέγμα, ὅτε ἀναβαίνοι, καὶ ἀσμενέστατα ἕκαστον σιγήσαντος ἀναβῆναι. καὶ τὰς μὲν δὲ δίκας τε καὶ τιμωρίας τοιαύτας¹ τινὰς εἶναι καὶ αὐτὰς τὰς εὐεργεσίας B

3. κνάπτοντες Ξq^2 : κνάμπτοντες A: κνάπτονται satis trito errore pro κνάπτοντες q^1 . 4. ὅτι εἰς Ξq : εἰς δ , τι A. 6. τοῦτον A² (addito ω super posterius o a manu rec.) et q : τούτων A¹ Ξ .

616 A 3 ἐκτός: i.e. outside the στόμιον. It seems to me quite clear from this passage that the δαίμονιος τόπος is not in the aether, as Proclus appears to suppose (l.c. pp. 128 ff.), but somewhere on the true surface of the earth as described in Phaed. 109 E ff.

ἐπ' ἀσπαλάθων κνάπτοντες. ἐπὶ κνάφον ἔλκων = διαφθείρων. τὸ γὰρ πρότερον οἱ γραφεῖς ἀκανθῶν σωρὸν σιστρέψαντες, τὰ ἱμάτια ἐπὶ τοῦ σωροῦ ἔκναπτον. ὁ δὲ σωρὸς ἐλέγετο γνάφος. ὁ οὖν Κροῖσος τὸν ἐχθρὸν περιέβαινε ταῖς ἀκάνθαις καὶ οὕτως ἔφθειρεν (Hesychius, with reference to Hdt. 1 92). In the Apocalypse of Peter v. 30 we read of χάλικες οὐζυτεροὶ ξιφῶν καὶ παντὸς ὀβελίσκου, πεπυρωμένοι, καὶ γυναῖκες καὶ ἄνδρες ῥάκη ῥηπαρὰ ἐνδεδυμένοι ἐκλύοντο ἐπ' αὐτῶν κολαζόμενοι. The form κνάμπτοντες appears in A (see cr. n.) and several MSS, but κνάμπτω is a bye-form of γνάμπτω and means not 'card' but 'bend' (Stephanus-Hase s.v.).

τοῖς αἰὲ παριοῦσι κτλ. According to Norden l.c. p. 393 the idea that incurable sinners serve as παραδείγματα in Hades is probably Orphic or Pythagorean. It meets us also in Pindar (Pyth. 2. 21 ff., of Ixion) and in Virg. Aen. vi 618 ff. Phlegyasque miserrimus omnes Admonet, et magna testatur voce per umbras 'Discite iustitiam moniti, et non temnere divos.' The fullest exposition of the theory is to be found in Gorg. 525 B—D.

4 ὧν ἕνεκά τε κτλ. The words ταῦτα ὑπομένοιν, which Schneider still retains after ἕνεκά τε, have scarcely any MS support and are an obvious gloss. The construction is ὧν ἕνεκά τε ἄγοντο καὶ ὅτι εἰς τὸν Τάρταρον ἐμπεσούμενοι ἄγοντο. ὅτι εἰς. See cr. n. I formerly, with Hermann and Baiter, read εἰς δ τι, regarding τὸν Τάρταρον as a gloss. But there is reason in Richards' remark that οἱ or ὅποι would be more natural than εἰς δ τι: and in any case it is hardly likely that Plato would have omitted to specify the destination of these sinners by its name. Cf. Phaed. 113 E (quoted above on 615 E) and (for Plato's conception of Tartarus) ib. 112 A ff.

5 ἔφη: sc. ὁ ἐρωτώμενος (615 D), as before.

σφίσιν: i.e. to ὁ ἐρωτώμενος and his comrades.

6 τοῦτον ὑπερβάλλειν. The words τὸν φόβον, which Ξ and other MSS add after ὑπερβάλλειν, may be genuine, but as they are absent from A, q and several MSS besides, it is perhaps safer to omit them.

7 καὶ τὰς μὲν κτλ. At this point Er's own narrative is resumed.

616 B 8 τὰς εὐεργεσίας: 'the blessings which they received.' This clearly refers, as Proclus also believed (l.c. p. 185), to the souls ἐν τῇ ὑπὸ γῆς πορείᾳ. See on 615 B, and compare Matthew Arnold's well known poem 'Saint Brandan.'

616 B—617 D After spending seven days in the meadow, the souls that had returned from the journey of a thousand years rose up and departed, accompanied by Er. On the fourth day they reached a place from which they beheld a straight light, like a pillar, stretching through all Heaven and Earth, and after a day's journey they saw at the middle of this light the extremities of the chains of Heaven, and stretching from these extremities the spindle of Necessity with its eight concentric whorls, the circles of whose rims as they revolve carry with them severally the fixed stars and all the planets in their order. On each of the eight whorls is perched a Siren, uttering a single note, the eight notes thus produced result-ταύταις ἀντιστρόφους. ἐπειδὴ δὲ τοῖς ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι ἐκάστοις ἑπτὰ ἡμέραι γένοιντο, ἀναστάντας ἐντεῦθεν δεῖν τῇ ὁγδόῃ πορεύε- 10

ing in a single 'harmony' or mode. Meanwhile the three Fates, as they assist in the revolutions, keep singing to the Sirens' music, Lachesis hymning the past, Clotho the present, and Atropos the future.

616 B ff. The astronomical difficulties in this part of the Republic have occasioned a great deal of controversy and discussion. Besides the various editions and translations of the Republic in English and German, and the commentaries of Proclus and Theo, the writers whom I have chiefly studied are Grote (Plato on the Earth's Rotation), Boeckh (Kleine Schriften III pp. 266—320), Donaldson (Transactions of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, x pp. 305—316), Susemihl (Gen. Entw. II pp. 273—278), Krohn (Pl. St. pp. 278—289) and Zeller⁵ I pp. 434 f. III. Donaldson's article, to which Dr Jackson first called my attention, although it lacks consistency and clearness, and passes over many difficulties, contains the germ of what I now believe to be the correct theory of the straight light. But nothing that has hitherto been published on the subject supplies at once a full and satisfactory explanation of the difficulties, and it is only through the kind cooperation of Professor Cook Wil-son that I have at last been able to form a definite view as to the meaning and solution of this extremely complicated problem. From 616 B to the middle of 617 B my commentary is mainly based on the exhaustive criticisms and investigations which he has sent to me.

The general scope and purpose of the astronomical part of the myth would seem to be to set before the souls a picture of the 'harmonies and revolutions of the Universe' in conformity with which it is their highest duty and privilege to live. Cf. Tim. 90 C, D τῷ δ' ἐν ἡμῖν θεῷ ξυγγενεῖς εἰσι κινήσεις αἱ τοῦ παντός διανοήσεις καὶ περιφοραί· ταύταις δὲ ξυνεπόμενον ἕκαστον δεῖ τὰς περὶ τὴν γένεσιν ἐν τῇ κεφαλῇ διεφθαρμένας ἡμῶν περιόδους ἐξορθοῦντα διὰ τὸ καταμανθάνειν τὰς τοῦ παντός ἀρμονίας τε καὶ περιφοράς τῷ κατανοομένῳ τὸ κατανοοῦν ἐξομοιωσάι κατὰ τὴν ἀρχαίαν φύσιν, ὁμοιωσάντα δὲ τέλος ἔχειν τὸ προτεθέντος ἀνθρώποις ὑπὸ θεῶν ἀρίστου βίου πρὸς τε τὸν παρόντα καὶ τὸν ἔπειτα χρόνον. It will facilitate the study of the details if we observe in advance that Plato's description falls into two well-marked divisions or sections, viz. from ἀφικνεῖσθαι τετραταίους down to τὴν περιφορὰν (616 B, C), and from ἐκ δὲ τῶν ἄκρων (616 C) to the end of the myth. In the first section we have a representation of the outermost or sidereal sphere, girdled by a circle of light, which is prolonged through the poles into a column or shaft of light spanning the Universe from pole to pole and symbolizing to all appearances the cosmical axis. See on line 14 below. In the second section the scene is shifted, and we are introduced to a new picture of the celestial system, including the fixed stars, but without the encompassing girdle of light, assimilated to the poetical and suggestive figure of Necessity and her spindle, the shaft of which again represents the axis of the Universe. The details are fully discussed in the notes, where it is shewn that the two parts of the description cannot from their very nature be combined into a coherent and consistent whole, and that in consequence of their essential inconsistency Plato's passing attempt to reconcile them inevitably fails. See on ἐκ δὲ τῶν ἄκρων κτλ. 616 C and App. VI.

If the question is asked, 'Does Plato's description embody a serious astronomical theory of the visible heaven and its machinery?' what answer should be returned? The following remarks will indicate the kind of reply which seems to be in harmony both with Plato's general attitude on astronomical questions and with the special peculiarities of the myth before us. (1) The visible heavens, according to the Republic, are not the object of true Astronomy. The true Astronomer is concerned with ἃς τὸ ὄν τάχος καὶ ἡ οὐσα βραδυνὴ ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἀριθμῷ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἀληθεῖσι σχήμασι φορὰς τε πρὸς ἀλλήλα φέρεται καὶ τὰ ἐνόντα φέρει (VII 529 D. See note ad loc.). We may therefore expect imagination and idealism to play a large part in Plato's astronomical pictures, more especially when they form part of a myth. (2) The greater portion of this passage is in reality a similitude representing the celestial system under the figure of the spindle of Necessity.

σθαι, καὶ ἀφικνεῖσθαι τεταρταίους ὅθεν καθορᾶν ἄνωθεν διὰ παντὸς τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς τεταμένον φῶς εὐθύ, οἶον κίονα, μάλιστα τῇ ἱριδι προσφερές, λαμπρότερον δὲ καὶ καθαρώτερον· εἰς δ' ἀφικέ-

13. προσφερές Ξ et corr. A²: προσφερῇ A¹.

Now it is clear that Plato deliberately sacrificed the reality of the sidereal sphere when he found it inconsistent with the figure which he had chosen (see on κύκλους κτλ. 616 D). And if he could concede so much to his comparison, the question arises, 'Are we justified in regarding any of the machinery as seriously expressing Plato's real conception of the mechanism of the heavens?' It will be found on reflection that the only satisfactory and safe reply is that all the machinery, including the material whorls and axis of the spindle, is poetical throughout. This does not of course exclude the supposition that some of the details of Plato's imagery are borrowed from earlier astronomical fancies, and it is highly probable that here, as elsewhere in the myth, he takes something from the Pythagoreans: see on 616 C, D, 617 B. (3) The entire description should in all probability be regarded as "essentially a symbolic representation and not an attempt at scientific explanation" (Cook Wilson). But 'a symbolic representation should stand in some relation to the thing signified,' and in this case all we can reasonably infer from Plato's symbolism is that, according to his belief, the Earth is in the middle: the Sun, Moon and Planets revolve round the Earth at different distances from the centre and with different velocities, participating in the general movement of the heavens and at the same time having a contrary movement of their own. As for the fixed stars, it would seem from the first part of Plato's description that he supposed them to be fixed in the outermost sphere of the Universe, round which he plainly supposes that the circle of the Milky Way extends. See also on 616 C, 617 A.

616 B 11 καὶ ἀφικνεῖσθαι κτλ. 'And on the fourth day they arrived at a point from which they descried extending from above through all the heaven and earth a straight light, like a pillar, resembling the rainbow more than anything else, but brighter and purer.' The souls see the light for the first time on the fourth day after they begin their march, and consequently on the eleventh day from Er's arrival at the meadow. The remaining incidents occupy one day, and it is on the twelfth that Er revives (δωδεκαταίος—ἀνεβίω 614 B). See on ἔωθεν in 621 B. As far as the Greek is concerned, ἄνωθεν may be construed either with καθορᾶν or with τεταμένον. In the former case, we should probably have to suppose (with Boeckh l.c. p. 299) that Er's point of view is outside the Universe; but it will be shewn in Appendix VI that there are serious difficulties in the way of this supposition, and the second alternative is to be preferred. It has already been remarked that Plato in all probability thinks of the λευκῶν as somewhere on the true surface of the Earth described by him in the myth of the Phaedo (614 C n.), and it is apparently along this surface that the souls progress until they come in view of the light. As regards the shape and position of the light, Plato's language is clear and precise. The light is 'straight, like a pillar,' and 'stretched through all the heaven and earth.' The only natural interpretation of these words is that a column or shaft of light spans the entire Universe, like the diameter of a circle, and passes through the centre of the Earth, which, according to Plato, is situated in the middle of the whole (Phaed. 108 E ff., Tim. 40 B). With διὰ παντός—τεταμένον we may compare Tim. 40 B τὸν διὰ παντός πόλον τεταμένον (of the axis of the Universe). The words μάλιστα τῇ ἱριδι προσφερές refer, not of course to the shape, but to the colour of the light, as appears from λαμπρότερον δὲ καὶ καθαρώτερον. The correction of προσφερῇ to προσφερές in A (see cr. n.) is late, but προσφερές is intrinsically a better reading, and might easily have been altered to προσφερῇ under the influence of κίονα. In defence of προσφερῇ Schneider cites ἀπαχευμένον in VI 485 D, but the two cases are not exactly parallel: see note ad loc. Other views on this passage are discussed in App. VI.

13 εἰς δ' ἀφικέσθαι κτλ. 'At this light they arrived after a day's march forward, and there, at the middle of the light' etc.

FIG. i.

FIG. ii.

FIG. iii.

FIG. iv.

σθαι προελθόντας ἡμερησίαν ὁδὸν καὶ ἰδεῖν αὐτόθι κατὰ μέσον ἢ τὸ

14. προελθόντας q: προελθόντες AΞ.

Instead of προελθόντας, A and other MSS have προελθόντες (see cr. n.), which Schneider defends by saying that the nominative refers not to all the party, but only to Er and his immediate companions. But even in that case the accusative would be more correct, and in point of fact it is clear from what follows that Er is accompanied throughout by all the souls about to be born again. A few other MSS besides q have the accusative. If the light is 'straight, like a pillar,' and stretches 'through all the heaven and earth,' it follows that as the Earth is in the middle of the Universe, the 'middle of the light' will be at the centre of the earth. See fig. i on p. 443. No other interpretation of κατὰ μέσον τὸ φῶς is either natural or easy: see App. VI. It would seem therefore that at the end of the fourth day after leaving the meadow the souls are at the central point both of the Universe and of the Earth, as is maintained by, among others, Schneider and Donaldson (l.c. p. 307); and this view is also in harmony with some of the most important features in the remaining part of the narrative: see on 617 B, 621 A, B.

14 καὶ ἰδεῖν αὐτόθι κτλ. 'and there, at the middle of the light, they saw, extended from heaven, the extremities of its chains; for this light chains the heavens, holding together all the revolving firmament, like the undergirders of men of war.' The pronoun αὐτοῦ is ambiguous, and as far as concerns the grammar might be referred either to τοῦ οὐρανοῦ or to τὸ φῶς. If we choose the former alternative, αὐτοῦ will be an objective genitive, denoting that which is bound; if the latter, the meaning, as Professor Cook Wilson points out, is 'its chains,' 'its bands,' i.e. 'the chains of which the light consists,' for in the next clause the light is said to be a chain (ξύνδεσμος). The second of these views is on grammatical grounds somewhat more natural than the first; but whichever alternative we adopt, it is clear from the explanatory clause εἶναι γὰρ—περιφοράν, not only that the chains are the binding chains of heaven, but also that it is the light itself, and nothing else, which fulfils the function of binding the Universe together (εἶναι γὰρ τοῦτο τὸ φῶς ξύνδεσμον τοῦ οὐρανοῦ). In what way the light performs this office, Plato indicates by the much-disputed words οἶον τὰ υποζώματα τῶν τριηρῶν. The evidence on the subject of the 'undergirders' of ancient men of war has been collected and discussed by Boeckh Urkunden über d. Seewesen des Attischen Staates pp. 133—138: see also J. Smith Voyage and Shipwreck of St Paul pp. 210—215 and Breusing Nautik d. Alten pp. 170—184. It may be taken as established that the υποζώματα were ropes and not planks, as some of the ancient commentators supposed (e.g. Proclus in remp. II p. 200. 25, a Scholiast quoted by Kroll l.c. II p. 381, and Suidas s.v. υποζώματα, who follows a scholium on Ar. Knights 279), and also that they were fastened round the outside of the vessel; but on the question whether the υποζώματα ran round the ship in a horizontal direction, or were passed under the hull, there is more room for difference of opinion. The former view is maintained by Boeckh and Breusing, the latter by J. Smith (l.c. pp. 108 f., 115, 210—215), who reminds us that a similar process, known by the name of 'frapping,' is still occasionally resorted to in the case of wooden ships during a storm at sea (pp. 108 f.). The evidence bearing on this matter has recently been investigated by Professor Cook Wilson (see Report of the Proceedings of the Oxford Philological Society for Hilary Term 1902 in Cl. Rev. XVI p. 234), who will shortly publish a detailed discussion of the whole subject. In the meantime he writes to me as follows:—"After careful reading of all the passages quoted by the authorities I feel sure (what one might infer a priori from the mechanical conditions) that this method" [i.e. frapping] "was known to the ancients, and was the method used in an emergency at sea, as e.g. in St Paul's ship. I conjecture also that these undergirders first had the name υποζώματα, and that if the belts or girdles supposed by Boeckh had this name, it was transferred to them from the true undergirders, which were probably the first and primitive form and remained in use always, even after the trireme belts had been invented." The evidence in short, points to two kinds of υποζώματα (Cl.

15 φῶς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τὰ ἄκρα αὐτοῦ τῶν δεσμῶν τεταμένα· εἶναι γὰρ τοῦτο τὸ φῶς ξύνδεσμον τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, οἶον τὰ ὑποζώματα τῶν

Rev. 1.c.), the first employed occasionally under exceptional circumstances, and passing under the hull of the vessel, the second (see Boeckh l.c. p. 137) forming part of the regular equipment of a warship, attached before she went to sea, and running horizontally round the hull. The second variety is clearly represented on a bronze relief of the forepart of a war vessel, said to date from Roman imperial times, and now in the Berlin Museum. The sketch of the relief on p. 443, fig. ii is from a photograph in the possession of Professor Cook Wilson. There is also a (somewhat inaccurate) drawing of the relief in Beger Thesauri regii et electoralis Brandenburgici Vol. III p. 406. (Some writers, and among them J. Smith, have maintained that the longitudinal bands in Beger's picture are only ornaments, and not ropes; but it is quite clear from the photograph that they are really ropes and serve as ὑποζώματα of the horizontal kind.) To which of the two varieties does Plato here allude? The words οἶον τὰ ὑποζώματα τῶν τριηρῶν, οὕτω πᾶσαν συνέχον τὴν περιφορὰν, seem clearly to regard the ὑποζώματα as permanent σκεύη of warships, holding the hull together in ordinary circumstances, and not merely resources to be employed in times of difficulty and danger; and since the light whose action the ὑποζώματα serve to illustrate is (in Plato's view) an essential part of the Universe, the illustration is better and more pointed if the ὑποζώματα are also of the more permanent sort. It may also be noted that if Plato had meant the undergirders which pass under the keel he would probably have written ὑποζώματα τῶν νεῶν, and not ὑποζώματα τῶν τριηρῶν, for the vertical ὑποζώματα were not confined to triremes. For these reasons it would seem that Plato has in view such ὑποζώματα as are described by Boeckh, viz. girdles running round the hull from stern to stem outside the vessel.

It is clear, therefore, that the light not only passes through the centre of the Universe, but also, since it holds the heavens together, like the undergirders of men of war, round the outer surface of the heavenly sphere.

I have tried to represent the kind of picture in Plato's mind by fig. i on p. 443.

The sphere of the heavens—represented by the circle dd', which is a section of the heavenly sphere—is virtually compared to a ship. The North pole, which is at b, corresponds to the stem, and the South pole, which is at c, to the stern of the vessel. The circular light caba'c corresponds to the ὑποζώματα, cab being that part of the light which corresponds to the ὑποζώματα on the port side, and ca'b the portion which corresponds to the ὑποζώματα on the starboard side. As the light in Plato's description passes through the centre of the Universe as well as round its exterior, the comparison of the light to horizontal ὑποζώματα would be all the more apposite if we might suppose that these ὑποζώματα were brought inside from stem to stern lengthwise and parallel to the ship's length, in a manner corresponding to the position of the straight part of the 'binding light.' But for this supposition there is no evidence, and it is clear from fig. ii that the lower ὑποζώματα at least could not have been brought inside, for they are below the water line. We must accordingly suppose that the comparison with ὑποζώματα extends only to that part of the light which surrounds the surface of the heavenly sphere. That the ends of the light are brought inside the sphere in Plato's picture is clear from the fact that the light stretches 'through all the heaven and earth' as well as round the Universe, and also because the souls see the 'ends of its chains' or bands at the middle of the light itself, which is also the centre of the Universe and Earth. We may presume that the ἄκρα τῶν δεσμῶν meet together at the centre, so that bc forms one continuous pillar of light stretching from pole to pole. See fig. i on p. 443.

The light was interpreted by some ancient commentators as the axis of the Universe, or a cylinder of aetherial fire surrounding the axis (Theo p. 143 Hiller, Suidas and Photius s.v. τεταμένον φῶς: cf. also Proclus in remp. II p. 199. 31 ff.), by others as the γαλαξίας κύκλος or Milky Way: see Proclus l.c. pp. 130. 4, 194. 19 ff. and Cicero de rep. VI 16. According to the view given above, the column of light follows the direction of the axis of the Universe, if, as we may reasonably

τριήρων, οὕτω πᾶσαι συνέχον τὴν περιφορὰν· ἐκ δὲ τῶν ἄκρων

suppose, b is the pole, and although Plato nowhere actually calls it the axis, we may fairly suppose that this is what it symbolises. I have found no parallel in ancient astronomical theories to this conception of a light stretching from pole to pole. The curved part of the light is no doubt suggested by the Milky Way, which was regarded by the Pythagoreans as either identical with, or an emanation from the circle of fire which, according to them, held the Universe together (Zeller⁵ I p. 435 n. 2). I have sometimes thought that the soul with which in the Timaeus the Creator wrapped the body of the Universe without has reference also to the Milky Way as girdling the World; for the Pythagoreans called the γαλαξίας κύκλος the τόπος ψυχῶν. Plato's words are (Tim. 34 B) ψυχὴν δὲ εἰς τὸ μέσον αὐτοῦ θείσ διὰ παντός τε ἔπεινε καὶ ἐπι ἔξωθεν τὸ σῶμα αὐτῇ περιέκλυνε. The parallel is certainly noteworthy, although περιέκλυνε in the Timaeus rather points to a complete envelopment of the heavens, and διὰ παντός to the universal diffusion of the world-soul throughout the Universe.

616C 17 ἐκ δὲ τῶν ἄκρων κτλ.: 'and from the extremities they saw extended the spindle of Necessity, by which all the revolving spheres are turned. The shaft and hook thereof are made of adamant, and the whorl partly of adamant, and partly of other materials.' With this sentence we pass to the second part of Plato's description, in which he tries to depict the movements of the celestial bodies by a new image—that of Necessity and her spindle. Regarded in itself, this image is tolerably clear and coherent, if we are willing to allow a large admixture of supernatural mechanics; but Plato fails to shew how it is to be reconciled with what has just preceded, and no one has hitherto succeeded in effecting the reconciliation, without doing violence to the Greek. See on 616 D, E and App. VI. The rapid imagination of the writer has already escaped from the earlier picture and fallen under the spell of a new conception, and we shall best apprehend his meaning if we consider what the peculiar nature of that conception demands. The ordinary spindle was shaped somewhat as in figure iii on p. 444, in which a b is the shaft, and c the whorl.

(There is no hook in the figure: but its position would of course be at a.) The fibres were attached to the hook and twisted into a thread by the revolutions communicated to the spindle by the finger and thumb: see Blümner Technologie etc. I pp. 109—120, from whom the figure is borrowed. It is essential to the notion of a spindle that the hook should be fastened to the fibres which are to be spun. For this reason Plato finds it necessary, in using the similitude of a spindle, to attach the hook (ἄγκιστρον) to something which may correspond to the fibres; and he accordingly fastens it to the ends of the chains of light depending from the heavens in his previous image, at the point where these ends meet the ends from below, κατὰ μέσον τὸ φῶς. If we treat this construction as a piece of serious mechanics, Plato's device is open to many obvious criticisms. In fastening the spindle to the ἄκρα τῶν δεσμῶν from above, he forgets or ignores the ends from below. It will further be observed that he says nothing about the direction of the spindle: it is merely 'stretched from the ends' of the chains. We shall presently see that the shaft of the spindle symbolises the axis of the Universe, so that—if we are to connect the two images in Plato's mind—it is natural to suppose that the spindle extends downwards, following the line of the light. Here again there are difficulties, the most serious of which perhaps is that, as the axis of the Universe must go through the earth, the effect of attaching the spindle 'at the middle of the light' will be to depress the earth itself below the centre of the whole. But it should be remembered that Plato's object in this passage is not to furnish a scientific account of the celestial mechanism: see below on 616 D, E, 617 A. We are dealing with a work of literature and not of science, and the machinery of a myth ought not to be rigorously scrutinized from the scientific point of view. Inconsistencies of this kind are found to be inseparable from such poetical representations of the Universe. In the present case they arise chiefly from the juxtaposition of two essentially irreconcilable conceptions—that of a sphere girdled and traversed by light, and that of Necessity and her spindle. See on 616 D, E. For the rest, it should τεταμένον Ἀνάγκης ἄτρακτον, δι' οὗ πάσας ἐπιστρέφεισθαι τὰς περιφοράς· οὗ τὴν μὲν ἡλακάτην τε καὶ τὸ ἄγκιστρον εἶναι ἐξ 20 ἀδάμαντος, τὸν δὲ σφόνδυλον μεικτὸν ἐκ τε τούτου καὶ ἄλλων γενῶν. τὴν δὲ τοῦ σφονδύλου¹ φύσιν εἶναι τοιάνδε· τὸ μὲν σχῆμα D οἷαπερ ἡ τοῦ ἐνθάδε νοῆσαι δὲ δεῖ ἐξ ὧν ἔλεγεν, τοιόνδε αὐτὸν εἶναι, ὥσπερ ἂν εἰ ἐν ἐνὶ μεγάλῳ σφονδύλῳ κοίλῳ καὶ ἐξεγλυμμένῳ διαμπερές ἄλλος τοιοῦτος ἐλάττων ἐγκείτοιο ἀρμόττων, καθάπερ οἱ 25 κἀδοὶ οἱ εἰς ἀλλήλους ἀρμόττοντες· καὶ οὕτω δὴ τρίτον ἄλλον καὶ τέταρτον καὶ ἄλλους τέτταρας. ὁκτὼ γὰρ εἶναι τοὺς ξύμπαντας σφονδύλους, ἐν ἀλλήλοις ἐγκειμένους, κύκλους ἄνωθεν τὰ χεῖλη¹ be noted that adamant symbolises τὸ ἀπαθές καὶ ἀδάμαστον (cf. Proclus l.c. II 209. 22), and is the appropriate material for the ἡλακάτη, since in Plato's picture the ἡλακάτη stands for the axis of the whole. ἡλακάτη is not elsewhere found in the sense of the shaft of a spindle: ordinarily it means 'distaff.' See on 616 D, E below. Plato does not inform us in what way the whorl is μεικτὸν ἐκ τε τούτου (i.e. ἀδάμαντος) καὶ ἄλλων γενῶν: but I think he means that while the outermost circle, which is the circle of ταῦτόν (Tim. 36 C), is composed of adamant, the others, which form collectively the circle of θάτερον, are made, either in whole or in part, of less durable stuff. Herwerden rejects the preposition before ἀδάμαντος, without any reason that I can see.

616 C, D 21 τὴν δὲ τοῦ σφονδύλου φύσιν κτλ. The whorl of Necessity's spindle is a composite structure, consisting of eight concentric hemispheres, fitted into one another like a nest of boxes: see below on 616 E. The adverb διαμπερές should be construed with ἐξεγλυμμένῳ.

616 D, E 27 κύκλους κτλ.: lit. 'shewing their rims as circles above' ('so dass sie ihre Ränder oben als Kreise zeigen' Schneider). Cf. 616 E τὸν τοῦ χεῖλους κύκλον. The translation 'each concentric circle shewing its rim above the next outer' (D. and V.) betrays a complete misapprehension of the whole passage. Donaldson (l.c.) gives the sense correctly: "shewing their rims on the surface like so many circles." The words νῶτον—ἐληλάσθαι mean 'forming a single whorl, with a continuous surface, round the shaft, which is driven right through the middle of the eighth,' not "and on their lower side all together form one continuous whorl" (Jowett). νῶτον is regularly thus used of the upper surface of an object: cf. for example Phaedr. 247 B ἔξω πορευθεῖσαι ἕστησαν ἐπὶ τῷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ νώτῳ. It is important to observe that there is no interval between the different lips: cf. Proclus l.c. II 216. 15 ff. ἡ συνέχεια τῆς ἐναρμόσεως διὰ τὸ μὴ παρεμπιπτεῖν κενὸν συνεχές ποιεῖ τὸ ἐκ πάντων νῶτων ἐννοούμενον νῶτον ἀπὸ κυρτῆς εἰς κυρτὴν διήκον, ἀπὸ τῆς ἐσχάτης ἐπὶ τὴν πρωτίστην, and see on 616 E below. On ἡλακάτην Proclus remarks εἰ δὲ διαμπερές ἐληλάσθαι διὰ πάντων φησὶν τὴν ἡλακάτην, συντόμως καὶ τὴν αἰτίαν ἐξέφηνεν, δι' ἣν ἡλακάτην τὸν ἄξονα προσείρηκεν, καὶ ὅτι παρὰ τὸ ἐληλάσθαι (l.c. p. 214. 26 ff.). As the usual meaning of ἡλακάτη is 'distaff' and not the shaft of a spindle, I think it not unlikely that Proclus is right in this suggestion. For other verbal plays in the myth cf. 620 E n.

In the rims of the different whorls are set the fixed stars and planets in the following order, beginning from the outside (see figure iv on p. 444):—

In the first.	The fixed stars.
" second.	Saturn.
" third.	Jupiter.
" fourth.	Mars.
" fifth.	Mercury.
" sixth.	Venus.
" seventh.	The Sun.
" eighth.	The Moon.

Cf. Tim. 38 C f., where also, as here, Plato is following the Pythagorean order of planets: see Zeller⁵ I pp. 426 f. and (on the whole subject of ancient arrangements of the planets) Hultsch in Pauly-Wissowa, art. Astronomie und Schaubach Gr. Astron. pp. 398 ff. Some later authorities make Plato place Venus before

Ε φαίνοντας, νῶτον συνεχές ἐνὸς σφονδύλου ἀπεργαζομένους περὶ τὴν ἡλακάνην· ἐκείνην δὲ διὰ μέσου τοῦ ὀγδοῦ διαμπερές ἐλλήσθαι. τὸν μὲν οὖν πρῶτόν τε καὶ ἐξωτάτω σφόνδυλον πλατύτατον τὸν 30

Mercury (see for example Diels Doxogr. Gr. p. 345), but the order which I have given is in accord with [Erim.] 986 C—987 C, and with the views represented by Proclus l.c. p. 219. 3 ff.

This conception of close-fitting concentric whorls, carrying the heavenly bodies in their rims or 'lips,' appears to be unique in ancient astronomy. How was Plato led to devise so original an idea? Possibly in this way. It would seem that the Pythagoreans had already developed the astronomical doctrine of Anaximander into a theory of celestial spheres, maintaining that the stars were "fastened in transparent circles or spheres, and turned round by the revolution of these circles on their axes" (Zeller⁵ I p. 415). In order to suit his image of the spindle and whorl, Plato apparently takes these Pythagorean spheres, and cuts them in half, producing a series of hemispheric cups or whorls, in the circular 'lips' of which the celestial bodies are fastened or bound (ἐνδεδεμένα, says Theo 150. 14 Hiller: cf. also Proclus l.c. 219. 24).

So far as the Sun, Moon and Planets are concerned, the resulting picture is clear and intelligible, but it is impossible to conceive of the fixed stars as occupying the 'lip' of one of the hemispherical whorls in the way in which the Sun for example may be supposed to do so. Whatever view we hold of the rest of the picture, it is likely that in this particular at least Plato himself did not think his comparison adequate to exhibit the phenomena: for in C above he has already represented the outermost heavens, in which dwell the fixed stars, not as the lip of a hemispherical shell or hollow, but as an actual sphere (πᾶσαν συνέχον τὴν περιφορὰν). (The inconsistency is noteworthy as shewing that the two images employed by Plato are fundamentally irreconcilable. See on 616 C.) By this and other indications we may be led to suspect that the whole theory of hemispherical whorls is only a device rendered necessary by Plato's similitude. If he had any opinion on the subject at all, he may have accepted the Pythagorean doctrine of spheres; but no conclusion on this matter can be drawn from the Republic. Cf. 617 A n.

616 E 30 τὸν μὲν οὖν πρῶτόν τε κατλ.

According to this reading, which was known to Proclus (l.c. pp. 218 ff.) and is found in all our MSS without any important variation except the omission of ἔκτον (line 31) in Vat. Θ, the order of the different whorls in respect of breadth of rim, beginning with the broadest, is as follows:—

1. Whorl of Fixed Stars (first)
2. " " Venus (sixth)
3. " " Mars (fourth)
4. " " Moon (eighth)
5. " " Sun (seventh)
6. " " Mercury (fifth)
7. " " Jupiter (third)
8. " " Saturn (second).

See fig. iv on p. 444. (This figure, which is a simplified form of a drawing in Professor Campbell's Plato's Republic, published by Murray 1902, is intended to illustrate the upper surface of the whorl of Necessity's spindle. The small disc in the centre represents a section of the shaft, and the order of breadths of rim is indicated by the arabic numerals.) What does Plato mean us to understand by the different degrees of breadth of rim? On this subject I formerly wrote:—"The simple and natural explanation is that the breadth of the rims represents the size of the different planets. Each rim must of necessity be broad enough to contain the planet which resides in it, and no reason can be conceived why it should be any broader" (Cl. Rev. xv p. 392). In maintaining this view, I supposed that the surfaces of the different whorls were separated from one another by an interval representing the distances between the several planets, interpreting νῶτον in 616 E (with Jowett) as the lower and not the upper side of the entire whorl. But, as Professor Cook Wilson points out, the Greek does not allow of this interpretation, for ἀρμόττων, καθάπερ οἱ κάδοι οἱ εἰς ἀλλήλους ἀρμόττοντες, and νῶτον συνεχές ἐνὸς σφονδύλου ἀπεργαζομένους περὶ τὴν ἡλακάνην (616 D, E) shew conclusively that the individual whorls are fitted closely into one another like a nest of boxes, their upper surfaces forming one continuous plane. Cf. Proclus

τοῦ χείλους κύκλον ἔχειν, τὸν δὲ τοῦ ἕκτου δεύτερον, τρίτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ τετάρτου, τέταρτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ ὀγδόου, πέμπτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ ἐβδόμου, ἕκτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ πέμπτου, ἑβδομον δὲ τὸν τοῦ τρίτου, ὀγδοον δὲ τὸν τοῦ δευτέρου. καὶ τὸν μὲν τοῦ μεγίστου ποικίλον, 35 τὸν δὲ τοῦ ἐβδόμου λαμπρότατον, τὸν δὲ τοῦ ὀγδόου τὸ χρῶμα ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐβδόμου ἔχειν | προσλάμποντος, τὸν δὲ τοῦ δευτέρου καὶ 617 πέμπτου παραπλήσια ἀλλήλοις, ξανθότερα ἐκείνων, τρίτον δὲ λευκότερον χρῶμα ἔχειν, τέταρτον δὲ ὑπέρυθρον, δεύτερον δὲ λευκότητι τὸν ἕκτον. κυκλεῖσθαι δὲ δὴ στρεφόμενον τὸν ἄτρακτον

l. c. 216. 8 μηδενὸς γὰρ ὄντος κενοῦ μεταξὺ τῶν ἐνηρμοσμένων σφονδύλων κτλ. From this it follows that, if the breadth of a rim is equal to the diameter of its planet, "planets in the same part of their orbit will touch one another, and if we carry out the principle to the centre whorl, the moon will be always touching the earth. Moreover the outer planet will be continually grazing a fixed star" (Cook Wilson). These considerations are fatal to the view which I advocated; and I take this opportunity of retractation. The theory which has most in its favour, as I now see, is that "the breadth of the rims is intended to signify the supposed distances of the orbits from each other" (Jowett and Campbell). "It would be extraordinary," writes Professor Cook Wilson, "that Plato in representing the heavenly system by his whorls should not have represented somehow the distances between the orbits of the heavenly bodies, and the obvious way to do this was by making the thickness of the spheres to which they are attached, or (as he prefers whorls on account of the distaff of Necessity), the breadth of the rims of the whorls, symbolise these different distances." On this view the natural position of the planet will be "close to the outer edge of its rim, and touching the outer surface of its hemisphere." For a further discussion of this subject see App. VI.

The reading in the text is described by Proclus (l. c. II pp. 218-222) as δευτέρα καὶ νεωτέρα, κρατοῦσα δὲ ἐν τοῖς κεκωλισμένοις (κεκολασμένοις, conjectures Pitra) ἀντιγράφοις. Proclus tells us that there was also another reading, προτέρα καὶ ἀρχαιότερα, which we can see from his description to have been as follows:— τὸν μὲν οὖν πρῶτον τε καὶ ἐξωτάτω σφόνδουλον πλατύτατον τὸν τοῦ χείλους κύκλον ἔχειν, τὸν δὲ τοῦ ἐβδόμου δεύτερον, τρίτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ ὀγδόου, τέταρτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ ἕκτου, πέμπτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ τετάρτου, ἕκτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ τρίτου, ἑβδομον δὲ τὸν τοῦ δευτέρου, ὀγδοον δὲ τὸν τοῦ πέμπτου. The origin, authority and interpretation of this reading are discussed in App. VI.

34 τὸν μὲν τοῦ μεγίστου: sc. σφονδύλου χείλους-κύκλον.

ποικίλον. The epithet ποικίλον means 'spangled,' rather than "exhibiting a variety of colours" (D. and V.). The reference is to the heavens 'stellis ardentibus aptum': cf. Proclus l. c. 222. 29 φησὶ ποικίλον μὲν εἶναι τὸν τοῦ μεγίστου διὰ τὴν τῶν ἀπλανῶν ἀστέρων ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ κύκλῳ ποικιλίαν and VII 529 C n.

35 τὸν δὲ τοῦ ἐβδόμου κτλ. The attributes which belong to the planets are poetically transferred to the rims which they inhabit.

τὸν δὲ τοῦ ὀγδόου. We infer that Plato believed the moon to be an opaque body fastened in the eighth rim and lightened by the Sun. The discovery that the moon shines with borrowed light was ascribed to Anaximenes (Zeller² I p. 248).

617 A I τὸν δὲ τοῦ δευτέρου καὶ πέμπτου κτλ. The second and fifth are Saturn and Mercury, or Φαίνων and Στίλβων, as they were sometimes called, with reference to their brightness or colour. See the de mundo 2. 392^a 23 ff. Yellow, according to Plato, is a mixture of white and red (Tim. 68 b). The third (τρίτον δέ) or Jupiter was known also as Φαέθων, and the fourth, or Mars, as Πυρρείς. Venus, which is the sixth, and comes next to Jupiter in whiteness, had the name Φωσφόρος (de mundo l. c.). Cf. [Epin.] 986 e ff. and Diels Dox. Gr. 344.

4 κυκλεῖσθαι δὲ δὴ κτλ. Cf. Tim. 36 C, D. The whorl of the fixed stars revolves from East to West, bearing with ὄλον μὲν τὴν αὐτὴν φορᾶν, ἐν δὲ τῷ ὅλῳ περιφερομένῳ τοὺς μὲν 5 ἐντὸς ἑπτὰ κύκλους τὴν ἐναντίαν τῷ ὅλῳ ἡρέμα περιφέρεισθαι, B αὐτῶν δὲ τούτων τάχιστα μὲν ἰέναι τὸν ὄγδοον, δευτέρους δὲ καὶ ἅμα ἀλλήλοις τὸν τε ἔβδομον καὶ ἕκτον καὶ πέμπτον, τρίτον δὲ φορᾷ ἰέναι, ὡς σφίσι φαίνεσθαι, ἐπανακυκλούμενον τὸν τέταρτον· τέταρτον δὲ τὸν τρίτον καὶ πέμπτον τὸν δεύτερον. στρέφεσθαι δὲ 10 αὐτὸν ἐν τοῖς τῆς Ἀνάγκης γόνασιν. ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν κύκλων αὐτοῦ

7. αὐτῶν Α²Ξ q: αὐτὸν Α¹.

8. τρίτον q: τὸν τρίτον ΑΞ.

it in its revolution the other seven whorls. In this way Plato portrays the apparent daily revolution of the stars and planets. In order to represent the movements of the Sun, Moon and planets in their own particular orbits, Plato says that each of the seven inner whorls is all the while pursuing on its own account a motion in the opposite direction, viz. from West to East. The revolving whorls in the words of Proclus, 'carry round the stars' (περιάγουσι τοὺς ἀστέρας l.c. p. 226. 12) which are situated in their rims.

Would the mechanism of Plato's picture really produce the movements which it is intended to portray? The question may be interesting, but is irrelevant. Imaginary machines have imaginary properties; and Plato himself invokes the assistance of supernatural beings to carry on the movements (617 c). The important point to keep in mind, as Professor Cook Wilson observes, is that "Plato has realised that the apparent phenomena are what we call a composition of movements (or velocities). This composition of movements he is not attempting to explain, by giving the sort of machinery which he thought really produced it, but he is endeavouring to make us understand what the movements are (not how they originate), by putting the objects concerned in an imaginary machine, the movements of which we can represent to the senses, and which would produce such movements in the objects as they actually have." For similar reasons it is impossible to draw any inference from this passage as to the question whether Plato believed in the daily revolution of the earth. In the Timaeus, according to Grote (Plato on the Earth's Rotation, pp. 13 ff.), the cosmical axis is "a solid cylinder revolving or turning round, and causing thereby the revolution of the circumference or the sidereal sphere," and necessarily also carrying round with itself the Earth, which is massed or globed round the axis of the whole (εἰλλομένην περὶ τὸν διὰ παντὸς πόλον τεταμένον Tim. 40 B. 'Massed' or 'packed' is Boeckh's interpretation of εἰλλομένην, with which Grote also agrees; but whether the word really bears this meaning, is another question, which we need not here discuss.) In support of his explanation of the passage in the Timaeus, Grote appeals to the myth of the Republic; and the appeal would be justified if Plato's figure of Necessity's spindle were intended to explain the cause, and not merely to represent the form, of the celestial motions. As it is, the Republic does not warrant any conclusion either way. Cf. 616 D, E, N.

7 τάχιστα μὲν κτλ. Cf. Tim. 38 C, D, 39 C, 40 B and [Epin.] 986 E ff.

617 B 8 ἅμα ἀλλήλοις. Πλάτων καὶ οἱ μαθηματικοὶ ἰσοδρόμους εἶναι τὸν ἥλιον, τὸν ἑωσφόρον (Venus), Στρίβωνα (Mercury): see Diels Dox. Gr. 346 and cf. Tim. 36 D, [Epin.] 986 E and Proclus l.c. 226. 21. Plato's language certainly means that these three bodies travel at the same pace, and if their speed is the same, obviously they cannot complete their orbits in the same period. But it is doubtful whether the contradiction was present to Plato's mind, and Proclus may be right in holding that Plato was really thinking of the periods of the planets (l.c. and in Tim. 259 c). See also on 617 B below.

τρίτον δὲ κτλ. See cr. n. The article, which was first rejected by Schleiermacher, is probably a dittographical mistake. Schneider, Hermann and Baiter retain it, despite the ambiguity.

9 ἐπανακυκλούμενον. The revolution, relatively to that of the whole, is retrograde: hence ἐπανακυκλούμενον.

11 Ἀνάγκης γόνασιν. Plato means us to imagine Necessity as seated in the centre of the Universe. The notion is ἄνωθεν ἐφ' ἑκάστου βεβηκέναι Σειρήνα συμπεριφερομένην, φωνὴν μίαν ἰείσαν, ἓνα τόνον· ἐκ πασῶν δὲ ὀκτὼ οὐσῶν μίαν ἁρμονίαν probably Pythagorean; for Parmenides, who attaches himself to the Pythagoreans in this part of his system (Zeller⁵ I p. 572), speaks of a central Ἀνάγκη as the cause of all movement and birth: see Diels Dox. Gr. 335. 12 ff. τῶν δὲ συμμικτῶν (sc. στεφανῶν) τὴν μεσαιάτην ἀπάσαις τοκέα πάσης κινήσεως καὶ γενέσεως ὑπάρχειν, ἥτινα καὶ δαίμονα κυβερνητὴν καὶ κληδούχον ἐπονομάζει δίκην τε καὶ ἀνάγκην, and Zeller l.c. p. 577 n. 3. (Zeller identifies this Ἀνάγκη with the central fire of the Pythagoreans.) The same school seem also to have held that Ἀνάγκη surrounds and holds the world together (Diels l.c. 321), and Zeller thinks it is this external Ἀνάγκη of which Plato here avails himself (l.c. p. 434 n. 3). But it is quite clear that Plato's Ἀνάγκη is in the middle: see on 616 B and 621 A, B. The interpretation of Plato's symbolism of course is that Necessity and Law spin the threads of life—the life of the Universe as well as that of man. ἐν τοῖς τῆς Ἀνάγκης γόνασιν is an echo of θεῶν ἐν γούνασι κείται and the like: cf. Proclus l.c. 227. 12.

ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν κύκλων κτλ. βεβηκέναι means 'is perched.' Proclus more suo assures us that the Sirens are ψυχαὶ τινες νοερώς ζῶσαι (l.c. 238. 6), but they are of course only a poetic fiction to express the 'music of the spheres.' Cf. Merchant of Venice v 1 "There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st, But in his motion like an angel sings." Plato goes beyond Shakespeare, setting the angels on the orbs and making them sing. Cf. Milton Arcades 63 ff. "the celestial Sirens' harmony That sit upon the nine"—in Plato there are only eight—"infolded Spheres." The seven planets by their movements were supposed by the Pythagoreans to give forth sounds corresponding to the notes of the Heptachord. This was probably the original form of the 'Music of the Spheres.' Later, it was held that the circle of the fixed stars had also a note of its own, and a 'harmony' or mode (see on III 398 E ff.) resulted like that of the Octachord. The underlying idea of the doctrine of the 'Music of the Spheres' was well expressed by Dorylaeus when he said the Universe was the 'organum Dei' (Censor. de die natali 13; cf. also Milton Ode on the Nativity "And bid the bass of heaven's deep organ blow"). See also next note.

12 φωνὴν μίαν, ἓνα τόνον: 'a single sound, a single musical note.' "Additum ἓνα τόνον pro epegesin est" (Stallbaum). Cf. Proclus l.c. 236. 27 ff. ἡ μὲν γὰρ μία φωνὴ δηλοῖ τὴν ἀμετάβολον τοῦ τῆς ἐνεργείας εἶδους εἰς ἄλλο καὶ ἄλλο μέλος ὑπαρξίν, ὡς ἐκάστης Σειρήνος ἀεὶ τὴν αὐτὴν ἰέισις φωνήν· ὁ δὲ εἰς τόνος τὴν ποιὰν φωνὴν ἐδήλωσεν εἰς ἐνὸς ἀπήχησιν φθόγγου τελοῦσαν· παρὰ γὰρ τὴν τάσιν καὶ ὁ φθόγγος καλεῖται τόνος. There is also perhaps a slight rhetorical effect, though less than in τὸ δεινόν, τὸ μέγα IX 590 A. The reading ἓνα τόνον is confirmed by Plut. de anim. proc. 1029 C and Proclus in Tim. 259 C and in remph. l.c. et al. It is difficult to understand ἀνὰ τόνον, which Hermann and Baiter read, following q and a few inferior MSS. ἀνὰ τόνον could hardly mean 'one note each,' as Hermann supposes. With regard to the ἁρμονία itself, the pitch of the several notes will of course be determined by the speed of the different whorls (cf. VII 530 D n.), so that if we express the notes by the names of the circles which produce them, the ἁρμονία will be:—

Circle of the Fixed Stars (νῆτη)

.. ..	Moon
.. ..	Sun
.. ..	Venus	} (μέση)
.. ..	Mercury
.. ..	Mars
.. ..	Jupiter
.. ..	Saturn (ὑπάρτη)

It is clear that Plato is thinking of a sort of mode (ἐκ πασῶν δὲ ὀκτὼ οὐσῶν μίαν ἁρμονίαν ἐμφωνεῖν), but if we understand ἅμα ἀλλήλοις strictly, there will only be six notes, because Mercury, Venus and the Sun will each have the same note. Difficulties of this sort might have troubled the later Pythagoreans, but scarcely Plato, least of all in an imaginative picture of this kind. We note however that according to Plato the speed of the planets—except in the case of the Sun, Venus and Mercury—diminishes in proportion to their distance from the Earth. Now we may reasonably suppose that Plato thought the more distant planets took longer to complete their orbit than those which are nearer, so that ἑυμφωνεῖν. ἄλλας δὲ καθημένας περίξ δι' ἴσον τρεῖς, ἐν θρόνῳ¹

 C ἐκάστην, θυγατέρας τῆς Ἀνάγκης. Μοίρας, λευχειμονούσας, στέμ- 15 ματα ἐπὶ τῶν κεφαλῶν ἐχούσας, Λάχεσιν τε καὶ Κλωθῷ καὶ "Ατροπον, ὑμνεῖν πρὸς τὴν τῶν Σειρήνων ἁρμονίαν, Λάχεσιν μὲν τὰ γεγονότα, Κλωθῷ δὲ τὰ ὄντα, "Ατροπον δὲ τὰ μέλλοντα. καὶ τὴν μὲν Κλωθῷ τῇ δεξιᾷ χειρὶ ἐφαπτομένην συνεπιστρέφειν τοῦ ἀτράκτου τὴν ἔξω περιφοράν, διαλείπουσαν χρόνον, τὴν δὲ "Ατρο- 20 D πον τῇ ἀριστερᾷ τὰς ἐντὸς αὐ ὥσαύτως· τὴν δὲ Λάχεσιν¹ ἐν μέρει ἐκατέρας ἐκατέρα τῇ χειρὶ ἐφάπτεσθαι.

it is by no means improbable that in speaking of the speed of the planetary movements, Plato really had in his mind the time occupied by the orbital periods and not the rate of progression of the planets themselves. See also above on ἄμα ἀλλήλοις. In that case the octave will be complete, because in order to complete their orbits in the same time, the Sun, Venus and Mercury will have to travel at different rates of speed. Later writers knew all about the Music of the Spheres, and a choir of eight Neo-Pythagoreans would have had no difficulty in rendering it on a small scale: see for example von Jan's Mus. Scr. Gr. pp. 241 ff., 271 ff., 418 f. Cf. also Zeller¹ I pp. 429—434.

617 C 15 Μοίρας, λευχειμονούσας. Ettig l.c. p. 309 n. 3 thinks this an Orphic trait, comparing Frag. 253 Abel Μοίρας—λευκοστόλους.

16 ἐπὶ τῶν κεφαλῶν. These words are bracketed by Herwerden, on the ground that περὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς would alone be good Greek, an opinion which few scholars will share.

17 Λάχεσιν μὲν κτλ. Lachesis is the Fate of the Past, Clotho of the Present, and Atropos of the Future: cf. Latius 960 C, where Plato approves of the ancient tradition Λάχεσιν μὲν τὴν πρώτην εἶναι, Κλωθῷ δὲ τὴν δευτέραν, τὴν "Ατροπον δὲ τρίτην and Proclus l.c. 244. 20 ff. The positions of Lachesis and Atropos were sometimes interchanged, as for example in [Arist.] de mundo 7. 401^b 18 ff. τέτακται δὲ κατὰ μὲν τὸ γεγονὸς μία τῶν Μοιρῶν, "Ατροπος, ἐπεὶ τὰ παρελθόντα πάντα ἄτρεπτά ἐστιν, κατὰ δὲ τὸ μέλλον Λάχεσις (εἰς πάντα γὰρ ἡ κατὰ φύσιν μένει λῆξις), κατὰ δὲ τὸ ἐνεστὸς Κλωθῷ, συμπεραίνουσα τε καὶ κλώθουσα ἐκάστῳ τὰ οἰκεία: cf. also Proclus l.c. 244.

19 τῇ δεξιᾷ χειρὶ. The right hand is reserved for the outermost whorl, or circle of the Same, which is the more honourable, and itself, according to Tim. 36 C, moves ἐπὶ δεξιᾷ: the left for the less honourable circle of the Other, which moves ἐπ' ἀριστερά (ib.). Pythagorean influence is doubtless at work again here: cf. 614 C n.

συνεπιστρέφειν: "cum matre simul vertere" (Ficinus).

20 τὴν ἔξω περιφοράν κτλ. The circle of the Same may be taken as the type of that which 'is': hence it is entrusted to Clotho, the Fate of τὰ ὄντα. The courses of the Planets or 'wandering' stars are symbolical of the unknown and (as it seems to us) uncertain Future, so that they are appropriately given to the Fate of the Future, i.e. Atropos. διαλείπουσαν χρόνον means 'leaving intervals' i.e. 'from time to time.' Clotho leaves off occasionally to make room for Lachesis, as Plato explains in τὴν δὲ Λάχεσιν below. Similarly also Proclus l.c. 252. 8.

21 ὥσαύτως: i.e. διαλείπουσαν χρόνον.

617 C, D 21 τὴν δὲ Λάχεσιν κτλ.: 'while Lachesis lays hold of either in turn, the one with the one hand, the other with the other' ("abwechselnd den einen mit der einen, den andern mit der andern angreifend" Schneider). She turns the circle of the Same with her right hand, the others—here treated as a single περιφορά as in Tim. 36 C—with her left. The translation "laying hold of either in turn, first with one hand and then with the other" (Jowett) is not, I think, what Plato means: for it would seem from what is said of Clotho and Lachesis that the right hand is appropriated to the circle of the Same, the left to that of the Other: see on 617 C. The words ἐν μέρει—if my view is right—belong only to ἐκατέρας ἐφάπτεσθαι and not also to ἐκατέρα τῇ χειρὶ. As the fate

XV. Σφᾶς οὖν, ἐπειδὴ ἀφικέσθαι, εὐθὺς δεῖν ἰέναι πρὸς τὴν Λάχεσιν. προφήτην οὖν τινὰ σφᾶς πρῶτον μὲν ἐν τάξει διαστῆ-25 σαι, ἔπειτα λαβόντα ἐκ τῶν τῆς Λαχέσεως γουάτων κλήρους τε καὶ βίων παραδείγματα, ἀναβάнта ἐπὶ τι βῆμα ὑψηλὸν εἰπεῖν· Ἀνάγκης θυγατρὸς κόρης Λαχέσεως λόγος. ψυχαὶ ἐφήμεροι, ἀρχὴ ἄλλης περιόδου θνητοῦ γένους θανατηφόρου. οὐχ ὑμᾶς

Past, Lachesis fitly contributes to both revolutions: for on the Past depends both the Present and the Future. A similar lesson is conveyed by representing the lots and samples of lives as lying in the lap of Lachesis: cf. also 620 A κατὰ συνήθειαν—αἰρείσθαι and 620 E n.

617 D—619 A As soon as they arrived upon the scene, the souls were called upon to choose new lives. The order of choosing was determined by lot; but there were many more samples of lives than lots, and every soul was made responsible for its own choice. The moment of choice is the supreme crisis of our fate, and it behoves us to spare no effort to equip ourselves for resisting the attractions of wealth and power, and selecting the better life, that is, the life of virtue.

27 Ἀνάγκης κτλ. Proclus' remarks on the style of this speech deserve attention: πανταχοῦ μὲν ὁ Πλάτων νοῦν ἡγεμόνα προστησάμενος ὧν φθέγγεται νοερῶν δντως ἐπάξια φθέγγεται θεαμάτων· ὅταν δὲ καὶ τοὺς κρείττονας ἡμῶν ἀπεικονίζηται, σαφῶς ἐνθεάζοντι προσέοικε καὶ τοὺς φοιβολήπτους μιμείται, ῥήματα ἀφίεις ὥσπερ βέλη νοῦ γέμοντα καὶ ὑψηλὸν ἐπιβολῶν· συνεξορμώσης δὲ αὐτῷ τῆς ἐρμηνείας ταῖς νοήσεσιν ἀκαλλωπίστως συνεστραμμένοι μὲν χρῆται φθέγμασιν, ἀπολελυμένα δὲ ἀπ' ἀλλήλων αὐτὰ δίστησιν τὴν ἀπόλυτον μιμούμενος θέαν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀπ' ἄλλων ἐπ' ἄλλα πηδῶσαν· οἷα καὶ διὰ τοῦτον ἐργάζεται τῶν τοῦ προφήτου λόγων, ἐν ἐλαχίστοις μὲν ἀπεριήγητα νοήματα συλλαβῶν, ἀσύνδετα δὲ τὰ πλεῖστα φθεγγόμενος, συστρέφας δὲ τὰ κῶλα τοῖς αἰνίγμασιν παραπλησίως (l.c. 269). The omission of articles also adds dignity and impressiveness: cf. VII 518 A al.

ψυχὰι κτλ. Plato loosely calls the souls ἐφήμεροι, because their connexion with body is transient. In themselves of course, they are immortal—ψυχὴ πᾶσα ἀθάνατος (Phaedr. 245 C). The explanation of Proclus is somewhat different, and, as often happens, too recondite: τὰς μὲν ἀνθρωπίνας ψυχὰς, οὐτι γε πάσας, ἀλλὰ τὰς γενέσεως ἐπορευομένας ἤδη καλῶν ἐφήμερους, ὡς θνητῶν καὶ ἐφήμερων ἀπτομένας (l.c. 270). περιόδου means of course τῆς ἀπὸ γενέσεως ἐπὶ γένεσιν περιόδου, viz. 1100 years (supra 615 A n.); and θανατηφόρου, 'fraught with death,' 'death-bringing' agrees with περιόδου.

617 D, E 28 οὐχ ὑμᾶς—αἰρήσεσθε. Cf. infra 620 D, E δν εἴλετο δαίμονα—φύλακα ξυμπέμπειν τοῦ βίου καὶ ἀποπληρωτὴν τῶν αἰρεθέντων. Each individual soul is accompanied throughout its life on earth by a δαίμων of its own. This δαίμων is the personification of its destiny throughout that particular life—its genius in short, albus or ater (Hor. Ep. II 2. 189), according as the soul is εὐδαίμων or κακοδαίμων. There are not a few traces of this belief before the time of Plato, e.g. in Heraclitus' famous saying ἦθος ἀνθρώπῳ δαίμων (Fr. 121 Bywater) in Pind. Ol. 13. 28 Ζεῦ πάτερ—Ξενοφώντας εὐθνε δαίμονος οὔρον, and often in Euripides (examples in Nägelsbach Nachkom. Theol. p. 113); and Döring (l.c. p. 489) is no doubt right in holding that the doctrine was not exclusively Orphic or Pythagorean. According to the popular view, which Plato himself is content to make use of in Phaed. 107 D ὁ ἐκάστου δαίμων, ὅσπερ ζῶντα εἰλήχει, we do not choose our δαίμων, but are rather allotted to it: cf. Theocr. 4. 40 αἱ αἱ τῷ σκληρῷ μάλα δαίμονος, ὅς με λέλογχεν, and the fine lines of Menander ἅπαντι δαίμων ἀνδρὶ συμπαρίσταται | εὐθὺς γενόμενῳ, μυσταγωγὸς τοῦ βίου (Mein. Frag. Com. Graec. IV p. 238), together with Homer Il. XXIII 79 (κῆρ) ἤπερ λάχε γενόμενόν περ. In the emphatic οὐχ ὑμᾶς δαίμων λήζεται, Plato proclaims his dissent from the popular view: the individual is himself responsible for his destiny (ἀλλ' ὑμεῖς—αἰρήσεσθε). Hence αἰτία ἐλομένων· θεὸς ἀνάπτιος. On later, especially Stoic, developments of the doctrine of a δαίμων see Rohde *Psyche*² II p. 316 n. See also on 620 D.

Εἰ δαίμων λήξεται, ἀλλ' ὑμεῖς δαίμονα αἰρήσεσθε. πρῶτος δ' ὁ λαχὼν πρῶτος αἰρείσθω βίον, ᾧ συνέσται ἐξ ἀνάγκης. ἀρετὴ 30 δὲ ἀδέσποτον· ἦν τιμῶν καὶ ἀτιμάζων πλεόν καὶ ἔλαττον αὐτῆς ἕκαστος ἔξει. αἰτία ἐλομένου· θεὸς ἀναίτιος. ταῦτα εἰπόντα ῥίψαι ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς κλήρους, τὸν δὲ παρ' αὐτὸν πεσόντα ἕκαστον ἀναιρεῖσθαι, πλὴν οὐ. ἐ δὲ οὐκ ἔαν. τῷ δὲ ἀνελομένῳ 18 δῆλον εἶναι, ὁπόστος εἰλήχει. | μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο αὐτὸς τὰ τῶν βίων 35 παραδείγματα εἰς τὸ πρόσθεν σφῶν θεῖναι ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, πολὺν

30. συνέσται A²Ξ q: συνεστε (sic) A¹. ᾧδε q. 35. εἰλήχει A¹: εἰληχεν A²: εἰληκε (sic) Ξ: ἤλεγχε q.

34. ἐ δὲ Ξ: εδε (sic) A¹: ἔδει A²:
 ᾧδε q.

29 πρῶτος—βίον. See on 618 A πολὺ πλείω τῶν παρόντων.

30 ἐξ ἀνάγκης. The choice, though free, is irrevocable: ἐνεδέχετο γὰρ καὶ ἄλλον βίον ζῆν, ἀλλὰ πρὸ τῆς αἰρέσεως, μετὰ δὲ τὴν αἵρεσιν ἀδύνατον (Proclus l.c.
 275).

ἀρετὴ δὲ ἀδέσποτον. "Mortals that would follow me, Love Virtue, she alone is free" (Milton Comus 1018 f.). On Platonic principles, a thing is in so far as it is good (VI 509 B ff.), so that our truest individuality is nothing more or less than that which is the best and highest part of our nature: cf. the words of Aristotle, who in Eth. Nic. x 7.
 1178^a 2 πλατῶνίζει as follows: δόξειε δ' ἂν καὶ εἶναι ἕκαστος τοῦτο (i.e. τὸ κρᾶτιστον τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ), εἴπερ τὸ κύριον καὶ ἄμεινον. We therefore attain our fullest development and enjoy our only true liberty as individuals by becoming servants of Virtue. In the words of Goethe, "Das Gesetz nur kann uns Freiheit geben." Proclus' comment, though true and instructive as far as it goes, does not exhaust the significance of Plato's saying:
 ἀδέσποτον δὲ τὴν ἀρετὴν, ἀλλ' οὐ διὰ τὸ ἐφ' ἡμῖν μόνον, ἀλλὰ διότι τὴν ψυχὴν ἐλευθέραν ἀποτελεῖ τῶν πικροτάτων δεσπο-τῶν, οἷς ἡ δουλεύουσα τῶν ἀγαθῶν στέρεται πάντων (l.c. 276. 5 ff. Cf. also Pl. Rep.
 I 329 C and especially Xen. Mem. IV 5.
 3—5). The germ of the Platonic doctrine of moral freedom is to be found in the Socratic οὐδὲς ἐκὼν πονηρὸς (see on IX 577 D, E): for its sequel, we should look to the Stoic theory of the freedom of the wise man (ἐλευθέρους τοὺς σπουδαίους μόνον Zeno ap. D. L. VII 33): see especially Epictetus Gnom. Epict. Stob.
 31 ed. Schenkl ἐλευθερία καὶ δουλεία, τὸ μὲν ἀρετῆς ὄνομα, τὸ δὲ κακίας and the chapter περὶ ἐλευθερίας ib. Dissert. IV 1.

32 αἰτία—ἀναίτιος. Cf. II 379 B ff. and Tim. 42 D. The whole of Lachesis' speech is frequently quoted or referred to by later Greek writers (see the references in Schneider's note), and these words in particular became a kind of rallying-cry among the champions of the freedom of the will in the early Christian era (Dieterich Nek. p. 115 n.). A bust of Plato found at Tibur and dating from the first century
 B.C. bears the inscription αἰτία ἐλομένῳ (sic). Θεὸς ἀναίτιος, together with ψυχὴ πᾶσα ἀθάνατος (from Phaedr. 245 c). See Kaibel IGIS 1196 quoted by Dieterich l.c. With the sentiment itself cf. Laus 904 B—D.

618 A 2 πολὺ πλείω τῶν παρόν-των. Cf. 619 B, 620 c. The combination of κλήρωσις and αἵρεσις, which appears also in Phaedr. 249 B, is according to Thompson "a mythical mode of reconciling freedom and necessity—choice being left free under limiting conditions." I think the introduction of the lot is rather intended to account for the conspicuous inequalities between different men in respect of accidents of birth, fortune and the other ἀδιάφορα προηγ-μένα (to use a Stoic term). Ceteris pari- bus, a soul would presumably select a μετρίως κεχωρηγημένον βίον: where it does not, we may suppose, in general, that the κλήρωσις compelled it to choose late.
 Cf. Plot. Ennead. II 3. 15 οἱ κλήροι τίνες; ἢ—τὸ εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸδε τὸ σῶμα καὶ τῶνδε γονέων καὶ ἐν τούτοις τόποις γίνεσθαι, καὶ ὁλως, ὡς εἵπομεν, τὰ ἔξω. This interpretation is supported also by the case of Odysseus below (620 c). See also on 619 D.

πλείω τῶν παρόντων· εἶναι δὲ παντοδαπά· ζῶων τε γὰρ πάντων βίους καὶ δὴ καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρωπίνους ἅπαντας. τυραννίδας τε γὰρ 5 ἐν αὐτοῖς εἶναι, τὰς μὲν διατελεῖς, τὰς δὲ καὶ μεταξὺ διαφθειρομένας καὶ εἰς πενίας τε καὶ φυγὰς καὶ εἰς πτωχείας τελευτώσας· εἶναι δὲ καὶ δοκίμων ἀνδρῶν βίους, τοὺς μὲν ἐπὶ εἶδεσιν καὶ κατὰ κάλλη καὶ τὴν ἄλλην ἰσχύν τε¹ καὶ ἀγωνίαν, τοὺς δ' ἐπὶ γένεσιν καὶ προγόνων ἀρεταῖς, καὶ ἀδοκίμων κατὰ ταῦτά· ὥσαύτως δὲ καὶ γυναι-10 κῶν. ψυχῆς δὲ τάξιν οὐκ ἐνεῖναι, διὰ τὸ ἀναγκαίως ἔχειν ἄλλον ἐλομένην βίον ἀλλοίαν γίγνεσθαι· τὰ δ' ἄλλα ἀλλήλοισι τε καὶ πλούτοις καὶ πενίαις, τὰ δὲ νόσοις, τὰ δ' ὑγίειαις μεμῖχθαι, τὰ δὲ καὶ μεσοῦν τούτων. ἔνθα δὴ, ὡς ἔοικεν, ὦ φίλε Γλαῦκων, ὁ πᾶς κίνδυνος ἀνθρώπῳ, καὶ διὰ ταῦτα μάλιστα ἐπιμελητέον, ὅπως 15 ἕκαστος ἡμῶν¹ τῶν ἄλλων μαθημάτων ἀμελήσας τούτου τοῦ μαθή- C ματος καὶ ζητητῆς καὶ μαθητῆς ἔσται, ἐάν ποθεν οἶός τ' ᾗ μαθεῖν

3 ζῶων τε γὰρ κτλ. Did Plato seriously believe in the transmigration of the soul? Teichmüller summarily dismisses the entire theory as unplatonic (Die Plat. Frage pp. 1—20), while Susemihl, in harmony with certain ancient writers (see the references in Simson Der Begriff d. Seele bei Platon p. 152 n.), takes Plato at his word so far as concerns the passage of the soul into new human bodies, but refuses to allow that he could have believed in transmigration into the forms of the lower animals (Genet. Entwick. 11 p. 272). Plato's language is however quite explicit, and there is the less reason for resorting to an allegorical interpretation, because the doctrine was already familiar in Greek philosophical and religious thought (see F. Laudowicz Wesen u. Ursprung d. Lehre v. d. Præexistenz d. Seele etc. pp. 12—29 and Rohde *Psyche*² 11 pp. 162 ff.), and is itself in general conformity with Plato's own conception of immortality. The doctrine of transmigration meets us frequently in Plato's dialogues, e.g. in Men. 81 A ff.; Phaed. 81 E ff., 113 A; Phaedr. 249 B; Tim. 42 B ff.: cf. 91 D ff. Most if not all of these passages have a mythical colouring, and should therefore be read in the light of the caveat which Plato subjoins to the eschatological myth of the Phaedo: τὸ μὲν οὖν ταῦτα δισχυρίσασθαι οὕτως ἔχειν, ὡς ἐγὼ διελέλυθα, οὐ πρέπει νοῦν ἔχοντι ἀνδρὶ· ὅτι μέντοι ἢ ταῦτ' ἔστιν ἢ τοιαῦτ' ἅττα περὶ τὰς ψυχὰς ἡμῶν—ἐπεὶ περ ἀθάνατόν γε ἡ ψυχὴ φαίνεται οὕσα, τοῦτο καὶ πρέπει μοι δοκεῖ καὶ ἄξιον κινδυνεύσαι οἰομένην οὕτως ἔχειν (114 D). That soul is immortal, Plato is firmly convinced: and transmigration he regards as probable, to say the least. Cf. 608 D n.

5 διατελεῖς. This word, for which Cobet proposes διὰ τέλους, is extremely rare in classical Greek, occurring only here and in Soph. O. C. 1514.

6 εἰς πενίας κτλ. "Expectes εἰς φυγὰς τε καὶ πενίας καὶ εἰς πτωχείας κτλ." (Herwerden). The text may well stand. Plato contrasts poverty and exile (πενίας τε καὶ φυγὰς) with beggary, presumably at home (καὶ εἰς πτωχείας).

618 B 10 ψυχῆς δὲ τάξιν—γίγνεσθαι. Cf. Hom. Od. XVIII 136 f. τοῖος γὰρ νόος ἔστιν ἐπιχθονίων ἀνθρώπων | οἷον ἐπ' ἡμᾶρ ἄγῃσι πατὴρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε, XVII 322 f. and Empedocles 319 f. Karsten ὅσων γ' ἀλλοῖοι μετέφν, τόσων ἄρ σφίσιν αἰεὶ | καὶ τὸ φρονεῖν ἀλλοῖα παρίστατο with Karsten ad loc. See also on I 335 B.

11 τὰ δ' ἄλλα: sc. except ψυχῆς τάξιν. In τὰ ἄλλα are included κάλλος, προγόνων ἀρεταῖ etc.

13 μεσοῦν τούτων: i.e. μεσοῦντα εἶναι τούτων, viz. πλούτων καὶ πενιῶν, νόσων καὶ ὑγειῶν. Cf. 619 A τὸν μέσον—τῶν τοιούτων βίον.

618 C 15 τοῦ μαθήματος and μαθεῖν καὶ ἐξευρεῖν are bracketed by Herwerden. The emphatic pleonasm is thoroughly Platonic. Cf. V 472 C et al.

καὶ ἐξευρεῖν, τίς αὐτὸν ποιήσῃ δυνατόν καὶ ἐπιστήμονα, βίον καὶ χρηστὸν καὶ ποιητὸν διαγιγνώσκοντα, τὸν βελτίω ἐκ τῶν δυνατῶν αἰεὶ πανταχοῦ αἰρεῖσθαι, ἀναλογιζόμενον πάντα τὰ νῦν δὴ ῥηθέντα, καὶ ξυντιθέμενα ἀλλήλοις καὶ διαιρούμενα, πρὸς ἀρετὴν βίου 20

D πῶς ἔχει, καὶ εἰδέναι τί κάλλος πενίᾳ ἢ πλούτῳ κραθὲν¹ καὶ μετὰ ποίας τινὸς ψυχῆς ἕξεως κακὸν ἢ ἀγαθὸν ἐργάζεται, καὶ τί εὐγένειαι καὶ δυσγένειαι καὶ ἰδιωτεῖαι καὶ ἀρχαὶ καὶ ἰσχύες καὶ ἀσθένειαι καὶ εὐμαθίαι καὶ δυσμαθίαι, καὶ πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα τῶν φύσει περὶ ψυχὴν ὄντων καὶ τῶν ἐπικτήτων τί ξυγκεραυνύμενα πρὸς 25 ἀλλήλα ἐργάζεται, ὥστε ἐξ ἀπάντων αὐτῶν δυνατόν εἶναι συλλογισάμενον αἰρεῖσθαι, πρὸς τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς φύσιν ἀποβλέποντα τόν

E τε χεῖρῳ καὶ τὸν ἀμείνω βίον χεῖρῳ¹ μὲν καλοῦντα ὃς αὐτὴν ἐκείσε ἄξει, εἰς τὸ ἀδικωτέραν γίγνεσθαι, ἀμείνω δὲ ὅστις εἰς τὸ δικαιοτέραν. τὰ δὲ ἄλλα πάντα χαίρειν ἑάσει· ἐωράκαμεν γάρ, 30 ὅτι ζῶντί τε καὶ τελευτήσαντι αὕτη κρατίστη αἴρεσις. ἀδαμαντί-

619 | υῶς δὴ δεῖ ταύτην τὴν δόξαν ἔχοντα εἰς "Αἰδοῦ ἵεναι, ὅπως ἂν ἡ καὶ ἐκεῖ ἀνέκπληκτος ὑπὸ πλούτων τε καὶ τῶν τοιούτων κακῶν, καὶ μὴ ἐμπεσὼν εἰς τυραννίδας καὶ ἄλλας τοιαύτας πράξεις πολλὰ μὲν ἐργάσῃται καὶ ἀνῆκεστα κακά, ἔτι δὲ αὐτὸς μείζω πάθῃ, ἀλλὰ γινῶ τὸν μέσον αἰεὶ τῶν τοιούτων βίον αἰρεῖσθαι καὶ φεύγειν τὰ 5 ὑπερβάλλοντα ἐκατέρωσε καὶ ἐν τῷδε τῷ βίῳ κατὰ τὸ δυνατόν B καὶ ἐν παντὶ τῷ ἔπειτα· οὕτω γὰρ εὐδαιμονέστατος¹ γίγνεται ἄνθρωπος.

XVI. Καὶ δὴ οὖν καὶ τότε ὁ ἐκείθεν ἄγγελος ἡγγελλε τὸν μὲν προφήτην οὕτως εἰπεῖν· καὶ τελευταίῳ ἐπιόντι, ξὺν νῷ ἐλομένῳ, 10

21. καὶ εἰδέναι Ξq: εἰδέναι A.

10. νῷ A²Ξ: om. A¹q.

21 καὶ εἰδέναι. See cr. n. καὶ is found in several MSS besides Ξ and q. Hermann removes the καὶ before ἀνατιθέμενα and places it before ἀναλογιζόμενον, but ἀναλογιζόμενον "necessario cum αἰρεῖσθαι cohaeret" (Schneider).

618 D 27 αἰρεῖσθαι κτλ. αἰρεῖσθαι 'to make his choice' is used absolutely as in 620 A. πρὸς τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς κτλ. means 'defining the worse and the better life with reference to the nature of the soul, calling that worse' etc. (So also Schneider.) The two parts of τὸν τε χεῖρῳ καὶ τὸν ἀμείνω βίον are afterwards taken separately in χεῖρῳ μὲν and ἀμείνω δέ, as with so-called 'partitive apposition': cf. 611 D and IV 431 A n. Others take αἰρεῖσθαι with τὸν τε χεῖρῳ καὶ τὸν ἀμείνω βίον, but αἰρεῖσθαι is different from διαιρεῖσθαι and the possibility of a zeugma is excluded because τὸν χεῖρῳ precedes τὸν ἀμείνω and not vice-versa.

618 E 29 ἐκείσε looks forward, of course, to εἰς τὸ ἀδικωτέραν γίγνεσθαι. Herwerden's ἐκεῖ (= ἐν "Αἰδοῦ) is both needless and wrong: for the soul becomes ἀδικωτέρα, if at all, during its life on earth: in Hades it is purged.

30 ἑάσει. Ξ and ν, followed by editors before Schneider, have ἑάν. The future is easy if the sentence be made independent.

619 B 10 ξὺν νῷ. On ξὺν see IV 424 E n.

συντόνως ζῶντι κείται βίος ἀγαπητός, οὐ κακός. μήτε ὁ ἄρχων αἰρέσεως ἀμελείτω, μήτε ὁ τελευτῶν ἀθυμείτω. εἰπόντος δὲ ταῦτα τὸν πρῶτον λαχόντα ἔφη εὐθὺς ἐπιόντα τὴν μεγίστην τυραννίδα ἐλῆσθαι καὶ ὑπὸ ἀφροσύνης τε καὶ λαιμαργίας οὐ πάντα ἱκανῶς 15 ἀνασκεψάμενον ἐλῆσθαι, ἄλλ' αὐτὸν λαθεῖν ἐνούσαν εἰμαρμένην C παίδων αὐτοῦ βρώσεις καὶ ἄλλα κακά· ἐπειδὴ δὲ κατὰ σχολὴν σκέφασθαι, κόπτεσθαι τε καὶ ὀδύρεσθαι τὴν αἵρεσιν, οὐκ ἐμμένοντα τοῖς προρρηθεῖσιν ὑπὸ τοῦ προφήτου· οὐ γὰρ ἑαυτὸν αἰτιᾶσθαι τῶν κακῶν, ἀλλὰ τύχην τε καὶ δαίμονας καὶ πάντα μᾶλλον ἀνθ'
 20 ἑαυτοῦ. εἶναι δὲ αὐτὸν τῶν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἡκόντων, ἐν τεταγμένῃ πολιτείᾳ ἐν τῷ προτέρῳ βίῳ βεβιωκότα, ἔθει ἄνευ φιλοσοφίας ἄρετῆς μετεληφότα. ὥς δὲ καὶ εἰπεῖν, οὐκ ἐλάττους εἶναι ἐν τοῖς D τοιοῦτοις ἀλίσκομένους τοὺς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἡκοντας, ἅτε πόνων ἀγυμνάστους· τῶν δ' ἐκ τῆς γῆς τοὺς πολλούς, ἅτε αὐτοὺς τε
 25 πεπονηκότας ἄλλους τε ἑωρακότας, οὐκ ἐξ ἐπιδρομῆς τὰς αἰρέσεις ποιεῖσθαι. διὸ δὴ καὶ μεταβολὴν τῶν κακῶν καὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν ταῖς

II συντόνως ζῶντι: according to the motto (ἀπλοῦς καὶ ἀτενής (VIII 547 E). συντόνως ζητοῦντι, which Herwerden conjectured, appears in q and Flor. U: but the reading of A is far more characteristic and significant.

619 B—620 D Many were the instances of hasty and foolish choosing: and many the changes resulting both from choice and from the action of the lot. He who is ever faithful to the life of true philosophy, and whose lot does not fall out among the last, will be happy throughout all time. The spectacle was indeed one fitted to move pity, smiles, and wonder. In most cases, the souls chose in conformity with their previous lives—Orpheus, for example, selecting the life of a swan, Ajax that of a lion, and so on. It chanced that Odysseus had drawn the last lot of all, and after long search he found and joyously laid hold of the peaceful life of a private individual, for he was wearied of all his labours. There were changes from beasts to men, and from men to beasts, and every form of permutation.

619 C 21 ἔθει ἄνευ φιλοσοφίας κτλ. Cf. Phaed. 82 A f. οἱ τὴν δημοτικὴν καὶ πολιτικὴν ἀρετὴν ἐπιτετηδεύκοτες, ἣν δὴ καλοῦσι σωφροσύνην τε καὶ δικαιοσύνην, ἐξ ἔθους τε καὶ μελέτης γεγονῶσαν ἄνευ φιλο-σοφίας τε καὶ νοῦ, and see also on VI 500 D, 506 C. It is interesting to observe that philosophic virtue is not a sine qua non for admission to the Platonic heaven. Throughout the whole myth, rewards and punishments are distributed for good and bad actions rather than for knowledge and ignorance (cf. 615 B ff.); and correct opinion or 'Orthodoxy,' in Plato's sense of the word, provided the lines have fallen to it in pleasant places, may well have been both blameless and beneficent on earth. But in the moment of supremest peril (618 B), when we have to choose another life, it is Knowledge, and not 'Orthodoxy,' that prevails. In the Phaedo l.c. Plato says that the 'orthodox' probably enter as before eis τοιοῦτον—πολιτικὸν τε καὶ ἡμερον γένος, ἢ που μελιττῶν ἢ σφηκῶν, ἢ μυρμήκων, ἢ καὶ eis ταῦτόν γε πάλιν τὸ ἀνθρώπινον γένος, καὶ γίγνεσθαι ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀνδρας μετρίους.

619 D 22 ὥς δὲ καὶ εἰπεῖν: not "according to Er's account" (D. and V.), but 'as one might say,' 'broadly speaking,' i.e. ὥς ἔπος εἰπεῖν. Cf. Laws 639 E (ξύμπανθ' ὥς εἰπεῖν), 795 D, Soph. 220 E, Phaedr. 258 E, and [Epin.] 976 E. These examples are cited by Grünwald in Schanz's Beiträge zur hist. Synt. d. Gr. Spr. II 3. pp. 21 ff.

πολλαῖς τῶν ψυχῶν γίνεσθαι καὶ διὰ τὴν τοῦ κλήρου τύχην. ἐπεὶ εἴ τις ἀεὶ, ὁπότε εἰς τὸν ἐνθάδε βίον ἀφικνοῖτο, ὑγιῶς φιλο-
E σοφοῦ, ¹ καὶ ὁ κλήρος αὐτῷ τῆς αἰρέσεως μὴ ἐν τελευταίοις πίπτει, κινδυνεύει ἐκ τῶν ἐκεῖθεν ἀπαγγελλομένων οὐ μόνον ἐνθάδε εὐδαι- 30 μονεῖν ἄν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν ἐνθένδε ἐκείσε καὶ δεῦρο πάλιν πορεῖαν οὐκ ἂν χθονίαν καὶ τραχείαν πορεύεσθαι, ἀλλὰ λείαν τε καὶ οὐρα-νίαν. ταύτην γὰρ δὴ ἔφη τὴν θεὰν ἀξίαν εἶναι ἰδεῖν, ὥς ἕκασται 620 αἱ ψυχαὶ ἤρουντο τοὺς βίους. | ἔλεεινὴν τε γὰρ ἰδεῖν εἶναι καὶ γελοίαν καὶ θαυμασίαν. κατὰ συνήθειαν γὰρ τοῦ προτέρου βίου τὰ πολλὰ αἰρεῖσθαι. ἰδεῖν μὲν γὰρ ψυχὴν ἔφη τὴν ποτε Ὀρφέως γενομένην κύκνου βίον αἰρουμένην, μίσει τοῦ γυναικείου γένους διὰ τὸν ὑπ' ἐκείνων θάνατον οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν ἐν γυναικὶ γεννηθεῖσαν 5 γενέσθαι· ἰδεῖν δὲ τὴν Θαμύρου ἀηδόνης ἐλομένην· ἰδεῖν δὲ καὶ κύκνον μεταβάλλοντα εἰς ἀνθρωπίνου βίου αἴρεσιν, καὶ ἄλλα ζῷα
B μουσικὰ ὥσαύτως. ¹ εἰκοστὴν δὲ λαχοῦσαν ψυχὴν ἐλέσθαι λέοντος

33. ταύτην—μλγνυσθαι (620 D) om. g. ὡσαύτως εἰκός. τὴν A: ὡσαύτως, ὡς τὸ εἰκὸς τὴν Ξ.

8. ὡσαύτως. εἰκοστὴν Vind. F:

27 καὶ διὰ—τύχην ‘as well as by the fortune of the lot’ is doubted by Herwerden, while Richards calls for καὶ <οὐ> διὰ, relying on 619 B καὶ τελευταίω—ἀθυμείτω and on ‘the drift of the whole passage.’ In point of fact, however, Plato nowhere denies that the fortune of the lot affects the issue. On the contrary, his whole theory supposes that it does, for those souls who choose late have fewer lives to choose from: see 617 E, 618 A, 620 C. ὁ τελευταῖων, it is true, need not despair (619 B), but none the less is the lot likely to produce μεταβολὴ τῶν κακῶν καὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν. Cf. Procl. l.c. 302. 15 ff. τούτοις χρεῖα δεῖν, ἐνὸς μὲν τῆς ὀρθῆς κρίσεως περὶ τὸ ἄμεινον καὶ χεῖρον τῶν προτεινομένων βίων, ἑτέρου δὲ τοῦ τὸν κλῆρον μὴ ἐν τοῖς ἐσχάτοις πίπτειν· τί γὰρ εἰ καὶ ὁ αἰρούμενος εἴη περὶ κρίσιν ἀσφαλὴς, ἀλλ’ οἱ προτεινόμενοι βίοι διὰ δὴ τινος αἰτίας οἱ τυχόντες εἶεν; See also on 618 A and following note.

28 ἐπεὶ κτλ. The connexion of ideas is: The fortune of the lot, and our individual choice, are the two influences that affect our destiny: for if our lot is reasonably early and we choose as befits philosophers, it will be well with us. ἐπεὶ “reddīt rationem ante dictorum” (Schneider). The sense is surely both plain and satisfactory, although Richards asserts that “ἐπεὶ has no meaning, unless there was an οὐ preceding.”

619 E 32 οὐκ ἂν χθονίαν—οὐρανίαν is explained by 614 B—D: see notes ad loc. In the Phaedrus those souls which choose the philosophic life three times successively are “excused from seven of the ten millennial probations through which the rest have to pass” (Thompson on 249 A).

33 γάρ is resumptive. For examples of this usage see Shilleto on Dem. F. L. 107.

620 A 2 κατὰ συνήθειαν κτλ. Cf. Phaed. 81 E ff. ἐνδούνται δέ, ὥσπερ εἰκός, εἰς τοιαῦτα ἦθλη, ὅποῖ’ αὐτ’ ἂν μεμελητηκῶσι τύχῳσιν ἐν τῷ βίῳ κτλ.

6 Θαμύρου. Thamyras and not Thamyas was the usual form of this name, but Plato prefers Θαμύρας: cf. Ion 533 C ἢ περὶ Θαμύρου ἢ περὶ Ὀρφέως, Laus 829 E τῶν Θαμύρου τε καὶ Ὀρφείων ὕμνων. The meaning of τὰ πολλὰ (‘for the most part’) will be seen from the case of Odysseus below (620 C f.).

620 B 8 ὡσαύτως. εἰκοστὴν κτλ. The reading εἰκοστὴν is confirmed by Plut. Conv. Disp. VIII 5. 739 E ff. (διὰ τί Πλάτων εἰκοστὴν ἔφη ψυχὴν τοῦ Αἰάντος ἐπὶ τὸν κλῆρον ἐλθεῖν;) as well as by Proclus l.c. 265. 20 and elsewhere. It appears βίον· εἶναι δὲ τὴν Αἴαντος τοῦ Τελαμωνίου, φεύγουσαν ἀνθρωπὼν 10 γενέσθαι, μεμνημένην τῆς τῶν ὅπλων κρίσεως. τὴν δ' ἐπὶ τούτῳ 'Αγαμέμνωνος· ἔχθρα δὲ καὶ ταύτην τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου γένους διὰ τὰ πάθη αἰετοῦ διαλλάξαι βίον. ἐν μέσοις δὲ λαχοῦσαν τὴν Ἀταλάντης ψυχὴν, κατιδοῦσαν μεγάλας τιμὰς ἀθλητοῦ ἀνδρός, οὐ δύνα-σθαι παρελθεῖν, ἀλλὰ λαβεῖν. μετὰ δὲ ἰ ταύτην ἰδεῖν τὴν Ἐπειοῦ C 15 τοῦ Πανοπέως εἰς τεχνικῆς γυναικὸς ἰοῦσαν φύσιν· πόρρω δ' ἐν ὑστάτοις ἰδεῖν τὴν τοῦ γελωτοποιοῦ Θερσίτου πίθηκον ἐνδυομένην.

 κατὰ τύχην δὲ τὴν Ὀδυσσέως, λαχοῦσαν πασῶν ὑστάτην, αἵρησο-μένην ἰέναι, μνήμη δὲ τῶν προτέρων πόνων φιλοτιμίας λελωφη-κυῖαν ζητεῖν περιουῶσαν χρόνον πολλὸν βίον ἀνδρὸς ἰδιώτου ἀπράγ-20 μονος καὶ μόγις εὑρεῖν κείμενόν που καὶ παρημελημένον ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων καὶ εἰπεῖν ἰδοῦσαν, ὅτι τὰ αὐτὰ ἂν ἔπραξεν καὶ πρώτη D λαχοῦσα, καὶ ἀσμένην ἐλέσθαι. καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἄλλων δὴ θηρίων from these passages that some of the ancients found a subtle significance in εἰκοστήν: but the particular number is probably only a circumstantial detail intended to add verisimilitude to the narrative. See also on 614 B. Herwerden conjectures ὡσαύτως, ὡς τὸ <εἰκός> . . . εἰκοστήν δὲ κτλ., and inserts between εἰκός and εἰκοστήν the words καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἄλλων—μῖγνυσθαι from 620 D. There is however nothing to indicate that the text has suffered dislocation: see on 620 D below.

Λέοντος βίον. Ettig (Acheruntica l.c. p. 310) explains the choice of Ajax by referring to Tim. 91 E τὸ δ' αὖ πεζὸν καὶ θηριῶδες γέγονεν ἐκ τῶν μηδὲν προσ-χρωμένων φιλοσοφία, but the conspicuous feature in Ajax was θυμός, and that is why he selects the life which typifies τὸ θυμοειδές: see IX 588 E. Cf. Proclus l.c. 316. 31 ff. ἡ μὲν Αἴαντος ψυχὴ πᾶσαν ὁλοὴ ζωὴν ἀνδρικὴν μὲν, πλεονάζουσιν δὲ κατὰ τὸν θυμὸν διὰ δὴ τινα φιλότιμον ψυχῆς ἔξιν, καὶ διὰ ταύτην ἐνδυομένην εἰς ἀνδρικὸν μὲν ζῶον, ἀλογον δέ. Empedocles, as we are told, held τὴν ἀρίστην εἶναι μετοίκησιν τὴν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, εἰ μὲν εἰς ζῶον ἢ λῆξις αὐτὸν μεταγάλοι, λέοντα γίγνεσθαι, εἰ δὲ εἰς φυτὸν, δάφνην (Ael. Hist. An. XII 7): see Karsten on vv. 382 ff. of the περὶ φύσεως.

620 C 16 Θερσίτου. Thersites is the type of the πονηρὸς ἰδιώτης in Gorg. 525 E. Here, as often in later Greek writers, he stands for the buffoon (παγ-γέλοιος ἀνθρώπος διάστροφος τὸ σῶμα καὶ λελωβημένος Lucian adv. ind. 7). Cf. also Soph. Phil. 442 ff., Theopomp. Fr. 262 in Müller Fr. Hist. Gr. I p. 323 and Pythag. Simil. 32 in Mullach Fr. Phil. Gr. I p. 489, in the last of which passages Thersites and Achilles stand for two opposite types. The different varieties of lives which are illustrated in this passage (μουσικός, πολεμικός, βασιλικός, γυμναστικός, τεχνικός, μιμητικός) appear also (as Proclus observes l.c. 319. 25 ff.) in Phaedr. 248 D, E. See also Empedocles vv. 384—386 and Karsten ad loc.

πίθηκον. Cf. IX 590 B.

19 ἀπράγμονος. Eusebius (Praep. Ev. XIII 16. 11) has καὶ ἀπράγμονος, which occurs also in one of the Vatican MSS. Cobet would alter ἀπράγμονος to ἀπράγμονα. The text is quite satisfactory: for ἀνδρὸς ἰδιώτου is virtually a single word: cf. ἀνδρὶ—σοφιστῇ Procl. 312 C, ὑπὲρ ἀνδρὸς θητὸς ἀνδρα πρεσβύτην πατέρα Euthyphr. 15 D, ἀνὴρ μάντις, ἀνὴρ νομεύς, ἀνδρες δικασταί and the like. “Sunt ἰδιῶται πολυπράγμονες: Ulyssis anima vitam ἀνδρὸς ἰδιώτου e numero τῶν ἀπραγμόνων quaerebat” (Schneider).

620 D 22 καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἄλλων—μῖγνυσθαι. See on 620 B. Herwerden's transposition is the less defensible because the words καὶ πάσας μῖξεις μῖγνυσθαι form an appropriate ending to this part of the picture.

ὥσαύτως εἰς ἀνθρώπους ἵεναι καὶ εἰς ἄλληλα, τὰ μὲν ἄδικα εἰς τὰ ἄγρια, τὰ δὲ δίκαια εἰς τὰ ἡμερα μεταβάλλοντα, καὶ πάσας μίξεις μίγνυσθαι. ἐπειδὴ δ' οὖν πάσας τὰς ψυχὰς τοὺς βίους ἡρῆσθαι, 25 ὥσπερ ἔλαχον, ἐν τάξει προσιέναι πρὸς τὴν Λάχεσιν· ἐκείνην δ' E ἐκάστῳ ὃν εἴλετο δαίμονα, τοῦτον φύλακα συμπέμπειν¹ τοῦ βίου καὶ ἀποπληρωτὴν τῶν αἰρεθέντων. ὃν πρῶτον μὲν ἄγειν αὐτὴν πρὸς τὴν Κλωθῶ, ὑπὸ τὴν ἐκείνης χεῖρά τε καὶ ἐπιστροφὴν τῆς τοῦ ἀτράκτου δίνης, κυροῦντα ἢν λαχὼν εἴλετο μοῖραν· ταύτης δ' 30 ἐφαψάμενον αὐθις ἐπὶ τὴν τῆς Ἀτρώπου ἄγειν νῆσιν, ἀμεταστροφα τὰ ἐπικλωσθέντα ποιοῦντα· ἐντεῦθεν δὲ δὴ ἀμεταστρεπτὶ ὑπὸ τὸν 21 τῆς | Ἀνάγκης ἵεναι θρόνον, καὶ δι' ἐκείνου διεξελθόντα, ἐπειδὴ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι διήλθον, πορεύεσθαι ἵπαντας εἰς τὸ τῆς Λήθης πεδίον διὰ καύματός τε καὶ πνίγους δεινοῦ· καὶ γὰρ εἶναι αὐτὸ κενὸν δέν-

23 τὰ μὲν ἄδικα κτλ. Cf. (with J. and C.) Phaed. 82 A τοὺς δὲ γε ἀδικίας τε καὶ τυραννίδας καὶ ἀρπαγὰς προτετιμηκότας εἰς τὰ τῶν λύκων τε καὶ ἱεράκων καὶ ἰκτίνων γένη κτλ.

620 D—621 D After all the souls had chosen, Lachesis bestowed on each its daemon or genius. Thereafter the choice was ratified by the remaining Fates, and finally by Necessity. In the evening the souls encamped by the river of Unmindfulness in the plain of Lethe, and all, save Er, drank its waters. At midnight, with thunder and earthquake, they were carried upwards to be born; and in the morning Er revived, and found himself upon the pyre.

The vision of Er is no mere idle tale, that perishes when it is told. If we give ear to its teaching, it will save our souls alive, and both here and hereafter, we shall fare well.

620 E 26 πρὸς τὴν Λάχεσιν κτλ. For Lachesis see on 617 C, D, and for δαίμονα 617 D, E nn.

30 ἢν—μοῖραν. In λαχὼν, ἐφαψάμενον καὶ διεξελθόντα the individual himself is substituted for the soul: cf. IX 573 B. Proclus (l.c. 346. 9 ff.) interprets διεξελθόντα of Er, but this cannot be right. λαχὼν is said with allusion to Λάχεσις, from whose knees the lots were taken (617 D). It is appropriate that Lachesis should be the only Fate involved in the act of choice; for the Future is the child of the Past (cf. 617 C, D n.). The selection is then ratified successively by the Fate of the Present, and the Fate of the Future, and finally, by Necessity herself, the mother of all three.

31 ἀμεταστροφα κτλ. ἀμεταστροφα is said, of course, with reference to the etymological meaning of Ἀτρώπος, and ἐπικλωσθέντα in turn alludes to Κλωθῶ. In the succeeding clause ἀμεταστρεπτὶ takes up ἀμεταστροφα again.

621 A 2 Λήθης πεδίον. The first mention in Greek literature of the plain of Lethe occurs in Ar. Frogs 186 τίς ἐς τὸ Λήθης πεδίον κτλ., but Aristophanes clearly presumes that his audience is already familiar with the idea, and Plato may well have borrowed it from Orphic and Pythagorean eschatologies. Cf. Ettig Acherunt. l.c. p. 310 n. 6. The πεδίον Λήθης was probably a counter-picture to the πεδίον Ἀληθείας, of which we hear in Phaedr. 248 B: cf. also [Axiouch.] 371 B. So also Proclus l.c. 346. 19 ff. ὅτι μὲν οὖν ἀντίθετόν ἐστι πρὸς τὸ τῆς Ἀληθείας πεδίον τὸ τῆς Λήθης πεδίον, ὅλλον· εἴπερ τοῦτο μὲν ἄκαρπον καὶ ἀγονον καὶ αὐχμηρόν, ἐκεῖνο δὲ ζωῆς πλήρες, τροφὸν τῶν ψυχῶν—ὥς ἐν Φαίδρῳ (248 B) μεμαθήκαμεν. For the later history of this conception see Rohde *Psyche*² I p. 316 n. 2, II p. 390 n. 1 and Dieterich Nek. pp. 90 ff.

3 διὰ καύματός τε κτλ. J. and C. explain this by saying that “they are passing through the pillar of light.” I do not think that this idea was present to the mind of Plato, though the souls are no doubt somewhere in this region. The καῦμα καὶ πνίγος δεινόν are sufficiently appropriate touches without having recourse to so realistic an explanation.

δρων τε καὶ ὅσα γῇ φύει. σκηνᾶσθαι οὖν σφᾶς ἤδη ἐσπέρας 5 γιγνομένης παρὰ τὸν Ἀμέλητα ποταμόν, οὗ τὸ ὕδωρ ἀγγεῖον οὐδὲν στέγειν. μέτρον μὲν οὖν τι τοῦ ὕδατος πᾶσιν ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι πιεῖν· τοὺς δὲ φρονήσει μὴ σφῶζομένους πλέον πίνειν τοῦ μέτρου· τὸν δὲ αἰεὶ πίνοντα ἵ πάντων ἐπιλανθάνεσθαι. ἐπειδὴ δὲ κοιμηθῆναι B καὶ μέσας νύκτας γενέσθαι, βροντὴν τε καὶ σεισμόν γενέσθαι, καὶ 10 ἐντεῦθεν ἐξαπίνης ἄλλον ἄλλῃ φέρεσθαι ἄνω εἰς τὴν γένεσιν, ἄττοντας ὥσπερ ἀστέρας. αὐτὸς δὲ τοῦ μὲν ὕδατος κωλυθῆναι

5 Ἀμέλητα ποταμόν. Cf. Virg. Aen. vi 714 f. Lethaei ad fluminis undam Securos latices, et longa oblivia potant. Many other parallels are quoted by Dieterich Nek. pp. 90—94. As the πεδῖον Ἀθήνης has its counterpart in the πεδῖον Ἀληθείας, so also we find traces in Greek legend of a ὕδωρ Μνημοσύνης as well as the ὕδωρ Λήθης (Paus. ix 39. 8).

7 τοὺς δὲ—μέτρου is missing in q and several other mss. "Fortasse supervacanea adeoque inepta haec videbantur alicui, qui statim quemlibet postquam bibisset omnia obliviscentem videret. Sed oblivionis vis et pertinacia varia est. Qui nimium bibit, in perpetuum obliviscitur, qui moderate, discere aliquando seu recordando scientiam repetere potest" (Schneider). μάθησις, we remember, is ἀνάμνησις (Phaed. 76 A: cf. also 75 D and 76 D). It is likely enough that the Platonic doctrine of ἀνάμνησις was suggested by earlier Pythagorean beliefs of the same kind (Dieterich l.c. p. 122: cf. also Rohde l.c. p. 186 n.).

621 B 8 ἐπιλανθάνεσθαι. There is no good reason for transferring to this place the clause αὐτὸς—πιεῖν as Herwerden wishes to do. In treating of this passage, Proclus quotes an interesting fragment of Aristotle's dialogue 'On the Soul' (l.c. 349. 17 ff.=Rose 1480^b 5 ff.): φησὶ γὰρ οὖν (sc. ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης) καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκ μὲν ὑγείας εἰς νόσον ὁδεύοντας λήθην ἴσχειν τινὰς καὶ αὐτῶν τῶν γραμμάτων ὧν ἐμαθήθεσαν, ἐκ νόσου δὲ εἰς ὑγίαν ἰόντα μηδένα πώποτε τοῦτο πάσχειν. εὐκέναι δὲ τὴν μὲν ἀνευ σώματος ζῶσιν ταῖς ψυχαῖς κατὰ φύσιν οὖσαν ὑγίαν, τὴν δὲ ἐν σώμασιν, ὡς παρὰ φύσιν, νόσῳ. ζῆν γὰρ ἐκεῖ μὲν κατὰ φύσιν αὐτάς, ἐνταῦθα δὲ παρὰ φύσιν· ὥστ' ἐικότως συμβαίνειν τὰς μὲν ἐκεῖθεν ἰούσας ἐπιλανθάνεσθαι τῶν ἐκεῖ, τὰς δὲ ἐντεῦθεν ἐκείσε τῶν ἐνταῦθα διαμνημονεύειν. Cf. Timon of Athens v 1 "my long sickness Of health and living now begins to mend, And nothing brings me all things."

9 μέσας νύκτας. The plural, in which νύκτες according to Heindorf on Prot. 310 D signifies horae nocturnae, is regular in this and similar expressions, e.g. πόρρω τῶν νυκτῶν (Symp. 217 D) etc.

γενέσθαι—γενέσθαι. "Is Plato really responsible for the clumsy and ill-sounding repetition of γενέσθαι?" Richards, who would omit the first γενέσθαι and write κατὰ μέσας for καὶ μέσας. A similar correction had already been suggested by Herwerden. Plato himself is not in the least averse to echoes of this kind: see on vi 511 E.

10 ἄνω. It follows that the souls just before their reincarnation are underground: see on Ἀνάγκης γόνασιν 617 B and διὰ καύματος κτλ. 621 A and Virg. Aen. vi 748 ff. Has omnis—Lethaeum ad fluvium deus evocat agmine magno: Scilicet immemores supera ut convexa revisant, Kursus et incipiant in corpora velle reverti.

εἰς—ἀστέρας is an instance—rare in Plato—of an apparently accidental iambic. See Arist. Rhet. iii 8. 1408^b 33 ff. ὁ δ' ἱαμβος αὐτῇ ἐστὶν ἡ λέξις ἡ τῶν πολλῶν διὸ μάλιστα πάντων τῶν μέτρων ἱαμβεῖα φθέγγονται λέγοντες and Cope ad loc. For souls conceived as stars cf. Ar. Peace 833 f. οὐκ ἦν ἄρ' οὐδ' ὁ λέγουσι κατὰ τὸν αἶρα | ὥς ἀστέρες γυγνόμεθ', ὅταν τις ἀποθάνῃ; and Plut. de gen. Socr. 591 D πολλοὺς ἀστέρας περὶ τὸ χάσμα παλλομένους (said of disembodied souls) and 591 f. Similarly the Milky Way which, in the words of Milton, is 'powdered with stars' (Par. Lost vii 581: cf. Arist. Meteor. i 8), is the abode of certain souls, according to a tolerably widespread tradition, which meets us also in antiquity: see for example Cic. de repub. vi 15, 16 and Manil. i 753—804. Cf. also Ettig Acherunt. l.c. p. 348 n. 2 and Rohde *Psyche*² ii pp. 95, 213 nn.

πεινῶν· ὅπῃ μέντοι καὶ ὅπως εἰς τὸ σῶμα ἀφίκοιτο, οὐκ εἶδέναι, ἀλλ' ἐξαίφνης ἀναβλέψας ἰδεῖν ἔωθεν αὐτὸν κείμενον ἐπὶ τῇ πυρᾷ.

καὶ οὕτως, ὦ Γλαῦκων, μῦθος ἐσώθη καὶ οὐκ ἀπώλετο, καὶ
C ἡμᾶς ἂν σώσειεν, ἂν πειθώμεθα αὐτῷ, καὶ τὸν τῆς Λήθης ποταμὸν 15 εὖ διαβησόμεθα καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν οὐ μianthσόμεθα. ἀλλ' ἂν ἐμοὶ πειθώμεθα, νομίζοντες ἀθάνατον ψυχὴν καὶ δυνατὴν πάντα μὲν κακὰ ἀνέχεσθαι, πάντα δὲ ἀγαθὰ, τῆς ἄνω ὁδοῦ ἀεὶ ἐξόμεθα καὶ δικαιοσύνην μετὰ φρονήσεως παντὶ τρόπῳ ἐπιτηδεύσομεν, ἵνα καὶ D καὶ ἐπειδὰν τὰ ἀθλα ἂν αὐτῆς κομιζώμεθα, ὥσπερ οἱ νικηφόροι περιαγειρόμενοι, καὶ ἐνθάδε καὶ ἐν τῇ χιλιέτει πορεῖα, ἣν διεληλύθαμεν,
εὖ πράττωμεν.

τέλος πολιτείας ἰ.

13. ἔωθεν AΞ q: γρ ἄνωθεν in marg. A². κείμενον A¹Ξ q: ἤδη κείμενον A².
22. χιλιέτει A¹Ξ q: χιλιέτι A². Cf. 615 A.

13 ἔωθεν. ἄνωθεν (see cr. n.), which appears also in v, is approved by Richards, but adds nothing to the meaning. ἔωθεν is of course the morning of the twelfth day as μέσας νύκτας above was the mid-night of the eleventh: cf. δωδεκαταῖος—ἀνεβίω 614 B and 616 B n.

κείμενον. See cr. n. ἤδη is inappropriate in itself, and has little authority besides A².

14 μῦθος—οὐκ ἀπώλετο. A Scholiast remarks: τοῖς μὲν οὖν πολλοῖς προστιθέναι τοῖς μύθοις ἔθος ἦν, ὅτι μῦθος ἀπώλετο, δεικνύναι βουλομένοις ὡς ἄρα οἱ μῦθοι λέγουσι μὴ ὄντα, καὶ ἅμα ἐρρήθησαν καὶ οὐκ εἰσιν. (Cf. Theaet. 164 D and Phil. 14 A.) Πλάτων δὲ τοῦναντίον πανταχοῦ σώζεσθαι τε καὶ σώζειν φησὶ τοὺς μύθους τοὺς παρ' αὐτῷ, μάλα γε εἰκότως· τῶν γὰρ ὄντων εἰσὶν ἐξηγηταί, καὶ ὠφέλιμοι διὰ τοῦτο. (The Scholium is from Proclus l.c. 354. 24 ff.). Plato means that the story of Er is οὐκ ὄντα, ἀλλ' ὕπαρ ἐσθλόν. A similar play on the proverb occurs also in Laus 645 B.

621 C 15 ἂν σώσειεν. Cf. III 417 A n. The suggestion δὴ σώσει (Richards) is unnecessary: see Kühner Gr. Gr. II p. 977 b.

621 C, D 20 αὐτοῦ τε—εὖ πράττωμεν. I agree with Richards in taking τε as 'both,' not 'and,' and the καὶ before ἐνθάδε as 'and,' not 'both.' Schneider holds the opposite view, urging that "qui praemia virtutis reportat, eum inter reportandum et sibi et diis amicū esse oportet. Eo igitur tempore sibi diisque amicus ut sit, contendere non magis potest, 'quam ut vincat, quum palmam fert victoriae.'" This is true enough, but a similar objection may be made against Schneider's own solution, which makes Plato say ἵνα, ἐπειδὰν—κομιζώμεθα—εὖ πράττωμεν: and, with Schneider's construction, the repetition καὶ ἐνθάδε is also, as Richards says, 'very weak.' Beginning as if he would say 'both here and hereafter' Plato elaborates the 'hereafter' into ἐπειδὰν—κομιζώμεθα, not without some sacrifice of logical coherence.

22 περιαγειρόμενοι: i.e. περιόντες καὶ ἀγειρόμενοι. Cf. Tim. Lex. Plat. s.v. περιαγειρόμενοι νικηφόροι and Ruhnken's note. ἐπαγερός was the name for this kind of 'stipis collectio.' The poet Gray proposed περιαγόμενοι, but the text is sound. For the imagery from the games see on v 465 D n.

23 διεληλύθαμεν. J. and C. think there is "a playful suggestion of our having made the pilgrimage ourselves." I do not believe Plato means more than merely 'we have described.'

24 εὖ πράττωμεν. On εὖ πράττωμεν see the third Platonic epistle ad init. and Bernays Lucian u. die Kyniker pp. 3, 88. The Republic fitly ends with an adaptation of Plato's favourite phrase of salutation and farewell.

APPENDICES TO BOOK X.

I.

X 597 E. τοῦτ' ἄρα ἔσται καὶ ὁ τραγωδοποιός, εἴπερ μιμητής ἐστι, τρίτος τις ἀπὸ βασιλέως καὶ τῆς ἀληθείας πεφυκός, καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄλλοι μιμηταί.

Schleiermacher and Stallbaum offer no explanation of the difficult phrase τρίτος ἀπὸ βασιλέως. The words are translated by Prantl "in dritter Linie vom Königlichen," and explained by Müller as third, counting from the man "der nach seiner Befähigung, seiner Vorbildung und seinem Berufe vor Allen im Besitze der Ideen ist." According to Schneider the King is "der im neunten Buche als Besitzer der wahren Lust dargestellte Gerechte, der hier als wahrhaft seiender der Wahrheit selbst gleich gesetzt wird" (Translation p. 314). Jowett and Campbell remark "God is here represented as a King. The word is borrowed from the language of the ninth book in which the imperfect shadow of the king is δημοκρατικός, ὀλιγαρχικός, as here of God the shadows are ζωγράφος, κλινοποιός etc." Other suggestions are that the phrase means "third in descent from the sovereign" (D. and V.), that the τρίτος τις ἀπὸ βασιλέως is a sort of stage king ("tragic mimicry, as exhibited in the stage king, is at a third remove from the king and the truth, i.e. from the ideal king" J. B. Mayor in Cl. Rev. x pp. 112, 245), and finally, that there is a reference to "the Oriental degrees of rank. The painter is not even like the vizier, or the immediate heir to the throne, δεύτερος ἀπὸ βασιλέως" (Campbell in Cl. Rev. x p. 246). It will be seen that there is little agreement of opinion as to the precise significance of this remarkable expression.

As regards the application of the phrase, it is quite clear, in the first place, that βασιλέως is intended to correspond to God. In the descending scale of 'makers' we have (1) the φυτουργός, who is God, (2) the δημιουργός, and (3) the μιμητής: so that the μιμητής is τρίτος ἀπὸ φυτουργοῦ. Since Plato calls him τρίτος ἀπὸ βασιλέως, we are bound to identify the βασιλεύς with the φυτουργός, unless we suppose that the expression is lacking both in propriety and point. There are also other passages in Plato where God is spoken of as a King, e.g. Crat. 396 A, Laws 904 A. In the second place, it is equally clear that τρίτος ἀπὸ implies that the imitator is removed by two degrees from 'the King.' Compare Stobaeus Ecllog. i 178 p. 78 Wachsmuth Ποσειδώνιος τρίτην ἀπὸ Διὸς (sc. τὴν εἰμαρμένην)· πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ εἶναι τὸν Δία, δεύτερον δὲ τὴν φύσιν, τρίτην δὲ τὴν εἰμαρμένην. A careful study of the words employed by Plato will moreover lead us to suppose that the figure is that of a genealogical tree. Thus we have

(1) God	} correlating with	{ (1) The Idea of Bed,
(2) Carpenter		{ (2) A material bed,
(3) Painter		{ (3) A picture of a bed;

and just as the picture of a bed is a τρίτον γέννημα ἀπὸ τῆς φύσεως, so the Painter is τρίτος ἀπὸ βασιλέως πεφυκώς, that is, 'third in descent from the King.' For these reasons the supposed allusion to the βασιλεύς of IX 587 B ff. cannot, in my opinion, be admitted: nor indeed would such an allusion be appropriate on other grounds, for there is no kind of analogy between the μιμητής and the δολιχαρχικός, who in 587 C is said to be τρίτος ἀπὸ τοῦ βασιλικοῦ. The translation of Davies and Vaughan 'third in descent from the King' is correct, and the meaning of the phrase is exactly reproduced in the passage cited from Dante in the notes. In illustration of the word βασιλεύς we should quote, not IX 587 B, but VI 509 D, where the Idea of Good, or God (VI 505 A u.), is said to be the king of the intelligible sphere. We have already seen that the Idea of Good is the maker of all the other Ideas, and among them of the αὐτὸ δ' ἔστι κλίη (VI 509 B u., X 597 B u.), which according to the present passage is constructed by God. Compare Philo de mundi orif. § 23 πρὸς τὴν ἄκραν ἀψίδα παραπεμφθεὶς τῶν νοητῶν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἰέναι δοκεῖ τὸν μέγαν βασιλέα and ib. § 50.

So much for the application of the phrase and its propriety as used by Plato here. As regards its origin, Campbell's suggestion is in my opinion not improbable, provided we suppose that the allusion is to the third in descent from the king. Although the expression does not appear to be found elsewhere in Greek literature, except with more or less explicit reference to this passage of the Republic, the words sound half-proverbial, and the omission of the article with βασιλέως suggests, though it does not necessitate, a reference to the Persian monarchy. Cf. Menex. 241 D, 244 D, 245 B, 246 A and Alc. I 123 B, C, E al. The conjecture of Campbell derives some additional probability from the favourite Stoic comparison between προηγμένα and those who stand next to the King in honour and esteem, although the Stoic comparison does not involve the idea of any genealogical connexion: see Cic. de finibus III 52 ut enim, inquit (Zeno), nemo dicit in regia regem ipsum quasi productum esse ad dignitatem—id est enim προηγμένον—sed eos qui in aliquo honore sunt, quorum ordo proxime accedit, ut secundus sit, ad regium principatum, sic in vita non ea, quae primario loco sunt, sed ea quae secundum locum obtinent, προηγμένα, id est producta, nominantur, with other passages quoted by Pearson Fragments of Zeno and Cleanthes p. 171. Cf. also Philo VI p. 190 (Lipsiae 1828) ἐνὶ δὲ ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν ἕξω περιανγασθέντες λαμπρότητος, αἵτε νοητὸν φῶς ἰδεῖν ἀδυνατοῦντες, πλαζόμενοι διετέλεσαν τὸν αἰῶνα· πρὸς μὲν τὸν βασιλέα λογισμὸν φθῆσαι μὴ δυνήθεις, ἄχρι δὲ τῶν προσηλαίων μόλις ἀφικνούμενοι καὶ τοὺς ἐπὶ θύραις ἀρετῆς, πλοῦτόν τε καὶ δόξαν καὶ ὑγίειαν καὶ τὰ συγγενῇ τελευμακότες προσεκίνουν (? προσεκύνουν).

II.

X 602 E. Τούτῳ δὲ πολλάκις μετρήσαντι καὶ σημαίνοντι μείζω ἅττα εἶναι ἢ ἐλάττω ἕτερα ἐτέρων ἢ ἴσα τὰναντία φαίνεται ἅμα περὶ ταῦτα.

This is the text of A, to which Schneider and all succeeding editors adhere. The variants τοῦτο for τούτῳ, δὴ for δέ have little authority, and give us no assistance. The view which I have given in the notes assumes that τὰναντία means the opposite of τὸ φαινόμενον μείζον ἢ ἐλάττων κτλ. in D above. The article is significant; otherwise Plato would hardly, I think, have added it here and omitted it immediately afterwards in ἐναντία. I formerly thought it necessary either to excise the first ἅμα περὶ ταῦτα, or else to add after φαίνεται the words <ὥστε ἐναντία φαίνεται>, in order to make the reference in τὰναντία still more clear; but if ταῦτά is understood as the same objects about which we already have the false impression, the difficulty disappears.

It may be urged that σημαίνοντι represents the λογιστικόν as the vehicle of a communication to the soul, and not as itself forming a judgment. Plato himself, however, appears to fluctuate between the two points of view; and the reason is that according to his own psychological theory τὸ λογιστικόν is not merely τὸ μετροῦν, but the part of soul which κατὰ τὰ μέτρα δοξάζει,—μέτρῳ τε καὶ λογισμῷ πιστεύει (603 A. See also 605 B, C).

Schneider translates as follows: "huius autem partis ope saepe-numero menso alicui, quum illa (pars) maiora quaedam vel minora vel paria esse significat, contraria simul de iisdem videntur." The sense is satisfactory, except that we should have expected Plato to attribute the measurement to the λογιστικόν itself (in harmony with τοῦτο—ἔργον), instead of to the individual making use of the λογιστικόν. But it is grammatically impossible to sever τούτῳ from μετρήσαντι and connect it again with σημαίνοντι, while if (with Müller) we make σημαίνοντι also refer to the individual, we offend against the plain and obvious meaning of the word (cf. VII 524 A).

By Jowett and Campbell τούτῳ is rightly made to agree with the participles, but wrongly separated from φαίνεται. "The dative"—say they—"is in a loose construction with the whole sentence, like a genitive absolute, and is not to be taken with φαίνεται. It would not be in accordance with Plato's use of language, or with the context in what follows, to speak of the contradictions of sense as having anything to do with the rational element of the soul." True; but Plato does not so speak of them, if my view of τὰναντία is right. He merely says that the rational element takes the opposite view of an object from that which is at the same moment entertained by the irrational element. Nor can the dative be employed with the force of a genitive absolute, as is virtually the case according to Jowett and Campbell's explanation.

Two other interpretations have been proposed. According to Stallbaum, the λογιστικόν is divided into two parts, one of which τῷ λογισμῷ πιστεύει, while the other is led astray. Hence it is possible—he thinks—for Plato to speak of the λογιστικόν as having contrary impressions at one and the same time. But we cannot possibly identify τὸ παρὰ τὰ μέτρα δοξάζον τῆς ψυχῆς with part of the λογιστικόν: the main purpose of the argument, indeed, is to prove it totally distinct therefrom. Cf. Schultess Plat. Forsch. pp. 42—45. Davies and Vaughan translate "But when this element, after frequent measuring, informs us that one thing is greater or less than or equal to, another thing, it is contradicted at the same moment by the appearance which the same things present." This explanation, which appears to be unique, wrongly joins πολλαίκες with μετρήσαντι and is certainly fallacious in other respects also.

Schleiermacher suspected corruption, and read τῷ δέ for τοῖτω δέ, translating "Wenn einer aber auch noch so sehr gemessen hat, und nun bestimmt" etc., but σημαίνειν is not 'bestimmen.' The conjecture τούτου—μετρήσαντος—σημαίνοντος—due to Richards—removes all difficulty, on the assumption that τάναντία means—as it is capable of meaning—the same as ἐναντία i.e. 'opposites' and nothing more. I cannot, however, but think such a change far too drastic; and it is reasonable to suppose that the article in τάναντία means something. The text may of course be corrupt—I do not believe it is—, but, if so, it still awaits the healing hand.

III.

X 606 c. Ἄρ' οὐχ ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος καὶ περὶ τοῦ γελοίου, ὅτι, ἂν αὐτὸς αἰσχύνωιο γελωτοποιῶν, ἐν μιμήσει δὲ κωμωδικῇ ἢ καὶ ἰδίᾳ ἀκούων σφόδρα χαρῆς καὶ μὴ μισῆς ὡς πονηρά, ταῦτὸν ποιεῖς ὅπερ ἐν τοῖς ἐλέοις;

All the mss have ἂν in place of ἄν. There are several other variants in Π and the inferior mss, but all of them useless for purposes of interpretation or emendation.

That the text has suffered corruption is admitted by all editors, and nearly all critics. By writing ὁ τι ἄν, and transferring the mark of interrogation from ἐλέοις to γελοίου, it is possible to make sense of the passage, if we are willing to allow the common change from ὁ τι singular to πονηρά plural. Cf. Neukirch in Pl. Pol. quaest. phil. i p. 48. But the double use of ἄν remains; and ὅτι (not ὁ τι) is proved to be genuine by ὅτι τοιαῦτα—ἐργάζεται in D below: see note ad loc.

The following emendations, which are all of them later than Schneider, appear to me inadmissible on other grounds, and also because they involve the change of ὅτι. (1) ἄρ' οὐχ—γελοίου, ὁ τι ἄν—γελωτοποιῶν; ἐν μιμήσει δὲ—ἀκούων <ἄν> σφόδρα κτλ. (Stallbaum): (2) ἄρ' οὐχ—γελοίου; ὅταν, ἂν—γελωτοποιῶν ἐν μιμήσει δὴ κτλ. (Madvig, Baiter): (3) ἄρ' οὐχ—γελοίου; ὅταν τι ἂν αὐτὸς—γελωτοποιῶν, ἐν μιμήσει δὲ κτλ. (proposed by me in Cl. Rev. iv p. 357): (4) ἄρ' οὐχ—γελοίου; ὁ τι ἄν—αἰσχύνῃ κτλ. (D. and V. with Stephanus). Hermann conjectures (5) ἄρ' οὐχ—γελοίου, ὅτι, ἂν—γελωτοποιῶν ἐν μιμήσει δὴ—ἀκούων <ἐάν> σφόδρα κτλ., but this has little probability. Although they print the emendation of Schneider, the Oxford editors remark that the simplest change is to read (6) ἀρ' οὐχ—γελοίου, ὅτι ἂν <ᾶ> αὐτὸς αἰσχύνιο <ᾶν>, ἐν μιμήσει δὴ κτλ. The last suggestion is an ingenious one, and improves both sense and grammar; but the threefold error (omission of ᾶ and ᾶν and corruption of δὴ to δέ) is hardly probable, and the sentence becomes very cumbrous. It should be remarked that the absence of μὲν after αὐτός is no reason for suspecting δέ: see on I 340 D al. (7) Turner's conjecture ἀρ' οὐχ—γελοίου, ὅτι ἂν <ᾶ ᾶν> αὐτὸς—ἐν μιμήσει δὴ κτλ. is in principle the same as that of Jowett and Campbell. I have sometimes thought that ποιῇ should be substituted for ποιῆς ('that jests, which etc., have the same effect as' etc.), in view of ὅτι τοιαῦτα ἡμᾶς ἡ ποιητικὴ μίμησις ἐργάζεται in D. (It should be observed that Ξ and some other MSS read ποιῆν.) ποιῆς is however supported by ἐν τοῖς ἐλέοις as well as by the explanatory ὁ γὰρ—γενέσθαι. If the difficulty about ᾶν is held to be insurmountable, one might suggest ᾶν <ᾶν> αὐτὸς αἰσχύνιο κτλ., regarding ᾶν as virtually a single word; but to this and all the other corrections hitherto offered I still prefer Schneider's solution.

IV.

X 607 B. ὁ τῶν λῖαν σοφῶν ὄχλος κράτων.

The reading of the two best MSS (A and Π) is ὁ τῶν Δία (or rather δία) σοφῶν ὄχλος κρατῶν. Most of the inferior MSS read διὰ σοφῶν, but a few have διασοφῶν (sic).

Those who adhere to Paris A offer one of the two following interpretations: either (1) "der Gottweisen herrschendes Volk" (Schleiermacher, Stallbaum etc.), or else (2) "the crowd of philosophers overmastering Jove" (J. and C., with Schneider). To the first solution it may be objected that κρατῶν remains obscure, that Δία σοφῶν 'wise as to Zeus' is a difficult construction, and that the sentiment itself—unless we suppose it ironical—is rather a compliment to philosophy than otherwise.

Schneider construes κρατῶν with Δία, supposing that the object of the poet's invective is, as before, "sapientia Jovi adversaria et ἄθεος." The order of the words, he thinks may be excused, "in lyrico poeta, quum etiam Plato Leg. L. vii 824 A ἡ τῶν διαπαύματα πόων ἔχουσα dicere ausus sit." To me, as to many others, the harshness appears too great, even for poetry: it is certainly much greater than ἰδὼν τῇ προτεραίῃ τῶν τινα Ἀνδρῶν and the like in Herodotus (I 84 al.). The text of the passage in the Latus has been disputed. If it is sound, we ought perhaps to print a comma after τῶν, and take the article not with πόων, but with the following participle χειρουμένων.

There is, as usual, no lack of emendations. Sydenham (see Cl. Rev. II p. 229) altered ὁ τῶν to ὅτων, with what purpose it is difficult to see. The suggestion ὁ καὶ τὸν Δία σοφὸς ὄχλος κρατῶν (Bywater) keeps both Δία and κρατῶν. Others retain κρατῶν, but not Δία, proposing instead of Δία σοφῶν either διασόφων (C. Schmidt, Hermann etc.—but the word lacks authority), or ἀκροσόφων (a conjecture of Bergk's, afterwards apparently withdrawn: see his Poet. Lyr. Gr. III p. 731), or ἰδίᾳ σοφῶν (Hermann Gesch. u. Syst. p. 309 n. 305), or λίαν σοφῶν (Herwerden, Richards). If we read λίαν σοφῶν and leave κρατῶν alone, the participle is very obscure, and Richards hints at the possibility of κριτῶν. I have also thought of κράζων ('the croaking rabble of the otherwise').

The view which is taken in the notes has been objected to on the ground that "like caput, kāra and κεφαλή cannot be, or rather never are, in classical Greek, used for the seat of intelligence—for the 'head' of modern parlance—the reason being that popular opinion among the Greeks and Romans connected intelligence with the heart or midriff, not, as among us, with the head" (Hermath. xxiv 255). I think that I have answered this objection in my commentary, but, if any one thinks differently, I would recommend as a δειότερος πλοῦς that he should provisionally restore the ms reading and interpret it in Schneider's way.

V.

X 612 A. Οἰκοῦν, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, τὰ τε ἄλλα ἀπελυσάμεθα ἐν τῷ λόγῳ, καὶ οὐ τοὺς μισθοὺς οὐδὲ τὰς δόξας δικαιοσύνης ἐπηνέγκαμεν κτλ.

ἀπελυσάμεθα is the reading of Stobaeus (Flor. 9. 66) and all the mss except four, viz. ΞΦm and Cesenas M. These have ἀπεδυσάμεθα.

ἀπεδυσάμεθα can hardly be right. The form is rare in Attic, though tolerably common in later Greek: nor is it by any means obvious what ἀπεδυσάμεθα would signify in this connexion. The usual translation is 'we divested ourselves of' (as in τὴν γλώσsin ἀποδυσάμενος Clem. Alex. Str. v 8. 84 c Migne), and γυμνωτέος δὴ πάντων πλὴν δικαιοσύνης (ii 361 c) is quoted in its support. But (as Schneider points out) Socrates could hardly have identified himself with the just man in this way, and, even if he did, to what does τὰ ἄλλα refer? What are 'the other things' of which he divests himself in addition to μισθοὺς καὶ δόξας δικαιοσύνης? To this question no satisfactory answer appears to be possible: none, at least, has yet been given.

Schneider himself reads ἀπεδυσάμεθα, but gives a very different explanation, holding that τὰ ἄλλα means the description of τὰ ἐν τῷ ἀνθρωπίνῳ βίῳ πάθη τε καὶ εἶδη ψυχῆς in the preceding books, and apparently taking ἀπεδυσάμεθα as 'we have exposed to view.' For ἀπεδυσάμεθα in this sense we might compare ἀπεδύσαμεν in Charm. 154 E: but the middle remains a difficulty.

If ἀπελυσάμεθα on the other hand is sound, it must, I think, be explained as in the notes. The view of the Oxford editors is not very different. Ast's translation 'se liberare' 'defungi' can scarcely be justified on linguistic grounds, and "addito τὰ ἄλλα minus convenit" (Schneider), for it was no part of Socrates' obligation to dwell on the wages of virtue: quite the contrary, in fact. No one is likely to accept the extremely subtle and difficult explanation of Richter (Fleck. Jb. 1867 p. 149) "haben wir nicht das Übrige durch unsere Darstellung erlöst—nämlich von den Banden, welche die Materialisten der Tugend auferlegen—ohne Lösegeld hinzubringen?" The possibility of corruption must be allowed, but the conjecture ἀπεωσάμεθα (Richards, comparing II 366 A τὰ δ' ἐξ ἀδικίας κέρδη ἀπωσόμεθα) is otherwise unsatisfactory, and fails, like ἀπεδυσάμεθα, to explain τὰ ἄλλα. Some may think of ἀπελογισάμεθα. It is best, however, to follow the mss, in the absence of any convincing emendation.

VI.¹

X 616 B—617 B. Ἐπειδὴ δὲ τοῖς ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι down to ἐφάπτεσθαι.

With the exception of the 'older and earlier' reading described by Proclus (see pp. 475 ff. below), there is hardly a trace in this passage of any variant affecting the sense.

A few emendations have been proposed. Thus Schleiermacher conjectures τὰ ἄκρα αὐτοῦ ἐκ τῶν δεσμῶν, taking τὰ ἄκρα αὐτοῦ as 'the poles of heaven,' and the chains as the Milky Way (Translation p. 621), while Krohn suggests φῶς εὐρύ for φῶς εὐθύ, and the transposition of ὥσπερ κίονα to follow ἀτρακτον (Pl. St. p. 283). It is hardly necessary to say that alterations of this kind are in my judgment totally inadmissible: they only reveal the weakness of the interpretation which necessitates them.

The only safe principle of interpretation in this, as in other similar passages of Plato, is to adhere to the natural meaning of the Greek, and abstain from wresting or rewriting the language in support of any preconceived view about the consistency and coherence of the picture as a whole.

I now think it clear that Boeckh's interpretation is irreconcilable with the language employed by Plato. The article in which Boeckh developed his views most fully was originally published in reply to Grote's pamphlet entitled Plato's Doctrine respecting the Rotation of the Earth (1860), and is reprinted in his Kleine Schriften III pp. 294—320. The essential features of Boeckh's view, which Zeller⁵ I 434, 435 nn. in the main accepts, are as follows.

The Straight Light is the Milky Way, running round the outer surface of the Heavens, like the undergirders of a trireme. To the question, Why is the light said to be 'straight like a pillar,' when it is in reality circular?, Boeckh replies that it appears to be straight from the standpoint of the souls. Er and his companions are, according to Boeckh, outside the world, somewhere beyond the North Pole, and see only the nearer half-circle of the Milky Way: "ein Halbring erscheint aber in der Entfernung dem, welcher ihn von aussen in derselben Ebene stehend sieht, als eine gerade Säule" (l.c. p. 306). What is the meaning of διὰ παντὸς τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς τεταμένον? Boeckh's explanation is that the light "verbreite sich durch den ganzen Himmel und die Erde, d. h. über die Erde, wenn man will mit einem leichten Zeugma, durch welches διὰ auch den Genitiv γῆς regiert: wiewohl ein

¹ This Appendix is the result of prolonged discussions with Professor Cook

Wilson, and freely reproduces nearly all his most important arguments.

Zeugma anzunehmen nicht einmal nöthig ist, wenn man nur das διά auf Verbreitung, nicht auf Durchdringung bezieht" (ib. p. 305). The middle of the light is accordingly in Boeckh's opinion at the Pole, and it is from the Pole outwards that 'the extremities of heaven's chains'—αἰτῶν he refers to οὐρανοῦ—'are extended.' The 'chains of heaven' include not only the light itself, but also two other great circles, viz. the equinoctial and solstitial colures (ib. p. 307). To the ends of these chains is attached the spindle of Necessity, which extends downwards from the North Pole, its shaft representing the axis of the Universe. The meaning to be attached to the breadth of rim in the various whorls of Necessity's spindle is not discussed by Boeckh.

Such, in its main outline, is Boeckh's explanation. It will be observed that he endeavours to combine into a single harmonious whole the two figures employed by Plato—the sphere surrounded by a circle of light, and the spindle of Necessity. But he makes no attempt to shew how the outermost whorl, in which the fixed stars are placed, can coexist along with the revolving sphere (πάντων—τὴν περιφορὰν 616 c), so that the fundamental inconsistency of the two images still remains; and even if we should allow, which is far from being the case, that in other respects Boeckh provides us with a single coherent picture, he "does violence to the language" (as Cook Wilson remarks) "at nearly every step." The light, says Plato, is straight, like a pillar. According to Boeckh, it is not straight, but curved: only it appears straight if seen from a certain point of view. If this was Plato's meaning, why should he not have put it into words? No one will deny that the natural meaning of the words he does employ is that the light not merely appears, but is straight; and he could have had no object in thus leading us on a false scent. Nor is there any indication to make us suppose that the Souls are outside the World. On the contrary, it is tolerably clear that the Λεμών from which they start upon their four days' journey (616 b) is on the ideal surface of the Earth (614 c n.), and the natural inference is that they march along that surface until they come within view of the light (616 b n.). If they travelled upwards to the supraccelestial regions, they would have to pass through the very ring of light which Boeckh makes them see for the first time not from below, but from above. That the Souls are in the middle of the Earth, and therefore of the World, at the end of the fourth day after they have left the meadow, is clear from 617 d, 620 e, 621 a, b (φέρεισθαι ἄνω εἰς τὴν γένεσιν), and it is at the end of the fourth day that they reach the middle of the light (616 b). The conclusion is inevitable that the middle of the light is in the centre of the Universe, and nowhere else. Not less arbitrary and forced is the explanation which Boeckh gives of διὰ παντὸς τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς τεταμένον. The phrase τείνειν διὰ surely means to 'stretch through' and not to 'stretch over,' and the plain meaning of the Greek is confirmed by the close parallel in Tim. 40 b τὸν διὰ παντὸς πόλον τεταμένον. Other objections might be mentioned, but enough has been said to shew that Boeckh's explanation cannot be fairly evolved from the language of Plato, to which, indeed, it is sometimes in direct contradiction.

Of the other views, that of K. E. Ch. Schneider, the editor and translator of the Republic, has met with some acceptance, and appears to be favoured, in part, at least, by Jowett and Campbell. The straight light, in Schneider's opinion, stands for the axis of the World, or a cylinder enclosing it. From the comparison of the light to ὑποζώματα Schneider is inclined to infer that the ὑπόζωμα stretched from stem to stern inside the vessel; but the evidence would seem to be conclusive that the ὑποζώματα were applied outside. The chains of heaven he thus describes: "ad medium axem, h. e. ad centrum terrae idemque mundi (cf. ἀνω p. 621 B) pertinentia vincula—ab extremis sphaeris radiorum instar ad fustum Necessitatis circa centrum stantem porrecta et utrinque nexa, quorum vinculorum ope vertente fuso totus mundus cum omnibus sphaeris convertatur." Apparently he distinguishes between the light and the chains, although Plato clearly means them to be identical: κατὰ μέσον τὸ φῶς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τὰ ἄκρα αὐτοῦ τῶν δεσμῶν τεταμένα· εἶναι γὰρ τοῦτο τὸ φῶς ξύνδεσμον τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. On the subject of the breadth of rims Schneider has no view: "über die Breite fehlt noch der befriedigende Aufschluss, und es ist leichter zu sagen, was sie nicht bedeuten kann, als was sie bedeutet" (Translation p. 316).

In the notes, the breadth of rims has been taken to mean the distances between the planets. Against this interpretation it might be urged that a wholly different account of these distances is given in the Timaeus. In Tim. 36 D Plato writes: μίαν γὰρ αὐτὴν (i.e. τὴν ταῦτοῦ καὶ ὁμοίου περιφορὰν) ἄσχιτον εἶασε, τὴν δ' ἐντὸς σχίσας ἑξαχῇ ἐπὶ τὰ κύκλους ἀνίσους κατὰ τὴν τοῦ διπλασίου καὶ τριπλασίου διάστασιν ἐκάστην, οὓσων ἐκατέρων τριῶν κτλ. What he means (according to Zeller⁴ II p. 779 n.) is that if the distance of the Moon from the Earth is counted as 1, the distances of the other planets from the Earth will be:—Sun 2, Venus 3, Mercury 4, Mars 8, Jupiter 9, Saturn 27. (Cf. Macrobius in somn. Scip. II 3. 14, where it is said that the 'Platonici' used 'dupla et tripla intervalla' in such a way as to produce these distances: Moon 1, Sun 2, Venus $2 \times 3 = 6$, Mercury $6 \times 4 = 24$, Mars $24 \times 9 = 216$, Jupiter $216 \times 8 = 1728$, Saturn $1728 \times 27 = 46656$.) Thus according to the Timaeus the Moon, Sun, Venus and Mercury will be at the same distances from one another, Mercury will be as far from Mars as the Earth from Mercury, Mars and Jupiter will be as near together as the Sun and Moon, and the distance between Jupiter and Saturn will be enormously greater than that which divides any other pair of planets. Between this scale of distances and Plato's arrangement of the whorls according to the breadth of their 'lips' in the Republic, there is no kind of affinity: the rim of Saturn's whorl, for example, if it measures his distance from Jupiter, ought to be the broadest of all the rims, instead of being, as Plato here says it is, the narrowest.

In spite of the interval of time which may be supposed to separate the Timaeus from the Republic, this discrepancy might fairly cause a difficulty if it could be shewn that Plato's representation of the distances between the planets in these two dialogues was based upon empirical data or observation. But in point of fact, in both dialogues the principle of Plato's arrangement is a certain a priori numerical relation, which has nothing to do with facts or probabilities. In the Timæus Plato starts from the two Pythagorean τετρακτύες, viz. 1, 2, 4, 8 and 1, 3, 9, 27, and arbitrarily disposes the planets in accordance with these numbers. His method resembles that of the τῶ ὄντι ἀστρονομικός inasmuch as he 'dispenses with the starry heavens' (VII 530 B n.) and regulates the distances by certain 'mathematical numbers,' which he finds ready to his hand. (See App. II to Book VII, p. 166.) The method which he follows in this passage of the Republic is analogous, although the actual numbers are different. In a note contributed to Jowett and Campbell's commentary, Mr W. A. Craigie first drew attention to the fact that a numerical principle underlies Plato's order of arrangement of the planets in respect not only of their distances from one another, but also of their colours and velocities, and Professor Cook Wilson has corrected and explained Mr Craigie's law in Cl. Rev. XVI pp. 292 f. The law is that each of the three enumerations is "based on combinations which rest on the number 9" (Craigie l.c.).

Let us take first the 'breadth of the lips' of the whorls, i.e. (according to our theory) the distances of the several orbits from one another.

A. "If we write down" (I quote from Cook Wilson's article) "the numbers which express the order of the whorls, and, under each, set the number which its rim has in the order of breadth, and then join 'those σφόνδυλοι whose united numbers produce a sum of 9, we have a symmetrical figure with its centre between the 4th and 5th,' thus:—

No. of σφόνδυλος	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Order of width of rim	1	8	7	3	6	2	5	4."

B. Next, take the order of the colours.

"If we write down the numbers of the whorls in the order in which Plato mentions them when describing their colours we get:—

and there is here also a symmetry of arrangement with regard to the centre (and the centres of the two halves)."

C. Finally, let us consider the order of velocities.

The figure given by Cook Wilson is:—

$$\begin{array}{ccc}
 \begin{array}{c} 1 \quad 8 \\ \text{---} \end{array} & \begin{array}{c} (7 \\ 6 \\ 5) \end{array} & \begin{array}{c} 4 \quad 3 \quad 2 \\ \text{---} \end{array} \\
 = 9 & = 9 \times 2 & = 9.
 \end{array}$$

In this figure the order of velocities is observed; "the group 1 + 8 (= 9) is correlative to the group 4 + 3 + 2 (= 9)," and the number 9 occurs twice in the central group, the members of which, being equal in respect of velocity, "may be considered to have no order."

"If we ask what was the reason of this curious arrangement," continues Professor Cook Wilson, "a not improbable answer seems to be that it was to effect a kind of equable distribution of the magnitudes along the series of the whorls. Now if this were so it would be best not merely to arrange two correlative pairs, as 7 and 2, 8 and 1, symmetrically with regard to the centre, but to make the order in magnitude of the numbers of one pair the reverse of that of the other. Thus in the distribution is more equable than in for in the latter we have the two larger numbers on the same side of the centre. Similarly the arrangement is more equable than

and

than

A glance at diagrams A and B will shew that in respect of the breadths of the rims and their respective colours "this rule of equable distribution is exactly carried out, and the order in magnitude of the numbers in one pair is the reverse of the order in its correlative pair.... In the case of the colours there is an addition to the equableness of the distribution in so far as the sum of the numbers in the first half is equal to the sum of the numbers in the second half."

If this arrangement were found in only one of the three groups, we might reasonably judge it to be merely accidental; but the possibility of accident is almost excluded when we see that the rule is accurately observed in two cases out of the three, and also, with some unessential modifications, in the third. We must therefore suppose that Plato's representation of the planetary distances in the Republic deliberately follows an a priori principle of symmetry and number, selected chiefly in view of the particular image to which he here assimilates the celestial motions, and suggestive of the balance and equilibrium which ought to prevail in the celestial system. In the Timæus his procedure is essentially the same, but there he accommodates the actual distances to the numerical fancies of the Pythagoreans. The discrepancy between the two dialogues in this particular ceases to surprise us as soon as we realise the way in which Plato went to work (cf. Book VII App. II pp. 166 f.), and in criticising Plato's physical theories generally, we should above all things bear in mind the warning which he himself throws out in the Timaeus: ἐὰν οὖν πολλὰ πολλῶν εἰπόντων περὶ θεῶν καὶ τῆς τοῦ πατὸς γενέσεως, μὴ δυνατόι γινώμεθα πάντα πάντως αὐτοὺς ἑαυτοῖς ὁμολογονμένους λόγους καὶ ἀπηκριβωμένους ἀποδοῦναι, μὴ θανυμίσῃ τις· ἀλλ' ἐὰν ἄρα μηδεὶς ἦττον παρεχώμεθα εἰκότας, ἀγαπᾶν χρή, μεμνημένοι ὡς ὁ λέγων ἐγὼ ὑμεῖς τε οἱ κριταὶ φύσιν ἀνθρωπίνην ἔχομεν, ὥστε περὶ τούτων τὸν εἰκότα μῦθον ἀποδεχομένους πρέπει τούτου μηδὲν ἔτι πέρα ζητεῖν (29 C, D).

It remains to discuss the alternative reading of 616 E preserved for us by Proclus.

The parts of his commentary which chiefly concern us are as follows:

(1) διττὴ δ' ἐστὶν ἡ γραφὴ τῆς ταῦτα τὰ βάθη διοριζούσης λέξεως. καὶ ἡ μὲν προτέρα καὶ ἀρχαιοτέρα τοῖς μεγέθεσιν ἀκολουθεῖ τῶν καθ' ἑκάστην σφαῖραν ἀστέρων, τῆς μὲν μείζονα περιεχούσης μείζον τὸ βάθος λέγουσα, τῆς δὲ ἐλάσσονα ἔλασσον. οἷον μετὰ τὸν ἐξωτάτω σφόνδυλον, ὅς ἐστιν ὁ τῆς ἀπλανοῦς—μετὰ τοῦτον δ' οὖν τὸν ἀπλανῆ κύκλον πλατύτατον ὄντα—τὸν τοῦ ἡλιακοῦ σφονδύλου τῶν λοιπῶν ἑβδομον ὄντα τῷ πλάτει διαφέρει—ἔπειτα <τὸν> τοῦ σεληνιακοῦ—καὶ ἐπὶ τούτῳ τὸν τῆς Ἀφροδίτης—καὶ ἐπὶ τούτῳ τὸν τοῦ Ἀρεῖκοῦ—καὶ ἐπὶ τούτῳ τὸν τοῦ Διῶου σφονδύλου καὶ ἐξῆς τὸν τοῦ Κρονίου, καὶ τελευταῖον εἶναι τὸν τοῦ Ἑρμαιοῦ· καὶ ἀπλῶς κατὰ τὰ μεγέθη τῶν ἀστέρων καὶ τὸν σφόνδυλον ἔχειν τὸ πλάτος. ἡ δὲ δευτέρα καὶ νεωτέρα, κρατοῦσα δὲ ἐν τοῖς κεκωλισμένοις (κεκολασμένοις coniecit Pitra) ἀντιγράφοις μετὰ τὸν ἐξωτάτω σφόνδυλον κτλ. (Kroll II 218. I ff. The reading which Proclus proceeds to describe is that found in our mss.)

(2) καὶ ἴσως οἱ οὕτως λέγοντες (i.e. the adherents of the 'newer' text) ἔβλεψαν εἰς τὰ ἀπόγεια καὶ περίγεια κινήματα τῶν ἀστέρων, καὶ ἐφ' ὧν πλείονα τὴν διαφορὰν εἶρον, ἐπὶ τούτων τὸ βάθος ἔθεντο πλείον τῶν σφαιρῶν—εἴτε δὲ τὴν προτέραν εἴτε τὴν δευτέραν ἐγκρίνοι τις γραφὴν, οὐ πάνυ συνάδουσιν ταῖς τῶν μετὰ ταῦτα τηρήσεσιν· μᾶλλον δὲ ὅμως ἡ μὲν δευτέρα συμβαίνει πῃ τοῖς τὰς ἀνελιπτούσας εἰσαγαγοῦσιν, ἡ δὲ προτέρα τὸ αὐτοφύες ἔχει, τοῖς μεγέθεσιν ἀποδιδοῦσα τῶν ἐνδοδεμένων ἐν ταῖς σφαίραις ἀστέρων τὰς ἐν τοῖς βάθεσι διαφοράς, πλὴν ὅτι τῆς σεληνῆς ἡ Ἀφροδίτη μείζων, εἰ καὶ τὸ φαινόμενον ἀπ' ἐναντίας ἔχει· παντελῶς τῶν κατ' ἐκείνους τὸν χρόνον ἀστρονόμων τοῖς φαινομένοις ἀκολουθησάντων ὡς τὸ εἰκὸς καὶ ταύτη καὶ τὰ βάθη διαστησάντων ἀπ' ἀλλήλων (ib. 219. II ff.).

(3) τῶν μὲν προειρημένων γραφῶν ἡ προτέρα, καθάπερ εἵπομεν, εἰς τὰ μεγέθη τῶν περιεχομένων ἐν τοῖς πλάτεσιν ἀστέρων βλέπει καὶ οὐδὲ τὰ τούτων μεγέθη διώρισεν ὡς τοῖς ὕστερον ἔδοξεν· ἡ δὲ τῶν μετὰ ταῦτα τήρησις τοῖς ἀπογείοις αὐτῶν ἐχρήσατο καὶ περιγείοις εἰς δῆλωσιν τοῦ πλάτους τῶν σφονδύλων, οὐδὲ τοῖς ὕστερον τῆς τούτων καταλήψεως ἱκανῶς πιεσθείσης (ib. 221. 28 ff.).

From the first of these extracts we are enabled to reconstruct what Proclus calls the 'older reading.' The text of which he speaks must have run:

τὸν μὲν οὖν πρῶτόν τε καὶ ἐξωτάτω σφόνδυλον πλατύτατον τὸν τοῦ χείλους κύκλον ἔχειν, τὸν δὲ τοῦ ἑβδομοῦ δεύτερον, τρίτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ ὀγδόου, τέταρτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ ἑκτου, πέμπτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ τετάρτου, ἕκτον δὲ τὸν τοῦ τρίτου, ἑβδομον δὲ τὸν τοῦ δευτέρου, ὀγδοον δὲ τὸν τοῦ πέμπτον. (See my article in Cl. Rev. xv pp. 391 ff.) According to this reading the order of the whorls, in respect of breadth of rim, will be:—

The whorl of the Fixed Stars (no. 1)
”	”	”	Sun (no. 7)
”	”	”	Moon (no. 8)
”	”	”	Venus (no. 6)
”	”	”	Mars (no. 4)
”	”	”	Jupiter (no. 3)
”	”	”	Saturn (no. 2)
”	”	”	Mercury (no. 5).

It will be convenient to discuss, first the meaning, and afterwards the value, of this ‘older’ text.

What, then, is the interpretation?

We note, in the first place, that the order in which the planetary whorls are arranged according to breadth of rim (Sun, Moon, Venus, etc.) corresponds with tolerable exactness to the order of the planets in respect of apparent size, and that the lip of the outermost whorl may be the broadest because of the number as well as the magnitude of the stars which it contains (cf. Proclus l.c. 218. 6 ff. ὁ τῆς ἀπλανοῦς, περιέχων τοσοῦτον πλῆθος ἄστρον κατεσπαρμένον κατὰ πᾶν αὐτοῦ τὸ βάθος, ὥν ἕκαστον ἀποδείκνυσιν ὁ λόγος μείζονα τῆς γῆς). Secondly, it is clear from what Proclus himself says that the order of breadth of whorl-lips in this ‘older’ text was really supposed to depend upon the size of the ἐἰδεδεμένοι ἀστέρες (τοῖς μεγέθεσιν ἀκολουθεῖ τῶν καθ’ ἐκάστην σφαῖραν ἀστέρων 218. 2 et al.).

In these circumstances our first impulse is to suppose that the planetary lips are just broad enough to accommodate their planets and no broader, so that the breadth will be in each case exactly equal to the diameter of the planet. In this way I interpreted Proclus’ ‘older’ text in Cl. Rev. xv pp. 391 ff.

But there are strong reasons in favour of supposing (with Cook Wilson) that the advocates of this text in antiquity did not make the breadth of the whorl-surfaces equal, but only proportionate, to the sizes of the planets. Of the ‘earlier’ reading Proclus remarks (l.c. II 219. 23) ἡ δὲ προτέρα τὸ αὐτοφνὲς ἔχει. Now it was perfectly understood by Proclus that the surfaces of the whorls are contiguous (II 216. 8 ff.), and knowing this, he can hardly have failed to recognise that if the planets fill the entire rims, they will sometimes touch one another, and the Moon and the Earth will always be in contact. This arrangement is certainly not ‘natural,’ and we are led to suspect that Proclus had in mind another interpretation of the ‘older’ reading when he used this epithet, and one in which the orbital distances of the planets would be somehow represented. Now in discussing this subject, Proclus nowhere says that the rims are exactly equal in breadth to the sizes of the planets, and his language is always consistent with the theory that the relationship is one of proportion and nothing more (τοῖς μεγέθεσιν ἀκολουθεῖ II 218. 2, εἰς τὰ μεγέθη τῶν περιεχομένων ἐν τοῖς πλάτεσιν ἀστέρων βλέπει ib. 221. 29 et al.). Such a theory might well be described as 'natural,' for it provides for the orbital distances on a principle which is reasonable enough in such a priori physics. "The principle," writes Professor Cook Wilson, "would be a sort of equable distribution of planetary mass, allowing the greater body more space. It would come to allowing the same average of linear dimension of planetary mass to each unit of distance between orbits throughout the system."

Another argument in support of this interpretation of Proclus' 'older' text may be derived from the treatise of Theo. Theo has our text of Plato (see on this subject p. 479 below), and introduces his quotation of the passage in these words: δηλοῖ δὲ τὴν τάξιν τῶν σφαιρῶν διὰ τε τοῦ μεγέθους τῶν ἄστρον ἐκάστου καὶ διὰ τοῦ χρώματος ἐκάστου καὶ ἐπὶ διὰ τοῦ τάχους τῆς ἐπὶ τὰ ἐναντία τῷ παντὶ φορᾶς (143. 14 ff. Hiller). It is clear from this sentence that Theo inferred the size of the different bodies from the breadth of the lips, so that he must have made the breadths of the planetary whorl-lips either equal or proportional to the diameters of the planets. That he interpreted them as equal is very unlikely, for he had before his mind in this part of his work the conception of orbital distances (see e.g. 141. 6), and could hardly have failed to remark on so extraordinary a peculiarity as the absence of any provision for representing those distances, if he really supposed that Plato had not represented them. It is the more improbable that Theo should have passed over in silence so strange a feature because he wrote at a time when the prevailing doctrine was that of a system of spheres whose radii were orbital distances from the centre (i.e. the Earth), and shews himself acquainted with this doctrine in other portions of his commentary, e.g. on pp. 181 ff. The more natural supposition therefore is that Theo, like Proclus, regarded the relationship between the breadth of the lips and the size of the planets as one of proportion and not of equality.

Finally, this interpretation of the 'older' reading throws light on some passages of Proclus' commentary which are otherwise obscure. In 219. 27 ff. παντελῶς τῶν κατ' ἐκείνον τὸν χρόνον κτλ. (quoted above at the end of the second extract) Proclus implies that the astronomers of Plato's time made the depths of the planetary spheres dependent on the apparent sizes of the planets. Whether the implication itself is true or not, it is unlikely that Proclus would have imputed to any astronomers the complete neglect of orbital intervals, and the only interpretation of the 'older' reading which allows for these intervals is to make the breadth of the lips proportionate to the sizes of the planets. And in 219. 11 ff. (καὶ ἴσως οἱ οὕτως λέγοντες κτλ.) Proclus suggests that the 'older' reading was altered to our text in order to represent the differences between the planets in respect of apogee and perigee. The suggestion seems clearly to imply that he found the orbital distances of the planets represented in the 'older reading,' for "if the χεῖλη were only equal to the diameters of the planets, how could it be relevant to widen them to allow for apogee and perigee? Clearly it could only be relevant to the correction of a magnitude already representing differences of orbital distances" (Cook Wilson).

These considerations make it highly probable, if they do not absolutely prove, that Proclus' 'older reading' was understood to make the breadth of the different whorl-surfaces proportionate, and not equal, to the diameters of the planets.

We have now to consider the value and authority of this reading as compared with the text of our MSS.

The one reading is described by Proclus as προτέρα καὶ ἀρχαιοτέρα, the other—that which I have adopted—as δευτέρα καὶ νεωτέρα, κρατούσα δὲ ἐν τοῖς κεκωλισμένοις ἀντιγραφοῖς.

The word κεκωλισμένοις, which is a ᾅπαξ εἰρημένον, can refer only to the arrangement of the MS in κῶλα to facilitate study and reading aloud: see Dziatzko in Pauly-Wissowa III p. 960. 27 and Birt Ant. Buchwesen pp. 180 ff. But as there seems to be no other evidence of the division of Plato's dialogues into κῶλα (see Birt l.c.), Pitra's conjecture κεκολασμένοις 'castigatis' 'corrected' 'edited' may be right.

If Proclus wrote κεκολασμένοις, it would seem that a recension of Plato's text was made about his time, and the 'newer' reading deliberately adopted in place of that which had hitherto held the field. As this 'newer' reading is found in all our MSS, we might even suppose that this recension originated the Archetype, from which according to Schanz (Stud. zur Gesch. d. Plat. Textes pp. 23—45), our MSS are all descended, and which Schanz places not earlier than 400 A.D. But even if we should grant all these hypotheses, it by no means follows that the 'older' reading is that which Plato wrote. Against the possibility that the reading of our MSS was a deliberate emendation on the part of the editors has to be set the rival possibility that it rested upon the authority of MSS which were judged by them to be more trustworthy than the authorities for the vulgate text. We have no evidence as to the critical principles followed by the authors of the recension—if recension there was; and in the absence of such evidence, the question between the two readings must be determined by the internal probabilities.

The balance of probability is in favour of the reading of our MSS, as will appear from the following considerations.

In the first place, our text was felt to be the lectio difficilior. This appears from the fact that Proclus found it difficult to discern a principle in the 'newer' reading (καὶ ἴσως οἱ οὕτως λέγοντες κτλ.), whereas the 'older' seemed to him easy and natural (ἢ δὲ προτέρα τὸ αὐτοφύες ἔχει).

Secondly, it is clear that, whichever text was the original one, it must have been altered into the other by deliberate emendation in order to satisfy some astronomical preconception. And it is much easier to conjecture why the 'newer' reading should have been changed into the 'older' than conversely.

Suppose, on the one hand, that the 'older' reading represents the truth. Why was it emended into our text? The motive cannot have been in order to reconcile the account of the planetary distances in the Republic with that which we find in the Timaeus; for the 'newer' reading makes the discrepancy between the two dialogues as great as before. Or was it, as Proclus suggests, to make provision for the apogee and perigee of the planets? This is also improbable, because even a careless reader of the Republic (and, we may add, of the Timaeus) would hardly fail to see that Plato's general conception of the celestial motions leaves no room for apogee and perigee; and on this account so violent a dislocation, even if it were once made, would be very unlikely to establish itself.

If we suppose, on the other hand, that our text is that which Plato himself wrote, a plausible account can be given of the origin of the 'older' reading. The theory that the breadths of the rims should be proportioned to the size of the planets was considered to be natural (ἡ δὲ προτέρα τὸ αὐτοφύες ἔχει), whereas the existing text appeared difficult and perplexing; and hence the 'emendation.' Of this hypothesis we have strong prima facie confirmation in the treatise of Theo, who retains what (according to our supposition) was the original text, that of our mss, and nevertheless explains the breadths as depending on the size of the planets. Theo's evidence thus supplies the missing link. The next step would be to alter the text in conformity with the explanation given (though not necessarily originated) by Theo: for if Theo's explanation was once accepted, it would soon be felt that the order of magnitude of the heavenly bodies in the received text was absurd. The corruption may therefore be assigned with probability to the time between Theo and Proclus.

An advocate of Proclus' 'older' reading must on the other hand suppose that Theo's citation of Plato (p. 145 Hiller) has been tampered with. This is of course possible, but much less probable than the rival view.

Finally, the strongest argument in favour of our text is that it conforms to the numerical principle explained above (see pp. 473 f.).

It is highly probable that any alteration of the original text would violate this principle. and in Proclus' 'older' reading it is violated, for the order of breadth in the προτέρα γραφή is 1 7 8 6 4 3 2 5.

And it is in the last degree improbable that an emendation of the 'older reading' would obey the 'rule of nines' which holds good in the enumeration both of the colours and of the velocities of the heavenly bodies. As our text does obey this law, the probabilities are that it is no emendation, but proceeds from Plato himself.

INDEXES.

I. INDEX OF GREEK WORDS.

The text and commentary are referred to by the pages of Stephanus. The appendices are referred to by volume and page, and in clarendon type.

A

ἀβλαβεῖς ἦδοναι 357 B
 ἀγαθὰ ποιητικά and τελικά in Stoicism 357 B ἀγαθόν = ὠφέλιμον 379 B ἀγαθόν, the Idea of: see Index II Good, the Idea of ἀγαθόν πρὸς 522 A ἀγαθόν τι ὄραν 579 B
 ἀγάλματα 517 D
 ἀγαν δουλεία 564 A ἀγανακτητικόν 604 E ἀγαπᾶν 334 A, 359 A ἄγγελοι κολάζοντες 615 E ἄγειν without object expressed 547 B ἄγειν ἐντίμως 528 C
 ἄγειν καὶ ἔλκειν 439 C ἀγείρειν ὡς ἱέρειαν 381 D ἀγένητον and ἀφθαρτον 546 A ἀγεωμέτρητος μὴ εἰσίτω 526 C ἀγκιστρον 616 C
 ἀγνώμων 450 D. See also ἀμαθής ἀγορανόμος 425 D
 ἀγρίως τιμᾶν 548 A ἀγροικος 361 E, 410 E
 ἄγρυπνος 610 E
 ἀγύρται 364 B, 381 D
 ἀγχινοὶ καὶ ὀρέϊς II 79 ἀγωγή, musical sense of 400 C ἀγωγή, the Spartan 413 C ἀγῶνες περὶ ἀλλήλων 565 C ἀγωνιστικοί 454 A ἀδάμας 616 C
 ἄδειν = 'harp on' 364 C ἀδελφὸς ἀνδρὶ παρείη 362 D ἀδέσποτον 617 D, E Ἀδράστεια 451 A

ἀεὶ ὅμοιον and ἀεὶ ἀνόμοιον 585 C, II 382 f. ἀερωνυχής 529 C
 ἀθληταὶ τοῦ μεγίστου ἀγῶνος 403 E ἄθλοι 504 A
 ἄθροοι πολλοί 492 B
 αἰδία καὶ ἀκίνητα 527 B, II 159 f. See Index II Mathematical Studies Ἄιδος κυνὴ 612 B
 αἶθων 559 D
 αἰκία 425 D, 464 E
 αἰνιγμα, τὸ τῶν παίδων 479 B αἰνίττεσθαι 332 B, 378 D αἰολιστί 399 A
 αἰρεῖ λόγος or ὁ λόγος 440 B, 604 C, 607 B αἰρεῖσθαι used absolutely 618 D αἰρέσεις = 'selections' 468 C αἰσθησις, with ref. to a particular sensation 524 A. See also Index II Sense-perception, Senses αἰσθομαὶ unattic 608 A αἰσυνμητεία 544 D
 αἶτημα τὸ πολυθρύλητον 566 B αἰτία ἐλομένου· θεὸς ἀνάτιος 617 D, E αἰτία τῆς μίξεως II 161 αἰτίαν ἔχειν 435 E
 αἰτιᾶσθαι, construction of 435 E ἄκαιρος 569 C
 ἀκμή, the, of man and woman 460 E ἀκολουθεῖν τῷ θεῷ 612 D ἀκολουθητέον 400 D
 ἄκουε δὴ 338 C ἀκοῦσαι 614 A = 'to be called' 496 A ἀκράτεια, inordinate love of money a sign of 390 D ἄκρατος 564 A, 569 C ἀκριβέστατοι φύλακες 503 B ἀκριβής 342 B, 503 B, 504 C ἄκρος 366 B

- ἀκρότατος 459 E, 564 A ἀκρως 543 A
 ἀλαθε μύσται 560 D
 ἀλαζονεία χορδῶν II 188
 ἀλάζων 486 B
 ἀλγεῖν τὴν κεφαλὴν 437 B, cf. 462 C ἄλες 372 C
 ἀληθεῖς λόγοι 376 E, 392 A ἀληθεύειν 413 A ἀληθῶς ἔην, ἀλ. τρέφεσθαι 490 B ἀλίβαντες 387 C ἀλλασκομαι and αἰρεῖν contrasted 468 A Ἀλκίνου ἀπόλογος sive ἀπόλογοι 614 B ἄλλ' ἄρα 374 B
 ἀλλὰ γάρ and ἀλλὰ δὴ 365 C, 467 D, 530 C, 531 E, 599 E, cf. 435 D ἀλλὰ γε 331 B, 543 C
 ἀλλὰ τί μέλλει; 349 D
 ἀλλὰ τί μὴν; 348 C
 ἀλλὰ τί οἶε; 332 C
 ἀλλὰ τί τοῦτο; 472 B
 ἀλλοῖα δόξα II 78
 ἀλλοῖος πρὸς ἀρετὴν 492 E, II 77 ἀλλόκοτος 487 D
 ἄλλος = 'other than' something not yet named 434 A, 518 D: with the article, ὁ ἄλλος and οἱ ἄλλοι 357 C, 543 B: ἄλλος and ὁ ἄλλος 419 A ἄλλος = περὶ τὰ ἄλλα 554 A, C ἄλλο τι; = nonne? 522 E ἄλλοτριον ἀγαθόν 343 C, 392 B ἄλλότριος 556 D
 ἄλλως = 'merely' 499 C: followed by ἤ 366 E ἀλγιστον, τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς 602 C ἄλογοι sive ἄρρητοι γραμμαῖ 534 D, II 193 ἄλογον μέρος ψυχῆς 435 B ἄλουργός 429 D
 ἄλωπηξ 365 C
 ἀμαθής and words of kindred meaning (ἀγνώμων, ἀπαίδευτος etc.) 382 A ἀμετρία 486 D
 ἀμολγοί sive ἀμοργοί 343 A ἀμονσία 486 D ἀμφίεσσονται ἀρετὴν ἀντὶ ἱματίων 457 A ἀμφισβητεῖσθαι = 'to be in dispute' 581 E ἀμφοτέρα, adverbial use of 527 B ἀμφοτέρων μετέχειν 520 C ἄν: accidentally omitted in MSS 333 E, 428 D, 437 B, 457 D, 516 E, 558 D: wrongly inserted 468 A, 610 A: alleged confusion of, with δὴ 450 C, 468 A, 472 D, 492 C, 516 D, with οὖν 450 C: dispensed with in the second of two questions 352 E, 382 E: seems to do double duty 606 C, II 467 f.: with adj., and copula omitted 577 B: with fut.
 tense 492 C, 506 A, 615 D: with pres.
 ind. in some MSS 610 A: with perf. inf.
 516 D: with opt. after a rel. pron. 360 B.
 See also δοκεῖν
- ἀνάγειν and ἀνάγεσθαι 528 A ἀνάγειν εἰς τοῦπισω 528 A ἀνάγειν εἰς φιλοσοφίαν 529 A ἀναγκάζειν = ἀναγκάζειν τῷ λόγῳ 490 C ἀναγκάζεσθαι of the 'Drang nach Wahr-heit' 523 D
 ἀνάγκαιος 369 D, 493 C, 574 B, 581 E: the
 fem. of 554 A ἀναγκαίως 527 A
 ἀνάγκη. See Index II Necessity Ἀνάγκης γόνασιν, ἐν τοῖς τῆς 617 B ἀναιρεῖν τὰς ὑποθέσεις 533 C, II 176, 191 ἀναιρέσεις 469 E
 ἀνακύκλις II 295 f., 298 n. 4 ἀναλαμβάνειν in medical sense 467 B ἀνάλυσιν ἐξ ὑποθέσεως 533 C, II 174—179 ἀνάμνησις 518 C, 592 B, 598 A, 621 A ἀνανδρία 359 B, 366 D, 560 D ἀνάξιος 434 B, 491 A ἀνάπηρος 460 C
 ἀναπιμπλάναι and ἀνάπλεω 460 C, 516 E ἀναρμοστία 547 A. See also ἀνομοιότης ἀναφαίνεσθαι 334 A, 350 C, 487 B ἀνδραποδοστής 344 B
 ἀνδρείκελον 501 B, II 79 ἀνδρεῖον δῶμα 451 C ἀνδρεῖοι μίμοι 451 C ἀνδρείος: said of beasts 375 A (contrast 430 B), of an ἱατρός 459 C, of courage in war 386 A: relation of, to κόσμος and to νεανικός II 80: syn. for φιλότιμος 582 C. See also Index II Courage ἀνδρηλατεῖν 565 E
 ἀνδριαντοποιός 540 C
 ἀνδρότης 386 E
 ἀνδρουσθαί 498 B
 ἀνέγγυος 461 B
 ἀνείκία and ἀνικία II 270
 ἀνεμέναι ἁρμονίαι 398 E ἀνεμένη διαίτα, a boast of Athens 557 E ἀνελευθερία 486 A, 577 D ἀνελεῖν εἰς θεοῦς 521 C ἀνεσις 561 A
 ἀνὴρ: emphatic 359 B, 498 E, 501 B = 'husband' 395 D: poetic for ἄνθρωπος 565 E: said with scorn 457 B: combined with ἰδιώτης, ἄντης, σοφιστής etc. 620 C ἄνθεσι and ἤθεσι 557 C ἄνθος = 'colour' 429 D, 557 C ἄνθρωπος = 'human being' 522 E: used contemptuously 514 B ἄνθρωπος, ὁ ἐντός 589 A ἀνίειναι 442 A
 ἀνισα τμημάτα 509 D
 ἀνομοιότης, the fatal principle of 545 C, 546 C, 547 A, B, 557 A, 561 C, 577 E, II 296, 300 f.
 ἀντέχεσθαι where we should expect ἀνἔχειν 574 B ἀντικαθιστάειν 591 A ἀντικατελίνειν 348 A ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι 497 D, 505 A ἀντιλογική 454 A ἀντιλογικοί, the, in Plato's day 454 A ἀντίξον συμφέρον 462 B ἀντιπράττειν 440 B

 ἄντρον ὑπόστεγον 514 A ἀνυπόθετος ἀρχή 510 B ἄνω and κάτω, popular conception of 584 D: said with ref. to the stadium
 613 B ἄνω and similar words, figurative use of 514 A, 515 C, E, 528 E, 586 A, cf. 529 A ἄνω καὶ κάτω 508 D
 ἄνω κεκηνώς 529 B
 ἀνωμαλία 546 C, 547 A. See also ἀνο-μοιότης ἀξιοκοινωνήτος 371 E
 ἀξυμφώνος 402 D
 ἀπαιδευσία, the Cave an allegory of 514 A: a feature of oligarchy 552 E ἀπαλλάσσονται and ἀπηλλάσσονται 465 D ἀπαμβλύνεσθαι 442 D
 ἀπεικάζειν 511 A, II 84 f. ἀπερίδεσθαι 508 D
 ἀπλή διήγησις 392 D ff., 396 E ἄπληστος 578 A ἄπλους, meaning of, in Plato 351 A ἄπλους and ἀπλότης 370 B, 380 D, 400 E, 423 D, 434 C
 ἀπλούστεροι 547 E
 ἀπλως οὕτως and the like 331 C, 351 A, 377 B, 386 B
 ἀπό. See Index III Prepositions ἀπ' ὄνου πεσεῖν 509 D ἀποδέχεσθαι 367 D
 ἀποδημία 420 A, 579 B
 ἀποδίδοσθαι II 317
 ἀποδιδράσκοντες τὸν νόμον 548 B ἀποδύεσθαι 612 A, II 469 f. ἀπόθεσις 460 C
 Ἀποθέται, the, at Sparta 460 C ἀποκατάστασις 546 C ἀποκεκρίμενον = 'isolated,' 'local,' with νόσημα 407 C
 ἀποκνητέον and ἀποκμητέον 445 C ἀποκτείνω 488 C
 ἀπολαβύντες used absolutely 420 C ἀπολαυστικός βίος 539 A ἀπολέσθαι 568 D
 Ἀπόλλων as ἀρχηγέτης, οἰκιστής, πάτριος ἐξηγητής, πατρώος 427 B, C ἀπολογεῖσθαι 607 D
 ἀπολογεῖσθαι and ἀπολογίζεσθαι 490 A, 607 B
 ἀπολύεσθαι 612 A, II 469 f. ἀπομαντεύεσθαι 505 E ἀπόπτασθαι and ἀποπτέσθαι 469 D ἀπορεῖν 515 D, 524 A ἀπορος = 'difficult to procure' 378 A, 453 D ἀπόρητα = 'mysteries' 378 A ἀπόρητος in the phrase ἐν ἀπορήτῳ 460 C ἀποστάσεις 546 A, B, II 270—272, 275 n. ἀποστραφῆναι 405 C

 ἀποτεθρυνμένους 495 E ἀποτεθρυνόμενοι a vox nihili 495 E ἀποτίνοσιν = ἀποτίνεσθαι λέγουσιν 363 D ἀποφαίνεσθαι = 'to give the verdict' in musical competitions 580 A, B ἀποχρηαίνειν 586 B
 ἀπτισθαι 403 B
 ἀπωχετεννόμενος 485 D
 ἀρα = 'after all' 375 D: disclaims responsibility 358 C, 362 A, 364 B, 381 E, 426 C, 438 A (combined with γάρ) al.: expresses irony 455 E: = nimirum, in a fortiori arguments 374 B, 600 C ἀρα in apparently indirect questions 462 A ἄρδεν 550 B, 606 D
 ἀρεταὶ τέσσαρες in Pindar 427 E ἀρετή often = 'excellence' 353 E. See Index II Virtue
 ἀριθμεῖν, ἰσάνα, μετρεῖν 587 B, 602 D ἀριθμητική 524 C ff., 525 A: popular variety of II 159. See also Index II Number, the Theory or Science of ἀριθμός: definition of 525 A: = 'area' II 307 n. 3, 312: ἀριθμός ἀληθινός 529 C, D: ἀριθμός ἀπό = 'square of' 546 C, II
 285: ἀσσην and θῆλυς II 293: γαμικός 546 D, II 293: γεωμετρικός 546 C, II 305: γραμμικός (= ὁ τοῦ μήκους) 587 D, II 279:
 ἐπίπεδος 587 D: ἴσος ἰσάκις II 283: αἰσθητικοὶ or σωματικοὶ ἀριθμοὶ 525 D: ὅμοιοι and ἀνόμοιοι ἀριθμοὶ 546 B, II 274 f., 299: στερεοὶ ἀριθμοὶ II 272, 306 —312: τέλειος 546 A, B, II 289 f., 298: τετράγωνος, τρίγωνος 587 D: ὑπερτελεῖς and ἐλλιπεῖς ἀριθμοὶ II 275 n.
 Ἀρίστων with play on ἀριστος 368 A,
 580 B
 ἀρμονία and ἀρμονίαι 398 D—399 C, 397 B, 400 A, E, I 202—204: in the Geometrical Number, 546 B, C, II 294, 301 f. ἀρμονία, ἡ ἐν κόσμῳ. See Index II Spheres, Music of the ἀρνεσθαι 346 C
 ἄρρατος 535 B
 ἀρτιμελής 536 B
 ἄρχεν, τό, personified 521 B ἀρχή ἡμῶν παντός 377 A ἀρχοντες 412 B al. See Index II Rulers
 etc.
 ἀσάφεια 478 C, 509 D ἀστρονομία 528 E ff. See Index II Astronomy
 ἄστυ said of Athens 327 E ἀστυνόμοι 425 D
 ἀσχημονεῖν 517 D
 ἀσχημονόνη 486 D
 ἀτάλλων 331 A ἀτελής 457 B and I 357 (ἀτελή τοῦ γελοίου ὀρέπων καρπὸν), 495 C

ἀτεχνος τριβή 582 D
 ἀτεχνῶς 563 C
 ἀτοπον does double duty (first as masc., then as neut.) 530 B ἀτοπος and ἄτοπος 524 B αὐγὴ τῆς ψυχῆς 540 A αὐθις with ellipse of verb 510 B αὐλητρίδες 373 A
 αὐλὸν κρέκειν 399 D αὐξάνειν = 'multiply' II 268, 278 n. I αὐξάνεσθαι 424 A, 528 C αὐξεῖν intransitive 546 B αὐξὴ πρώτη, δεύτερα, τρίτη, 526 C, 528 B, E, II 165, 278—282, 587 D αὐξήσεις δυνάμεναι τε καὶ δυναστευόμεναι 546 A, B, II 268—270, 291 f. αὐξησεις κυβικαὶ 546 A, B, II 292 αὐξόντων τε καὶ φθινόντων II 300 f. αἶρα, a poetical use of 401 C αὐτάρκεια, the, of virtue 387 D αὐτόθεν 527 E, 567 E αὐτός: sometimes emphatic in oblique cases 370 E, 380 D, 388 D; = 'the master' 327 B; = 'of himself,' like Latin ultra 330 E, 347 B: points a contrast 370 E, 410 A, 468 A, 544 B, 609 E, 610 D, cf. 579 A: in neuter, sing. and pl., sometimes = 'the matter in hand,' 'the case before us,' without def. antecedent, e.g. (sing.) 339 E, 428 A, 524 E, (pl.) 518 B, cf. 391 D; = 'by itself,' 'merely,' sc. without qualification or the like 437 E, 438 E, C, E, 559 A, cf. also 477 B, 601 B; = 'by itself' sc. apart from e.g. consequences etc. 363 A, cf. 472 C; = 'by itself,' sc. not using εἰκβνεις, of the dialectical method 510 B, 511 B, cf. 525 C; = 'by itself,' said of the Ideas 479 E (αὐτὰ ἕκαστα), 507 B, 511 C, 533 B, cf. 363 A, 438 B, C: said of the realities of mathematics 510 D, 524 E, 525 D, E, II 160: used to denote an original)(a copy 402 B, 511 A. Difficult instances of: 477 D, 488 C. See also Index III Proponis αὐτόχειρ φόνος 615 C ἀπέτους νέμεσθαι 498 C
 ἀφήκειν 530 E
 ἀφιέναι 497 D
 ἀφλοισμός 388 A ἀφορία 546 A, B, II 287
 ἀχαριστία 411 E
 ἄχρηστος 333 C
 ἄωροι, in Plato's Nέκυια 615 C

B

βαλλάντια 348 D
 βανανσία and βάνανσος 495 E βάραθρον 439 E
 βάσανος, ἡ ἐν οὐνῳ 413 C βασιλεὺς, with reference to the Creator 597 E, II 464 f. βάσις, meaning of, in rhythmical theory 399 E βδελυρός 338 D

 βεβαιουῖσθαι 461 E
 βεβηκέναι 617 B
 βιάζεσθαι contrasted with λανθάνειν 341 B βία, a means of testing guardians 413 C βίη, i.q. βιαίως 359 C: with gen. 554 C βίαιος and ἐκούσιος ἁρμονία 399 C βιόδωρος, an epithet of rivers 381 D βλίπτειν 564 E
 βλοσυρός 535 B
 βομβολί 372 C
 βομβεῖν 564 D
 βόρβορος 533 D
 βοσκήματα = 'brute beasts' 586 A βούλεσθαι = sibi velle 590 E βούλεσθαι and ἐθέλειν 390 C, 437 C βούλησις 577 D, E βραδίτης, ἡ οὖσα and ἡ γιγνομένη 529 C, D, II 187 βραχύπορος περιφορὰ 546 A, II 287 βροντεῖον 396 B
 βροτός expressing contempt 566 D

Γ

γαμήλιον διάγραμμα 547 D γάμος ἱερὸς 458 E, 459 E γάρ, uses of: introductory 372 E, 453 D: resumptive 619 E γέ: assents 389 D, 507 A: introduces an indication, σημειῖον etc. 556 A, 559 B: used restrictively, to enter a caveat, or warn us of a further point 389 D, 435 E, 468 D, 578 B, 581 C. See also ἀλλὰ γέ, δέ γέ, καίτοι γέ γελοῖον, τό 452 D
 γελωτοποιεῖν 452 D
 γένεσις = στήλησις 546 A: used of 'becoming' in technical Platonic sense 485 B, 509 B, 519 A, B, 525 B, 526 E, II 180 γενέσθαι with partitive gen. 496 C γένη ψυχῆς 435 B
 γενναῖος 535 B: in plural τὰ γενναῖα substantial 440 C γεννᾶν ἐν 496 A γεννᾶν τῇ πόλει 460 E γεννήσεται and γενήσεται 461 A γέρας and γῆρας, verbal play on 406 B γεωμετρία 526 C ff. al. See Index II Geometry γεωμετρία 511 B, 533 B γεωμετρικὰ ἀνάγκαι 458 D γεωμετρικὸς ἀριθμός. See Index II Number, the Platonic γήρας οὐδὸς 328 E
 γηράσκω δ' αἶψα πολλά διδασκόμενος 536 D γηροτρόφος 331 A γῆς ἀναδάσμος 566 A, E

 γίγνεσθαι = 'be changed into' 393 D, E: =
 'be produced' 461 B: = 'prove oneself to be' 459 A, 575 E: = prodire, quae-rentibus se offerre 562 A, 566 A, 576 B, 597 B
 γίγνεσθαι eis = 'pass into,' 'change into'
 380 D
 γίγνεσθαι πρὸς τινι 567 A, 604 D γιγνόμενον τι = ὃν γιγνόμενον τι 527 B γινώσκων = intelligens, used absolutely 347 D γλίσχρος 488 A γνωματεύειν 516 E
 γνώριμα ἀπλῶς and γνωριμώτερα φύσει
 511 C γνώσις = 'the exercise of knowledge' 508 E.
 See also Index II Knowledge
 γοητεία, employed to test the guardians
 413 C
 γοητεία, said of bodily pleasure 583 B, 584 A
 γονέων θεραπείαι 425 A, B γόνιμος 367 D
 γραπτοὶ τύποι 420 C
 γράφειν ἀνδρίαντας 420 C γράφειν νόμους 501 A γραφή παρανόμων 426 C
 γρυπός 474 D
 Γυγαίη λίμνη I 126
 Γύγου δακτύλιος 359 C, 612 B γυμνάσια = γυμνοὶ ἀγῶνες 452 C: with τῆς ψυχῆς 526 B
 γυμναστική 403 C ff. See Index II Gymnastic
 γυμνήσιοι and γυμνήτες 547 B γυναικεῖοι μίμοι 451 C γυναικεῖον δρᾶμα 451 C γυναικεῖος νόμος 457 B γυναικοκρατία 563 B, I 347, 352

Δ

δαίμονες, with ref. to the half-deified dead 469 A: = tutelary geni, see Index II Daemons
 δαιμόνιον σημείον 496 C δαιμόνιος 509 C δαιμόνιος τόπος 614 C, 616 A. See also Index II Meadow etc.
 δάκτυλος 400 B
 δαπάνη 485 E
 δέ: after οὐτε 388 E: after τε 367 C, 495 C, 611 D: without μέν preceding 340 D, 358 A, 363 E, 398 A, II 184, 548 E, II 184 al.
 δέ γε 332 B, 443 C, 450 B, 578 A δεῖ supplied from verbal 467 C, cf. 489 C δεῖν = δέον not in Plato 347 A δεῖν tautological 473 A, 486 D: with verbal in -έος 535 A δεινοὶ λεγόμενοι τὰ περὶ φύσιν II 380 δεινός with inf. 387 E δεῖσθαι 579 A (οὐδὲν δεόμενος) δεκανοὶ II 293

 δέος τὸ τοῦς ἄλλους βοηθεῖν 465 B δευσσοποιός 429 E
 δεύτερος πλοῦς, the, in the Phaedo II 175 δῆ 439 B, 556 B: illative 462 C: to express irony 430 E, 521 C: sometimes emphasizes an instance or example etc. 377 E, 461 D: after οὐκοῦν ὅταν 573 A. See also καὶ δῆ
 δῆ versus δέ 392 A, 451 A, 478 C, 573 C: versus ἤδη 568 E
 δῆλον τούτῳ = 'clear from this' 554 C δηλώσει 497 C, 580 D
 δημιος 439 E
 δημοκρατία 338 D al. 555 B ff. See Index II Democracy
 δημοκρατία, ἡ τελευταία 563 D, 568 C δημοσία)(ἰδία 549 D
 δημοτικὴ ἀρετὴ 500 D al. See Index II Virtue
 διά. See Index III Prepositions διὰ πάντων ἀγῶν and διὰ πάντων κριτῆς 580 A, B, II 373—376
 διὰ πασῶν, πέντε etc. 432 A, 443 D, 546 B, C, 580 A, B, II 294
 διαβάλλειν 566 B
 διαβολὴ ἐν πᾶσι πολλή 500 D διαγέσθαι 344 E
 διαδιδόναι in connexion with torch-races
 328 A διάδοχοι τοῦ λόγου 368 A διαιρεῖσθαι κατ' εἶδη 454 A διαίρεσις 534 B, II 174 διαλαβεῖν 615 E
 διαλείπων χρόνον 617 C διαλεκτική 531 D ff. See Index II Dialectic διάλυσις 609 A διαμαρτάνειν 334 D
 διάμετροι ῥηταί and ἄρρητοι 546 C, II 285 διαμηχανᾶσθαι 518 D διανοεῖσθαι 327 C, 343 B, 508 E, II 83: of the exercise of the mathematical intelligence 510 D, 526 A al.
 διάνοια: of the mathematical intelligence 510 D, 511 A, D, II 159: in plur., =
 'modes of thought' 522 C διαπαύεσθαι 336 B διαπράττεσθαι 411 D, 586 C διάρθρωσις of the embryo II 294 n. 4 διαρπάζειν 336 B
 διασπᾶν 336 B, 503 B
 διαστάσεις, διαστατόν, διαστήματα, mathematical meaning of 546 A, B, II 271 διατάσεις κεφαλῆς 407 C διατέλης 618 A

διατεταμένος 474 A διαυλος 613 B
 διαφέρειν 454 D, 484 D, 496 A, 544 C διάφορος = 'antagonistic to' 544 C: in neut. sing. = 'distinction' 469 A διδάσκειν and διδάσκεισθαι 421 E, 467 E διδόναι θανάτῳ, πληγαῖς etc. 574 C, 556 C διεξελεῖν intransitive 484 A διεξέειναι διὰ πάντων ἐλέγχων 534 C, II 176 διερευνᾶσθαι 432 C δίεσις 531 A δυσχυρίζεσθαι with ισχυρίζεσθαι following 533 A δικάζεσθαι (passive) 558 A, II 313 δίκαι δημόσιαι and ἰδαι 549 D δικαιοσύνη 432 A al. See Index II Justice
 δικαιοῦν 380 B
 δικανική and δικαστική 405 A δικάστων κατάστασις 425 D δίκη glances at ἀδικεῖν 330 D δίκη ἐξούλης 558 A
 δικῶν λήξις 425 D
 Διομήδεια ἀνάγκη 493 E
 Διομητῆς πύλη 439 E
 Διονυσιακοὶ τεχνίται 373 B Διόνυσος λυσεύς and λύσιος 366 A διπλασιασμός κύβου 527 D, 528 B διπλῇ ἡ 330 C
 διπλοῦς 554 D
 δις διὰ πασῶν 443 D
 δις παῖδες οἱ γέροντες 331 A, 600 E δίψα with gen. 437 D διώκειν ἐναντίωσιν 454 A, B δογματικοί, a school of medical theory
 408 D
 δοκεῖν: absolute use of 505 D: often emphatic (semblance as opposed to truth) 420 A, 423 C, but does not always exclude the reality 539 A: sometimes does double duty 334 B, 493 A, cf. 517 B (φαίνεται): tautological 601 A: used in pass. 490 A, 612 D: with inf. and ἄν 493 C. Occasionally = 'fancy' opinari 393 B, 414 D, 598 C
 δοξα: in sense of 'seeming' 499 A, 505 D, 534 C: = opinion, see Index II Opinion etc.
 δοξάζειν = 'opine' (in technical Platonic sense) 493 A, 510 A ff., 516 D: apparently = 'esteem' 511 A, II 85. See also Index II Opinion etc.
 δοξαστόν and δρατόν 510 A ff., 514 A, 517 A, 523 C, II 157 f.
 δοξομίμησις II 158
 δουλοῦσθαι followed by καταδουλοῦσθαι
 351 B δουλοῦσθαι ὑπό 589 D
 δούλων ἀνεσις 563 B
 δ' οὐν 439 A, 608 A δράματα, said of Sophron's mimes 451 C δριμύς 519 A, 564 E

 δύναμις = 'our powers,' as in ὅσον γ' ἂν δύναμις παρείκη 374 E: difference of, from ισχύς 351 A: sometimes half-technical in Greek politics 466 B: = exercise of power (ἐνέργεια) 508 B, E, cf. 507 D: in plural used by Plato of the intellectual powers, including opinion etc. 477 B ff.
 δύναμις and δύνασθαι in mathematical sense 546 B, 587 D, II 268 δυναστεία 544 D
 δυναστεύεσθαι, mathematical sense of II 268 f.
 δυνατόν because κατὰ φύσιν 456 C δυσδιερεύνητος 432 C δυσθανατῶν 406 B
 δυστυχῆς ἡ and δυστυχῆση 578 C δωριστὶ 399 A, 400 A, I 203

E

ἐ, οὐ etc., rare in classical prose outside Plato 393 E
 ἐὰν καὶ 498 A
 ἐὰν καὶ μὴ δοκῶ 365 B ἐάσομεν, τὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ 530 B ἐαυτόν = 'oneself' 559 E ἐγγίγνεσθαι 571 B
 ἐγγύη 461 B
 ἐγγύς εἶναι τοῦ οἴεσθαι 330 D ἐγγύς θεῶν 388 B
 ἐγγύς τι 518 D
 ἐγκράτεια ἡδονῶν 430 E
 ἐγκτησις γῆς καὶ οἰκίας 547 B ἐγκύπτειν 555 E ἐθέλειν with neg. = 'refuse' 439 C. See also βούλεσθαι
 ἔθεσι καὶ ἀσκήσεσιν 518 E εἰ: an unclassical use of 440 D: sometimes extends its force over two sentences or clauses 351 B, 359 B, 589 D, 597 A
 εἰ καὶ = si etiam 388 D, 584 E εἰ μὴ ἀδικῶ 430 E
 εἰ μὴ εἴη πάρεργον 411 E εἰ μὴ τι, ἀλλὰ 509 C
 εἰ μοι μανθάνεις 394 C
 εἰ σοὶ βουλομένῳ 358 D
 εἰδέναι)(οἴεσθαι 581 E
 εἰδῆ τρόπων treated as one word 544 D εἰδῆ denotes the Ideas 476 A ff., 511 C, 596 A ff. al., but is often used untechnically and without reference to the transcendent Ideas, e.g. 400 A (τέρ-τατα εἰδῆ ἐν τοῖς φθόγγοις), 402 C, 433 A, 434 D, 445 C, cf. 435 B (εἰδῆ ἐν ψυχῇ), 454 A, 510 D, 595 B: see also Index II Ideas, the Theory of εἶδος nearly = τρόπος 572 C εἶδωλα 509 E ff., 520 B, II 163: combined with εἰδωλοποιεῖν 603 C εἶδωλον, τρίτον 587 C εἰδωλοποιική, ἀνθρωπίνη and θεία II 158,

596 A
εἶεν, the interjection 332 D, 436 C εἰκασία 511 D, II 158, 598 A, 602 A εἰκαστική II 158
εἰκόνες 509 E—511 E, II 157 ff. εἰκόνες γραμμάτων 402 B εἰμι: sometimes only quasi-future 473 C: with force of present 531 C (ἀνίαςιν) εἶναι ἐν τινι (e.g. προφῆ) 491 E, 581 D, E εἶναι ἐπὶ τινι 342 A, 470 B, 511 E, 534 A εἶναι πρὸς τι and πρὸς τινι 567 A εἶπερ 460 C
εἷς denoting one of a particular class
494 D εἷς ἐκ πολλῶν 423 D, 432 A, 435 A, 443 E, 462 B, 586 E, cf. 423 D εἷς ἐν κατὰ φύσιν 370 B, 434 C εἷς τις and εἷς γέ τις 565 C εἰσαγγελία 426 C, 565 C εἰσαυθὺς σκεψόμεθα and similar formulae 347 E, cf. 392 C, 430 C, 506 E, 532 D εἰσθαλείζειν 555 C εἰσιέναι=in scenam prodire 580 B εἰσόντα καὶ ἐξιόντα in the Timaeus II 161 εἰσφέρειν 337 D, 551 E
εἶτα and ἔπειτα indignantis 519 D ἐκ γειτόνων 531 A ἐκ δρυὸς ἢ ἐκ πέτρας 544 D ἐκαστος, plural of 520 D ἐκατοντάκις II 283 n. 2 ἐκβάλλειν='let fall' (e.g. ῥῆμα) 473 E:=
'produce' (sensu math.) 527 A ἐκγελᾶν and ἐκγελῶς I 361 ἐκγονος and ἔγγονος 364 E ἐκγονος τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ 506 E ff., 508 A, 517 C ἐκεῖ tautological 434 D: refers back to an earlier passage 441 B, 466 B, cf. 451 B ἐκεῖνος: in the phrase ὦ παῖδες ἐκεῖνου τοῦ ἀνδρός 368 A: following αὐτοῦ with same reference 600 B, cf. 538 B ἐκκάειν 361 E, 556 A ἐκκαθαίρειν 361 D, 527 D ἐκκλᾶν 611 D
ἐκκλέπτειν 449 C ἐκκλησιαστικός μισθός 565 A ἐκκλῆσθαι 361 E
ἐκλείπειν 485 D
ἐκμαγεῖον 485 B
ἐκμνήσασθαι 408 A ἐκπλήττεσθαι 576 D
ἐκπλυτα καὶ γελοῖα 429 E ἐκπλώειν ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ 388 A ἐκπύρωσις, the, of Heraclitus II 303 ἐκτέον 421 C
ἐκφευγεῖσθαι 432 D
ἐκὼν εἶναι 336 E, 485 C, 519 C

ἐκὼν: ὁ ἐκὼν ἀμαρτάνων ἀμείνων 382 B ἐλεγχος, the, in dialectic 534 C ἐλευενός, not ἐλευός in Plato 606 B ἐλευθερία, a watchword of democracy
557 B
ἐλευθεριότης 402 C ἐλευθεροῦσθαι ὑπὸ, ἐλ. ἀπό 569 A ἐλκειν without an expressed object 547 B ἐλλείπεσθαι 484 D
Ἑλληνὶς πόλις, Plato's City an 470 E.
See Index II Republic etc.
Ἑλλήσποντος='the region of the Hellespont' 404 C
ἐλπίζειν and ἐλπίς meaning 'fancy' 383 B, 451 A (with omission of εἶναι), 517 B,
573 C
ἐμβάλλειν 344 D
ἐμμετρία 486 D
ἐμοί and μοι 589 D
ἐμοιγε δοκεῖ, without ὥς 332 E ἐμοιγε δοκεῖν 332 E ἐμπειρικοί, a school of medicine 403 C ἐμπορική and ἔμποροι 371 D ἐμφύλιον αἶμα 565 E
ἐν καλῷ 571 B
ἐν νῷ ἔχειν 490 A
ἐν φαρμάκῳ εἶδει 389 B
ἐν identified with τάγαθόν 509 B ἐν ἀνθ' ἐνός 331 B
ἐν ἐπὶ πολλῶν, τό 476 A ἐν μέγα, the proverbial 423 E ἐναντία and τάναντία 602 E ἐναργής and ἐνάργεια 511 E ἐναρμόνιος φορά 530 C ff. See Index II Harmonics, the Science of ἐνδατεῖσθαι 383 A ἐνδύεσθαι 377 B
ἐνεροί 387 C
ἐνέσονται and ἐγγενήσονται 502 D ἐνευρίσκειν 554 D
ἐννεοσττεύσθαι 573 E
ἐννοεῖν='remember' 474 D ἐννομος, perhaps with play on musical sense of νόμος 424 E
ἐνόπλιος ζύνθετος 400 B ἐντείνειν 399 D
ἐντιθέναι 345 B, 518 C
ἐντός adverbial 414 D ἐντρέχης and ἐντρέχειν 537 A ἐντυγχάνειν 510 B
ἐξαγγέλλειν 328 E
ἐξαμαρτάνειν followed by ἀμαρτάνειν
336 E
ἐξάρνησις χορῶν II 188
ἐξετάζειν 489 A ἐξηγητής, said of Apollo 427 C ἐξῆς τοῦ οἴκελου 433 E ἐξουσία, a democratic watchword 557 B, 563 E, 564 D
ἐξυπτιάζειν II 185
ἐπαγγέλλεσθαι 518 B

ἐπαγεργμός 621 C, D
 ἐπαγωγαι and κατὰδεσμοι 364 C ἐπαίειν περί 598 C
 ἐπαμφοτερίζειν 479 B, C ἐπάναναγκες 536 D
 ἐπανακυκλίσσθαι 617 B
 ἐπάνοδος τοῦ ὄντος 521 C ἐπάνω 514 B
 ἐπέκεινα 587 B
 ἐπενεγκύν= 'bring forward' 612 B ἐπεσθαι θεῶ, a Pythagorean maxim 600 B, 613 A ἐπυνφημύν with two accusatives 383 B ἐπέχειν versus ὑπέχειν 399 B ἐπέχειν, said of light 508 C: in participle, sometimes intr. and half-adverbial 411 B: with τὴν διάνοιαν 399 B ἐπί. See Index III Prepositions ἐπὶ γῆς μὴ πλεῖν II 186 ἐπιδείξασθαι=ἐπιδείξιν ποιήσασθαι 398 A ἐπὶ δεξιὰ 420 E
 ἐπὶ τῆς ἀληθείας 349 A ἐπιθυμητικόν. See Index II Appetitive etc. ἐπιθυμίαι, classification of 558 D. See Index II Desire ἐπίκουροι. See Index II Auxiliaries etc. ἐπιμελεῖα=consulto 552 E ἐπιπλύνειν 372 B ἐπιπτέσθαι 365 A ἐπίρρυτος 508 B ἐπισίτιοι 420 A
 ἐπιστήμη sometimes syn. with τέχνη 342 C.
 See also Index II Knowledge
 ἐπισύνθετος ῥυθμός 400 B ἐπιτόσσαις 431 C
 ἐπίτριτος πυθμὴν 546 A, B, C, II 273, 276 ἐπιτυγχάνειν 397 C, 431 C ἐπιφρονέουσι 424 B
 ἐπίχαρις 474 D
 ἐπόμενος with gen. 504 B ἐπονομάζειν τί τινι 580 E ἔπος said of more than one verse 386 C ἔργα with double meaning 599 B ἐργασία 371 B
 ἐργάτης 554 A ἐργολάβοι 373 B
 ἐρεθίζειν 393 E, 411 C
 ἐρέφειν 393 E
 ἔρις and διάλεκτος, opposition of 454 A ἐριστικοί 454 A ἔρμα 553 B
 ἔρμαιον 368 D
 ἐρμηνεῖαι= 'communications' 524 B ἐρωτᾶν= 'ask about' 564 A ἔσμος λόγων 450 A, I 349 ἐστιᾶν in a metaphorical sense 354 A, 457 E, 571 D ἐστιάτορες εὐδαίμονες I 269, 421 B, 488 C, 611 E ἐταῖραι 373 A, 404 D, 573 D ἐταίριαί 365 D

 ἐταῖρος= 'disciple' 600 B ἕτερος, ὁ= 'one or other' 397 D ἔτι ἄδυναμι 532 B, C, II 189 ἔτοιμος 499 D: neut. of, used impersonally 567 A εὖ ζῆν equated with εὖ πράττειν 354 A εὖ κείμενον κακὸν μὴ κίνει 503 A εὖ πράττειν=εὐδαιμονία 335 B: the usual Platonic salutation 621 C, D εὐαγγελῶ unattic 432 D εὐβουλία and εὐβουλος 348 D, 428 B εὐγονία τε καὶ ἀφωρία II 288 εὐδαίμων εἰ 422 E, cf. 450 C εὐδοξία 363 A εὐειδεῖς, the rulers must be 535 A εὐεργετηκότες and εὐηργετηκότες 615 B εὐήθεια 348 D, 400 E εὐηθίζεσθαι 336 C
 εὐθύνειν 380 B
 εὐκολος: said of Sophocles 329 D: followed by a dat. (εὐκολος ἑαυτῷ) 330 A: neuter of 453 D εὐνομία, a characteristic of Sparta 544 C εὐορκία 443 A εὐπάθειαι 615 A εὐπέτεια 364 C
 εὐρίσκειν 528 B εὐσέβεια 443 A εὐσχημοσύνη 400 C
 εὐτυχὴς ἡ and εὐτυχῆση 561 A, cf. 578 C εὐχέρεια= 'complaisance' 426 D εὐχερὴς βίος 372 D
 εὐχή of an Utopian scheme 450 D, 456 C, 540 D ἐφάπτεσθαι: euphemistic use of 574 D: construction of 598 B ἐφεστάναι ἐπὶ with gen. 460 B ἔφη repeated 522 A ἔχειν=ἐνδέχεσθαι 604 E:= 'wear' 359 D: combined with κεκτῆσθαι 382 B, with τρέφειν ('to have and to hold') 575 D: with adv. and gen. (ἔχειν ὑγιεινῶς αὐτοῦ) 571 D: with ἐντίμως= 'hold in honour' 528 B, 548 A. In participle, with object understood, οἱ ἔχοντες= 'its possessors' 434 D ἔχσθαι (middle), as in ἐχόμενον φρονήσεως 496 A, cf. 389 E, 479 B, 526 C

Z

ζάλη 496 D
 Ζεὺς as a θεὸς πατρώος 391 E
 Ζεὺς ἐρκεῖος 328 C
 Ζεὺς μειλίχιος 366 A
 Ζεὺς Ὀλύμπιος 583 B
 Ζεὺς παναίτιος, πανεργέτης, ὁ πάντων κύριος 379 C, E Ζεὺς σωτήρ 583 B

ζῆν, the ἔργον of ψυχῇ 353 D, 445 A, 608 D, 609 D

ζήσιν not unattic 591 C ζητεῖν 388 E: followed by δεῖν 486 D ἡρωγονικὸν τρίγωνον 546 A, B. See Index II Pythagorean triangle, the

H

ἢ = 'or in other words' 335 A, I 63: = alioquin 463 D, 490 A, 503 A, 504 D, 525 B: with ἦτοι following 344 E. A difficult example of, in Homer 363 B ἦ καὶ 306 A, 443 E, 599 A, 602 D, 605 D

ἦ τις ἢ οὐδεὶς 496 C

ἦ δ' ὅς, tautological, after ἔφη 348 D ἦδη, an idiomatic use of)(οὐκέτι 412 B, 452 B: used emphatically 461 C ἦδονή and ἦδοναί 580 D ff. al. See Index II Pleasure etc.

ἦδυναι ὄψον 607 A

ἦδὺς εἴ 337 D, 527 D

ἦδύσματα, referring to metre and melody 607 A ἦ adverbial 458 B (ἦ δυνατά), 510 B ἦσαν and ἦσαν 387 A

ἦλακάτη 616 C—E

ἦλθ' ἐπὶ στόμα 563 C

ἦλβατος 387 C

ἦλικία, ἦ 498 B

ἦλιξ ἦλικά τέρπει 329 A ἦλιοειδής 508 B, 516 A

ἦμερον, τό 410 E

ἦμισως 601 C

ἦν = 'is, as we saw' (referring to something said before) 353 B, 490 A, 580 D: other uses of 335 E, 406 E, 436 C, 497 C, 504 B, 609 B. See also Index III Imperfect tense

ἦν ἄρα 335 E, 357 A

ἦν δ' ἐγώ, repetition of 557 C: sometimes late in sentence 410 D

Ἡρακλείτειος ἥλιος 498 A

Ἡρας δέσμοι 378 D

Ἡρας, κλίνῃ τῆς 459 E

ἦρωες, said of sons of gods 366 E, of departed spirits 558 A ἦρῶος ῥυθμός 400 B

ἦσαν nearly = παρήσαν 615 D

ἡσυχάζειν 572 A

ἡσυχία, said of the τρίτῃ διάθεσις or μεταξύ τι between Pleasure and Pain 583 C, D ἦτοι and ἦτοι—ἦ 344 E, 433 A ἡττᾶται καὶ πλουτεῖ 554 E

ἦτω, late for ἔστω 361 C

Ἡφαίστου ῥίψεις 378 D

θαμίζειν 328 C

θανατηφόρος 617 D

θανάσιος ἐργάζεσθαι, of ill-regulated zeal 474 A θανατοποιοί 514 B

θεία μοῖρα. See θεῖος θεία τύχη, necessary to start Plato's ideal city 499 B, C, cf. 592 A θεία φαντάσματα 532 C, II 190

θεία φύσει. See θεῖος

θεῖον γεννητόν, said of the World 546 A, B, II 288—290 θεῖόν τι ἐν ἡμῖν 518 C al. See Index II Man etc.

θεῖος: a fashionable word of praise in Plato's time 331 E: in Plato generally implies inspiration ib. 368 A al.: often but not always ironical 331 E, 493 A, applied especially to poets, rhapsodists etc., prophets etc. and statesmen 'by grace of God' 331 E, 368 A, 492 E (θεῖοι ἄνδρες, θεῖον ἦθος): with μοῖρα (θεῖα or θεοῦ μοῖρα) 493 A: with φύσις, of natural goodness etc., θεία φύσει)(ἐπιστήμη 366 C, cf. 492 E: see also θεία τύχη, θεία φαντάσματα, θεῖον γεννητόν, θεῖος λόγος θεῖος λόγος, the, of the Phaedo 517 A

Θέμις, the ἀρχαία ἀλοχος of Zeus 379 E

Θεογαμία 458 E

θεοείκελος 501 B

θεομαχίαι 378 D

θεός. See Index II God

θεός ἀεὶ γεωμετρεῖ 526 C, 545 C, II 162, 306

θεός, ἦ, of Athena 327 A, I 62: ὁ, referring to Apollo 469 A θεοῦ μοῖρα. See θεῖος θέσεις = 'payments' 425 D θεσπεσία καὶ ἡδεῖα 558 A θεῶν ἔρις τε καὶ κρίσις 379 E

θεῶν παῖδες 366 B, 474 E θεωρητικός and πρακτικός βίος 520 C, 549 D. See also Index II Lives etc.

θηρευταὶ and θηρευτική, various kinds of 373 B θνητὸν εἶδος ψυχῆς 439 E, 611 B. See Index II Soul, the human θόρυβος, ὁ πολὺς 561 A θρασύμαχος 336 E (ἀεὶ θρασύμαχος εἶ) θρέψεσθαι passive 568 D

θυηπολικόν 364 E θυμοειδής 375 A al. See Index II Spirit, the element of θύραι, αἱ τῶν πλουσιῶν 489 B

I

ιαστί 398 E

ιατρεία 405 A

ιάτρευσις 357 C

Θ

θάλεια and θαλία 573 D

ιατρική and μαγειρική 332 C ιατρική ἐπιστήμη 438 E
 ιδέα: used of the Ideas 479 A, 486 D: = 'kind,' syn. with γένος 507 E ἴδιος, ἰδίᾳ etc.)(poetry 363 E, 606 C ἰδιώτης, with ref. to Socrates 560 D ἰέναι ἐπὶ 473 C, 489 D, 521 B ἰέναι, with εἰαυτὸν understood 336 B ἱερουναί 443 A ἱκανῶς γίγνεσθαι 344 C
 ἱκανῶς κρινόμενα 523 B
 ἰοῦ and ἰοῦ 432 D
 ἱπποτροφεῖον 460 E ἱπποφόρβιον 460 E
 ἰσόδρομος 617 B
 ἰσόθεος 360 C, 568 B
 ἰσομήκης II 284
 ἰσον, τὸ ἀντιπεπονθός 423 D ἰσονομία 561 E
 ἰσονομικός 561 E
 ἰσότης, ἀριθμητική 558 C ἰσότης, γεωμετρική 558 C ἰστασθαι πρὸς τι I 356
 ἰσχειν, inchoative use of 511 D, 585 B ἰσως expressing irony 423 C: another use of 551 D
 ἰωνικός ἀπὸ μελίζονος 400 B

K

καθ' ἕκαστον 577 C καθ' ὁδόν 435 A
 καθαρμοί, a class of religious literature
 364 E
 καθαρμός and κάθαρσις: of a city 501 A, 540 E, 567 C: of an individual 501 A καθαρός: in half-mystical sense, of the Ideas 520 D: applied to 'true' or 'pure' pleasures 583 B ff., orig. perhaps with a half-religious purport 583 B, 584 B, II 379 f., cf. 611 C καθιστάναί 410 C
 καί: corrective, like atque 449 D: = etiam 452 D, 506 A, 522 E, 524 C, 573 C (καὶ τοιοῦτος ἀνὴρ), 575 A (καὶ εἰαυτοῦ): like Eng. 'indeed' 328 B: = 'in turn,' to point a balance 365 D: like Eng. 'at all' 497 E, cf. 498 A (οἱ καὶ ἀπτόμενοι):
 in interrogative clauses (e.g. λέγεις δὲ καὶ τίνας;) 571 C
 καί—γε 425 A, B, 433 B
 καὶ δὲ and καί—δὲ, uses of 330 A, 367 C, 373 A, 490 C, 494 A καὶ δὲ καὶ 564 A καὶ ἐκείνῳ = et illi, illi quoque II 85 (ἀθανάτῳ καὶ ἐκείνῳ)
 καί—καί, to mark correspondence of clauses 414 E
 καὶ κεραμεὺς κεραμεῖ κτλ. 349 E καὶ μάλα 408 D
 καὶ μήν and καὶ μήν—γε 328 D, 433 B καὶ πάντῃ 572 B
 καὶ ταῦτα 341 C (οὐδὲν ὦν καὶ ταῦτα) καίτοι 511 D and II 87 (construed like καίπερ with participle), 522 D, 583 B καίτοι γε 331 E, 440 D κακοδαίμων in ὦ κακοδαίμονες 'confound you' 440 A κακοεργία 422 A κακουργεῖν τὸν λόγον 338 D κακῶς ἀπαλλάττειν 491 D κακῶς ποιεῖν 335 B
 κάλαμος 372 B
 καλλιπόλις 527 C
 καλόν, τό 457 B
 καλός, ironical use of 595 C, 607 E καλὸς κάγαθός 489 E, 425 D, 569 A καλούμενος, emphatic use of, = 'so-called' 382 C, 442 A, cf. 518 D: with ref. to current nomenclature 511 C καλῶς, a colloquial use of 506 B καμπτήρ, ὁ 613 B
 κἂν εἰ 408 B, 612 C
 κἂν εἰ μὴ τῷ δοκεῖ 472 E, 579 D κἂν ὅτιον ἢ 422 E
 κάπηλοι 371 D
 κάπνον φεύγων εἰς πῦρ ἐνέπεσον 569 B κάπνον καὶ φλυαρία 581 D κάρα, a poetic plural of 607 B καρδία, a colloquial use of 492 C κατά. See Index III Prepositions κατὰ νοῦν 399 B
 κατάδεσμοι 364 C καταδέχεσθαι 401 E, 607 C καταδύναί 576 D
 κατακλίσεις 425 A, B καταλαμβάνεσθαι ὑπὸ φυγῆς 496 B καταντλεῖν 344 D
 καταπατεῖν 558 B
 κατάστασις πόλεως 497 B κατάστασις τῶν ἀρχόντων 502 D καταστήσεσθαι 546 D
 κατατείνειν 329 C, 358 D, 367 B κατανλεῖν 411 A καταφορά, καταφορεῖν, καταφορικός 587 E καταφρονεῖν 549 A καταψηφίζεσθαι with gen. of penalty 558 A, II 313
 κατέχεσθαι 560 D
 κατηγορίας περί—χορῶν II 187 f. κατοικεῖν εἰαυτὸν 592 B καῦσις ἢ τομὴ 406 D Κειριάδαι 439 E
 κεκυνέειν εἰς τραπέζας 586 A κекωλισμένα ἀντίγραφα 616 E, II 478 κελεύειν with play on κωλύειν 439 C κενεαγοραῖ 607 B
 κένωσις, Pain is a 583 E, 585 A ff. κεραυνοσκοπεῖον 396 B κερματίζειν 525 E
 κηλεῖν 411 B
 κῆρες in Homer 379 D

κηρὸν = 'a cell' 552 C κηφῆνες 552 C, 559 D al. κηφηνώδεις ἐπιθυμίαι 554 B κηφῆνων βοτάνη 564 E
 κηθάρα 399 D
 κινεῖν: of intellectual stimulation 329 D:
 of constitutional change 545 D κίνησις: 'change' 380 E: varieties of 530 C: said of pleasure and pain
 583 C, E
 κλέπτειν, of military operations 334 A: a tragic use of 413 B κληρονόμος, ὁ τοῦ λόγου 331 D, E κληροὶ τινες κομποὶ 460 A, 485 C κλήρος, an allotment of land in Sparta 552 A. See also Index II Lot etc. κλήρωσις and αἵρεσις in transmigration
 618 A
 κλοπή, a way of testing guardians 413 C κνάπτειν and κνάμπειν 616 A (ἐπ' ἄσπαλάθων κνάπτοντες)
 κοινὰ τὰ φίλων 424 A, 449 C κοινῇ καὶ ἰδίᾳ 333 D κοινωνεῖν and συμβάλλειν 362 B κοινωνία of body and soul 462 C κοινωνία, the doctrine of, in Plato's Theory of Ideas 476 A, D, I 362—364, 505 A, II 172 f.
 κολακεύων βλος 539 A κολουέσθαι 528 C
 κολυμβήθρα 453 D
 κομμός 605 D
 κομψός and χαρίεις 405 D, 505 B κομψός κλήρος 461 E Κορινθία κόρη 404 D
 κορυζᾶν 343 A
 κοσμικὸν τρίγωνον 546 B, II 267, 299—302 κοσμομήτης opposed to ἀνδρεία II 80 al.
 See Index II Courage
 κρατεῖσθαι with gen. 455 D κρείττω αὐτοῦ 430 E κρεμάθρα 529 C
 κρίσις = 'judgment' 360 D κτηματικοὶ 564 E κυβερνητική 346 B, II 74 ff. See also Index II Pilot, the true κυβικός II 292
 κύβων αὔξη 528 B
 κύκλοι τῶν χειλῶν 616 C, D κύκλος 424 A (ἔρχεται ὥσπερ κύκλος αὐξανο-μένη)
 κύων in the game of πόλεις 422 D κωμῳδοὶς = at the exhibition of comedies
 395 A

Λ

λακέρντζα κύων 607 B
 λαμβάνειν ἀπόστασιν II 272 n. 1 λαμπαδηφορία 560 E
 λαμπάς and λαμπάδιον 328 A λανθάνειν contrasting with βιάζεσθαι 341 B λάχανα 372 C

 λέγειν ἐπὶ τινι 462 C
 λεγόμενος, emphatic use of 431 C, 473 D λείβειν 411 B
 λείπεται, of a third alternative 327 C λειτουργίαι 554 E
 λεπτήν πλέκειν 607 C
 λεπτῶς μεριμνῶντες 607 C λευκόστολος 617 C λεωργός 421 A, I 269
 λίσσομαι in Homer 393 A λιστός 364 D
 λίτρον 430 A
 λίχνος 579 B λογίζεσθαι = calculus subducere 366 A λογικὸν μέρος ψυχῆς 435 B λογισμός μετ' αἰσθήσεως 546 A, B, II 288 λογιστική and ἀριθμητική 525 A λογιστικόν. See Index II Rational etc. λογιστικός with a play on τὸ λογιστικόν 525 B, cf. 602 E λογογράφοι 365 E
 λόγοι, the Socratic 402 C λόγοι, οἱ ἐκ τῶν ἐπιστημῶν 476 A λογοποιεῖν 378 D
 λόγος: abstractly used = τὸ λέγειν 357 A: = 'rational argument,' 'reasoning' 511 B, cf. 582 D (λόγοι): = 'a principle' 607 A.
 See also θεῖος λόγος
 λόγος ἐνδιάθετος, the, of the Stoics II 193 λοιδορεῖσθαι 500 B, 549 D λοιδωρία 425 D
 λοκριστὶ 400 A λυγίεσθαι 405 C
 λυδιστὶ 398 E, 399 C, 400 A λυπῶν ἀπαλλαγὰι, bodily pleasures are
 584 C
 λύσεις = modes of absolution 364 E λύσις τοῦ 366 A
 λύσις, the, of the Ideal city 546 A, II 286 f.
 Λωτοφάγοι 560 C

M

μάζαι γενναῖαι 372 B
 μάθημα, τὸ μέγιστον 504 E μαθήματα and μαθηματικά 526 C, 527 B μαθηματικά 525 D, 526 A, 527 B, II 159 ff.
 See Index II Mathematical Studies
 μακάριος 335 E
 μακρὰ εἰσόδος 514 A μακρολογεῖν 455 C
 μακρὸς λόγος, the proverb 484 A μακροτέρα περίοδος 435 D, 504 B μαλθακὸς αἰχμητής 411 B μάλιστα κακουργία and the like 434 C μᾶλλον redundant or semi-redundant 362 C μᾶλλον δέ = vel potius 522 E μανδραγόρα 488 C
 -μανθάνω· ὅτι 332 A, 402 E, 568 E

μαντική, Plato's views on 364 B μεγαλαυχεῖσθαι 528 B μεγαλοπρέπεια 402 C, 486 A, 536 A μεγαλοφρονεῖσθαι 528 B
 μέγας μεγαλωστί 566 C
 μέγιστα, τά, with ref. to government 525 B, 534 D μέθη, Plato on 398 E μέθη αἰώνιος 363 D
 μεθοδικοί, a school of medical theory 408 D μέθοδος, ἡ εἰσὸς 596 A μεθόριον θνητῆς καὶ ἀθανάτου φύσεως 588 B. See Index II Man etc. μεθυστικά ἀρμονία 398 E μελαγχολικός 573 C
 μέλαν, the colour 420 D μελέτη: combined with τέχνη 488 D: in plural, with πρὸς ἑαυτὸν = meditationes secum 407 C μελέτη θανάτου, the doctrine of 329 C, 613 A Μελιτίδες πύλαι 439 E μελιττοῦργος 564 C
 μελίχλωρος 474 E
 μελίχρους 474 E μέλλειν with aor. inf. 491 A μεμιγμένα πολιτεία 548 C μέν: followed by τε 510 E: position of 488 C, II 284 n. 2: without a corresponding δέ 472 D, 475 E, 452 A, I 269, 533 A, 573 E, cf. 479 A. See also δέ. μέν and δέ, repetition of a word with (e.g. ἐνείναι μέν—ἐνείναι δέ) 439 C μέν and μήν 452 A, 468 A μέν γάρ 466 D, 562 A μέν οὖν 444 B
 μένειν and μένειν αὐτοῦ 514 A μένειν ἐπὶ = 'remain true to' 466 C μέντοι in replies 403 A μέντοι γε 329 E μέρη ψυχῆς 435 B. See Index II Soul, the human μεριμνοφροντιστά 607 C
 μέσαι νύκτες 621 B
 μέση, musical sense of 432 A, 443 D μέση κατάστασις, the, in the theory of Pleasure 583 B, C μεσότης, Courage viewed as a 411 C μεταβάλλειν ἄνεσιν 561 A μεταβολή, musical sense of 397 B μεταβολή δλιγαρχική 559 E μεταμελητικός 577 E μεταξύ, τά, of the realities of mathematical study 510 D, 525 D, 526 A, II 169 ff., 187. See also Index II Mathematical Studies μεταξύ, τό = 'the interval before' 498 A μεταστρέψας = 'conversely' 587 D μέτεστι 490 E
 μετέχειν, construction of 396 E μετεχειν, μέθεξις, μετοχή in the theory of Ideas 476 D, II 173 al. See Index II Ideas, the theory of μετεωροσκοπός 488 E

 μετρίως χρῆσθαι 432 C
 μέχρι πάλιν 586 A μέχρι τούτου 376 A μή: due to the influence of an imperat. 327 C: with delib. subj. in interrogation (e.g. μή οὖν οἴωμεθα;) 552 D, 554 B: with inf. after verbs of saying and the like 346 E, 407 E, 419 A μή, final, rarely followed by future tense 393 E μή=μητι 442 D, 603 C
 μή ἄλλως ποιεῖν 328 B
 μηδέ—μηδὲ 391 C
 μηδέν indeclinable 527 B μήτοι 438 A
 μήτοι—γε 352 C
 μητρὶς 575 D
 μία δύναμις sive ἐπιστήμη τῶν ἐναντίων 395 A, 409 A, B Μίδου πλουσιώτεροι 408 B μῖλαξ 372 B
 μίμεισθαι, of imitation by natural agencies 510 A μίμησις. See Index II Imitation μιμηταὶ εἰδῶλων 600 E μισθολογία 398 E, I 203 μισθωτική 346 B
 μισθωτοὶ in Plato's city 371 E μισολογία 538 D
 μοι δοκεῖ parenthetical = 'methinks' 396 C μολυβδίdes 519 A, B μονάdes, various kinds of 526 A μόνος with αὐτὸς καθ' αὐτὸν 604 A μονόχρονος ἡδονή 557 D, 561 C μουσική and γυμναστική 376 E al. See Index II Music, Gymnastic μουσικοί, οἱ, a school of musical theory 531 A μοχθηρός, meanings of 335 B μυθολογία, Plato's conception of 382 D. See also Index II Myth etc. μυθολόγοι 392 D
 μῦθος, Plato's definition of 377 A μῦθος and μέτρον, relation of, in poetry 601 B μῦθος ἀπώλετο 621 B
 μυκᾶσθαι 615 E
 μῦσαι, the Orphic 363 C
 μῶν μή 351 E

N

ναύκληρος 371 B, 488 A νεανιεύματα and νεανισκεύματα 390 A νεανικός 491 E, 563 E: relation of, to ἀνδρείος II 80 νεῖν ἐξ ὑπτίας 529 C, II 185 Νέκυια, the, of Plato 614 A ff. See also Index II Er

νέοι ἔταιροι 575 D
 νέοι πολῖται and νεοπολῖται 568 A νεωκορεῖν and νεωκόρος 574 D νῆ τὸν κύνα 399 E
 νῆτη, ἡ, in Greek Music 432 A, 443 D νικᾶν 440 C Νιόβης πάθη 380 A νοεῖν = animadvertere, 'notice' 375 D νοητόν, τό II 157 ff. al. See Index II
Ideas, the Theory of, and Mathematical Studies
 νομίζεν II 179: construed with participle
 529 B
 νομίζεν φωνῇ 470 D
 νόμισμα 371 B
 νόμοι κοινοὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος 469 B νόμος: equated with δίκαιον 338 E, 359 A: origin of, ascribed to social contract 358 E ff.: personification of 519 D, E: a Pindaric fragment on 359 C: relation of, to φύσις ib., 515 C. See also Index II Law
 νόμος, musical sense of 424 D, 531 D, 399 C (νόμος πολυκέφαλος), cf. 457 B νοσεῖν καὶ στασιάζειν 470 C νοσημάτων τῆς πόλεως 544 C νοσοτροφία 407 C
 νοῦς and νόησις 490 B, 511 D al. See Index II Reason
 νυκτερινὴ ἡμέρα 521 C νυν = 'as it is' 430 C, cf. 470 D: referring to the immediate past 414 B, 543 C, 563 C, 592 A, 611 B: with allusion to contemporary events 471 B νῦν ἤδη = nunc demum 580 A νῦν οὕτως 473 E
 νύξ ἡμέρα 521 C νῶ ἔχειν = 'remember' 490 A νῶτον = 'surface' 616 C—E

Π

ἔνρεῖν λέοντα 341 C
 ἔνστις 420 E

Ο

ὁ δέ = 'the other' 349 D, 587 B: with ὁ μὲν idiomatically suppressed 451 D, 455 E
 ὁ τοιοῦτός τις 412 A ὁ ἔστιν δίκαιον, ἴσον etc. 507 B, II 82 ὁ τεταριχευμένα 372 E ὁδε meaning 'this contemporary,' 'this familiar' 403 E, 425 C ὁδὸς ἄνω and ὁδὸς κάτω in Heraclitus
 II 303
 ὁδὸς Ὀμηρικὴ 600 A οἶα δὴ 420 A οἶαπερ ἡ δέσποινα, τοῖα χά κύων 563 C οἶεσθαι: with affirmative force 336 E, I 64

(ὅου γε σύ), 608 D: emphatic, implying unreality (e.g. μέγα ολομένον δύνασθαι) 336 A, 409 C: in second person, sometimes used parenthetically 600 C

οἰκεία, τὰ 405 B, 443 D οἰκέται 465 C
 οἰκέται and φοικέες 547 B οἰκοδομικὴ ἐπιστήμη 438 D οἶκοι εἶναι and οἰκεῖν 600 E οἶμος 420 B
 οἶον, adverbial, = 'as it were' 478 D οἶον, ὥς, ὥσπερ etc., introducing a comparison to illustrate the clause which follows (e.g. οἶον ἄλλοι ἄγρους τε κεκτημένοι κτλ.) 419 A, 515 A, 528 B, 589 B οἶος and ὅς 484 A, 487 B οἶος with inf. 351 E Οἰχαλίας ἄλωσις 600 B
 ολιγάκις καὶ ὀλίγος 491 B ὀλιγαρχία 338 D al.: definition and history of the word 550 C. See also Index II Oligarchy
 ὀλιγαρχικός and ὀλιγαρχικῶς in a quasietymological sense 551 E, 555 A Ὀλυμπικῶς τῷ σωτήρι 583 B ὀλυμπιονίκαι 465 D
 ὀλω καὶ παντί 469 C Ὀμηρίδαι 599 E
 ὅμοιον and ἀνόμοιον, generalisation of
 349 C
 ὁμοιότης, the principle of 545 C, 546 C,
 II 297—301
 ὁμοιούντων τε καὶ ἀνομοιούντων, meaning of, in Plato's Number II 272—274, 295—302
 ὁμοίωσις τῷ θεῷ. See Index II Assimilation to God
 ὁμολογεῖν with εἶναι omitted 374 A ὁμολογία and ὁμολογουμένως of agreement between premises and conclusion 533 C, 5101) ὁμολογία of ὀξύ and βαρύ = ἁρμονία 398 D ὁμόνοια καὶ φιλία 351 D, cf. 378 C, 432 A ὁμοπαθής and ὁμοιοπαθής 464 D ὁμῶς εἶναι 610 C
 ὁμφαλός 427 C
 ὁμωρόφιος 417 A
 ὄναρ adverbial 574 D
 ὄναρ and ὕπαρ 443 B, 576 B ὄναρ, τὸ ἐμὸν ἐμοὶ λέγεις 563 D ὄνειροπολεῖν 534 C
 ὄνειρώττειν, said of mathematical studies
 533 C
 ὀνομάζειν τι ἐπὶ τινι 493 C ὀνομάζεται δύο 470 B ὀνομαζόμενα = ὀνόματα ὄντα 387 C ὀνοματομάχοι 454 A ὀξυτάτην δρόμον ἀκμήν 460 E ὄπη and ὅποι 425 B, 556 A ὄπη combined with ὅπως in the idiomatic εἶτε ὄπη ἔχει καὶ ὅπως 612 A Ὅπλων κρήσις, the, of Aeschylus 383 A ὅποι and εἰς ὅ τι 616 A ὁποῖος and ποῖος, ὁπόσος and πόσος, ὁπότερος and πότερος 348 B ὁπότε for ὅτε of or. recta 332 A ὅπως with subj. after preterite tense, very rare in Plato 341 E: with past tense of indic., also rare 378 A ὅπως μὴ ἐρεῖς and the like 336 D ὄρασις='the act of sight' 508 E ὄρατόν and δοξαστόν. See δοξαστόν and ορατόν

 ὄργανον ψυχῆς II 183
 ὄργῃ and θυμῷ 440 A ὀρέγεσθαι 572 A ὀρθῇ δόξα. See Index II Opinion etc. ὀρμή='impulse,' 'start' 506 E ὄροι, musical sense of 443 D: meaning of,
 in Greek physics 546 A, B, II 271 f., 275 n., 292
 ὀρος='definition' 337 A (ὁ φύσει ὀρος τοῦ δικαίου), 551 C
 ὀρύγματι, ὁ ἐπὶ τῷ 439 E Ὀρφεοτελεσται 364 B
 ὄς and ὅσπερ 521 B
 ὄς=suus 394 A
 ὄσα adverbial 456 A ὄσιοι, an appellation of Orphic μύσται
 363 C
 ὀσιότης, the virtue of 386 A, 427 E ὀσιώνται καθ' ἑαυτοὺς, αἱ ψυχαί, the Hera-clitean saying 584 B
 ὅσον δυνατόν 445 B
 ὅσον γ' ἂν δύναμις παρέρη 374 E ὅσον οἶον τε 445 B
 ὀστρακίνδα 521 C, II 182
 ὀστρακοῦ περιστροφῇ 521 C, II 181 f. ὅταν sometimes extends its force over two sentences 540 E: together with its verb sometimes=ἐκάστοτε 373 E οὐ γὰρ οὖν in replies II 193 οὐ—μέντοι used interrogatively 339 B, 521 D, 581 A, 584 A, 596 E οὐ φημι=νεγο 500 A, 534 B οὐ τοι followed and explained by a clause with ὅτι 330 B, cf. 563 B οὐδέ='also not' 328 C, 520 A, 587 C: =ne—quidem 464 E
 οὐδ' ἔκταρ βάλλει 575 C οὐδέις ἐκὼν πονηρός 382 A, 360 C, 589 C, 617 D, E
 οὐδέν indeclinable 498 D, 527 B, 556 D οὐδέν and μηδέν 357 B οὐδέν δεινὸν μὴ 465 B
 οὐδέν ὑγιές 523 B
 οὐδέτερος='either,' after a neg. 527 E οὐκ ἀγενεῖς and οὐκ ἀγενῶς 555 D, 529 A οὐκ αὖ 426 E
 οὐκ ἐτός 568 A
 οὐκ οἶδα ὅστις with personal reference
 405 E

οὐκέτι, idiomatic use of 412 B, 425 C, 428 A
 οὐκοῦν sometimes extends its interrogative force over two sentences 591 D: with τίς following I 129
 οὐκουν—γε 552 B
 οὐπω, an idiomatic use of 353 C οὐράνιον θεῶν γένος 508 A οὐρανός, a derivation of 509 D: meaning of, in ἐν οὐρανῷ παράδειγμα 592 B οὐσία 476 E al. See Index II Being οὔτε (or μήτε) followed by τε=non modo non, sed etiam 430 B, 538 E, 566 D οὔτε—οὔτε—οὐδέ γε 499 B, 608 E οὗτος, deictic use of 327 B: =iste 'that of yours' 544 C: said contemptuously 492 D: with forward ref. 405 B οὕτω δὲ 443 E, 484 C
 οὕτως, idiomatic, with ἀπλῶς, ῥαδίως, νῦν and the like 377 B, 473 E: referring to the more familiar of two alternatives
 370 A οὕτωςί pointing forward 339 E οὐχ ὅπως=non modo non 591 C οὐχ ὥσπερ, construction of 410 B, cf. 539 D, 610 D
 ὀφειδῶδες, τὸ ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ 590 B ὀφθαλμία 353 C, 608 E ὄψις 507 C, 508 A
 ὄψον and ὄψοποιή 332 C, 372 C, E

II

παλίως νοῆσαι 434 D, 479 C πάθημα, τὸ ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ 382 B πάθος, used objectively in αὐτὸ τὸ πάθος ('the affliction itself') 604 B πάθος μάθος, the doctrine of 337 D, 380 B
 παιδαγωγεῖν, a playful use of 600 E παιδαγωγική λατρική 406 A παιδαγωγοί, τίτθαι, τροφοί 373 C παιδαγωγός, the office of 467 D παιδεία 376 E, II 164 al. See Index II Education
 παῖδες παίδων 366 A παιδεύειν εἰς ἀρετὴν II 76 παιδεύειν πρὸς τὴν πολιτείαν 424 E παιδεύεσθαι, middle of personal interest 546 A, B
 παιδιά='pastime' 424 D, cf. 536 C, 537 C: in connexion with religious rites 364 E παιδία='boyhood' 537 C
 παίζειν, with a play on παῖς 536 E, 545 D:
 of religious celebrations 364 E: said of literary work 536 C παῖς, used of intellectual inheritors 368 A (ὡ παῖδες ἐκείνου τοῦ ἀνδρός) πάλιν='conversely' 434 C: points a contrast 519 D, E (ἐπελάθον—πάλιν) παμπόλεις 422 E

πάν ποιεῖν and πάντα ποιεῖν 494 E πᾶν τούναντίον 527 A παναρμόδιον 399 C, D παναρμόδιος ψυχή, said of Plato and Homer II 298, 595 B Πανελλήνων πρόμος 470 C παννυχίς 328 A
 πάντες, said with emphasis 496 D, 579 B,
 596 C
 παντοπώλιον πολιτειῶν 557 D παντός μᾶλλον 518 E πάντως 497 D (οὐ πάντως ῥᾶστον) παρά. See Index III Prepositions παρά δόξαν 346 A: followed by τοῖς νυν δοκουμένοις 490 A παρά καιρόν, meaning of, in Plato's Number 546 D, II 286 f. παρ' οὐδέν 556 D
 παρὰ τὸ ἔθος 452 A παραβάλλειν = 'come alongside' 556 C, D, cf. 499 B: in mathematical language = 'to apply' 527 A παραβλαστάνειν 573 D
 παραγγέλλειν 524 A, 556 D παράδειγμα = 'illustration' 369 A, 529 D, E παράδειγμα = 'model', 'standard' 409 A, B, 472 C, D, cf. 409 A, B, 548 A, 557 D, 616 A: of the ideal city 592 B (ἐν οὐρανῷ —παράδειγμα: application of the word in Greek eschatologies 616 A παράδειγμα expresses the relation of Idea to particulars 476 D, II 173, 596 B, 597 B (παράδειγματα ἐν τῇ φύσει) παραδίδοναι = 'bequeath' 331 D: with inf.
 468 A παραιρέσεις τῆς οὐσίας 573 E παρακαθίζειν χαμαὶ 553 D παρακαλεῖν 450 B: in Plato's theory of education 523 A ff.
 παρακινεῖν, of mental derangement 573 C παραλείπεσθαι 401 A παράλλαξις 530 B
 παρὰνομία, of heterodoxy in music 424 D:
 of general lawlessness and antinomianism 537 E
 παρὰνομος with play on musical sense of νόμος 424 E
 παρὰνομος = 'unnatural' 558 D, 564 A, 571 A, B
 παρὰπλειος, a vox nihili 390 A παρασκευὴ φιλοσοφίας 528 E παραστήσασθαι 555 B
 παρασχέιν δίκην 405 C
 παρὰτείνειν = 'to apply,' sensu math.
 527 A
 παραφέρεισθαι and περιφέρεισθαι 354 B παρὰφέροντες, the, in the simile of the Cave 514 B
 παρεκβάσεις in the political theory of Aristotle 338 D
 παρσκευάσθαι ἀμεινον 362 C παρέχεσθαι = de suo praebere 421 D, 554 A,

 II 282
 παριαμβίς and παρίαμβος 400 B παριέναι καιρόν 460 E
 παριόντα, the, in the allegory of the Cave 515 B, II 178
 παρούσα, doctrine of, in the theory of Ideas 476 D, 506 A, II 173: used without ref. to Ideas 437 E, 438 B παρρησία, a watchword of democracy 557 B πᾶς and ὁ πᾶς 608 C πᾶσχειν and ποιεῖν 437 A πατήρ τοῦ λόγου and the like 360 D πατρώα, τά 568 E, 574 A παύειν, with inf. 416 C: with part. (παύσαι ζῶντα) 559 B, II 314
 παχέις, a nickname of Greek oligarchs
 556 D πείθειν δῶρα καὶ θεοὺς λόγος 390 E πείνα and πείνη 585 A πεινᾶν, a rare meaning of 521 A πέλαγος τοῦ καλοῦ 403 C πενέσται 547 B πεντηκοντούταις 540 A πεπηγέναι πρὸς 605 A πέπλος, ὁ, at the Panathenaea 378 C πεποιεῖσθαι πρὸς 598 B
 πέρα τῶν ἀναγκαίων 493 E περαίνειν, musical sense of 532 A περαιτέρω followed by gen. 407 B πέρας and ἄπειρον II 292, 300, 596 B περί. See Index III Prepositions περιαγείρεσθαι 621 C, D περιαγωγή 518 C, D, 521 C περιαιρεῖσθαι with two accusatives I 127 περιβόλους οἰκήσεων 548 A περικάτω 519 A, B, II 181 περικόπτειν 519 A, B
 περικρούειν 611 E περιλαμβάνειν, mathematical sense of 546 A, B, II 289
 περινοστεῖν 558 A περίοδος = 'period of gestation' 546 A, II 288—295: = 'period' from one incarnation to another 617 D: used sometimes in plur. with ref. to the diurnal revolutions of the heavens II 299 n. 1 περίοικοι 547 B
 περιφέρειν ἐπὶ ταῖς κεφαλαῖς 600 D πεττεία 422 E
 πεφυκέναι πρὸς 605 A πηκτίδες 399 C
 πηλός in Orphic eschatological pictures
 363 D
 πῖθηκος 590 B, 620 C
 πῖθος τετρημένος 586 B
 πιλίδια 406 D
 πίστις, connotation of, in Platonism 511 E, II 158 f., 601 E
 πλανᾶσθαι, used metaphorically 484 B, 586 A

πλάττειν, metaphorical use of 377 B: with ref. to massage 377 C, to models of geometrical figures 510 E Πλάτωνος ἀγαθόν, half-proverbial for something obscure 505 A πλέον and πλεῖον 588 A πλέον ἔχειν 349 B
 πλήθος ἐλευθερίας 563 B πλὴν γε for πλὴν γε ὅτι 426 A πλήρωσις in connexion with the theory of Pleasure 561 B, 583 B ff. See Index II Pleasure and Pleasures πλησιάζειν 490 B
 πλινθίον = abacus 422 E πλούσιοι, an appellation of oligarchs 564 E πλούσιοι τὰς ψυχὰς 547 B πλουτοκρατία 550 C
 πλούτος, the plural of 364 A πλωίζειν 388 A
 πῶδες ἀπὸ ἄρσεως and ἀπὸ θέσεως 400 B πῶθος, definition of 573 A πῶθου κέντρον 573 A ποιεῖν = 'picture,' 'represent' 609 C, id. with acc. and a participle 390 B: = 'produce' 422 A, 444 D, 523 B, 581 D (ἀργύριον ποιεῖν): in passive sometimes = 'be accounted' 498 A, 538 C, 573 B, 574 D ποιεῖν τί τινα 365 A, 407 D ποιεῖσθαι ὑφ' ἑαυτοῦς 348 D ποίησις. See Index II Poetry and Poets ποιητής, ὁ, use of, in quotations 379 E ποιητική ἀνθρωπίνῃ and π. θεία II 158 ποικιλία = 'colouring,' 'variety of colour' 373 A, 401 A ποικίλλειν = 'to depict in many colours' 378 C: in passive, used of the stars embellishing the sky 529 C, D: applied to democracy (πᾶσιν ἤθεσιν πεποικιλμένη) 557 C ποικίλματα, said of the 'spangles' in the heavens 529 C, D ποικίλος, of a many-coloured garment (ἱμάτιον ποικίλον) 557 C: the antithesis of ἀπλοῦς ib.: applied to the democratic man 561 E: said of Desire 588 C, cf. 561 E: epithet of the starry circle 616 E ποῖος; = 'what?' 330 A, B: sometimes derivative (e.g. ποῖος Κτήσιππος;) ib., 522 D, 526 A: can express incredulity or wonder 429 C ποῖος and ὁποῖος 400 A, 578 E al. See ὁ ποῖος etc. ποῖότης perhaps a Platonic coinage 477 B πόλεις παίζειν 422 D, E, 487 C πολέμιοι φύσει 470 C πόλεμος. See Index II War πολιά φύντα II 297
 πολιοκράται II 296 f.

πολιτεία ἐν ἡμῖν and ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ 439 E, 586 D, 608 B al. See Index II Individual etc.
 πολιτεῖαι, usual classification of, in Greece 338 D πολιτικὴ ἀνδρεία 430 C πολλὰ ποιεῖν ἐκ τοῦ ἐνός 422 E πολλὰ ψεύδονται ἄνθρωποι 381 E πολλάκις = forte (after μή etc.) 422 C, 584 B πολλοί: οἱ πολλοὶ κακοὶ 379 C. See also Index II Many, the etc. πολλοῦ δεῖ 378 C
 πολυκέφαλον θηρίον 588 C Πολυκράτους χρήματα 336 A πολυπραγμοσύνη 434 C
 πολὺς, ὁ, as in ὁ πολὺς λεώς, αἱ πολλαὶ φύσεις etc. 473 D πολυτελής 507 C
 πολυχорδία 399 C
 πολυχорδὸς αὐλὸς 399 D
 πονηρὸς and πονηρία, meanings of 335 B, 575 C πόρρω εἰ περὶ 343 B πόρρωθεν φαινόμενα, τὰ 523 B πότερον understood 486 C πούς in rhythmical theory 400 C πράγματα, wide connotation of 476 C πράγματα παρέχειν 531 B πρακτικὸς βίος 520 C al. See Index II Life etc.
 Πράμνεος οἶνος 405 E πράζεται, passive use of 452 A πραῖτος 558 A: of the Athenian Demos 500 A πράττειν τὰ αὐτοῦ and τὸ αὐτοῦ 433 B, C, 442 D—443 C πρεσβύτερος, with reference to Socrates 409 C, 560 D προβλήματα 530 B
 προδοσίαι 443 A, 615 B προεδρία 465 D
 προηγμένα, Stoic theory of 357 B, C προσηθήσεις 584 C
 πρόθυρα καὶ σχῆμα 365 C προκείμενος 555 B
 προκοπή 571 E
 πρόκριτοι 537 D
 προληπτήσεις 584 C
 προμήκης 546 C, II 284
 προοίμιον 357 A, 510 C προαιδέλα 510 C al. See Index II Propaedentic Studies
 προπαρασκευή, the, in dyeing 429 D πρὸς. See Index III Prepositions πρὸς ταῦτόν and κατὰ ταῦτόν 436 B πρὸς τὸ γῆρας 552 C
 πρὸς τὸ πῦρ 372 D, 420 E προσγενέσθαι = 'to become also' 375 E, cf. 373 A, 607 B προσεκβάλλειν = 'to produce,' in mathematical sense 527 A προσέχειν = insuper habere 521 D προσήγορος 546 B, II 193, 293 f. προσήκον = 'proper conduct' or 'duty' 332 B, cf. 442 B: used with double construction 525 B προσθύνειν used absolutely 335 A προσίζειν 564 D προσκυνεῖν 398 A προσκυνεῖν Ἀδράστειαν 451 A προσλαμβάνόμενος φθόγγος 443 D προσοδιακὸς ῥυθμός 400 B προσπεφυκέναι 519 A, B προσπολεμείν 332 E πρόστασις and προστάσθαι 599 A, 577 A προστάτης τοῦ δήμου 564 D, 565 C, cf.

 572 E
 προστατική ῥίξα 565 D προστιθέναι, mathematical use of 527 A πρόστγμα 429 D
 προσφέρεσθαι where we expect προσφέρειν
 563 D προσφέρειν τὸ σῶμα τῇ ψυχῇ 494 B προσφύης = 'incorporate with' 519 A, B προστίθεσθαι 603 C
 πρῶτα γένη, τὰ (as in πρῶτῃ ὕλῃ etc.)
 581 C
 πρῶτον κινεῖν ἀκίνητον 509 B πρῶτον φίλον, the, in Platonism II 172 πταίνει πρὸς τῇ πόλει 553 B Πυθαγόρειος βίος 600 B πνυθμήν II 276. See also ἐπίτριτος πνυθμήν
 πνυθόχρηστοι 427 C πυκνόν, πυκνότης, πυκνώματα etc. in ancient musical theory 531 A πυκνός = 'close-grained' 510 A Πυρρεῖς 616 E
 πῶς βιωτέον, the, of Socrates 352 D πῶς δ' οὐ διαφέρει; 453 B

P

ῥαψῳδοί 373 B, 395 A ῥέθη in Homer 386 E
 ῥέποντε τούναντιον 550 E ῥεύσας unattic for ῥυεῖς 544 E ῥῆσις 605 D
 ῥητός, of rational quantities or lines 534 D ῥίφαντες τὰ ἱμάτια 473 E ῥύμματα = 'detergents' 429 E

Σ

Σάθων, Antisthenes' nickname for Plato
 476 D σαδράνιον ἀνακαγχάσαι, γελᾶν etc. 337 A σαφάνεια 478 C, 509 D, 511 C σαφής = 'clear' and 'true' 511 C σηκός 460 C
 σημείων πομπαί 382 E

A. P. II.

σιγαί τῶν νεωτέρων 425 A, B σιμός 474 D
 σκαιότης = 'ineptitude' 411 E σκευαστά 514 B: treated as less real than φυτευτά 515 C, 532 B, C, 596 A: Ideas of, recognised by Plato 596 B ff. σκιαγραφία and σκιαγραφία 365 C, 523 B, 583 B, 586 B
 σκιαμαχεῖν 520 C, 586 C σκολιός 506 C
 σκότιος 461 B
 σκύλαξ, with play on φύλαξ 375 A σκῶρ ἀείνων 363 D
 σμικρὸς commoner than μικρός in Rep.
 406 D
 σμικρολογία 486 A, 558 B σοφία 428 B al. See Index II Wisdom σοφίεσθαι, of the etymologising sophist
 509 D
 σοφιστής, said of a clever painter 596 D.
 See also Index II Sophists etc.
 σοφοί, οἱ, a way of describing the Orphic brotherhood 583 B, II 378—380 σοφός: a fashionable epithet of praise in Plato's time 331 E, 335 E: especially applied to poets 489 B, 568 A, and particularly to Euripides 568 A, who was himself notoriously addicted to the word ib. and 607 B
 σπέος ἡρωειδῆς 514 A σπεῦδε βραδέως 528 D
 σπονδῶν σύγχυσις 379 E σπουδάζειν) (παίζειν 599 A σπουδάζειν ἐν τινι 599 B, ἐπὶ τινι 599 A, πρὸς τινι 403 B
 στάσις. See Index II Faction στέγον, τό, with ref. to part of the soul
 586 B στερεομετρία 527 D ff., 528 B—D. See Index II Stercometry
 στερεός 348 E
 στιβάδες 372 B
 Στίλβων 616 E
 στραγγεῖσθαι 472 A στρατεία and στρατιά 468 E στύψις 429 D
 σὺ καὶ ἐμοὶ ἐρεῖς 573 C συμβῶται 373 C
 συγγίγνεσθαι 329 C, 560 B: in aor. = 'to meet' in social intercourse 330 C συγγνώμη = 'considerateness' 558 A συγγνώμη ἀδελφῷ βοηθεῖν 362 D συγχωρεῖν with inf. = 'agree to' 479 D:
 with two distinct constructions 466 C συζῆναι = 'married with' or 'multiplied with' 536 C, II 277
 συκοφάνται in Greek cities 553 B συκοφαντής and συκοφαντεῖν ἐν τοῖς λόγοις 340 D, 341 A συλλογισμὸς ἐξ ὑποθέσεως II 174 συμβιβάζειν = 'draw conclusions' 504 A συμβόλαια 333 A, 425 D (χειροτεχνικά συμβ.)

 συμμεμικώς 529 B
 συμπαθεία, medical 462 C: political ib. and 463 A συμπάσχειν 605 D
 συμπίπτειν = 'coalesce' 473 D: = 'chime together' 498 E συμπίσιον τῶν ὁρίων 363 C συμφέρων, τὸ τοῦ κρείττονος 338 D, 340 C συμφωνία, in Greek music 430 E, 432 A, 531 A, C, II 294 σύμφωνοι ἀριθμοί, the objects of true Harmonics, 531 C, II 159, 165—167
 σύν. See Index III Prepositions συναγωγή in Plato's Dialectic 534 B, II 173 σύνδεσμος 520 A: said of the light which girdles the heavens 616 B συνεπιστατεῖν 528 C συνοπτικός 537 C
 συνοράν 537 C
 σύνταξις 462 C
 συντονοιαστί I 202 f.
 συντονολυδιστί I 202 f. συντόνωσις ζῆν 619 E
 συνωμοσίαι 365 D
 Συρακοσία τράπεζα 404 D σύριγξ 399 D
 συσσίτια, in Plato's city 416 E al.: in the timarchical state 547 D, 551 B σύστασις λόγων 457 E σύστημα μονάδων, a def. of number 525 A συστοιχία, the Pythagorean II 274 n. συχρός 376 D
 σφαδάζειν and σφαδασμός 579 E σφενδόνη = 'the bezel' of a ring 360 A σφόνδυλος 616 C, D
 σchein ingressive 516 E, 520 D, 527 B, 565 B σχῆμα = 'outward show', 'trappings' 365 C σχήματα, visible and mathematical 510 D, cf. 529 C, D (σχ. ἀληθῆ) σχηματίζεσθαι 577 A σχηματισμός 494 D: σχ. τοῦ σώματος 425 A, B σχολὴν ἄγειν ἐπὶ τινι 374 B σῶζειν of moral salvation 417 A, 621 C, D σῶμα σῆμα 583 B, II 379 σωτηράς τε καὶ ἐπικούρους 463 B σωφρονίζειν 380 B, 471 A σωφροσύνη, Greek conception of 389 D.
 See also Index II Temperance

T

τάγαθόν 521 A. For its metaphysical sense see Index II Good, the Idea of ταμείον 548 A, 550 D
 τάναντία sometimes indeclinable 527 B τάναντία and ἐναντία 602 E τάσασθαι 416 D
 τάραττειν used absolutely 564 B ταραχή 577 D, E

 τάρτεσθαι εἰς 462 C, I 360 τάρτεσθαι κατὰ 555 A ταῦτη sums up a preceding clause 330 C: = isto modo 487 C τάχα = 'soon' 596 C τάχος, τὸ ἐν and τὸ γιγνόμενον 529 C, D, II 187 τε ἀνακόλουθον 373 B, 463 D, 522 B, 575 A τε: used to connect clauses 407 D: hyperbaton or seeming-hyperbaton of 427 D, 452 A, 465 E, 472 A τείνειν διὰ παντός 616 B τεῖχος, τὸ βόρειον, τὸ διὰ μέσου, τὸ Φαληρικόν 439 E τέλεος εἰς 360 E
 τελεταί 305 A τελευτῶσιν i.q. τελευτῶντές εἰσιν 552 C τετράγωνος αὐτός, of a mathematical square 510 D τετρακτὺς, the Pythagorean II 293 τετράπηχυς 426 D
 τετράφαται 533 B
 τευτάζειν 521 E
 τέχνη used of mathematical sciences 511 C, II 159, 164 ff. See Index II Arts etc.
 τέχνη, Stoic def. of 493 B. See also Index II Art etc. τέχνην λαβεῖν 488 D
 τῇ adverbial II 284 n. 2
 τι, the indeclinable 527 B τί ἀξιοῖς παθεῖν ἢ ἀποτεῖσαι; 337 D τί δέ; 332 E, 422 D, 425 C, 470 A, 515 B τί δ' οὐ μέλλει; 349 D τί λέγεις σύ; an eristic formula 339 D τί μάλιστα 449 B
 τιάρα 553 C
 τιθέναι 461 C: = 'bury' 469 A τιθέναι ἀνάγκην 464 E τιθέναι κατὰ II 81
 τιθέναι νόμους and τιθεσθαι νόμους 339 C τιθεσθαι τὰ ὅπλα 440 E τικτεῖν ἐν 496 A τικτεῖν τῇ πόλει 460 E
 τιμᾶν 415 C
 τιμαρχία and τιμοκρατία 547 C al. See Index II Timarchy etc. τιμὴ i.q. τὸ τιμᾶν 365 A τίνα οἶε καρδίαν ἴσχειν; 492 C τίνειν = 'pay for', 'expiate' 394 A τίνος, τὰ = 'relative things' 439 A τις: adds a touch of vagueness 328 C: expresses contempt 363 D, 381 E: sometimes conveys a personal reference 372 E, 504 C, cf. 518 B, 521 C: denotes individuality (as in ὁ τις ἄνθρωπος) 527 B: understood after verbal in -έον 611 C τίς and τις 544 C τίς κοινωνία i.q. τίνος κοινωνία 333 B τὸ αὐτό, ταὐτόν and αὐτό 525 A τὸ δέ=‘whereas in fact’ 340 D, 443 C, 527 A, D

 τὸ θεῖον ἐξαιρῶ λόγου 492 E τὸ νῦν εἶναι 506 E
 τὸ πάμπαν and τὸ παράπαν 425 D τὸ ποῖον and the like 460 E τὸ τοῦ Αἰσχύλου 550 C
 τὸ τοῦ Θεμιστοκλέους 329 E τὸ τοῦ Ὀμήρου 516 D
 τὸ τρίτον τῷ Σωτῆρι 583 B τὸ τῶν παιζόντων 422 E, 573 C τοιαῦτα, τὰ, used vaguely 536 A, 549 D τοῖνον=‘well’ 433 A al.: ‘also’ 339 D, 413 B, 424 C, 489 B, 514 B, 520 A, 564 E,
 572 D
 τοιούτον and τοιούτονι, used substantively, without τι 388 D, 416 B, 426 B, 429 E, 488 A
 τοιούτῳ τι τῆς ἡδονῆς 581 D, E τοιούτος used in place of an adj. 424 E, 468 C, 475 D, 530 A, 547 E, 555 A, 578 B, C, 606 D, cf. 443 C, 585 C, 608 A τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς πολλὰ καὶ δοκεῖ 576 C τόκος=‘offspring’ with a play on τόκος ‘interest’ 507 A τόκος ἐν καλῷ 403 B, 496 A τόπος, ὁ ἄνω 435 E
 τόπος ἐκ τῶν ἐναντίων 434 C τοσαῦτα 546 C, II 283
 τοσάσδε and τοσοῦτος with deictic force II 283 n. 2
 τότε καὶ 350 D
 τοῦτο δὲ recapitulatory 431 A τοῖτοισιν and τοιούτοι 330 B. See also Index III Dative case τραγέλαφοι 488 A τραγήματα 372 E
 τραγικὴ σκευὴ 577 B τραγικῶν, πρῶτος τῶν 595 C, 607 A τραγικῶς 413 B
 τραγωδία. See Index II Tragedy τραγωδοῖς=‘at the exhibition of tragedies’
 395 B
 τρέσαντες, οἱ, in Sparta 468 A τρίγωνον: a musical instrument 399 C:= ‘triangle,’ see Index II Pythagorean triangle, the τρίξεν of the utterance of ghosts 387 A τριόδος, ἡ, in ancient νέκυναι 614 C τρις αὖξηθῆς 546 C, II 278—282 τρίτη αὖξη. See αὖξη τρίτος ἄνθρωπος 597 C, I 363 τρίτος ἀπὸ βασιλέως 597 E, II 464 f. τριττὰ ἀπέχειν 599 A τριτταρχεῖν 475 A
 τριχῇ διαστατὰ II 271 n.
 τροπή, meaning of, in astronomy II 298, 306, 310
 τρόποι in Greek music 398 C, 424 C, I 204 τροφή, the, of the Soul 585 B τροφὸν τε καὶ μητέρα 470 D τροχός, an instrument of torture 531 B τυγχάνειν as a copula 369 B τυγχάνειν and its compounds with acc.

 431 C
 τυγχάνει ὄν=‘really is’ 337 B, 379 A, 444 A, 595 B
 τυραννικά, τὰ 577 A τυραννικός, ὁ 573 C ff. al. See Index II Tyrannical man, the τυραννίς 337 A, 338 D, 344 B, 562 A ff. al.
 See Index II Tyranny
 τυφλότης 353 C
 τωάζειν 474 A τῷ ὄντι=γενεῖα 343 C, 497 D (τὰ καλὰ τῷ ὄντι χαλεπά): ‘in the truest’ or ‘fullest sense’ 443 D, 474 A, 579 D: like ὡς ἀληθῶς, τῇ ἀληθείᾳ etc. frequently indicates that a word is to be taken in its original or etymological signification 511 B (τῷ ὄντι ὑποθέσεις), 343 C, II 305, cf. 526 A, 581 E

Υ

Ἵδραν τέμνειν 426 E
 ὕειον θηρίον 535 D
 ὕμιον θεοῖς 607 A ὑπακοῦειν=‘respond’ 459 C ὑπανάστασις 425 A, B ὕπαρ and ὕναρ 382 E, 520 C, 576 D ὑπαρτέον 467 C
 ὑπάτη, in Greek music 432 A, 443 D al.
 ὑπεξαίρειν 567 B
 ὑπέρ. See Index III Prepositions ὑπερβαλλόντως 492 B
 ὑπερβολή 509 C ὑπερηφανία 486 A ὑπερουράνιος τόπος 500 C ὑπερουσιότης of the Good 509 B ὑπέρπλουτος 562 B
 ὑπέχειν and ἐπέχειν 399 B ὑπέχειν δίκην 457 E ὑπηρεσία τοῖς θεοῖς 364 C ὑπηρεσία φιλοσοφία 498 B ὑπηρετεῖν ἐν τῷ αὐλείῳ 601 D
 ὑπό. See Index III Prepositions ὑπὸ χάματος 528 C
 ὑποάμοισος 548 E
 ὑποβάλλεσθαι 538 A ὑπογραφή 504 D
 ὑποδωριστέ 399 A ὑποζώματα, the, of men of war 616 B, C ὑπόθεσις 510 B ff. al. See Index II Hypotheses
 ὑποκατακλίνεσθαι 336 C, 420 E ὑπόκεισθαι 494 B
 ὑποκινεῖν, of mental derangement 573 C ὑπόκωφος 488 A
 ὑπολαμβάνειν=‘to retort upon,’ with dat.
 598 D

ὑπομέλους 551 A, B
 ὑπόνοια, of a hidden or cryptic meaning
 378 D
 ὑποπίνειν 372 B, D
 ὑπόπτερος Ἑρως 573 A ὑπορρεῖν 424 D
 ὑποσημαίνειν 566 A

Φ

Φαέθων 616 E
 Φαίλων 616 E
 φαλακρὸς καὶ σμικρὸς 405 E φάναι i. q. φάθαι 473 A, 508 B φανῆναι=εὐρεθῆναι 528 C, 602 D φανὸς 506 C, 519 A φάντασμα λόγῳ and φάντασμα ἔργῳ 382 A φανταστική II 158
 φάσκειν with copula omitted 538 A (τῶν φασκόντων γονέων) φαῦλος='a bungler' 361 A:= 'easy' (iron-ical) 435 C
 φέγγος and φῶς 508 C, D φέρειν 401 D, 477 E (εἰς ἄλλο εἶδος φέρειν):
 of making a move in draughts 487 C:
 with sinister meaning, as in ἀγειν καὶ φέρειν 574 A φέρειν ὄνομα ἐπὶ τι 462 C φηγοί 372 C
 φῆμη and φῆμαι 415 D, 463 D φθέγγεσθαι, of a lofty, sometimes oracular, utterance, 505 C, 527 A, 568 A φθορά, combined with γένεσις (οὐσίας—πλανωμένης ὑπὸ γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς) 485 A:= διάκρισις 546 A φιλεῖν='kiss' 403 B
 φίλη=ἐταῖρα 404 D
 φιλήκοος 548 E
 φιλόμουσος 548 E φιλόδικος and φιλόνομος, derivation and spelling of 581 B, 548 C al. φιλοσοφεῖν ἀνευ μαλακίας 410 A φιλοσοφία sometimes denotes any 'liberal' study or educational pursuit 498 B. See also Index II Philosophy φιλοσοφία μεγίστη μουσική 403 C, 522 A, 548 B φιλόσοφος, the word: its connotation in first four books rather moral than intellectual 376 B, afterwards intellectual more than moral 474 D ff., 480 A.
 See also Index II Philosophers etc.
 Φιλόσοφος, the dialogue 484 A, 506 E φιλοχρήματον as a synonym for ἐπιθυμη-τικόν 436 A, 550 C, 580 E, 581 A φλέγμα τε καὶ χολή 564 B φλεγματώδης 406 A φοβερὸν followed by inf. 451 A Φοινικικόν τι 414 C
 φοιτᾶν πρὸς 390 C
 φορά, a variety of κίνησις 530 C: see also ἐναρμόνιος φορά

φορά βάθους 529 C, D, 530 D φορά ψυχῆς τε καὶ σώματος 546 A, II 287 f. φρένες 386 D
 φρίκη 387 C
 φρόνησις, different meanings of 428 B, 518 E. See also Index II Wisdom φρόνιμον, τὸ πρῶτον 428 D φρυγιστί 399 A, B, 400 A, I 203 φύγαρχία in Athens 549 C φύλακες 374 D al. See Index II Guard- ians etc.
 φυλακή with objective gen. 547 B φυλακικός, with play on φύλακες 412 E φυλακτήριον 424 D
 φυλάττειν of keeping watch against 442 B φύσας τε καὶ κατάρρους 405 D φύσει, the adverbial 486 D, 515 C, 523 A φύσις, meaning of, in early Greek philosophy 597 B: often used by Plato with reference to his Ideas (e.g. φύσις τοῦ καλοῦ) 476 B, 501 B, 525 C, 597 B al.
 For other applications see Index II Nature
 φύσις, ἡ τῶν λευκῶν 429 D φύσις and νόμος, the opposition between 358 E ff., I 354 f., 515 C φυντεῦτά 514 B, 596 B, C. See also σκευαστά φυντουργός=φύσει-τι ποιῶν 597 D φῶς εὐθύ 616 B ff.
 φῶς πυρός 514 B
 Φωσφόρος 616 E

X

χαλαροιστί 398 E, I 202 f. χαλαρολυδιστί 398 E, I 202 f. χαλεπὰ τὰ καλὰ 497 D
 χαλεπαίνειν, passive of 337 A Χαλέστρα 430 A χαλεστραῖον 430 A χαραδρίου βλος 561 B, 584 C χαρίεις 405 D: ironical 602 A: with personal reference 452 B χαριεντίζεσθαι 436 D χελιδονισμός 398 A χελιδόνων μουσεῖα 398 A χιλανδρος πόλις 423 A χιλιέτης πορεία 615 A Χιμαῖρα 588 C
 χορεία and kindred exercises 412 B χορηγία ἀρετῆς 331 B
 χρεά, plural of 373 D χρεῶν ἀποκοπαί 566 A χρήματα χρήματ' ἀνὴρ 407 A χρηματιστικός with play on χρήσιμος
 559 C
 χρησμὸν λέγειν 552 D
 χρησμοδεῖν 586 B χρηστός, ὁ, contemptuous 531 B: with personal reference 479 A χρόνος ὁ ἄνω and ὁ κάτω in theory of rhythm 400 B χρόνος πρῶτος in rhythmical theory 400 C χρυσόχοεῖν 450 B

χώνη 411 A

χωριστά, of the Ideas 476 A: of τὰ μαθηματικά II 161

Ψ

ψεύδεσθαι τε καὶ ἐψεύσθαι 382 B ψευδολίτρος κονία 430 A ψεύδος: γενναῖον 414 B—415 D: ἐν φαρμάκου εἶδει 382 C, 389 B, 459 D: τὸ ὡς ἀληθῶς or ἀκρατον ψεύδος 382 B, 485 C.

See also Index I Lie etc.

ψεύσμα Φοινικικόν 414 C

ψηφίσματα 426 C, 558 C, 563 D ψυχὴ 435 A al. See Index II Soul

ψυχῆς τρόπος 449 A

ψυχογονικὸς κύβος II 293

Ω

ὦ πόποι 386 D, 388 C

ὦ πρὸς Διὸς and ὦ πρὸς θεῶν 332 C, 425 C

ὦδῖς 490 B

ὠνηταὶ βασιλεῖαι 544 D

ὦραι μηνῶν καὶ ἐνιαυτῶν 527 D

ὥς = 'than' after comparatives 526 C ὥς, archaic for ὥστε 365 D, cf. 337 C: in causal sense 576 D, II 373 ὥς with subj. after verbs of striving 349 C, with final subj. ib.

ὥς = 'that,' superfluous after ὅτι 470 D ὥς ἀληθῶς 343 C, 376 B, 400 E, 443 D, 551 E. See also τῷ ὄντι ὥς γε ἐντεῦθεν ἰδεῖν and the like 430 E, 432 B (ὥς γε οὕτως ἰδοῦναι)

ὥς δὴ and ὥς δὴ τοι 337 C ὥς εἰπεῖν and ὥς ἔπος εἰπεῖν 619 D, 341 B, 404 C, 455 D, 464 D, 496 C, 551 B, 577 C ὥς ἔοικε 347 A, 454 C: sometimes irregularly followed by inf. 347 A, II 373

ὥς ἐπὶ τὸ πλῆθος 364 A ὥς μὴ where we expect μὴ ὥς 579 B

ὥς οἶόν τε 387 C, 445 B

ὥς πόλιν εἰπεῖν 577 C

ὥς πρὸς ὑμᾶς εἰρησθαι = 'between ourselves' 595 B, cf. 414 A ὥς τὸ εἰκὸς and ὥς εἰκὸς 488 C

ὥς τῷ πλήθει 389 D

ὥσπερ and the like with a preposition in similes 414 E, 436 D, 520 E, 553 B ὥσπερ cum asyndeto II 381

ὥσπερ οἱ παῖδες 330 E

ὥσπερ ταῖς γραυσί 350 E ὥστε followed by participle 519 A ὦτα, τά, ἐπὶ τῶν ὤμων ἔχοντες 613 C ὦτα τοῦ νοῦ προσηγασμένοι 531 A

II. INDEX OF SUBJECTS.

The commentary is referred to by the pages of Stephanus. The appendices are referred to by volume and page, and in clarendon type.

A

Academy, the Platonic, at Florence 598 A Achilles, a Greek ideal 620 C Acquired characteristics, inheritance of 424 A, 461 A Acting, analysis of 395 D Action less true than theory 473 A, 592 A Actors, Greek 395 A, 568 C
 Adams, Professor 530 B, II 166
 Adimantus, passim. One of the heirs to Thrasymachus' theory 368 A, 419 A: raises a doubt as to the happiness of the guardians 419 A ff.: demands an explanation of the communism of the guardians 449 A: urges that philosophers in actual life are held to be useless or worse 487 A ff. In general, Adimantus' part in the dialogue is subsidiary to that of Glauco, who is the interlocutor along with Socrates in nearly all the most important passages Adversity corrupts the character 335 B
 Aeschylus quoted or referred to by Plato 361 B, 362 A, 380 A, 381 D, 383 A f. (?), 391 E, 395 D (?), 550 C, 563 C Aesthetics, Plato's theory of 595 A al.: see Art, the essence of etc.
 Age as a condition for office in Greek cities 540 A Age, the golden 545 C, II 295—302, 343 A, 369 B, 372 B, 379 C, 414 D, 415 A, 468 E Ages of Mankind, the five 415 A, II 296 f.
 Ajax 620 B
 Alcibiades 494 C—495 B, 519 B, 539 A, 560 D, 561 C, 563 C Alcmaeo 607 B
 Alexander, his visit to Achilles' tomb 470 C Allegorical interpretation of Poetry, the 378 D Anacharsis 600 A

Analogies etc. from the lower animals 375 A, 376 B, 451 C, 459 A—460 E, 466 D, I 355, 520 B Analysis, Geometrical, attributed to Plato II 178 Anaxagoras 378 D, 496 B, 500 C, 528 B, II 303, 584 D, 592 A, 607 B Anaximander II 303, 616 D
 Anaximenes II 303, 616 E
 Animals, psychical tendencies figured as 588 B ff.
 Antisthenes 372 D, 378 D, 476 D, E, 479 A, 480 A, 489 B, 495 D, 505 B, 535 C, E, 568 A, 595 A, II 378, 598 D, E, 606 E
 Apollo and his worship 427 B, C, 461 E, 470 A Appetitive part of Soul, the, distinguished from the Rational and from the Spirited 435 E—439 E, 439 E ff.: said to be the largest of the three parts 442 A, 588 D, cf. 379 C. See also Desire Archelaus of Macedon 336 A, 344 B, 364 A, 568 C Archilochus referred to by Plato 365 C Archytas 528 B: pseudo-do. quoted 530 D, II 173, 548 C al.
 Ardæus 615 C
 Arginusæ, the battle of 553 B, 562 D
 Arion and his dolphin 453 D
 Aristides the just 564 D Aristides Quintilianus on the Number of Plato 546 B, II 274 ff. al.
 Aristippus 489 B, 505 B
 Aristophanes: alleged connexion of his Ecclesiastusæ with the Rep. I 345—355, and 423 E, 449 A—473 E passim: other allusions to 529 B, C, II 185 f.
 Aristotle, passim: borrows a saying of Plato 510 B, 548 B, 595 C, cf. 338 C, 444 C, 505 E, 585 A: indebted to Plato in theory of Poetry and elsewhere 595 A, 603 C, cf. 606 B, 511 C, 518 E: frequently platonizes 586 E, 589 D, 617 E, cf. 518 E: does not believe in a Great Year II 304: his criticism of Plato's

- Number examined II 306—312, referred to 545 C—546 D: other criticisms of and allusions to Plato in his writings 369 D, 398 E, 399 B, 415 B, D, 416 B, I 204, 420 B, 423 D, 451 D, 457 D, 460 C, 462 B, 463 E, 466 A, I 346, 358, 529 C, D, II 160 (Plato's μαθηματικά), 543 A, 551 A, D, 555 C, 576 B, 584 B
- Aristoxenus 531 A
- Aristyllus I 348
- Arithmetic, Greek ignorance of 522 E.
See also Number, the Theory or Science of
- Army, divisions of the Athenian 475 A
- Art, the essence of, consists in Imitation 595 C—602 B: condemned by Plato on moral, psychological and metaphysical grounds, and banished from his city 377 D—403 C, 596 A—608 B, except where it conforms to high ideals 401 A—403 C, 607 A: traces of a higher estimate of Art in Plato's writings 472 D, 595 A, 598 A. See also Painting, Poetry, Sculpture etc.
- Art, the regal or political 410 A, 412 A, 428 D, 505 A
- Art, Stoic def. of 493 B
- Arts, academic sense of (as in 'Bachelor of Arts'), an inheritance from Platonic times 511 C, II 164, 167, cf. 495 D
- Arts, classification of 533 B
- Arts seek to promote the good of their objects 341 A—342 E
- Ascension of the dead to heaven 521 C
- Asclepiadae 405 D, 599 C
- Assimilation to God 380 D, 383 C, 501 C, 613 A
- Astrology II 292 n. 1, 293 n. 4, 305 n. 2
- Astronomy: practical uses of, insisted on by Glauco 527 D, E: condition of the study in Plato's day 528 E, 529 C, II 168: Plato's science of 528 E—530 C, II 166—168, 186 f.: the astronomical myth in the Politicus II 295—302: pictures of astronomy, half-fanciful, half-real, in the vision of Er 616 B ff.
- Athens: her empire a τυραννίς 337 A: the Rep. in some respects a counterblast to Athenian democracy 370 B, but also contains suggestions for its reform 425 A, cf. 469 B: economic state of, described by Isocrates 552 D: did Plato expect Athens to fall under a tyrant? 564 A: references to Athenian politics, life, manners etc. 365 D, 397 E, 424 D—427 A, 434 A, C, 462 A, B, 463 A, 465 C, 473 C, 488 A ff., 492 A ff., 494 E, 500 A, 516 C, 537 B, 552 D, 553 A, 555 B—566 C (democracy and the democratical man) and passim
- Athletics and athletic training in Greece, Plato's strictures on 403 E—404 D, 600 B: allusion to the history of 452 C
- Athletics and training, Plato's regulations for. See Gymnastic
- Autochthonous ancestry, legends of 414 B, D
- Auxiliaries, the, in Plato's scity 374 D al.: regarded as helpers of the rulers 414 B, as protectors of the people (in this sense including also the rulers) 463 B, 464 B, 466 A. See also Spirit, the element of
- Axis, the, of the Universe 616 B, C, 617 A

B

- Bacchylides 379 B al.: a possible fragment of, in the Rep. 460 E
- Bacon quoted 495 E
- Banquets, Greek 372 B, D, 373 A, 420 E, 573 D
- Barbarians, the: slaves by nature 469 C, and the natural enemies of Greeks 470 C: Plato's policy in regard to 336 A, 470 C
- Beans, the Pythagorean veto on 571 D
- Beasts, reason why their shape is prone 586 A
- Beauty and the beautiful, Greek ideas of 401 B, 494 C
- Beef does harm to the wits 600 B
- Being, different applications of the word, in the Rep.: sometimes untechnical, as e.g. 382 B, 598 B: of the realities of mathematics and mathematical studies 511 C, 529 C, D, II 159—161: of the Ideas 476 E ff., 485 A, B, 490 A, 508 D, 534 C, 582 C, 585 C
- Bendis, Bendideion, Bendideia 327 A, 354 A
- Bias of Priene 379 C: a famous maxim of 470 E
- Body and Soul, relation of. See Soul
- Body-guard, the, of tyrants and would-be tyrants 566 B, 567 E
- Books are inferior to the living word II 194, 599 A
- Brasidas 547 E
- Breeding-stud, comparison with a 459 D, 460 C, E
- 'Brother' and 'sister,' Plato's use of the words 461 C, D, E
- Brotherhood of Plato's citizens 414 D ff., 461 C ff.
- Browning, Robert, quoted 530 C
- Bugbears, the, of the nursery (Empusa, Lamia, Mormo etc.) 381 E

C

- Calculus, a hedonistic 587 B ff.

- Callicratidas 469 B, 470 C, 547 E
 Canons, theological, prescribed by Plato 379 A ff.
 Carneades 359 A
 Carthage, the constitution of 544 D
 Caste, the institution of 414 B, C Casuistry, questions of 331 C
 Catiline's conspiracy 555 D
 Cave, the allegory of the, explained and illustrated II 156—163, 179 f., 514 A ff., 517 A ff., 532 A—C: other references to 475 E, 508 D al.
 Cephalus, character of 328 B—331 D Chains, the, of Heaven 616 B, II 470 ff.
 Character: influence of climate upon 435 E: how it is affected by circumstances and environment 335 B, 618 B: represented as the music of the Soul 411 E: opposing elements in human character 375 C, 410 A, 411 E, 456 B, 503 C, II 79—81, 535 A Character, the Greek, a mean between the northern and oriental characters 435 E Charondas 599 E: law of, alluded to 556 A Chimaera 588 C
 Christian teaching, anticipations of 331 E, 335 B, 592 B, 617 E. See also Paul, St etc.
 Christian apocalypses, affinity of, with the vision of Er 614 A, 615 E, 616 A Christian polemics against Paganism foreshadowed 377 D Chronology, Plato's indifference to 364 E Chryselephantine statuary 373 A Chthonian Gods 366 A Cimon, his policy and party 336 A, 470 C, 553 A Cinadon, conspiracy of 551 B
Civitas Dei 592 B
 Classes, distinction of, in the Rep. 415 A ff.: interchange of 415 B Classes, the lower, in Plato's city 416 D, 417 A, 491 E, 590 C Cleanthes 451 C
 Cleobulus II 303
 Cleon, probably a προστάτης τοῦ δήμου 565 C Colour, art of working in 373 A, 378 C: Plato's theory of 507 D, 508 C, II 82
 Comedy, like Poetry in general (see Poetry etc.), is imitative 394 B, and stirs in us just those feelings which in actual life we should endeavour to repress 606 C: proscribed by Plato, ib. ff.
 Comedy, the New, frequently alludes to Plato and his school I 347 n., cf. 505 A, 524 B Comedy, Plato and contemporary 452 B, 457 B, 607 C al. See also Aristophanes Commonwealths, the degenerate 543 A—569 C: principle which regulates their order of sequence in Plato's narrative 543 A, 544 C: psychological basis of, ib., 547 C al. See Timarchy, Oligarchy, Democracy, Tyranny Communism, traces of, in antiquity 451 C, 457 A, B, 463 C, I 346, 354 f.
 Communism, the Platonic, remarks on its general scope, character, motives and aims 415 D, 417 A, 451 C, 457 B: community of life and property among the guardians 415 D—417 B: community of training, education and duties between the guardians, male and female 449 A, 451 C—457 B: community in wives and children 423 E, 424 A, 457 B—465 D Comparisons, Plato's love of 488 A. See also Index III Metaphors etc.
 Constitution, the, is the Soul of the State 543 A, cf. 564 A Constitutions of 1000 in Greece 423 A Constitutions, political, common ancient classification of 338 D: so-called mixed constitutions 548 C Contaminatio in quotations from Homer 389 E Contradiction, the maxim of 436 B, 479 A Contradictions in sense-perception a source of intellectual stimulus 523 E ff.
 Cookery. See Index I ὄψον and ὄψοποιική Copernican theory, the II 304
 Corporeal and visible, the, its inconstancy and changefulness 530 B, II 295
Corruptio optimi pessima 495 B, 563 B Cosmopolitanism, touches of, in Plato 427 B, C, 470 C, E, 499 C Courage: contrasts with temperance 399 C, E, 410 E, II 80: represented as a μεσότης 411 C: courage in war 386 A Courage as one of the four cardinal virtues 427 D ff., embodied in the City 429 A—430 C, 432 A, and in the Individual 441 D ff.: Plato's account of it explained and illustrated, ib. passim. See also Virtues etc.
 Creophylus 600 B
 Crete and Cretan institutions 452 C, 544 C al. See Timarchy etc.
 Critias 368 A
 Cross-references, more or less noteworthy, from one part of the Rep. to another 369 A, 414 A, 420 B, C, cf. 423 E, 435 D, 441 E, 497 C, D, 502 D—503 B, 504 A—D, 520 E, 543 B—544 A, 595 A, B, 612 C
 Culture, prevailing passion for, in Plato's day 495 D Cycles in the life of the Universe 546 A—C, II 290, 295—312

Cynics, the, and their doctrines 376 B, 461 B, I 355, 495 D, II 378. See also Antisthenes, Diogenes the Cynic Cyrenaics and Cyrenaic teaching 583 B al.
See Aristippus, Hedonism

D

Daedalus, the statues of 529 D, E
Daemons, or tutelary genii, the doctrine of 614 B, 617 D, E
Damon 400 B
Danaids, legend of the 363 D, 586 B
Dante quoted or referred to 491 D, 508 D, 509 B, 555 E, 568 C, 597 E, 615 A Date of action of the Rep. 327 A, 350 D, 368 A Date of composition of the Rep., indications of, real or alleged 327 A, 336 A, 410 C, 471 B, I 346, 353 f., 496 B, 499 B, II 78. See also Dionysius I of Syracuse
Death seems far away to the young 330 D: has no terrors for the just 387 D: various applications of the word in Book X 609 D Degeneration, political, its chief landmarks 544 A Delian problem, the 527 D, 528 B ff.
Delphi, the oracle of 427 B, C: one of the rallying points of Plato's panhellenism 470 C Demagogue, the 426 C, 488 A, B ff., II 157: how he develops into a tyrant 565 C ff.
Demeanour and manners, Greek ideas of propriety in 397 B, 604 A: Plato on the subject of 403 B, 425 A, B, 486 D Democracy, discussions on its rise, character and decline 555 B—557 A, 557 A—558 C, 562 A—566 D: its psychological foundation 557 A: how democracy was regarded by Greek writers 557 A, 564 D: other references to democracy 343 E, 488 A ff., and passim. See also Athens Democracy and Oligarchy, feud between 544 C, 551 B Democratical man, the, his genesis and character 559 D—562 A Democritus 528 B, 584 D, II 378: regards Homer as inspired 598 E: his view of the relation of body and soul 403 D Demos, the Athenian, figured as a ναύκληρος 488 A ff., as a mighty beast 493 C: a prince of Sophists 492 D: his proverbial gentleness 500 A. See also Athens, Democracy Desire: the psychological principle of the lowest order in Plato's city 369 B, 372 B, D: analysis of 437 C f.: represented in its evil aspect as a many-headed monster 588 C, a tyrant 329 C, in Clement of Alexandria a coat of many colours 561 E: the foundation, in one or other of its varieties and aspects, of oligarchy, democracy, tyranny, and the corresponding psychical characters 550 C, 553 D, 557 A, 558 D, 564 A, 571 A: desires attributed to the higher as well as to the lower 'parts' of soul 580 D. See also Appetitive part of Soul, the Desires, classification of the 558 D—559 D, 564 A, 571 A—572 B, 581 A Detergents 429 E, 430 A Dialectic, the, of Socrates 454 A, 487 B ff., 534 D Dialectic, Plato's science of II 168—179 and 510 B—540 A passim, esp. 510 B—511 E, 531 C—534 E, 537 D—540 C: its essential idealism 510 B, 532 E: its method 510 B, 511 B ff., 532 E, 533 C, 534 B ff., II 173 ff., II 191, and objects 511 B, 532 E, 539 B al., II 169 ff.: its permanent value in connexion with education and scientific discovery II 178: is regarded by Plato as the king of sciences 601 D, cf. 504 E. See also Ideas, the theory of Dialogue, the, considered as a form of literary composition 369 A, 412 B, 415 D, 595 A al.

Dialogues, the Platonic, incidental remarks bearing on the chronology and order of I 364, 505 C, 506 B, 523 D, 530 A, II 158, 174, 190, 583 B, 584 D
Diffidence of the Platonic Socrates 517 B, 523 A, 532 E Dilemma, the, sometimes employed by Plato 334 C Dimensions, the three. . See Index I ἀποστάσεις
Dio 496 B
Diogenes of Apollonia II 303
Diogenes the Cynic 495 D, 596 B
Diogenes Laertius, his epitaph on Plato 592 B Dionysia, rural and in the city 475 D
Dionysius I of Syracuse 499 B, 563 E, 564 A, 566 B—E, 567 B, E, 568 A—D, 576 C, 577 A, B, 579 B, 610 E
Dionysius II of Syracuse 499 B, 592 B
Dionysius of Halicarnassus on the character of Plato 598 D Dionysodorus 495 D
Dithyramb, the 394 C
Divination, psychology of 572 A Dog, the, why he is a philosopher 375 E, 376 B
Dorylaeus 617 B
Drama, Plato's hostility to the. See Comedy, Tragedy, Poetry

Dreams 571 C—572 A
 Dryden referred to 561 C
 Dualism, metaphysical 379 C
 Duty, the Greek word for 332 B Dyeing, the process of 429 D ff.

E

Earth, position of the, in Plato's belief 616 B: does it revolve, according to Plato? 617 A

Ecclesia, the Athenian 492 B

Education, the, of the Greeks 331 E, 376 E and passim: criticisms by Plato of Greek education 376 E—412 B, 491 A—495 B, 497 E—498 C, 598 D—601 B

Education, theory and practice of, acc. to certain Sophists, with Plato's strictures thereupon 518 B—519 B, 529 A

Education, as conceived by Plato: its power and importance 519 B, 521 C: final aim and object of 476 C, cf. 401 E: education in early childhood 450 C: preliminary or 'musical' education 376 E ff., instils ὀρθὴ δόξα 376 E, 430 C ff., and culminates in love of the beautiful 403 C; remarks on its general character, scope and purpose 376 E, 398 C, 400 E ff., 410 A, 411 E, 414 B ff., 424 E, 430 C, 504 D al., on its relation to the higher or philosophic education 485 A, 502 E, 521 E, 522 A, 536 D: scheme of higher education 521 C ff., based on ἐπιστήμη 485 A al., and culminates in knowledge of the Idea of Good 533 A al.; discussions on its originating impulse, aims, method, curriculum, scope and value II 163—179, 518 B, C—540 C passim

Education, a minister of, in the Rep. 412 A Eleatic school, the 380 D, 427 E, 436 D, 533 C. See also Parmenides, Xenophanes, Zeno the Eleatic

Elenchus, the 487 B, 501 A, 534 C

Embryo, development of the 546 B, II 291—294

Empedocles 364 E, 514 A, II 294 n. 4, 297 n. 4, 303, 607 B, 620 B

Ennius on the study of philosophy 487 C

Epaminondas 401 C

Epicurus and Epicureanism 358 E, 534 D, 558 D, E, 559 A, C, 560 C, 583 B

Epideictic discourses 498 E

Epimenides 364 E

Equinoxes, precession of the II 304 f.

Er: his name 614 B: the vision of 614 A ff.; its sources, affinities and historical sequels 614 A, 615 E, 616 A—E, 617 B; full of moral and religious teaching 614 B—621 D passim; presents us with a symbolical representation rather than a scientific theory of the Universe 616 B—617 A

Eratosthenes 527 D

Eriphyle 590 A

Eristic in the time of Plato 454 A, 339 D

Euclides of Megara 496 B

Euclides the mathematician 526 C: cited in the notes and appendices 525 A al., and II 266—289 passim

Eudoxus 526 C, 527 A, 528 C, 530 A

Eumolpus 363 C

Euripides 344 B, 487 C, 500 C, 607 B al.: his relation to the Socratic school 451 C, I 354: some features of his dramas 395 E, 604 E: doctrine of δαίμονες in 617 D, E: quoted or referred to by Plato 568 A, 607 B (?), cf. 395 E, 396 A

Euthanasia 410 A

Euthydemus 495 D

Evil is more abundant in the world than Good 379 C

Exaggeration, touches of, not wanting in Plato 530 B, 559 C, 563 C, cf. 557 A

Excessive manifestations of emotion condemned 387 D ff., 388 E f., 605 C—607 A

Exoteric and esoteric treatment of subjects 412 B, 415 D, 444 A, 577 C

Eye, the, figured as the Body's Sun 508 B

Eye, the, of Day 508 B

F

Faction (στάσις), in Greek political life 415 D, 462 A, 470 C—471 B: the seed of revolution, when it appears in the ruling class 547 B, 550 C—551 C, 555 C ff., 564 B ff.: presence and effects of, in the human soul 444 A ff., 550 A, 554 D, E, 559 D ff., 572 B—573 C, 577 C—580 A Faith and Reason, relation between, in Platonism 414 B. See also Index I πίστις

Fallacies and fallacious reasoning in the Rep. 333 E, 335 A, 338 D, 350 C, I 63

Family, Plato's conception of the 457 B ff. See also Communism, the Platonic and Marriage, Plato's conception of

Fates, the three, Atropos, Clotho, Lachesis 617 C, D

Fatherland, love of, in Plato 470 D, 574 B

Fish-diet 404 B, C

Fitzgerald, the Omar Khayyám of, quoted 514 A

Flute (αὐλός), the 399 D: legends relating to the flute 399 E: not a native Greek instrument, according to Plato, ib.: orgiastic in its effects, according to Aristotle 399 B

Flux of phenomena, the 479 C

Force is no remedy 552 E Foreign cults in Athens 327 A Foreign policy of Greek cities 471 B: Plato's foreign policy 336 A, 470 C, E
 Form and matter II 292, 506 B
 Form in Poetry 392 C—401 A Fox, the, in Greek literature 365 C Frapping, the, the nautical process of 616 B Freedom, moral, Plato's theory of 336 A, 395 B, C, 431 C, 577 D, E, 617 D, E Friendship and Friends 331 E ff., 335 A, 382 C, 387 D, 424 A

G

Games, allusions to 422 D, 487 C, 521 C, II 181 f.
 Games, the Olympian 465 D, 504 A, 535 B, 579 B, 621 D
 Genius bows before wealth 489 B Geometry: importance attached to, by Plato and his school 526 C: its method somewhat unduly extended by Plato to other sciences II 167: treatment of, in Plato's curriculum of studies 526 C—527 C, cf. II 163—168. See also Mathe- matical Studies
 Germans, the ancient 467 A Gestation, the period of 461 D, 545 C, 546 A, B, II 287 ff., 293 al.: varies with longevity 546 A, II 287: meaning of, when said of the divine creature 546 A, B, II 288—290: in the human creature 546 A, B, II 291—295 Glauco, his character, intellectual tendencies and sympathies 372 C, D, 374 A, 468 B, 509 C, 527 D ff., 528 E, 548 D: the inheritor, with Adimantus, of Thrasymachus' theory 358 E, 368 A: treated as a Platonist 473 A, 475 E, 596 A: astonished that Socrates should seriously maintain the immortality of Soul 608 D: reproved by Socrates 528 E ff., cf. 532 E. See also Adi- mantus
 Glaucus of the seas 611 C
 God, attributes of, according to Plato: goodness 379 E ff., immutability 380 D ff., omniscience 382 D, truthfulness 381 E ff., cf. 383 B: loves those most who most resemble him 501 C: God, not man, the measure 504 C, 506 A: philosophical conception of, as the Idea of Good 505 A, D, 505 B ff., 597 B, see also Good, the Idea of Gods, the: their images crowned with garlands 398 A: conduct of, cited to justify wrong-doing 377 E. See also Religion and theology etc.
 Goethe on the genius of Plato 486 A,
 I 167, on moral freedom 617 E

Gold and silver, prohibition of, in Plato's city 416 D f., 547 B: do. in Sparta 548 A Good, the: Greek conception of II 172:
 all men always desire it 438 A, 505 D f.: its relation to the useful, according to the Socratic school 505 A Good, the Idea of 504 E ff., II 168—179 and passim: the crown and coping-stone of Plato's philosophy II 170 f.: supreme author of the Universe, ib., 509 B, transcending both Knowledge and Existence, whose cause it is 508 D ff., 509 A ff., 586 E: the goal of all creation II 172, 505 D, and the ultimate object of all desire II 172: its relationship and connexion with the other Ideas I 362 ff., 510 B, 511 B, 534 C, II 171: in its religious aspect not to be distinguished from God 505 A, 509 B, 526 E, II 171, 597 B
 Good actions are rewarded even in Hell
 615 B, 616 B
 Good men are unwilling to rule 347 C
 Good name, a, better than riches 365 C
 Goods, classifications of 357 B
 Gorgias and his school 495 E, 498 E Government, a question of capacity and not of sex 455 D
 Gray, a mixture of white and black 585 A Gray, Thomas, his notes on the Rep.
 433 E, 474 E, 494 D, 495 D, 496 B, 499 B, 553 D, 567 B, 577 A, 578 C, 579 B, 608 D, 613 C, 614 B, 621 D
 Grey-haired children a sign of the end
 II 297
 Guarantees against abuse of power 347 D,
 415 D
 Guardians, the, in Plato's city: include both rulers and auxiliaries 374 D: their natural qualifications 374 D—376 C: education of 376 C—412 B: question as to their happiness 419 A ff., 465 D, 583 A: see also Auxiliaries, Com- munitism, Education, Rulers
 Guilds of Dionysiac craftsmen 373 B
 Gyges 359 C, I 126 f., 612 B
 Gymnastic, usual Greek theory of 376 E Gymnastic, in the Rep., includes training and hygiene as well as physical exercise 403 C: Plato's theory of gymnastic 410 C—411 E, 498 B: principles by which gymnastic should be regulated 403 C—410 A

H

Hades, Greek pictures of 386 B Handicrafts usually hereditary in Greece
 466 E Harmonics, the science of, in the time of Plato 530 D, 531 A—C: Plato's own conception of the study 530 C—531 C,

- II 164—168. See also Propædæutic studies
- 'Harmony' and 'Harmonics,' meaning of, in Plato 397 B. l.: see Index I ἀρμονία and ἀρμονίαι: in wider sense, harmony is a universal principle of Nature and Art 400 E
- Head, the, as the seat of intelligence 607 B, II 469
- Health, influence of climate etc. on 401 C, 404 A
- Hearing, the sense of 507 C
- Heart, the, as the seat of courage 492 C
- Heat associated with courage 387 C
- Heat softens iron 387 C, 411 E
- Hedonism, the creed of the Many 505 B: democracy and hedonism 557 A, D, 558 A, 561 C
- Helots, the, in Sparta 547 E, 549 A, 551 D
- Heraclitus and Heracliteanism 375 B, 377 D, 434 D, 436 B, 439 E, 479 C, 496 B, 498 A, 531 A, 536 C, 540 E, II 296 n. 6, 303, 584 B, 607 B, 617 D, E
- Herbert, George, quoted 588 E
- Heretics, categories of, according to Plato 365 D
- Herodius 406 A
- Hesiod quoted or referred to by Plato 363 B, D, 364 C, D, 365 E, 377 E, 390 E (?), 415 A, 466 C, 469 A, 546 D, E, cf. 328 E, 377 A, 590 D: remarks on Plato's text of Hesiod 364 C, D: a parallel to the myth of the Politicus in Hesiod II 296: traces of the Babylonian sexagesimal system in the Works and Days II 302 n. 4
- Hiero, a patron of poets 568 C
- Hipparchus the astronomer II 304 f.
- Hippias 511 C, 529 A, II 164
- Hippocrates, the oath of 341 C: parallels to Plato in the Hippocratean writings 403 C, 404 A, 405 D, 406 A, 408 B, 435 E, 444 D, 459 C, 462 C, cf. 387 C, 607 B
- Hippocrates of Chios 528 E
- Hippodamus of Miletus 496 B
- History and mythology, Plato's conception of ancient 382 D, 410 C, 414 E
- History, Plato's philosophy of 543 A
- Homer: Plato's deep-seated love of Homer 501 B, 595 A, B: he is the first of tragic poets 595 C, 607 A, and was universally regarded as the great educator of Greece 598 D, 600 A: extravagant claims often urged on his behalf 598 D, E: Plato's hostility to him on moral, educational and theological grounds 377 D ff., 598 D—601 B, 603 B—608 E: remarks on Plato's text of Homer 379 D, 389 E, 405 D, E, 424 B: Homer quoted or referred to in the Rep. 328 E, 334 B, 363 B, 364 D, E, 365 E, 366 A, 378 D, 379 D, E, 381 D, 383 A, 386 C—387 B, 388 A—D, 389 A, 389 D—391 C, 392 D, E ff., 394 E (?), 405 D, E, 408 A, 411 B, 424 B, 443 B, 468 D, E, 469 D, 501 B, 516 D, 520 C, 544 D, 545 D, 547 A, 566 C, 598 D, 599 B—600 A, 605 C, 606 E, 607 D
- Homer and Hesiod were considered the founders of the Greek theogony 377 D, 363 A: associated with Lycurgus and Solon 599 D
- Homeric element in Plato, the 501 B, 595 B
- Honour among thieves 351 C
- Horse-breeding in antiquity 460 E
- Human nature is essentially divine: see Man etc.
- Humanism, Plato's 470 C, E, 499 C
- Hunting, wide connotation of the word in Plato 373 B: used in its common acceptance 432 B ff.
- Huxley's opinion of Plato II 306
- Hygiene 403 C ff. See Gymnastic
- 'Hypotheses' (ὑποθέσεις), in the mathematical sciences 510 B—511 D, 525 E: in Dialectic 510 B ff., 533 C, II 174—179. See also Dialectic
- I
- Iacchus-day, the 560 E
- Idealisation of northern races by the Greeks 457 B, of Sparta 457 B, 544 C, 548 A
- Idealism, political, in the first book of the Rep. 341 A ff., 347 D
- Ideality and Truth 473 A, 502 D
- Ideas, the theory of II 168—179, 476 A ff., 505 A ff. and passim e.g. 349 C, 437 E: does not appear in the first four books of the Rep. 402 C: not a democratical philosophy 494 A: phraseology of the theory 438 B, C, 476 A, 479 A, F, 507 B, II 81 f., cf. 363 A, 402 C and see Index I αὐτός, εἶδη, ἰδέα, φύσεις: are the Ideas merely 'thoughts' of God or man? 597 B, II 169: predicates applicable to the Ideas 476 A, I 363: their political, moral and educational value 476 A, C, 479 B, D, 484 C, D, 490 B: classification of the Ideas in an ascending order or hierarchy presided over by the Idea of Good 511 B, II 170, 173: their relation to particulars 476 D, I 362 ff., 505 A, II 172 ff., 596 B: remarks on the theory as it appears in Book X 596 A ff.
- Images, place of, in the ontology of Plato 509 D f. See Index I εἰκόνες
- Imitation, the essence of Poetry and Art

377 E, 595 C: different connotations of the word, in Plato's Theory of Art 392 C, 395 D, 399 A, 595 C: cf. also II 157 f.

Imitation becomes a second nature 395 B, C

Imitative habit of mind condemned 394 E ff.

Immorality of the gods, its effect on human conduct 377 F, 390 B al.

Immortality, pre-Platonic conceptions of: in Homer 386 A ff.; among Orphic and Pythagorean circles 608 D, 611 A, 363 C al.: see Orphics, the teaching of the Immortality: Plato's profound belief in 498 D, 608 D, based on the conviction that the human soul is essentially divine (see Man etc.): connexion of the doctrine with Plato's theory of education 518 C: proof of, in Book X 608 D ff.: remarks on the underlying assumptions, method and scope of this proof, ib.: question whether immortality belongs to the whole of the soul, or only to the λογιστικόν 608 D, 611 B, E. See also Soul, the human and Transmigration

Individual, relation of, to the State, and the analogy between the two in the Rep. 351 E, 368 D, 424 C, 435 E, 439 E, 441 C ff., 442 C, 462 C, 543 A, 544 D, 548 D ff., 559 D

Individualisation of types in Plato 426 C, 476 D, I 350, 494 C, 495 E

Individualism in Athens 462 A Infanticide 459 E, 460 C, I 357 f.

Injustice, advocated by Thrasymachus 343 A ff., 348 B—349 B, and after him praised by Glauco 358 E—362 C: its true nature, according to Plato 350 C—352 D, 444 A—E: syn. with Unrighteousness 444 A: injustice is manifested both in political constitutions 445 C (see also Timarchy, Oligarchy, and the other degenerate commonwealths), and in the human soul 445 C (see also Timarchical man, Oligarchical man, and the other degenerate individuals), but the primary and fundamental form of Injustice is that of the soul 544 D: penalties of Injustice, both in life and afterwards 612 A—621 D

Inspiration 331 E, 342 C, 368 A, 493 A al. See Index I θεῖος

Intellect and Will, relation of 382 A, 518 C

Intellectual 'powers,' the 477 B

Intellectualis amor 486 E

Intellectualism predominant after Book IV of the Rep. 439 D, E, 441 E, 474 D, 480 A, 486 E, 518 C

International policy, the, of Plato 469 B ff.

Isaiah quoted II 163

Ismenias 336 A

Isocrates 380 B, 410 C, 426 C ff., 427 A, 473 E, 479 A, 480 A, 487 C, 488 B, C, 493 A, C, E, 495 B, D, E, 498 E, 500 A, B, 506 C, II 77 f., 526 B, 552 D, 565 C, 586 C

Italy mentioned by Plato 599 E

Ithaca, perhaps a name for part of the Odyssey 393 B

J

Johnson, Dr Samuel, quoted 610 C

Judge, the, a physician of the soul 380 B

Judges and doctors 405 A—410 A

Judging, method of, in musical and dramatic contests 580 A, B, II 373—376

Julian 508 A

Justice, current theories of, in Plato's time 331 C, E, 337 A, cf. 442 E: Thrasy-machus on 337 A ff., 340 C ff., 343 A ff., 348 B ff.: Glauco and Adimantus on 358 E—366 D: conceived as an art 332 D ff.: political aspect of 337 A: legal do. 338 E, 359 A, 433 B, E: later theory of, foreshadowed in Book I 351 D ff.: often synonymous with righteousness both in popular ethics 331 E, and in Platonism, where it forms the meeting-ground or unity of all the Virtues 434 C, 441 C, 442 E: three views of, in the Rep., corresponding to the three stages of the ideal city 372 A: first view 372 A: second or psychological view of Justice in the State 432 B—434 C, and in the Individual 441 D ff.: relation of individual and civic Justice 443 B—444 A: third or metaphysical view of Justice. 504 B, 611 C, and its relation to the psychological 504 B, D: Justice prevails at last 612 A—613 E, cf. 364 B, and receives the prizes awaiting her in the unseen world 614 A—621 D

K

Kepler, the laws of II 162

Kingdom of Heaven, the 592 B

Kingship, secret of true 473 D

Kingship and Aristocracy 445 D, 543 A Knowledge, passim. Infallibility of, acc. to Plato 477 E, 511 B: is of no avail, unless there be knowledge of the good 505 A: can always render an account of itself 510 C, 531 E: the philosopher's passion for knowledge 475 B, 490 A, B: various applications of the word in the Rep.:—used of practical familiarity with e.g. an instrument 601 D; with Socratic connotations 366 C, 409 A, B, D; in Book IV knowledge is principally a political and moral virtue, connected with conduct (syn. σοφία, φρόνησις, see Wisdom) 428 B, D, 442 C, 443 E; from 474 C to 541 B it is primarily and chiefly, yet not wholly (518 C), intellectual, and generally means knowledge of Being or Truth, i.e. the Ideas 476 C ff., 490 B, 508 B—511 E, II 170 f. al.; in this sense knowledge is the food of the soul 490 B, 585 B, connected with the uniform, immortal and true 585 C ff., the foundation of true or philosophic virtue (see Virtue). The Idea of Good or God is the author of knowledge, and the knowledge of God the ultimate aim and goal of all investigation II 168—179. See also Index I ἀνάμνησις

Knowledge and Opinion, opposition of 443 E, 476 A—480 A, 497 C, 619 C

L

Laughable, the, Greek ideas of 331 D, 509 C, 536 B: analyses of, in Plato 452 D

Law: theory of its origin 358 E: Plato's conception of 380 C, 519 D, E, 590 E. See also Index I νόμος

Law in the heavens 530 B

Lawcourts, procedure in Attic 348 A

Lawlessness a result of premature study of dialectic 537 E

Learning is recollection. See Index I ἀνάμνησις

Legislation in trivial matters never final 425 D

Leisure, philosophic 500 B

Leontius 439 E

Lethe, the plain of 621 A

Letters (γράμματα), illustrations from, in Plato 368 D, 402 B

Lie, Lies and Lying 376 E, 377 D, 382 A—C. See also Index I ψεῦδος

Life: traditional Greek views of 335 B al.: not always to be desired 445 A: ideal duration of, as conceived by Plato II 301, 615 B: legends about its length in prehistoric times 615 B

Life, the House of 328 E

Light 507 C ff.: its religious and poetical associations 508 A, D

Light and Truth 478 C, 508 C, D, 511 C

Limbus infantum 615 C

Line, the simile of the, explained and illustrated 509 D ff., II 84—87, 156—163, 534 A: other references to 508 D, 597 E, 601 E al.

Lion, the, is at once high-spirited and gentle 375 E: a type of θυμὸς 588 D ff., 620 B

Literature a 'noble pastime' 536 C

Liturgies, Orphic 364 E

Lives, different kinds of 539 A, 581 C, 620 C: the theoretical and practical 496 D, 520 C, 549 D Longinus copies Plato 573 E: his remarks on Plato's style and genius, see Index III Longinus etc.

Lot, the, in ancient democracy 557 A, cf. 561 B: in Plato's city 460 A, 461 E: part which it plays in connexion with transmigration 618 A, 619 D

Lot, the 'ancient,' in Sparta 552 A

Lotze on Plato's Ideas II 169 f.

Love, Platonic 403 A ff.

Love of the beautiful 403 C: of truth and knowledge 490 A Lovers, fantasies of 474 D ff.

Lucretius and Plato 474 D, 496 D, II 305

Lycanthropy 565 D

Lycophron, the Sophist 358 E

Lycurgus, constitution of 548 A, 552 A

Lyric poetry 398 C—399 E

Lysander 547 E

Lysias 328 B

M

Macrocosm and Microcosm, the 508 B, 546 C, II 294 f., 300—302

Madness 382 E

Man is a compound of mortality and immortality 588 B, a celestial and not a terrestrial plant, essentially human just because essentially divine 443 B, 501 E, 518 C, 523 D, 560 C, 571 B, 588 B, 589 D, 592 B, 611 E

Mantineia, the διοικισμός of 540 E

Many, the, Plato's attitude to 494 A, 499 E, 502 A, 576 C

Marriage, the Greek idea of 457 B, 458 E: rules and usages appertaining to, in Greece 460 E, 461 B, C

Marriage: Plato's conception of 457 B, 458 E: rules and regulations concerning 456 B, 458 C ff., 546 A, B, II 286 f.

Marsyas 399 E

Massage 377 C

Mathematical methods of reasoning, fondness of Plato for 427 E, 458 A, 509 D, 533 E

Mathematical studies II 163—168: their disciplinary and educational value 526 B, C, 531 D, II 167: depreciated in comparison with dialectic 533 C: method by which they are pursued 510 B ff., 525 E: their objects are the instruments by which God works in Nature II 162

f. al., see Index I θεὸς ἀεί γεωμετρειῇ, eternal, unchangeable and χωριστά, but distinct from the Ideas and intermediate between them and particulars 510 B, D, 525 D ff., 527 B, II 159—163, 187: elements of permanent value in this theory II 162. For the particular studies see Number etc., Geometry, Stereometry, Astronomy, Harmonics

Meadow, the, in ancient νέκλαι 614 C, E, 616 A, II 471

Mean, the, is the best 618 B

Measure, the conception of, in Plato's philosophy 504 C

Mechanical labour, Plato and Aristotle on 495 E

Medicine, the art of, in ancient Greece 403 D, 405 A, D ff., 406 D, 408 C, D: its connexion with Gymnastic 406 A: true place and function of, according to Plato 405 A—410 A

Medium, the, in sense-perception 507 C

Megarian School, the 436 B, D, 454 A, 505 B

Memory, the Water of 621 A

Menaechmus 526 C

Mendicant Friars 364 B

Mens pulcra in corpore pulcro 402 D

Meropos, the happy land of II 296 n. 6

Metals, the Hesiodic 414 B, 415 A, 468 E, 546 E, 547 A Metaphysical standpoint superseding psychological 449 A, 474 D, 504 B

Metrodorus of Lampsacus 378 D

Michel Angelo 518 C, 598 A

'Might is Right,' the doctrine that 337 A, 343 A ff.

Military service of Athenian youths 537 B

Milky Way 616 B, C, 621 B, II 470 ff.

Mill, John Stuart 458 D, II 161 f.

Milton quoted or referred to 343 A, 365 C, 399 D, 406 C, 421 A, 508 B, 519 A, B, 530 C, 534 D, II 163, 545 D, 546 C, 553 D, 617 B, E, 621 B

Mob-orator, the, a budding tyrant 565 E

Modes, the Greek, and their ethical effect 398 E al. See Index I ἁρμονία and ἁρμονία

Money, its origin and nature 370 E, 371 B

Money-lender, the, in antiquity 555 C ff.

Moon, the, borrows her light from the Sun 508 C, 616 E

Morality, a principle of pagan ('do good to friends, and evil to foes') 331 E

Musaeus 363 C, 366 B, E

Muses, the banter of the 545 D, II 306

Music, ancient Greek: literature concerning 398 C: remarks and discussions on 397 B, 398 C—399 D, 400 A, 424 C, 430 E, 432 A, 443 D, 531 A—C, II 187 f.: sisterhood of Music and Astronomy 530 D

'Music,' wider sense of, in Greece 376 E: Plato's scheme of preliminary education in 'Music' 376 E—403 C: relation of, to Gymnastic, in Plato's view 410 A—412 B, 441 E

Musical innovations have moral and political consequences 424 C, cf. 546 D

Mysteries, the 365 A, 378 A, 386 B, 508 D, 560 D, E, 563 C

Mysticism, the, of Plato 490 B, 508 D, 520 D, 540 A

Myth, Plato as a maker of 414 B, cf. 382 D, 410 C

N

Naming of children in Greece 330 B

Narration, simple and mixed 392 D ff., 394 C, 396 E

Natural, the, its relation to the possible 456 C

Nature, the Greek view of 443 B

Nature, the cry for a return to, in Plato's time 451 C ff., I 355

Nature, as conceived by Plato 503 B, 515 C, 523 D al.: the 'natural' city (κατὰ φύσιν οἰκισθεῖσα πόλις) is a city founded in accordance with the nature of the human soul, which is essentially divine 370 A, 443 B al. (see Man etc.): frequency of the appeal to Nature in the fifth book 451 C ff., 457 B: use of the word 'nature' to denote the Ideas, or true rerum natura 597 B al.: see Index I φύσις

Nature ordains that whatever is created perishes 545 C, 546 A

Natur-Völker 451 C, 457 A, B, 463 C, I 346, 354 f., 615 B

Necessary, the, its relation to the Good 358 C, 493 C

'Necessary' truth 458 D

Necessity 489 D, 493 C, 565 C, 566 A, 567 C: personified 451 A (as Ἀδράστεια), and in the vision of Er 616 B ff.: Orphic doctrine of Necessity, see Orphics etc.: place of Necessity in Pythagorean physics 617 B

Nemesis 451 A

Neoplatonism and Neoplatonists 490 B, 508 A, D, 509 B, 614 C

Neptune, the discovery of 530 B, II 166

New songs are the most popular 424 B, C

Nizámi I 127

Nolo episcopari 347 C f., 431 E, 520 D, E

- Non-existent, the 478 B
 Nought, no symbol for, in Greek arithmetic II 280 n. 1 Number of Plato's citizens 423 A ff.
 Number, the Theory or Science of (ἀριθμητική), forming the first of Plato's propaedeutic studies or 'Arts' 522 C ff., is discussed and illustrated from 522 D to 526 C and in II 163—168
 Number, the Platonic 545 C—547 C, II 264—312: literature on II 264 f.: not a nuptial but a secular number 546 D: its connexion with the argument of the Rep. 545 C: how it forms the setting of Plato's Philosophy of History 547 A: arithmetical solution of the Number II 267—286: exposition of its philosophical meaning, ib. 286—306: Aristotle's criticism explained and discussed, ib. 306—312 Numbers, three varieties of, according to Plato viz. (1) corporeal and sensible 525 D, 526 A, (2) mathematical 525 D, E, 526 A, and (3) Ideal 525 C, 526 A. For these and other applications of 'Number' and 'Numbers' see Index I ἀριθμός Numbers, various, their significance in Pythagoreanism II 267—318 passim, esp. 291—295, 299—302

O

- Oath, sanctity of the 443 A Octave, the 400 A, 531 A al. See Index I διὰ πασῶν etc.
 Oil in religious ceremonies 398 A Old age, Greek views on 328 E—329 D
 Oligarchical man, the, his genesis and character 553 A—E, 554 A—555 B Oligarchical party in Athens, the 489 E, 550 C, 551 B, 553 A al.
 Oligarchy, definition of 550 C: its psychological foundation, ib.: Plato's account of its rise, character and decline explained and illustrated 550 C—551 C, 551 C—553 A, 555 B—557 A. Other references to oligarchy in the Rep. 338 D and passim
 One and the Many, the 523 C, D, 524 E
 One in the Many, the 531 D, 537 C Ontology, the, of Plato. See Being Opinion and the opinable 476 C—480 A, 510 A ff., 514 A, B, II 157—159, 523 C: correct opinion or 'Orthodoxy' (in the Platonic sense) 430 B, 506 C, 619 C. See also Knowledge and Opinion Oppression of the rich in Athens 565 A Oracle quoted by Plato 566 C
 Oriental art 488 A
 Oriental superstitions in Greece 364 C Original sin, not a Platonic doctrine 571 B
 Orpheus 364 E, 366 B, E
 Orphic metaphor, an 546 A, B, II 290 n. 7
 Orphics, the teaching of the: on the body and bodily pleasure 583 B, 584 B, II 378—380: on morality, religion, immortality and the unseen world 363 C—365 A, E, 386 B, 514 A, 533 D, 608 D, 611 B, 614 A, C, 615 A, C, 616 A, 621 A: on Necessity and the Fates 451 A, II 379, 617 C: how they interpreted the story of the Danaids 586 B. See also Liturgies, Orphic
 Orrery, the heavens as an 529 D, E
 Oxyrhynchus, a papyrus of 607 E

P

- Pain is a κίνησις 583 D, E, a κένωσις of that which Pleasure fills 583 E, 585 A. See also Pleasure etc.
 Painting, the art of, in ancient Greece 501 B al.: its relation to Poetry, acc. to Simonides 597 E: Plato's treatment of the art in the Rep. 596 B—598 D, 601 B—603 B, 605 A, B. See also Statuary etc.
 Palamedes 522 D
 Panaetius 327 A, 609 D
 Panathenaea 328 A, 378 C
 Panegyrics on Athens 493 D, 562 C Panhellenism 336 A, 469 B—471 C
 Parents and poets 330 C
 Paris, the judgment of 379 E
 Parmenides 380 D, 476 E, 617 B Participation, the doctrine of: see Index I κοινωνία etc.
 Party-cry, the 493 B
 Pastry, Athenian 404 D
 Patriarchal discipline in Plato's city 465 A Patriotism, the sentiment of 413 C, 414 B, E, 470 D, 503 A Paul, St, parallels to Plato in 589 A, 592 B Pausanias the Spartan 547 E
 Pentathlon, the 583 B
 Perdiccas 336 A
 Periander 336 A, 566 A, 567 C
 Pericles 387 E, 410 A, 493 A, 557 A, D, 564 D, 565 C, 598 E Persia, hostility with 470 C
 Pessimism, Greek 379 C
 Peter, St, the revelation of II 297, 615 E, 616 A Phaedo of Elis 496 B
 Phenomena, the twilight of 508 D, 478 D, 479 A, 479 C, cf. 485 B
 Pherecrates, his 'Wild Men' 496 D
 Pherecydes 365 E
 Philolaus II 289, 293, 304, 546 B, 588 A Philosophers, the true and false: character of the true 474 D—480 A, 485 A—487 A,

- 489 E—490 E, 496 D, 503 A—D, 517 D, 535 A, B: his destiny hereafter 619 E: characteristics of the false philosopher, or pretender to Philosophy 495 B—496 A, 500 B
- Philosopher-King, the 473 C ff., 449 A, 472 E, 479 D, 487 B, 492 E, 502 A, B, II 79, 576 B
- Philosophic nature, corruption of the 491 A—495 B
- Philosophy: ordinary Roman view of 487 C: how it is regarded by the politician 473 E, and by the vulgar 487 C, 488 E, 498 A—C: said to make men useless and depraved 487 C, D: defence of, by the Platonic Socrates 487 E—497 A: how it ought to be pursued 498 A ff. See also Philosophers etc.
- Philosophy of History, Plato's, in the Rep. 543 A, 544 D
- Philosophy, Greek, απροπαιδεία εἰς Χριστόν 607 B
- Philosophy as the rival of Poetry 598 D: hereditary feud between the two 607 B
- Phocylides referred to by Plato 407 A
- Physical Science, Plato's conception of II 472—475
- Physical training, principles and rules of 403 C—405 A
- Physics, the, of the Pythagoreans II 270—272, 292, 299—302, 473, 474 al. See Pythagoreans etc.
- Physiognomy 474 D
- Piety, the virtue of 386 A, 427 E, 443 A
- Pigs, the city of 372 D
- Pilot, the true 488 D, II 74 ff.
- Pindar quoted or referred to by Plato 331 A, 359 C, 365 B, 408 B, 457 B (cf. 607 B), 460 E (?), cf. 337 A, 378 D, 420 B
- Piræus, foreigners settled in the 327 A
- Pisistratus 566 A, B
- Pittacus 331 E
- Planets, the II 168 al.: order of, acc. to Plato, and distances between their orbits 616 D, E, II 472 ff.: their names, movements and speed 617 A, B
- Plato, passim. Originally called Aristocles I 348: his early connexion with the oligarchical party 550 C, and subsequent abstention from political life 496 C, D, cf. 599 B: his visits to Sicily 404 D, 499 B, 502 B, 528 C, 577 B, and relations with the Syracusan dynasty, see Dionysius I and II: his other travels 455 C, 579 B: devotion of Plato to the memory of Socrates, see Socrates: testimony of Aristotle to the serene and noble character of Plato 354 A: nature of Plato's genius 486 A, 501 B, II 167 f. al.: Plato frequently finds himself in opposition to Greek sentiment and belief 451 C, 470 E, 600 A al., see Art, Poetry, Religion etc.: in many ways he is the herald of a new era in morality, politics and religion 470 E, 499 C, 592 B al.: always the prophet of idealism, political and moral, religious and philosophical 499 C, 501 B, 502 D, 592 B, I 166—170 and passim
- Play, relation of, to Education 424 E, 536 E
- Pleasure and Pleasures: Pleasure the summum bonum of the multitude 505 B: consists in replenishment (πληρωσις) 583 B, 585 A, cf. 561 B: innocent (ἀβλαβείς) pleasures 357 B: pleasures differ acc. to the part of soul to which they belong 580 D: distinction of true and false, pure and impure or 'mixed' pleasures 582 D—585 A, cf. 442 A: pleasures and pains of anticipation 584 C: all pleasures equally esteemed by the democratical man 561 B
- Plotinus 508 D, 509 B. See also Neoplatonism etc.
- Plutus, the god 554 B
- Poet, the, his nature, acc. to Plato: a θεῖος ἀνὴρ 398 A, a seer who works by inspiration 368 A, 598 E
- Poetical element, the, in Plato's writings 490 B, 528 E, 529 C, D, 530 C ff., II 163, 170. See also Index III Poetical elements etc.
- Poetry and Poets, passim. Influence and authority exercised by Poetry in Greece 331 E, 377 D, 568 C, 598 E: alleged deterioration of, in Plato's time 493 D: Poetry regarded as a form of imitation by the Greeks generally 595 C, and also by Plato 377 E, 392 C, 595 C—E ff., who interprets 'imitation' in his own way (see Imitation). Is metre essential to Poetry? 601 B. Varieties of Poetry, see Comedy, Dithyramb, Lyric Poetry, Tragedy. Plato a lover of Poetry, and especially of Homer 595 B, 606 B, although he feels compelled to condemn it on moral, paedagogic and religious 377 D—403 C, and also on metaphysical and psychological grounds 595 A—608 B: instances of unfairness to Poetry 390 E, 391 A, B, and of forced interpretation of Poets 331 E, 407 A, 568 A (see also 332 B and Index I αἰνῆτεσθαι): kinds of Poetry admitted by Plato into his city 607 A: traces of a more generous estimate of Poetry and its possibilities 401 B—403 C, 598 A, E. See also Aeschylus, Euripides, Hesiod, Homer, Pindar etc.
- Point, the, in ancient mathematics 526 C, 587 D

Polemarchus 328 B, 331 D
 Political use of moral terms 489 E Politician, the empirical 516 C, the true 488 D—489 A, 592 B. See also Philosopher-King, the Politics cannot be taught, thesis that 488 B, D Politics and Philosophy should be combined 473 C, D, 520 C Politicus, the myth in Plato's 545 C—547 A, II 295—302, 414 D Polygnotus 596 C
 Population, artificial restriction of 457 B, 459 E, 460 A, C, 461 A, C, I 357—360
 Prayer 364 D, E, 365 E
 Predication, the problem of 523 C Preexistence 476 A, C, 546 E, 592 B. See Index I ἀνδρυνησις Principles not persons 500 B
 Private interests apt to interfere with public duty 416 D
 Prodicus 348 A, 581 E, 600 B, C Prometheus 522 D
 Pronomus of Thebes 399 D
 Propaedeutic studies or 'Arts' 510 C—537 C, esp. 524 C—531 E, 536 B—537 C: remarks and discussions on the origin, sequence, historical importance etc. of Plato's curriculum II 163—168. See also Mathematical studies Prosperity improves the character 335 B
 Protagoras 365 D, 387 E, 414 D, I 352, 495 D, 600 B, C
 Proverbs, proverbial expressions, and the like 329 A, 330 C, 331 A, 336 A, 341 C, 343 A, 350 E, 362 D, 365 C, 377 A, 379 C, 381 E, 390 E, 414 C, 422 E, 423 E, 424 A, 426 F, 434 D, 450 F, 451 A, 457 A, 484 A, 489 B, 491 B, 492 C, E, 493 D, 497 D, 503 A, 505 A, 521 C, 528 D, 536 D (?), 544 D, 563 C, D, 564 E, 569 B, 573 C, 575 C, 581 D, 583 B, 597 E, 600 E, 612 B, 613 C, 614 B, 621 B Providence, the divine 613 A Psychological theory of the State 543 A, 544 D Psychology, popular 382 A, 387 C, 437 A, 572 A, 621 B Psychology, the, of Plato. See Soul
 Ptolemy the astronomer II 304
 Public opinion, tyranny of 492 A ff., II 76 f.
 Pulydamas 338 C
 Punishment, early Greek views of 380 B: remedial in Plato, ib., 405 A, C, 445 A, 591 B, 616 A Purgation of the 'inflamed' city 376 E—427 D Pythagoras 377 D, 473 D, 528 B, 546 C, II 379, 607 B

Pythagorean triangle, the 546 B, II 267—312 passim
 Pythagoreans, the, and their teaching 400 E, 415 D, 416 D, 427 E, 435 E, 445 C, 451 C, 526 C, 528 B, 530 D, E ff., II 164 f., 545 C, 546 A—D, 558 A, II 267—312 passim, 571 D, 583 B, 584 D, 587 B, II 378—380, 600 B, 608 D, 614 A—C, 615 A, B, 616 B, 617 B, C, II 473—475

Q

Quadrivium of Studies, the 511 C, II 164 f.
Quaerenda pecunia primum etc. 407 A Quotation wrongly ascribed by Plato to Euripides 568 A Quotations of Plato by ancient authors, seldom useful for determining his text II 183 Quotations from Poetry etc., some characteristics of Plato's habit in making 383 A, 388 A, 389 E, 405 D, E, 457 B, 468 D

R

Rational or reasoning part of Soul (λογιστικόν), the, distinguished from the Appetitive 435 E—439 E, and from the Spirited 439 E—441 C: identified with τὸ φιλόσοφον 441 E: is the smallest part of Soul 442 C, but divine (see Man etc.) and immortal (see Immortality)
 Rationalism, the, of Plato 460 C
 Realism, Greek 329 C
 Reason 518 E, 523 B—524 C, 527 D and passim: objects of Reason (τὰ νοητά) 509 C—511 E: actualisation of Reason by the Ideas 490 B, 508 D: its kinship with Being 490 B, cf. 611 E: Reason is the eye of Soul 519 A, B, the divine and immortal element in man 518 E, 527 D al. See also Man etc., Immortality
 Reciprocity in Plato's city 423 D References, real or alleged, to other Platonic dialogues, in the Rep. 347 E, 430 C, 433 B, 484 A, 505 C, 506 E, 532 D, 583 B, 611 B. See also Cross-references etc.
 Relative notions 438 B, 523 D ff.
 Religion and theology, the Greek, attitude of Plato to 360 C, 363 A—C, 377 C—391 E, 427 B, C: pre-Platonic protests against 377 D, 607 B Religion, the Orphic, condemned by Plato in some of its manifestations 363 C—365 A Religion, Plato's conception of 364 C, 378 C, E—383 C, 414 B, 427 B, C, 501 B, C al. See also God and Good, the Idea of Republic, the, of Plato, passim. Subject of the dialogue, 'Which is the better policy, Righteousness or Unrighteousness?' 339 B, 354 B, 367 E, 427 D, 576 C, 588 A, B, 608 C: remarks on its plan, method and structure 354 B, 368 E, 369 A, 372 D, 376 E, 412 B, 423 E, 435 D, 449 A, I 353 f., 358 f., 502 D—503 A, 543 A, D, II 177, 576 B, 577 C, 581 A, 582 C, 595 A, 607 B, 608 C, 612 B: Book I a προοίμιον to the whole work 354 B, 357 A, and Book X in some sense of the word an epilogue 595 A: motive for introducing the description of an ideal city 368 D—369 B: the ideal city itself progressively built up in three successive stages 369 B—541 B, see on 369 B, 372 D, 543 E al.: first sketch of a city-state, together with the first presentation of Righteousness or Justice 369 B—372 D; second do. 372 D—427 D, 449 A—471 C, together with the second or psychological presentation of Justice and the other Virtues in the City and in the Soul 427 D—444 A; third or philosophic City (543 D), together with the metaphysical view of the Virtues as self-existing Ideas, at once transcendent and immanent, under the sovereignty of the Idea of Good 471 C—541 D: some cardinal principles of Plato's ideal city 370 B (cf. 400 E, 442 D al.), 369 A, 435 E (see Individual etc.), 415 B (see Classes, interchange of), 473 C (see Philosopher-King): question as to its possibility 415 B, D, 471 C, 499 C, 502 C, 540 D—541 A: Plato describes his ideal city as a Greek πόλις 470 E, but in reality it is founded in humanism rather than in Hellenism, and the human is to Plato the divine 470 E, 510 B al. (see Alan etc.): in the later books he recognises that his city is in truth a 'civitas dei,' a kingdom of heaven, an ensample laid up on high 592 B, cf. 480 A, 499 C, 502 C: with the close of Book VII the description of Righteousness in the City and the Soul is finished 541 B: the description of Unrighteousness or Injustice, already begun at the end of the second presentation of Justice 444 A ff., is resumed with greater amplitude in Book VIII: progressive picture of Unrighteousness in the cities and souls of men, culminating in the description of the Tyrant, who is the incarnation of perfect and supreme Injustice 543 A—576 B: comparison and contrast between Righteousness and Unrighteousness 576 B ff., and Righteousness proved to be the better policy by a triad of arguments, political, psychological and metaphysical 577 C—588 B. The main thesis of the Rep. is concluded at the end of Book IX 588 A—592 B, but the latter part of X, dealing with the consequences of Righteousness and Unrighteousness hereafter, forms a fitting supplement to that thesis, and an appropriate crown to the whole dialogue 595 A, 608 C

Residues, the method of 427 E

Resurrection, legends of, in antiquity II 379, 614 B

Retail-traders and merchants 371 D

Rhythm, its nature, varieties and ethical effect 398 D, 399 E—401 A: in the wider sense, a principle pervading the whole domain of Art and Nature 400 E

Riches 330 C, 331 B, 407 A: their corrupting influence 373 E, 416 E, 421 D, 550 E, 555 C: the true riches, or riches of the soul 521 A, 547 B

Riddle, the, about the eunuch 479 B

River of Unmindfulness 621 A

Rossetti, D. G., quoted II 168

Rücker, Professor, quoted II 178

Rulers should rule for the good of their subjects 341 A—342 E, 344 D—347 E: various principles on which they may be chosen 412 B

Rulers, the, in Plato's city 374 D, 389 C al.: first account of 412 B ff., 428 B—429 A, second do. 502 C—541 B: their natural qualifications, acc. to the first account 375 A—376 C, 412 B ff., acc. to the second 485 A—487 A, 489 E—490 E, 503 A—D, 535 A, B: relation between the two accounts 485 A, 497 C, 502 D—503 A, 535 A, 536 C, 543 D: education of the Rulers, see Education etc.

Ruling is an art, and not an inspiration 342 C, cf. 488 B

Ruskin quoted or referred to 343 A, 347 D, 366 A

S

Sacred band, the Theban 468 C

Same and Other, the circles of the 617 C, D
Science, demand for its encouragement by the state 528 C

Sculpture and Architecture, Plato's attitude towards 401 B

Self-victory a source of happiness 419 A Semblance and Reality 363 A, 365 B

Sense-perception, analysis of 490 B, its relation to Opinion 523 C, in what way it stimulates Reason 523 C—524 B

- Senses, Plato's distrust of the 511 B, 530 B, 532 A, 537 D, II 166: instances of their deceptiveness 523 B, 602 C, D
- Seriphus 329 E
- Serpent, the, in Greek literature 590 B
- Sexagesimal system, the II 302—304
- Shakespeare quoted 349 E, 354 A, 357 A, 364 D, E, 402 D, 409 A, B, 411 D, 458 E, 462 C, 474 D, 489 B, 493 A, 496 D, 508 A, B, 529 C, D, 549 A, 552 C, 571 C, 573 C, 578 A, 579 E, 596 D, 600 B, 617 B, 621 B
- Shakespearian drama, an anticipation of the 395 A
- Shelley quoted II 173, 599 E
- Shepherd, the, and his sheep 343 A, 344 D ff.
- Sidney, Sir Philip, quoted 601 A - Sight, the sense of 507 C, II 82
- Simon of Athens 496 B
- Simonides quoted or referred to by Plato 331 E, 489 B
- Simplicity or 'singleness' in training 404 B: as a rule of life generally, see Index I ἀπλοῦς and ἀπλότης: a feature of Spartan life and discipline 547 E
- Sinners, categories of, in Plato 615 C
- Sins of fathers visited on children 366 A
- Sirens, the heavenly 617 B
- Skipper, the meditative 406 D
- Slavery and slaves 371 E, 465 C, 469 B, C, 563 B, 567 E, 578 E
- Smelting, the process of 411 A, B
- Smile, the, of the philosopher 518 B
- Social contract, doctrine of the 358 E
- Society, theories of its origin 358 E—359 B, 369 E
- Socrates, the Aristophanic, in the Clouds 529 B, C, II 185 f.
- Socrates, the historical: his divine sign 498 C: allusions to his trial and death 409 C, 494 E, 517 A, D: his attitude to democracy 489 E: together with his followers, often opposed to Hellenic ways of thinking 451 C: his relations with Alcibiades 494 D, E, 560 D: defended by Plato against the Athenians 494 E: his method 336 C, 375 A, 487 B, 501 A, 515 D, 524 A, 534 B—D: his teaching and doctrines etc. 333 D, E, 334 A, 335 A, B, 343 A, 352 D, 359 A, 360 C, 366 D, 374 D, 378 D, 379 B, 382 A, B, 387 D, 389 B, 395 A, 409 B, 412 D, E, 427 B, 428 B, 438 A, 443 D, 444 C, 450 B, 451 C, 454 A, 457 B, I 355, 489 E, 491 D, 505 B, 515 D, 520 B, 526 C, 530 B, 531 E, 534 B, D, 551 C, 577 D, E, 589 C, 601 B, D, 609 B
- Solon 473 D: a saying of 536 D: his political constitution 550 D, 551 B, 552 D
- Sophists, the, Plato's attitude to and criticisms of 337 D, 454 A, 488 A, B, 492 A, 506 C, 518 C, D, 529 A, I 157, 596 D
- Sophocles 329 D, 568 A, 598 E
- Sophon 451 C
- Soul as the universal principle of life 546 A
- Soul of the World 530 C, 531 C, II 165. See also Macrocosm and Microcosm
- Soul, the human, passim. A heavenly and not an earthly plant 443 B al. (see Man etc.), cf. 572 A: akin to the Ideas 585 C, 611 E: the principle of life 353 D, 608 D, 609 D: its function is to rule 353 D: its relation to body 353 D, 403 D, 457 B, 462 C, 585 D, 608 D: influenced by its environment 335 B, 618 B: when present in body, appears as tripartite 435 A ff. al., 611 B, cf. 602 C ff. (see Appetitive etc., Rational etc., Spirit, the element of), but has an ideal unity even then 435 A, 443 E, 586 E, 588 D, and the 'parts' of soul are sometimes represented merely as modes or vehicles of psychical activity, ib. 439 B, D, 572 A: in its truest nature, when free from bodily contamination, probably single and incomposite 611 B, E, 612 A: pre-existent 476 A, C, 518 C, 611 A al. (see Index I ἀνάμνησις), and immortal 608 D al. (see Immortality, Er)
- Souls, their number always constant 611 B: conceived as stars 621 B
- Space, the notion of 485 B
- Sparta and the Spartan character. See Timarchy and Timarchical man
- Spartan features in Plato's city 548 A, 374 A, 415 D, E, 416 E, 425 A, B, 451 C, 452 B, 457 B, 458 D, 460 B—E, 464 E, 465 A, 467 E, 468 A, 469 E: other references to Sparta and her institutions 361 A, 544 C, 547 B, 547 C—555 B and passim
- Specialization, the principle of 369 E—370 B
- Specie hoarded by Spartans 548 A
- Spencer, Herbert II 167
- Spheres, astronomical theory of 616 D, E, II 477
- Spheres, Music of the 617 B, 530 B, D, II 165 f.
- Spindle and Spinning 616 C
- Spindle, the, of Necessity 616 C—E
- Spirit, the element of (τὸ θυμοειδές) 375 A, 439 E—441 C al.: distinguished from the appetitive and rational parts of Soul 439 E—441 C: the source of Courage 375 A, and the psychological ground-work of the Warrior-class in Plato's city 429 A—430 C, as well as of the timarchical state and man 547 C, 548 C: the 'natural' ally of reason 439 E, I 271, 589 A: figured as a lion 588 A ff., cf. 620 B: some degenerate forms of 411 C, 500 B, 604 E Spirits, departed 469 A, 558 A Spiritual, materialisation of the 528 E Spiritual strength compatible with bodily weakness 406 C, 496 B, cf. 408 E Stadium, the 613 B

 Stage-machinery in Plato's time 396 B
 Stars, the circle of fixed 616 B—617 C Statesmen by 'grace of God' 492 E, 493 A Statuary, the painting of, in ancient Greece 420 C Stereometry, the study of, before and during Plato's lifetime 527 D—528 E: one of Plato's propaedeutic studies or 'Arts,' ib., II 164, 184
 Stesichorus 586 C
 Stesimbrotus of Thasos 378 D
 Stevenson, R. L. 500 C
 Stoics and Stoic doctrines etc. 332 B, 357 B, C, 443 A, 451 C, 461 B, 462 D, 479 B, I 360 f., 493 B, 508 B, II 193, 304, 571 D, 581 C, 617 D, E, 618 A, II 465 Streets, Athenian, congestion of 563 C Style is the reflexion of character 392 C, 400 D Style of Isocrates and his school. See Index III Plato etc.
 Sun, the, and the Idea of Good 506 E ff.
 Sun, the, an object of religious adoration 508 A Surgery, Greek 406 D
 Swallows in Greek folk-lore 398 A Syracusan luxury 404 D
 Syracuse, the dynasty of 473 D, 502 B al.
 See Dionysius I and II

T

Tartarus, Plato's conception of 616 A Teleological view of Nature 352 D—353 D, 443 B, 505 D, I 172
 Temperance: popular aspects of 389 D ff.: its relation to Courage, see Courage: Plato's account of the virtue in the City 430 D—432 A, and in the Individual 441 D ff.: its relation to Justice 432 A, 433 B. See also Virtues etc.
 Temptation, its educational value 413 C
 Tennyson quoted 457 A, 498 E, 501 B, 509 B, II 179, 191, 559 D, 571 B Terminology, the, of Plato 533 D
 Tests and examinations of the guardians 413 C Thales 600 A
 Thamyras 620 A
 Theagenes of Megara 566 B

Theagenes of Rhegium 378 D
 Theages 496 B
 Theatre, the, influence of, in ancient Greece 424 C Themistocles 329 E, 493 A Theodorus the mathematician 531 D, II 164 Theology, the, of Plato. See God and Good, the Idea of Theory is more true than practice 473 A, 592 A Thersites, a typical buffoon 620 C Thought is the conversation of the soul 400 D, 437 C, II 193 Thrasyarchus, Plato's picture of 336 B ff., 354 A, 498 C, D Thucydides and Plato 560 D Thunder in Hell 615 E
 Timarchical man, the: his genesis and character 548 D—550 C Timarchy or 'Timocracy' (the Spartan and Cretan constitution) 545 B ff. The name was probably coined by Plato 545 B. The timarchical state is the political expression of θυμός 547 C: Plato's account of its rise, character and fall explained and illustrated 545 C—547 C, 547 C—548 D, 550 C—551 C Timocrates the Rhodian 336 A Timotheus 424 C
 Topographical allusions 439 E, cf. 401 C, 492 C Torch-races 328 A Tragedy. The name in Plato sometimes includes Epic poetry as well as Tragedy 595 C. Tragedy is a form of imitation 394 B, twice removed from the truth 597 E—598 A: it appeals to the irrational and emotional part of our nature 605 C ff., and is capable of corrupting even the virtuous, ib. Plato's theory of Tragedy compared with that of Aristotle 605 D, 606 B. See also Poetry and Poets Tragedy and Comedy, one writer cannot excel in both 395 A Transmigration: in early Greek philosophy 618 A: Plato's doctrine of 617 D—620 D
 Treason, one of the three chief sins 615 B Truth, the plain of 614 C, 621 A Truth, the virtue of, an element in the popular conception of morality 331 C, 442 E, but not always insisted on by the Greeks 382 C: Plato's account of the virtue 389 B—D, I 201 f., 485 C. See also Index I ψεῦδος Truth, the word, often refers to the Ideas 474 D, 508 D, 525 B, 585 C Tyrannical man, the, is the impersonation of unnatural desire 571 A f.: his genesis and character 572 B—573 C, 573 C—576 B: misery and wickedness of 577 B—580 C ff.

Tyranny, origins of, in Greek history 564 A: views of, in Greek literature 343 A, 344 B, 544 C, 568 A, B, 579 D, cf. 337 A: Plato's account of the genesis and character of this last and worst of constitutions 562 A—566 D, 566 D—569 C: question raised as to what constitution, in Plato's opinion, follows after Tyranny 576 B

Tyrant, Plato's picture of the 565 C—569 C, 575 C—580 C, 615 D

Tyrtaeus 363 D, 386 A, 408 B

U

Unity, the, of Plato's city 416 B, 423 D, 432 A, 462 B

Universe, the organum Dei 617 E. See also Soul of the World

Uranus, the perturbations of 530 B, II 166

Useless studies are often useful 527 D

Utilitarianism in Socrates and Plato 457 B

V

Valetudinarianism 406 A—408 A

Vegetarianism 338 C, 372 B, C

Vice, the evil or disease peculiar to soul 609 B: vice is ignorance, and involuntary 366 D, 380 B, 382 A al.: for its leading varieties and its consequences, here and hereafter, see Injustice

Vigilance committee of Women 460 B

Virtue (ἀρετή) is self-sufficient 387 D, and free 577 D, E, 617 E: its relation to happiness 354 A, 580 A—592 B al.: conceived as excellence 353 E, as knowledge 334 A, 349 D ff., 549 B: sometimes regarded as a μεσότης 349 B, 486 A: varieties of, demotic or 'political' 430 C, 500 D, 506 C, 619 C, cf. 366 C, scientific or philosophical 430 C, 497 C, 531 E, 549 B al.: rewards of Virtue in this life and the next 612 A—621 D

Virtues, the four cardinal 427 D ff., see Courage, Justice, Temperance, Wisdom: traces of the doctrine before Plato 427 E: popular elements in Plato's account of them 430 E, 433 A, B, E ff., 442 E ff.: belong both to City and Individual, but it is the virtues of the Individual which are primary and original 428 D, 443 B ff.: question as to their unity 433 B, 434 C: their psychological basis 441 C ff., 443 B—444 A: metaphysical view of these virtues and its relation to the psychological 504 B—D, cf. 611 C

W

Wage-earning, the art of 344 D ff.

War: the natural condition of mankind 358 E: its origin 373 E, 586 B: Plato's regulations concerning its conduct 466 E ff.

Warfare, Greek, its method and usages 469 B, C, E, 470 A, D, 471 A Ways, the two, in Orphic eschatologies 614 C

Weak natures never accomplish anything great 491 E

Wealth, the object of the oligarchical state 550 C ff., 562 B: Plato's view of, see Riches

Werewolves and other legends about wolves 565 D, 336 D

Whewell, Professor, quoted 532 E, II 162

Wisdom (σοφία, φρόνησις), as embodied in the City 428 B—429 A, 432 A, and in the Individual 441 C ff. See also Virtues, the four cardinal

Wise man, the, will he take part in political life? 443 E, 493 D, 496 D, 520 C, 592 A

Women: their position in Greece generally 453 B, in Sparta 548 A, cf. 550 D, in democracies 563 B: views of the Socratic school on their capacities and work 451 C: Plato's conception of their proper sphere and duties in the various relations of life, see Communism

Words live longer than deeds 599 B

Words and Music, relation between, in Greek poetry 398 D

Wordsworth quoted 366 C, II 177, 560 C, 572 A, 598 A World, the: its creation 546 A, B, II 290: divinity of, ib.: its indwelling Soul, see Soul of the World

X

Xanthippe 549 C

Xenophanes 379 B, 380 D: his attacks on Homer and Hesiod 377 D, 607 B

Xenophon, alleged allusions to, in the Rep. 335 E, 496 B, 535 D

Xerxes 336 A

Y

Year, the Great 545 C, 546 C, II 290, II 298—310, 588 A Year, number of days in the II 301

Young men should not study dialectic 539 B

Z

Zeno the Eleatic 436 D

Zeno the Stoic 571 D

III. GRAMMAR, STYLE AND TEXTUAL CRITICISM.

The commentary is referred to by the pages of Stephanus. The critical notes and appendices are referred to by volume and page, and in clarendon type.

A

A fortiori arguments, grammatical structure of 374 B, I 64, 600 C, cf. 445 A

Accusative Case:—acc. abs. of participle 337 E, do. preceded by ὥς and gen. abs. 604 B: adverbial acc. 574 D: acc. of internal object, with ἐκλείπειν 485 D, with ἐρωτᾶν 564 A, with μεταβάλλειν 561 A: loose internal acc. of rel. pronoun 434 D, 443 B: acc. pendens 360 D: double acc., internal and external, after verbs of singing, praising etc. 383 A: do. with ἔψειν 372 C: double acc. with περιαιρέσθαι etc. I 127 f.

Active voice, idiomatic use of, as in φονίσσονσα παρῆδ' ἐμὴν αἰσχύνᾳ, 411 B, cf. 572 A (ἡσυχάσας)

Adjectives:—idiomatic position of, as in τὰ ἐν ὕδασι φαντάσματα θεῖα 532 C, 397 D, cf. 573 A: attracted into rel. clause 578 D: one adj. sometimes does double duty 530 B (ἀποπον first personal, afterwards impersonal): adj. and noun treated as a single notion 404 B, cf. 453 A: adj. supplied from preceding verb 501 E: adj.=copula and adj. 577 B: neuter of adj. used substantively without τι 368 A, 536 B

Adverbs, the comp. of, in -ως, a feature of Plato's style 343 E, 527 D: adverbs qualifying verbal nouns (e.g. μάλιστα κακουργία) 434 C, 532 B, 564 A: with γίγνεσθαι 344 C

Allegories 514 A ff., 588 B—589 B

Alliteration 515 E, 399 D

Anacolutha, frequently employed by Plato, in order to impart life and verisimilitude to his dialogues 495 D, 556 C, D: sometimes wholly ungrammatical e.g. 488 D, 538 B, 549 D: esp.

frequent in sentences introduced by ὅτι, the apodosis being left to the imagination 352 B, 465 A, 471 C, 493 D: common after τε, see Index I, τε ἀνακόλουθον: other instances of in the Rep. 365 B, 369 B, 399 B, 431 C, 440 B, 470 D, 487 B, 488 C, D, 491 B, 494 E, 495 D, 510 E, 519 A, B, 520 D, 521 A, 531 A, 532 C, 547 D, 549 E, 556 C, D, 557 E, 558 A, 565 D

Antecedent taken into rel. clause 350 C, 453 B

Aorist tense:—aor. in epic narrative or description 548 D: aor. followed by pres. 557 A: gnomic aor. 548 D, cf. 495 C: ingressive aor. 516 E, 527 B: aor. of momentary action 406 D, 462 D, 508 D: so-called 'timeless aor.' 429 D: aor. inf. with μέλλειν 491 A: aor. part. corrupted into fut. 607 D: aor. subj. corrupted into pres. subj. 568 E: do. into fut. ind. 540 E, II 409

Apodosis:—omitted 551 C, do. after ἐάν μέν followed by ἐάν δέ μή 575 D, do. after ὅτι, see Anacolutha: supplied by next speaker 577 B, 582 E

Apposition, partitive:—where τις is subdivided into ὁ μὲν and ὁ δέ 431 A, 463 B, 560 A: where ταῦτα πάντα is similarly subdivided 461 D: with a plural and ἄλλος ἄλλον 550 E: other examples of part. app. and analogous constructions 465 C, 556 C, D, 566 E, 578 A, 581 C, 591 E, 618 D

Archaisms 330 B, 533 B

Article, the:—its omission often adds dignity, elevation or poetical flavour to the style 518 A, II 272 n. 2, 604 D, 617 D, and sometimes has a marked dramatic effect 556 D: art. frequently omitted with names of musical modes

398 E, do. with abstract notions and generalisations 478 B (μὴ ὄν γε), 585 C (ἀνόμοιον, ὁμοιον), and elsewhere 401 D, 404 B, 449 C, 584 E: not always repeated with the second of a pair of opposites (e.g. τὸν φίλον καὶ ἐχθρόν), 334 E, 400 D: inaccurately repeated (as in τὸν δοκοῦντά τε—καὶ τὸν ὄντα) 334 E, 341 B, do. with rhetorical emphasis 611 E: sometimes added only with the second member of a pair (e.g. εἶτε ἐγγέλων εἶτε τῶν ζώων) 491 D, 438 C: wrongly added in MSS 510 B, 617 B: wrongly omitted by do. 577 D, I 324 al.: needlessly inserted by editors 532 A al.: separated some distance from its noun 396 C: generic use of 347 D, 510 D, 564 D: adds definiteness and precision 567 D: with participle=rel. pron. and verb 494 E: used with ref. to something already named 568 A, cf. 412 A (ὁ τοιοῦτός τις) 554 E, 561 E, or something presumed to be known 565 D, 614 E, 615 C

Assonance, Double meaning of words, and Paronomasia:—with proper names, Ἀλκίνοος 614 B, Ἀρίστων 368 A, 580 B: with other words, ἀδικεῖν δίκη 330 D, ἀναγκαῖος ('necessary' and 'related') 574 B, ἀνθεσι ἤθεσι 557 C, ἀχρηστος χρήσιμος 333 C, γήρας γέρας 406 B, γράφειν νόμους 501 A, δαίμοσι εὐδαίμοσι 540 C, ἰσονομικός 561 E, κελεῖον κωλῶν 439 C, κύβων αὐξή 528 B, λογιστικός 525 B, νυκτερινή ἡμέρα 521 C, ὀπλαῖς 586 B, παθεῖν μαθεῖν 337 D, παίζειν παίδες 536 E, 545 D, παρανομία and παράνομος (with play on musical sense of νόμος) 424 D, E, 457 B, τόκος ('interest' and 'offspring') 507 A, cf. 555 E, φέρωσιν λέγωσιν 487 C. See also Etymology etc. and Index I τῷ ὄντι

Asyndeton:—ampliative and explanatory, esp. frequent with ὅσπερ 497 B, II 381, and otherwise very common 329 C, 372 B, 378 C, 389 A, 407 D (cf. 409 B), 416 B, 617 B: with rhetorical effect, as in τὸ δεινόν, τὸ μέγα 590 A, 362 B, 407 B, 465 C, 488 C

Attraction: 342 E, 349 D, 386 D, 602 C: due to the influence of δεῖ 459 B, do. of ὡς εἰκε 347 A, II 373: attraction of οἶος 396 E, of rel. advrb. (ὅθεν for οὗ) 489 E: of nom. of rel. into gen. 465 D, into dat. 466 A, cf. 601 D: of dat. of rel. into gen., esp. with ἐντυγχάνειν 510 B, 531 E

B

Brevity and compression, instances of 339 E, 340 C, 436 D, 470 B, 490 A, 576 B, 598 E

C

Chiasmus:—in the arrangement of arguments 431 D, 605 C: in the arrangement of words 383 A, 390 D, 399 C, 450 E, 527 D, 536 B, 556 B, 569 B

Colloquialisms in word and idiom 400 E, 492 C, 506 B, 510 B, 535 B, 556 D

Comparative:—sometimes merely points a contrast, as in γυναικῶν θηλυτεράων, 522 A: double comp. 362 C

Comparison becoming identification 485 D

Concord:—of case: acc. of participle after dat. 362 A, 386 C, 414 A; nom. of participle after acc. 488 D: of gender: fem. (referring to φύσις) after ἦθος 563 E; masc. after ἦθος 563 D; neuter agreeing with fem. substantive 403 A, cf. 427 D, 449 D: of number: dual combined with plural 395 A, 614 C, 478 A; dual combined with sing. 473 D; sing. adj. after neuter plural 374 C; plural adj. after neuter sing. (τὸ τῶν θηρίων) 563 C; sing. verb (ἔστι, γίγνηται) with plural subject or subjects 462 E, 363 A; plural verb with neuter plural 353 B, 462 E: sing. passing into plural 344 B, 408 B, 491 B, 500 C, 554 A, C, 605 D: plural passing into sing. 347 A, 389 C, 408 B, 411 C, 413 E, 426 A, C (ἀποθανομένους ὅς), 566 D, 463 D, 484 D (?), 496 D, 501 D, 558 D, 578 D, 591 A, 601 D, 604 D, cf. 366 A

Concrete for abstract, use of 365 C, 382 D, cf. 589 A Construction, change of 466 C, E, 590 D. See also Anacolutha

Constructions of verbs etc. See Index I, under the respective verbs etc.

Copula, the:—involved in a participle 527 B (γιγνομένου=ὄντος γιγνομένου), cf. 387 C: omission of, rare in relative clauses 521 B, and rare with 1st pers. sing. and plural 499 C, commonest in 3rd pers. pres. 381 C, 399 D, 552 D, 563 B, 567 C, 615 A, 358 D (εἰ σοι βουλομένῳ): frequent omission of εἶναι 374 A, 610 C, 378 C, 435 E, 451 A (with ἐλπίζειν='fancy'), 504 E, 538 A (with φάσκων), 604 B, 608 E: ὦν omitted 515 D: rare omission of ἦ 358 D (ἐὰν ὑμῖν ἡδομένοις), 370 E (ὦν ἂν αὐτοῖς χρεῖα), 416 D (ἂν μὴ πᾶσα ἀνάγκη), and of ἦν 503 B, 484 A (εἰ—μὴ πολλὰ τὰ λαίπ'α)

D

Dative case:—dat. in -οισι, common in Plato 330 B, sometimes perhaps with dramatic motive, ib., cf. 560 E: adverbial dat. 552 E: dat. after ὕμνος 607 A: dat. of amount of difference with compar. 373 E, 507 E, 579 C: dat. of author quoted 389 E (Ὀμήρῳ = apud Homerum): dat. of cause 442 B, cf. 554 C: ethic dat. 343 A, 394 C, 546 D: dat. with inf. 602 E: instrumental dat. 601 A: dat. meaning 'in respect of' 575 C: dat. of person judging 600 E: possessive dat. 334 E: dat. of principle of classification 509 D, do. with τετάχθαι 555 A: quasi-local dat. 395 A (κωμωδοῖς and τραγωδοῖς): dat. with ἀναμετρεῖν 531 A

Dependent sentence passing into independent 357 B, 412 D, 492 C, 505 D, 511 C

Dionysius on the style of Plato 559 D, cf. 598 D and 327 A Dual number, the: form of, in gen. fem. of adjectives of 1st declension 422 E, 587 B, do. in nom. dual of εἶδος etc. 572 A. See also Concord, Manuscripts etc.

E

Elevation of style and sentiment (ὕψος in Longinus' sense of the word), remarks on, 486 A, 527 D, 545 D, 559 D, 617 D, E: examples of, in the Rep. 399 A—C, 401 A—403 C, 427 C, 431 E—432 A, 443 D—444 A, 490 A, B, 496 C—E, 498 D, E, 499 C, 500 C, 500 E—502 B, 505 D, E, 518 E—519 B, 527 D, E, 529 C, D, 588 A—592 B, 614 A—621 D esp. 617 D, E

Emendations:—examined and criticised passim: adopted in the text, see Readings etc.

Emphasis, passim: with dramatic motive 329 C, 331 A: secured by alliteration 515 E, by order of words 390 B, 424 D, by rhetorical amplification 331 D, 350 A, 351 A, by repetition of a word or reduplication of an idea 604 B, 433 A

Epexegesis 407 B, C, 416 A, 437 B, 443 B, 450 B, 598 B

Epigram and epigrammatic effects 333 C, 406 E, 531 A, 555 A, 565 A

Epithet, transferred 339 A, cf. 616 E

Etymology and the etymological figure employed or relied upon by Plato to accentuate or justify his use of a word, or to lend emphasis and point to an argument or assertion:—430 B (χαλεστραίων perh. with ref. to χαλάν), 489 B (ἄχρηστία and μὴ χρῆσθαι), 501 B (ἀνδρείκελον, 504 C (μέτρον and μετρίως), 511 D (δίανοια with ref. to διὰ and νοῦς), 531 B (πληκτρον and πληγαί), 555 A (ὀλιγαρχικῶς), 558 E (ἀνάγκη and ἀναγκαῖος), 559 C (χρηματιστικός and χρήσιμος), 577 D (ἀνελευθερία), 596 D (ποιητής), 597 D (φυτουργός), 600 B (Κρέφυλος), 602 E (λογιστικός), 607 A (ἡδονμένη and ἡδονή), 616 D (ἡλακότη and ἐληλάσθαι), 620 E (Λάχεσις and λαχεῖν, Ἄτροπος and ἀμετάστροφος, Κλωθώ and ἐπικλώθειν). See also Assonance etc. and Index I οὐρανός, τῷ ὄντι.

Euphemism 460 C, 574 D

F

Figures, rhetorical and stylistic:—ἀναφορά and διατύπωσις 590 A: παρίστωσις and παρομοίωσις 495 E, 498 E, II 77: the σχῆμα ἐκ παραλλήλου 358 A, 501 C

Formality in style and diction 399 C, 426 C, 437 D, 457 C, 526 A Future perfect tense 494 B

Future tense:—with ἄν, see Index I ἄν: fut. ind. after ὅπως in semi-final clauses 460 D; do. after verbs of fearing 451 A; do. in ὅπως μοι μὴ ἐρεῖσι and the like 336 D: fut. inf. after οἷός τε εἰμι and the like I 128: fut. opt.=fut. ind. of or. recta 393 E, 416 C: fut. corrupted into pres. 342 A, 494 D, 591 C, 604 A; fut. part. corrupted into aor. part. I 331: fut. ind. corrupted into aor. subj. 460 D, I 319, cf. II 119

G

Geddes, James, on the style of Plato 595 B

Genitive case:—Ionic form of, in Ionic name 600 A (Θάλεω): do., in paraphrasing Homer 390 E (μήνιος): accumulation of genitives 449 A, 525 C, 527 D, 544 D, 551 C, 560 A: gen. abs. 327 C, 409 D, 496 D, 558 A, 604 E: do., of participle, where we expect nom. 458 D, 586 D, where we expect dat. 459 C, 590 D, where we expect acc. 538 D, 590 D: gen. with ἀπολαύειν 395 C, βίᾳ 554 C, ἐπόμενος 504 B, κρατεῖσθαι 455 D, πεινᾶν 521 A: gen. of definition 437 D: gen. to express connexion or relation 597 D, E: exclamatory gen. 509 C: gen. with verbs of missing 334 D: partitive gen. 328 E (χαλεπὸν τοῦ βίου), 431 B, 436 D, 496 C, 516 C, 543 A: do. with ellipse of τι, as in κινήσειεν ἄν τῶν νόμων 445 E, 344 B, 485 B: gen. to express penalty 558 A: gen.=περί with gen. 470 A, 576 D: possessive gen. 433 E, cf. 473 D: gen. of reflexive pronoun with ἔχειν and adverb 571 D: subjective gen. 387 D, II 313: subj. and obj. gen. combined

537 C. A difficult instance of use of gen. 507 E

H

Hendiadys 328 C, 429 E, 558 A Hyperbaton 391 D, 472 A, 488 A, 492 A, 564 A, 581 C, D, E, see also on 452 B, 490 D, 531 E: hyperb. of τε 452 A, 465 E

I

Iambics in prose 621 B

Imperfect tense:—as in ἔδει ἐχρῆν etc.
504 B: imperf. of continuous or habitual action 349 A, 461 D: in recapitulation 572 D: so-called 'philosophic imperfect' 353 B, cf. 441 D, 477 A, 490 A, C, 522 A:
other uses of the imperf., sometimes inaccurately described as 'philosophic' 406 E, 436 C, 442 C, 497 C, 609 B, 613 A: imperf. with ἄν 427 A Indicative mood: past tense of, with ὅπως 378 A: ind. followed by opt. and ind. in successive clauses of condition 505 A, B: ind. combined with opt. in or. obl. 515 D: ind. corrupted into subj.

454 E, 508 C, 550 A, 553 C, II 390: do. into opt. 585 A, 615 D. See also Future tense

Infinitive:—with the article 347 D: with λαθεῖν II 62: sometimes ἀνακλόουθον, following ὅτι 501 A: with φοβερὸν 451 A: final inf. with gen. of article 518 D:
inf. for imperative 473 A, 508 B, 509 B: imperf. inf. 340 E: inf. after οἷος 351 E:
inf. of purpose 466 E, 605 A, cf. 468 A, 504 B: perf. inf. with ἄν 516 D: accumulation of infinitives 358 E

Innuendo 579 A

Interlocutors, change of, marking a new departure 576 B

Interruptions, dramatic, sometimes ignored by the Platonic Socrates 460 E, 549 C, 567 E

Irony 568 A, II 313 and passim: helped out by ἄρα 455 E, by ἴσως 423 C, by ὡς εἰκεν 454 C: Socratic irony 450 C—451 B, 457 E—458 A, 506 C, D

L

Litotes 497 D

Longinus περὶ ὑψους 530 B, 537 A, 549 D, 559 B, 560 B: on metaphor 527 D: on rhetorical asyndeton 590 A: on the style of Plato 559 D, 595 B

M

Manuscripts, the, of the Republic: I xiii ff. and passim. Schanz's theory as to the archetype of our MSS II 478

Manuscripts, errors of, exemplified:—

Accents, breathings etc. misplaced:—

ἀλλ' for ἀλλ' II 434, cf. II 435

ἄλλα f. ἀλλά II 62

ἄν f. ἄν 606 C

ἀποκρίνοιο f. -ινοῖο I 26

ἀποκρίνοιο f. -ινοῖο I 26

αὐτῇ f. αὐτῇ I 25, 44, 307, II 407

αὐτῇ f. αὐτῇ I 36, II 96

αὐτοῦ f. αὐτοῦ and conversely, passim

γενναῖα f. γενναῖα II 238

ἐν f. ἐν II 117

ἐξαιρωμεν f. -ῶμεν II 22, cf. II 258

ῆ f. ῆ II 45, f. ῆ I 182, f. ῆ I 49

ῆ f. ῆ I 178, II 239

ἔκταρ f. ἔκταρ II 329

λοῦ λοῦ f. λοῦ λοῦ I 238

καταπατήσας f. -ήσας II 237

κρατῶν f. κράτων 607 C

οἱ f. οἱ II 104

οῖον f. οῖον II 144

οὐ f. οὐ II 119

οὐδέν f. οὐδέν I 262

οὔτοι f. οὐ τοι I 8

πéρι f. περί I 81

πόθεν i. ποθέν I 224

ποῖ f. ποῖ I 8

σιδηροῦ ἀργυρῶ f. -ήρου -ύρω II 209

σκυτοτόμων f. -τομῶν I 105

ταῦτά f. ταῦτα I 276, II 90

ταῦτα f. ταῦτά I 319

τί f. τι II 43

τι f. τί 530 C

τίς f. τις 502 A

τῶ f. τῷ I 241, II 102

ψευδέσιν f. ψεύδεσιν I 110

ὦν f. ὦν I 142

ὠφέλει f. ὠφέλει I 263

Accommodation, assimilation, attraction etc., whether accidental or deliberate:—

ἀδικούμενον f. -ούμενα II 40

αἰσθόμενον f. -όμενος 538 B

ἄλλου f. ἄλλον I 141

ἀπειργάσατο f. -άσαντο 550 E ἀποκρινάμενον f. -αμένον 538 D

αὐτῇ f. αὐτῇ I 228

αὐτοῦ f. αὐτοῦ II 89

αὐτόχειρας f. αὐτόχειρος 615 C αὐτῶ f. αὐτῶν II 219

γεγονυῖαν f. -υῖας I 228

γενομένων and γενομένου f. γενομένου

I 187, cf. 496 C

γινωσκομένης f. -ἐνην II 61

δέοι f. δέη (after ὅταν written ὅτ' ἄν) I 17 διεξελεύοντες f. -όντος 484 A ἐγγενόμενοι i. -όμενος I 268

εἰδωλοποιούντι f. -οὔντα 605 C ἐκάστος f. ἐκάστας II 22 ἐκείνης f. ἐκείνου I 60 ἐκείνου f. ἐκείνα I 303 ἐνί f. ἐνός I 259

 ἐπαισχυνόμενος f. -ένας II 324 ἤξει f. ἤξει (after ἄν) 615 D θηρίου f. θηρίον I 253
 μέλλοι f. μέλλει (after εἴπερ) I 299 μεταχειριεῖται f. -ίζονται I 184 οἶον f. οἶος I 328
 οὐ f. οὐ II 118
 οὐρανόν f. -νοῦ 509 D
 πλήθους f. πλήθος II 369 πολλοί and πολλοῖς f. πολλῶν 615 B προσφερῆ f. προσφερές 616 B ρέποντος f. ρέποντε 550 E τὰ πρὸς αὐτὰ τείνοντα f. τὸ πρὸς αὐτὰ τείνον τὰ I 287
 τινὰς—ὄντας etc. f. τινὰ—ὄντα etc.
 605 D
 τινος f. τινὰς I 179
 τοῦτο f. τούτου I 257
 τούτων f. τοῦτο I 261
 τοῦτω f. τοῦτο II 113
 ὑποκείμενον f. -κείμενα 581 B

Assignment of speakers, mistakes in:— 348 D, I 55, 372 E, 407 B, 453 D (?),

 II 126, 227, 399

Displacement of words:—

ἀνάγκη perhaps misplaced 551 D δὴ νῦν f. νῦν δὴ (bis) I 193 δουλείας καὶ θωπείας f. θ. καὶ δ. 579 D εἰ καὶ f. καὶ εἰ I 264
 εἶναι perh. misplaced I 297 εἰς ὅ τι f. ὅτι εἰς 616 A καὶ νεανικοὶ τε καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τὰς διανοίας perhaps misplaced II 47, 79
 —81

μὴ ὥς f. ὥς μὴ 579 B ὅτι τοιοῦτος ἦν perhaps misplaced 407 E πρὸς τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω λύπην f. τὸ ἄλυπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην 585 A τὰς μὲν f. μὲν τὰς 573 E τὴν αὐτὴν perhaps f. αὐτὴν τὴν I 339 ὑπομένων καὶ perhaps f. καὶ ὑπομένων
 I 257

Dittography:—

δεῖ ἀεὶ f. δεῖ (with confusion of α and δ)
 I 36
 εἰ εἴη f. εἴη II 338
 εἰ εἰκόνας f. εἰκόνας I 167 οἶοι f. οἶ 484 A φύσας ἄς f. φύς ἄς I 301

Division and running-together of words, errors of:—

ἀλλ' αὖ for ἀλλά γ' 543 C ἀλλ' οἶαν τοι f. ἀλλοίαν τοι II 78 ἀλλ' ὥς f. ἀλλως II 352 ἄν εἴης f. ἀνίης (with εἰ f. ι) II 415 ἀνέλθοι f. ἄν ἔλθοι II 31 ἀνευρεῖν f. ἄν εὕρεῖν I 206, cf. II 117 ἀνοφθείη f. ἄν ὀφθείη II 333 αὐ τό f. αὐτό (bis) II 354 αὐτὴν f. αὐ τὴν I 102, cf. 577 B, II 218,
 I 167
 γοῦν f. γε οὖν 585 A δεῖ δέ f. δέ ιδέ 580 D
 δέ τι f. δ' ἐτι I 58 διασοφῶν f. Δία (? Λίαν) σοφῶν II 468 ἐγκαλῶ f. ἐν καλῶ 571 B ἔγω γ' οὖν f. ἐγὼ γοῦν I 22, cf. I 227,
 II 1, 120, 343
 εἰκοσι ἐτῶν f. εἰκοσιετῶν II 148, cf.
 II 154
 εἰκός. τήν f. εἰκοστήν 620 B ἐν εἶναι f. ἐνεῖναι II 34 ἐπιδέξια f. ἐπὶ δεξιά I 207 ἐτι μάλιστα f. ἐτίμα <μά> λιστα II 227 μηδὲν f. μηδὲ ἐν I 302
 νομοθετῆς εἰς (sic) f. νομοθετήσεις I 169 ὅτε f. ὅ τε I 135
 οὐδενί f. οὐδ' ἐνί I 253 παραπλεῖαι f. παρὰ πλέαι I 139 πᾶς σοφός f. πάσσοφος II 395 περιορίζομεν οἷς f. πέρι ὀρίζομένοις I 143 τείνοντα f. τείνον τὰ I 287 τό δέ f. τότε 604 A τὸν δέ τινα f. τόνδε τίνα II 388 τοῦτί f. τοῦ τι II 330

Dual, corruption of the:—

in adjectives, nouns, pronouns and participles I 186, 212, 261, II 210, 578 C in verbs I 260

Interpolation,

is rare in Paris A, fairly common in Ξ, and tolerably frequent in γ: probable or certain examples of in the MSS of the Republic:—

prob. due to a marginal note of approval or otherwise:—II 30 (ἀξιον), II 50 (ἀξιον τὸ διανόημα), I 133 (ὡς οἶεται); due to an explanation, gloss, attempt to fill up the sense or construction etc. 341 D (οὐ προσδεῖται etc.), II 141, 192 f. (ἀλλ' δ—ψυχῇ), I 158 (ἀρμονίας), 525 D (δύο), I 27 (εἴη), 613 E (εἶτα—ἐκκαυθήσονται), II 189 (ἐνταῦθα δὲ πρὸς φαντάσματα), II 222 (ἡ τινος), I 291, 357 (σοφίας), 380 A (τὰ τῆς Νιόβης πάθη), 616 A (ταῦτα ὑπομένοντες), I 287 (τὴν ψυχὴν δντα), 580 D (τὸ λογιστικόν and λογιστικόν), 616 A (τὸν φόβον); due to the fusion of two distinct readings I 82 (στρεπτοὶ δέ); due to the erroneous repetition of words I 190 (ὅταν μάλιστα). For the occasional interpolation of articles, prepositions, conjunctions and other single words see the critical notes passim

Letters frequently added or omitted by mistake:—

Iota subscript wrongly added: I 262, II 127, I 297, II 126, 423, I 29, 304, 505 A, II 138, 337, 342, 612 B, C

Iota subscript wrongly omitted: I 9, 40, 96, 155, 182, II 221, I 331, II 37, 38, 106, 222, 259, 420

ν, final, wrongly added: I 234 (τὸν f. τό), II 226, I 234 (οὖν f. οὐ), II 71, 583 C, I 239, 317, 340, 479 C, 484 D, II 3, 501 D, II 126, 547 E, 610 A (ὀρθότατ' ἄν f. ὀρθότατα)

ν, final, wrongly omitted: I 54 (ἔφη f. ἔφην), 179, I 56, 69, 81, 134 (ἄρα f. ἄρ' ἄν), 226, II 21, 49, 564 E, 607 B (δία f. λίαν)

Letters, confusion of:—

α and αι { α for αι: φαμέν f. φαῖμεν
I 58, II 342; πᾶσι f. πασι
I 234, II 25; ἅπανα f. ἅπασαι II 140

αι for α: ἐξαιρεῖν and ἐξαίρειν
f. ἐξαιρεῖν II 25

γ for τ: γε f. τε I 152, 290, 578 A, 605 A

τ for γ: τε f. γε I 24, 58, 120, 326, 578 B, 581 C,
II 431; ἡτέισθε f. ἡγεῖσθε 612 C; μετὰ f. μέγα II 7; combined with lipography στρατενομένων f. στραγγενομένω I 326

γ for λ: γεωργοῖς f. λεωργοῖς (?) 421 A δ for α: διδόντες f. ᾄδοντες I 81; combined with dittography, ῥάδιον f. ῥᾶον

I 94, with lipography, ῥᾶον f. ῥάδιον
I 49

δ for λ: ἀποδομένων f. ἀπολομένων II 261; δία f. λίαν 607 B; ἀπεδυσά-μεθα for ἀπελυσάμεθα 612 A ε for αι: ἕτερος f. εἰταῖρος I 133, 254, II 262; οἶον τε

f. οἶοντα 387 C; ἐρεῖ f. αἰρεῖ II 411

αι for ε: αἰρήσεσθαι f. ἐρήσεσθαι II 135; κατηγορεῖται
f. κατηγορεῖτε 453 E; ναίων
f. νέων II 185

ε and ει { ε for ει: ἀποκρίνεσθαι f.
-ινεῖσθαι I 26, II 39

ει for ε: ἀντιτείνεν f. -τενεῖν 604 A; εἶδει f. εἰ δὲ II 455 ε for η: δέ f. δή I 45, 108, 279, II 391; μέν f. μήν

I 262

ει for ηι (η): φράσεις f. φράσας I 237, εἰ f. ἡ 458 E, ξυνδοί f. ξυνδοῖ I 305, cf.
I 312, II 412

ε and η { η for ε: δῆ for δέ I 30, 345 D, 573 C: ξυλλέγεται f. -έγεται II 226

ηι (η) for ει: καταλάμπη f.
-λάμπει II 59, ἀκούη f. ἀκούει 550 A, δοκῇ f. δοκεῖ
579 D

ε for ο: ἐτι f. ὅτι I 275

ει for η: εἰ f. ἡ I 257; γένει
f. γένῃ I 259; καταλειφθέν
f. καταληφθέν 496 B; ἀλήθειαν f. ἀληθῆ ἄν II 364

ει and η { η for ει: δῆ f. δεῖ I 194, 533 A; ὑγής f. ὑγείης
I 220

ει for ι: ἐπιλειπούσης f.
-λιπούσης I 32, cf. II 262; ἀποτεινούναι f. -τίνουσιν
I 79; εἴη I 96; παράπλειαι f. παρά πλείαι I 139;

ἐπειδὴ f. ἐπὶ δῆ I 188;
οἰκείας f. οἰκίας I 252;

ἐλλειπῇ f. ἔλλιπῇ II 49;

θάλειαι f. θαλαῖαι 573 D; ἀνείης f. ἀνίης II 415. See also 581 B, II 270 n. 1

ει and ι { ι for ει: στρατιάις f. στρατεῖαις I 172, cf. 318, 319, II 36; ἀνίη f. ἀνείη II 92; παρα-λιπομένης f. -λειπομένης II 125, cf. 574 D; πιστέον
f. πειστέον II 147; παιδία
f. παιδεία II 148

η for ι: εὐδαιμονήσειεν f.
-ίσειεν II 97; ναυτηλίαν
f. ναυτιλίαν II 222; τήν τιν' II 226; κατοικήσειε f.
-ίσειε II 338

η and ι { ι for η: διότι f. δῆ ὅτι I 169;
ἐτι f. ἔτη II 152; ἀπολελογίσθω f. -ήσθω 607 B

λ for π: ἀλλῆς f. ἀπλῆς I 152

ο for ου: τοῦτο f. τούτου
I 240, 257

ο and ου { ου for ο: τούτου f. τοῦτο 610 D; σιδηροῦς and χαλ-κοῦς f. σίδηρος and χαλκός
I 196; οὐ f. ὅ 562 B

- ο for ω: οἰόμεθα f. οἰώμεθα I 169, II 224, 225; ἄλλος f. ἄλλως I 311; κατήκοι f. κατηκόω II 38; ὅσον f. ὅσων 534 A; other instances I 187, 188, 237, 283, 285, 464 B, II 54, 524 D, II 210, 251, 322, 409
- ο and ω ω for ο: εἰπὼν f. εἶπον I 110; αὐτῶν f. αὐτόν I 213, II 323; θάμνων f. θάμνον I 237; other examples I 259, 263, 454 E, I 289, 300, 319, II 49, 119, 234, 561 E, 581 C, II 346, 440
- ο and ωι (ω) ο for ωι (ω): τὸ αὐτό f. τῷ αὐτῷ I 306; τό f. τῷ II 258, 411; τοῦτο f. τοῦτω 580 E
- ωι (ω) for ο: αὐτῷ f. αὐτό I 257; τοῦτω f. τοῦτο II 113
- π for τ: ποτε f. τότε I 279
- π for τι: ἐπ' f. ἐτι 532 B, C; ποιώμεθα f. τί οἰώμεθα 581 D
- πι for τι: ἐπιτινονρότερος f. ἐτι πονηρότερος II 368
- στ for τ: διαστάσεις f. διατάσεις I 179; ἑκαστον f. ἑκατόν II 208

Omission of one of two identical letters or syllables:—

ἄλλου τινὸς οὖν f. ἄλλου οὐτινοσούν I 240; βαλόντος f. βάλλοντος I 321; γενήσεται f. γενν- 461 A; ἐτι μάλιστα f. ἐτίμα μάλιστα II 227; μελιτουργός f. μελιττ- 564 C; ξυναίρη f. ξυναίρη 540 C; περιόντες f. περιώντες II 260, cf. 401; τοῦ f. τοῦτου 610 D, τρίτα f. τριττά 599 A Omission of words with like ending is not infrequent in Paris A. Instances of, in Paris A or other MSS of the Rep.:—

I 67, 80, 87, 102, 104, 115, 119, 123, 162, 164, 355 f. (καὶ καλοῦ and καὶ καλοῦ αὐ), 603 B (καὶ ἡ), perhaps also I 50 (πράξεως τῆς) and 439 A, I 271 (καὶ τινός). The omission of single words may also be sometimes due to homoioteleuton, e.g. τί I 86, ὅτι I 108, λεκτέα I 113, οἱ I 142, τάδε I 219, οὖν I 227, ἡ I 240, II 355, τῶν I 308, τὰ I 322, ἐγὼ I 338, τῇ II 116, ἐν 604 B, αὐτό II 411, ὃν 608 A

Omission of words without homoioteleuton:—

I 131, 263 (46 letters), II 49 (41 letters), II 224 (δῆλον, ἔφη): of single words without hom., e.g. ἔχειν I 71, ἔφη I 76, 275, 522 A, εἶναι I 88, ἡμῖν I 143, μή I 149, 286, ἑκαστον II 137, οὖσαν II 182, νῶ II 457. For the occasional omission of articles, conjunctions, particles, prepositions and pronouns, see the critical notes Words not included in the above lists, erroneously substituted for other words, whether by accident or design:—

ἄγον for ἀγαθόν 522 A ἀδροῦται f. ἀνδροῦται 498 B αἰσθόμεθα f. ἀκροασόμεθα (?) 608 A αἵτινες f. αὐ τινες I 157 ἀκολουθήσειν f. -θῆσαι 490 C ἀκρατοτάτης f. ἀκροτάτης 564 A ἀκρόχοι f. ἀκράχοι I 187 ἀλλά f. ἄλλη I 245
 ἄλλοις f. ἄθλοις II 48
 ἀλλοτρίοις f. ἄλλοις I 106 ἀμφισβητήσει and ἀμφισβητήσεως f. ἀμφισβητήσει II 44 ἄν f. οὖν I 277
 ἀναλαμβάνοντα f. ἀναγκάζοντα 490 C ἀνεμόμενοι and ἀνιμώμενοι f. νεμόμενοι I 166 ἄνωθεν f. ἔωθεν 621 B ἀπεργάζεται f. -άσεται 591 C ἀποδεχόμεθα and -ώμεθα f. -οίμεθα I 247 ἀποκτείνειν, ἀποκτινύναι ἄν f. ἀποκτινύναι, ἀποκτείναν ἄν 517 A ἀπολαβὼν f. ἀπολαύων II 323 ἀπολογισομένη f. -αμένη 607 D ἄρα (or ἄρα) ἡ f. ἀρετῇ II 332 ἄρα f. ὁρᾶς II 27
 ἀργύρου f. ἀργυρίου 547 B ἀρχῆς καὶ δικάζης f. ἀρχεῖν καὶ δικάζειν II 236 ἀσκέται καὶ δοκιμάζεται f. -εῖσθαι κ. -εσθαι I 179 ἀσοφώτερος f. σοφώτερος I 183 αὐτά f. ταῦτα II 237
 αὐτῇ f. τοιαυτῇ II 236
 αὐτό f. τὸ αὐτό 525 A αὐτός f. οὗτος 516 B βεβαιωσόμεθ' and βεβαιωσώμεθ' f. βεβαιωσάμεθ' I 243 βλίσσειν f. βλίσσει II 253 βουλεύεται f. βούλεται 590 E γοῦν f. οὖν 533 E γυμνοῦσθαι f. μίγνυσθαι I 296 δέ f. τε 510 E
 δέ γε f. δέ I 14
 δεῖ μηχανήσασθαι f. διαίτηχ- II 99 διὰ νοῦ f. διανοοῦ II 83 διαθετόν f. διαθεατόν II 427 διατεταγμένους f. -τεταμένους 474 A διαφέρει f. διαφθείρει I 209 διαφέρωμεν f. διαφέρωμαι I 56 διαφεύγουσα f. διαφέρονσα II 199 διενεργεῖν f. διενέγκοιεν II 41 διηγήσεται f. μιμήσεται I 152 δίκας f. δικαίως 574 D δοκεῖν f. εὐδοκμεῖν 423 A δοκῶ f. δοκεῖ I 113

 εἶναι f. ἐάσει 618 E εἰαυτῇ f. αὐτῇ I 244
 εἰαυτοῦ f. εἰαυτὸν I 151
 εἰαυτῷ f. εἰαυτὸν II 244, f. εἰαυτοῦ I 73,
 f. σαυτῷ I 256
 ἐγγένηται f. ἐγγίγνηται I 254
 ἔγωγ' f. ἐγὼ I 198
 ἐγῶμαι f. ἐγὼ μοι I 61

ἐζητοῦμεν f. ζητοῦμεν I 143 ἔθῃ f. ἔφῃ 522 A εἰδέναι f. εἶναι II 51
 εἶδος f. ἦθος 497 B
 εἶη f. ἦ II 53
 ἐκότερον f. -ρος II 433 ἐκατέρως f. -ωσιν II 42 ἐκείνης f. ἐκείνοις I 327 ἐκπορίζουσης f. -ιούσης I 36 ἐκτεμῆσθον f. -τεμῆσεσθον II 251 ἔλθωμεν f. διέλθωμεν (after καί) II 138 ἐλλείπεται f. ἐν λείπεται I 2 ἐμποιῆσαι f. -ήσας I 18 ἐν ὀλίγῳ f. ἐν ὀλίγῳ I 250 ἐπαύοντας f. -οντες 488 D ἐπαρῇ f. -αροῖ I 198
 ἐπειδὴ ἦν f. ἐπειδὴ 612 D ἐπέχοντα f. ὑπ- I 158
 ἐπιθυμῇ f. -ῆς II 236
 ἐπικουρητικὸν f. ἐπικουρικόν I 258 ἐπιμελείας f. -εία I 311
 ἐργάζεται f. εργαζόμενον (after ὥστε)
 519 A ἐργασαμένους f. -ομένους I 331 ἐρώωντος f. ἐρωτώντος 437 C ἔσονται f. ἐνέσονται 502 D ἔφη and ἔφην f. ἐφίῃ I 136 ἔφη ἦν δ' f. ἔφην II 30 ἔφην δ' f. ἔφην II 351, 262

ζητεῖ I. ζεῖ I 257
 ζητοῦντι f. ζῶντι 619 B ζῶσει f. ζήσει 591 C ἦ οὐκ f. ἦ καὶ II 78
 ἠδίκησεν f. ἠδίκηκεν I 10 ἠλθομεν f. διήλθομεν I 219 ἦτω and ἔτω f. ἔστω I 74 ἦ and εἰ f. εἴη I 188
 ἦ f. ἦν II 409
 ὀέλουσι f. ἐλοῦσι I 317
 θήσομεν f. οἰσομεν I 340
 θνητοῖς f. θνητοῖσι I 131
 ἱατρικὴν, ἱατρικὴν καὶ and ἱατρικὴ τήν
 f. ἱατρικὴ II 411
 ἰδίᾳ λαβόντες f. διαλαβόντες 615 E

ἰούσης f. οὖσαν II 182
 ἴσχουσιν f. σχοῦσιν 520 D κακῶν f. καλῶν 607 E καλὸν f. κακόν II 149
 κατ' f. καὶ 507 B καταλάβῃ f. -βάλλῃ II 151 καταπεφύρακας f. -πεφόρηκας 587 E καταστήσουσι f. -στήσονται 546 D κεκλάσθαι f. ἐκκεκλάσθαι 611 D κελεύοιμι f. -οιμεν 577 B κνάμπτοντες f. κνάπτοντες 616 A κολάσεως f. κολάσει ὡς I 138 λέγει and λέγειν f. λέγει 489 B λήξει f. λήξεως I 219
 λογιστικῷ f. λογισμῷ 604 D μαθηματικούς f. μαθητικούς I 335 μελαγχλῶρους f. μελιχλ- I 333 μέν f. νέων II 127
 μέντοι f. μέν τι 602 C μετρίως f. μετρίῳ I 237 μήτε f. μήποτε II 424
 μικράν f. μακράν I 177
 μιμήματά τε f. μιμήματα I 148 μιμήσει f. ποιήσει 602 A μιμούμενον f. -ένου 604 E νόθον and νόθων f. νόθων II 359 νόμιμον f. νόμιμον I 231 νομοθέτῃ f. νόμῳ 519 E ὀδύρεσθαι, φέρειν f. ὀδύρεται, φέρει I 134 οἱ ἄν f. ἂ ἄν 544 E ὀλιγαρχικῆς—δημοκρατικῆν f. -ίας—-ίαν
 559 E
 ὁμοῖον f. ἀνομοῖον II 355 ὀνίαν and ὀνείαν f. ὀνίαν 600 D ὅποι f. ὅπῃ 556 A ὀρμῇ f. ὀρμῶν 532 A ὅτε f. ὅτι I 244
 ὅτι οὗτος f. ὁ τοιοῦτος II 94 οὐκ f. οὐτ' I 154
 οὐκὼν f. οὐκ ἂν οὖν I 17 παιδοποιῶ f. -ίαις I 296 πάμπαν f. παράπαν I 219 παντοῖως f. πάντως 484 B παραδεχόμενος f. παρεχ- 554 A παραινεῖ f. περαινεῖ II 136 παρσκευάσθαι f. παρσκευάσασθαι I 198 παρήγγελλον f. παρήγγειλεν I 228 παρόντα f. παρόντα 515 B περιβάλλῃ f. παραβάλλῃ 499 B πιαίνειν f. ποιμαίνει I 42 πλεῖον f. πλέον II 362 πλήττοντος f. πληγέντος 604 C ποι f. που I 336
 ποιεῖν f. ποιεῖς II 468 ποιοῦμεν f. ποιοῖμεν I 313, 314 που f. ἦ οὐ I 250
 πράττει f. πράττει I 253 προεικάζομεν f. προσηκάζομεν I 329 προελθόντες f. -όντας 616 B προθυμούμεθα and προμηθούμεθα f. προϋθέμεθα I 300

προσδεῖται f. προσδεῖ II 49 προσεστώς f. προεστώς II 255 προσών f. προῶν II 118 προστήσεται f. προστατήσεται I 259 προσώπου f. τρώπου II 37 ῥεύσαντα f. ῥέψαντα 544 E σκεψόμεθα f. -οίμεθα I 314 σωφρονήσεως f. φρονήσεως II 346 τὰ f. τό I 266
 τὰ κάτω f. κάτω II 181 τὰ—ξυγγενῇ f. τὰς—ξυγγενεῖς II 181 ταύτη f. αὕτη I 179
 ταύτην f. ταύτη II 8
 τε and γε f. δέ 578 A τε f. τι II 262
 τεταμένη f. -αγμένη I 306 τετμημένοις f. τετιμ- II 69 τί and τι f. τίς and τις I 73, 166 τί μήν f. τιμή μὲν II 346 τί ὅν τε f. οἶόν τέ τι I 68 τίς and τοὺς f. τί 567 E τισιν f. τις ἄν II 215 τμηθεῖσιν f. μιμηθεῖσιν 510 B τό f. ὅ I 246, II 42
 τό f. τοτέ II 244
 τοι f. τ' οὐ II 39
 τοῦτό ἐστιν f. τότ' ἐστίν τοῦτο δοδα τοῖς τοῖς and τοῖς τοῖς f. τοῦ τῆς I 192 τούτῳ f. τούτων I 246 τυγχάνοντες f. -άνουσι 495 D τύπος f. τύπον I 111
 τῷ f. τῶν II 407
 τῶν δικαίων f. τῷ δικαίῳ 496 D τῶν λόγων f. τοῦ λόγου I 260 τῶν περὶ f. ὡν περ 510 B ὑμᾶς f. ἡμᾶς 612 D
 ὑμῖν f. ἡμῖν 546 D ὑπέρπλουτος f. πλούτος 562 B ὑπό f. ἀπό 569 A, I 74 ὑπό f. ὑπέρ I 133
 φαίνεται f. φανέται 591 D φαίνονται f. λέγοντες I 233 φαίνονται f. φύονται 526 B φήσεις f. φήσει II 43 φήσομεν f. ἀφήσομεν I 302 ψυχῆς f. τύχης II 409
 ὥδε f. ὡς δέ I 304
 ὦ—διανοίας f. ἡ—διανοία 486 A ὦ f. ὦν I 45
 ὡμολογήσθαι f. ὁμολογεῖσθαι I 293
 ὡς f. ἕως I 212

Metaphors:—interpretation of metaphors frequently added by Plato 451 B, 555 D, cf. 332 C, 374 D, 501 A: mixture of metaphors 365 C, 527 D: metaphors sometimes suggested by subject under discussion 398 C

Metaphors and comparisons, examples of, in the Xep.:—the bald-headed tinker 495 E, the cistern οἱ desire 578 A, the citadel οἱ the soul 560 B ff., the drone-citizen and drone-desires 552 C ff., 554 B, the feast of reason 354 A, 352 B, 458 A, 571 D, the food of soul 410 E, 571 D, the house of life 328 E, the leaden weights of becoming 519 A, B, the lonely man among wild beasts 496 D: metaphors and comparisons taken from agriculture 550 B; from the bath 344 D, the bee 365 A, beehives 520 B, 552 C, 564 E, bodily deformity 495 D, bodily shape of beasts 586 A, B, botany 497 B, a breakwater swept down by a flood 492 C, a breeding-stud 459 D ff., 460 E; from the chase 410 B, 432 B, D, 472 D, 484 C, 529 E, children's behaviour when hurt 604 D, climbing a hill 568 C, colours 585 A, consecrated herds of cattle 498 C; from Daedalus' statues 529 D, a departed spirit 558 A, a diseased body 556 E, a divided line 509 D ff., drawing a circle 424 A, dyeing 429 D—430 A; from the feeding of children 345 B; from various kinds of games 422 D, E, 487 C, 521 C, the games at Olympia 465 D, E, 504 A, 621 C, D, Glaucus of the seas 611 C—E; from a headland or promontory 445 C, horses over-driven 613 C; from judging in dramatic contests 580 A, B; from law-courts 451 B, libations 583 B, locality 584 D ff., 586 A, B; from marriage 490 B, 495 C, 496 A, 546 C, a master and his slaves 578 E, mathematics 534 D, music 432 A, 441 E, 442 A, 443 D, 531 D, 532 A, mysteries 560 D, E; from navigation 487 E—488 E (the ship of state), 551 C; from the on-rushing wave 473 C, II 361 al., the order of guests at table 336 C, oriental sovereignty 553 C, D, Orphic beliefs 533 D, 546 A, B; from painting 420 C, 501 A—C, II 79, purging or purifying 527 D; from the rack 531 B, rekindling a fire 527 D; from the scale of a balance 550 E, the shepherd and his dog 440 C, the shepherd and his sheep 343 A ff., shipwreck 553 B, shooting at a mark 519 C, the stage 451 C, 554 B, a stream diverted from its channel 485 D, a stream growing into a torrent 424 D, the sun 506 E ff., a supposititious child 537 E ff.; from the unity of the human organism 462 C; from a variegated garment 557 C; from warfare 440 E, 534 C, werewolves 565 D, E, wrestling 544 B, 583 B

Middle:—of personal interest 339 C, 421 E, 467 E, 546 B: reciprocal 500 B, 549 D: usual in verbs denoting organic action 408 A: the same form (καταστήσονται) used both as iniddle and as passive 546 D: middle in sense of active 563 D, 574 B

 'Mixed' conditional sentences I 269, 585 A, 621 C Moods, irregular sequence of: ind. where opt. would be more regular 337 A: opt. where ind. is usual 600 E: opt. in final clause depending on present tense 410 C: do. in or. obl. depending on primary tense 361 C, 490 A, D. See also Optative, Subjunctive

N

Negatives. See Index I under the various negatives Negative with inf. instead of acc. with inf. in MSS 616 B Number. See Concord, Dual, Singular, Plural

O

Omission:—of one of two correlating ideas (with μεταξύ and the like) 498 A, cf. 518 E: of connecting particle, for dramatic effect, as in πολεμήσομεν τὸ μετὰ τοῦτο; 373 E, 432 C, 583 C Optative:—of prayer, in Homer 391 B: in rel. clauses 403 B: in oratio obliqua 361 C, 393 E, 416 C, 466 A, 515 D, 544 A: difficult use of 360 B: opt. corrupted into ind. I 313, 314, 515 D, 544 A; do. into subj. II 92
 Oracular style 586 B
Oratio obliqua:—subordinate clauses in, taking acc. and inf. 492 C, 511 E: other noteworthy cases of 360 B, 364 C, 569 A, 614 C, D Order of Words:—II 468: in the opening of the Rep. 327 A: as an element of ὑψος 560 B, D, 573 A, D. See also Chiasmus, Hyperbaton

P

Parody and the like 344 A, 495 E Paronomasia. See Assonance etc.
 Participle:—understood from preceding verb 576 A: used in place of finite verb 519 A, 531 A, cf. 511 A: coordination of participles 465 C: subordination of do. 366 A, 399 A, 442 A, 517 D, 553 B: position of, in τῶν ἐν ταῖς τοιαύταις συνουσίαις ἡδονῶν ἀνειμένων 573 A: participle with διά in place of inf. with διά 346 B: do. with καίτοι 511 D, II 87: do. with νομίζειν 529 B: present part. to express habitual action 329 A, do. to express simultaneous action 375 A, do.

in describing a scene 488 A: imperfect part. 490 C, 543 D: aor. part. in gnomic sense 520 D: corruption of participles in MSS, see Aorist tense, Future tense Particles. See Index I, under the several particles Passive voice, noteworthy uses of 337 A, II 269, 581 E Perfervidum ingenium Platonis 528 E, 530 B Periphrasis with participle and copula in place of finite verb 331 E Personification:—of εἶδος 434 D, of ἐρώτημα 538 D, of λόγος 431 A, 461 E, 503 A, 511 B
 Plato on a feature of his own style 498 E: do., on the style of Isocrates and his school, ib.
 Pleonasm. See Redundancy
 Plural number:—plural of abstract nouns 373 D, 511 B. See also Concord Poetical elements in the style of Plato:—poetical words and phrases 420 B, 469 D (with ref. to Homer) 540 A, 548 A, 559 D, 565 E, 573 D: poetical uses of words, poetical constructions etc. 473 C, E, 492 C, 565 E, 615 D. See also Article, Order of Words, Rhythm etc.
 Poetry, fragments of, embedded in the Rep. 388 D (?), 457 B, 458 D (?), 460 E, 469 D, 494 D, 547 A, 549 D, cf. 617 B
 Prepositions:—dropped in repeating idea of compound verb (e.g. ἐξαμαρτάνειν—ἀμαρτάνειν) 336 E, 452 A, 533 A, cf. 608 A: force of, carried on from one sentence to another 428 C, perhaps from one word to another (ἐνυμαχίαν τε καὶ φιλονικίαν) 555 A, cf. 546 A: idiomatically omitted, as in ἐν ἀπασιν οἷς ἔστι 402 A, 373 E, 421 A, 520 D, 526 A: do. in similes with ὥς, ὥσπερ and the like (e.g. ὥς περὶ μητρὸς τῆς χώρας) 553 B, 414 E al.: other cases of omission 393 B (τῶν ἐν Ἰθάκῃ καὶ ὅλῃ Ὀδυσσεΐα παθημάτων), 526 D: repetition of 395 D, 618 A: used with adverbs (μέχρι δεῦρο etc.) 586 A, 519 A, B, II 181 Prepositions, various, remarks on:—ἀπὸ 365 E, confused with ὑπὸ 361 C: διὰ with acc. versus διὰ with gen. II 309 n. 1; διὰ with acc. 419 A, 466 B, 562 B; with gen. (in διὰ πάντων ἀγῶν) II 376; διὰ and acc. confused with διὰ and gen. 562 B, 610 D: εἰς = 'in respect of,' 'with ref. to,' as in τέλεος εἰς 360 E, 495 B, 600 A; εἰς with acc. understood 589 E: ἐν in ἐν ἑαυτοῦ and ἐν ἑαυτῷ 574 E, in πετρεῖα ἐν λόγοις 487 C, in ἐν φαρμάκῳ εἶδε 378 D: ἐπὶ with gen. as in ἐπ' ἐμοῦ = 'in my case' 475 A, 524 E al., as in τοὺς ἐπὶ τῶν πραγμάτων 460 B; with dat. 342 A, 374 B, 455 E, 462 C (λέγειν τι ἐπὶ τινι, cf. 470 B); with acc. as in ἐπὶ πάντας 491 A, 508 C; force of ἐπὶ in compound verbs 372 B: κατὰ in compound verbs 401 E, 607 C: μετὰ 560 D: παρά with dat. 439 E; with acc. II 77, 514 A: περὶ 360 D (ὁ περὶ τοῦ τοιοῦτου λόγου λέγων), 565 C (ἀγῶνες περὶ ἀλλήλων), anastrophe of 479 C, 531 E, often separated from its noun 598 C; with acc. 527 D: πρὸς with dat. in γίγνεσθαι or εἶναι πρὸς τινι 604 D, 567 A; with acc. = ad as in ad normam 545 B, in musical sense (πρὸς αὐλὸν λακεῖν etc.) 397 B, in the phrase τίθεσθαι τὰ ὅπλα πρὸς 440 E; force of πρὸς in compound verbs 375 E, 521 D; adverbial πρὸς 559 A: σύν rare in Attic, used by Plato in modal phrases, or to denote intimate connexion, especially in elevated passages 424 D, 518 C: ὑπέρ in sense of περὶ 367 A, 414 E: ὑπό in ὑπὸ γῆς 414 D, in ὑπὸ χάριτος αὐξάνεται 528 C; with acc. 348 D, 439 E (ὑπὸ τὸ βόρειον τεῖχος); force of ὑπό in compound verbs 372 D, 573 C. Some idiomatic usages are noted in Index I under the headings of the several prepositions

Present tense:—of habitual action 330 C, 359 E: introduces a succession of pictures 372 D: used in quoting from a poet 407 A: pres. corrupted into fut. 408 C, 591 C: pres. subj. corrupted into aor. subj. 574 D

Proclus on the style of Plato 545 D, 595 B, 617 D

Pronouns:—sometimes used vaguely, without definite antecedent 536 A, 543 C, 549 D, 558 E: anaphoric pronoun with antecedent remote 588 B, 605 C, cf. 503 E: superfluous anaphoric 375 E, 428 A, 439 B, 477 D, cf. 558 A: combination of direct and indirect interrog. pronouns (as in ποῖα δ' ὁποῖον βίου) 348 B, 400 A, 414 D, 578 E: superfluous personal pronoun after οἶμαι 400 B: reflexive omitted 336 B, 399 B: relative pronoun late in sentence 390 B, 399 C, 425 C: do., followed by anaphoric or demonstrative with same ref. 357 B, 395 D, 544 A. See also Attraction, and the individual pronouns in Index I

R

Readings adopted in the text of this edition, but not found in any of the collated mss of the Republic:—

Reading adopted

Reading of Paris A

- I 333 E ἐμποίησας (Schneider)
 337 E αὐτῷ [εἴη] (Breml)
 349 B οὐδὲ τῆς <πράξεως τῆς> διακάας (Adam) II 358 E οἶόν τε τι (Adam) 359 A δοκεῖν (Ast)
 361 C ἀπ' (Eusebius)
 364 C περὶ (Madvig)
 „ ἄδοντες (Muretus)
 377 E τύπον (H. Richards)
 III 387 C ποιεῖ (Hertz) 387 E ὀδύρεται, φέρει (Stallbaum) 388 C ὁ τέ (Leaf)
 390 A παρὰ πλέαι (Adam) 391 E οἱ Ζηνὸς (Bekker)
 392 B ζητοῦμεν (Stallbaum)
 396 E ἀπλῆς διηγήσεως (Adam) 398 A οὐτ' (Adam)
 401 C τις προσβάλη (Adam) 407 C ἔφην (Adam)
 407 E ὅτι τοιοῦτος ἦν· καὶ οἱ παῖδες αὐτοῦ (Schneider) 410 B μεταχειρίζονται (Galen) 410 E ἀμφοτέρα (Schneider)
 412 D καὶ ἐκείνου (Hermann)
 IV 428 C βουλευομένην (Heindorf)

- ἐμποίησαι
 αὐτῷ εἴη
 οὐδὲ τῆς δικαίας
 τί ὃν τε
 δοκεῖ ὑπ'
 πέρι διδόντες τύπος
 ποιεῖ ὡς οἶεται
 ὀδύρεσθαι, φέρειν
 ὅτε
 παραπλείαι
 Ζηνὸς
 ἐζητοῦμεν
 ἄλλης διηγήσεως
 οὐκ
 τι προσβάλη
 ἔφη
 καὶ οἱ παῖδες αὐτοῦ ὅτι τοιοῦτος ἦν μεταχειρίζεται
 ἀμφοτέρα
 καὶ ὅταν μάλιστα ἐκείνου βουλευομένην

Reading adopted		Reading of Paris A
IV	428 D ὄντιν' ἄν (Ast)	ὄντινα
	429 C αὐτῆς (Adam)	αὐτήν
	430 C μόνιμον (Stobaeus)	νόμιμον
	431 C παισὶ (H. Wolf)	πᾶσι
	432 C μετρίῳ (H. Richards)	μετρίως
	432 D ἰοῦ ἰοῦ (Adam)	ιοῦ ἰοῦ
	437 B ἄν ἀλλήλοις (Baiter)	ἀλλήλοις
	437 D ἐνὶ λόγῳ (Cornarius)	ἐν ὀλίγῳ
	439 B πρᾶττει (Ast)	πράττοι
	439 C ἐγγίγνεται (Schneider)	ἐγγένηται
	440 D ἧ (Ast)	εἰ
	442 A προστατήσεται (Bekker)	προσθήσεται
	443 C ὠφέλει (Ast)	ὠφελεῖ
V	454 D ἱατρικὸν (Adam)	ἱατρικὴν τὴν ψυχὴν ὄντα
	457 B γελοίου (J. G. S. Schneider)	γελοίου σοφίας
	459 C ἡγούμεθα (Adam)	ἡγούμεθα εἶναι
	461 B δεῖ εἶναι (Adam)	δεῖ
	461 B ἀφήσομεν (Eusebius)	φήσομεν
	461 C μηδὲ ἐν (Cobet)	μηδὲ γ' ἐν (μηδὲ γ' ἐν Λ ²)
	462 C τῷ αὐτῷ (Wytenbach)	τὸ αὐτὸ
	468 A ἐλοῦσι (J. van Leeuwen)	θέλουσι
	477 B αὐτὴν τὴν (C. Schmidt)	τὴν αὐτὴν
	478 A δοξάζει (Adam)	δοξάζειν
VI	493 B ἐκάστας (van Prinsterer)	ἐκάστος
	494 B παισὶν (de Geer)	πᾶσιν
	499 B κατηκόω (Schleiermacher)	κατήκοι
	500 A τ' οὐ (Baiter)	τοι
	501 D φήσει (Adam)	φήσειν
	503 C ἔπεται καὶ νεανικοὶ τε καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τὰς διανοίας (Adam)	ἔπεται
	504 B φύεσθαι (Adam)	φύεσθαι καὶ νεανικοὶ τε καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς τὰς διανοίας
	504 A ἄθλοις (Orelli)	ἄλλοις
	504 E ἔφη (Ast)	ἔφη, ἄξιον τὸ διάνοιμα
	507 B καὶ (Adam)	κατ
	508 E γιγνωσκομένην (Adam)	γιγνωσκομένης
	510 B ἕτερον (Ast)	ἕτερον τὸ
VII	514 B αὐτοῦ (Hirschig)	αὐτοῦς
	516 E ἂν ἀνάπλεως (Baiter)	ἀνάπλεως
	517 A καὶ ἀποκτινύναι, ἀποκτείνειαν ἂν (Adam)	καὶ ἀποκτείνειν, ἀποκτινύναι ἂν
	532 A ὀρμᾶν (Ast)	ὀρμᾶ
	532 B ἐτι ἀδυναμία (Iamblichus)	ἐπ' ἀδυναμία
	533 A δεῖ (? Ficinus)	δῆ
	537 B εἰκοσιετῶν (Schneider)	εἴκοσι ἐτῶν
VIII	547 B τῷ δ' αὐτῷ (Schneider)	τὸ δ' αὐτὸ
	547 E κεκτημένη (Bekker, ? with τ')	κεκτημένην
	551 C ὁπουοῦν (? Ficinus)	ὁπουοῦν ἢ τινος
	551 D ἀνάγκη (Ast)	ἀνάγκη
	554 B ἐστήσατο καὶ ἐτίμα μάλιστα. Εὖ (Schneider)	ἐστήσατο. Καὶ ἐτι μάλιστα εὖ
	559 E ὀλιγαρχίας — δημοκρατίαν (Adam)	ὀλιγαρχικῆς — δημοκρατικὴν
	562 B δ (Adam)	οὐ
	564 E βλίττειν (Adam)	βλίττει
	568 D καὶ τὰ (Baiter)	τὰ
	568 E ἔφην ἐγώ (Adam)	ἔφην δ' ἐγώ

Reading adopted

- IN 577 D ἀνὴρ (Campbell)
 578 C τῷ τοιούτῳ (Adam) 580 D δὲ ἰδὲ (Adam)
 581 D τὴ οἰώμεθα (Graser)
 585 A τὸ ἄλνπον οὕτω πρὸς λύπην (Schleiermacher)
 585 C ἀεὶ ἀνομόλου (Adam) „ ἡ ἐπιστήμης (Adam) 588 A πλέον (Adam)
 591 D φανείται (Iamblichus)
 X 600 D ὀνῖνάναι (Matthiä)
 603 C ἦν (Ast)
 604 D ἱατρικῇ θρηνηδίαν (Stobaeus) 606 C ἄν (Schneider)
 607 B λίαν (Herwerden)
 „ κράτων (Adam)
 608 A ἀκροασόμεθα (Adam) 610 A ὀρθότατα (Stephanus)
 615 C αὐτόχειρος (Ast)

Reading of Paris A

- ἀνὴρ
 τῷ τοιούτῳ
 δὲ ἰδὲ ποιώμεθα
 πρὸς τὸ ἄλνπον οὕτω λύπην ἀεὶ ὁμοίου
 ἐπιστήμης
 πλείονι (A¹ : A² πλείον) φαίνεται
 ὀνεῖναι (A¹ : A² ὀνίνα) ἦ ἱατρικὴν καὶ θρηνηδίαν (? A¹ : A² ἱατρικὴν θρηνηδίαν)
 ἄν
 ὀλα κρατῶν αἰσθόμεθα
 ὀρθότατ' ἄν
 αὐτόχειρας

Recurrence of the same word at the end of two successive clauses (e.g. εἶναι,—εἶναι) 518 B, 511 E, 614 A, 621 B

Redundancy, pleonasm, fulness of expression etc., features of Plato's style:— 329 C, 337 D, 339 A, 341 C, 358 A, 374 D, 421 D, 432 C, 434 C, 462 C, 472 C, I 356, 486 D, 490 A, 505 B, 517 A, 534 A, 555 B, 574 D, 580 A, 583 C, 587 E, 604 A, 618 C

Repetition of a word, unnecessary 601 A.
 See also Index I ἐφῇ, ἡ δ' ὅς, ἦν δ' ἐγώ, ὥς

Replies, inexactness in 465 E al., 408 D, 577 B

Revision, imperfect, possible instances of 341 D, 413 C, 549 D, 558 A, cf. II 313 f.

Rhythm as an element of ὕψος 560 B: some instances of, in Plato's style 401 C, 432 A, 545 C ff., 560 B, D, E, 573 D

S

Sarcasm 568 A: expressed by participial apposition 498 A

Satire 474 D, E, 529 B, C, 557 E, 558 A

Sigmatism 399 D

Simile treated as a reality 515 E

Singular number, generic use of 510 D, 580 A, B. See also Concord

Sound answering to sense 399 D, 432 A Style, the, of Plato, not a mere copy of the vernacular, but a literary language 330 B: traces of a universal style, or dialect (κοινὴ διάλεκτος), in the fifth century, ib.

Subject:—change of 414 D, 492 C: latet in antegressis 329 C, 580 D: supplied from a cognate word 345 A Subjunctive:—after εἰ 579 D: after ὅς 606 C: governed by ὅταν in a previous sentence 540 E: sometimes combined with fut. ind. after ὅπως 591 D: hortatory, in 1st person 372 E: do. after λέγε 457 C: do. with ὥς εἴκοι 473 B: subj. corrupted into ind. II 412: do. into opt. 472 D, II 53. See also Index I ὅπως, ὥς

Superlative, idiomatic use of 472 E

Symmetry in arrangement of arguments 332 B. See also Chiasmus

T

Tautology. See Redundancy

Tenses. See Present tense, Future tense etc.

Terminology, Plato's 508 E, 533 D

Transition from a faculty or part of the individual to the individual himself (e.g. ἡ—ὕπάρχει διανοία ὁδὸν τε οἷε τοῦτῳ) 486 A, 606 B, cf. 573 B, 620 E

V

Verb:—ellipsis of 510 B, 515 B, 531 E, 551 C, 582 C, 585 D, see also Copula, the: omitted with ὥσπερ ἂν εἰ and the like 368 D: one verb sometimes does double duty e.g. δοκεῖ 334 B, 493 A, φαίνεται 517 B, προσήκον ἂν εἶη 525 B: verb supplied from cognate noun 425 B: positive supplied from negative verb 374 B, cf. 532 B, C

Verbals in -έος:—construction of 400 D, 421 C, 460 E, 467 C: combined with δέν 535 A

of a preceding word (e.g. μῦθος from μυθοποιός) 377 C, cf. 421 E. See also Index I δέ?

W

Words, supply of 475 E, 507 D, 508 D, 589 E, 611 C: words supplied from part

Z

Zeugma 330 E, 344 B, 367 D, 423 E, II 184

B 383.
.A2A2

11

Plato

11 May 71
24 June 71

MAINT
Blaug

Plato - The Republic.

(ed. by Adam)

vol. 2

LIBRARY

Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies

113 ST. JOSEPH STREET
TORONTO, ONT., CANADA M5S 1J4

4823 .

